INTRODUCTORY

The present work, "Colonial Families of Philadelphia," presents in the aggregate an amount of genealogical and personal information unequalled by any kindred publication. Indeed, no similar work concerning Philadelphia families has ever before been presented.

Numerous voluminous histories of Philadelphia have presented in fullness the political, social and material conditions, from the earliest times. In this work are contained chronicles of the people who have made Philadelphia what it is. These records are presented in a series of independent genealogical and personal narratives relating to lineal family heads, and the most conspicuous representatives down to the present generation, thus giving it a distinct personal interest. These ends have been conscientiously and faithfully conserved through the assistance of those who have long pursued genealogical studies with intelligence and enthusiasm, with John W. Jordan, LL. D., as supervising editor. Much assistance was rendered by Mrs. Charles Custis Harrison, Miss Leach, Oliver Hough, Warren S. Ely, and others.

PENN FAMILY

Though everything relating to the life and works of William Penn, is, and always will be of intense interest to the people of the great Commonwealth and city which he founded, it is of course impossible, in a work devoted especially to the history of such Colonial families as have living descendants still resident in or near his city, to give anything like an adequate account of the Great Founder and his part in the founding of the Colony of Pennsylvania on the bed rock of personal liberty in the matter of conscience. Volumes have already been devoted to that purpose, and the many phases of his life, character, aims and attainments, and their influence in, and bearing on the founding and development of the institutions of a free and enlightened people, will prove a fruitful and interesting theme for future historians, so long as such institutions survive. It will be our purpose, therefore, after giving such account of the origin and ancestry of the family as is known, to devote our attention more especially to that branch of the family who have living descendants in America.

The family of Penn was doubtless originally Welsh; the name itself is distinctly of Welsh origin, and a word in common use in that language, signifying a head, or highland. Penn himself is said to have stated that he was of Welsh origin, and that one of his ancestors had come from Wales into England. This ancestor, John Tudor, "lived upon the top of a hill or mountain in Wales"; and was generally called John Penmunrith, or "John on the top of a hill," hence ultimately John Penn. The arms borne by William Penn the Founder; Argent on a fesse sable three plates, are according to an old manuscript prepared by a member of the Penn family of Worcestershire, those of "the main stem of the family". This manuscript continues: "As for our beginning I own it to proceed from the Britons, our estates lying amongst them, and in the Marches of the same, which anciently belonged to the Penn-House, before that it was divided and scattered by many branches into several counties."

These arms were likewise borne by the Penns of Penn in Bucks, and by the Penne family of Shropshire, on the border of Wales, as shown, in the case of the former, in the Herald's Visitation of Bucks, 1575-1634: and in that of the latter, the Visitation of Shropshire, 1564-1620. The pedigree of the Shropshire family extending over fifteen generations given in the Herald's manuscript, begins with Sir William Penne, Knight Lord of Bryn, who married Joan, daughter of Ririd Voel, of Lodfoll, and "bristles with Welsh names" throughout, the whole record being thoroughly Welsh.

The Penns of Penn, county of Bucks, before referred to, had also among their family several distinctly Welsh names. It is from this family that William Penn the Founder descended, as shown by the inscription on the tomb of his father, Admiral Sir William Penn, "of the Penns of Penn-Lodge, county of Wilts, and those Penns of Penn in the county of Bucks." Granville Penn, in his "Memorials" of the Admiral, says, "Relation of kindred was always mutually claimed and acknowledged between the family of Sir William Penn and the Penns of Penn in Bucks, now represented by Earl Howe; but the genealogical connection does not appear of record." This is, of course, owing to the fact that the records of Mintye, the home of the immediate ancestors of the Founder, do not commence until after the Restoration.

We must therefore begin the known ancestry of William Penn, with his great-great-grandfather, William Penn, of Mintye and Penn's Lodge, county of Wilts. Little is known of his life, but to quote from an old letter, "He lived in a genteel ancient House", viz: Penn's Lodge, and was of enough consequence to be buried before the altar of the church at Mintye, and there is a tablet to his memory in the same church. He died March 12, 1591-2, and his will, proved in 1592, is recorded in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury. It has been printed in full in the Pennsylvania Magazine, vol. xiv, p. 58. The parish of Mintye, though politically in the county of Gloucester, was completely environed by Wiltshire, Penn's Lodge, was near Mintye, on the edge of Braden Forest, and a letter written by John Georges, M. P., to Sir William Penn, under date of January 27, 1665-6, urges the Admiral to purchase the ancestral lands at Mintye, "which were your ancestors, the Penns, for many generations, worth about £100 per annum, with a genteel ancient house upon it." The will of William Penn, of Penn's Lodge, dated May 1, 1590, shows that his son William was deceased at that date, and was survived by his wife Margaret and six children; George, Giles, William, Marie, Sara and Susanna.

WILLIAM PENN, the second, of Penn's Lodge, as shown by the letter of John Georges, above quoted, was placed by his father with Christopher Georges, a great-uncle of the writer of the letter, then a counsellor-at-law, "to be bred up by him, and with whom he lived many years as his chief clerk, till he married him to one of his sister Ann Georges's daughters by Mr. John Rastall, then one of the aldermen of Gloucester." As shown by the will of his father, he died prior to May 1, 1590.

Of the six children of William and Margaret (Rastall) Penn, we have but little data, further than what pertains to Giles, the second son, and father of Admiral Sir William Penn. George, the eldest son, succeeded to the estates of his grandfather, at Mintye, and had a son William; and Susanna, the youngest child, is said to have married Richard Cusse, of Wooton Bassett, in Wilts, in 1633, though the record of that marriage in the diocesan office at Salisbury may refer to a daughter of George.

GILES PENN, second son of William and Margaret (Rastall) Penn, married November 5, 1600, Joan Gilbert, of the Gilberts, of York. He became a captain in the Royal Navy, and afterwards was for many years a consul for the English trade in the Mediterranean, to which position he was appointed about 1635. He desired a commission as Vice-Admiral to lead an expedition against the corsairs of Morocco who were preying on the English trade vessels, but the impending civil war prevented his appointment. Capt. Giles and Joan (Gilbert) Penn, are known to have had at least four children: two sons; George, born 1601, died 1664, and the Admiral; and two daughters: Rachel, baptized at St. Mary, Radcliffe, February 24, 1607, and Eleanor, who died November 24, 1612. There must have been at least another daughter, as Admiral Penn, in his will mentions his "nephews James and John Bradshaw and William and George Markham," of whom William Markham, first cousin to the Founder, was for many years his Lieutenant Governor of Pennsylvania. It is of course possible that Rachel Penn, above mentioned, may have been twice married, and have been the mother of all the "nephews" above named.

George Penn, eldest son of Giles and Joan, born 1601, was brought up to "Commerce", and Granville Penn tells us, "became an opulent merchant, in Spain." He resided many years in Seville, and having grown rich and being a Protestant, was pounced upon by the Spanish Inquisition in 1643 as a heretic, despoiled of all his estate, cast into prison, where for years he was subjected to torture and flagellation, and finally placed upon the rack for four days, until in his agonies he renounced the Protestant faith, whereupon he was taken through the streets of Seville to a church where his confession and sentence was proclaimed "in the sight of thousands." His property was confiscated; his wife, a Flemish woman, was divorced from him and ordered to marry a Spaniard, and he himself was expelled from Spain and told that if he either renounced the Romish faith or returned to Spain he would be burned at the stake. On his return to England he petitioned Cromwell, then Protector, for redress against the Kingdom of Spain for his wrongs. After the Restoration, Charles II. appointed him envoy to reside at the Court of the King of Spain in order to get satisfaction for his "sufferings, loss and damage", but he was prevented from going by his sudden death on July 31, 1664.

ADMIRAL SIR WILLIAM PENN, father of the Founder, was probably the youngest of the children of Capt. Giles and Joan (Gilbert) Penn, having been born at Bristol, England, in 1621, (twenty years after the birth of his brother George), and was baptized in the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle, April 23, 1621. He was educated by his father "with great care, under his own eye, for the sea service; causing him to be well grounded in all its branches practical and scientific, as is shown by sundry elementary and tabular documents, nautical journals, draughts of lands, observations and calculations, which still survive." He served with his father as a boy "in various mercantile voyages to the northern seas and to the Mediterranean, became a lieutenant in the Royal Navy, and thenceforward passed the whole of his active life in that service" under the Parliament, the Protector, and Charles II. after the Restoration, his services in the latter behalf being the foundation of the claim of his distinguished son the consummation of which was the grant to him of the Province of Pennsylvania. He became a captain in 1644 and admiral in 1655, under Cromwell, for the expedition against Spanish America. His life can best be summed up in his epitaph over his tomb in Saint Mary's Church, Radcliffe, Bristol, which is as follows:

"To the just Memory of S^rWill^m Penn, Kt. and sometime General: born at Bristol, An. 1621: Son of Captain Giles Penn, severall yeares Consul for y^eEnglish in y^eMediterranean; of the Penns of Penns Lodge in ye County of Wilts, And those Penns of Penn in y^eC. of Bucks; and by his Mother from the Gilberts of ye County of Somerset, Originally from Yorkshire; Addicted from his Youth to Maritime Affairs; he was made Captain at the yeares of 21; Rear-Admiral of Ireland at 23;

Vice-Admiral of Ireland at 25; Admiral of the Streights at 29; Vice-Admiral of England at 31, and General in the first Dutch War, at 32. Whence retiring in Anno. 1655 he was chosen a Parliament man for the Town of Weymouth, 1660; made Commissioner of the Admiralty and Navy; Governor of the Town and Fort of King-sail; Vice-Admiral of Munster, and a Member of that Provincial Counsell; and in Anno 1664, was chosen Great Captain Commander under his Royal Highnesse in y^e Signall and most evidently successful fight against the Dutch Fleet.

Thus, He took leave of the Sea, his old Element; But continued still his other employes till 1669; at what time, through Bodely Infirmities (contracted by y^e Care and fatigue of Publique Affairs)

He withdrew,
Prepared and made for his End; and with a gentle and Even Gale, in much peace, arrived and anchored in his Last and Best Port, at Wansted in y^e County of Essex, yet 16 Sept. 1670, Being then but 49 and 4 months old. To Whose Name and merit his surviving Lady hath erected this remembrance."

The Admiral married, January 6, 1643-4, Margaret, wid. of Nicholas van der Schuren, and daughter of John Jasper, his friend and colleague, Captain William Crispin, marrying her sister Anne Jasper. Lady Margaret Penn was buried March 4, 1681-2, in the church at Walthamstow, Essex.

Sir William and Margaret (Jasper) Penn had issue:—

Anthony Lowther was member Parliament for Appleby, 1678-79. A letter from Hannah Penn, second wife of William Penn, to Rebecca Blackfan, at Pennsbury, Pa., mentions her "cousin John Lowther" as married and having one child, a daughter; who he was, does not appear from the "Penn Pedigree."

Richard Penn d. 1673, unm.

WILLIAM PENN, the Founder of Pennsylvania, was born in the parish of St. Katharine, near the Tower of London, October 14, 1644, and was baptized at Allhallows Church, Barking, (London) October 23, 1644. Within a few weeks of his birth, his father sailed as captain of the "Fellowship," in the Parliament's navy, and his wife and child took up their home at Wansted, Essex, a suburb of London, where the Admiral and his family made their home during the greater part of his life. Young Penn received an excellent classical education at private schools and under tutors at home, and on October 26, 1660, was entered as a "gentleman commoner" at the University of Oxford, (Christ Church). His stay at the University however lasted less than two years; having attended a meeting of the Society of Friends, where Thomas Loe, formerly of Oxford University, preached, he was strongly impressed with the simplicity and purity of the faith of that sect, and with a number of fellow students refused to attend the divine services at the University or to wear the gown of a student; he was finally expelled from the University for insubordination. After two years spent in travel and study in France and Italy he began the study of law at Lincoln's Inn, February 7, 1664-5. At about the same time he was presented at Court, and attending his father in command of the fleet operating against the Dutch, was sent by the "Great Captain Commander" with despatches to the King. In the autumn of 1665 his father sent him to Ireland, where he was received at the court of the Duke of Ormond, then Lord Lieutenant, and remained about two years, serving under the Duke at the siege of Carrickfergus, in May, 1666. It was there that the "portrait in armor", of which the Historical Society of Pennsylvania has a copy, was painted. In Ireland he again attended meetings of Friends addressed by Thomas Loe, and became finally convinced in the doctrines, and on September 3, 1667, suffered his first arrest for his religious convictions, and was thereafter actively identified with the Friends and presently began to write and speak in their behalf. His "Sandy Foundation Shaken" was published in 1668, and he suffered imprisonment in the Tower therefore. He was later imprisoned at Newgate and in Wheeler street, London, for his activity in Friends' affairs.

At the death of his father, William Penn became possessed of a goodly estate amounting to at least £1500 per annum. He married, April 4, 1672, at "a publick Assembly of the People of the Lord" at King's, Charle-wood, in the county of Hertford, Gulielma Maria Springett, daughter of Sir William Springett, (1620-1644) by his wife Mary Proude, (1624-82) daughter of Sir John Proude, by his wife Anne Fagge. At the time of her marriage Gulielma Maria Springett was residing with her stepfather, Isaac Pennington, who had married the widow Springett. After his marriage William Penn and his family resided for about five years in Basing House, Rickmansworth, in the county of Hertford, near the line of the county of Bucks, removing to Worminghurst, Sussex, a property inherited by his wife, in 1677, where he continued to reside until 1697, after his second marriage. In that year he removed to Bristol, and seems to have had his principal residence until 1710, when he removed to Ruscombe Manor, in Berks, near Twyford, now on the Great Western railway, where he died, July 30, 1718.

Of the four years spent in Pennsylvania by the Founder, in two periods of nearly equal length, the major part was doubtless spent in the city of Philadelphia, laid out by his direction prior to his first arrival, though his Pennsylvania home was ostensibly at Pennsbury, Bucks county, from early in the year 1683.

For several months after his arrival in Pennsylvania in the "Welcome," October 28, 1682, Penn seems to have made his home at Chester, later residing in Philadelphia and at Pennsbury, until his return to England in August, 1684. In his second visit to his province of Pennsylvania, arriving in Philadelphia, December 3, 1699, he was accompanied by his second wife, Hannah Callowhill, and their eldest child, John Penn, was born in Philadelphia, January 29, 1699-1700. This visit extended to September, 1701, and almost his last official act in Pennsylvania was the signing of the charter of incorporation of the city of Philadelphia. From the date of the grant of the province to him, February 24, 1680-1, to his death thirty-seven years later, practically his whole time and energy was devoted to her interests, and his great regret was that he was prevented from spending the greater part of his time in his beloved province.

Gulielma Maria, first wife of William Penn, died at Hoddeston, county of Hertford, February 23, 1693-4, at the age of fifty years, and he married (second) at the Friends' Meeting in Bristol, November 11, 1695, Hannah Callowhill, born at Bristol, England, April 18, 1664, died December 20, 1726. She was a daughter of Thomas Callowhill, of Bristol, linen draper, by his wife Hannah Hollister, daughter of Dennis Hollister, an eminent merchant of Bristol, England, and an early convert to the principles of Friends.

William Penn and his first wife Gulielma Maria Springett had issue:—

- Gulielma Maria, b. at Rickmansworth, Herts, Jan. 23, 1672-3, d. there, March 17, 1673-4;

By his second wife, Hannah Callowhill, William Penn had issue:—

John Penn, "the American", b. Philadelphia, Jan. 29, 1699-1700, d. unm. at Hitcham, county Bucks, England, Oct. 25, 1746; under father's will and "a deed of appointment" thereunder by mother, he became vested in one-half of the Proprietary estate in Pennsylvania; the Three Lower Counties and "elsewhere in Pennsylvania." He came to Pennsylvania in Sept., 1734, with his sister, Margaret Freame, and her husband and was ceremoniously received at Philadelphia, Sept. 29th, remaining a year, he gained the esteem of the people of Pennsylvania. He returned to England in Sept., 1735, to attend the litigation with Lord Baltimore over the Maryland boundary and never returned to America. An extract from the Oxford Flying Weekly Journal, Nov. 1, 1746, has this obituary notice of him:

"On Tuesday night last, being the 25th of Oct., after a long and painful illness, which was borne with the greatest fortitude, resignation, and cheerfulness, died at Hitcham, in the county of Bucks, John Penn, Esq., the eldest of the surviving sons of William Penn, Esq., late Proprietor of the Province of Pennsylvania; a gentleman who from his strict justice and integrity, the greatness of his mind, his universal benevolence to all mankind, and his many other amiable qualities, was a worthy successor to his great father. In his life he was highly esteemed by all who knew him and in his death generally lamented. He dying without issue his estate in Pennsylvania descended to his next brother Thomas Penn, Esq., who for many years resided in that Province for carrying on the settlement thereof, upon the foundation which was laid by their father."

Thomas Penn, b. at Bristol, Eng., March 9, 1701-2, d. 1775; was joint proprietor with brothers John and Richard, and at death of former inherited life-right in the one-half interest held by John; gave more attention to Proprietary affairs than either of his brothers; came to Pennsylvania in Aug., 1732, and remained until 1741, when he returned to England, and never again revisited the Province, though his letters show his intention to do so soon after his return, but business engagements prevented from time to time. He was an energetic, prudent, capable man of somewhat colder temperament than his brothers.

Thomas Penn m. Aug. 22, 1751, Lady Juliana Fermor, fourth daughter of Thomas, first Earl of Pomphret, of a family of great social distinction in Northamptonshire, that had the honor of knighthood as early as 1586, baronetcy 1641, and peerage 1692.

Of the eight children of Thomas Penn and Lady Juliana, five died in childhood; one, Juliana, b. May 19, 1753, m. William Baker, Esq. of Bafordbury, Herts, and had one child, Juliana Baker, who m. Jan. 18, 1803, John Fawcett Herbert Rawlins Esq., but died without issue, Sept. 11, 1849, at Gunters Grove, Stoke Courcy, Somersetshire.

The three remaining children of Thomas Penn, were,

John Penn, b. Feb. 23, 1760, d. unm. June 21, 1834; graduated at Cambridge, 1779; after coming into his inheritance travelled extensively in Europe; was a liberal patron of art, "something of a poet, an idealist and reformer." He came to Pennsylvania in 1783, and resided for five years, having a city house at the corner of Sixth and Market streets, and erected a small mansion which he called "Solitude," on the west bank of the Schuylkill, now in the Zoological Garden. He returned to England in 1788, and erected a handsome residence at Stoke; was Sheriff of Bucks, 1798; member of Parliament, 1802; Royal Gov. of Island of Portland in Dorset, from 1805 for many years, and was Lieut. Col. of First Troop, First Regiment Royal Bucks Yeomanry. He was the author of a number of literary works, and Cambridge University conferred upon him the degree of LL. D. in 1811.

Granville Penn, the Memorialist, was b. Dec. 9, 1761, and d. Sept. 28, 1844; he matriculated at Magdalen College, Oxford, Nov. 11, 1780; later entered the civil service and became assistant chief clerk in War Dept.; he m. June 24, 1791, Isabella, eldest daughter of General Gordon Forbes, colonel of 29th Regiment of Foot, of the family of Forbes of Skillater, in Aberdeenshire, by his wife Mary, eldest daughter of Benjamin Sullivan Esq., of Cork, Ireland. On his marriage, Granville Penn settled in London, and occupied his leisure with literary labors, the result of which is the several substantial volumes which form one of the chief sources of knowledge and information in reference to the Penn family. He was a justiciary of Buckinghamshire, after his succession to the extensive estates there at the death of his elder brother John. He died at Stoke, Sept. 28, 1844, almost precisely two centuries after the birth of his grandfather, the Founder.

Granville and Isabella (Forbes) Penn, had issue: nine children of whom only one married, and she left no issue.

Granville John Penn, second and eldest surviving son, graduated at Christ Church, Oxford, and became a barrister-at-law; was a Deputy Lieutenant and magistrate of Bucks; he twice visited Pennsylvania, in 1852 and again in 1857; presented to the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, a large wampum belt presented to the Founder at the "Great Treaty of 1683" by the Indian Chiefs. He died unm. March 29, 1867.

Rev. Thomas Gordon Penn, second surviving son of Granville and Isabella, graduated at Christ Church College, and took orders in the Established Church of England. At his death, Sept. 10, 1869, he was the last male descendant of William Penn, the Founder, bearing the name of Penn, and the entail of the Proprietary estate passed to his Aunt Sophia, wife of Archbishop Stuart, of whom presently.

Sophia Penn, only married child of Granville, became the wife of Sir William Maynard Gomm, Field Marshall, K. C. B., an officer of high distinction in the English military service, but d. without issue in 1827.

Sophia Margaretta, b. Dec. 25, 1764, was the last of the children of Thomas and Lady Juliana (Fermor) Penn; she m., in 1796, William Stuart, subsequently Archbishop of Armagh, Established Church, and Primate of that church in Ireland. He was a son of John, third Earl of Bute, a famous figure in English politics, an early associate and adviser of George III, and for several years his Prime Minister, by his wife, daughter of Lady Mary Wortley Montagu.

Mrs. Stuart d. April 29, 1847, having survived her husband, the Archbishop, twenty-five years. She was survived by three of her four children, two of whom have living issue, the sole representatives of William Penn, the founder, by his second wife, Hannah Callowhill.

He devised his estate to his son,

RICHARD PENN, youngest son of the Founder, who lived to mature years, was born at Bristol, England, at the home of his maternal grandparents, Thomas and Hannah Callowhill, January 17, 1705-6. He was apprenticed when a young man to the mercantile business in London, and seems to have resided there some considerable part of his life, though soon after his marriage he appears to have made his principal residence at Stanwell, Middlesex, a suburb of London. He married, in 1728, Hannah, daughter of Dr. John Lardner, of Gracechurch street, London, and Woodford, Epping Forest, Essex, and a sister to Lynford Lardner, who came to Pennsylvania in 1740 and was Receiver General, Keeper of the Great Seal, etc. Richard Penn was joint Proprietary of Pennsylvania with his brothers John and Thomas, but took much less interest in the affairs of the Province than either of them. Richard Penn died February 4, 1771, and was buried at Stoke Poges. His widow Hannah, survived him until April 20, 1785.

Richard and Hannah (Lardner) Penn had issue:—

John Penn, b. July 14, 1729, d. in Philadelphia, Feb. 9, 1795, having spent the greater part of his life in Pennsylvania, since his arrival in 1752. He married when a school-boy, Grace, daughter of James Cox, of London, much to the displeasure of his relatives, especially his uncle, Thomas Penn; after four or five years spent in studying at Geneva and in traveling on the continent with his uncle he came to Pennsylvania, in Nov., 1752, and directly afterwards was made a member of Provincial Council, and filled other positions under the Proprietaries until the fall of 1755, when he returned to England, returning in Oct., 1763, with a commission from his uncle and father as Deputy Governor of Pennsylvania, dated June 18, 1763. He was twice re-commissioned for three years each, and served as Governor of Pennsylvania continuously until his return to England, after the death of his father, May 6, 1771. His brother Richard succeeded him as Governor, Oct. 16, 1771, and served until John's return with a new commission as Governor, Aug. 30, 1773. He retained the position of Governor until the collapse of the Proprietary government in the Revolution, being the last of the Proprietary Governors. His first wife having died March 17, 1760, he married, May 31, 1766, Anne, eldest daughter of Hon. William Allen, Chief Justice of Pennsylvania, by his wife, Margaret Hamilton, daughter of Andrew Hamilton, the distinguished Attorney of the Penn family, and sister to Governor James Hamilton, of Bush Hill.

After his marriage to Miss Allen, John Penn made his city residence on the west side of Third street, in the house built for Col. Byrd, of Westover, but on his final return to Pennsylvania in 1773, he purchased an estate of 142 acres on west side of the Schuylkill, erected thereon a mansion, and called his place "Lansdowne," now included in Fairmount Park. Here he resided the greater part of the later years of his life, though he had a town house on Pine street between Second and Third, from which he was bur. in 1795. He had no issue by either marriage.

Hannah Penn, b. about 1731, was bur. at Stoke Poges, Oct. 2, 1791; m. July 19, 1774, James Clayton, who d. in Jan., 1790, without issue.

RICHARD PENN, Gov. of Pennsylvania, Oct. 16, 1771, to Aug. 30, 1773, when he was superseded by his brother John, was b. in 1735, and d. at Richmond, Surrey, England, May 27, 1811. He came to Philadelphia with his brother John in Oct., 1763, and was made a member of Provincial Council, Jan. 12, 1764. He was the first President of the Jockey Club of Philadelphia, organized in 1766, and presided over that organization until 1769, when he returned to England, returning with his commission as Governor in Oct., 1771. He m. at Christ Church, May 21, 1772, Mary Masters, of Philadelphia, and took up his residence in the fine mansion on the south side of Market street, between Fifth and Sixth, erected by Mary (Lawrence) Masters, the bride's mother, and conveyed to the bride two days before the wedding. The house, one of the finest in Philadelphia, was the residence of Gen. Howe during the British occupancy of the city, by Arnold after Howe's departure, and later by Holker, French Consul, and subsequently by Robert Morris, Gen. Washington being entertained there during the Constitutional Convention, 1787, and it became his presidential residence in 1790-7. The original house, however, was burned in 1780, and was rebuilt by Robert Morris. In April, 1775, Richard Penn purchased the Pell Hall estate, on which Girard College now stands, and like his Market street house, it was also burned during his ownership.

Richard Penn went to England with his family in the summer of 1775, carrying with him the petition of the Continental Congress, called the "Olive Branch", drawn up by John Dickinson, and when it was under consideration in the House of Lords, was interrogated as to the condition of the American Colonies. He continued to reside in England, and was a member of Parliament for Applyby, Westmoreland, 1784-90; for Haslemere, Surrey, 1790-96; and for the borough of Lancaster, 1796-1802, and again elected for Haslemere, in 1806. He came to Philadelphia with some members of his family and resided at 210 Chestnut street for about a year in 1808. He d. in Surrey, May 27, 1811. His widow survived him eighteen years, dying Aug. 16, 1829.

William Penn, b. 1747, d. Feb. 4, 1760.

Richard and Mary (Masters) Penn had issue:—

William Penn, b. in England, June 23, 1776, d. there Sept. 17, 1845. He came to Philadelphia with his parents in 1808, and remained in Pennsylvania for many years, living for a time in Dauphin county, and later in Easton, Northampton county. He m. Aug. 7, 1809, Catharine Balabrega, of Philadelphia, but so far as known left no issue. He was a man of "trancendent abilities, an excellent classical scholar, and possessed of a wonderful memory, which he displayed by an extraordinary power of quotation in conversation. * * * When he chose he could transfix the minds of those with whom he associated with the depth of his research and splendid talents. He mixed with the highest ranks of society and was courted by every company. There was probably no elevation attainable which he might not have reached." (Gentleman's Magazine).

Hannah Penn, d. unm. at Richmond, Surrey, England, July 16, 1856; she accompanied her parents on the visit to Philadelphia in 1808.

Richard Penn, b. 1783, d. at Richmond, Surrey, April 21, 1863; was many years a trusted and useful official of the Colonial Department of the English government; was elected Fellow of Royal Society, Nov. 18, 1824; his portrait by E. W. Eddis was engraved in 1834 by M. Ganci. He was never married.

Mary Penn, b. April 11, 1785, d. March 26, 1863; m. in 1821, Samuel Paynter Esq., of Richmond, Surrey, J. P. for Surrey and Middlesex, and High Sheriff for Surrey, 1838, d. March 26, 1844; she had no issue.

Daughter d. in inf., June 17, 1790.

We now return to the elder line of the descendants of William Penn, the Founder, descendants of which still reside in Pennsylvania.

WILLIAM PENN JR., only son of the Founder, by his first wife, Gulielma Maria Springett, who lived to mature years, married and left issue; was born at Worminghurst, in Sussex, his mother's estate, March 14, 1680-1, ten days after the grant of the Province of Pennsylvania to his father by Charles II. His mother died when he was less than thirteen years of age, and his father married Hannah Callowhill, a little over twenty months later. Of his childhood, education and youth little is known. He married, January 11, 1698-9, when less than eighteen years of age, at a meeting of the religious Society of Friends, at Bristol, England, Mary Jones, four years his senior, daughter of Charles Jones Jr., of Bristol, merchant, by his wife Martha Wathers, and granddaughter of Charles and Ann Jones, of Redcliffe street, Bristol, who were among the early Friends of that city; Charles Jones' name appearing among those mentioned by Besse, in his "Sufferings of Quakers", as early as 1663, and later.

William Penn Jr., did not accompany his father on his second visit to Pennsylvania in 1699, his young wife preferring to remain in England, and his first visit to his father's Province was in February, 1703-4, when he accompanied Lieut. Gov. John Evans. This visit was the result of a long cherished plan of his father, that his son might get acquainted with the new country as well as acquire a mode of living more in keeping with his income, he having developed extravagant tastes in England. In a letter to Logan, the father earnestly recommended his son to the society of Samuel Carpenter, Richard Hill and Isaac Norris, in whom he had the greatest confidence. The society of the young and dissolute Lieutenant Governor, however, proved disastrous, and young Penn was even more extravagant in Pennsylvania than in England, and finally broke with the Quakers altogether. He sold his Manor of Williamstadt, on the Schuylkill, including the site of Norristown, to Isaac Norris, and in November took passage on the "Jersey" for England. While here he officiated as a member of Provincial Council, and the good friends of his father doubtless did their best to reconcile him to a life in the Colony. A portion of his time was spent at Pennsbury, Penn's Manor, in Bucks county, but during the greater part of the time he and James Logan, his father's secretary, kept bachelor's hall, in William Clark's newly built house, on Chestnut street at the southwest corner of Third street, where later Gov. Evans joined them. Prior to coming to Pennsylvania, William Penn Jr. and his family had resided at Worminghurst, which he had inherited from his mother, and on his return he again took up his residence there, but becoming involved in debt sold it in 1707. From this date he seems to have led a somewhat roving life, part of his time being doubtless spent on the Irish estates inherited from his grandfather, Admiral Sir William Penn, and some part of it certainly spent in France. After 1712 his wife and children spent the greater part of the time with their step-grandmother, Hannah Penn, at Ruscombe, in Berkshire, where William Penn, the elder, and his family made their home from 1710 until after the death of the Founder in 1718.

William Penn Jr. had expected to succeed his father as Proprietor and Governor of Pennsylvania, and was much chagrined at the provisions of his father's last will, executed in 1712. He even took measures to obstruct the proving of the will and sent instructions to Governor Keith to call the Council and Assembly together to have him proclaimed Proprietor and Governor, but later acquiesced in the provisions of the will. He survived his father but two years, dying June 23, 1720, either in the north of France or in Liege, Belgium, the place of his death being a matter of dispute. His wife survived him thirteen years, dying about December 1, and was buried December 5, 1733.

Issue of William Penn Jr., by Mary Jones, his wife:—

Gulielma Maria, b. Nov. 10, 1699, at Worminghurst, d. Jan. 17, 1739-40, "the Beauty", and "Sweet Girl", so often mentioned in her grandfather's letters. She m. (first) "early in life" Aubrey, son of Rees and Martha (Awbrey) Thomas, of Merion, Pa., and nephew of William Aubrey who had married her aunt, Letitia Penn. He did not long survive his marriage and left one son, William Penn Thomas, d. unm. 1742. Gulielma Maria (Penn) Thomas m. (second) Charles, son of George and grandson of Judge Thomas Fell, of Swarthmore, whose widow became the wife of George Fox; and had issue:

Robert Edward Fell, of St. Martin's in the Fields; bap. Nov. 29, 1726; Captain of Marines, 1756, later Lieutenant Colonel in the English Army; d. 1787, unm. and without issue.

Mary Margaretta Fell, bap. Aug. 23, 1724; m. John Barron; residing in Leeds, England, May 26, 1750, when she writes to Thomas Penn; said to have left no issue.

Gulielma Maria Frances Fell, bap. Aug. 10, 1725; m. John Newcomb: in a letter to Thomas Penn, dated Oct. 22, 1750, Newcomb, announces birth of "fine little boy", who by his "dear little woman's particular desire" has been named Thomas Penn Newcomb. A former letter had referred to "our little girl". It has been commonly assumed that this line of the descendants of William Penn, the Founder, has become extinct.

John Newcomb, husband of Gulielma Maria Frances, was a clergyman of the Established Church, and at the date of the marriage vicar of Leire, near Lutterworth, Leicestershire. They had issue, Gulielma Maria; Susanna Margaretta; Philadelphia, who m. Thomas Brookholding, John Springett, and William Hawkins Newcomb.

Springett Penn Fell died without issue.

Springett Penn, b. Feb. 10, 1700-1, at Worminghurst, was the "little Saracen" so lovingly alluded to in his grandfather's letters. He spent much of his time after arriving at manhood on the Penn estates in Ireland, and d. unm. at Dublin, Ireland, Feb. 8, 1730-1. He instituted Chancery proceedings over the will of his grandfather, the Founder, and while his suit was still pending, joined Hannah Penn, his step-grandmother, in the appointment of Patrick Gordon as Lieutenant Governor of Pennsylvania in 1725. At the meeting of the Provincial Council of the Province, held at Philadelphia, June 22, 1726, the commission of Major Gordon, "from Springett Penn Esq., with the assent of Hannah Penn, and his Majesty's royal approbation thereof" was produced and read, and "was forthwith published at the Court House." This was his sole connection with the Province of Pennsylvania.

WILLIAM PENN (3d) was b. at Worminghurst, March 21, 1702-3, and through his first marriage was the ancestor of the Penn-Gaskell family.

WILLIAM PENN (3d) spent his childhood and youth under the care of his mother and step-grandmother. He was seventeen at the death of his father in 1720, and from that time for several years spent most of his time in Ireland. On the death of his elder brother, Springett Penn, in 1731, he inherited the remaining estates of the elder line of the Penn family, of which he then became the eldest male heir. These included the estate of Shanagarry, granted to his great-grandfather, Admiral Sir William Penn, by the Protector in 1660, and an estate known as the "Rocks" in Sussex, a remnant of the estate of his grandmother, Gulielma Maria Springett, whose whole possessions of course descended in the elder line. Through the break with the Friends in Philadelphia by his father, William Penn Jr., the family seem to have entirely withdrawn from the Society, but on the approach of his marriage, William Penn united himself with the Society and was married under the care of "the people of God called Quakers, in Wandsworth, in the county of Surrey, according to the good order used amongst them" * * * "on the 7th day of the month called December in the year 1732," to Christian Forbes, daughter of Alexander Forbes, of London, merchant, and Jane his wife, a daughter of Robert Barclay, of Ury, the author of the famous Quaker book, the "Apology", and through him a descendant of the royal family of Stuarts; Robert Barclay's mother, the wife of Col. David Barclay, of Ury, (who served under Gustavus Adolphus, in the Thirty Years' War) was Lady Catherine Gordon, a daughter of Sir Robert Gordon, second son of the Earl of Sutherland, and a cousin of James VI. of Scotland, later James I., of England. Through this marriage of Col. David Barclay to Lady Catharine Gordon, their descendants trace their ancestry through all the English Kings back from Richard II. to King Alfred.

The father of Alexander Forbes was John Forbes, of Auchorties, near Aberdeen, Scotland. Ury, the home of the Barclays, being an adjoining estate, the two families were closely associated, and both joined in the Quaker movement that invaded Scotland in the latter half of the seventeenth century, and the heads of both families suffered imprisonment at Aberdeen and were otherwise persecuted for their religious faith. The life and works of Robert Barclay, of Ury, and his association with the colonization of New Jersey is too well known to need repetition in giving an account of his descendants through the Penn family.

The married life of William Penn (3d) with his first wife was pathetically brief, as she died November 1, 1733, within a year of her marriage, and soon after the birth of her daughter, Christiana Gulielma Penn, and at the early age of eighteen years. She was buried among the Penn family at Jordans. In a sketch of her in "Piety Promoted", her religious character is highly extolled.

William Penn (3d) married (second), December 7, 1736, Ann Vaux, daughter of Isaac Vaux, of London, and thereafter lived principally in Ireland, chiefly at the ancestral estate of Shanagarry, where he died February 6, 1746-7. He had by his second wife a son, Springett Penn, born at Cork, Ireland, March 1, 1737-8, died at Dublin, Ireland, in November, 1766, unmarried, being the last survivor of the name descended from Gulielma Maria Springett.

The widow, Ann (Vaux) Penn, to whom Springett had devised his estate, married (second) Alexander Durdin, and on her death bed willed to him the half of the Shanagarry estate devised to her by her son. A great deal of litigation followed between Durdin, (and later his heirs) and Christiana Gulielma Penn-Gaskell, daughter of William Penn (2d), by his first marriage.

CHRISTIANA GULIELMA PENN, only child of William Penn (3d), by his first wife, Christiana Forbes, and after the death of her half-brother, Springett Penn, the only surviving representative of the elder line of the descendants of William Penn, the Founder, was born October 22, 1733, and was brought up in the family of her maternal grandfather, Alexander Forbes, at Dowgate Hill, their London Home, and at Auchorties, Scotland, the ancestral estate of the Forbes family. Her father, William Penn (3d), seems also to have resided with his father-in-law until he contracted his second marriage with Ann Vaux, after which he resided in Ireland. Alexander Forbes died May 25, 1740, but Christiana Gulielma Penn continued to reside with the family until her marriage in 1761 to Peter Gaskell, of Bath, and Ingersley Hall, Macclesfield, Cheshire, England.

PETER GASKELL was brought up in the family of his kinsman, the Earl of

Christiana Penn

Powis and Herbert, (his father having died when he was young, was buried at Presbury Church, near Macclesfield). He was a connection of the Gaskell family of Beaumont Hall, Lancaster, Kiddington Hall, Oxfordshire, and the Gaskells of Rolf's Hold, in Bucks, as shown by the arms he bore, viz: Three bars engrailed vert, in chief of a rose gu. barbed and seeded ppr. between two trefoils slipped of the second; crest, a sinister arm embowed with an anchor with cable, sable. Motto, over "Spes". These arms, quartered with those of the Penn family, accompanied the engraving of the portrait of William Penn in armour, inscribed to Peter Penn-Gaskell, grandson of Peter Gaskell, above mentioned, by the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, in 1877.

Christiana Gulielma Penn inherited from her father a one-half interest in the Shanagarry estate in Ireland, that had descended from Admiral Sir William Penn, though it was involved in litigation for a period of forty years, between her and her heirs, and those of Alexander Durdin, the second husband of her stepmother, Ann (Vaux) Penn, the final decree to possess that and the other Irish estates involved, being obtained by her son, Thomas Penn-Gaskell, of Shanagarry. Mrs. Gaskell also inherited valuable lands and lots in and around Philadelphia, from her great-aunt, Letitia Aubrey, including the old Manor of Mount Joy and Fagg's Manor, the latter being a grant of 10,000 acres to Sir John Fagg, from whom it descended to her. It lay partly in Chester county and partly in New Castle county. A great part of this was sold prior to her marriage to Peter Gaskell by virtue of a power of attorney from her to William Peters and Richard Hockley, dated March 5, 1755. She likewise inherited considerable entailed estate in Philadelphia and elsewhere, from her father, her uncle, Springett Penn, and the Fell-Thomas branch of the family, being the sole surviving heir of the elder branch of the Founder's family. In 1774 proceedings were begun to effect a common recovery in order to dock the entail, and considerable litigation ensued which continued until her death.

Christiana Gulielma (Penn) Gaskell died at her house in Thornbaugh street, Bedford square, London, England, March 24, 1803, at the age of sixty-nine years, having survived her husband, Peter Gaskell, eighteen years. There are two portraits of Christiana Gulielma Penn-Gaskell, one in the possession of Alexander Penn-Gaskell, of London, and the other in possession of her great-granddaughter, Christiana Gulielma Penn-Gaskell Hall, of Philadelphia.

Peter Gaskell and Christiana Gulielma Penn had issue:—

Thomas Penn Gaskell, b. 1762, eldest son, inherited the Irish estates and those in Pennsylvania. He m. in 1794, Lady Diana Sackville, daughter of the Dowager Countess of Glandore, who lived but a few years, and their only child died in infancy. He therefore died without issue, and his estates descended to his younger brother, Peter Penn-Gaskell, of Shanagarry. A contemporary obituary notice says, "Died at his house in Fitz William Square, Dublin, on the 19th of October, 1823, aged 61, Thomas Penn-Gaskell of Shanagarry in the county of Cork, Esq. This gentleman was the heir-general of the celebrated legislator William Penn. * * * His estate in the county of Cork Mr. Gaskell inherited by lineal succession from his illustrious ancestor Admiral Sir William Penn. * * * After being engaged for 40 years in a suit in the Irish chancery and expending upwards of £20,000. he obtained a decree to possess his estates. He married, in the year 1794 a daughter of the Dowager Countess of Glandore, who lived but a few years and had one son who died an infant".

 Elizabeth Penn-Gaskell, d. s. p.

PETER PENN-GASKELL, second son of Peter Gaskell and Christiana Gulielma Penn, born at Bath, England, 1763, came to Pennsylvania after the death of his father in 1785, and resided at "Ashwood" near Villanova, Delaware county, after 1796, in which year he purchased the estate there which remained in the family until 1888, when it was sold by Col. Peter Penn-Gaskell Hall, U. S. A., to whom it had been devised by his aunt, Eliza Penn-Gaskell, to Dr. J. M. DaCosta. On May 31, 1824, Peter Penn-Gaskell obtained a "Royal License" to assume the additional surname of his mother, Penn. At the death of his brother, Thomas Penn-Gaskell, he inherited Shanagarry and the other Irish estates. He died at "Ashwood", July 16, 1831.

Peter Penn-Gaskell married, in 1793, at St. David's, Radnor, Elizabeth Edwards, born 1772, daughter of Nathan Edwards, of Radnor, Delaware county, who survived him but three years, dying July 19, 1834. In her will she directs that three thousand dollars be expended in erecting tombstones over her husband, herself and her children in the Lower Merion burial ground (back of Bryn Mawr College).

Issue of Peter and Elizabeth (Edwards) Penn-Gaskell:—

William Penn-Gaskell, b. 1794, d. unm. October 12, 1817.

Thomas Penn-Gaskell, "of Shanagarry", referred to in Burke's "Landed Gentry", edition of 1879, as "of Ballymaloe, County Cork, Ireland, and Penn Hall, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, born 1796." He was married Dec. 22, 1825, by Right Rev. Bishop White of the Protestant Episcopal Church, to Mary, daughter of George Blair McClenachan. He d. at his home "Penn Lodge" in Lower Merion, near Philadelphia, Sunday morning, Oct. 18, 1846, in his 52d year, and was buried in his vault at St. John's Roman Catholic Church, Thirteenth street, above Chestnut, where his wife, who died December 21, 1867, is also buried. A portrait of Thomas Penn-Gaskell, by the artist Henry Inman, is in possession of his grand-niece, Gulielma Penn-Gaskell Hall.

Eliza Penn-Gaskell, b. 1798, d. unm. at "Ashwood", where she had always resided, Nov. 23, 1865. By her will she devised "Ashwood" to her nephew, Col. Peter Penn-Gaskell Hall.

Isaac Penn-Gaskell, b. 1810, named in Browning's "Americans of Royal Descent" as "Dr. Isaac Penn-Gaskell, of Paris", d. unm. Oct. 24, 1842. His will bearing date the day previous to his death was probated May 16, 1845, though letters of administration had previously been granted to his eldest brother, Thomas Penn-Gaskell, who in withdrawing them states his "belief of the mental incapacity of the decedent to make a will remains unaltered."

PETER PENN-GASKELL, "of Shanagarry in the county of Cork, Ireland, and 1613 Chestnut street, in the City of Philadelphia," as he styles himself in his will, was born at "Ashwood", Delaware county, Pennsylvania, April 3, 1803. At the death of his brother Thomas in 1846, he became the eldest male representative of the elder line of the descendants of William Penn, the Founder, and as such inherited the Irish estate of Shanagarry, which at his death in Philadelphia, April 6, 1866, he devised to his eldest son William, and default of issue of him to his other son Peter Penn-Gaskell, 2d, to whom it descended. He married, February 15, 1825, Louise Adelaide Heath, daughter of Charles P. and Esther (Keely) Heath, and a descendant, through her mother, from Capt. Anthony Wayne, grandfather of Gen. Anthony Wayne of the Revolution, the latter being a first cousin to her great-grandmother, Esther Wayne.

Louisa Adelaide (Heath) Penn-Gaskell survived her husband twelve years. Her will dated at London, June 29, 1869, gives her residence as "of Philadelphia, in the United States of America, but now residing at Eastbourne Terrace, Hyde Park, London". Three codicils were later added, the last on March 27, 1877, and it was proven in Philadelphia, July 30, 1878.

Jane Penn-Gaskell, married Washington Irving, U. S. N., a nephew of the famous author whose name he bore. She died without issue in 1863.

Emily Penn-Gaskell, married, in 1864, John Paul Quinn, M. D., Surgeon U. S. N., and had issue—Granville Penn-Gaskell Quinn, born 1871, died 1893.

Peter Penn-Gaskell, born October 24, 1843, succeeded to Shanagarry and the other Irish estates on the death of his father in 1866, and was the owner thereof until his death in 1905. He was educated at Heidelberg, and returning to America, entered the United States Army, was commissioned Second Lieutenant of First Regiment New Jersey Cavalry, April 7, 1862, promoted First Lieutenant, November 7, 1862, and to Captain, October 23, 1863. He resigned the latter commission February 3, 1864, to become Major of the Second Battalion Louisiana Cavalry, in which position he served until September 7, 1864. After succeeding to the Irish estates in 1866, he went to Europe, and July 6, 1869, was married to Mary Kathleen, eldest daughter of Charles Edward Stubbs, Sussex Square, Hyde Park, London. Soon after his marriage, Peter Penn-Gaskell and his wife made a visit to the United States, but he lived almost entirely abroad until his death, mostly in London, where his mother resided with him for some years.

In 1877 the Historical Society of Pennsylvania inscribed to Peter Penn-Gaskell the engraving after the painting of William Penn in armour. Accompanying this engraving are the arms of Penn-Gaskell of Shanagarry, which as described by Burke, are:—

Quarterly: 1st and 4th or., three bars engrailed vert. in chief a rose gu. barbed and seeded ppr. between two trefoils slipped of the second, for Gaskell, (being practically the arms born by the Gaskells of Beaumont Hall, Lancashire, Kiddington Hall, Oxford, and those of Rolfe's Hold, in Bucks.) 2d and 3d, the arms of Penn, viz:—arg. on a fesse sable three plates a canton, gu. there on a crown, ppr. representing the royal crown of Charles II.; crests: for Gaskell, a sinister arm embowed with an anchor erect with cable, sable; motto-over "Spes"; of Penn, A demi-lion arg. gorged with a collar sa. charged with three plates; motto-over, "Pennsylvania."

Peter Penn-Gaskell and Mary Kathleen Stubbs, had issue: William Penn-Gaskell, unm., Winifred Penn-Gaskell, unm., Percy Penn-Gaskell, unm.

CHRISTIANA GULIELMA PENN-GASKELL, second daughter of Peter Penn-Gaskell (1st), by his wife Elizabeth Edwards, born at "Ashwood"; Delaware county, Pennsylvania, in 1806, married, January 2, 1827, William Von Swartzbreck Hall, born at Wavertree, Lancashire, England, in 1799. He was the second son of Richard Hall of Wavertree, a prominent Liverpool merchant and vessel owner, extensively engaged in the South American and West Indian trade, and also interested in the "Straffordshire Potteries", the management of a branch of which, brought William Von S. Hall, his son, to America, in 1826.

William Von Swartzbreck Hall's mother was Elizabeth Von Swartzbreck, of whom her son, Dr. Edward Hall, of St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London, wrote in his diary in 1823: "Our mother's family was originally German; our great-grandfather, by name Edward Von Swartzbreck, was the first that settled in England. He came over with his cousin, Arnold Yost Von Keppell, in the reign of William III. Keppell was created Earl of Albermarle, and his descendant now sits in the House of Lords, and is third cousin to our mother. Edward Von Swartzbreck married Ann Gaunt, of Singleton, Lancashire (Von Keppell had been made Viscount of Bury, near Singleton), descended from John of Gaunt, Earl of Lincoln. Their son, James Von Swartzbreck, married Alicia Porter, and was father of Elizabeth Von Swartzbreck, who married Richard Hall, of 'Small House', Broughton, Yorkshire, in 1796. James Von Swartzbreck had four brothers who suffered on the scaffold for abetting Charles Stuart, 'the Pretender', during the uprising in Lancashire."

The American branch of the Hall family has been of Gargrave, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, since the latter part of 1500, where it was established by John Hall, son of Robert Hall, of "Leventhorpe" (an estate five miles east of Leeds, York). The pedigree of Robert Hall, of "Leventhorpe", which traces back through the Leventhorpe family, from 1531, was compiled by "Beckwith" from deeds, wills, and parish records. From 1531 to 1700, Hall of Leventhorpe is contained in Dugdale's visitation of Yorkshire, edited by Foster. The Skipton and Gargrave branch of the family is mentioned in the Herald's visitation of London, 1568, and Foster has continued the East Lieling branch to its living representative, Maj.-Gen. Hall-Plumber, of the English army.

The first mention of the family in the Herald's book states that "Robert Hall married the heiress of Sir John Leventhorpe in 1394," and founded the family of the Halls of Leventhorpe.

A claim made by the Skipton and Gargrave branch of the family, but not proved to date, makes Robert Hall, married 1394, the great-grandson of Sir Francis de Halle, of Halle, in the Tyrol, who entered the service of Edward III. of England. His pedigree, as passed by the Heralds' College in 1545 (see visitation Shropshire Hall of North Hall), shows Francis de Halle to have been one of twenty-one children, issue of Albert I. (Hapsburg), Emperor of Austria, died 1303, whose descent is traced to 760 A. D. and Elizabeth, Countess of Halle, died 1313, (see Robinson's "Royal Pedigrees," and Coxe's "House of Austria.") Probability, at least, is lent to the Hapsburg claim by the most possible origin of the Hall arms, as will be seen from the following pedigree of Hall of Northall.

SIR FRANCIS DE HALLE, of Halle, in the Tyrol, son of Albert I. of Austria, and Elizabeth, Countess of Halle, entered the service of Edward III. of England, and was joint marshal with Sir Walter Manny of the army of "the good Duke of Lancaster," in the war in Guienne, in 1544; was one of the heroes of Poitiers with the Black Prince; 40th Knight of the Garter; Governor of Calais, etc., etc. (Froissart's Chronology.) He married Blanche, daughter of Robert de Artois, of Richmond, North Riding of Yorkshire, and had issue:

ROBERT HALLE, a Knight in the Westminster Roll, reign of Richard II; m. Maria, sole heiress of Robert A. Ketfield, Knight de Orleton (or Moreton?), of county Hereford, and had issue:—

HENRY HALL, Master of the Horse under Richard II., and Governor of Ross in Ireland. (His brothers were: Francis, John and Alexander, of county Hereford). He married Margaretha, daughter of John de Eureux, and had issue:—

ROBERT HALL, who is claimed to have married the heiress of Sir John Leventhorpe, in 1394.

Sir Francis de Halle's arms, as placed on his Garter Stall in Westminster, show the Dragon of Halle, etc. His son, Robert Hall, married into the A. Ketfield de Orleton (or Moreton) family, whose arms were: Argent, a fess, between two greyhounds, courant, sable, and may have been adopted by him.

Henry Hall, his son, was Governor of Ross, in the south of Ireland, which had recently been taken by the English. The badge of Ross is a greyhound and stag courant, since the English occupation, and may have originated with its first governor.

Robert Hall (claimed son of Henry) bore arms of Leventhorpe: Argent, a fess, between two greyhounds, courant sable—crest; on a chapeau, gules, turned up argent, a greyhound, sejant, ermine. Motto: Quo fata vocant (where ever Fate may call). There is a painting of these arms in the Swillington Parish Church, near the estate of Leventhorpe, dating from the sixteenth century, which has the word "Haste" written over the crest. The motto would seem an appropriate one for an adventurer such as Francis de Halle appears to have been. The arms of Leventhorpe were: Argent, a fess, between three fleur-de-lis.

While Henry Hall was Governor of Ross and "Master of the Horse" to Richard II., John Leventhorpe was also high in favor with that monarch. In fact, both families were very prominent prior to the Reformation. They were of those Yorkshire and Lancaster families who retained their Catholicism and remained faithful to the House of Stuart, and suffered much in consequence.

Sir John Leventhorpe, a cadet of the family, whose heiress Robert Hall married in 1394, is stated to have come from "Leventhorpe Hall," near Swillington, West Riding of Yorkshire, in the fifteenth year of Richard II. (1392), and settled at Sawbridgeworth, Hertfordshire (it will be remembered that the North Hall pedigree states that Henry Hall, Governor of Ross, had brothers: Francis, John, and Alexander, of Hereford, or Hertford?), where the family have left many interesting monuments in neighboring churches. Sir John Leventhorpe represented his shire in several parliaments, and was one of the executors of the will of Henry V., and held several other offices of honor. He died in 1433, leaving issue. He was granted freedom to hunt in all the King's lands in Hertfordshire and Essex, also "fair markets" in the principal Hertfordshire towns, and permission to embark or inclose four hundred and eighty acres of land, forming part of the town of Sawbridgeworth.

The descendants of Robert Hall, of Leventhorpe, were equally fortunate, and became one of the most prominent families in the country. In 1394 none but ducal families were allowed to use a "chapeau" in their crests, and the heralds of the present day consider it a great honor. The "Leventhorpe Arms" are found quartered with others in a number of churches of Southern Yorkshire. Whitkirk Church, in particular, contains a large memorial window erected by a member of the family in the sixteenth century.

The county of York has been represented in Parliament by the following members of the family: In the reign of Queen Mary, 1553, by Robert Hall once; in Elizabeth's reign, 1562, by Ralph Hall twice, and by Henry Hall once. The following have been Lords Mayor of York, at that time the second city in the kingdom: in the reign of Henry VIII., John Hall and Robert Hall, the latter being again Lord Mayor in Queen Mary's reign; Henry Hall, Lord Mayor in Elizabeth's reign, and again in James I's reign.

From records in the possession of the Gargrave and Skipton branch of the family, it is known that Robert Hall, of Leventhorpe, died in 1565; had issue, among others, John Hall, died 1611, who was possessed of estates on the south bank of the river Aire, midway between Skipton and Gargrave, known severally as "Cuppy Plantation", "Small House", "Hall's Close", and "Hall Field", all in the parish of Broughton, about seventeen miles from "Leventhorpe Hall." John Hall was succeeded by Roger Hall, Sr., born 1635, died 1720, who had issue, among others, John Hall, Jr., born 1671, died 1717, who had, among others, Henry Hall, born 1698, died 1762. This Henry Hall "came into the family Estates when he was 19 years of age" * * * "through gambling and other means he lost all the family property except a part known as "Hall's Close", about one mile north of the village of Broughton, which he left to his son John Hall, born 1734, died 1807, who was compelled by misfortunes to part with it. "Hall's Close" was worth £2300 per annum in 1827.

John Hall of "Cuppy House" had issue, among others, his second son, RICHARD HALL, who removed to Wavertree, Lancashire, when a young man, and became a prominent merchant and ship owner of Liverpool, carrying on an extensive trade with South American and West Indian ports. He married, as before stated, Elizabeth Von Swartzbreck, like himself of ancient German ancestry. The pedigree of the Gargrave branch of the Hall family shows intermarriages with several prominent families of York and Lancashire.

Richard and Elizabeth (Von Swartzbreck) Hall had issue:—

James Hall, of Liverpool, succeeded his father, and d. Sept. 2, 1850;

WILLIAM VON SWARTZBRECK HALL, of whom presently;

April 25, 1831, Frances, daughter of Dr. John Latham, who was Court Physician and Dean of St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London; their only surviving son is John Oswald Hall, of Buenos Ayres, Argentine, where he went to take charge of his uncle James's shipping interests. He is a well known collector of orchids, and has a large country seat near Buenos Ayres; he is interested in charitable affairs and has erected a church on his estate.

John Hall, a planter in Venezuela, who had sons, John and Edward, at college in England, in 1879.

He was author of "Climate and Vital Statistics of Tasmania", "Epidemic Diseases of Tasmania", "Medical Topography and Vital Statistics of Hobart Town", etc. His later years were spent in philanthropic work, and in collecting different translations of the Bible. His book, "Who translated the Bible", is considered a standard work. He is survived by one son, Leventhorpe Hall, in the British Civil Service, and four daughters, one of whom, Anastasia Hall, is an authoress of considerable merit.

Henry Hall, b. March 11, 1807; was ordained a priest, June 5, 1830, and a number of his sermons have been published in various Roman Catholic journals; d. at Louth, Lincolnshire, England, July 9, 1878.

Alicia Hall, married Capt. May.

John Hall, D. D., a first cousin of the above mentioned family, was "The Priest of Macclesfield", who founded St. Albans and a number of Roman Catholic chapels. Another relative, Rev. William Hall, was Vicar of Gawsthorpe, Cheshire. He was an uncle to William Latham.

WILLIAM VON SWARTZBRECK HALL, second son of Richard Hall, of Liverpool, and his wife Elizabeth Von Swartzbreck, born 1799, came to America in 1824, as his father's business representative, in connection with the pottery and shipping business. Through the marriage of his brothers to the two daughters of Dr. John Latham, and his own distant relationship with the Latham family, who were settled near the Gaskells of Macclesfield, in Cheshire, and were on intimate terms with them, as is shown by letters from Alexander Forbes and William Gaskell, Mr. Hall was introduced to the family of Peter Penn Gaskell, of "Ashwood", on his arrival in Pennsylvania, and January 2, 1827, as before stated, he married Peter Penn-Gaskell's daughter, Christiana Gulielma at Christ Church, Philadelphia, Right Rev. Bishop William White performing the ceremony. William Von Swartzbreck Hall had received a liberal education, and was a portrait painter of no mean ability, and followed his profession with success, until his death, September 26, 1862. He is buried at Lower Merion. Mrs. Hall died March 29, 1830, at the age of twenty-four years.

At the close of the Civil War he entered the regular army, and January 17, 1867, was appointed Paymaster, with rank of Major, and continued in that position until July 2, 1891, when he was honorably retired after thirty years' service. LOGAN ARMS.

LOGAN FAMILY

JAMES LOGAN, William Penn's Secretary, confidential friend and adviser, as well as of his sons and grandsons, and for nearly half a century the factotum of the Colonial government of Pennsylvania, and one of its most prominent officials, Provincial Councillor, Judge, Assemblyman, Surveyor General, and at times all of these and more; came of an ancient and honorable family of Scotland, and is thought to have been a grandson or great-grandson of Logan of Restalrigg, who in the year 1600 conspired with the Earl of Gowrie to kidnap James VI. of Scotland, later James I. of England, for which complicity, discovered after his death, his estate was confiscated and "his name, memory, and dignity abolished; his arms cancelled, so that his posterity be excluded from any offices, honors, lands, tenements, etc."

The Barony of Restalrigg, Scotland, originally was vested in the Leith family, and in the reign of Robert the Bruce came into the Logan family by the marriage of an heiress of the Leiths with a Logan. Sir Robert Logan, of this family, accompanied Sir James Douglas on his way to the Holy Land with the heart of their royal master Bruce, and with Douglas was slain by the Saracens, in Andalusia, Spain, in 1330.

In 1398 Robert Logan, of Restalrigg, who married a daughter of Robert II., of Scotland, and was Admiral of Scotland, etc., bore the coat-of-arms granted to the family in commemoration of the heroic services and death of Sir Robert Logan, before mentioned, viz.: "Three passion nails piercing a man's heart."

Sir Robert Logan, son of the Admiral, married Geilless, daughter of the fourth Lord Seton, and a descendant, another Sir Robert Logan, married about 1650, Agnes, daughter of Patrick, Lord Gray. Another Logan of Restalrigg, in the sixteenth century, married Elizabeth, daughter of David Magill, of Cranston-riddel, King's Advocate; and the attainted Logan of Restalrigg married a daughter of Patrick Home, of Fastcastle, in Berwickshire. They had at least four sons—Robert, who succeeded his father as Laird of Restalrigg, and was summoned to answer his father's treason; George; John, and Archibald.

PATRICK LOGAN, the father of James, of Pennsylvania, was born in East Lothia, Scotland, and is said to have been a son of George and grandson of Logan of Restalrigg. He graduated with the degree of M. A. from the University of Edinburgh, and became a clergyman of the Established Church, but becoming a convert to Quakerism, in March, 1671, he removed to Lurgan, county Armagh, Ireland, and had charge of a Latin school there until the landing of William of Orange in 1689, when he removed with his family to Edinburgh, and soon after to Bristol, England, where he took charge of a Latin school under the care of Friends. He had married while in Scotland, Isabel, daughter of James Hume, a younger son of the House of St. Leonard's in the south of Scotland, by his wife Bethia Dundas, sister to the Laird of Dundas, of Didiston, about eight miles from Edinburgh, and a descendant of Lord Panmure. James Logan says, "The Earl of Murray assisted my grandfather to carry off my grandmother."

William Logan, eldest son of Patrick and Isabel (Hume) Logan, became an eminent physician at Bristol, England, and his nephew, William Logan, son of James of Philadelphia, was sent to his uncle by his parents at the age of twelve years and was educated under his supervision. At the death of the uncle, his nephew and namesake received under his will a legacy of considerable estate.

JAMES LOGAN was born at Lurgan, Ireland, October 20, 1674, and was educated in his father's school there, acquiring a fair knowledge of Latin, Greek and Hebrew before he was thirteen years of age. In his fourteenth year he was apprenticed to a linen draper in Dublin, but he writes in his autobiography, "the Prince of Orange landing before I was bound, (tho I served my Master for 6 Months) in the Winter of 1688, I went down to my Parents, and the wars in Ireland coming on, in the Spring I went over to Edinburgh with my mother, after which my father soon followed, who being out of employment, repaired to London & was there gladly received by our friends, Deputies to the General Meeting from Bristol in that city, as their School Master for the Latin language, and I followed him the next year." Patrick Logan returned to Ireland in 1693, leaving James in charge of the school. He retained his position there, continuing his studies until 1697, when he engaged in the shipping trade between Dublin and Bristol. His father died in 1702, and his mother married again "out of Meeting", and in 1717, again a widow, came to Pennsylvania and lived with her son until her death, January 17, 1722. Logan, when invited by William Penn to become his Secretary and accompany him to Pennsylvania, had in prospect a successful business career. The promise and prospects of material advancement in the new country, however, induced him to accept the offer, and he sailed with "The Founder" and his family in the "Canterbury," for Pennsylvania, September 9, 1699.

James Logan was born and reared a Quaker, and held to that faith through life; but, aristocratic by birth and tendency, ambitious and courageous by nature, and always tenacious of his rights, the stricter tenets of the faith of his sect had little hold on his outward life; particularly was this so in reference to the defence of inherent rights and liberties by force if necessary. These traits, which marked his whole after career, were thus early made manifest to his distinguished patron before their arrival in America. The vessel in which they were passengers being attacked by pirates, Logan took an active part in its defense, while Penn, the great apostle of peace, retired "below". After the pirates had been driven off and Penn reappeared, he reproved Logan for engaging in force of arms. Logan, with characteristic bluntness, entered into no lengthy defence of what he considered a perfectly natural action, but contented himself with inquiring of his patron and master, since he did not wish that he should take part in the sanguinary struggle, "Why then did you not order me down too?"

They arrived in Philadelphia in the early part of December, 1699, and Logan took up his residence in the family of William Penn, in Anthony Morris' "slate-roof house", on Second street, and remained there after Penn had returned to England two years later. Penn at once made him Secretary of the Governor's Council, and when about to depart for England made him also his Commissioner of Property and Receiver General, and he thereafter had principal charge of the making of titles to lands, and the collection of quit rents, and had a general supervision of the vast business interests of Penn and his family in America. He gained and held the confidence of the Founder, and that of his heirs and successors in the proprietary interests, and his recommendations, as to the policy of government, the selection of members of Council, and other high officials, even the Deputy or Lieutenant Governors of the Province, as well as in all matters pertaining to the proprietary interests, had great weight as abundantly evidenced in the correspondence with Penn and his family.

Logan became a voting member of the Governor's Council, April 21, 1702, and after the arrival of Lieutenant Governor John Evans was formally qualified as a member, February 8, 1703-4; and he continued an active and often a dominant member of that body until his voluntary retirement, May 29, 1747, and during nearly two years, after the retirement of Gov. Patrick Gordon, August 4, 1736, to June 1, 1738, as President and senior member of Council, he was acting Chief Executive of the Province.

At the time that Logan became an acting member of Council and assumed the administration of the business affairs of the Proprietary, troubles were crowding about his great patron on both sides of the ocean. He was involved in various disputes with the Crown, and had quarreled with the settlers on the question of quit rents, large arrearages of which remained unpaid, and Logan's insistence on a perhaps too rigid enforcement of his master's rights and perquisites, further aggravated the trouble with the anti-proprietary party, and on him as the confidential clerk and devout friend of Penn devolved cares too manifold for his youthful shoulders. By nature and inheritance an aristocrat, he resented the pretensions of the democratic element in the Assembly, always too ready to ignore the prerogatives of the Proprietary, and his haughty manner and want of diplomacy embroiled him in a quarrel between the young and dissolute Governor Evans and the Assembly, which culminated in the articles of impeachment against him, exhibited February 26, 1706-7, charging him with inserting in the Governor's commissions, clauses contrary to the Royal Charter. He was also charged with holding two incompatible offices, of Surveyor General, which he had held since its vacation by the death of Edward Pennington in 1702, and that of Clerk of the Council. The Governor notified the Assembly that he could find no warrant under his commission or the Royal Charter, to conduct a trial of impeachment, and Logan having sent to the Assembly a specific answer to the several charges separately, the Assembly still clamored for an impeachment. Logan petitioned the Governor and Council to permit the Assembly to present their charges, but since the Governor declined to act in a judicial capacity at the trial the controversy continued with much bitterness for over two years, Governor John Evans having in the meantime been superseded by Colonel Charles Gookin. The controversy was more in the nature of a contest between David Lloyd, Speaker of the Assembly and the leader of the anti-proprietary party, and James Logan as the direct representative of the Proprietary. Lloyd having issued addresses abusing and maligning Logan, he replied with some spirit, the Assembly on November 25, 1709, issued an order to Peter Evans, High Sheriff of Philadelphia, to take Logan into custody and confine him within the county jail "& him therein safely to detain & keep until he shall willingly make his submission to the satisfaction of this House &c."

Evans communicating with the Governor was directed by him, "that you suffer not the said James Logan to be in anywise molested by virtue of any order, or pretended order of Assembly whatsoever; and in case any of the said Assembly or others under pretense of any authority derived from them, shall attempt to molest or attach the said James Logan in his person, I do hereby Command you to oppose such attachment; &c."

Logan had been long making preparation to sail for England, having about concluded his arrangements when the attachment was issued and soon after sailed. He remained abroad for over two years, and on the eve of his return to Pennsylvania, under date of November 30, 1711, was commissioned by the trustees to whom William Penn had made over all his interests in Pennsylvania, as their Commissioner of Property and Receiver General.

To these trustees, Henry Gouldney and Sylvanus Grove, he writes from "Spitthead, 19th 10mo. 1711," after beginning his journey homeward, urging them to use their utmost endeavors to have Penn execute "a good substantial will, such as may be seen to the honor of his name after he is gone wch. is not yet done." He arrived in Philadelphia, March 11, 1711-12, and at once resumed his seat in the Provincial Council and the duties of Clerk, as well as the many other duties in the interest of the Proprietary. In a letter to Hannah Penn, under date of April 27, 1716, he recommended the appointment of Sir William Keith as Governor to succeed Gookin, and he arrived and assumed his duties, May 31, 1717, from which date Logan relinquished the duties of clerk to his deputies, Ralph Asheton and George Barclay. He was elected a member of the Board of Aldermen of the city of Philadelphia, October 17, 1717, and as Mayor of the city, October 2, 1722. He and Governor Keith did not get along very smoothly after the first few years of the latter's governorship, for the reason that Keith began to ignore the recommendations of Council and the interests of the Proprietaries to propitiate certain wealthy and influential members of the anti-Proprietary party, whose interests and friendship he thought it to his personal interest to cultivate, and Logan always true to his trust as the representative of the family, resented any abrogation of these rights or interests. The breach widened and on May 20, 1723, Keith appointed his private secretary, Patrick Baird, Secretary of Council, to succeed Logan. On his retirement from the active work of Secretary of the Council in 1717, Logan engaged extensively in mercantile business and in the Indian trade. He had always been on intimate terms with the leading Indian chiefs and had negotiated many important treaties with them in the Proprietaries' interest, almost from the time of his arrival in Pennsylvania. He always retained the friendship of the Indians, and it was their custom to pay him periodical visits, late in his life, while residing at "Stenton", where he frequently entertained large numbers of them, as many as three and four hundred of them being hospitably entertained at "Stenton" for days at a time.

On the expiration of his term of office as mayor of Philadelphia, he again went abroad, and as a result of his conference with Hannah Penn, and the trustees of the Penn estate, Keith was withdrawn and Patrick Gordon was commissioned Deputy Governor, June 22, 1726, with instructions to immediately re-instate James Logan as Secretary of Council, and to "be ruled by him." Gordon also named him, on August 25, 1726, as one of the Justices of Philadelphia county, and he was recommissioned September 2, 1727, and became one of the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas.

On August 25, 1731, he was appointed Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, on the unanimous recommendation of Council, to succeed his old adversary, David Lloyd, who had recently died. He filled this position until August 9, 1739, with marked ability. A volume of his decisions and charges to juries was published in England in 1736.

On the death of Governor Patrick Gordon, in August, 1736, James Logan as senior member of Council, became its President, and as such filled the position of Chief Executive of the Province until the arrival of George Thomas, the next Deputy Governor, June 1, 1738, Logan having been offered the position of Deputy Governor, but declining. His two years administration of the affairs of the Province as Chief Executive were marked by the Border War, resulting from the dispute over the boundary between Maryland and Pennsylvania.

It was at Logan's urgent request to be relieved from the burden of the government of the Province, that George Thomas was sent to take the position of Deputy Governor. Down to this time his untiring industry had been taxed to the utmost by the cares of many offices, he having for many years been the general factotum of the government, bringing to bear upon its multifarious affairs all the force of his intellectual and business capacity. His correspondence with the Penn family, covering a period of nearly forty years, during which he had been actively employed in their interest and during the greater part of which he had been the most prominent figure in the government, are a mine of historical information, and reveal his marvelous industry, carefulness in all the details of the business, and an intellectual breadth and capacity for business that demand the admiration of posterity. An amateur in every act he was called to perform, when he undertook the work on the departure of Penn in 1701, having no private means, he espoused the cause of the then much abused founder of the Province, and undertook the herculean task of protecting and husbanding his interests and those of his family, against the opposition of some of the most prominent and influential men in the Colony, and for years carried the heavy burden of clerk, agent, book-keeper, steward, Surveyor and Receiver General, Councillor, and later Judge and Governor.

In the midst of all this business and official activity, he found time for reading and the most exhaustive researches in the realms of science, letters, history and languages. Nearly all his business letters abroad contained orders for books, and he carried on an extensive correspondence with many of the most learned men of Europe, and there was no topic of science or literature that he was not qualified to discuss with the most learned scholars of his time. He sometimes indited a lively Greek "Ode to a friend", and often his letters were indited in the Latin tongue.

He was an intimate friend and correspondent of Linnaeus, who, in compliment to the botanical knowledge transmitted to him by Logan, named for him an order of herbs and shrubs "Loganiaceae", containing thirty genera in over three hundred and fifty species. He was a close student of scientific phenomena and contributed a number of papers, now in the Transactions of the American Philosophical Society, on the result of his scientific observations on lightning; "Apparent increase of the magnitude of the Sun and Moon near the horizon", "Davis' Quadrant", "Experimenta et Meletemata circa Planarium Generationem", etc. He published Latin essays on reproduction in plants, and the aberration of light, translated Cato's "Distich", and Cicero's "De Senectute" and issued many other works many of which still remain in manuscript.

With his withdrawal from the governorship in 1738, he retired almost entirely from public business and passed the remainder of his days at "Stenton", his country seat near Germantown, erected in 1728, on a plantation of five hundred acres. The mansion house, raised on the very day his son James was born, is still to be seen on an eminence a short distance east of Wayne Junction, and is still owned by his descendants.

This picturesque and dignified old mansion is rich in historic associations, and is one of the finest specimens of Colonial architecture. The Pennsylvania Society of Colonial Dames have recently restored it, and under their guardianship it is open to the public. It is built of variegated brick, two stories, surmounted by a pyramidal shaped roof, pierced by dormer windows, and is approached by a long avenue of grand old sycamore trees. The Colonial doorway is reached by three curious circular stone steps firmly clasped together with iron. The doorway opens into a great hall, paved with brick and wainscoted in white to the ceiling, with an open fireplace on the right, and a stately double staircase ascends through an archway in the rear. On either side are lofty rooms also wainscoted in white. Over the large fireplace in the room to the left is an ornamental iron back plate inscribed "J. L. 1728." In another room some of the original blue and white Dutch tiles, in grotesque pattern, still adorn the fireplace.

One of the most attractive rooms in the house is the library, where the illustrious book-loving statesman and scholar spent most of his time during his declining years. It is a fine room, recently taking up half of the front of the house, on the second story, and once contained the finest collection of books of any private library in Colonial America, later presented by the collector to the city of Philadelphia, through the medium of the Loganian Library, founded by him, and later merged with the Philadelphia Library. The ancient house, so long inhabited by the Logan family, is full of interest to the lover of the oldentime. From cellar to garret there are all sorts of quaint nooks and corners, and leading from the cellar to the stables is a long underground passage, which is the subject of many a strange legend. No longer surrounded by its ample estate, "Stenton" at this time presents a pathetic appearance, as to surroundings. Within a few hundred yards of the mansion on the south and west terminate the rows of brick houses and intervening streets—the built up portion of the city of Philadelphia once miles away—on the northwest overshadowed by the elevated tracks of the Philadelphia and Reading Railway, at Wayne Junction, and beyond, to the north and east, encompassed by the irregular gradings and elevations of new streets and buildings of a great city which in its onward march of expansion has leaped over this little oasis of faded Colonial grandeur and pushed for miles beyond, leaving "Stenton", the old home of the departed statesman with only a pathetic semblance of its departed grandeur and magnificence.

James Logan, at the time he settled at "Stenton", had acquired a fortune in commerce, in trade with the Indians, and by the purchase and sale of desirable tracts of land in all parts of the Colony, which his position as Surveyor General gave him opportunity of securing. He was therefore able to live in princely style, and entertain with a free-hearted hospitality. For more than a century "Stenton" as the home of the Logan family was the resort of notable and distinguished persons of the Colonies and from abroad, and its mistresses were among the most accomplished women of their time.

James Logan voluntarily retired from the Provincial Council, May 29, 1747, having taken little part in its deliberations for several years previously. He died at "Stenton", December 31, 1751, and was buried at the Friends' Burying Ground, in Philadelphia.

James Logan married, at Friends' Meeting, Philadelphia, December 9, 1714, Sarah Read, daughter of Charles Read, a prominent merchant of Philadelphia, by his second wife, Amy (Child) Stanton, widow of Edward Stanton, and a half-sister of Charles Read, the Provincial Councillor.

Amy Child, "of Hertford, in the County of Hertford, Spinster", by lease and release, dated January 24 and 25, 1681, purchased of William Penn five hundred acres of land to be laid out in Pennsylvania. After her purchase she married Edward Stanton, who obtained a warrant of survey for the said five hundred acres of land, dated 9mo. (November) 1686, and it was surveyed in Solebury township, Bucks county, Pennsylvania. Edward Stanton died, and Amy was married to her second husband, Charles Read, at Middletown Monthly Meeting, in Bucks county, September 23, 1690. He joined her in a conveyance of the Solebury plantation to John Scarborough, December 19, 1698, and the resurvey to Scarborough, with the information above noted, is mentioned in the Minutes of the Commissioners of Property, under date of May 19, 1702. Amy Child was probably of the same family as Henry Child, of Coleshill, Amer-sham, county Hertford, who purchased one thousand five hundred acres of William Penn, at about the same date, and came to Pennsylvania, but later returned to England, leaving here a son, Cephas Child, who has numerous descendants in Bucks county, Philadelphia, and elsewhere in Pennsylvania.

Charles Read, father of Mrs. Logan, was a member of the Board of Aldermen of Philadelphia, under the Charter of 1701, and represented Philadelphia in the Assembly in 1704. Charles Read, the Councillor, is said to have been a son of a former marriage, while Sarah Logan and Rachel Pemberton were the daughters of Amy (Child) Stanton, the second wife.

James Logan had many years prior to his marriage been an ardent suitor for the hand of Anne Shippen, the beautiful daughter of Edward Shippen, but she rejected his suit and married Thomas Story, Logan's colleague in the Board of Property, with whom he seems to have had considerable controversy, as evidenced by his correspondence with Penn, probably owing largely to their rivalry for the hand of Anne Shippen. Under date of 11mo. 16, 1704-5, Penn writes Logan, "I am anxiously grieved for thy unhappy love for thy sake and my own, for T. S., and thy discord has been for no service here any more than there; and some say that come thence that thy amours have so altered or influenced thee that thou art grown touchy and apt to give rough and short answers, which many call haughty. I make no judgment, but caution thee, as in former letters, to let truth preside and bear impertinence as patiently as thou canst." Logan in his reply 3mo. 17, 1705, represents himself as very much abused and maligned by Thomas Story, whom he says, "in the middle of a pleasant discourse broke out into such a Thunder as if he carried ye whole magazine of anathemas in his breast, and so continued for 5months his blow at Meetings." After further explanation of their differences he concludes, "I am sorry I spent so much paper on it & therefore shall close ye subject when I have added that I wish he had some more Honour to season his religion, it would keep much ye sweeter."

James Logan Jr., b. Dec., 1728, d. Sept. 25, 1803; resided in Philadelphia; was surviving trustee of Loganian Library, and as such agreed with directors of Library Company of Philadelphia, for union of the two collections, and in 1792 secured an Act of Assembly vesting the collections of the Loganian Library in the directors of the Library Company and in himself and two associates to be by him appointed, who with said directors were to hold the same in trust for the uses and purposes of the Library. At the death of the said James Logan Jr. the next heir male of his father, resident within seven miles of Philadelphia was to succeed him as trustee, always preferring issue of eldest son in male line to that of the female line; with power to fill vacancies, etc. Under date of Dec. 5, 1743, Richard Hockley writes:—"Mr. Logan has given the Corporation (of Philadelphia City) his lot opposite the Governor's Garden & books to the value of 1000*l* & intends a building 60 feet front to put the books in, for the use of the city." The Library then placed at the service of the public was the beginning of the Loganian Library. The building referred to by Mr. Hockley was constructed, but the deed therefore was afterwards withdrawn and cancelled by the elder Logan, who contemplated placing the trust on different terms, but he died before accomplishing his object. Under his will certain funds were set apart for the permanent support of the Library, among which were the proceeds of a permanent ground rent secured on 500 acres of land in Solebury township, Bucks county, known as the Great Spring Tract which the Library still receives. He m. Sarah Armit, but left no issue.

WILLIAM LOGAN, second son of James Logan, born in Philadelphia, July 14, 1718, at the age of twelve years was sent to England to be educated under the care of his uncle and namesake, Dr. William Logan, a prominent and wealthy physician of Bristol, England, and remained there until he arrived at manhood. On his return to Philadelphia, he engaged in the mercantile trade with his father, and was made attorney of the Penn family on the death of Andrew Hamilton in 1741. He was actively engaged in trade until the death of his father in 1751, when becoming the owner of "Stenton" he took up his residence there and devoted himself to agriculture.

He was elected to the Common Council of Philadelphia, October 4, 1743, and remained a member of that body until the municipal government of the city was suspended by the Revolution in 1776. When his father on May 29, 1747, sent word to the Governor's Council that he no longer considered himself a member of that body, William Logan was immediately called to take his place, and he continued a member of Council until his death on October 28, 1776. He was a far stricter Quaker than his father, and was always actively opposed to war on any pretext. He voted against the proposition to Council to pay for Indian scalps, on April 6, 1756, and against the declaration of war four days later.

With his cousin, Israel Pemberton, and others, he formed the Peace Association, and offered to go at his own expense to the Delaware Indians to persuade them to lay down their arms and enter into a treaty of peace. Sir William Johnston, Governor of New York, being already negotiating a peace with them, the argument of the Peace Association carried considerable weight, and William Logan was one of the delegates to the Conference with the Indians at Easton, when peace was declared.

William Logan cared less for literary and scientific pursuits than his father. He was an extensive traveller and left a Journal of some of his rambles, notably that of a visit to Georgia. With his brother James and sister, Hannah Smith, he on August 28, 1754, deeded library property, designed by his father for the use of the people of Philadelphia, to a board of trustees, consisting of himself, his brother James, Israel Pemberton Jr., his first cousin, William Allen, Richard Peters and Benjamin Franklin; William Logan acting as librarian until his death. He also bequeathed to the library thirteen hundred volumes bequeathed to him by his uncle, Dr. William Logan, of Bristol, England, with the provision that such as were duplicates of what the library already contained, should be given to the Philadelphia Library.

Conscientiously opposed to war, and deeply attached to the Penn family whom he had long represented in America, William Logan naturally held aloof from active part in the revolutionary struggle, and like many others of his ilk, was often an object of suspicion, and had he lived until the British threatened Philadelphia, would doubtless have been arrested and subjected to considerable annoyance as were many other wealthy and influential men of his class. He lived quietly at "Stenton" during the inception of the national struggle, and attended the meetings of Provincial Council long after the battle of Lexington.

Like his father, he was a great friend of the Indians, travelled among them frequently without an armed escort, even in days when Indian atrocities had alarmed the whole frontier; and frequently entertained large delegations of the aborigines at "Stenton". He lived a life of activity and good deeds, thoroughly consistent with his religious belief. He died at "Stenton", October 29, 1776, and was buried at the Friends' Burying Ground. He married, March 24, 1740, Hannah Emlen, daughter of George Emlen, born in Philadelphia, June 1, 1722, died at "Stenton", January 30, 1777.

GEORGE LOGAN, son of William and Hannah (Emlen) Logan, and who survived his parents, was born at "Stenton", September 9, 1753. He is said to have been the last Pennsylvania Quaker to attain eminence in public life, and the only strict member of the Society of Friends that ever sat in the United States Senate.

When a boy George Logan was sent to school in Worcester, England. His father destined him for a mercantile career, and on his return from abroad he was placed in the counting house of John Reynolds, an eminent merchant and shipper of foreign goods in Philadelphia. He, however, soon decided to study medicine, and after the death of his father, entered the University of Edinburgh, from which he graduated in 1779, and then crossing to the continent, spent some time perfecting himself for his profession in Paris, where he was kindly received and introduced by Dr. Benjamin Franklin, then Minister to the French Court. From the distinguished philosopher and patriot he possibly imbibed the democratic principles that marked his subsequent career, and which he certainly did not inherit from his austere and aristocratic grandsire. He returned to Philadelphia in the autumn of 1780, and finding the old family home, "Stenton", laid waste by the Revolutionary war, bought the interest therein of his brother and sister, and turning his attention to its restoration and improvement, took up his home there and devoted himself for some years to agriculture. He became a member of the American Philosophical Society, and two contributions to their "Transactions" published in 1797, on "Experiments in Gypsum" and "Rotation of Crops", show that he had become a scientific and practical farmer. He was elected to the Pennsylvania Assembly in 1785, and regularly re-elected for the next three years. He was an intimate friend of Thomas Jefferson, and warmly espoused the cause and doctrines of the Democratic party. He was again elected to the Pennsylvania Legislature as the nominee of that party in 1795, and re-elected the following year. Like his father, an ardent advocate of peace, he went to France in June, 1798, in an effort, on his own responsibility, to prevent a war between that country and the United States. Landing at Hamburg, he met Lafayette, who enabled him to make his way to Paris, where he arrived on August 7, 1798. Learning from the United States Consul General, that President Adams' Commissioners had left without accomplishing their mission, and that all negotiations were at an end, and that an embargo had been laid on all American shipping in the ports of France, and many American seamen confined as prisoners, he presented to Talleyrand his letter of introduction from Thomas Jefferson, and made a strenuous effort for the relief of his countrymen. Finding the minister obdurate, he obtained an introduction to Citizen Merlin, one of the Directory, and securing a footing of warm friendship with him was able through him to save the property of a number of persons from confiscation, and secured the release of a number of the imprisoned seamen. His interference was resented by the Federalist officials, and on his return in 1799, as the bearer of despatches from the Consul General, he found them duplicated before his arrival, and the Federalist majority in Congress passed in that year an act later known as the "Logan Act", forbidding any private citizen to take any part in diplomacy, or to treat with a foreign country, without the authority of the government. He was re-elected to the Pennsylvania Assembly in 1799, and in 1801 was appointed to the United States Senate to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of Peter Muhlenberg, serving out the full term which expired March 4, 1807. In 1810 he again went abroad on a mission of peace, this time in an effort to prevent the second war with Great Britain, which followed in 1812. He died at "Stenton", April 9, 1821, in his sixty-eighth year.

George Logan married, September 6, 1781, Deborah Norris, born October 19, 1761, died at "Stenton", February 2, 1839. She was the second child and eldest daughter of Charles and Mary (Parker) Norris and was the "Debby Norris" to whom Sally Wister indited her "Journal". She was an exceedingly handsome and gifted woman, and as the mistress of "Stenton" "drew around her the most eminent and illustrious men and women of the then leading city of the young Republic," as well as distinguished visitors and diplomats from abroad. President George Washington was frequently entertained there while Philadelphia was the seat of the national government, and here Citizen Genet met and dined with the prominent men of this country, and intrigued to secure their support of the struggling French Republic.

He married his second cousin, Maria Dickinson, born November 6, 1783, died 1854, daughter of John and Mary (Norris) Dickinson, and granddaughter of Isaac Norris, and his wife Sarah Logan, daughter of James Logan, the famous secretary. Deborah Logan Wetherill, b. Feb. 16, 1900.

HANNAH LOGAN, second daughter of James Logan, the distinguished Provincial Secretary, born February 21, 1719-20, and named in honor of Hannah Penn, the second wife of her father's honored patron, married, December 7, 1748, John Smith, then a wealthy and prominent young merchant of Philadelphia, and a member of the Pennsylvania Assembly. Their courtship as gleaned from the diary of John Smith, is the subject of a delightful book, entitled "Hannah Logan's Courtship", recently published, which gives us the best picture of Colonial life in Philadelphia to be found in our later day literature. The introduction to the diary opens with an account of the visit to "Stenton", June 1, 1744, of the Indian Commissioners from Virginia, on their way to meet the Iroquois chieftans at Lancaster to negotiate a treaty, and quotes from the Journal of William Black, the Secretary of the Commission, published in the Pennsylvania Magazine; and the merry young Secretary thus describes his impressions of Hannah Logan, "At last the Tea Table was set and one of his daughters presented herself in Order to fill out the Fashionable Warm Water; I was really very much surprised at the appearance of so Charming a Woman, in a place where the seeming moroseness and Goutified Father's Appearance Promised no such Beauty, tho' it must be allowed the Man seem'd to have some Remains of a handsome enough person, and a Complexion beyond his years.

"But to return to the Lady, I declare I burnt my Lips more than once, being quite thoughtless of the warmness of my Tea, entirely lost in Contemplating her Beauties. She was tall and slender, but Exactly well shap'd, her Features Perfect and Complexion, tho' a little the whitest, yet her countenance had something in it extremely Sweet. Her eyes press'd a very great softness, denoting a compos'd Temper and Serenity of Mind. Her Manner was Grave and Resev'd and to be short, she had a Sort of Majesty in her Person and Agreeableness in her Behavior, which at once Surprised and Charmed the Beholders."

On her removal to Burlington, New Jersey, with her husband in the year 1756, Hannah (Logan) Smith, entered the ministry of the Society of Friends and conformed to the "meek and lowly" habits she conceived to be consistent with her professions, refusing to ride as formerly in her "four wheeled Chaise, with Driver & horses," and travelled to and from the meetings where she ministered on horseback. She died at Burlington, January 15, 1762, at the age of forty-two years. Her husband writes of her: "In the relation of Child, Wife and Mother, she was tenderly and anxiously careful to fill her place."

John Smith was born at Burlington, New Jersey, March 20, 1722, and was the second son of the Honourable Richard Smith Jr. by his wife Abigail Raper or Raper, daughter of Thomas Raper, who was born at Sindorsby, near Thursk, Yorkshire, and came to New Jersey in 1681, where he married Abigail Perkins, daughter of William and Mary Perkins, who in 1677 came from Seilby, in one of the first English vessels that came up the river Delaware; the father dying at sea, and the mother settling with her family at Burlington.

The "Burlington Smiths" from whom John Smith descended were of a Quaker family of the name that had been residents of Bramham, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, since the sixteenth century. Richard Smith, the great-grandfather of John, was baptized at Bramham in 1626, and was a son of Richard Smith of Bramham, born 1593, died 1647, the first ancestor of the family of whom we have any record. Richard (2) was educated for the Law. He joined the Friends when a young man, and in 1660 was with five hundred other Quakers imprisoned in York Castle. He was the author of a tract called "A Christian Directory." He was married in 1653, before Alderman Paul Peale, of York, to Anne Yeates, daughter of William Yeates, a Quaker resident of Albrough. She was also imprisoned in York Castle in 1688, the year of her husband's decease. Richard Smith was one of the first purchasers with William Penn and Edward Byllinge of the West Jersey lands, and his eldest son John came over in 1677 to look after it. The other sons, Daniel, Joseph, Emanuel, Samuel and Richard following later.

Samuel Smith, the grandfather of John Smith, first above mentioned, was a son of Richard and Anne (Yeates) Smith, and was born at Bramham, Yorkshire, in 1672, and in 1694 emigrated to New Jersey and settled at Burlington, where he became prominent in local and Provincial affairs, serving in the Provincial Assembly. He married Elizabeth Lovett, daughter of Edmond Lovett, of Bucks county, Pennsylvania, and had one son Richard Smith Jr. and a daughter Mary, who married Joseph Noble, a son of Abel Noble of Bucks county, Pennsylvania.

Richard Smith Jr., born in Burlington in 1699, was a prominent member of Burlington Friends' Meeting, and a prosperous merchant, being extensively engaged in the West India trade, and owning a number of vessels, some of which were built at his own shipyard at Burlington. His extensive wharves were at Green Bank, where he received grain, lumber, and other products of New Jersey for shipment to the West Indies in exchange for sugar, rum, molasses and other products of those isles. He erected in 1720, shortly after his marriage to Abigail Raper, a spacious town house, on Main street, Burlington, not far from the river, and also owned a country seat, near Green Hill, once the seat of Governor Samuel Jennings. He was for nearly twenty years a member of New Jersey Assembly, and was held in high respect by the prominent men of the Province. According to James Alexander, one of the Councillors of New Jersey, Governor Belcher relied chiefly on his counsel in state affairs, and he was "by much the Man of the best Sense and Interest in the Assembly." His eldest son was Samuel Smith, (1720-1776) the historian, member of Provincial Assembly and Council, and with his brother John, and Charles Read the Custodian of the seal and acting Governor during the absence in England of Governor William Franklin, and subsequently Provincial Treasurer. His "History of New Jersey", issued in 1765, is still the standard history of the state during Colonial times. He was also in a sense the first historian of Pennsylvania, as the final compiler of the "History of the Quakers in Pennsylvania", authorized by Philadelphia yearly meeting from which Proude and later historians drew largely in compiling their works. He was further associated with Pennsylvania by his marriage with Jane Kirkbride, in 1741, daughter of Joseph Kirkbride, one of the largest land owners and most prominent men of Bucks county.

William Lovett Smith, third son of Richard and Abigail (Raper) Smith, born 1726, died 1798, was early in life also a West India merchant, but later engaged in agricultural pursuits, near Burlington, naming his estate "Bramham" after the ancestral estate in England. He married, in 1749, Mary Doughty, daughter of Daniel and Amy Doughty.

Richard Smith, youngest brother of John, first mentioned, and the fourth son of Richard and Abigail (Raper) Smith, born 1735, died 1803; studied law in the office of Joseph Galloway at Philadelphia, and practiced there and in New Jersey. He took an active part in political affairs and was Recorder of Burlington county, Assemblyman and Provincial Treasurer of New Jersey. At the outbreak of the Revolution he was elected to represent his state in the Continental Congress, and became its first Secretary, his portrait appearing in Molleson's painting, "The First Prayer in Congress". He devoted much time to literary pursuits. He married Elizabeth Rodman, daughter of John Rodman, and resided at his seat called "Bramham Hall". He died at Natchez, Mississippi, in 1803, while on a tour of the southern states.

John Smith began his diary before referred to, in 1736, when a youth of fourteen, residing at his father's house in Burlington, and continued it with a few interruptions for fourteen years. He removed to Philadelphia in 1743, and his notes of everyday life in the metropolis of the American Colonies for the next nine years present a clear picture of Colonial life at that time among the wealthy and governing class to which he belonged and with whom he was in daily and intimate association, presenting an interesting personal view of nearly every one of consequence in the Province at that time, as well as of many notable visitors, and records many interesting and important events.

John Smith had just attained his majority when in 1743 he located in Philadelphia and engaged in the mercantile and shipping trade, in which he was very successful, and being a man of wealth, education and refinement enjoyed the best society of the aristocratic Quaker City, and belonged to the most exclusive social organizations. In 1746 he purchased a fine country seat at Point-no-point, on the Delaware above Philadelphia, on which was a fine brick mansion, and employing a gardener devoted much time to its beautification and in agricultural and horticultural pursuits. He was intimate with John Bartram, the great American botanist, and the leading scholars and scientists of the day, and gave much time to reading and literary pursuits. He published in 1747 a little book entitled. "The Doctrine of Christianity, As held by the People Called Quakers, Vindicated: In Answer to Gilbert Tennent's Sermon on the Lawfulness of War."

In 1746 he was one of the promoters of the Philadelphia Contributionship, one of the first insurance companies in the country, and in 1751 helped to found the Pennsylvania Hospital. He was a trustee of the Philadelphia Library Company, a member of the American Philosophical Society, and took a prominent part in the Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting of Friends, of which he served for a time as clerk. He was elected to the Pennsylvania Assembly in 1750, and re-elected in 1751 and 1752, and his diary shows that he was in almost constant attendance and took an active part in its deliberations. His courtship of Hannah Logan began almost with his first appearance in Philadelphia and ended with their marriage five years later. Isaac Norris, who had married Hannah's elder sister Sarah, many years Speaker of Assembly and referred to by James Logan as the "most learned man in Philadelphia", went to his father-in-law and sought the hand of Hannah for his younger brother Charles, and was very much offended when John Smith carried off the prize, refusing to attend the wedding or to hold further communication with the Smiths.

John and Hannah (Logan) Smith resided in Philadelphia until 1756, when John gave up trade and removed with his family to Burlington, taking up their residence in the house erected by his father in 1729. He continued to take active interest in public affairs, and in 1757 was a subscriber to the "New Jersey Association for Helping the Indians". On December 15, 1753, he was appointed a member of the King's Council for New Jersey. In 1761 he was named as one of the Commissioners to try pirates, and in 1768, with his brother Samuel and Charles Read, was commissioned to take charge of the Seals of the Province of New Jersey, during the absence of Governor William Franklin in England. He died at Burlington, March 16, 1771, in his forty-ninth year.

Robert Proude, the historian, says of John Smith, "He was engaging, open, friendly and undesigning in his address and behavior: of a cheerful and benevolent disposition, well skilled in the laws of his country: and very ready, generous and serviceable in giving his advice and assistance. In his religious character he exhibited an excellent example of true practical Christianity, free from affectation and narrowness of mind. He was in several relations one of the best of neighbors and men."

LLOYD FAMILY

THOMAS LLOYD, Deputy Governor of Pennsylvania, 1684-88, and 1690-93, though a consistent member of the Society of Friends and a typical representative of that good old Quaker stock of solid respectability and sterling worth without the ostentation of pomp and display, whose home life lent such a peculiar charm to social life of the City of Brotherly Love, in Colonial days, was nevertheless of Royal descent, and traced his ancestry on both maternal and paternal lines back to Edward I., of England, and on more remote paternal lines back through a long line of princes of ancient Britain. The surname of Lloyd had its original with Owen, son of Ievan Teg, otherwise, "Evan the handsome", whose family had owned and occupied Dolobran, Wales, since 1496, and like all the old Welsh families traced its ancestry back to the Dark Ages. Owen Lloyd married Katherine Vaughn, and his brother, David Lloyd, of Dolobran, married Eva, daughter of David Goch Esq., and David Lloyd, son of David and Eva, had son John Lloyd, grandfather of Governor Lloyd, who married Catharine, daughter of Humphrey Lloyd Wyn, whose father, John Lloyd, was a son of Ievan Lloyd and grandson of Owen Lloyd and Katherine Vaughn. John Lloyd, grandfather of Catharine, married Margaret Kynaston, who was a lineal descendant of Edward I., through the following line: Jane, "the fair maid of Kent," granddaughter of Edward I., and daughter of Edmund of Woodstock, Earl of Kent, married (first) Sir Thomas Holland, who was thereupon made Earl of Kent, and (second) Edward, the Black Prince, becoming by the second marriage the mother of Richard II. Her eldest son, Sir Thomas Holland, who succeeded his father as Earl of Kent and was later Marshall of England, had a daughter Eleanor who married (first) Roger Mortimer, Earl of March, from which marriage descended Edward IV., and (second) Edward Cherleton, Lord of Powys, by whom she had a daughter Joane, who married Sir John Grey, who in 1418, was created Earl of Tankerville. Henry Grey, Earl of Tankerville, son of Sir John and Joane, married Antigone, daughter of Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, who was a son of Henry IV., and had a daughter Elizabeth, who married Roger Kynaston Esq., and their son, Humphrey Kynaston, was the father of Margaret Kynaston, who married John Lloyd, as above noted, and whose granddaughter Catharine married another John Lloyd, the grandfather of Thomas Lloyd of Pennsylvania.

Charles Lloyd, of Dolobran, Montgomeryshire, Wales, son of John and Catharine, and father of Governor Thomas Lloyd, was born at Dolobran, in 1613. He was a magistrate of Montgomeryshire, and had emblazoned on a panel at Dolobran, his coat-of-arms, with fifteen quarterings, impaled with the arms of his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Stanley, of Knockden, and a descendant of the Earls of Derby. The paternal or Lloyd arms were, "azure, a chevron between three cocks argent", and the different quarterings show the descent of Governor Lloyd from the ancient male lines of the Lords of Powys, the Cherletons, Greys and Kynastons. The first quarter of the maternal arms is the shield of the Earls of Derby, differenced with a crescent charged with a crescent, which indicates that Thomas Stanley was descended from a second son of a second son.

Issue of Charles and Elizabeth (Stanley) Lloyd, of Dolobran:—

Charles, inherited Dolobran, and was ancestor of the Lloyd who founded Lloyd's Banking House, in London;

John, was a clerk in chancery;

THOMAS, came to Pennsylvania, in 1683;

Elizabeth, m. Henry Parry, of Penamser, Merionethshire, Wales.

THOMAS LLOYD was born at Dolobran, Montgomeryshire, Wales about the year 1640, and was sent to Jesus College, Oxford, where he graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, January 29, 1661. Both he and his elder brother, Charles, with several others of the gentry of Montgomeryshire, became converted to the faith of the Society of Friends, under the teachings of George Fox in 1663, and both were imprisoned in 1664, and continued nominally prisoners until 1672, when Charles II., by letters patent, dispensed with the laws inflicting punishment for religious offences, when, according to Besse, Charles Lloyd, Thomas Lloyd and others "were discharged from Montgomery Gaol." Thomas Lloyd seems, however, to have enjoyed a nominal liberty during at least a portion of this period, as it covers the date of his marriage, and his wife was permitted to visit him while in prison. Thomas Lloyd was a physician while residing in Wales, and had a large practice. Belonging as he did to the gentry class, and being a man of high intellectual ability, he exercised a wide influence in matters of state, though of the proscribed sect religiously. According to "The Friend", it was at his solicitation that Parliament was induced to abolish the long unused writ "de heretico comburendo", with the operation of which the Friends were threatened. He was tendered high place and influence if he would renounce his religion, but adhered to the faith. In 1681 he and his brother Charles held a public disputation at the town hall of Llanwilling, with Right Rev. William Lloyd, Bishop of Asaph, one of the noted prelates whom James II. committed to the Tower.

Thomas Lloyd and his wife and children embarked from London for Pennsylvania, June 10, 1683, on board the same ship with Francis Daniel Pastorius, the "Sage of Germantown," then on his way to take possession of the lands purchased by the Frankfort Company of William Penn, on which was planted the first German Colony in Pennsylvania. Lloyd and the distinguished German scholar discoursed in Latin and discussed religious and political questions on the voyage, and cemented a friendship that continued through life. They arrived at Philadelphia 6mo. (August) 20, 1683. On December 2, 1683, William Penn appointed Thomas Lloyd Master of Rolls, the office having been created by the Assembly at the request of Penn, its object being to keep an exact record of the laws enacted for the Province, as well as a record of transfers of real estate and other legal documents. Thomas Lloyd was elected a member of the Governor's Council, qualified on 1mo. 20, 1684, and was elected its president. Before sailing for England, in August of the same year, William Penn executed a commission to his Council to act as Governor in his absence, made Thomas Lloyd Keeper of the Great Seal of the Province, and made him, with James Claypoole and Robert Turner, Commissioners of Property, with authority to grant warrants of survey and issue patents to purchasers of land. The commission, vesting the governing power in Council, terminated in 1688, and though Lloyd desired to be relieved from office, Penn's commission arrived 12mo. 9, 1687-8, vesting the powers of Deputy Governor in Thomas Lloyd, Robert Turner, John Simcock, Arthur Cooke and John Eckley, and this arrangement continued for ten months, when Penn, having offered Lloyd the Lieutenant Governorship, on his declination of the honor, appointed Capt. John Blackwell, then in New England, the Lieutenant Governor, Thomas Lloyd still retaining the positions of Master of Rolls and Keeper of the Great Seal. The administration of Blackwell was far from satisfactory to the Friends, and there was considerable clash between him and Lloyd as Keeper of the Seal, so that when Thomas Lloyd was returned as a member of the Council by Bucks county in March, 1689, Blackwell presented articles of impeachment against him, and, failing to eject him from the Council, adjourned that body from time to time whenever Lloyd was present. On Penn's return Blackwell resigned, and on 11mo. 2, 1689-90, the Council accepted Penn's ultimatum that the whole Council act as the governing body, elected Thomas Lloyd its president, and made him, as Keeper of the Seal, a member of the county court, ex-officio. He was later commissioned Lieutenant Governor and served until the arrival of Governor Fletcher, when he was offered the second place in the government, but declined. Thomas Lloyd died September 10, 1694, after eleven years residence in Pennsylvania, during eight of which he had served as her chief executive. He was twice married. His first wife, Mary Jones, whom he married 9mo. 9, 1665, at the Friends' Meeting in Shropshire, Wales, died in Philadelphia, and he married (second) Patience Story, a widow of New York, who survived him.

Deborah Lloyd was his second wife, and his son by the former marriage, Richard Moore, M. D., at one time engaged in mercantile pursuits in Philadelphia, and member of Common Council of that city in 1716, had married Deborah Lloyd's niece, Margaret, daughter of Provincial Councillor Samuel Preston by his wife Rachel Lloyd, sister of Deborah, as shown in narrative of the Preston family. Mordecai Moore died in Maryland in 1721.

She married, at South River, Maryland, February 9, 1720-1, Dr. Richard Hill, son of Henry Hill of Maryland, by his wife Mary, daughter of Levin Denwood, and nephew and heir of Richard Hill of Philadelphia, Provincial Councillor, 1704-1728, who had married Hannah Lloyd, another daughter of Thomas Lloyd. Dr. Richard Hill was born at South River, Maryland, in 1698. He studied medicine, practiced at his native place for some years, and also engaged in the shipping trade at that point. He met with severe financial losses, became heavily involved in debt, and with the hope of retrieving his fortunes, removed with his family to Funchal, Island of Madeira, and engaged in the wine trade there. He was very successful in this venture, and in addition to paying his creditors in full of principal and interest, and establishing his sons and sons-in-law in a thriving business, acquired a comfortable competence, and returned to Philadelphia to live with his daughters, and died there January 29, 1762.

MARGARET HILL, daughter of Dr. Richard and Deborah (Moore) Hill, of the Island of Madeira, born November 2, 1737, spent a portion of her girlhood in Philadelphia. She married there, September 1, 1758, William, son of John and Mary (Sutton) Morris, of Spring Mill, Philadelphia, now Montgomery county, grandson of Anthony and Phoebe Guest Morris, of Philadelphia, great-grandson of Anthony Morris, member of Provincial Council, 1695-6, early Colonial merchant and Mayor of Philadelphia. William Morris was the eldest child of John and Mary, and was born in Philadelphia, June 27, 1735. Prior to his marriage to Margaret Hill, in a letter written to her father, then in Madeira, he states that he is engaged in the dry-goods trade, but purposed going into the "general trade" in the near future. He was an enterprising and public-spirited man of good education and fine intellectual traits. He was a signer of Provincial paper money in 1757, an early contributor to the establishment of Pennsylvania Hospital, and was admitted a member of colony in Schuylkill, October 7, 1761. He died April 14, 1766, less than eight years after his marriage, and four months before the birth of his youngest child. On June 7, 1770, Margaret (Hill) Morris removed from Philadelphia to Burlington, New Jersey, with her four surviving children, and took up her residence with her sister and brother-in-law, Sarah and George Dilwyn. She later bought the house of Gov. William Franklin on the bank of the Delaware, sold under the confiscation acts, and lived there to old age. In her later days she was much afflicted with rheumatism, finally becoming practically helpless. After the death of her son Dr. John Morris, in 1793, she took her granddaughter, Margaret Morris, to live with her and she was her constant companion until her marriage in 1810, after which her place was supplied by another granddaughter, Martha Milcah Smith. Margaret Morris was a lifelong attendant of Friends' Meeting, being frequently carried to the Meeting House, but a few doors from her Burlington home, by her grandchildren, after she had become helpless, in a wicker chair. She was a woman of excellent mind and character, and universally revered. The daughter of a skillful physician, she possessed considerable knowledge of medical science, and frequently ministered to her family and others in an emergency.

DR. JOHN MORRIS, eldest son of William and Margaret, born in Philadelphia September 28, 1759, lost his father at the age of seven years, and was reared under the care of his noble mother, principally at Burlington. Making choice of the medical profession, in which his maternal ancestors had excelled, he took up his studies with Dr. Charles Moore, of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, who had married his mother's sister. On obtaining his degree, he began the practice of medicine at Burlington, and was quite successful from the start. However, he soon after located in Philadelphia, where he became an exceedingly popular and successful physician. He was located in 1785 at No. 27 Chestnut street, but by 1791, had removed to No. 11 Pear street, where he died of yellow fever, September 8, 1793, in the arms of his devoted mother, who had come from Burlington to nurse him and remained to close the eyes of his wife, also a victim to the pestilence, eight days later.

Dr. John Morris was one of the founders of the College of Physicians instituted in 1787, and incorporated in 1789, and his name is one of those engraved on the tablet erected there to commemorate that fact; it also appears on another tablet, as one of those who "fell a martyr to the pestilence." Dr. Morris married at Philadelphia Friends' Meeting, October 8, 1783, Abigail, daughter of Benedict and Sarah Dorsey, of Philadelphia, who followed him to the grave, September 16, 1793, at the age of twenty-eight years, leaving four small children.

MARGARET MORRIS, youngest child of Dr. John Morris, who was but a little over a year old at the death of both of her parents, was taken and reared by her grandmother, Margaret (Hill) Morris, at Burlington, New Jersey, where she married, October 4, 1810, Isaac Collins Jr., eleventh child of Isaac and Rachel (Budd) Collins. He was born at Trenton, New Jersey, October 31, 1787, and was reared to mercantile pursuits, serving an apprenticeship of six years with the well-known firm of Mott & Bowne, at New York. At the age of twenty-one, he went as supercargo on the brig "Dean", to St. Mary's on the Georgia coast, and probably made a few subsequent trips in the same capacity for his old employers. He then returned to New York city, and entered into partnership with Samuel Mott, in the manufacture of flour for the wholesale market, and did a large and profitable business. He made a trading voyage to Eastport and the Bay of Fundy, having charge of ten vessels.

On his marriage to Margaret Morris in 1810, Isaac Collins Jr. took up his residence in New York City, and engaged in the publishing business. The well known firm of Isaac Collins & Company, printers and publishers of books, etc., were so successful that, at the age of thirty-four years, Isaac retired from the business and devoted himself to philanthropic and charitable enterprises. He was largely instrumental in establishing the Eye Dispensary in New York, and the Just Saving Fund of that city.

In 1828, he removed to Philadelphia, principally on account of his wife's failing health, and at once became prominently identified with various institutions there. He was a member of Board of Managers of House of Refuge; director of public school system; one of the founders of Haverford College, for the higher education of the children of Friends; was identified with all leading Charitable institutions of the city, and took a prominent part in the temperance and anti-slavery cause. He was one of those who instituted the Institute for Feeble-Minded Children.

Margaret (Morris) Collins died in Philadelphia, April 22, 1832, and Isaac married (second) January 28, 1835, Rebecca, daughter of John Singer, a prominent merchant of Philadelphia. She was an eminent minister of the Society of Friends, and died in April of 1892 at the age of eighty-seven years. He died January 15, 1863.

Dawson & Co., of which his father-in-law, Mordecai Lewis Dawson, was a member of board of managers and president of the House of Refuge, from 1869 until his death, November 27, 1892.

Mr. Collins later withdrew from the firm and started the brokerage business with Samuel Huston, but in a short time returned to his old firm, the name of which was changed to Massey, Collins and Company. MORRIS FAMILY

Anthony Morris, founder of the American branch of the prominent Philadelphia family of the name, was born in Old Gravel Lane, Stepney, London, England, August 23, 1654, baptized August 25, 1654, at St. Dunstan's Church, Stepney. He was a son of Anthony Morris, mariner, of Welsh origin, who at the date of birth of his son Anthony, was residing in Old Gravel Lane, Stepney, but later removed to Barbados, and was lost at sea when on his return voyage in 1655 or 1656. He was born about the year 1630, and probably was a son of another Anthony Morris, of Reading, Berkshire, born about 1600. He married Elizabeth Senior, who soon after her husband's death made a voyage to Barbados, in connection with the settlement of his estate, and died there in 1660, when her only child, Anthony Morris, first above mentioned, was aged six years. Anthony Morris spent his boyhood days in the city of London, and, prior to arriving at his majority, united himself with the Society of Friends, becoming a member of Savoy Meeting, in the Strand, which was connected with the Westminster Monthly Meeting. On 12mo. (February) 2, 1675-6, he declared intentions of marriage with Mary Jones, belonging to the same Meeting and they were married, 1mo. (March) 30, 1676. They continued to reside in London until near the close of the year 1682, and four children were born to them there, Susanna, Mary, and two who were named for the father, all of whom died there except the last. On 8mo. (October) 4, 1682, they laid before the Meeting at Savoy their intentions of removing themselves to America, and asked for a certificate to Friends' Meeting at Burlington, "New West Jersie." The certificate was granted on 9mo. (November) 1, 1682, and they embarked for the Delaware river, in which they arrived in the latter part of February, 1682-3, and took up their home in Burlington. Anthony Morris purchased two hundred and fifty acres in Burlington county, fronting on the Delaware, two miles below the town, and also owned several town lots. In the latter part of 1685, or early in 1686, he removed to Philadelphia and began his successful career as a merchant. Three more children were born by his first wife to him in America, John in Burlington, 2mo. 17, 1685, and Samuel and James in Philadelphia. His first wife died in Philadelphia, 8mo. (October) 3, 1688, and he married (second) at Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, 8mo. (October) 28, 1689, Agnes, widow of Cornelius Bom, who had been married three times previously. She died 5mo. (July) 26, 1692, and he married (third) at Newport, Rhode Island, 11mo. (January) 18, 1693-4, Mary, widow of Thomas Coddington, son of Gov. William Coddington, of Rhode Island, and daughter of John Howard, formerly of Yorkshire, England. Anthony early became identified with the affairs of the embryo city, and on its incorporation, 3mo. 20, 1691, was named in the charter as one of the first aldermen. On September 6, 1692, he was commissioned Justice of the Courts of Common Pleas and Quarter Sessions of the Peace, and Orphans' Court. On February 10, 1697-8, he was one of the applicants for the charter of the public school, and was afterward named in the charter as one of first Board of Overseers. - When the new charter was granted in 1711, he was named as one of the Overseers, and the family has been represented on the board for many generations. He was elected a member of the Provincial Council in 1695, and re-elected in 1696. He was named as one of the original Board of Aldermen in city charter of 1701, and October 5, 1703, was elected Mayor, serving one year. He was elected to Colonial Assembly, May 10, 1698, and served until October 1, 1704. He was closely associated in business and official circles with his brother-in-law, Edward Shippen, who had married Rebecca, widow of Francis Richardson, formerly Rebecca Howard, a sister of Anthony Morris' third wife, Mary Coddington. In 1687 Anthony Morris established a brewery in Philadelphia, and he and his descendants carried on the brewing business on an extensive scale for many years. Anthony Morris was a preacher among Friends and travelled extensively in the ministry in New England and other parts of the colonies, and also visited the meeting in London, where he first became a member of the Society. He died of apoplexy, October 23, 1721. His third wife died September 25, 1699, and he married (fourth) October 30, 1700, Elizabeth, daughter of Luke and Sarah Watson. In the old family Bible of Anthony Morris is the following entry:

"May 16, 1677, Was baptised three children of Luke and Sarah Watson att the Fort att New York, by the Dutch Minister, viz:—Sarah, Elizabeth, and Isaac, the aforesaid Elizabeth being then about three and a half years old. This note sent hither by Samuel Bowne, who searched the records for the same."

Elizabeth (Watson) Morris survived her husband over forty-five years, dying February 2, 1767, in her ninety-fourth year.

ANTHONY MORRIS, eldest son of Anthony and Mary (Jones) Morris, born in London, England, 1mo. (March) 15, 1681-2, came to New Jersey with his parents when less than a year old, and removed with them to Philadelphia, (where he was destined to take an important part in city and Colonial affairs) at the age of four years. At the age of fourteen years, according to the custom of the times, he was apprenticed to Henry Badcock and Mary, his wife, to learn the brewing business. Under the terms of his indenture, he was to serve seven years from February 29, 1695-6. Soon after attaining his majority he became associated with his father in the brewing business, and continued to carry on that business, probably during his whole life, but he early became interested in other business ventures, notably, that of owner and proprietor of iron furnaces and forges in various parts of Pennsylvania and New Jersey. He was one of the founders of the Durham Iron Works in 1727, which commenced operations in the autumn of that year. He was one of the founders and owner of two sixteenth shares in the Pool forge on Manatawny creek in Berks county, 1731, and also owned one-twelfth interest in a large furnace at Colebrookdale on the Manatawny, which supplied the forge. On June 20, 1729, with Thomas Lambert, John Porterfield and James Trent, he founded a forge on the Assunpink, at Trenton, New Jersey, which was probably supplied from the Durham furnace, in which both he and Trent held an interest. He also purchased at about the same date a tract of land on the Assunpink, with privilege of erecting corn mills, grist mills and saw mills. In 1724 he became part owner of the mills, and a forge with 400 acres of land, at Wells Ferry, now New Hope, Bucks county, and in 1736, with Benjamin Canby, who conducted a forge there for several years, was granted by proprietaries' Commissioners the privilege of a tract of land in the Manor of Highlands, on the Delaware river, for erecting a storehouse and wharf below the ferry, with privilege of a road thereto, for convenience of carrying flour and other goods and merchandise by water on the said river. He was one of the largest land owners in Pennsylvania, continuing until late in life, either alone or in association with others, to purchase large tracts of land in different parts of the Province. He was elected a member of Common Council of Philadelphia, October 4, 1715, but does not seem to have taken his seat until July 30, 1716; the term at that date was for life, and when he was elected by Council as an Alderman, September 29, 1726, he declined, preferring to retain his seat in Council. He was, however, again chosen, October 2, 1733, as Alderman and then accepted and served until elected Mayor of the city, October 3, 1738, which latter position he filled for one year. He was commissioned Associate Justice of the City Courts, October 2, 1733, and on his retirement from the mayoralty became Justice of the Orphans' Court. He was elected Overseer of Public Schools, 3mo. 18, 1725, and served in that capacity until his death, September 23, 1763. He was elected Mayor a second time, October 6, 1747, but not desiring to serve, absented himself from home, and after a vain attempt to find him, in which those charged with serving the notice upon him visited his iron works in Berks county, New Jersey, and elsewhere in search of him, William Atwood was selected in his stead. In Colonial affairs he filled the same prominent position as in city affairs. He was elected to represent Philadelphia in Colonial Assembly in 1721, first taking his seat on October 14, 1721, a few days before the death of his honored father. Like his father, he at once took a prominent part in affairs of state. He was actively identified with the issue of paper currency, and was, March 23, 1723, named by Assembly as one of the signers of "Bills of Credit", as this early issue of paper money was designated. He was re-elected to the Assembly for years 1722-3-4-5, and sat until the close of the session 6mo. 6, 1726. In endeavoring, as an Alderman and Magistrate, to suppress a riot in the streets of Philadelphia, during the exciting and bitter contest for election of members of Assembly in 1742, he was knocked down, "and nearly murdered" as shown by numerous depositions presented at the next Assembly. He was a prominent member of the Society of Friends, and the old Mansion House, on Second street above Arch, where he and his family resided for many years and where he died, was the scene of many notable gatherings of the elite of the city and colony, with whom the family were prominently associated, where he and his estimable wife dispensed the broadest hospitality.

Anthony Morris married in Philadelphia, 3mo. (May) 10, 1704, Phoebe, daughter of George and Alice (Bailyes) Guest, born 7 mo. (September) 28, 1685, died March 18, 1768. She was for many years an elder of Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, and a woman of many rare and exalted virtues. "She died on the same spot on which she was born and was buried in the same grave with the husband with whom she had lived upwards of sixty years in the highest degree of conjugal affection." Among the "Pemberton Papers", in the library of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, (vol. viii, p. 2), is a deed dated March 14, 1672, by which Joane Guest, of Birmingham, county Warwick, England, relict of John Guest, late of Birmingham, deceased, conveys to William Bailyes, of Birmingham, and William Whyton, also of Birmingham, a tract of land in county Warwick, in trust for George Guest, son of said Joane and John and Alice his wife, a daughter of the said William Bailyes, which deed recites that said John Guest by will devised to his second son, George Guest, land purchased by him of Nicholas Farkson and William Bailyes, father of the above mentioned William, married, January 26, 1612, Alice Sommerland, and had the following children:—

the latter at Burlington. Having heard that her sister, Elizabeth Hard, was on the way to America, and "designed to Philadelphia", Alice Guest prevailed upon her husband to remove to Philadelphia, and, the ancient chronicles of the family recite, "had just got settled in a cave on the bank of the Delaware, when the sister Elizabeth arrived." Here Phoebe Guest, who later became the wife of Anthony Morris Jr., was born September 28, 1685. Her father died in the latter part of the same year, and the widow, Alice Guest, later built a house near the spot of their first rude domicile and resided there until her death in August, 1705. Her elder sister, Elizabeth Hard, lived to the age of ninety-three years. Both were members of the Society of Friends.

WILLIAM MORRIS, eldest son of Anthony Morris by third marriage with Mary Coddington, born in Philadelphia, 5mo. (July) 23, 1695, died there November 6, 1776, was one of the most prominent members of the family, but his long career of usefulness and honor was largely spent outside of the city of his birth. Early in life he engaged in mercantile trade with the West Indies, and removed to the island of Barbados, where he married 4mo. (June) 14, 1718, a rich heiress, Sarah Dury, of Speightstown, Barbados. On 7mo. (September) 5, 1728, he brought a certificate from the Monthly Meeting at Heathescoat Bay, Barbados, to Philadelphia, but soon after located at Trenton, New Jersey, where his half sister, formerly Mary Coddington, daughter of his mother by first marriage, now the widow of Col. William Trent, was largely interested in real estate, purchased by her distinguished husband, who had died in 1724. William Morris purchased of the Trent estate 500 acres of land on the Assunpink, including mills thereon erected, and made his permanent home in Trenton for nearly the whole of the remainder of his life and is there buried. He, however, sold a large part of his valuable real estate there in 1733 to Col. George Thomas, of the island of Antigua, and again engaged in West India trade, with Joseph Callender, a prominent West India trader, taking his certificate from Chesterfield Friends' Meeting dated 9mo. (November) 1, 1733; he sailed for Barbados, and was absent for two years, returning by way of England, bringing certificate from Bristol Meeting, England, produced at Chesterfield Meeting, 8mo. (October) 2, 1735. He took an active interest in the affairs of the growing Jersey city; was one of a committee to build the Friends' Meeting House at Trenton in 1737; was appointed by Governor Lewis Morris in 1739 Judge of the Hunterdon County Courts, a position he vainly sought to be relieved from; was one of the first Council of the city of Trenton at its incorporation in 1746, and four years later was unanimously chosen by the Governor and Council for a position in the Council, but was never commissioned. His wife Sarah died August 26, 1750, in her fifty-sixth year, having been born 12mo. 26, 1694. He married (second) November 2, 1752, Rebecca, daughter of John and Martha Cadwalader, sister of Hannah Cadwalader, who had married in 1737 his nephew, Samuel Morris. She died October 9, 1764, and he November 6, 1776.

JOSEPH RICHARDSON, who married, October, 1745, Sarah, eldest surviving daughter of William and Sarah (Dury) Morris, was a son of John and Ann Richardson, and was born at the family residence on Christiana creek, 10mo. (December) 6, 1706. His father had expected him to join him in the West India trade and had built him a house at Christiana, but he settled in Philadelphia, where he became a prominent business man, filling many positions of trust and representing the city in the Colonial Assembly from 1763 to his death, November 17, 1770. His wife, Sarah Morris, died about a year after her marriage and soon after the birth of their only child, and he never remarried.

SARAH RICHARDSON, only child of Joseph and Sarah (Morris) Richardson, born October 11, 1746, died March 13, 1825; married, May 22, 1771, Nicholas, son of Nicholas and Mary (Shoemaker) Waln, and grandson of Nicholas Waln, who came from Chapelcroft, near Settle, Yorkshire, and was a member of the first Provincial Assembly, 1682-3, and served for many years thereafter in the Assembly, first from Bucks county and later from Philadelphia. The descendants of Sarah Richardson Waln will be given in this volume under the head of Waln Family.

ANTHONY MORRIS, eldest son of Anthony and Phoebe (Guest) Morris, born in Philadelphia, February 14, 1705-6, on arriving at manhood became associated with his father in the brewing business, to which the father, owing to the multiplicity of his business interests, was able to give but little attention. Becoming interested in a business venture in the Barbados, he took a certificate from Philadelphia Monthly Meeting to the Monthly Meeting at Barbados, dated 12mo. (February) 28, 1728-9, and remained on the Islands six months. Returning to Philadelphia, he again gave his attention to the brewing business, and became a partner with his father, December 10, 1741. He was a large land owner in Philadelphia and elsewhere, and like his father was actively associated with the business and official life of the city, and held a high place in the social life of Philadelphia in the palmy days of her prosperity during the years preceding the war for independence. He maintained a city house and two country seats, one, "Peckham" in district of Southwark, and the other, "Solitude" in the same district, and numbered among his friends and associates the most aristocratic families in America. He was admitted a member of the "Colony in Schuylkill," May 1, 1748, of which his son, Capt. Samuel Morris, was later a distinguished member and Governor for a long term of years. He was elected an Overseer of Public Schools, 8mo. 8, 1742, and resigned 2mo. 23, 1758, to be succeeded by his brother, Joseph Morris, and also served for a number of years as one of the city assessors. He was a contributor to Pennsylvania Hospital, 1751, of which his brother Joseph was one of the original managers. He was from the first a champion of the Colonies against the oppressive measures of the mother country, and a signer of the non-importation agreement, November 7, 1765. He and his second wife, Elizabeth, took an active interest in benevolent and philanthropic work in the city and elsewhere, and were members of the Society of Friends.

Anthony Morris died at his country seat, "Peckham", in Southwark, October 2, 1780, aged nearly seventy-five years. He married (first) 12mo., 1730, Sarah, born June 29, 1713, daughter of Samuel Powell, a rich builder, by his wife, Abigail Wilcox. She died April 10, 1751, and he married (second) April 30, 1752, Elizabeth, born February 20, 1721-2, daughter of William and Jane (Evans) Hudson, and granddaughter of William Hudson, member of Colonial Assembly and Mayor of Philadelphia, 1725-6, by his wife, Mary Richardson. Elizabeth Morris survived her husband, dying May 23, 1783.

CAPTAIN SAMUEL MORRIS, eldest surviving son of Anthony and Sarah (Powell) Morris, born in Philadelphia, June 24, 1734, usually referred to on the early records as Samuel Morris Jr. to distinguish him from his uncle, Samuel Morris Sr., both being members of the Board of War during the Revolution, was one of the most prominent of this prominent family in public affairs. On January 8, 1750, he was apprenticed to Isaac Greenleafe, merchant, to serve until he attained his majority, a period of four years, five months and two weeks. Greenleafe had married as his second wife, Catharine, daughter of Caspar and Catharine (Jansen) Wistar, and through her their young apprentice was brought in close association with her sister, Rebecca Wistar, whom he married only a few months after the close of his apprenticeship, December 11, 1755.

Samuel Morris was a keen sportsman, very fond of outdoor sports and an excellent horseman. He was an original member of the Colony in Schuylkill in 1748, was elected its governor in 1766, and served until his death, a period of forty-six years, being a member for sixty-four years. He was also a member of the "Society of Fort St. Davids", of which the membership was principally Welsh, of the "Order of Ancient Britons." The "Fort" was a building on the east bank of the Schuylkill, near the falls, where the members resorted to fish and feast and entertain their friends, it being principally a fishing club. Samuel Morris was also one of the most ardent members of the Gloucester Fox-Hunting Club, of which he was president from its organization, October 29, 1766, until his death forty-six years later. It was from this organization, composed of the aristocratic youths of Philadelphia, that he organized, November 17, 1774, the Philadelphia Troop of Light Horse, of which he served many years as Captain, and which rendered such efficient service in the early days of the Revolutionary War. Twenty-two of its twenty-eight members being members of the Gloucester Fox-Hunting Club, it had its inception while the first Continental Congress was assembled in Philadelphia, and Abraham Markoe was elected its first Captain; Andrew Allen, First Lieutenant; Samuel Morris, Second Lieutenant, and James Mease, Cornet. Their first flag, presented to them by Captain Markoe, and still a prized possession of the Troop, was the first known flag to contain thirteen stripes, and is thought to have suggested the adoption of the striped Union Flag at Cambridge, six months after the City Troop had escorted General George Washington, accompanied by Lee and Schuyler, to New York, when on his way to take command of the army at Cambridge, June 21, 1775. Captain Markoe had then resigned and Samuel Morris was unanimously elected as Captain. Captain Samuel Morris and his brother, Major Anthony Morris, were the most ardent of patriots from the time of the earliest protest, the signing of the Non-importation Resolutions, October 25, 1765, the latter being one of the delegates to the Provincial Convention of July 15, 1774, eventually gave his life to the cause of liberty, being killed in the battle of Princeton, January 3, 1777.

Samuel was selected a member of the first Committee of Safety of the State, appointed by Assembly, June 30, 1775, and when this body was merged into the Council of Safety, he was elected a member of that body, July 24, 1776, but declined, preferring to give his attention to more active service. He was appointed by a resolve of the Committee of Safety, January 22, 1776, chairman of a committee to survey the Jersey shore of the Delaware from Billingsport to Newtown creek, to determine what posts it would be necessary to fortify against any attempted invasion of the enemy. He interested himself in the equipment of and organization of the army and was energetic in completing the naval defenses of the city and blocking the channel of the Delaware. When the Hessians embarked from Staten Island, October, 1776, the Council of Safety ordered that a letter be sent to "Samuel Morris Junr. requesting him to send up the Ammunition Sloop and to supply himself with a shallop in her stead, to assist in making the Chevaux de Frize, at Billingsport." His City Troop was kept constantly drilled, and its services tendered to the government at the breaking out of hostilities, and it served as a body guard of General Washington through the campaign of 1776-7.

In November, 1776, several of the troop were at the headquarters at Morristown, New Jersey, and on report of General Howe's advance, the whole troop, under Captain Morris, joined Washington at Trenton, December 3, 1776, and marched with him to Princeton, and covering his retreat, five days later, were the last to cross the Delaware into Pennsylvania. On Christmas night, 1776, they re-crossed the Delaware in the storm and sleet, and participated in the historic battle of Trenton, several members of the troop distinguishing themselves by special acts of bravery, though this was the first time they had been under fire, in active service. On December 30, 1776, the troop again crossed the Delaware and marched with Washington to Trenton, where was fought the battle of Assunpink Creek; both of these battles being fought on land that had belonged for a half century to the Morris family. When Washington decided to move off during the night to Princeton, it was the City Troop who were selected to keep up the camp fires to divert suspicion from his movements and to follow him to Princeton, where they especially distinguished themselves, being at the front with Washington when he drove the enemy over fields and fences. Here it was that Major Anthony Morris was killed in action.

After the battle of Princeton, the troop remained in headquarters at Morristown, New Jersey, for about three weeks, and the campaign being over were honorably discharged, January 23, 1777, with the highest praise of General Washington, the letter of discharge being still in possession of the Morris family. This troop was the only cavalry in the Jersey campaign, and served entirely at their own expense. After its discharge, it, however, maintained its organization, and with its valiant captain took part in the battles of Brandywine and Germantown, camped at Valley Forge, and served in the operations around Philadelphia, until the evacuation of Philadelphia by the British in June, 1778, and for the next two years was in the service of Congress and under State authority; was again at Trenton in June, 1780, but the enemy having left the state, returned to Philadelphia and again received the thanks of Washington. The troop again received his thanks for services during the Whiskey Insurrection of 1794. The organization has been maintained to the present time, it being now known as "First Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry." Captain Samuel Morris continued with Washington until the close of the Revolution, and was constantly employed as the bearer of confidential messages, and his troop was always held in readiness to perform special duty. Captain Morris was elected to the Provincial Assembly in 1776, and served in that body until February 21, 1777; was again elected to the General Assembly of the Commonwealth in 1781-82-83. He possessed a strong but gentle personality, and was known as "Christian Sam." He died at his residence in Philadelphia, July 7, 1812, universally loved and lamented. His wife, Rebecca Wistar, had died January 22, 1791.

He married, 6mo. 12, 1799, Mary, born 4mo. 19, 1776, daughter of Levi Hollingsworth, and a descendant of Valentine Hollingsworth, one of the earliest English settlers in New Castle county, and of a very distinguished family in that section and Delaware county, Pennsylvania. CASPAR MORRIS, M. D., fourth son of Israel Wistar and Mary (Hollingsworth) Morris, born in Philadelphia, May 2, 1805, was but an infant when his parents removed to "Green Hill" farm, and his mother dying there when he was but five years of age, much of his early life was spent at the home of his maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Levi Hollingsworth. His earliest education was acquired at the school at Pine Street Meeting House, later under David Ellis, at Church Alley, and finally at the Penn Charter School, in the management of which his paternal ancestors had taken a prominent part for over a century. He took up study of medicine with Dr. Joseph Parrish, then the leading physician of the city, and aided by a legacy of $1,500, from his aunt, Miss Sarah Wistar, entered the University of Pennsylvania, from which he graduated with high honors in 1826. He served as resident physician at Pennsylvania Hospital, and later made a voyage to India as a ship's surgeon. On his return he began the practice of medicine in Philadelphia, and lived there until he retired from professional pursuits in 1871. He achieved high rank as a practitioner as well as a lecturer and author of medical works. He lectured for many years successively on theory and practice of medicine at Philadelphia Summer School of Medicine, and on diseases of children at Blockley Hospital. He was also Professor of Theory and Practice of Medicine at Philadelphia Medical Institute; was founder of Protestant Episcopal Hospital and its manager from 1860 to 1880; vice-president of the Institute for the Blind, and one of the first to urge the establishment of the House of Refuge. He was a frequent contributor to medical and general literature, among his miscellaneous publications being, "Life of William Wilberforce", (Philadelphia, 1841), "Memoirs of Margaret Mercer" (Philadelphia, 1848); "Letter to Bishop Alonzo Potter, on Hospital Needs" (1851); "Lectures on Scarlet Fever" (1858); "Essay on Hospital Construction and Management" (Baltimore, 1875); "Rilliet and Barthol, on Diseases of Children"; "Heart Voices and Home Songs", for private distribution; and a great number of contributions to medical journals. He died at his residence, 1033 Spruce street, Philadelphia, March 17, 1884, after a long illness and a period of twelve or thirteen years of failing health. A memorial brass tablet was erected in the chapel of Episcopal Hospital in his memory. He was a member of the Protestant Episcopal church, and one of the principal promoters of the Church of Epiphany, at Fifteenth and Chestnut streets.

Dr. Caspar Morris married, November 12, 1829, his cousin, Anne, eldest daughter of James and Mary (Hollingsworth) Cheston. She was born May 9, 1810, died November, 1880.

Issue of Dr. Caspar and Anne (Cheston) Morris:—

ISRAEL WISTAR MORRIS, second son of Dr. Caspar and Anne (Cheston) Morris, born in Philadelphia, June 1, 1833, died there December 18, 1909. He was known as one of the country's pioneer mining experts, and was intimately associated with the history of anthracite mining in Pennsylvania.

Mr. Morris became interested in coal mining in Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, at about the time he attained his majority, and was one of the most far-sighted pioneers in the development of Pennsylvania's great anthracite industry. At that period the domestic use of anthracite was very limited, and Mr. Morris' part in bringing its utility for general use before the public forms one of the most romantic chapters in the state's early industrial history.

Mr. Morris became associated with Robert Hare Powell in the anthracite and bituminous coal trade during the Civil War. At the close of the war, he became president of the Locust Mountain Coal Company, a corporation embraced in the activities of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, of which Mr. Morris was mining expert, and much of the present wealth of that company is due to his far-sightedness and expert knowledge on the subject of coal deposits. He purchased many of the coal properties which have since enhanced to fabulous value.

Israel Wistar Morris remained in charge of the mining branch of the Lehigh Valley's operations until seventy years of age, when he retired from active business. He was also for many years a director of the Girard Trust Company; succeeded his father as the active manager of the Episcopal Hospital; and was connected with a number of other institutions of his native city.

During his later years Israel W. Morris devoted himself to literary, scientific, historical and charitable work. His knowledge regarding all matters concerning old Philadelphia was encyclopedic. He was in possession of many rare volumes relating to the annals of the city a century and more ago, and spent much time in adding to his store of knowledge by historical research. He was a member of the American Philosophical Society, Society of Mining Engineers, Historical Society of Pennsylvania, and a great many other literary, scientific and historical associations.

Israel W. Morris married, December 3, 1855, his cousin, Annie Morris, born January 13, 1836, daughter of Effingham Lawrence Buckley, late of New York City, and his wife, Hannah A., daughter of Luke Wistar Morris, by his second wife, Ann Pancoast. Her ancestry has already been given in this family sketch.

Israel W. Morris and his wife resided in the old Morris Mansion at 225 South Eighth street, from the time of their marriage to his death, December 18, 1909. The wife still survives. In spite of the gradual encroachment of the city's active business center, they never thought of removing from the old family mansion, despite the fact that most other fashionables of Philadelphia had long since migrated further west. The neighborhood has materially changed since the previous generations of the family occupied the house, but no changes have been made in the furniture or decorations of the interior, which stand today in the same places they occupied a century ago. The famous Wistar parties, originated by Dr. Caspar Wistar, ancestor of both Mr. and Mrs. Morris, were often entertained in the old mansion, Mr. Morris being long a member of this historic organization.

EFFINGHAM BUCKLEY MORRIS, only child of Israel W. and Annie M. (Buckley) Morris, was born August 23, 1856, in the old family mansion at 225 South Eighth street, Philadelphia. He received his preliminary education in the well-known school of Dr. J. W. Faires, and entering the University of Pennsylvania, class of '75, and received his classical degree of Master of Arts in 1878 at the age of twenty-two. He immediately entered the Law Department of the University, and in 1878 received the degree of Bachelor of Laws, and was admitted to the Philadelphia bar. He was associated with his distinguished cousin, Phineas Pemberton Morris, LL.D., in the practice of his profession until the latter's death and succeeded him. He was for some years General Attorney for the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, and as receiver of the Schuylkill Navigation Company, in 1888, materially assisted in the reorganization of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company. He filled position of counsel for the Girard Trust Company until 1887, and since that time has been its president. When the Girard Trust Company was made receiver of the Pennsylvania Steel Company in 1893, Mr. Morris was Chairman of the committee having charge of the tangled affairs of the company and brought about its reorganization on a safe financial basis; he served for a time as its president and is now a member of the board of directors, and chairman of its executive committee.

He is also chairman of executive committee of Cambria Steel Company, which gives employment to twelve thousand men. He is director of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and holds the same position with the Philadelphia Savings Fund Society, Philadelphia National Bank, Franklin National Bank, Fourth Street National Bank, Pennsylvania Fire Insurance Company, and Mutual Life Insurance Company of Philadelphia, and other corporations.

Mr. Morris was a member of Common Council from the Eighth Ward, 1880-81, being elected to that office during the crusade of the Committee of One Hundred for better politics. He was director of the Union League for three years; is member of Philadelphia Club, Rittenhouse Club, University Club, Racquet Club and Merion Cricket Club.

Effingham B. Morris married, November 5, 1879, Ellen Douglas, daughter of Nelson Burroughs, of Philadelphia. An account of her ancestry is given elsewhere in these volumes.

Samuel and Rebecca (Wistar) Morris, born in Philadelphia, July 19, 1770, on attaining his majority became a partner with his brother, Luke Morris, in the conduct of the brewery at Dock and Pear streets, but retired from business in 1810, and lived a retired life in Philadelphia until his death, May 18, 1831. He was a member of the company organized in 1789 to prosecute the enterprise of perfecting the Fitch steamboat.

He married at Philadelphia Meeting, 12mo. 17, 1795, Sarah, born 1mo. 22, 1772, died 10mo. 25, 1842, daughter of Isaac and Patience (Mifflin) Paschall.

Sarah Paschall, wife of Isaac Wistar Morris, inherited from her grandmother, Elizabeth (Coates) Paschall, "Cedar Grove", which with its quaint and venerable stone mansion on the northwest side of the old road near Harrowgate Station was the country home of the Morris family until the present generation, and is still the property of John Thompson Morris and his sister, Lydia Thompson Morris, though the encroachment of modern improvements induced them to erect their present summer home "Compton" at Chestnut Hill, where they have spent the summer months since 1887. "Cedar Grove" was erected in 1748 by Elizabeth (Coates) Paschall, wife of Joseph Paschall, on property taken by her father, Thomas Coates, in 1714, and was inherited by her granddaughter, Sarah (Paschall) Morris, and somewhat enlarged in 1790. It is a delightfully antique old Colonial dwelling, with a hipped roof, dormer windows and wide piazza. The interior with its wide hall and spacious rooms, with their old fashioned wainscoting, broad window seats and wide fireplaces, when garnished with the solid old furniture and quaint bric-a-brac of by-gone generations, presents all the delightful charm of the old time home now so rarely met with.

ISAAC PASCHALL MORRIS, third son of Isaac Wistar and Sarah (Paschall) Morris, born at "Cedar Grove", July 24, 1803, was educated for a druggist, and in 1826, with Charles Ellis, purchased of Elizabeth Marshall, the old Marshall drug establishment at No. 56 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, established by her grandfather. Christopher Marshall, 1740. The new firm of Ellis & Morris at once took front rank in the drug business in the city, but Isaac P. Morris found the business distasteful, and at the end of one year sold his interest to William Ellis and the firm of Charles Ellis & Son Company continued the business.

Mr. Morris took up the business of manufacturing machinery in 1827, and in 1828 with his brother, Joseph Paschall Morris, entered into partnership with their cousin, Levi Morris, who a year previous had started the iron works at what is now Sixteenth and Market streets, and founded the firm of Levi Morris & Company, which later became the prominent firm of I. P. Morris & Company, of which Isaac Paschall Morris was for many years senior member and became one of the leading ironmasters of Pennsylvania. Lewis Taws became a member of the firm in 1834, Joseph P. Morris retiring, and removing to Tioga county, Pennsylvania, and in 1841 Levi Morris retired, at which time the firm name changed to I. P. Morris & Company. In 1847 John J. Thompson, a brother-in-law, became a member of the firm, and they removed to Port Richmond and erected the plant since known as the Port Richmond Iron Works. In the management of the company and throughout his life, Mr. Morris displayed and exercised that rare business ability and judgment that had characterized his family for many generations, and continued his personal interest in the affairs of the company to his death, though in his later years his health was much impaired. He was a highly esteemed citizen, of great public spirit, taking a deep interest in all that pertained to the interest and prosperity of his native city. He married, 11mo. 17, 1841, at the Friends' Meeting House, on Orange street, Rebecca, born February 4, 1811, daughter of James B. and Lydia (Poultney) Thompson. ELIZABETH MARSHALL MORRIS, second daughter of Thomas and Sarah (Marshall) Morris, born February 2, 1802, married, June 17, 1823, Francis Perot, born August 23, 1796, son of Elliston Perot and Sarah Sansom. The Perot family were of French extraction and were among the Huguenot refugees who, at the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, 1685, embarked from Rochelle and sought an asylum in America, and landing at New York formed a settlement at New Rochelle, New York. James Perot, born in New York, 1710, migrated from there to Bermuda and married there Frances Mallory, born in the Bermudas, 1712. He died there February 29, 1780, and his wife March 1, 1780, of putrid fever. They were the parents of eight children: Martha, Mary, Elliston, John, James, William, Frances and Angelina. Elliston Perot, born on island of Bermuda, May 15, 1747, was sent to New York to be educated under the care of his uncle, Robert Elliston, then the Comptroller of Customs, when seven years of age. When he had been five years at school at New Rochelle, his uncle died, and he returned to Bermuda and remained there until of age, when he returned to New York and embarked in West India trade, 1772, in partnership with his brother John, under the firm name of Elliston and John Perot, and located on island of Dominica, where he remained until 1778, when he removed to St. Christopher and soon after to island of St. Eustacia, then under the Dutch government. In 1781, when the island was captured by the British fleet, the Perots were taken prisoners and their goods confiscated and sold at public auction. Elliston went to England in the hope of obtaining restitution from the English government and remained in Europe three years, visiting Holland, Ireland and France. John Perot came to Philadelphia, 1781; married there in 1783, Mary Tybout; purchased land on Water street, between High (Market) and Mulberry streets, and his brother Elliston joined him in 1784. The latter was admitted as member of Society of Friends, 1786; married at Bank Meeting House, 1mo. 9, 1787, Sarah, born 1764, daughter of Samuel and Hannah Sansom. He became a prominent business man of the city; was a manager of the Pennsylvania Hospital, 1789-1806; president of Philadelphia and Lancaster Turnpike Company; director of Philadelphia Insurance Company. His wife died 8mo. 22, 1808, and he on November 28, 1834, in his eighty-eighth year. They had issue:—

FRANCIS PEROT was apprenticed "to learn the art and mystery of brewing," with Thomas and Joseph Morris; his indenture showing that he paid to them $1,000, previous to entering upon his apprenticeship, and was to serve five years without compensation. This was in 1812. Soon after the close of his apprenticeship, he started a malt house and brewery on Vine street, between Third and Fourth streets, the present location of the establishment that still bears his name, and a year later, 1819, took his brother, William S. Perot, into partnership, under the firm name of Francis & William S. Perot. In 1823 he married Elizabeth Marshall, daughter of his old employer, Thomas Morris, and the latter and his son, Anthony S., who had been operating the old Morris brewery, founded by Anthony Morris in 1687, soon after gave up business at the old place on Second street and turned the business over to the Perot firm. The Perot brothers carried on brewing until 1850, when they abandoned that branch of the business and turned their attention entirely to malting. Francis retired from the business in 1868, and was succeeded by the firm of Francis Perot's Sons, which some years ago became incorporated under the name of Francis Perot's Sons Company, who continued a business founded by the ancestors of the leading members of the firm over two centuries before. T. Morris Perot, of the present firm, represents the eighth generation in descent from the founder of the firm.

Both Francis Perot and his estimable wife, Elizabeth Marshall Morris, lived to a serene old age. They celebrated their golden wedding in the old home at 1032 Arch street, June 17, 1873, when five generations of the family were present, "Aunt Mary Ann Marshall" being the first and little Elliston Perot Bissel, the fifth. He was a sergeant of the Third Company of the Washington Guards at Camp Dupont in the War of 1812-14; was offered a commission as captain in the regular army but declined. He was a founder of the Apprentices' Library and was prominent in philanthropic and charitable institutions of Philadelphia. He was largely instrumental in interesting the United States Congress in doing justice to the remnant of the Delaware Indians remaining in New Jersey. He died in Philadelphia, August 25, 1847. He married (first) December 7, 1813, Mary Ann, daughter of John and Mary Ann (Phelps) Bedford, who died November 2, 1828, at the age of thirty-three years. Mr. Shober married (second) October 27, 1830, Lucy Hall, born February 24, 1805, daughter of Josiah and Lucy (Hall) Bradley, and a descendant of Gov. Dudley, of Massachusetts.

He later took a special course in civil engineering, which occupation he has since pursued. He married Agnes Wharton, daughter of Pemberton Sydney and Agnes (Wharton) Hutchinson.

JOHN MORRIS, third son of Anthony and Phoebe (Guest) Morris, was born in the old Morris Mansion in Philadelphia, June 23, 1709. Married, April 18, 1734, Mary, born in Philadelphia, 1706, daughter of Richard Sutton, of Philadelphia, by his wife, Mary Howell, of Cecil county, Maryland, whom he married September 12, 1698. Richard Sutton died leaving two children, Howell and Mary, and his widow married, August 26, 1721, William Carter, a native of Wapping, county of Middlesex, England, who was an early landholder in Philadelphia, owning several lots in the neighborhood of Second and Chestnut streets. He was named in the Charter of 1701, as one of first Board of Aldermen of the city and was elected Mayor in October, 1710. He died February 19, 1738-9, aged eighty-eight years, and his widow in 1749. From their house, where she had spent her girlhood days, Mary (Sutton) Morris went to the house of her husband, May 5, 1734.

John Morris was settled by his father on "Spring Mill" property, on the Schuylkill, Philadelphia, now Montgomery county, twelve miles from Philadelphia, where he erected for him a fine mansion, which he named "Mount Joy", and in 1739 conveyed to him the mill and three tracts of land, comprising four hundred and twenty acres. Here John Morris and his family resided until 1769, when he conveyed "Mount Joy" and the surrounding property to his son-in-law, Joseph Potts, and took up his residence in Southwark. This fine property was later acquired by Peter Legaux, the French nobleman, who established there a vineyard, and sought the assistance of the State Legislature in an effort to establish the wine industry in Pennsylvania. It is still owned and occupied by John Morris was associated with his brothers, Samuel and Joseph Morris, in the Righter family, lineal descendants of Peter Legaux. He also owned at the establishment of Boiling Spring Furnace and Forge. He also owned at the time of his death a mill property and tract of land on Ridley Creek in Chester county, which he devised to his grandson, Richard Hill Morris. He died February 3, 1782.

WILLIAM MORRIS, eldest child of John and Mary (Sutton) Morris, born in Philadelphia, June 27, 1735, was a merchant. He was a man of fine intellectual ability and attainments, and took an active interest in the various institutions of his native city. He was appointed a signer of Provincial paper money in 1757, and was a contributor to Pennsylvania Hospital in 1758. A member of the Society of Friends, he moved in the most exclusive social circles of the Quaker City. He was elected a member of the "Colony in Schuylkill", October 7, 1761. He died in his early prime, April 14, 1766.

William Morris married, September 21, 1758, Margaret, daughter of Dr. Richard Hill, of Island of Madeira, later of Philadelphia, a native of South River, Maryland, and a nephew of Richard Hill, the Provincial Councillor, so long identified with the Colonial affairs of Philadelphia and the Province of Pennsylvania. The mother of Margaret Hill was Deborah Moore, born in Maryland, June 2, 1705, died in Madeira, December 19, 1751, daughter of Dr. Mordecai Moore, the family physician of Lord Baltimore, who accompanied him to Maryland, by his second wife, Deborah, daughter of Thomas Lloyd, President of William Penn's Council and Deputy Governor of the Province of Pennsylvania, 1690-93, and a descendant through the Lloyds of Dolobran, Wales, from Alfred, the Great. Margaret Hill Morris represented the noblest type of womanhood, a true "Mother in Israel" to the poor and afflicted, she bore with Christian resignation the heavy trials of sorrows that fell to her lot, and was a model to Christian womanhood and motherhood. Left a widow with four small children (one unborn at her husband's death), she reared them to manhood and womanhood and the memory of her wise counsels and Christian teachings has been reverently transmitted to her posterity to the present day. She survived her husband over half a century, removing in 1770 to Burlington, New Jersey, where she thereafter lived. At the death of her son, Dr. John Morris, in 1793, she adopted his youngest daughter Margaret, then an infant and she was her constant companion until her marriage in 1810, after which she received into her household another granddaughter.

DR. JOHN MORRIS, eldest son of William and Margaret Morris, born in Philadelphia, September 28, 1759, was but seven and a half years of age at the death of his father. In his eleventh year his mother removed with her little family to Burlington, New Jersey, residing for a time in the house of George Dillwyn, who had married her sister, Sarah Hill, but a few years later purchasing the house of Gov. William Franklin on the river bank, where she lived to serene old age.

Having chosen the medical profession, followed so successfully by his maternal ancestors, John Morris began study in office of his uncle and cousin, Dr. Charles Moore, of Montgomery county, who had married his mother's sister, Milcah Martha Hill. On obtaining his degree he located at Burlington, New Jersey, where he practiced with success for a few years and then removed to Philadelphia, and located first at No. 27 Chestnut street, where he was from 1785 to 1791, removing in the latter year to No. 11 Pear street, where he died. He became the fashionable physician of Philadelphia and enjoyed a large practice. He was a founder of the College of Physicians in 1787, and his name with that of Dr. Benjamin Rush, and other illustrious physicians of Philadelphia, appears on the tablet erected there commemorating the fact. At the outbreak of the yellow fever pestilence in Philadelphia, he devoted himself earnestly to the relief of the sufferers, but soon fell a victim to the dread disease and died in the arms of his devoted mother, who had come from her home at Burlington to nurse him, September 8, 1793. His wife also contracted the disease and died eight days later, leaving to the care of their paternal grandmother four small children, one of whom died less than a year later.

Dr. John Morris married at Friends' Meeting, Philadelphia, October 8, 1783, Abigail, daughter of Benedict and Sarah Dorsey, of Philadelphia, who was born in 1765, died September 16, 1793.

Issue of Dr. John and Abigail (Dorsey) Morris:—

MARGARET MORRIS, youngest child of Dr. John Morris, was as before stated reared in the home of her grandmother, Margaret (Hill) Morris, at Burlington, New Jersey. She married there, October 4, 1810, Isaac Collins Jr., eleventh child of Isaac and Rachel (Budd) Collins, of Trenton, New Jersey, where he was born October 31, 1787. He had served eight years' apprenticeship in a mercantile house and was then engaged in the mercantile trade in New York City as a member of the firm of Mott & Collins, and later a member of the firm of Isaac Collins & Company, publishers and printers. The family resided in New York until 1828, when they removed to Philadelphia. Mr. Collins had ere this acquired a comfortable fortune and retired from active business. After the removal to Philadelphia he became identified with the leading charitable enterprises and institutions of that city, and was deeply interested in the cause of education as well as in the temperance and anti-slavery cause. He was a founder of Haverford College; member of the Board of Managers of the House of Refuge; director of the Public School System and an official in a number of philanthropic and charitable institutions. The founding of the Institute for Feeble Minded Children was largely due to his efforts. Mrs. Margaret Collins' health was very much debilitated before the removal from New York, that being the main cause of the removal, which doubtless prolonged her life; but she died four years later, April 22, 1832. Isaac Collins married (second) January 28, 1835, Rebecca, daughter of John Singer, a prominent merchant of Philadelphia. She was an eminent minister of the Society of Friends, and survived her husband many years, dying April, 1892, at the age of eighty-seven years. Mr. Collins died January 15, 1863.

FREDERIC COLLINS, sixth child of Isaac and Margaret (Morris) Collins, born in New York City, January 21, 1822, became a prominent business man of Philadelphia. After his graduation at Haverford, he entered the establishment of M. L. Dawson & Company, and on arriving of age and his marriage in 1844 to Letitia, daughter of Mordecai Lewis Dawson, the senior member of the firm, became a partner in the business and was identified with it for many years, first under the title above given, later as Poultney, Collins & Company and subsequently as Massey, Collins & Company. He was also engaged for a time in the brokerage business, and later was a member of the banking firm of Elliott, Collins & Company, and was president of the McKean and Elk Land and Improvement Company. He became a manager of the House of Refuge in 1869.

Frederic Collins died November 27, 1892; by his wife, Letitia P. Dawson, of an old Colonial family of Philadelphia, he had issue:—

NORRIS FAMILY

The patronymic of the Norris family was Norrey and Norreys. It was an ancient family in England and flourished in Sutton and Lancashire many centuries. William Norreys, of Sutton, descended from Alain Norreys, who in remote times dwelt in Sutton, was ancestor of the celebrated family of Norris, of Speke, Lancashire, and that of Rycote, Berkshire. In A. D., 1311, Sir Henry Norreys, of this branch, by marriage with Joan Molyneaux, acquired the manor of Speke, and was founder of the family there.

Thomas Norreys, of Speke, was father of Nicholas Norreys, of Tarleton, who was succeeded by a son, Nicholas Norreys, of Tarleton, whose son, Nicholas Norreys, also of Tarleton, had a son, Nicholas Norreys, of Middleworth, Lancashire, born 1633, who was succeeded by a son, Henry Norris. Several branches of the family came to America at different periods, some settling in New England, and at least one in Maryland.

THOMAS NORRIS, first known ancestor of the distinguished Philadelphia family of the name, was a merchant in London, England, where at an early age he became a member of the Society of Friends. No direct connection has ever been traced between this Thomas Norris and the Norris family of Speke Hall, Lancashire, but the fact that his son, Isaac Norris, who subsequently settled in Philadelphia, bore the same coat-of-arms as that belonging to the Speke Hall family, makes it reasonable to suppose that his line of descent sprang from this source. It was not uncommon in those days for a member of a family of prominence to be disinherited and disowned for embracing the tenets of the Quaker religion. About 1678, Thomas Norris emigrated to the Island of Jamaica. The reason for his departure from the land of his birth was the continued and persistent religious persecution of the Quakers, as may be assumed from the fact that in 1659 he was one of those people who petitioned Parliament for the release of a number of their brethren immured in the prisons of London for matters of conscience, offering "to lie in prison, person for person, instead of such as were then in confinement and might be in danger of their lives through extreme duress."

Even after his arrival at Port Royal, he continued to be subjected to persecution, being twice fined for refusal to bear arms, and a third time for the refusal of his son to do the same.

Thomas Norris was killed in the great earthquake that destroyed Port Royal, June 7, 1692. He had been a member of Southwark Monthly Meeting, London, upon whose records his name is spelled "Norrice", which indicates the correct pronunciation rather than the correct spelling of the name, for that was a day of phonetic spelling, as shown by many of the ancient records of the time. He married (first), about 1656, Mary Moore, who died in Jamaica, June 3, 1685; (second), Sarah ———, who survived him and died October 19, 1696.

Issue of Thomas and Mary (Moore) Norris:—

 Isaac Norris, b. 5mo. (July) 26, 1671, in Olave's Parish, London, d. Philadelphia, 6mo.
 (Aug.) 4, 1735; m. Mary Lloyd, of whom presently.

ISAAC NORRIS, youngest child of Thomas and Mary (Moore) Norris, was born in London, England, July 26, 1671; and removed with his parents to the Island of Jamaica at the age of seven years. In 1690 his father sent him to Philadelphia to investigate the propriety of moving there, and he sailed from Port Royal, March 5, 1690, taking with him a letter of introduction from Mordecai Lloyd, to the latter's father, Gov. Thomas Lloyd, whose daughter Isaac subsequently married. After carefully looking into the advantages of Philadelphia and its vicinity as a trading center, he returned to Jamaica, in 1692, only to learn that his father and other members of the family, with the exception of his stepmother and sister Elizabeth, had perished, either by the earthquake or the pestilence which followed, and that practically all the family property had been destroyed. He returned to Philadelphia the following year with little more than one hundred pounds, and entered into business there, in which he was eminently successful, becoming eventually one of the wealthiest and most influential men in the Province. He was a man of extraordinary business ability and perspicuity, and his services were early enlisted in the affairs of the city and Province. He soon attracted the attention and won the esteem of William Penn, at whose request he went to England, 1707, to assist in extracting the great founder of Pennsylvania from the difficulties in which he was entangled with the Fords. He was elected to the Colonial Assembly in 1699, and continued a member until 1705, was again returned in 1711, and again the following year and elected Speaker. He was called to the Provincial Council, February 8, 1708-9, with his brother-in-law, Samuel Preston, and from that day was one of the prominent men of the Province, and particularly in the affairs of the Council for the next twenty-five years, during a portion of the time also serving in the Assembly, to which he was again returned in October, 1720, and elected Speaker to succeed William Trent, who that year removed to New Jersey.

In addition to filling these offices of honor and responsibility, he was a Justice of the Courts of Philadelphia from June 4, 1715, until his death, and at the organization of the High Court of Chancery being one of the oldest Councillors, was appointed Master of that Court to sit with the Lieutenant Governor in hearing cases. He became Alderman of Philadelphia in 1708, and October 6, 1724, was elected from the Board of Aldermen to the position of Mayor of the city, serving one term. At the death of David Lloyd, there being few able lawyers in the Colonies, the Governor and Council, April 7, 1731, unanimously agreed to appoint Isaac Norris to the position of Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the Province, but he declined to accept preferring to remain a Justice of the County Court. He was for many years the chief representative of the Proprietaries, being their attorney for sale of lands under the Gouldney mortgage; trustee under William Penn's will; attorney for Hannah Penn after her husband's death, etc.

In 1704, with William Trent, Isaac Norris purchased William Penn's Manor of Williamstadt, on Schuylkill, comprising 7,480 acres, and including the site of Norristown (named for him), the present county seat of Montgomery county. In 1712 he purchased Trent's interest in this manor, thereafter called Norriton, and owned it until his death in 1735. He also owned 632 acres in the Northern Liberties of Philadelphia, prior to February, 1712, when he added 192 acres to the tract at a cost of £453. In 1713 he purchased of Hamilton and Falconer, for £550, the unlocated first purchase of Charles Marshall, of 6,000 acres, and located the forty-two acres Liberty Land appurtenant thereto, alongside his other lots above mentioned. At this date he was residing in the city, where, in addition to other properties, he owned the "Slate-roof House" celebrated as the residence of Penn, during his second visit to Pennsylvania, which Norris had purchased in 1709 for £900, Pennsylvania currency; the lot fronting fifty-seven and one-half feet on the east side of Second street, below Chestnut, and extending along Norris alley, 269 feet deep. On his estate in the Northern Liberties known as "Fair Hill", he erected a mansion, and removed there about 1718, living in a style befitting his rank and wealth. He possessed the luxury of a coach, and, Quaker though he was, emblazoned his coat-of-arms thereon. He was fond of reading, and being familiar with several languages, his leisure hours were spent among his books. He died June 4, 1735, being smitten with apoplexy while attending Friends' Meeting at Germantown, whence he was removed to Stenton, James Logan's residence, where he died.

Isaac Norris married, March 7, 1694, Mary, third daughter of Thomas Lloyd, many years President of the Provincial Council, and twice acting Governor of the Province of Pennsylvania. Isaac Norris was described by one of his contemporaries as "one whose character will do honor to his latest posterity, a doer of justice, a lover of mercy, a loving husband, an affectionate father, a sincere friend, and a lover of his country." He was a director of the first public school of Philadelphia.

ISAAC NORRIS, second son and sixth child of Isaac Norris, Councillor, and Mary Lloyd, his wife, born in Philadelphia, October 3, 1701, was like his distinguished father, prominent in Colonial affairs, filling the position of Speaker of Assembly of the Province for fifteen years. A sketch of him, written by Dr. George W. Norris, was published in the Pennsylvania Magazine of History and Biography, vol. i, p. 449, etc.

He was trained for a mercantile career, but nevertheless received a fine classical education, and twice went abroad to travel in Europe. Becoming associated with his father in mercantile business he continued it after the latter's death until 1743. Prior to the death of his father he resided in the "Slate-roof House", and afterwards at "Fair Hill." In 1727 he was elected to Common Council of city of Philadelphia, and three years later was advanced to the Board of Aldermen. He was first elected to the Provincial Assembly in October, 1734, from Philadelphia county, and his standing as a merchant made him at once an authority on matters of trade, measures for the advancement of which were then being agitated in the law-making bodies of the Province. On October 15, 1734, on the organization of the House, Lieut. Gov. Patrick Gordon communicated to it an inquiry from the Lords Commissioners of Trade and Plantations, as to what encouragement was necessary to make the Colonies of America furnish naval stores and other commodities not produced in England. The subject was exciting much attention in the mother country, where it was feared that industries would become established in the Colonies for the production of fabrics, of which England could always produce more than was used there, and she would thus lose an important market. Isaac Norris was appointed chairman of committee to draft a reply. His knowledge of trade conditions and natural resources of the Province, enabled him in his report to the Assembly to embody the valuable statement of Pennsylvania's resources to be found in "Votes of Assembly." It declared that hemp, pig-iron, and bar-iron, being staples generally purchased with money by the subjects of Great Britain from the Northern kingdoms, might, on a bounty being given by the home government, be had from some parts of this and other colonies in exchange for the manufactures and products of the Mother Country.

In 1739, four years after his father's death, the younger Norris comes to the front as the leader of the Quaker party. Rather more of a Quaker than his father, much more of a Quaker than James Logan, he is interesting as a statesman who endeavored to keep the policy of the state consistent with Quaker principles. In his day the crucial circumstances arose for carrying out theories as to the unlawfulness of war, which it was a different thing to profess than when the sect was only a few individuals in the great nation of England. It was to be seen what Friends in control of a state would do in case of invasion. In England they occasionally suffered legal penalties; in America they would have to antipate a conquering army depriving them of the fruits of their toil, their nationality, and their chartered liberties. The case did not really present itself to the earlier settlers of New Jersey and Pennsylvania. Those colonies were too small either to tempt invasion, or to be looked to for recruits; and a little presence of mind on such occasions as Gov. Evans' scare was all that was called for. But in 1739 war was breaking out with the yet mighty kingdom of Spain, from whose American possessions an armament could be fitted out against the territory with which Raleigh and Gilbert had enriched the British Crown. Indeed it was expected that France, then possessor of Canada, would ally herself with Spain, and, thus flanked, the British colonies must bear a bitter struggle, while their population and natural wealth were now so considerable that their conquest by either of their neighbors would be a sufficient fruit of the war. Under these circumstances, the Assembly of Pennsylvania, with Norris a member, met in October, 1739. The Governor suggested that they take measures for the defence of the Province. He also laid before them a communication from the Lords Commissioners of Trade and Plantations asking for information as to the rates of gold and silver coin and value of gold and silver per oz. in 1700-10-20-30, and the provisions of the acts for issuing bills of credit from 1700 down, the amounts named in them, and the amount outstanding. The statement sent in answer was prepared by a committee of which Thomas Leech was the first named, and Isaac Norris, the second. This work over, the House sent a message on the subject of defence, contending for the rights of the Quakers to obey their conscientious scruples against war. At the same time, it was said, persons of other sects who held no such views were equally entitled to liberty of conscience. Of such there were many, and they could arm, the Governor by the charter to Penn being authorized, and no act of Assembly having restrained him, to levy, muster, and train all sorts of men, and to make war, and act as a captain-general. But Gov. Thomas wished them to vote money, and to enact a law relating to military service. This they would not do; they would not even pass a bill on the subject when the Quakers were exempted from its provisions. The Governor replied that sharing in the expense had been agreed to in Pennsylvania when, in 1710, a sum was granted to Queen Anne for the reduction of Canada, and was always done by persons of their religious persuasion in Britain. Norris was on the committee to draft the rejoinder. It ably states the Quaker argument against the lawfulness of war to Christian men, and recalls the fact that the money voted to Queen Anne was accompanied by an explanation that their principles forbade war, but commanded them to pay tribute and yield obedience to the power God had set over them in all things so far as their religious persuasions would permit. The paper further declares an unwillingness to place such instruments of power as a militia and the money for fortifications in the hands of the Governor and his friends. This of course had nothing to do with the religious principle; at the same time it was cunningly added, and gained for those who wrote it support from the democracy. In the course of time, the non-Quaker population organized seven companies of soldiers, but in these a large number of indentured servants undertook to enlist. Many Quaker masters were thus injured. The Assembly took up the matter, and addressed the Governor; but the runaways had taken the oath, and a large portion had received the King's subsistence for several weeks, and the Governor declined to dismiss them. Finally, on the 9th of August, the Assembly yielded to the importunities for money, and voted 300*l.* to Thomas Griffitts, Edward Bradley, John Stamper, Isaac Norris, and Thomas Leech, "for the use of King George II.," provided, however, that no warrant for said sum should issue from the Speaker until all the servants enlisted should be returned to their masters free of all charges. A remonstrance to the King was ordered to be drawn up, Norris being upon the committee to draft it. At the next Assembly, Norris again member, a committee reported the number of servants thus eloiigned as 262, and compensation was made to the masters.

The various disputes between the Governor and the Quakers, or "Norris party," as the stricter Friends came to be called, brought about contests for office as bitter as in modern times. The re-election of Norris to the Assembly in 1741 could not be prevented; and the Quakers had some vantage ground with Norris and his brother-in-law Griffitts and uncle Preston, as three of the Aldermen of the city. But the Corporation was too important a political factor to be allowed to feel his influence. The adverse party mustered a majority to elect four new Aldermen and five new Councilmen who would further the Governor's plans; and the prominence of the Lloyd connection, and even the equal footing of the Quakers in the Board, was destroyed forever. It was not so easy to defeat Norris at a popular election. In 1742, after a session in which he had been head of nearly every committee, and in which he had performed lasting services in superintending the completion of portions of the State House, and in purchasing a site and devising plans for a Lazaretto, the wealthy Recorder of the city, Mr. Allen contended for his seat in the House. The German settlers had invariably voted with the Quakers, and it was charged that the "Norris party" had been in possession of the polls, crowded out their opponents, and elected their candidate with the aid of unnaturalized voters. But if the Governor's friends cried "fraud," they were now guilty of "bulldozing." On election day of that year, a party of sailors, strong enough in numbers to make havoc in the little city, marched up from the wharves, applied their clubs, and, wounding several, drove the disciples of peace from the State House. In the hubbub that followed, Allen is reported to have said "They had as good a right to be there as the unnaturalized Dutchmen;" he took no steps to preserve the peace, and his supposed complicity lost him many votes. Such violence brought a reaction in public feeling; and Norris was returned. A fresh controversy arose from this "Riot of 1742," the new Assembly desiring the Governor to bring the officers of the City Corporation to trial before the Supreme Court, and the Corporation refusing, after which a resolution was passed censuring the officers in question for neglect of duty. The withholding of the Governor's salary was the effective weapon of the Assembly; and in time induced that officer to attempt a conciliatory course. Certain bills which had been insisted on, he finally assented to, and the money-voting power granted him his means of subsistence. Gordon in his History says that the triumph of the Assembly was complete they had taken no step of a military character, nor made any gift of money inconsistent with their principles.

In 1745, the Governor appointed Norris, Kinsey, and Lawrence, commissioners to represent Pennsylvania at the conference with the Indians at Albany. Norris had left a diary of his journey, privately printed by one of his brother's descendants in 1867. The conference was of little importance to the English; but in 1755 Norris was again sent to Albany as one of the commissioners from Pennsylvania to treat with the Indians. He and his colleagues at this time effected the purchase of several million acres, comprising the southwestern portion of Pennsylvania.

On the death of John Kinsey, in 1751, Isaac Norris was elected Speaker of the Assembly. It was in that year that the old State House bell was ordered from England, Norris directing the inscription, which turned out to be prophetic, to be placed around it. The bell was cracked by a stroke from the clapper in 1752, was recast with the same inscription, and less than a quarter of a century afterwards actually did "Proclaim liberty throughout the land, unto all the inhabitants thereof." During the fifteen years of Norris's speakership, was waged the great contest between the populace and the Proprietaries on the subject of taxation and legislative control of the Penn family estates. The Quakers, with Norris at their head, joined the opposers of privilege. In the course of one of the debates in the Assembly, Norris declared "No man shall ever stand upon my grave and say 'Curse him' or 'Here lies he who betrayed the liberties of his Country.'" In 1757, the Assembly resolved to send him and Benjamin Franklin to England to solicit for the removal of grievances occasioned by the Proprietary instructions, &c., but Norris declined the appointment on account of ill health, so that Franklin undertook it alone. Opposition to the encroachments of the Penns, however, did not lead Norris into the scheme for converting Pennsylvania into a Royal Province, whereby instead of having to deal with a family who felt some attachment to the people of the soil, whose property lay in the colony, and whose financial interests were generally identical with their own, and for whom in most contests they had proved themselves a match, the people were to be ruled by a Governor responsible only to the British Ministry, and supported by the whole power of the Crown. When, in 1764, a petition to the King to effect this change passed the Assembly despite the remonstrances of Dickinson, Norris's son-in-law, Norris requested that, his sentiments being very different from those of the majority, as his seat in the chair prevented him from entering into the debate, therefore if in consequence of their order his duty should oblige him to sign the petition as Speaker, he might be permitted to offer his sentiments on the subject before he signed, and that they might be entered on the minutes. This request was granted, after which the House adjourned to the following morning. On reassembling, it received a letter from Norris resigning the Speakership. The long sitting and the excitement of the debate had proved too much for his weakened health, and being too unwell to attend, he availed himself of the excuse to be relieved of the unpleasant duty. Benjamin Franklin was chosen his successor, and signed the petition. At the ensuing popular election, Franklin was not returned to the Assembly. Norris's name, contrary to his wishes, had been placed upon the ticket for Philadelphia county: he was again chosen to the Assembly, and again became its Speaker. He a second time resigned, October 24, 1764, Joseph Fox being his successor.

Norris had the literary tastes of the Quaker connection to which he belonged, and in the course of his busy life collected a fine library for those days. The principal portion of it, "consisting of about 1,500 volumes upon the most important subjects," was presented to Dickinson College by the Hon. John Dickinson upon the founding of that institution. Norris wrote with ease in French and Latin, and had some knowledge of Hebrew. Among his various public services, he acted for several years as a trustee of the College. He died at "Fair Hill," July 13, 1766. He made no will.

The following extract is taken from the Independent Gazetteer, of November 27, 1787, No. 612: "The late Mr. Isaac Norris, whose memory will be forever revered by every good citizen of Pennsylvania, had served his country with the utmost fidelity for more than twenty years in the character of legislator. His age and increasing weakness of constitution at length obliged him to quit the task of reconciling and directing the various interests and views of his fellow representatives to the good of his country. . . ."

Isaac Norris married, in 1739, Sarah, eldest daughter of James Logan, Proprietary Secretary of Pennsylvania, member of the Provincial Council for almost a half century, Deputy Governor, Chief Justice, etc. She was born December 9, 1715, died December 13, 1744, soon after the birth of her youngest child, having survived her marriage but little over five years.

CHARLES NORRIS, son of Isaac and Mary (Lloyd) Norris, born in Philadelphia, May 9, 1712, was a prominent and successful merchant of that city, being for some years associated with his younger brother Samuel. He lived in a fine house, on what was then the outskirts of the city, the present site of the Custom House. He was for many years Trustee of the Loan Office of Pennsylvania, and was one of first Board of Directors of the Pennsylvania Hospital. His palatial home with its fine grounds running back to Library street, ornamented with gravelled walks, flowers, rare shrubs and plants, was the scene of much social activity among the aristocratic youth of Philadelphia, after the evacuation of the city by the British, 1778. Deborah Norris, eldest daughter, was the bosom friend and correspondent of Sally Wistar, and one of the charming circle of friends of whom we get a glimpse in "Sallie Wistar's Journal". "During the Revolutionary War, the Patriots took from the Norris house the heavy leaden spouts and rain gutters to make bullets for the Continental Army."

Charles Norris died January 15, 1766, but seven years after his second marriage, and therefore while all his children were yet in tender years. He married (first) Margaret, daughter of Dr. John Rodman, of Bucks county, who died without issue. He married (second) June 21, 1759, Mary, daughter of Joseph Parker, native of Yorkshire, England, who was Deputy Register of Chester county, Clerk of Common Pleas Court there in 1733-4, but later removed to West Jersey. By his wife, Mary Ladd, he had issue Mary (Parker) Norris, who died

Chas. Norris

December 4, 1799, and was buried in the Friends' Burying Ground, at Chester.

Issue of Isaac and Mary (Parker) Norris:—

Isaac Norris, b. July 18, 1760, d. Oct. 2, 1802; unm.;

Deborah Norris, b. Oct. 19, 1761, d. at Stenton, Feb. 2, 1839; m. Dr. George Logan; Deborah was educated as a child in the school kept by Anthony Benezet, celebrated scholar and philanthropist of Philadelphia, and after her schoolgirl days pursued a regular course of education at home, becoming one of the literary characters of her time. It was through her careful collation of family MSS. and her memoranda of events of which she was an eye-witness, her notes of facts which she had peculiar opportunities of learning, that Watson, the annalist, gained much of the Colonial history which he preserved. She possessed considerable poetic talent, writing many small pieces of verse in her diary; a sketch of her appears in "Worthy Women of our First Century" (Phila., 1877), and "she is as justly celebrated as any woman whom Philadelphia has produced";

JOSEPH PARKER NORRIS, b. May 5, 1763, d. June 22, 1841; m. Elizabeth Hill Fox, of whom presently;

Charles Norris, b. July 12, 1765, d. Dec. 24, 1813; resided for some years in Massachusetts; m. at Nantucket, July 4, 1793, Eunice Gardner; they had issue:

Deborah Logan Norris, d. unm.;

Hepzibah Norris, m. (first) William E. Wells; (second) in 1846, William McCann.

JOSEPH PARKER NORRIS, second son of Charles and Mary (Parker) Norris, born in Philadelphia, May 5, 1763, was a pupil of Robert Proud, the historian, and was an executor of his will. The estates of "Fair Hill" and "Sepviva", having been settled upon him and his brothers, in tail male, with remainder to the right heirs of Isaac Norris, Speaker, with power in Mrs. Dickinson, (daughter of Isaac) to determine which son of Charles Norris should be tenant in tail; Joseph Parker Norris purchased the property; John Dickinson and Mary, his wife, she being sole heiress of Isaac Norris, Speaker, made him a deed dated May 18, 1790, naming him as tenant in tail, and granting him the reversionary interest, also. He then instituted proceedings to destroy the entail, and in the course of a year through the legal legerdemain of common recovery, became seized of these estates in fee simple. They consisted of some six hundred and fifty acres of land in the Northern Liberties, lying between Gunner's Run, later the Aramingo canal, and the Germantown turnpike. This remained the rural seat of the family up to the date of his death, though the time when it became covered with rows of houses was then so near at hand that he must be considered to have left the greatest landed estate of any of his contemporaries in these parts.

Joseph Parker Norris was many years president of the Bank of Pennsylvania. He died June 22, 1841, devising "Fair Hill" to trustees for the children of his sons, and "Sepviva" to trustees for his daughters' children. An Act of Assembly was passed to enable the trustees to sell lots during the lifetime of the testator's children. He married, May 20, 1790, Elizabeth Hill, daughter of Elizabeth Mickle and Joseph Fox, who succeeded Isaac Norris as Speaker of Assembly. Mrs. Norris survived her husband nearly twenty years, dying in January of 1861.

GEORGE WASHINGTON NORRIS, twelfth child of Joseph Parker and Elizabeth Hill (Fox) Norris, born in Philadelphia, November 6, 1808; in 1824 entered the University of Pennsylvania, class of 1827, and received the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Entering the medical department of the same institution, he received the degree of Doctor of Medicine, 1830. During the same year he was elected one of the resident physicians of the Pennsylvania Hospital. Upon the conclusion of his term of service, he studied medicine abroad for a few years, most of his time being spent in Paris. In 1836, at the age of twenty-eight years, he was elected one of the surgeons of Pennsylvania Hospital, a position which he held for over twenty years. In 1848, he was appointed Clinical Professor of Surgery at the University of Pennsylvania, finally resigning in 1857, at which time he was elected Trustee of the University.

He was the author of a number of monographs, which were eventually published in one volume, entitled "Contributions to Practical Surgery"; and from time to time he wrote articles on historical subjects for the magazines, etc. His last literary work, "The Early History of Medicine in Philadelphia", left unfinished at the time of his death, was subsequently finished by his son. Dr. Norris rose to great eminence in his profession as a surgeon. Despite his diffidence and humility, he had a wide reputation as a consultant. His calm and excellent judgment was frequently called into requisition by his professional confreres and friends.

A memoir of Dr. Norris, by Dr. William Hunt, says of him, in part: "Dr. Norris was a man of truth. He never flattered and he never sneered. Well may we wish that not only we, but many more of his profession than those who hear us tonight, were such as he was."

In two respects Dr. Norris may be said to have anticipated the subsequent developments of modern surgery. Before the days of anaesthetics, he used before operations, in a measure to relieve the sufferings of his patients, a liberal administration of alcohol and opium; and before the days of antiseptics, he used to rigorously insist upon the necessity of prolonged and frequent application of soap and water, and upon the use of new and unused bandages for each patient.

In fact he was so punctilious in these matters that he was sometimes criticised as cranky on the subject.

Among the official positions held by Dr. Norris the following may be mentioned: Vice-President of the College of Physicians (1864-75); President of the Board of Managers of the Children's Hospital; Consulting Surgeon to the same institution, and to the Orthopaedic Hospital; President of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania; member of the American Philosophical Society, and of the Academy of Natural Sciences; Director of the Philadelphia Library Company, and of the Mutual Assurance Company, (Green Tree); of the Philadelphia Saving Fund Society, and "a much consulted Trustee of the University of Pennsylvania."

Dr. George W. Norris married, February 1, 1838, Mary Pleasants, daughter of William Wharton Fisher, of Philadelphia. He died March 4, 1875.

Issue of Dr. George W. and Mary P. (Fisher) Norris:—

WILLIAM FISHER NORRIS, b. Jan. 6, 1839, d. Nov. 18, 1901; m. (first) Rosa Clara Buchmann, of whom presently;

WILLIAM FISHER NORRIS, M. D., only son of Dr. George W. and Mary P. (Fisher) Norris, born in Philadelphia, January 6, 1839, graduated from University of Pennsylvania, "with high honors", class of 1857, receiving degree of Bachelor of Arts; two years later that of Master of Arts, and in 1861, that of Doctor of Medicine from the same institution. He became a resident physician of Pennsylvania Hospital, and after having served his term there, passed the examinations for surgeon in the U. S. A. During the greater part of the Civil War he was stationed in Washington, D. C., and after a short term of service was placed in charge of Douglas Hospital, a post which he held until his resignation from army in 1865; he having been brevetted Captain. While at Washington, he inaugurated the custom of photographing wounds and pathological specimens for future records; he was practically the first, in this country, to photograph microscopic sections. The authorities at Washington were so impressed with the value of this means of recording case histories that a special bureau was established for this purpose. After leaving the army Dr. Norris went to Europe to study Ophthalmology, a branch of medical science at that time practically unknown in this country. He spent several years in Europe, most of his time being passed in Vienna. Here it was that, together with Professor Stricker, he published an epoch-making article "On the Inflammation of the Cornea."

On his return to this country Dr. Norris took up Ophthalmology as a specialty. In 1873 he was appointed Lecturer on this branch of medicine at University of Pennsylvania, and in 1876 was appointed to the newly established professorship of Clinical Ophthalmology. This chair was later made a full professorship and held by him until his death in 1901.

In 1872 he was appointed surgeon of the Wills Eye Hospital, a position he also held until 1901, at which time he was appointed consulting surgeon, "as a token of respect for his unremitting labor as Attending Surgeon."

Hon. J. L. Norris

Conservatism and conscientiousness, rather than brilliancy or display, characterized the lectures and operations of Dr. Norris; the welfare of the patient being always the primary object in view. He was one of the founders of University Hospital, (he, with Drs. Wood and Pepper, being the originators of the plan), and for many years was President of its Board of Managers. He was a Fellow of the College of Physicians of Philadelphia, and for many years one of its Censors. In 1877 he was president of Pathological Society; from 1885 to 1889, president of the American Ophthalmological Society; a director of the Mutual Assurance Company; a member of the Wistar Party, of the Academy of Natural Sciences, and the Philadelphia Zoological Society. He made many contributions to medical literature; was senior author of "A Text Book of Ophthalmology", and senior editor of "A System of the Diseases of the Eye." He died November 18, 1901.

Dr. William Fisher Norris married (first) July 14, 1873, Rosa Clara, of Vienna, daughter of Hieronymus Buchmann, who died November 1, 1897. Married (second) June 12, 1899, Annetta Culp, daughter of Col. George A. Earnshaw, of Gettysburg, Pennsylvania. He and his first wife are buried at Laurel Hill Cemetery.

Issue of Dr. William F. and Rosa Clara (Buchmann) Norris:—

SHIPPEN FAMILY

Among those who, in the second part of the seventeenth century, left England for the New World, was Edward Shippen of Methley, in the West Riding of Yorkshire. There is a family tradition, confirmed by a letter of Edward Shippen "of Lancaster", written in 1741, that the Shippens were settled at Hillam, a hamlet in the ancient parish of Monk Fryston, in Yorkshire, as early as the thirteenth century. There is nothing further known to prove this tradition, and it may be true. In any case, at the dawn of the Reformation the Shippens were established at Hillam, in the parish of Monk Fryston.

In 1539 there is the entry, "Janet Shippen christened the XXIIth day" and, between that date and 1678, there are about forty Shippen entries, the latest of which are in 1622-3 and 1624-5. There were Shippens, however, in many of the villages adjacent to Monk Fryston, and to this day there is a farm-house called Shippen, in the parish of Barwick-in-Elmet, six or seven miles to the northwest of Monk Fryston. The word 'shippen' is in every-day use in agricultural Yorkshire, at the present time, and denotes a partly covered cattle-yard, and there are persons bearing the name Shippen still to be found in Leeds and the neighborhood.

Monk Fryston is in the West Riding of Yorkshire, and lies about thirteen miles southeast of Leeds and fifteen miles south of York. There William Shippen—the father of the emigrant—appears to have been born about the year 1600, but by some mischance his name is not to be found in the Monk Fryston registers. What is certain is that he migrated to Methley, a village about seven miles to the west of Monk Fryston, and that there, on July 16, 1626, he married Mary Nunnes or Nuns.

WILLIAM SHIPPEN, in his new home at Methley, became a man of local prominence, for in 1642, he was overseer of the poor, and in 1654, overseer of highways. He died in 1681 at Stockport in Cheshire, where he was living with his son William. His wife, Mary Nunnes, the daughter of John Nunnes, of a substantial yeoman family long established at Methley, was baptized at Methley on October 11, 1592, and buried there May 26, 1672. William Shippen himself spent his declining years with his son William, rector of Stockport, and died there in 1681. William and Mary (Nunnes) Shippen had six children, all born at Methley:—

Robert Shippen, bap. May 20, 1627;

Mary Shippen, bap. June 24, 1629;

Ann Shippen, bap. Nov. 21, 1630;

Dorathe Shippen, bap. Feb. 9, 1631;

William Shippen, bap. July 2, 1637;

Edward Shippen, bap. March 5, 1639.

Of these, Robert, Ann, and Dorathe died young at Methley, and Mary married, in 1663, William Chapman, of the neighboring town of Normanton. Of the two remaining children, William remained in England and Edward came to America.

WILLIAM SHIPPEN, baptized at Methley July 2, 1637; studied and graduated at University College, Oxford, receiving his B. A. in 1656 and his M. A. in 1659. He was afterward Proctor of the University, 1664; Rector of Stockport in Cheshire; and was the author of "The Christian's Triumph over Death," a sermon preached at the funeral of Richard Leigh, Esq. He died in 1693, and was buried under the chancel of the church. Rev. William Shippen had four sons and one daughter:—

Edward Shippen, b. 1671, M. A. and M. D., Brasenose College, Oxford, subsequently succeeded his brother Robert as Professor of Music at Gresham College. Was a physician; supposedly m. Frances, dau. of Peter Leigh, of Lynne;

William Shippen, b. 1673 and d. 1743; was bur. in St. Andrew's Church, Holborn, London. Educated at Westminster and Brasenose College, Oxford, he was called to the Bar from the Middle Temple in 1693. He sat in five parliaments from 1716 to his death in 1743, and was the incorruptible leader of the Jacobites. In his speeches he spoke his mind clearly and fearlessly, and to such purpose that on one occasion, for reflecting on the policy of the King, he was confined to the Tower of London. It was of him that Pope wrote,—

"I love to pour out all myself, as plain

As downright Shippen, or as old Montaigne."

Lord Dover, in his edition of the letters of Sir Horace Walpole, brother of Sir Robert Walpole, says of Shippen,—

"Honest Will Shippen," as he was called, or 'Downright Shippen,' as Pope terms him, was a zealous Jacobite member of Parliament, possessed of considerable talents, and a vehement opposer of Sir Robert Walpole's government. He, however, did justice to that able Minister, for he was accustomed to say, 'Robin and I are honest men; but as for those fellows in long perriwigs,' (meaning the Tories of the day) 'they only want to get into office themselves.' He was the author of a satirical poem entitled 'Faction Displayed,' which possesses considerable merit."

Sir Robert Walpole said of Shippen, "Some are corrupt, but I will tell you of one who is not; Shippen is not."

On one occasion the Prince of Wales, to show his satisfaction with a speech of Shippen, sent the sturdy Jacobite leader, by General Churchhill, Groom of the Bedchamber, a thousand pounds sterling, which Shippen refused.

Shippen's character and conduct are well illustrated in the report of the proceedings in Parliament, when he was sent to the Tower.

"In this speech, Mr. Shippen overshot himself so far in his expressions, as to give too much advantage against him, to such as perhaps were not over-backward to lay hold of it: His words that gave the offence were to the following purpose. 'That the second paragraph of the King's speech seemed rather to be calculated for the meridian of Germany, than Great Britain; and that 'twas a great misfortune, that the King was a Stranger to our language and constitution.' These expressions gave offence to several members, and in particular to Mr. Lechmere, who having taken them down in writing, urged, 'That those words were a scandalous invective against the King's person and government, of which the house ought to shew the highest resentment, and therefore moved, That the member who spoke those offensive words should be sent to the Tower.' Mr. Lechmere was seconded by Mr. Cowper, brother of the Lord Chancellor, and back'd by Sir Joseph Jekyll, and some others: Upon which Mr. Robert Walpole said, 'That if the words in question were spoken by the member on whom they were charged, the Tower was too light a punishment for his rashness; but as what he had said in the heat of his debate might have been misunderstood, he was for allowing him the liberty of explaining himself.' Mr. Snell, Mr. Hutchinson, and some other gentlemen, spoke also in behalf of Mr. Shippen, intending, chiefly, to give him an opportunity of retracting or excusing what he had said; which Mr. Shippen not thinking proper to do, several speeches were made upon the question, Whether the words taken down in writing were the same as he had spoken? A gentleman having suggested, That there was no precedent of a censure passed on a member of the house, for words spoken in a Committee, Sir Charles Hotham produced instances of the contrary; and, on the other hand, Mr. Shippen having maintained what he had advanced, it was, at last, resolved by a majority of 196 votes against about 100, That the words taken down in writing were spoken by Mr. Shippen. It was then about nine o'clock in the evening, and it being moved and carried, That the Chairman leave the chair; Mr. Speaker resumed his place, and Mr. Farrer reported from the said Committee, 'That exceptions having been taken to some words spoken in the Committee, by William Shippen, Esq., a member of the house, the Committee, had directed him to report the words to the house.' Which being done accordingly, and candles ordered to be brought in, Mr. Shippen was heard in his place, and then withdrew. After this it was moved, that the question might be put, 'That the words spoken by William Shippen, Esq., (a member of this house) are highly dishonorable to, and unjustly reflecting on his Majesty's person and government.' Which occasioned a debate that lasted 'till past 11 o'clock; when the question being put, was carried in the affirmative by 175 voices against 81; and thereupon ordered, 'That William Shippen, Esq., be, for the said offence, committed prisoner to his Majesty's Tower of London, and that Mr. Speaker do issue his warrant accordingly.'

Of a speech by Shippen in the Commons (1720) the Countess of Cowper writes in her diary,—

"Shippen upbraided Walpole terribly in Debate with having chid the Committee of Supply for fear of such an indiscreet method as this to raise Money, and now with moving and helping the Court to it in this manner. He spoke long, and very well—the better for being in the Right."

Something of his political views are expressed in the following speech in the House of Commons:

"For my part I am not ashamed nor afraid to affirm, that thirty years have made no change in any of my political opinions; I am now grown old in this house, but that experience which is the consequence of age has only confirmed the principles with which I enter'd it many years ago; time has verified the predictions which I formerly utter'd, and I have seen my conjectures ripen'd into knowledge. I should be therefore without excuse, if either terror could affright, or the hope of advantage allure me from the declaration of my opinions; opinions, which I was not deterred from asserting, when the prospect of a longer life than I can now expect might have added to the temptations of ambition, or aggravated the terrors of poverty and disgrace; opinions, for which I would willingly have suffered the severest censures, even when I had espoused them only in compliance with reason, without the infallible certainty of experience. Of truth it has been always observed, Sir, that every day adds to its establishment, and that falsehoods, however specious, however supported by power, or established by confederacies, are unable to stand before the stroke of time: Against the inconveniences and vexations of long life, may be set the pleasure of discovering truth, perhaps the only pleasure that age affords. Nor is it a slight satisfaction to a man not utterly infatuated or depraved, to find opportunities of rectifying his notions, and regulating his conduct by new lights. But much greater is the happiness of that man, to whom every day brings a new proof of the reasonableness of his former determinations, and who finds, by the most unerring test, that his life has been spent in promotion of doctrines beneficial to mankind. This, Sir, is the happiness which I now enjoy, and for which those who never shall attain it, must look for an equivalent in lucrative employment, honorary titles, pompous equipages, and splendid palaces. These, Sir, are the advantages which are to be gained by a seasonable variation of principles, and by a ready compliance with the prevailing fashion of opinions; advantages, which I indeed cannot envy, when they are purchased at so high a price";

William Shippen, m. Frances, dau. of Sir Richard Stote;

Robert Shippen, b. 1675. Received his M. A. July 22, 1693, was Fellow of Brasenose, and Professor of Music at Gresham College; he held several preferments. In 1710 he became Principal of Brasenose, and in 1718 Vice-chancellor of Oxford University. Bur. in Brasenose Chapel, where there is his bust and an epitaph in Latin by Dr. Frewin, of which the following is a free translation:

The tablet is about eight feet in length, surmounted with a bust of Robert Shippen, terminating with the shield of the Shippen coat-of-arms. There appears to have been a certain degree of intimacy between Robert and his American cousin, Joseph. His book-plate is preserved in the American branch of the family;
 John Shippen, bap. by his father at Stockport July 5, 1678. Was a merchant in Spain, and British consul at Lisbon; d. unm. Sept., 1747; bur. in St. Andrew's, Holborn, London;
 Anne Shippen, named for Edward Willes, one of the Judges of Court of King's Bench, 1767, m. Anne Taylor, dau. of Anne, sister of William Shippen, M. P.

EDWARD SHIPPEN, the emigrant, was baptized on March 5, 1639, at Methley, not far from the manufacturing city of Leeds; the Loidis-in-Elmet of Saxon days. The name Methley probably originally meant the middle pasture land between the rivers Calder and Aire. To-day Methley Church is almost, excepting the steeple, which is an eighteenth-century addition, as it was when Edward Shippen lived at Methley. He came over to America and settled in Boston in 1668. There he engaged in mercantile pursuits with much success. In 1669 he was a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, showing that he was still at that time a member of the Protestant Church of England. Two years later he married Elizabeth Lybrand, a Quakeress; this marriage led him to become a Quaker. Owing to his new religion, he was subjected to severe persecution, and in 1677, was twice "publicly whipped." In various ways he was subjected to great annoyance, until finally, about 1693-4, he decided to take refuge in Pennsylvania.

It would seem to have taken him about a year to perfect the disposal of his estate in Boston and transfer it to Philadelphia. In this latter city his wealth, his fine personal appearance, his house on Second street, styled "a princely mansion", his talents, and his high character, speedily obtained for him such position and influence that on July 9, 1695, he was elected Speaker of the Assembly; in 1699 he was made Chief-Justice, and on October 25, 1701, William Penn named him in the charter as Mayor of the City of Philadelphia. Penn, as is well known, gave most anxious consideration to his selection of officers to govern the new city. He thoroughly appreciated the importance of a correct choice. It was, to borrow a military phrase, the base-line in his operations. The success of his whole enterprise turned upon it, the consciousness of which, apart from any other motives, political or philanthropic, was sufficient to stimulate him to the utmost caution and deliberation in his choice of incumbents. In Edward Shippen he found a man of courage, energy, integrity, intelligence, and sagacity; whose unspotted moral character was ample earnest to the citizens that the executive power would be exercised with the strictest justice and fidelity; whose active business habits and bravery equally assured them of the chief magistrate's resolution and promptness, whilst his high social position gave dignity to the office.

From 1702 to 1704 Edward Shippen was President of the Governor's Council, and for six months, when there was no Governor in the Province, he was acting Governor. In 1706 he contracted his third marriage, which led to his separation from the Society of Friends. After that, apparently, he retired from public life, except that he continued to advise upon public affairs, as is shown by Penn's letter dated 24th, 5th month, 1712, where Edward Shippen is addressed, in connection with Isaac Norris, Thomas Story, and others. Edward Shippen died at Philadelphia, October 2, 1712.

No one could wish to detract in the slightest degree from Penn's merits; but we are taught to render "honor to whom honor is due." In doing so, we must needs say that a great, if not the greatest, portion of the glory of building up the commonwealth which was "founded by deeds of peace" is due to Shippen, Norris, and Logan, and men like them; the men who, here, in the new country itself, fostered commerce, developed the resources of the Province, set the best of examples, by disdaining no proper toil in their respective vocations, yet neglected not the refinements and graces of letters and polite society.

Edward Shippen married (first), 1671, Elizabeth Lybrand, of Boston; they had eight children, from whom are descended the Shippen family in America. She having died, October 25, 1688, he married at Newport, Rhode Island, September 4, 1689, Rebecca, widow of Francis Richardson, of New York, and daughter of John Howard, of Yorkshire. Her sister Mary, who had married (first) Thomas, son of William Coddington, Governor of Rhode Island, had just prior to Edward Shippen's removal to Philadelphia, become third wife of Anthony Morris, at that time a leading merchant of Philadelphia. Edward Shippen took up his residence in a fine mansion on the west side of Second street, north of Spruce, and had a fine "country house" at Broad and South streets, his property extending along the south side of the old city as far west as Sixteenth street and east to Front street. William Penn spent much of his time at Shippen's house on Second street, on the occasion of his second visit to Pennsylvania. His spacious lawn extending down to Dock Creek, on which he maintained a herd of deer, and his orchard of choice fruits were famous in their day.

Among the descendants of Edward Shippen and his first wife, Elizabeth Lybrand, many reached positions of influence and distinction, both under the Colonial and the State governments. Some account of their distinguished services will be given later in this narrative. Mr. Shippen's second wife, Rebecca (Howard) Richardson, died in Philadelphia, February 26, 1704-5, and in 1706 he married (third) Elizabeth, widow of Thomas James, from Bristol, England, daughter of John Wilcox. This marriage separated him from the Society of Friends, and about this time he also retired from public affairs, except that he continued to be the confidential adviser of Penn in some matters of state as shown by Penn's letter of 5mo. 24, 1712. He died in Philadelphia, October 2, 1712. His third wife survived him, dying in Philadelphia, August 7, 1724. His only child by the second marriage was a daughter, Elizabeth, born at Boston, October 20, 1691, and died there August 8, 1692. By the third marriage he had two sons, John, 1707, died same year; and William, born Philadelphia, October 3, 1708, died February 3, 1730-1, unmarried. His descendants therefore are through his first marriage, with Elizabeth Lybrand.

EDWARD SHIPPEN, eldest son of Joseph and Abigail (Gosse) Shippen, generally known as "Edward Shippen of Lancaster", born in Boston, Mass., July 9, 1703, was reared in Philadelphia to mercantile pursuits, in 1732 became a partner of James Logan, under firm name of Logan & Shippen, and in 1749, engaged in the fur trade with Thomas Lawrence, under title of Shippen and Lawrence. He was elected to Common Council of Philadelphia October 3, 1732, was elected by that body to the Board of Aldermen October 4, 1743, and a year later was elected Mayor of the city. He was an accomplished scholar, a cultured gentleman, and was very much esteemed throughout the Province. He was a founder of the College of New Jersey, now Princeton University, and was a trustee twenty years. He became a member of the American Philosophical Society in 1768, of which his son Edward was also a member. On engaging in the fur trade in 1749, he removed to Lancaster, and became an extensive landed proprietor on the then frontier of Pennsylvania. He laid out the town of Shippensburg, named for him. He was appointed Prothonotary of Lancaster county, March 28, 1753, held that office until the Revolution, and was also clerk of the other courts of the county, as well as Justice of the County and Provincial Courts.

During the French and Indian wars he filled the position of paymaster and Commissary of the British and Provincial troops, under Generals Forbes and Stanwix and Col. Bouquet, and managed the purchase of supplies for the several expeditions with so much thoroughness, integrity and tact, as to receive the public thanks for his services in 1760. In fact he discharged all his public duties in a manner eminently praiseworthy and honorable, and in his private intercourse always showed himself so virtuous and upright as to merit and hold the respect and esteem of all with whom he came in contact. At the breaking out of the Revolutionary struggle he was too old to take a prominent part, either in the field or in the Committee of Safety, but nevertheless, always expressed himself warmly in behalf of the Colonies, and gave material aid. He had an unswerving faith in the ultimate success of the cause of independence, even in the darkest days of the struggle, but did not live to see it achieved. He died at Lancaster, September 25, 1781. He married (first), September 20, 1725, Sarah, born in Philadelphia, November 8, 1706, died there April 28, 1735, daughter of Charles Plumley by his wife Rose Budd, who became the second wife of Joseph Shippen, father of Edward. He married (second), in August, 1747, Mary, widow of John Nowland, and daughter of William and Mary Gray, of Philadelphia. She was born in London, England, January 13, 1705-6, and died at Lancaster May 3, 1778. His children were all by the first wife.

EDWARD SHIPPEN, eldest son of Edward and Sarah (Plumley) Shippen, born in Philadelphia February 16, 1728-9; through the trying ordeal of the struggle for independence, he entertained views entirely at variance with those of the then dominant party, and took no part in the struggle, nevertheless, through a long and useful career, rendered to his Province and State as distinguished services as any of his distinguished family, and held throughout, the respect and esteem of her people. He studied law in the office of Tench Francis, Esq., then the most learned and prominent member of Philadelphia Bar. His father, realizing he could not fit himself for a high position in the practice of that profession in America, sent him to England in the early part of 1749, to pursue his legal studies there. He was entered as a student at the Middle Temple, London, and in 1750, was admitted to practice as a barrister. On May 14, 1750, he sailed for home, and on his arrival in Philadelphia, at once took up the practice of his chosen profession. His rare talents and learning soon procured him a fair amount of business at the local bar, and on September 25, 1750, was admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, on his diploma from the Middle Temple, London, and he soon after had charge of a number of important cases in that tribunal. On November 22, 1752, he was appointed Judge of the Court of Admiralty at Philadelphia, then an important and lucrative position. He took a lively interest in Provincial affairs, and in 1756, was appointed by Provincial Council, with a number of others, to pacify the people of Lancaster, then in a turmoil over Indian affairs. On September 24, 1765, he was appointed Prothonotary of the Supreme Court, a position that does not seem to have prevented him from enjoying a large practice in that court. On December 12, 1770, he was appointed to the Provincial Council, and took an active part in its deliberations, until it went out of existence with the Provincial government in 1776.

With the coming of the Committee of Safety, followed by the Supreme Executive Council, as the ruling power in the State, Judge Shippen was of course deprived of his several offices and the disturbance and uncertainties of the change of government then succeeding, left little time or thought for litigation, so that his practice ceased to bring in any revenue, and he retired with his family to the Falls of the Schuylkill, and lived in quiet retirement. While he resented and abhorred the oppressive measures which the dominant party in England had unwisely imposed upon the Colonies, his education and profession and its practice had engendered in him the highest respect for the English laws and the prerogatives of the Crown, and felt that a total separation from the mother country would be ruinous to his beloved province and her institutions. He was, however, loyal to the existing authorities in his native state and freely gave and kept his parole, to hold no communication with her enemies and remain in or near his own house, remaining entirely impassive and neutral; an attitude he strenuously maintained throughout the war. When the British took possession of the city of Philadelphia, he returned to his city house, and was on terms of intimacy with a number of the English officers. His accomplished and beautiful daughters received much attention from the gallant young English cavaliers, with whom they were thrown in contact. They were, however, not permitted to attend the "Meschianza", the brilliant fete designed by Major Andre just before Gen. Howe's departure for England; though it is believed that his repugnance to their appearing in the immodest costume they were expected to wear, had more to do with his refusal than questions of state or loyalty.

At the close of the war, his means were much impaired and he purposed to remove his family to Lancaster in order to reduce the cost of living. With the coming of peace, however, differences of opinion were largely forgotten, and by reason of his well known ability and integrity, he was appointed May 1, 1784, President Judge of Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia, and on September 16 of the same year, was made one of the judges of the High Court of Errors and Appeals, filling both positions until the abolition of the latter by the adoption of the new constitution in 1790. In addition having been elected Justice of Dock Ward, October 13, 1785, he was commissioned on the following day by the Supreme Executive Council, President Judge of the Quarter Sessions and General Jail Delivery; but having little taste for the petty criminal trials that came before him, he asked to be relieved of that office a year latter. January 29, 1791, he was appointed Associate Justice of Supreme Court and held that position until 1799, when Chief Justice Thomas McKean, having become Governor, appointed Judge Shippen to the position of Chief Justice, vacated by his election. He served as Chief Justice until the close of the year 1805, when the infirmities of age induced him to resign and he died suddenly, April 16, 1806, and was buried at Christ Church with high honors. Judge Shippen was a man of large views, sound, practical common sense which tolerated and respected the views and opinions of others, though he could not share them, when convinced that they were honestly held and expressed. His great experience, learning and talents, his undoubted integrity, his patience and industry, his careful discrimination and conscientious love of justice, made him just such a judge as the state needed as she launched into independent statehood under new laws and new conditions. He was not one of those brilliant meteors that have periodically flashed upon the forensic horizon, but a plain, practical, conscientious jurist of unquestioned ability and fairness. He was a member of American Philosophical Society. He married at Christ Church, Philadelphia, November 29, 1753, Margaret, daughter of Attorney Gen. Tench Francis by his wife Elizabeth Turbett. She was born in Talbot county, Maryland, August 17, 1735, and died in Philadelphia, May 28, 1794.

He followed the sea for some fifteen years, and had quite a reputation as a navigator. On his marriage, 1825, he left the sea, and settled as "Singletree", near Trenton, New Jersey. On the inception of the Camden & Amboy Railroad, he became connected with that enterprise, and remained with the company until his death, a period of forty years, during which he resided some time at Bordentown, New Jersey, later in Philadelphia, and finally at his seat "Green Bank" in Burlington county, New Jersey, where he died May 8, 1868. SARAH SHIPPEN, only surviving daughter of Edward Shippen of Lancaster, by his wife Sarah Plumley, born in Philadelphia, February 22, 1730-1, married, May 14, 1748, Col. James Burd, born at Ormiston, near Edinburg, Scotland, March 10, 1726, son of Edward and Jane (Halliburton) Burd, the latter a daughter of the Lord Provost of Edinburgh. He came to Pennsylvania when a young man, and on his marriage located on a farm in Lancaster county. He entered the Provincial service at the first outbreak of hostilities with the French and Indians, was commissioned Lieutenant Colonel, 1755; Major, December 3, 1757, and Colonel, May 28, 1758. In December, 1756, he was placed in command at Fort Augusta, and his daily journal from December 8, 1756, to October 14, 1757, published in the Pennsylvania Archives, gives a vivid picture of the state of affairs in the frontiers of Pennsylvania in those troublous times. He served with especial distinction throughout the different Provincial wars, and was a Justice of Lancaster county, 1764-73. When the first clouds of the struggle against the oppression of the mother country appeared on the horizon, he came at once to the front in his own country. He was chairman of a meeting of the inhabitants of Lancaster county held on June 8, 1774, when resolutions were adopted, setting forth in no uncertain tone their intention "to oppose with decency and firmness every measure tending to deprive us of our just rights and privileges," and pledging themselves "to abide by the measures which shall be adopted by the members of the General Congress of the Colonies", and appointed a committee to confer with other committees with reference to such a congress. A similar meeting was held in the borough of Lancaster just one week later, at which Edward Shippen, Col. Burd's father-in-law, presided, and was made chairman of Committee of Observation. At a meeting of the Committee of Inspection of Lancaster county, January 14, 1775, of which Edward Shippen was Chairman, James Burd was named as one of the deputies from Lancaster to the Provincial Convention to be held January 23, 1775. Col. Burd was a member of the Committee of Safety for Lancaster county, assisted in the military organization of the county, and was commissioned Colonel of the first Battalion from the county, but became disgusted with the dissensions and desertions from the ranks at the expiration of the short term of service for which the first recruits enlisted, and resigned in December, 1776. He resided for a time shortly after his marriage at Lancaster, later at Shippensburg, and finally at "Tinian", his seat in the present county of Dauphin, near Harrisburg, where he died October 5, 1793.

He was a man of fine literary taste, with a natural poetic talent which he cultivated and exercised to some extent. He took a lively interest in political questions; was educated as a Federalist, but espoused Democratic principles and advocated them in a number of articles greatly esteemed for vigor, candor, polish and careful research. He died at Germantown, November 28, 1847. He and his wife are buried at Trinity Church, Oxford township, Philadelphia county, of which they were members. Mrs. Swift died June 2, 1809.

POWELL FAMILY

Samuel Powell, pioneer ancestor of the Philadelphia family of that name, was born in Stoke parish, St. Gregory, Somersetshire, England, 11mo. 2, 1673, of a Somersetshire family originally from Wales, and claimed descent from the princes of Powis, through Einion Efell, Lord of Cynlaeth, who flourished in the twelfth century. Their coat-of-arms bore "Party per fesse argent and or, a lion rampant gules", crest, "A star of eight points above a cloud,—all proper."

John Powle, buried February 27, 1618, probably grandson of Morgan Powell of Taunton, married Elizabeth Savidge. Their son Godfrey, baptized June 7, 1599, was grandfather of Samuel Powell, first above mentioned. Samuel Powell, son of Godfrey and father of Samuel was baptized September 20, 1642, at Stoke, St. Gregory, Somersetshire, England, and was an early convert to Quakerism. He married, at Friends' Meeting, 3mo. 6, 1670, Deborah Powle, of Stoke, baptized at St. Gregory October 12, 1640, died 2mo. 6, 1679. Ann Powell, daughter of Godfrey, of North Curry, Somerset married at Greinton, Somerset, 6mo. 23, 1685, John Parsons, of Middlezoy, Somerset, and emigrated to Philadelphia the same year, bringing with them Mrs. Parson's nephew Samuel Powell, then a lad of twelve years. John Parsons was a carpenter of high ability, and Samuel Powell was trained to that trade. John Parsons was a man of some means and a member of council, and at his death in 1695, and that of his widow Ann Powell in 1712, Samuel Powell fell heir to the greater part of their joint estates. He became a prominent builder and architect. He erected the bridge over Dock Creek at Walnut street in 1718. He was an elder of Friends' Meeting in 1712, was elected member of Common Council in 1717, was advanced to the position of alderman in 1743, and served until his death, 6mo. 27, 1756, in his eighty-third year. He was the owner of over ninety houses, and lived on the north-east corner of Second and Pine streets. Pine Street Meeting House was erected on land devised to the meeting by him for that purpose. He married, 12mo. 19, 1700, Abigail, born 7mo. 28, 1679, died 7mo. 4, 1713, daughter of Barnabas and Sarah Wilcox, who came from Bedminster parish, near Bristol, Somersetshire, England, in 1683. Barnabas Wilcox was a merchant and a member of Colonial Assembly 1685; Justice of Philadelphia, 1686 to 1690.

Issue of Samuel and Abigail (Wilcox) Powell:—

Ann, b. 12mo. 10, 1702, d. 10mo. 10, 1707;

Sarah, b. 4mo. 29, 1713, d. 2mo. 10, 1751, m. Anthony Morris Jr.

SAMUEL POWEL, son of Samuel and Abigail (Wilcox) Powell, born in Philadelphia 12mo. 26, 1704-5, always spelled his name with one "l", the form in which the name was written by his remote ancestors. He became a prominent merchant of Philadelphia, was elected to Common Council of the City October 6, 1730, and became an alderman October 4, 1743. He died October 1, 1759, in the prime of a life of usefulness and business activity. He married, November 9, 1732, Mary, daughter of Anthony and Phoebe (Guest) Morris, and sister to Anthony Morris, who married his sister Sarah. She was born October 13, 1713, and died October 31, 1759.

Issue of Samuel and Mary (Morris) Powel:—

ABIGAIL, b. July 21, 1735, d. Nov. 16, 1797; m. William Griffiths; of whom later;

SAMUEL, b. Oct. 28, 1738, d. Sept. 29, 1793; m. Aug. 7, 1769, Elizabeth Willing, of whom presently;

Sarah, b. Sept. 22, 1747, d. Jan. 7, 1773; m. Jan. 20, 1768, Joseph Potts, previously m. to her cousin Mary Morris.

SAMUEL POWEL, only son of Samuel and Mary (Morris) Powel, born in Philadelphia October 28, 1738, entered College of Philadelphia, now University of Pennsylvania, May 25, 1756, and graduated with degree of Bachelor of Arts, class of 1759. After graduation he made an extended visit to Europe, traveling extensively in Great Britain and on the Continent. During his travels he kept up a constant correspondence with friends and relatives in Philadelphia, and many of his letters have been published in the Pennsylvania Magazine; while those to his uncle, Capt. Samuel Morris, have been preserved by the family, and many of them appear in a history of the Morris family prepared by Dr. Robert C. Moon. This correspondence shows that he was entertained in the best society of England and Scotland and "had the honor of being presented to his majesty."

He was a brithright member of the Society of Friends, but, while in England, was baptized by the Rev. Richard Peters, on his return to Philadelphia became a prominent member of St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal Church, and was lay deputy of that church at the convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church held at Christ's Church, November 24, 1785. He was elected to Common Council of Philadelphia in 1770, advanced to position of alderman, October 4, 1774, and, October 3, 1775, was elected Mayor, the last to serve in that office under the old charter of 1701, under which his wife's grandfather, Edward Shippen, had been the first: when the charter had been renewed in 1789, he was again elected Mayor, and from the fact that he was the last magistrate under the old charter and the first under the new, he was known as the "Patriot Mayor".

He was a man of high scholastic attainments and took a lively interest in literary and scientific subjects; he became a member of the American Philosophical Society in 1760, and took an active interest in their work. A man of public spirit and well known business ability, he was frequently consulted in affairs of state. He was intimately associated with George Washington, who was a frequent visitor at his house, now number 244 S. Third street, between Walnut and Spruce streets, and the first president held him in high esteem, as is evidenced by his journal and correspondence. Mr. and Mrs. Powel were likewise frequently entertained at Mount Vernon.

Samuel Powel was commissioned a Justice of the Philadelphia Courts April 27, 1772, and probably served until his elevation to the Mayoralty. He was made one of the board of managers of the Pennsylvania Hospital in 1778, but resigned in 1780. He was Trustee of University of Pennsylvania, and first president of Philadelphia Society for Promotion of Agriculture. He was elected to the Morris Mansion on Front street between Chestnut and Walnut streets, devised to him by his greataunt, Deborah Morris, by whose will it was directed that Senate of Pennsylvania, 1792, and filled the position of Speaker. He inherited a large fortune from his father, and gave liberal support to many philanthropic and charitable enterprises. In 1780 he contributed five thousand pounds toward provisioning the Continental troops from Pennsylvania. He died of yellow fever September 29, 1793, at his country seat "Powelton", on the west side of the Schuylkill.

He married, August 7, 1769, Elizabeth, daughter of Charles and Anne (Shippen) Willing, born February 10, 1742-3, died January 17, 1830, and they had two sons, both of whom died in infancy. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Powel adopted the youngest son of her sister Margaret (Willing) Hare, by Robert Hare.

JOHN POWELL HARE, born April 22, 1786, died at Newport, Rhode Island, June 14, 1856. To him she devised the greater part of the large estate left her by her husband, including "Powelton". He changed his name by act of legislature, to John Hare Powell. He was a colonel in the War of 1812-14, and Secretary to American Legation at the Court of St. James. He married Julia de Veaux, and descendants of his bearing the name of Powell, still reside in Philadelphia.

Abigail Powel, eldest daughter of Samuel and Mary (Morris) Powel, born in Philadelphia 5mo. 21, 1735, died November 16, 1797; married April 16, 1752, William Griffiths, of Welsh descent, said to have been a son of James Griffiths, of Swanset, South Wales, and nephew of Thomas Griffiths, who came from Jamaica to Philadelphia and engaged in the shipping trade with Isaac Norris, whose daughter Mary he married in 1717. Thomas Griffiths became prominent in the community; was a Provincial Councillor 1733-42; Keeper of the Great Seal of the Province 1732-4; Judge of Supreme Court from 1739 to his death in 1743; Mayor of Philadelphia from October, 1729, to October, 1730, and from October 1, 1733, to October 4, 1737. William Griffiths was a prominent business man of Philadelphia.

DR. SAMUEL POWEL GRIFFITHS, son of William and Abigail (Powel) Griffiths, born in Philadelphia, July 21, 1759, studied medicine in Paris, London and Edinburg, after graduation from University of Pennsylvania with degree of Bachelor of Arts, in 1781. Returning to Philadelphia he took up the practice of his profession and became one of the most eminent physicians of his time. He was Professor of Materia Medica at the University, 1791-6; was founder of the Philadelphia Dispensary; one of the founders of the Philadelphia College of Physicians, its secretary in 1788 and vice-president in 1818. He became a member of American Philosophical Society in 1785. He was a fine Greek and Latin scholar and spoke French fluently. His home for many years was at the old when the house was rebuilt the date of its original erection, 1686, with the letters "A. M." for Anthony Morris, the original builder, should be placed upon its gable. Dr. Samuel Powel Griffiths was of a retiring disposition, avoiding all ostentation both in the practice of his profession and in his extensive philanthropic work, seeking to do the greatest amount of good with the least possible show. During the yellow fever pestilence of 1793, which carried away his distinguished uncle, Samuel Powel, he stuck to his practice, as did he during the small-pox scourge of 1797-8-9 and the later pestilence of 1802-3. He died suddenly in the old Morris Mansion, May 12, 1826. He was an elder of the Society of Friends. An obituary notice of him says truly:—"As a friend he was kind, sincere, and obliging, as a husband attentive and affectionate, and as a father fond and indulgent." He married, January 3, 1787, Mary, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Tallman) Fishbourne, the "Polly Fishbourne" of "Sally Wistar's Journal", born 1760, and died September 21, 1842.

HUDSON FAMILY

Almost as little is known of the ancestry of William Hudson of York, England, father of William Hudson who came to Philadelphia in 1686, as of that of the illustrious and intrepid navigator Henry Hudson, whom John F. Watson, the annalist of Philadelphia claimed was his relative. He was an early convert to the faith and principles of Friends, and suffered persecution for conscience sake. From Besse's "Sufferings of Quakers" we quote the following, "William Hudson of York was committed to York Castle by a writ de excommunicato capiendo, on the Eighth of the Eleventh month, 1673, after a prosecution in the Ecclesiastic Court for refusing to pay an assessment toward repairing the Steeple House, and was remaining a prisoner there upwards of nine years after." He died at York, 2mo. 14, 1713. He was thrice married, his first wife Mary, whose maiden name is thought to have been Head, died 9mo. 11, 1681. He married (second), 5mo. 10, 1684, at Selby, Susannah Morley, a widow with children. She died 5mo. 14, 1700, and he married (third), 5mo. 8, 1703, Jane Waite, who died 12mo. 27, 1704-5. His children, all by his first wife, were:—

WILLIAM, b. at York, 4mo. 3, 1664, d. Philadelphia, 10mo. 16, 1742, of whom presently;
John, d. at York, England, 1687;

Mary, d. at York, England, 1674, unnm.;

Samuel, d. at York, England, 1690, unnm.;

Timothy, brought certificate from York Meeting to Philadelphia, 11mo. 6, 1688-9, but after a short visit returned to his native place.

WILLIAM HUDSON, son of William and Mary, of York, England, brought a certificate from York Meeting, without date, which is recorded at Philadelphia, and an examination of the minutes of York Meeting shows that it was granted 2mo. 2, 1686. He was a tanner, and came to Philadelphia "clear as to marriage." On the same date as that of the granting of his certificate, viz., April 2, 1686, he had purchased with John Cornwell, also of York, of William Cornthwaite, 500 acres to be laid out in Pennsylvania. They also purchased five hundred acres of Edward Atkinson, of Side, county York. This land was laid out to them by warrant dated 6mo. 11, 1686, in East Bradford township, Chester county, now Birmingham township. William Hudson did not, however, take up his residence on this or his other purchases of large tracts of virgin land in Pennsylvania, but built a tannery on Dock Creek, in what was then known as "the swamp", and built a fine brick mansion, in which he lived, set well back from Chestnut street near Third street; and Hudson's Alley, opened for access to his tan-yard and other property, still bears his name. He sold his share of his Chester county lands to John Davies, December 30, 1709, and in February following purchased of his father-in-law, Samuel Richardson, 1160 acres in Willistown township, Chester county, which he later sold in smaller tracts to actual settlers, at a handsome profit. A successful business man, and of good executive ability, he soon became identified with the affairs of the city and Province. He is named in the charter of 1701, as one of the Common Council of the city, then selected for life, or during good behavior, and was elected to Provincial Assembly in 1706. October 4, 1715, he was named by Common Council as one of the Board of Aldermen of the City, and as Associate Justice of the City Court. In 1725, he was made Mayor of the city. He was made an Elder of Friends' Meeting in 1727, and was one of the most active members of the Yearly Meeting until within a few years of his death, when he was confined to his house by infirmities, and asked to be relieved from work on special committees in which he had theretofore been actively interested. He was one of the earliest advocates of prison reform, and took a keen personal interest in hospital and charitable work, taking especial delight in visiting and relieving the poor and sick. He died 10mo. 16, 1742, in his seventy-eighth year. He married (first), 12mo. 28, 1688, at Philadelphia Meeting House, Mary, born in London 4mo. 19, 1673, daughter of Samuel Richardson, Provincial Councillor, by his wife, Eleanor, an account of whom and their descendants is given elsewhere in this volume. Mary (Richardson) Hudson died 12mo. 16, 1708-9, and he married (second) 12mo. 27, 1709-10, Hannah, widow of Robert Barber, of Darby, and sister of David Ogden, whose arrival in Merion from London, is noted in our account of the Ogden family. She survived her husband nearly seventeen years, dying 9mo. 16, 1759, aged ninety-nine years.

SWIFT FAMILY

Among the adherents of the English Church who settled in Philadelphia in Colonial days were two brothers, John Swift and Joseph Swift, and their sister, Mary Swift, who married Matthias Keen, of Philadelphia.

Their father, John Swift, brought them from Bristol, England, about 1737 or 1738, to place them in the care of their uncle, John White, a successful merchant of Philadelphia, and then returned to England. John White, an Englishman by birth, had formed a partnership with Abram Taylor, a fellow-countryman, as early as 1724. In their commercial undertakings they were very successful, and John White, with a view of offering a better business opening to the children of his sister, invited them to Philadelphia.

John White in 1741 returned to his native land, leaving his nephews and nieces in the care of his partner. He established himself at first at Bristol and afterwards, when he had retired from business, at Croydon in Surrey. His portrait by Sir Godfrey Kneller is still in the family. John White's arms as painted on his china and engraved on the silver, are:—Gules, a bordure sable charged with eight estoiles or; on a canton ermines, a lion rampant sable. Crest, —on the china, an ostrich, but on the silver a stork. John and Joseph Swift and their sister Mary, were the children of John Swift and Mary White, his wife. John was born in 1720, Mary in 1726, and Joseph on June 24, 1731. They were all born in England. The coat-of-arms of the Swifts was:—Or, a chev. Barry nebulée ar. and az. between three rebucks courant ppr.

JOHN SWIFT, who was a young gentleman fond of society, in 1740 arranged a number of dancing parties or "assemblies," as they were called at that time. In 1743 he went back to England to join his uncle, where he remained until 1747, when he returned to Philadelphia. In this city he became a successful merchant and a prominent and influential individual in the affairs and the social life of the town. In the winter of 1748-9 he was primarily instrumental, together with Lynford Lardner, also an Englishman, and John Wallace and John Inglis, both Scotchmen, in planning and organizing a series of dancing parties, known as the "Assemblies." Thus was inaugurated a long series of balls that have become historic in the annals of Philadelphia, and are known to-day as "The Philadelphia Assemblies." During the winter of 1748-9, six Assemblies were given under the management of four Directors; Lynford Lardner, John Inglis, John Wallace and John Swift. There is a tradition in the Swift family, that has come down in two different lines, that the first meeting at which the Assemblies originated was held at John Swift's house. There were fifty-nine subscribers in all, and as an invitation was extended to the family of every head of a family who subscribed, probably some two hundred persons were eligible to attend the dances. The subscription was two pounds sterling. Three manuscript relics of those gay festivities have come down to us: the rules to govern the dances, the list of the original subscribers, and the Treasurer's Account-book. Except the signatures of the subscribers, all three documents are in the handwriting of John Swift.

On October 4, 1757, John Swift was elected a Common Councilman of Philadelphia, and so continued to serve until about the end of 1764, and in that office devoted much time to the service of the city. In 1762 he was appointed by the Crown, Collector of the Port of Philadelphia, and during the ten years that he served in that office, a large part of his time was occupied in preventing the landing of cargoes without the payment of duties. He had to cope with all sorts of subterfuges on the part of the smugglers in their attempts to avoid the payment of duties. For example, sometimes the clearance papers were altered during the voyage. And on two occasions the smugglers resorted to acts of piracy in the Delaware River to accomplish their purpose, as some of his letters in the collections of The Historical Society of Pennsylvania show.

John Swift married (first), May 29, 1749, at Christ Church, Magdalene (Kollock), widow of Jasper McCall, and daughter of Jacob Kollock; (second) Rebecca Kollock, a niece of his first wife. During the latter part of his life he lived at his country seat, "Croydon Lodge", Bensalem township, Bucks county, where he died, January, 1802. A portrait of him belonged, in 1855, to his granddaughter Magdalene Peel Swift.

He immediately shot one of them and drove the others back to their cells. He was an enthusiastic supporter of Henry Clay for the presidency, 1844, and the "great pacificator" was entertained at his house for several days, while making his campaign in Philadelphia. JOSEPH SWIFT, younger son of John and Mary (White) Swift, born June 24, 1731, went to England in 1747, resided with his uncle John White at Croydon, county Surrey, and attended school at Manchester, becoming a proficient French and Latin scholar. He returned to Philadelphia on completion of his education, and entered into the mercantile business with his brother John Swift. He was a signer of the Non-importation Agreement of 1765, and one of the committee of Philadelphia merchants which included Robert Morris, Tench Francis, and others, who secured the refusal of John Hughes (who was by royal commission to distribute the obnoxious stamps), to make any effort to enforce the provisions of the Stamp Act, and was honored by a vote of thanks by the Assembly of New Jersey, passed October, 1769, for their patriotic action in that behalf. Joseph Swift was elected to Common Council of Philadelphia October 6, 1767, and was chosen as one of Board of Aldermen for the city, under the Act of March 11, 1789. He was a vestryman of Christ Church for forty years, and represented that parish in the diocesan conventions 1785-1802. He became one of the first board of trustees of the Protestant Episcopal Academy, in 1785, and filled that position until his death on December 26, 1806. He resided for many years on the west side of Front street, between Market and Chestnut, near his place of business, and later on the north side of Pine street, between Third and Fourth streets, and also had a country seat near Germantown.

CHARLES WILLING, born at Bristol, England, May 18, 1710, was reared to mercantile business, and came to Philadelphia in 1728, at the age of eighteen, to take charge of a mercantile house, said to have been established there by his family in 1726. A cousin, Thomas Willing, also came to America, and laid out a town of Willing-town, now Wilmington, Delaware. Thomas Willing, brother of Charles, also came to Philadelphia, but after a brief residence there returned to England, where he died. Charles Willing was a successful business man of much more than ordinary ability, and became a much esteemed and respected merchant, councilman and magistrate. He carried on a large foreign trade, and his many successful operations materially aided in establishing in foreign countries the reputation of his adopted city for public honor and private wealth, which it enjoyed to a marked degree in the quarter century preceding the war of the Revolution, and to his family and those of Shippen, Morris, Wharton, Biddle and others with whom it was more or less intimately associated in business and by marriage, Philadelphia is largely indebted for her commercial, political, social and intellectual prominence, in Colonial days. Charles Willing soon became identified with the affairs of his adopted city and province. He was active in organizing the Philadelphia Associators for the defense of the frontier in 1747, and was commissioned captain of a company in the Associated Regiment of Foot, commanded by Col. Abraham Taylor. He was elected to the Common Council in 1743, commissioned a Justice, 1745, made one of the Justices of the City Court in 1747, and the following year was elected Mayor of the City. He was re-commissioned Justice, 1749-52-54, was again elected Mayor, and died from ship fever contracted in the discharge of his official duties, November 30, 1754. He was one of the founders and first trustees of the Philadelphia College, later University of Pennsylvania, serving as trustee from 1749 to his death, 1754. He was a member of the vestry of Christ Church from 1735, to his death. Some estimate may be formed of the place he filled in the community from the obituary notice of him published in the Pennsylvania Gazette of December 5, 1754, which is as follows:—

"Last Saturday, after a short illness, departed this life in the forty-fifth year of his age, Charles Willing, Esquire, Mayor of this city. As it may be truly said that this community had not a more useful member, his death is justly lamented as a public loss to his country as well as most irretrievable to his family and friends. In the character of a magistrate he was patient, indefatigable, and actuated by a steady zeal for justice; as a merchant it was thought no person amongst us understood commerce in general, and the trading interests of the Province in particular, better than he, and his success in business was proportionately great; as a friend he was faithful, candid and sincere; as a husband and parent few ever exceeded him in tenderness and affection, being himself a sincere Christian he was strictly attentive to the education of his children in every virtuous qualification, and in a particular manner he was remarkable in that essential part of a parent's duty, so little considered, a regular attendance, together with his numerous family on the public worship of God, and for this accordingly they will now have reason to bless his memory, since the impressions thereby received will go further to teach them how to bear their present heavy affliction, and recommend them to the favor of the world, (degenerate as it is) than all the external advantages,—all the fortune, grace and good opinion he has left them possessed of."

Mr. Willing lived and died on Third street, in the house devised by him to his son Thomas, who succeeded him in the business. He married, January 21, 1730, Anne, born in Philadelphia, August 5, 1710, daughter of Joseph and Abigail (Grosse) Shippen. Mrs. Willing survived her husband many years, dying June 23, 1791.

THOMAS WILLING, eldest son of Charles and Anne (Shippen) Willing, born in Philadelphia, December 19, 1731, was sent by his father to England at the age of eight years, and was educated there under the supervision of his grandfather Thomas Willing, of Bristol. He was placed at a school at Wells, Somersetshire, and later spent some time in London. He returned to Philadelphia, May 19, 1749, and at once entered his father's counting house. Two years later his father made a business and fraternal visit to England, leaving Thomas in charge of his extensive business in Philadelphia, and on his return, October, 1751, was so much pleased with the manner in which the business had been handled that he made his son a partner. At the death of his father, 1754, Thomas Willing took entire charge of the business and of the family, all his nine brothers and sisters with the exception of one being minors, the youngest less than two years old. He inherited his father's business abilities and sterling qualities and successfully managed the large concerns established by his father. He took as a partner Robert Morris, the financier of the Revolution, under the firm name of Willing & Morris, of whom Mr. Griswold truly says, "to the great credit and well known patriotism of the house of Willing & Morris the country owed its extrication from those trying pecuniary embarrassments so familiar to the readers of Revolutionary history." What was true of it then was equally true during the twenty years preceding the Revolutionary struggle. Possessed of the finest business qualifications and a thorough knowledge of the needs of the country, and practicing the strictest business integrity in all their transactions, they carried on an immense trade and became one of the best and most favorably known commercial houses in America. Thomas Willing's name heads the list of the merchants of Philadelphia to sign the Non-importation Resolutions of 1765. He was President of the Provincial Conference of Representatives of the different Colonies, held at Philadelphia, July 15, 1774, and represented his State in the Continental Congress of 1775 and 1776. In the latter he voted against the Declaration of Independence, for the reasons that he did not believe his country was at that time equal to the conflict that must ensue,—and because as a delegate from Pennsylvania, he felt that he had not been authorized either by the State Assembly or by the voice of the people at large to join in such action. He, however, gave his best energies and his money to its support when adopted. He was also a member of Committee of Safety of the Province June 30 to October 19, 1775. Prior to the Revolution he had filled the position of Justice of the Supreme Court, 1767-76, being with John Lawrence and John Morton, the last to act under the old constitution. When Congress chartered the Bank of North America, to assist the Government in raising funds to pay the expenses of the war, it was made part of the enactment that Thomas Willing should be its president, and the Pennsylvania Legislature confirmed that enactment, March 26, 1782. This bank was the agent that enabled Robert Morris to reclaim the finances of the country, and Willing, as its official head in all matters, was unanimously re-elected at each annual election, when the Bank of the United States was organized he was induced to surrender the presidency of the Bank of North America to accept that of the new financial institution, and managed its affairs with the same eminent ability that had characterized his administration of the former. In municipal affairs he held the same prominent place as in Provincial and State. He was elected to Common Council of the City, October 5, 1755, became a member of Board of Aldermen, October 2, 1758, and Mayor, October 4, 1763, and represented the city in the Provincial Assembly for the years 1764-5-6. He died in Philadelphia, January 18, 1821, in his ninetieth year. To few men in any age has been vouchsafed so long a successful and honorable career, whose lives ran through such trying and epoch-making times as did that of Thomas Willing. He was possessed in a high degree of those sterling qualities of probity, fidelity, and stability, that go to the making up of a model official and business man, and he had and held the public esteem throughout his long career. He was an active, enterprising and successful business man for sixty years, and held public position for nearly as long a period.

ROBERT HARE, son of Robert and Margaret (Willing) Hare, the distinguished chemist and philosopher, "whose name for half of a century was familiar to men of science as a chemical philosopher and to cultivators of the useful arts throughout the civilized world", was born in Philadelphia January 17, 1781. He received a fair academic education and in early life managed the business of an extensive brewery established by his father, an Englishman of strong mind, who early affiliated himself with the institutions of his adopted country, and was honored by public confidence. Young Hare soon abandoned business for the study of science, attending lectures in his native city, and united himself with the Chemical Society of Philadelphia, to whom he communicated in 1801, a description of his "hydrostatic blow-pipe," in a "Memoir" republished in Tulloch's Philosophical Magazine, London, in 1802, and also in Annals de Chime, vol. 45. This apparatus was the earliest and perhaps the most remarkable of his many original contributions to science, and gave evidence of a highly philosophic mind. He experimented with Professor Silliman and with him constructed in 1803, for Yale College laboratory, the first pneumatic trough, in which was incorporated his new invention, and he received the Rumford Medal, from the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He also perfected the voltaic battery, introducing his invention of the "Deflagorator."

Professor Hare was called to the chair of Chemistry of University of Pennsylvania in 1818, which he continued to fill until his resignation in 1847, at which time he was made Emeritus Professor. In 1816 he invented a galvanic instrument called the "Calorimotor," introducing a new theory of galvanism, and his "Deflagorator," above referred to, followed in 1820. Dr. Hare published a number of papers and pamphlets on scientific subjects since much quoted, and considered valuable contributions to chemical science. He was an ardent patriot and student of political economy; was first a Federalist and later a Whig, and published a number of works on political and financial questions which were marked by vigorous thought and large views. He was a life member of the Smithsonian Institute, to which he gave all his chemical and physical apparatus. Dr. Robert Hare died in Philadelphia May 15, 1858. Many tributes to his memory and worth in the realm of science and literature were published in the newspapers and other periodicals of the day, and an excellent account of his scientific attainments of some length appeared in the Journal of Science for July, 1858.

Dr. Hare married, September 1811, Harriet Clark, daughter of John Innis Clark, of Providence, Rhode Island, by his wife Lydia Brown. She was born 1782, and died March 19, 1869.

BALCH FAMILY

Among those who crossed the Atlantic about the middle of the seventeenth century to seek their fortune in the New World, was John Balch of Somersetshire, England. The family was settled in that shire from very early times. In 1225, Edward Balch was living in the Hundred of Chyu, in 1327, William Balch was taxed at Purve near Bridgwater, and in 1492, Robert Balch became incumbent of the church at Hazelbury. William Balch of Higham, county Somerset, who died in 1532-3, was living before Columbus crossed the Atlantic to America, as his son John Balch of Horton, County Somerset, was born 1497, in the reign of Richard the Second. In the Visitation of Somerset in 1623 by the Heralds of the College of Arms, the right was confirmed to the family through George Balch of Horton, Somerset, to blazon on their shield, "Barry of six, or an az. on a bend engrailed gules, three spear heads ar.," and to bear for a crest, a demi griffin rampant. These arms are recorded in Harley manuscripts 1141-5-1559, in the British Museum. The motto used by the family is, "Coeur et courage font l'ouvrage." A branch of the family that settled as early as the sixteenth century in Bridgwater gave three members to Parliament, and three mayors to the town.

John Balch came from county Somerset to the Province of Maryland, 1658, of his own free will, paying himself for his transportation. One of his sons, Thomas Balch, born in Maryland, was of a restless and adventurous disposition, and went as a very young man to England. There he knew Richard Baxter and was much influenced by that eminent divine. When "King Monmouth" raised his standard in south-western England in June, 1685, Thomas Balch joined the Duke's forces and became a captain in his army. After the disastrous battle of Sedgemoor, July 5, 1685, in which Monmouth's army was routed and his cause destroyed, Thomas Balch found it advisable, owing to the activities of the notorious Colonel Kirke and his men, known as "Kirke's lambs," to leave England for the New World. Accordingly, shortly after, he sailed, disguised, from Bristol and landed at Annapolis, Maryland. His part in Monmouth's rebellion was the thread round which George Parker, at one time Mayor of Bridgwater, wrapped an account of Monmouth's rising in a book entitled, "Tom Balch; an Historical Tale of West Somerset during Monmouth's Rebellion", published at Bridgwater, 1879. After returning to Maryland, Thomas Balch married Agnes Somerville.

One of Captain Balch's grandsons, James Balch, after visiting England, married Anne Goodwyn, of the Eastern Shore of Maryland, January 19, 1737. The second son of James and Anne (Goodwyn) Balch was the Rev. Dr. Stephen Bloomer Balch, of Georgetown, D. C., who was born on Deer Creek, Harford county, Maryland, April 5, 1747. He graduated at Princeton College, 1774, receiving the A. B. degree. At Princeton he was a member of American Whig Society. On October 1, 1775, he was commissioned Captain in the Calvert county, Maryland, militia; he held this command for three years, and was in actual service against the enemy December 1, 1775-December 1, 1777. In 1778, when the feeling was universal that, owing to the defeat of Burgoyne and the French alliance, our independence was secured, he resigned from the service in order to give himself up more assiduously to preparing for the Presbyterian ministry. He was licensed to preach the Gospel by the Presbytery of Donegal June 17, 1779. In 1780 he was called by the Presbyterians of Georgetown on the Potomac to establish a church among them. Accepting, he arrived there March 16, 1780, and remained in charge of the church he founded until his death fifty-three years afterwards.

Among Dr. Balch's friends were George Washington, who sometimes attended his church, Thomas Jefferson and Albert Gallatin. A few weeks after the death of General Washington, Dr. Balch gave notice that he would speak of the life and services of the dead statesman. He preached in the open air to more than a thousand people, from the last verse of the tenth chapter of the book of Esther, "For Mordecai the Jew, was next unto King Ahasuerus, and great among the Jews, and accepted of the multitude of his brethren, seeking the wealth of his people, and speaking peace to all his seed." On account of the friendly relations that had long existed between the United States and the Muscovite Empire, the defeat of Napoleon in his Russian campaign was celebrated in June, 1813, in the District of Columbia, the religious exercises being held at Dr. Balch's church, the Russian Minister, M. Daschkoff, attending.

Dr. Balch was a firm believer in the rights of the individual, and was in favor of gradually liberating the slaves and sending them to Liberia. He was opposed to slavery and corresponded on the subject with Wilberforce. He was a lover of books, and among the classics preferred Horace to Virgil. In 1818 Princeton University conferred upon him the degree of D. D. He published, February 1, 1791, the earliest publication printed in the District of Columbia: "Two Sermons on the Certain and Final Perseverance of the Saints." And ten years afterwards, 1801, he published "A Series of Letters addressed to the Rev. Adam Freeman," entitled "A Vindication of the right of infants to the Sacrement of Baptism according to the Scripture." He died September 22, 1833, as he was preparing to go to church. He was the leading divine in the District of Columbia, and in such esteem was he held by his fellow townsmen, that at his funeral the members of the City Councils of Georgetown attended in a body, the town was draped in mourning, all places of business were closed, and ministers of all denominations joined in the funeral cortege. His remains now rest in Oak Hill cemetery, where W. W. Corcoran has placed on the wall of the chapel a mural tablet bearing the following inscription:

Dr. Balch married at Georgetown, June 10, 1781, Elizabeth, daughter of Col. George Beall of Georgetown. She was descended from Col. Ninian Beall of the Rock of Dumbarton, Prince George's county, Maryland, commander-in-chief of the provincial forces of Maryland, and also from Col. Thomas Brooke of Brookfield, Prince George's county, Maryland, President of the Council and Acting Governor of Maryland.

One of Dr. Balch's sons, Judge Lewis P. W. Balch, was born at Georgetown, D. C., December 31, 1787, graduated at Princeton College in 1806. He was a member of Whig Hall. He studied law with his kinsman, Chief Justice Roger Brooke Taney, and was admitted to Maryland Bar. Judge Balch's second son, Thomas Balch, was born at Leesburg, Loudon county, Virginia, July 23, 1821. He entered Columbia College in 1838 with the class of 1842. At the end of his freshman year he received a silver medal for leading the class in mathematics, and his classmate, Abram S. Hewitt, said that "Tom Balch was the master of English style in the class." He studied law with Stephen Cambreling, was admitted to the New York bar in 1845, to the Philadelphia bar in 1850, and to the bar of the Supreme Court of the United States in 1855. In 1853 he was elected Domestic Secretary and a member of the council of Historical Society of Pennsylvania. In 1854, along with William Rotch Wister, William Logan Fisher, Hartman Kuhn and others, he was one of the founders of the Philadelphia Cricket Club, and the same year he was an original member of the Seventy-six Society. He traveled in Europe, 1859-73, residing chiefly at Paris.

In 1864, Thomas Balch, who was present at Cherbourg during the fight between the Kearsarge and the Alabama (June 19, 1864), proposed—after studying the works of Grotius, the Duc de Sully, Castel de Saint-Pierre, Leibniz, Bentham, Kant, and the Saint Croix River boundary case and other precedents, —he proposed to various European jurists, that the differences between the United States and England arising out of the cruise of the Alabama and kindred causes, should be argued before an International Court of Arbitration. In November, 1864, Mr. Balch, during a visit home, urged upon some of his friends, among them General Nathaniel P. Banks, the submission of the Anglo-American differences to such a court. General Banks requested Mr. Balch to see President Lincoln, and arranged an interview. The President questioned Mr. Balch, then lately returned from Europe, largely about trans-Atlantic affairs. The President ridiculed the Mexican Empire and said that he considered it "a pasteboard concern on which we won't waste a man nor a dollar. It will soon tumble to pieces and, maybe, bring the other down with it." President Lincoln approved of Mr. Balch's suggestion that the difficulties with England should be argued before a Court of Arbitration, as also afterwards did Richard Cobden, James Lorimer, Prévost-Paradol and others. In an open letter, to which Horace Greeley gave a prominent place in the Tribune, May 13, 1865, Mr. Balch publicly expounded his idea of referring the outstanding differences between the two countries to a Court of Arbitration. In the fourth section of that letter he said:

"IV. That the best manner of composing such a Court of Arbitration would be, that each party should select some competent jurist, those two to select an umpire. The claims to be presented, proved and argued before this Court, whose decisions should be final and without appeal."

From this seed the Geneva Tribunal grew. Mr. Balch returned to Philadelphia, October, 1873. In 1875 he was elected an honorary member of the American Whig Society of Princeton University. The same year he was one of the founders of the Rittenhouse Club of Philadelphia. He published and edited, "Letters and Papers relating chiefly to the Provincial History of Pennsylvania," generally known as "The Shippen Papers," 1855; "The Examination of Joseph Galloway," 1855; "Papers relating to the Maryland Line during the Revolution," 1857; "Les Francais en Amérique pendant la Guerre de l' Indépendance des Etats-Unis, 1777-1783," 1872; "International Courts of Arbitration," 1874; "The Journal of Claude Blanchard," 1876, etc. He died at his home in Philadelphia March 29, 1877. He married, October 5, 1852, Emily, daughter of Joseph Swift of Philadelphia. She is a member of the Acorn Club, and is a member and was Vice-president of the Colonial Dames of America.

Issue of Thomas and Emily (Swift) Balch:

BEVAN FAMILY

The name of Bevan had its origin in the old Cymric custom prior to the use of hereditary surnames, of designating each child of a common parent by connecting his given name with that of his father, by the word "ap", meaning "son" thus John, son of Evan, was "John ap Evan"; Evan, son of Richard, was "Evan ap Richard"; John, son of Rhys, or Rees, a common given name among the Welch, was "John ap Rhys." From the three names mentioned originated the names Bevan, Prichard and Presse or Price, common among descendants of early Welsh settlers in Pennsylvania, formed by the incorporation of the "ap" into the parental given name, after the emigration of the family to America.

John Bevan, first to bear the name in its modern form, came to Pennsylvania in 1683, from Glamorganshire, Wales, and was a son of Evan ap John, of Treverigg, Glamorganshire, and Jane, daughter of Richard ap Evan of Collena, and was descended in a direct line, through fourteen generations from Iestan ap Gwrgan, the last prince of Glamorgan, 1018, to 1090, and through his mother a lineal descendant of Edward III, King of England. The land upon which he was born in 1646, and upon which he died and was buried eighty years later, after an active and useful career, twenty years of which was spent in Pennsylvania, had been owned and occupied by his direct ancestors for probably ten centuries.

Iestan ap Gwrgan, before referred to, became hereditary ruler of the territory known as Glamorgan, at the death of his father in 1030. His direct male ancestors had held sovereignty over it for many generations, but owing to the arrogance and opposition of a younger brother, Iestan's uncle, Howell, was elected ruler in his stead, and was succeeded by Iestan in the year 1043. In 1088, when Iestan was seventy years of age, he became involved in a war with Rhys ap Tewdyr, Prince of South Wales, by whom he was defeated in battle, and having lost a number of his castles, Iestan sought the aid of the Normans, who thereby gained a foothold and subsequently deprived Iestan of sovereignty and lands and he became an exile, first, at Glastonbury, later at Bath, and finally found refuge in the monastery of Llangenys, in Monmouthshire, where he died, in obscurity and forgotten, at the great age, it is said, of one hundred and twenty-nine years. He had married several times. By his first wife Denis, a sister to Bleddyn ap Cynfyn, Prince of Powys, he had six sons and one daughter; by his second wife, Angharad, daughter of Elystan Gloddrudd, Lord of Ferllwg, he had two sons, Madog and Rhys, and two daughters.

Fitzhamon, leader of the Norman invaders, appropriated Glamorgan, which he divided into nineteen parts, and some of the sons of the exiled lord, Iestan ap Gwrgan, being popular with the people, and having taken no part in opposing Fitzhamon, four shares of their father's lands were set apart to them, and one share each to two of his sons-in-law.

Madog ap Iestyn, son of Iestan ap Gwrgan, by his second wife, was one of those who shared in the division of his father's lands in Glamorgan, receiving from Fitzhamon, the Norman invader, the grant of the Lordship of Ruthyn and the lands lying between the rivers Taff and Ely. He married Janet, daughter of Sytsyll, Lord of Upper Gwent, and had one son, Howell ap Madog, who married a daughter of Griffith ap Ivor Bach, and his eldest son was,

Cynfrig ap Howell, who succeeded to the Lordship of Llantrithyd and Radyr, and died prior to 1280. He married Angharad, daughter and co-heiress of Lewis ap Rhys ap Rosser, and his eldest son was,

Llewelyn ap Cynfrig, who possessed the lands of Llantrithyd and was living in 1280 and probably as late as 1317. He married a daughter of Sir Ralph Madog and had seven children, the fourth of whom,

Ievan Mady ap Llewlyn, had the lands of Bwlch Gwyn, which descended to his only son, Llewelyn ap Ievan Mady, who is called "of Abergorky". He was three times married and by his second wife, a daughter of Llewelyn ap Ivorhir, had nine children, the fourth of whom was,

Thomas Ddu, (that is Thomas the dark) who married Crisly, daughter of Howell ap Philip hir, and had three sons, the second of whom was.

Jenkin ap Thomas Ddu, who married a daughter of David Lloyd ap Madoc, and had a son,

Ralph ap Jenkin, who married the daughter and heiress of Philip Vawr, and had five children, the second of whom was,

Jenkin ap Ralph, who was living, circa 1520. He married (first) Gwennlian, and (second) Margaret, daughter of Richard ap Ievan. By his first wife he had two children, the eldest of whom was,

John ap Jenkin, who was living, circa 1550. He married Gwennlian, daughter of Ievan Morgan, descended from Bach ap Grono, and had six children, the eldest of whom was,

Ievan (Evan) ap John, who died prior to November 7, 1632. He married Wenllian, daughter of David ap Llewelyn ap Howell, by whom he had six children, the eldest of whom,

John ap Evan, of Treverigg, was grandfather of John Bevan, the Pennsylvania emigrant of 1683. Treverigg, in the parish of Llantrisant, was part of the original possessions of Iestan ap Gwrgan, set apart to his son, Madog ap Iestan, and descended in a direct line to John ap Evan, and is located a few miles from Cardiff, in Glamorganshire. The estate is about two miles long and one mile wide and is now divided into three farms. The ancient house in which John Bevan resided, near the little Quaker Meeting House, is still standing. The rooms, which are very large, are timbered in heavy oak and the floors are paved with stone, as usual in Wales at that time. A mill, in operation in John Bevan's time, is also still standing.

John ap Evan, of Treverigg, was born about 1585, died prior to July 19, 1630, and was buried in Llantrisant Church, where his tomb can still be seen. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Richards, who was living in 1630. They had one son, Evan ap John, of whom presently; and four daughters. The will of John ap Evan remaining on file at Llandaf Registry, Glamorganshire, bears date June 27, 1630, and was probated July 19, 1630. It gives legacies to Llandal Cathedral, and Llantrisant Church, and to his four daughters. To his son, Evan John, he devises his "three principals" or farms, in Treverigg. To his wife, "Elizabeth Thomas", he devises the occupancy of his tenements called Kae Banall and Kystille for life.

Evan ap John, only son of John ap Evan and his wife Elizabeth, was evidently of age at his father's death in 1630. He married Jane, daughter of Richard ap Evan, of Collena, an estate in Llantrisant Parish, by his wife, Catharine, daughter of Thomas Bassett, of Miscin, by his wife Mary, daughter of David Evans, whose wife Catharine was a great-great-granddaughter of Henry Somerset, second Earl of Worcester, who was a grandson of Henry Plantagenet Beaufort, beheaded in 1463, and the latter was a great-great-grandson of Edward III, King of England, and his wife, Philippa, daughter of William III, Count of Hainault and Holland, by his wife Joanna, daughter of Charles of Valois, son of King Philip of France. Hon. Samuel W. Pennypacker, a descendant of John Bevan, has traced the line back many generations further through a number of royal lines. Evan ap John and his wife Elizabeth had four sons, all of whom assumed the surname of Bevan, and one daughter who died unmarried.

JOHN BEVAN, eldest son of Evan ap John, born on the ancestral estate of Treverigg, parish of Llantrisant, county of Glamorganshire, in the year 1646, inherited the estate of Treverigg at the death of his father about 1665, and on coming of age made liberal provision for his brothers and sisters who were unprovided for. He became a member of the Society of Friends and was for many years an esteemed minister of that sect, travelling extensively on that service. He became interested in founding a colony of Welsh Quakers in Pennsylvania, and as agent for a company of them purchased 2,000 acres of William Penn, a part of which was surveyed in Haverford township, Chester county, and about 300 acres in Merion, Philadelphia county. He also purchased a tract of land for his brother, Charles Bevan, and made several purchases in his own name. On the 10th of the 7th month (September) 1683, a certificate was granted by the Friends Meeting at Treverigg for John Bevan, his wife Barbara, and their children, to remove to Pennsylvania. They were accompanied by Ralph Lewis and a number of other Welsh Quakers who settled near them. His land was laid out in different parts of Philadelphia and Chester counties, and he settled on a tract of 300 acres in Merion, including the present site of Wynnewood station on the Pennsylvania railroad, and adjoining the line of Haverford township, Chester county. He early became interested in the affairs of his adopted country and was commissioned a Justice of Philadelphia county, November 6, 1685, and was re-commissioned November 2, 1689. He was returned as a member of Colonial Assembly in 1687-95-99-1700, and probably served continually in that body from 1687. As before stated, he was a minister among Friends and travelled extensively in the ministry, making several visits to his native land and to New England and other parts of the Colonies. In 1694 he visited Wales, his return to Pennsylvania being noted in a letter written by Rees Thomas to his father-in-law in Wales, under date of "ye 29th day of Ye 3d. Mo. 1695," which says, "My unkle John Bevan came over very well and had a good voyage, he told me he had seen thee twice, etc." He again crossed in 1698, and travelled through New England in 1701. In 1704, as given in a "Journal", under his own hand several years later, he experienced "a weighty concerne to return to my native country and that chiefly on Truth's account. I laid it before my wife and she could not be easy to stay behind me and we came over in the year 1704." They were accompanied by their youngest daughter, Barbara, their only child remaining unmarried, and she died in Wales, soon after their arrival there. They landed at Shields, Northumberland, and after attending meeting there, set forward for their old home in Glamorganshire, Wales, a distance of near three hundred miles, visiting a number of Meetings by the way, and the journal continues, "about the beginning of the eighth month 1704, we came to our home at Treveyricke". He died at Treverigg, aged eighty years, his will bearing date March, 1724-5, being probated October 21, 1726. The will mentions the 300 acre plantation in Merion as having been given to his son, Evan Bevan, prior to his decease. Another plantation in Merion, he devises to his daughter-in-law, Eleanor Bevan, for life, then to go to his grandchildren: Evan, Aubrey and Charles Bevan.

John Bevan married, 1665, Barbara, daughter of William Aubrey, of Pencoyd, sometime Sheriff of Glamorganshire, who also traces back to Edward III, King of England.

Stiant Awbrey, founder of the Aubrey family in Great Britain, was "second brother to the Lord Awbrey, Earle of Bullen and Earle Marechal of France, and came to England with William ye Conqueror, in Anno 1066."

Sir Rinalt Awbrey, son of Stiant, married a daughter of the Earle of Clare and Priany, and their second son, William Awbrey, of Aberkynfrig, county Brecknock, Wales, married Julia, daughter of Sir William Gunter, Knight. Their son,

Thomas Awbrey, married Anne, daughter of Cayrawe (Carewe), baron of Cayrawe, and their son,

Thomas Awbrey, of Aberkynfrig, Constable and Ranger of the Forest of Brecon, married Juhan, daughter of Trakaerne ap Einion, lord of Comond, and their son,

Thomas Awbrey Goch, (i. e. red haired) married Nest, daughter of Owan Gethyn, of Glyn Taway, and their son,

Richard Awbrey, married Creslie, daughter of Phe ap Eledr, and their son,

Gwalter Awbrey, married Juhan, daughter and heiress of Rees Morgan ap Einion, of Carmarthen, and their son,

Morgan Awbrey, of Aberkynfrig, married Alice, daughter of Watkin Thomas David Lloyd, and their son, Jenkin Awbrey, Esquire, married Gwenlliam, daughter of Owain ap Griffith, Esquire, of Tal y Lyn, and their son, Hophin Awbrey, married daughter of John Griffith of Gwyn, Esquire, and their son,

William Awbrey, Esquire of Aberkynfrig, who died June 27, 1547, married Jane Herbert, widow of Thomas Lloyd, and daughter of Sir Richard Herbert, of Montgomery Castle, who was Gentleman Usher to King Henry VIII, and resided at Blackhall where he dispensed a lavish hospitality with great luxury. He was the second son of Sir Richard Herbert, of Coldbrook House, near Abergavenny, Monmouthshire, who was slain at Banbury in 1469. Of him his great-great-grandson writes as "that incomparable hero, who twice passed thro a great army of Northern men alone, with his pole axe in his hand and returned without mortal hurt." He married Margaret, daughter of Thomas ap Griffith Nicholas, of Dynevor, and sister of the renowned Sir Rhys ap Thomas, who slew Richard III on Bosworth Field. Sir Richard Herbert was the second son of Sir William ap Thomas, who was knighted in the year 1426 and died 1446. He acquired the lands and Castle of Raglan, from his mother's family, the Morleys. He was with Henry V, at Agincourt in 1415 and was known as William Thomas Herbert. He was the fifth son of Thomas ap Gwillinn of Perthir by his wife Maud, daughter and heiress of Sir John Morley, Knight, and grandson of Jenkin ap Adam, Lord of Kevondygewydd, who lived in the time Edward III and Richard II, Kings of England, and said to have been a descendant of a Norman family famous at the time of the Conquest.

Richard Awbrey, of Aberkynfrig, was the eldest son of William and Jane (Herbert) Awbrey, and inherited the lands of Aberkynfrig at the death of his father, but sold them to his cousin, Dr. William Awbrey. He married Margaret, daughter of Thomas Gunter, and died in 1580, leaving a son,

Richard Awbrey, of Llanelyw, whose tombstone, forming part of the pavement of the chancel in the church of Llanlyw, bears this inscription, "Here lyeth the body of Richard Awbrey of Llanelyw, Gent, who married Anne Vaughan, daughter to William Vaughan of Lanelyw, who had issue, William, Richard, Thomas, John, Theophilus and Elizabeth. Died the 23 day of September 1646."

The arms of the Awbrey and Vaughan families are likewise engraved upon the tombstone.

Thomas Awbrey, third son of Richard and Anne, married, in 1646, his cousin, Elizabeth Awbrey, daughter of his father's brother William, and had by her ten children, the second of which,

William Awbrey, married as his second wife, Letitia, daughter of William Penn, the founder. A daughter Martha became a member of the Society of Friends and emigrated with John and Barbara (Awbrey) Bevan to Pennsylvania and was married to Rees Thomas at Haverford Meeting, June 18, 1692. The exact relationship between Barbara (Awbrey) Bevan and Martha Awbrey, who accompanied her to Pennsylvania and married Rees Thomas, has not been determined.

Barbara (Awbrey) Bevan was much devoted to charity and religious work among the poor, both in Pennsylvania and in Wales. She accompanied her husband on his final return to his native town of Treverigg and died there as stated in his Journal, February 26, 1710-11 "at the age of seventy-three years and four months, after a married life of upwards of forty-five years."

She married there, in January of 1756, William Henry, one of the prominent citizens of that county. The Henrys are of Scotch ancestry. Robert and Mary A. ELIZABETH HENRY, eldest child of Hon. William and Sabina (Schropp) Henry, born in Northampton county, Pennsylvania, October 15, 1782; was educated at the well known Female Seminary at Bethlehem. Married, August 23, 1804, John Jordan, son of Frederick and Catharine (Eckel) Jordan.

Frederick Jordan, of French extraction, was born in county Kent, England, in September of 1744. In early manhood, he came to Pennsylvania with his brother Mark, and shortly after settled in Alexandria township, Hunterdon county, New Jersey, where he purchased a farm of one hundred and forty-two acres and erected a flour mill. He subsequently purchased another mill property at Hickory Tavern, same county, of both of which he died possessed. During the greater part of the Revolution, the Jordan mills were kept busy grinding grain for the use of the army.

When the seat of war was removed southward, Frederick Jordan entered the army, January 1, 1781, as a corporal in the company of Capt. Samuel Hendry, Second Regiment New Jersey Continental Line, Col. Elias Dayton, and on May 1 was promoted sergeant. His services in the Yorktown campaign, with his regiment, are worthy of record. On August 1st his regiment and others were mustered at Dobb's Ferry, New York, and on the 19th crossed the Hudson and marched to Paramus, New Jersey. The following day the march was continued to Second river, and on the 21st to Springfield, where they went into camp. On September 1st the New Jersey regiment, with others of the army in the division of Maj. Gen. Benjamin Lincoln, crossed the Delaware at Trenton in boats, and bivouacked on the Neshaminy Creek, Bensalem, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, and the next day marched through Philadelphia and encamped on the west side of the Schuylkill river. By September 6th the Jersey troops reached the Head of Elk, Maryland, and on finding that sufficient transportation by water could not be furnished there, they marched to Plumb Point, where they embarked, and on September 19th anchored in York river, Virginia. The following day they entered the James river, passing the French fleet in Hampton Roads, and anchored off Newport News. On September 23rd a number of companies were landed near Williamsburg, and the following day the remainder, after some difficulty, joined their regiment.

Under general orders, September 24th, the two New Jersey regiments with the Rhode Island battalion were formed into a brigade, with Col. Dayton in command. On the march of the army to Yorktown, Gen. Clinton's and Col. Dayton's brigades established the advance line on the left of the American troops, and on the 29th they began to throw up earthworks under direction of Gen. Duportail, commander of the corps of engineers. When Cornwallis abandoned his outer works they were occupied by the allied forces. Col. Dayton on October 1st, being assigned to court-martial duty, Col. Matthias Ogden, of the First Regiment, was appointed to the command of the brigade. Four days later ground was broken for the first parallel by Gen. Lincoln's troops, and on October 8th orders were issued to form the Jersey troops into one regiment, under Col. Ogden. The same day the French troops bombarded the British left, which was taken up by the Americans, during which Ogden's men were busy making gabions, fascines and pickets. On the night of October 11th the second parallel was made by Baron Steuben's division. Six days later the allied troops had all their artillery in position, prepared for a cannonade of two days, to be followed by a general assault on the British works, but Cornwallis sent commissioners to treat for the surrender. Two days later the surrender took place, Col. Ogden's regiment being in the receiving line.

On October 27th the Jersey troops were employed in levelling the British works, after which duty they marched by land to the Head of Elk, where they joined the army transported by water, and continued the march to Morristown, New Jersey, where the Jersey troops went into winter quarters.

In March, 1783, John N. Cummings was Lieutenant-Colonel Commandant of the regiment, and on June 5th Sergt. Jordan was furloughed at New Windsor, on the Hudson, until the ratification of a definite treaty of peace, and finally was honorably discharged by proclamation of the Continental Congress, November 3, 1783.

Frederick Jordan married, 1769, Catherine, daughter of Henry and Susanna Eckel. She was born in Redminster township, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, December 28, 1750, died in Alexandria township, Hunterdon county, New Jersey, July 1, 1786. He died August 20, 1784, and both are buried in the churchyard of St. Thomas Protestant Episcopal Church. They had issue: John, born September 1, 1770; Frederick; Mary; Catherine; Henry.

JOHN JORDAN, son of Frederick and Catherine (Eckel) Jordan, born in Alexandria township, Hunterdon county, New Jersey, September 1, 1770, was but fourteen years of age when his father died, and his mother dying two years later, he came to Philadelphia and entered the counting house of his uncle, Godfrey Haga, the eminent merchant and philanthropist, and in 1793 succeeded him in the business there. He died in Philadelphia, February 17, 1845, and his wife December 15, 1844.

John Ewing, son of John and Sarah (Yeates) Ewing, was born in Lancaster, June 22, 1755. He married, 1795, Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas and Margaret Keen, and had one daughter, Margaret. RAWLE FAMILY

The Rawle family that has for over two centuries been prominently identified with the professional, business and social life of Philadelphia, came of ancient lineage in Great Britain, and was probably of Norman origin. The surname Rawle is doubtless derived from the Norman Radulphus, or Ralph, and its French diminutive Raoul, which in its turn came from the Norse Rollo. In 1267 Rogerus de Raule is mentioned in an Inquisition post mortem; and in 1273 appears Henricus de Raule. Families of the name were at one time, and at the present day a few are still to be found, scattered along the coast of the British Channel from Tintagel and Boscastle in Cornwall, through Clovelly, Ilfracombe and Lynton in Devonshire, and Oare, Porlock and Minehead in Somersetshire. In 1412, John Raule and Simon Rale appear in the records of Somersetshire, and John Rawle and John de Releg in 1428, and there are indications that this last was nearest the original spelling of the name. In 1523 John Rawell was assessed in the last mentioned county and his widow as Cecilia Rawle in 1546, but in both their wills their surname was spelled Rawlie. In certain localities in later years, persons of the name of Rawle were and still are living, indeed sometimes on the identical estates on which centuries ago a family named Raleigh resided. The original seat in Devonshire of that family was named Raleigh, and it possessed as early as 1398 an estate in the neighboring county of Hereford upon which, in 1607, one Henry Rawle resided. At Raleigh, or, as it is now spelled, Rawleigh, Raleigh, Bishop of Winchester, was born in 1244. As early as the reign of Henry II. (1154-1189), the name appears also in Somersetshire in the grant of the manor of Nettlecomb to Hugh de Raleigh.

The Rawle family of America is descended from the Rawle family, lords of Tresparret and other manors, seated at Hennett, in the parish of St. Juliot, in the Hundred of Lesnewth on the north coast of Cornwall, near the ancient harbor of Boscastle, formerly Bottreux Castle. The estate and barton house of Hennett, adjacent to the Parish church of St. Juliot, was the home of the Rawle family in the middle of the fifteenth century. They also became lessees of crown lands there and of the rectory of St. Juliot, which, as shown by a suit in chancery in 1601 was granted in 1576 by Nicholas Rawle, of the Inner Temple, London, to his father, William Rawle, from whom it descended to his son William Rawle, the plaintiff in the suit of 1601. The coat-of-arms of the Rawle family of St. Juliot, county Cornwall, were, "Sable, three swords, two with their points in base, the middle one in chief." Crest, An arm embowed in armour proper, holding in gauntlet a sword, argent, hilt or.

William Rawle, father of Nicholas before mentioned, was living at St. Juliot prior to 1550. As was not uncommon in those days he had two sons by the name of William, the elder of whom, the plaintiff of 1601, continued at St. Juliot, where he died in 1605. His will, bearing date March 6, 1604-5, directs that he be buried at the church of St. Juliot, and devises to his wife the tenement of "Hennett," during her widowhood; to his son Edward lands in parish of Davidstowe; makes eldest son Francis and wife Jane the executors, and his "brother-William Rawle" and Richard Westlake, overseers. The widow died in 1636. William the testator, above-mentioned, rebuilt "Hennett" during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and caused the coat-of-arms of the Tudor family to be moulded in plaster on the gable wall of the room over the hall where they may still be seen.

Much of the land in the Parish of St. Juliot still remains in the female line of the Rawle family. Right Rev. Richard Rawle D. D., President of Codrington College, Barbadoes, and Bishop of Trinidad, the last male of that branch of the family, being also Lord of the Manor of Tretarret, having died childless in 1689, devised his estates to Edmund Valleck, the son of his sister.

WILLIAM RAWLE the younger, mentioned as overseer in will of his brother William, had two sons—Francis, who removed to Rochester, county Kent, and died there in 1628, a young man, and,

WILLIAM RAWLE, second son, who remained at St. Juliot, and died there in 1646, leaving three sons:—

William Rawle, of St. Juliot, d. 1727; by wife Dorothy had children Elizabeth, Grace, Edward, and Katharine;

Edward Rawle, also of St. Juliot, m. Grace Shepherd; had children, William, Thomasine, Mary, Edward, and Richard and three others d. inf.;

FRANCIS RAWLE, became member of Society of Friends and emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1686 with son Francis; of whom presently.

FRANCIS RAWLE (2), was born at St. Juliot, county Cornwall, but was a resident of Plymouth, county Devon, in 1660, prior to which he had embraced the tenets of "the people called Quakers", as Besse gives his name as one of the twenty persons taken from a Meeting of Friends and imprisoned in the Castle of Exon, 3mo. 20, 1660. On October 4, 1663, Francis Rawle is again taken from a meeting at Plymouth by a constable; and again with eighteen others, on April 23, 1665, is carried from a meeting at Plymouth and committed to Bridewell. On August 26, 1665, taken by a sergeant and soldiers and again committed to Bridewell.

In May, 1670, Francis Rawle of Plymouth suffered a distraint of goods in lieu of a fine for refusing to take an oath. The last record we have of his imprisonment for conscience sake was on August 26, 1683, when Francis Rawle Sr. and Francis Rawle Jr. are both confined in the "High Gaol at Exeter."

To escape the endless and severe persecutions to which members of his sect were subjected in their native country of England, Francis Rawle and his son decided to emigrate to Pennsylvania, and March 13, 1685-6, by deeds of lease and release, William Penn assured to Francis Rawle Jr. 2,500 acres of land to be laid out in the Province of Pennsylvania; and father and son took passage at Plymouth in the ship "Desire," which arrived in Philadelphia June 23, 1686. The "Register of Arrivals in Philadelphia, 1682-1686," gives the names of Francis Rawle Sr. and Francis Rawle Jr. and six servants of the latter among the list of passengers on the "Desire." Jane Rawle, wife of Francis Sr., did not accompany her husband and son on the "Desire", probably remaining at Plymouth to care for a sick daughter, as it appears that Rebecca Rawle, daughter of Francis and Jane, was buried there June 7, 1686. She was in Philadelphia prior to the marriage of her son Francis, October 18, 1689, when her name appears as a witness on his marriage certificate at the Philadelphia Monthly Meeting. Of the 2,500 acres of land purchased of William Penn by deed of March 13, 1685-6, Francis Rawle, of Plymouth, county of Devon, by lease and release dated March 25-26, 1696, conveyed 500 acres to Richard Gove, who accompanied the Rawles to Philadelphia in the "Desire." The 2,500 acres were located in Plymouth township, Philadelphia, now Montgomery, county, on the banks of Schuylkill, below the present site of Norristown, the tract being known as that of the "Plymouth Friends." Both Francis Sr. and his son seem to have remained in Philadelphia from the time of their arrival, where lots were surveyed to Francis Jr. as well, as "Liberty Land" in right of his purchase of 2,500 acres. Francis Rawle Sr. died in Philadelphia and was buried February 25, 1696-7. His wife Jane died almost a year earlier; she was buried February 9, 1695-6.

FRANCIS RAWLE, son of Francis and Jane Rawle, was born in Plymouth, Devonshire, England, about the year 1663. On his arrival in Philadelphia he engaged in the mercantile business, which he followed for a number of years, in connection with the administration of various official positions under the City and Provincial government, and late in life was admitted to the practice of law at the Philadelphia Bar. He was a man of good education and a high order of intelligence, and was early called upon to take a prominent part in the affairs of his adopted city and Province. He was commissioned Justice of the Peace and of the City Courts, January 2, 1689, and was named by William Penn in his first charter of the city, May 20, 1691, as one of the six members of Board of Aldermen, and in 1694 was made one of the Commissioners of Property. He was elected to Provincial Assembly in 1704 and regularly re-elected until 1709; was again returned in 1719, and continued to serve until his death in 1727, taking an active part in the law-making body of the Province and serving on many important committees. He belonged to the "Anti-Proprietary party," under the leadership of David Lloyd. He was called to the Provincial Council in 1724, but declined to serve. He also filled the position of Deputy Register General for Philadelphia for some years.

Francis Rawle was author of an anonymous pamphlet published in Philadelphia, in 1725, entitled "Ways and Means for the Inhabitants on the Delaware to become Rich", a treatise on political economy, the first book printed by Benjamin Franklin. An attack was made upon it, also anonymously, in a pamphlet supposed to have been written by Secretary James Logan, entitled, "A Dialogue Showing What's therein to be Found." This called forth a reply from Rawle, in a second pamphlet, published in 1726, entitled "A Just Rebuke to 'A Dialogue', and that treatise entitled 'Ways and Means, &c.,' rescued from the Dialoguist's charge of Inconsistencies and Contradictions." Francis Rawle is also supposed to have been author of another anonymous work, published in 1721, which was considered of importance and created a great stir at the time, entitled "Some Remedies Proposed for the Restoring the Sunk Credit of the Province of Pennsylvania, with Some Remarks on its Trade." Copies of these four pamphlets are in the collection of The Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

Francis Rawle married, at Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, October 18, 1689, Martha, born in Dublin, Ireland, September 24, 1668, daughter of Robert Turner, Provincial Councillor, etc., by his second wife, Martha Fisher, who came to Pennsylvania with her father in the "Lion" of Liverpool, arriving in Philadelphia October 14, 1683. Her father, Robert Turner, was a son of Robert and Mary Turner, of Royston, Hertfordshire, England, and was born at Cambridge October, 1635. He joined the Society of Friends early in life and was one of its early ministers, travelling extensively in England, Ireland and Wales, "in the service of Truth." Prior to his emigration to America he was a linen draper at Dublin, Ireland, possessed of a considerable fortune. He married (first) at Dublin, March 27, 1662, Elizabeth Ruddock, of Dover, who died during the following year, leaving a daughter Elizabeth, born March 12, 1663, who died in 1678. He married (second), at Rosenallis, Queens county, Ireland, September 10, 1665, Martha Fisher, of Cheshire, England, who died May 1682. They were the parents of four children, viz. :—

Martha Turner, b. Sept. 24, 1668, d. in Philadelphia, July 18, 1745; m. Francis Rawle;

Robert Turner, b. Aug. 25, 1672, d. same year;

Abraham Turner, b. Sept. 28, 1673, d. 1675;

Mary Turner, b. Feb. 7, 1674, m. and remained in Ireland.

Robert Turner was a preacher among Friends as early as 1657, and suffered imprisonment for conscience sake in 1660-61-62, both at Bridewell and Newgate. He was an intimate friend of William Penn, and the purchaser of many large tracts of land in Pennsylvania, and like Samuel Carpenter was one of the wealthiest of the early English immigrants to Pennsylvania, and with Carpenter, one of the most prominent in the affairs of the Province. He bought a certificate from the Friends' Meeting at Dublin, dated 5mo. 3, 1683. He was then a widower, but married (third), after his arrival in Philadelphia, Susanna, daughter William Welch, Provincial Councillor, in 1683. By the third marriage he had a son Robert, who was buried December 18, 1692. Both Robert Turner and Francis Rawle were adherents of George Keith in his schism of 1692. Robert Turner died in Philadelphia, and was buried in the Friends' burying ground, August 24, 1700. Letters of administration were granted on his estate to his son-in-law, Francis Rawle, April 28, 1701. Turner had been a member of Provincial Council by election from Philadelphia for three years from March 30, 1686, was appointed to that body (no longer elective), by William Penn, in 1693, and again, on the restoration of the charter in 1700, with Thomas Lloyd, Arthur Cooke, John Simcock, and John Eckley, he was named and empowered to act as Lieutenant or Deputy Governor of the Province, on February 9, 1687-8, with the above named colleagues, filled that position until the arrival of Gov. Blackwell, December 18, 1688. He was one of the active and prominent members of the Council, and when he was too indisposed to attend the Council, September 3, 1686, the Council adjourned to his house and held its session there. He was commissioned Provincial Justice, August 18, 1684, the following day Justice of the Peace of Philadelphia county, and re-commissioned May 1, 1686. On the death of Christopher Taylor he was commissioned by the Provincial Council, on July 5, 1686, with William Frampton and William Southersby, to administer the office of Register General, and November 18 following, Frampton having died and Turner declining to accept the office, James Claypoole was appointed for a term of three years. Robert Turner was, however, appointed to the office of Register General of the Province, March 4, 1690, and filled the office for three years. He was also Provincial Treasurer for a number of years, as well as Receiver General for the Proprietaries.

Francis Rawle died at Philadelphia, March 5, 1726-7; his widow, Martha, survived him for eighteen years, and died July 18, 1745.

WILLIAM RAWLE, third son of Francis and Martha (Turner) Rawle, received a good classical education, and being a man of scholarly tastes became an eminent classical Greek and Latin scholar, acquiring an extensive library of choice and valuable works of the best authors. He was an original member of the Library Company of Philadelphia, and a member of its board of Directors, from its inception until his death. He was also the first American to donate books to the Library. He was admitted to the Philadelphia Bar, April 4, 1728, but died when comparatively a young man, December 16, 1741. He married, August 29, 1728, Margaret, daughter of Henry Hodge, a prominent merchant of Philadelphia. She died soon after the birth of her only child, Francis Rawle.

FRANCIS RAWLE, only child of William and Margaret (Hodge) Rawle, was born in Philadelphia, July 10, 1729, and was therefore but twelve years old when his father died. He was liberally educated, and of attractive manners and conversation. In 1755 he made an extensive trip through Europe. Landing at Cork, Ireland, he made a tour of Ireland, and then visited other parts of Europe, writing an interesting account of his journey. Returning to Philadelphia he married, December, 1756, Rebecca, daughter of Edward Warner, by his wife Anna Coleman. Like his father, Francis Rawle was cut off almost at the beginning of what bade fair to become a brilliant career, dying June 7, 1761, from the effects of a gunshot wound received by the accidental discharge of a fowling piece while hunting at his country seat. His widow, Rebecca (Warner) Rawle, married (second), November 10, 1767, Samuel Shoemaker, who that year succeeded his father as City Treasurer; was a member of the Board of Aldermen of the City of Philadelphia, became Mayor of the City in 1769, and served two terms. He was also Justice of Philadelphia courts and member of Colonial Assembly. Both he and his second wife Rebecca were decided Royalists during the Revolution; he was acting Mayor of the city during its occupation by the British, and retired to New York on its evacuation by the British army. Mrs. Rawle-Shoemaker was a woman of uncommon strength of intellect and culture, "possessed of every virtue that befits and adorns a Christian woman, and whose tenderness and solicitude for her offspring, swelled beyond the ordinary stream of maternal love." Both her husbands belonged to the class of cultured and accomplished gentlemen of ample means, common to Philadelphia in its prosperous days preceding the Revolution, and she had been brought up and lived in luxury and refinement. "Deprived of husband and children,—exiled during the war of the Revolution on account of her persistent loyalty to the Crown, and plundered of prosperity, this excellent woman displayed a fortitude and energy of character which contrasted strongly with her serene and gentle disposition. She survived to an advanced age, but the progress of years and infirmities made no impression on her warm and kindly heart." She died December 21, 1819.

Issue of Francis and Rebecca (Warner) Rawle:—

Anna, b. Oct. 30, 1757, d. July, 1828; m. Sept. 16, 1783. John Clifford, and her dau. Rebecca became wife of John Pemberton;

WILLIAM, b. April 28, 1759, d. April 12, 1836; m. Sarah Coates Burge; of whom presently;

Margaret, b. 1760, d. Aug. 25, 1881, m. Isaac, son of Joseph Wharton of "Walnut Grove." Their son, Thomas J. Wharton was a distinguished lawyer, and author of "Wharton's Digest of Reports of Decisions of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania."

WILLIAM RAWLE, only son of Francis and Rebecca (Warner) Rawle, born in Philadelphia, April 28, 1759, was but two years of age when the unfortunate and lamentable accident deprived him of his father. He was, however, left to the care of a mother well qualified to instill into the mind and heart of her brilliant son, the earnestness of purpose and fine qualities of Christian and civic virtue, that characterized his long and distinguished career. His early education was acquired at the Friends' Academy of Philadelphia and under private tutors. He was sixteen years of age at the beginning of the Revolutionary War, and practically all his immediate relations and connections were either adherents of or sympathizers with the royal cause, including his gifted mother for whom, during all the period of her life, he gave constant proof of the deepest and strongest sentiment of filial love. His stepfather, Samuel Shoemaker, as before stated, an accomplished gentleman of extensive reading and cultivated tastes, was a Provincial Royalist, who, though arrested by order of Congress with many other men of wealth and standing whose sympathies were not with the patriot cause, and confined in the Masonic Lodge room in 1777, escaped the exile to Virginia suffered by many of his associates, by giving his parole not to render aid to the enemies of his country, and remained in Philadelphia during its occupation by the British army, acting during that period as Mayor of the City. Surrounded by these influences, young Rawle remained entirely passive, but circumstances strongly indicate that he had little sympathy with the Tory sentiments of his relatives. When the British were about to evacuate the city, his stepfather retired with them to New York City, and, at the urgent request of his mother, young Rawle accompanied him and took up the study of law there under the Royal Attorney General, Mr. Kempe, the city being then under military government. After three years spent in diligent preparation for his chosen profession, prevented from returning to his native city by the political outlawry of his parents, he decided to go to London to pursue further his legal studies, and to take up the practice of law there until the close of the war would permit him to return to his native city, where, in a letter written to his mother before sailing, he stated his intention of settling, as soon as the clouds of war should roll by. He was admitted to the Middle Temple, London, August 17, 1781. The war having drawn to a close, he left England, April 24, 1782, and after a tour of the continent and a visit to Dr. Franklin, at Passy, near Paris, he sailed for America, November 17, 1782, and arrived in Philadelphia January 17, 1783, after an absence from his native city of four and a half years. He was admitted to practice at the Philadelphia Bar on September 15, 1783, and November 13 following married Sarah Coates Burge, the "Sally Burge" of "Sally Wistar's Journal," born November 13, 1761, daughter of Samuel Burge, a distiller and merchant of Philadelphia, by his wife Beulah, daughter of Benjamin and Sarah (Coates) Shoemaker, and sister to Samuel Shoemaker, stepfather of William Rawle. Samuel Burge was a son of William Burge, a native of Burlington, New Jersey, (brother of the first wife of Col. William Trent, Provincial Councillor, of Pennsylvania, and founder of Trenton) by his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Henry Stacy, of Burlington county. Mrs. Rawle was one of that little coterie of girls of Philadelphia during the Revolutionary period, a glimpse of whose happy girlhood life is given in the delightful "Journal" of her intimate friend and associate, Sallie Wistar, and was a woman of many accomplishments and virtues. Her married life with Mr. Rawle continued over a period of upwards of forty years, and was ever serene and happy.

William Rawle at once acquired the confidence and esteem of his associates and fellow citizens, but his early professional career was beset with difficulties and discouragements, and not distinguished by early success. He persistently declined to take part in party warfare and always eschewed public office. Against his wish and positive declination, he was nominated and elected to General Assembly of the State in October, 1789, as a Federalist, to which party he gave his unswerving allegiance. The importunities of his friends prevailed upon him to serve in the unsought position. His practice had by this time become large and lucrative, and he preferred to give his whole time to the practice of his chosen profession.

In 1791 Mr. Rawle was appointed by President Washington to the position of United States Attorney for Pennsylvania, which he filled until 1800, when he resigned. He was offered by Washington the office of Attorney General of the United States, and also the Judgeship of the United States District Court, but declined both these honorable positions. As United States Attorney for Pennsylvania, he accompanied in 1794 the Judge of the United States District Court and the military forces to Western Pennsylvania, to suppress the "Whiskey Insurrection," and it became his duty as attorney to prosecute the leaders of this insurrection as well as those of the "Fries Rebellion," of 1798.

Mr. Rawle took an active interest in the literary and scientific societies and associations of his time. He was elected member of American Philosophical Society; secretary of Library Company of Philadelphia, and a director in 1792; elected in 1786, trustee of University of Pennsylvania, and applied himself diligently to the duties of that office, with zeal and punctuality, for a period of forty years. He was for many years attorney and counsel for Bank of United States. In 1805 he took an active part in the establishment of Academy of Fine Arts, and at the opening delivered an address urging and vindicating the claims of painting and sculpture to the encouragement and support of a republican country.

In 1821, on the incorporation of the Law Academy of Philadelphia, he was chosen its vice-president, in 1822 was unanimously chosen Chancellor of the Associated Members of Bar of Philadelphia, and five years later, when that association was merged with the Law Library Company of Philadelphia under the title of Law Association of Philadelphia, he became Chancellor of the new association and retained that position until his death. He was one of the founders of Historical Society of Pennsylvania, in 1824, and its president until his death; making a number of communications that hold an honored place among its archives, among them, one on the "Valedictory Address of President Washington"; one respecting Heckwelder's "History of the Indian Nations"; a "Biography of Sir William Keith", and "A Sketch of the Life of Thomas Mifflin."

In 1827 the College of New Jersey, now Princeton University, conferred upon Mr. Rawle the degree of LL. D., and in 1828 he received the same honor from Dartmouth College. In 1830 he was appointed by the Governor, in pursuance of an act of Legislature, with his nephew Thomas I. Wharton, and Judge Joel Jones, to revise the civil code of Pennsylvania, and was chief author of reports of this commission, the valuable results of whose labors are embodied in existing statutes. He was also the author, among other valuable legal publications, of "A View of the Constitution of the United States", for forty years considered the leading authority on the subject.

Mr. Rawle's professional business after the year 1793 was very extensive and brought him a large income; he was associated with most of the important cases from that date for forty years. Not, in the accepted sense of the term, an orator, his address to a jury was simple in diction, free from all unnecessary ornamentation, earnest and impressive. His deportment in the conduct of his professional business was always respectful and conciliatory to his professional adversaries, and it is said he never had an enemy at the Bar. "He sought and acquired that enduring reputation which is founded on the good opinion of the wise and virtuous of this world, and was an upright man of whom it may be truly said 'The talents lent him were well employed.'"

At a meeting of the members of the Philadelphia Bar held December 20, 1831, it was unanimously resolved that they were desirous of expressing their respect and regard for their venerable associate, and of preserving a likeness of one who had contributed to add honor to his profession, and they accordingly solicited Mr. Rawle to sit for a portrait, to be painted at their expense, and to be placed in the Law Library. Mr. Rawle complied with their request, and a very striking likeness of him was painted by Inman, which still gives inspiration from the walls of the library to the worthy student who would emulate his noble example.

The accomplished jurist was a fine scholarly man of great artistic and literary taste. His classical knowledge was extensive and accurate, and he brought to his professional work a discriminating mind which enabled him to make the best use of what he had read. He was fond of poetry, and at one time of his life wrote verses; he also drew and painted well. He was by birth a member of the Society of Friends, and never ceased to entertain the highest respect for the Society, attending their meetings, though he differed from them on some points peculiar to the sect, which he considered non-essential, especially as to language and attire. He was at all periods of his life devout in thought and action, and read and wrote much on religious subjects.

During the year 1835 his bodily infirmities increased rapidly, and he was seldom able to leave his house; but his mental vigor was unabated. He gave much time to reading, and found especial enjoyment in his books. In truth, literature, which had been "the delight of his youth, the relaxation of his manhood, was the solace of his declining years." After a confinement to his bed of several weeks, he died April 12, 1836, having passed a life of seventy-six years without stain or reproach.

WILLIAM RAWLE JR., third son of William and Sarah (Burge) Rawle, born in Philadelphia, July 19, 1788, was educated at Princeton College and admitted to Philadelphia Bar May 21, 1810. During the War of 1812-14, he served as Captain of the Second Troop of Philadelphia City Cavalry. In the practice of his profession he attained a prominence and reputation little inferior to that of his father. In 1814, with Hon. Thomas Sergeant, he began the preparation of Reports of Decisions of Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, known to the legal fraternity as "Sergeant and Rawle's Reports", contained in eighteen volumes. Mr. Sergeant retired from the work in 1828, and it was continued to 1835, by Mr. Rawle, in five volumes.

Mr. Rawle was a member of Common Council of Philadelphia, 1835-40, and its president four years. He was elected member of American Philosophical Society in 1841. With his father he participated in the founding of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania in 1824, and was many years its vice-president. He was secretary and later director of Philadelphia Library Company, and Trustee of University of Pennsylvania. He died at his son's country seat, August 9, 1858.

He studied law with his father and was admitted to Philadelphia Bar, Oct. 12, 1844, and like his father and grandfather became later one of its leaders; acquiring eminence as a successful practitioner soon after his admission. He officiated as counsel in many of the important cases in his native city and elsewhere, and was private counsel for some of the most eminent lawyers and judges of Pennsylvania, and had care of many important trusts. He was also a distinguished writer on various topics in the line of his profession. In 1852, he published his "Practical Treatise on the Law of Covenants for Title," of which four editions have since been published, and has been cited as an authority in all parts of the Union and in England. This work has a high and enduring reputation among the really great books on the law. In 1853 he published the third American edition of Smith's "Law of Contracts," adding to it many able and learned notes. He also edited Joshua Williams' "The Law of Real Property" with elaborate notes; which has also gone through many editions, and has been used as a text book in many law schools and private offices in the United States. A lecture delivered by Mr. Rawle, in 1881, before the Law Dept. of the Univ. of Pa. on "Some Contrasts in the Growth of Pennsylvania and English Law," was published and attracted much attention both in this country and in England. In May, 1884, he delivered an oration before both Houses of Congress upon the occasion of the unveiling of the statue of Chief Justice John Marshall, in Washington; and in June, 1885, he delivered an address before the Harvard Chapter of the Phi Beta Kappa Society on "The Case of the Educated Unemployed." In 1862, he enlisted in the "Emergency" Artillery Company, commanded by Capt. Chapman Biddle, and was ordered to Harrisburg. Again in 1863, he went out as Quartermaster Sergeant of Landis's Battery, which formed part of command of Gen. Couch, and was engaged in the battle with Confederate cavalry at Carlisle, Pa. He was Vice-provost of the Law Academy of Philadelphia, 1865-1873, and Vice-chancellor of the Law Association of Philadelphia from 1880 to his death. WILLIAM BROOKE RAWLE, eldest and only surviving son of Charles Wallace Brooke, by his wife Elizabeth, daughter of William and Mary Anna (Tilghman) Rawle, was born in Philadelphia, August 29, 1843. His early education was acquired in the best private schools in Philadelphia, and he entered University of Pennsylvania in 1859, graduating with the degree of B. A. in the class of 1863. Having in his senior year obtained leave of absence from the college authorities, he entered the United States Volunteer Army for service in the War of the Rebellion, and took his B. A. degree on July 3, 1863, while actually participating in the battle of Gettysburg. He entered the army as Second Lieutenant, Third Pennsylvania Cavalry, and served continuously in the Army of the Potomac from early in 1863 until after the close of the war, attaining the lineal rank of Captain, and being brevetted Major and Lieutenant Colonel, for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Hatcher's Run, and in the campaign that terminated with the surrender of Lee at Appomattox Court House respectively. He was in numerous engagements during the war, taking an active part in all the arduous campaigns of the Army of the Potomac, after that of Chancellorsville. He returned to Philadelphia at the close of the war, in August, 1865, and took up the study of law, with his uncle William Henry Rawle, receiving the degree of M. A. at the University of Pennsylvania, July 3, 1866, and being admitted to the Philadelphia Bar, May 18, 1867. Shortly before the latter date he assumed by legal authority the name of William Brooke Rawle, in lieu of his baptismal name of William Rawle Brooke. He became associated in the practice of his profession with his preceptor and uncle, William Henry Rawle, continuing with him until the death of the latter in 1889, when he succeeded him as the head of the family law offices, which had been established in 1783, by his great-grandfather, William Rawle the elder. He and his cousins James and Francis Rawle are now the present representatives of a family which has been prominently identified with the affairs of the City of Philadelphia, for over two centuries. Col. Rawle is a Vice-President of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania; for many years was Treasurer of Law Association of Philadelphia, and is also a member of many patriotic and historical associations. He married, February 7, 1872, Elizabeth Norris, born December 19, 1841, daughter of Henry Pepper, of Philadelphia, by his wife, Sally Norris, daughter of Joseph Parker Norris, of "Fair Hill," by his wife, Elizabeth Hill Fox.

FRANCIS WILLIAM RAWLE, third surviving son of William and Sarah C. (Burge) Rawle, born in Philadelphia September 28, 1795, graduated at University of Pennsylvania in 1812 with the degree of A. B., and received the degree of A. M. from the same institution in 1816. During the War of 1812-14 he served as Sergeant and Lieutenant in the Pennsylvania Regiment known as the "Washington Guards." After taking his second course at the university he became a civil engineer, and was in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad in the earliest days of railroad construction. Later he was an ironmaster at Freedom Forge, Mifflin county, Pennsylvania. He served for some years as Lay Judge of the Courts of Clearfield county. In 1847 he returned to Philadelphia and became secretary of Equitable Fire Insurance Company. He retired from business in 1861 and moved to his country seat, "Fairfield", Lycoming county, one of the "Muncy Farms", where he passed most of the remainder of his life, and where he died October 27, 1881.

Francis William Rawle married, December 16, 1828, Louisa, daughter of Charles Hall, a distinguished member of the Bar at Sunbury, Northumberland county, Pennsylvania, by his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Coleman, the prominent ironmaster of Cornwall, Pennsylvania. The same year he entered the office of his cousin William Henry Rawle, of Philadelphia, as a student-at-law, spent the following year at Harvard Law School, where he received the degree of LL. B. in 1871, and November 11, 1871, was admitted to the Philadelphia Bar, where he has since practiced. In 1883 and again in 1897 he edited new editions of Bouvier's Law Dictionary, the standard work of its kind, much of which he rewrote. In his earlier professional life he wrote various articles for legal periodicals, and in 1885, prepared and read before the American Bar Association a paper on "Car Trust Securities".

In 1876 he became librarian of Library of the Law Association of Philadelphia, succeeding John William Wallace, James T. Mitchell, now Chief Justice of Pennsylvania, Samuel Dickson and George Tucker Bispham. He held this position until 1894, building up the library into a foremost place among law libraries. In 1878, at the organization of American Bar Association at Saratoga Springs, he was elected Secretary of the Conference, and afterwards Treasurer of the Association, to which office he was re-elected every year thereafter until 1902, when he became president of the Association, for the year 1902-3, an office held by no one but for a single year. During these twenty-five years of service, and an additional year, he was also a member of the Executive Committee. He edited and prepared the annual reports of the Association for these twenty-six years.

In 1887, he was a delegate from the American Bar Association to the London Conference of the Association for the Reform and Codification of the Laws of Nations, and was made a member of its executive committee. In 1890, and again in 1896, he was elected Overseer of Harvard University, one of the governing boards, serving from 1900 to 1902. BIDDLE FAMILY

WILLIAM BIDDLE, pioneer ancestor of the Biddle family of Philadelphia, was born near London, England, about 1630, left that city July, 1681, and came to New Jersey. He is said to have been an officer in the Parliamentary army during the civil war of England, but soon after its close joined the Society of Friends. His name appears among the list of persons imprisoned by Mayor Brown, 1660-1, for attending "non-conformist" meetings. The names of William, Esther and Thomas Biddle appear on another list of Quakers sent to Newgate prison. Esther Biddle, possibly his mother, an eminent Friend, suffered persecution for "Truth's sake" at various periods; Thomas Biddle was a cousin of William Biddle, and either accompanied or followed him to New Jersey and was mentioned in his will probated 1712, and has descendants in New Jersey. William Biddle married, at Bishopgate street Friends' Meeting, 12mo. 7, 1665, Sarah Kemp, born 1634, died in New Jersey, 2mo. 27, 1709, in her seventy-fifth year. Their children, all born at London, were as follows:—

Elizabeth, b. June 25, 1668, d. in childhood;

WILLIAM, b. Dec. 4, 1669, d. Mount Hope, N. J., 1743, m., 1695, Lydia Wardell; of whom presently;

John, b. Dec. 27, 1670, d. in childhood;

Joseph, b. Feb. 6, 1672, d. in childhood;

Sarah, b. Dec. 2, 1678, d. Aug. 2, 1705, Phila., Pa., m. (first), Oct. 21, 1695, William Righton, and (second), March 14, 1703, Clement Plumstead of Phila. Left no issue.

William Biddle (1), purchased January 23, 1676, of William Penn, Gawen Lawrie, Nicholas Lucas and Edward Byllynge, a one-half share in the lands of West Jersey, and became therefore one of the Proprietaries of that Province. His later purchases, as shown by the early records of the Province, were as follows: April 1, 1677, of Thomas Hutchinson et al., one-fourth share. April 29, 1678, of Nicholas Bell, one-sixth share. August 8, 1684, of Joseph Helmsley, one-fourth share. August 21, 1684, of Samuel Clay, one-sixth share. May 20, 1686, of Thomas Hutchinson, one-fourth share. November 10, 1691, of the Exrs. of Anna Salter, one-sixth share. Making in all one and three-quarter shares of the sixteen shares into which the province was divided, by the original purchasers, entitling him to 43,000 acres.

William Biddle and his family, which consisted of his wife Sarah and two children, William, aged eleven years, and Sarah, aged two and a half years, on their arrival in New Jersey, probably at once took up their residence at the site of the town of Burlington, where he occupied a house as late as September 26, 1682. December 17, 1682, there was surveyed to him in right of his purchase, by Thomas Revell, Surveyor General, the island called "Sepasswick" or "Sepassinck", later known as "Biddle's Island", in the Delaware, "over against Burlington", containing 278 acres, and, January 16, 1681-2, 500 acres on the Delaware, "over against Seppassinck Island." On this plantation, which he named "Mount Hope", he took up his residence, and it remained the home of his descendants for many generations. It was situated about midway between Burlington and Bordentown.

He and his wife were prominent members of the Society of Friends, and Quarterly Meetings of the Society were held at his house at "Mount Hope." He was a Justice of Burlington County from 1682 until his death; was one of the ten members of Governor's Council, 1682, re-elected 3mo. 15, 1683; one of trustees selected by the Proprietors to conduct the business of the Proprietorship, February 14, 1687, and regularly re-elected thereafter, serving as President of the Board of Trustees, 1706-7; Representative in General Assembly of the Province at Perth Amboy, 1703. He died at "Mount Hope" in 1712, leaving by will dated June 23, 1711, probated March 3, 1711-12, his plantation and island to his son William and his wife Lydia for life, then to their children, as well as 1,500 acres yet to be taken up in New Jersey.

WILLIAM BIDDLE, only surviving son of William and Sarah (Kemp) Biddle, was, like his father, prominent in the affairs of West Jersey; he was appointed by the Council of Proprietors on November 2, 1703, to treat with the Indians for lands above the Falls, and at his father's death inherited 12,905 acres of land in the Lotting Purchase. He died intestate about 1743. He had married, about 1695, Lydia Wardell, granddaughter of Eliakim Wardell, who purchased lands at Nevesink of the Indians, in 1666, was Sheriff of Monmouth county, 1683, member of House of Deputies, 1688, and member General Assembly, 1692; great-granddaughter of Thomas Wardell, French Huguenot, who settled in New England about the middle of seventeenth century. She was a member of the Friends' Meeting at Shrewsbury.

Joseph, m. (first), Lydia Howard; (second), Sarah Rogers. Remained in N. J.;

JOHN, b. 1707, m. March 3, 1736, Sarah Owen, of whom later.

WILLIAM BIDDLE, eldest son of William and Lydia (Wardell) Biddle of "Mount Hope", New Jersey, with his youngest brother John, removed to Philadelphia prior to 1730, and engaged in mercantile business there. He met with many reverses financially, mainly through endorsements for friends; and, though inheriting a large fortune, lost practically all of it prior to his death, 1756. He married, April 3, 1730, Mary, born Aug. 2, 1709, died May 9, 1789, daughter of Nicholas Scull, Surveyor General of Pennsylvania, by his wife, Abigail Heap.

Nicholas Scull was the eldest of six sons of Nicholas Scull who came to Pennsylvania in the ship "Bristol Merchant," arriving at Chester, 9mo. 10, 1685, and is supposed to have been a native of Ireland. The progenitor of the family was Sir John Scull, a Norman, one of twelve Norman knights mentioned in Burke's "Landed Gentry", who accompanied Newmarch into North Wales, and eventually conquered that country. At an early period one branch of the family located in the Southeastern part of county Cork, Ireland, and gave the name to the town and parish of Scull, from whence Nicholas Scull Sr. is supposed to have accompanied Major Jasper Farmer to Pennsylvania. Nicholas Scull, the Surveyor General, was born near Philadelphia, 1687. He is said to have been a pupil and assistant to Thomas Holm, Penn's first Surveyor General. He was at least engaged in surveying the wild lands on the frontiers of Pennsylvania at an early date, while still a very young man, and by frequent contact with the different Indian tribes, learned the language of a number of them, and frequently acted as interpreter and messenger in the early treaties negotiated with the aborigines by the Governors and Council. He and his brother John Scull were deputed by Council to deliver match coats and other presents to the Indians at Conestogo, and officiated as interpreters there May 26, 1728. In 1730, he was directed to proceed to the Minnisinks, in the present limits of Monroe county, to ascertain the extent and condition of the Holland settlement there and make report to the Council. He participated in the Indian Walk of 1737, and made a deposition in reference thereto and the attitude of the Indians in reference to it, before the Provincial Council twenty years later, January 25, 1757. He was elected Sheriff of Philadelphia, 1744, and re-commissioned 1745-6. January 10, 1748, he succeeded William Parsons as Surveyor General of the Province and filled that position until his death, 1761. A large number of his surveys are on file in the Archives of the State, and he executed a number of maps of the new country laid out by him. He is buried in the family burying ground near Scheetz's Mill, White Marsh. He married, 1708, Abigail Heap, who died May 21, 1753, aged sixty-five years. They had issue:—

- MARY, b. Aug. 2, 1709, d. May 9, 1789, m. William Biddle;

She died at the residence of her son James Biddle Esq., in Philadelphia, May 9, 1789, in her eighty-first year.

Removed to Philadelphia 1750, and became Deputy Prothonotary, and later Deputy Judge of Admiralty Court. In December, 1776, he returned to Reading, and took up the practice of law. In 1788, was commissioned Prothonotary of Philadelphia Courts, and returned to that city, where he resided the remainder of his life. He was commissioned President Judge of the First Judicial District, 1791, and filled that position until his death, June 15, 1797. He was a man universally loved and respected by all with whom he came into close acquaintance. He married, June 30, 1753, Frances Marks, and had issue:—

He died, 1767-8, leaving two children; Mary, who married Collison Read of New Jersey, and William, who, at the wish of his uncle Edward Biddle, changed his name after the death of his father to William McFunn Biddle. He married, 1797, Lydia Spencer, who removed to Carlisle, Pennsylvania, 1827, and died there 1858, aged ninety-two years.

Issue of William McFunn and Lydia (Spencer) Biddle:—

JOHN BIDDLE, second surviving son of William and Mary (Scull) Biddle, was Deputy Quartermaster in the Provincial army, in Gen. Forbes' campaign against Fort Du Quesne, and was later appointed Collector of Excise in Berks county. He was a royalist during the Revolution, sought refuge with the British Army at New York, 1777-8, and later fled to Nova Scotia, where he died. His property in Pennsylvania was confiscated. His family returned to Berks county, Pennsylvania, after his death.

EDWARD BIDDLE, third son of William and Mary (Scull) Biddle, entered the Provincial army at the age of sixteen, and was commissioned Ensign of Lieut. Col. Weiser's company, December 3, 1757, promoted to Lieutenant February 1, 1759, and Captain in Col. Hugh Mercer's Battalion February 24, 1760. He was at the capture of both Fort DuQuesne and Fort Niagara. He resigned from the army, and studying law, established himself at Reading. Was member of Assembly 1767-75, and Speaker of the House, 1774. He was a representative from Berks to Provincial Conventions of July 15, 1774; January 23, 1775; its representative in the first Continental Congress; Member of Committee of Safety, June 30, 1775, to July 22, 1776, and again a representative in the Assembly, 1778. An accident met with, January 23, 1775, disabled him and made him an invalid for life, and though he lived for nearly five years later, the patriot cause was deprived of the ardent and intelligent service he had rendered it at the outset. He died at the residence of his daughter Catharine, wife of George Lux, Baltimore, Maryland, September 5, 1779. His last public service being as one of a committee of four appointed February 5, 1779, to bring in a bill for abolishing slavery in Pennsylvania. He married, 1761, Elizabeth, daughter of John Ross, Esq., and they had issue:—

Catharine, m. George Lux, of Baltimore;
Abigail, m. Dr. Falls, of Maryland.

CHARLES BIDDLE, fourth surviving son of William and Mary (Scull) Biddle, born in Philadelphia December 24, 1745, was but eleven years of age at the death of his father. At the age of fourteen years he was apprenticed to William Ball, a merchant of Philadelphia, to learn the mercantile business, but left there three years later and took to a seafaring life, his first voyage being with Capt. Robert Grant, with whom he sailed on a voyage to Spain, May 10, 1763. In the spring of 1764 he was appointed second mate of a ship built for his brother-in-law Capt. William McFunn, and sailed several trips under him to the West Indies and other points. In June, 1767, he purchased a ship with the assistance of his brother James, and sailed as captain, following the sea in that capacity until May 4, 1775. When it became evident that war with the mother country was inevitable, Capt. Biddle returned to Philadelphia, determined to cast his lot with his country, for better or for worse. He sailed in the "Chance," with Capt. John Craig, for France, for a cargo of ammunition and arms for the use of the patriot army, but returned by way of West Indies with Capt. Mason. In January, 1776, he joined Capt. Cowpertwaite's company of the "Quaker Light Infantry," and when Capt. Cowpertwaite offered his company to serve as marines on board the barges sent down the river to capture the British vessel Roebuck reported to be aground on the Brandywine shoals; though his offer was not accepted, Capt. Biddle and several others, learning that men were needed "before the mast" volunteered for that service and accompanied the expedition as ordinary seamen. In August, 1776, he went out with the "Quaker Light Infantry," marching with them to New Brunswick as acting sergeant, and receiving intelligence from Gen. Mercer that an attack was to be made on the Hessians on Staten Island, they marched to Elizabethtown Point to participate in the attack. A storm prevented the attack, and the balance of the term of their enlistment was spent with the "Flying Camp" at the Point. Returning to Philadelphia, he sailed in the "Greyhound," for Port au Prince, but was taken with all on board by the "Antelope" and held prisoner several months. Finally effecting his escape to Jamaica, he assisted in fitting out a brig, loaded with salt for Nicola Mole, where he remained some time and then purchased a half interest in a vessel called "The Three Sisters," with Bristol Brown of Virginia, and sailed with her to North Carolina, landing at Beaufort, where he met for the first time his future wife Hannah Shepard. Loading the vessel for return to Brown, at the Mole, he set out for Philadelphia by way of Portsmouth and Baltimore, arriving at Philadelphia, June, 1777, and finding his mother and family had removed to Reading, visited them there. On July 1, 1777, he set off again for Charleston, South Carolina, to visit his brother Nicholas, in command of the unfortunate "Randolph," in which he lost his life some months later. After spending some time with his brother he went to Beaufort to rejoin the "Three Sisters," but, learning that she had been captured by the British, returned to Philadelphia. He was at Baltimore when the British fleet appeared in the bay on its way to Philadelphia. After a short time spent in Reading he returned to Philadelphia, and entered on board an armed brig, and after the battle of Brandywine, sailed up the Delaware with a large number of fugitives from Philadelphia on board, and lay for some time near Bordentown. The day after the battle of Germantown he again went to Reading and after two days spent with the army, went to Charleston, and was appointed to the command of the "Volunteer", which was to sail with the "Randolph", under the command of his brother Nicholas, to attack two British frigates off the bar. Delay in manning the "Volunteer" induced him to volunteer on board the "Randolph" for the expedition, but the frigates having sailed away before the expedition got started, Charles Biddle returned to Newbern to take command of a vessel called the "Cornelia," then being fitted out. While manning the "Cornelia" and drilling the men for service on her, he heard of the loss of the "Randolph" and the death of his distinguished brother Nicholas. Sailed with the "Cornelia", September, 1778, and returned to Beaufort with her November, 1778. Was married there, November 25, 1778, to Hannah Shepard, and made his home at Newbern and Beaufort until June 1, 1780, his eldest son Nicholas, who died in infancy, being born there October, 1779. He made one trip to sea in August, 1779, but the greater part of a year and a half was spent at Newbern, where he took an active part in the organization of the militia for defense of the coast and in the erection of fortifications. He was elected to General Assembly of North Carolina and took an active part in that body. He left Newbern on June 1, 1780, for Philadelphia, intending to return in five or six months, but remained in Pennsylvania the remainder of his life. After spending the summer at Reading, he went to sea again on November 15, 1781, with his old shipmate Capt. Decatur, but was captured, off the capes of Virginia, by the British brig "Chatham," and being exchanged soon after, returned to Philadelphia, January 31, 1782. The next two years were occupied with various sea ventures, and in October, 1784, he was elected a member of Supreme Executive Council, and a year later was elected Vice-president of the Council, and Benjamin Franklin, then just returned from France, was elected president, but, seldom attending, Capt. Biddle was during the next two years, for the greater part of the time, presiding officer of the Council and therefore acting chief executive of the State of Pennsylvania. During the second year of this service he met with an injury, and not being able to leave his house, the Council met at his home. In October, 1787, he was elected a member of the Legislature from Berks county, but being appointed October 23, 1787, Clerk of Supreme Executive Council, resigned from the Legislature without taking his seat, and served as clerk of Council until that body ceased to exist under the new Constitution. On February 1, 1791, he was commissioned Prothonotary of Common Pleas Court of Philadelphia, succeeding his brother James, who was then made President Judge of the Common Pleas Court. Capt. Biddle served as Prothonotary until 1809, the following year was elected a member of the State Senate and served several terms. He was appointed by the President in 1812 to sign the treasury notes issued by the government. He was a member of State Board of Property, 1784-6, and Vice-president of the board the latter year. He was an original member of Society of Cincinnati, and was its treasurer in 1811. He was elected a director of Bank of Pennsylvania, 1793, and served many years. In 1799, during the French agitation, he assisted in organization of a militia company for preservation of order at home, and took an active part in all matters pertaining to the best interests of the city. Capt. Charles Biddle was an intimate friend of Col. Aaron Burr, and while the Colonel was under a cloud by reason of the killing of Alexander Hamilton in a duel, he spent some time at the house of Capt. Biddle, in Philadelphia. Burr made an effort to interest Capt. Biddle in his Mississippi enterprise, but failed, though Capt. Biddle always believed in the sincerity of his motives. He died at his home on Chestnut street near Eleventh, April 4, 1821, and was buried at Christ Church.

At the age of thirteen years he had completed a course of study at University of Pennsylvania, and entered Princeton University, where he took his degree in his fifteenth year, dividing first honors with a much older class-mate. He studied law in Philadelphia three years and being too young to gain admission to the Bar, went, in 1804, to Europe as secretary to Gen. Armstrong, United States Minister to Court of France, and was present at the coronation of Napoleon at Paris. He attended to the details of the Louisiana purchase and later, leaving the legation, traveled through the greater part of Europe, adding to his classical accomplishments a thorough mastery of the modern languages of Europe. Arriving in England, he became secretary to James Monroe, then Minister at London, and remained there until 1807, when he returned to Philadelphia and took up the practice of law. He also devoted considerable time to literary pursuits, becoming associated with Joseph Dennie in the editorship of the Portfolio, 1811, and writing a number of critical essays, biographies, essays on the fine arts, and occasional verses; among his poetical productions being "An Ode to Bogle", the subject of which was an eccentric waiter and undertaker of Philadelphia. He prepared the original journal of the Lewis and Clark expedition, from narrative and notes of the eminent explorers. He was elected to Pennsylvania Legislature, 1810, and took an active part in the legislation of that session. He declined a re-election in the following year, married Jane, daughter of Capt. John Craig, and took up his country residence in Bucks county on land inherited by his wife, which he named Andalusia, though also maintaining a city residence. He was elected to State Senate during second war with England, gave zealous and prompt support to measures for carrying the war to a successful issue, and was one of the earliest advocates of popular education. He prepared the reply to the address of the Hartford Convention, his elaborate report, adopted by the Legislature, being one of the State papers that have attracted universal attention. He was a candidate of the Democratic party for Congress, 1818-20, but was defeated at the polls. In 1819, he was appointed by President Monroe a government director of Bank of the United States, was elected its president in 1823, and took a very prominent part in its affairs until it was closed in 1836, by President Jackson's refusal to renew the charter. He was the first president of its successor, chartered by the state of Pennsylvania, called United States Bank, and served until 1839, when he resigned, and retired to his country seat at Andalusia. He was also appointed by President Monroe under an Act of Congress, to collate the laws of foreign countries in reference to commerce, money, weights and measures, etc., and prepared an octavo volume known as the "Commercial Digest." In matters of internal improvement and commerce he was one of the most far-seeing statesmen of his age. He took an active interest in agriculture and horticulture, after locating at his country seat "Andalusia" in Bensalem township, Bucks county, on the banks of the Delaware, which was his permanent residence from 1821 until his death. He was president of Agricultural Society of Philadelphia many years, and devoted much attention to the improvement of the country residence inherited by his wife, improving the fine old Colonial mansion, and embellishing the extensive grounds surrounding it by the propagation of rare plants and trees. He was first to introduce the breeding of Alderney cattle, and greatly encouraged the cultivation of the grape, then a new industry in Pennsylvania. Here in his beautiful country retreat, Nicholas Biddle courted the muse, cultivated his fine literary tastes, and gave much attention to the encouragement of commerce and of internal improvements. Brilliant in his conception of ideas for the improvement and elevation of his race, and fearless in their advocacy, he left his impress on the community in which he lived. Charles J. Ingersoll, his political opponent, says of him, "Nicholas Biddle was as iron-nerved as his great antagonist, Andrew Jackson, loved his country not less—and money as little." One of his favorite hobbies was Greek architecture, and he is quoted as saying that there were "but two truths in this world, the Bible and Greek architecture." He added to the "Andalusia" mansion the beautiful Doric portico that still adorns it, and his influence was exerted for the adoption of that style for public buildings, and Girard College, modelled after "Andalusia", is a sample of his efforts. His ideas on many subjects, were far in advance of his age, and were not fully appreciated during his life time. Gov. Packer later wrote of him: "Whatever may be said of Nicholas Biddle as a politician, or a financier, all agree that on questions of internal improvement and commerce he was one of the most sagacious and far-seeing statesmen of the Union. His fault was, if fault it be, that he was twenty years in advance of the age in which he lived."

Nicholas Biddle died at Andalusia February 27, 1844, at the age of fifty-eight years. His wife survived him.

HON. CRAIG BIDDLE, youngest son of Nicholas Biddle by his wife Jane Craig, was born in Philadelphia January 10, 1823. He received his preliminary education under private tutors and entered the College of New Jersey, now Princeton University, from which he graduated with degree of A. M., 1841, and from which institution he later received the honorary degree of LL.D. He studied law in Philadelphia, was admitted to the Bar 1844, and practiced in that city until his elevation to the bench, 1875. As a lawyer he was conservative and unostentatious, and he enjoyed the reputation of a safe and learned counsellor, and a logical and successful advocate. He took little part in public affairs in early life, serving one term in General Assembly, 1840. At the outbreak of hostilities, between the States in 1861, he entered the service as a member of the staff of Gen. Robert Patterson, with the rank of Major, and served with him in the Shenandoah campaign of 1861. He was later a member of the staff of Gov. Andrew G. Curtin, assisting in the organization of new regiments, and 1863, when Pennsylvania was threatened with invasion by Lee's army, he went out in an Emergency Company for State defence, as a private.

In 1875, he was appointed Judge of Common Pleas Court of Philadelphia, to fill a vacancy, in the fall of the same year was nominated and elected to the same position for the full term of ten years, and was unanimously re-elected in 1885, and 1895, filling the position of presiding Judge of that Court until his resignation in 1907, to accept the position of Prothonotary of Courts of Philadelphia, which position he still fills. Judge Biddle, like his distinguished father, served many years as President of the Philadelphia Agricultural Society, and took active interest in its proceedings. He has been many years one of the active members of Historical Society of Pennsylvania, of which he is vice-president, and has been the vice-president of the Princeton Club several years, and President of the Rittenhouse Club since 1891.

CAPT. NICHOLAS BIDDLE, ninth child, and fifth surviving son, of William Biddle (who came to Philadelphia from New Jersey 1730, and died there 1756) by his wife Mary Scull, was born in Philadelphia September 10, 1750, and was therefore but six years of age at the death of his father. At the age of thirteen years he shipped on board a trading vessel at Philadelphia, and thereafter followed the sea, until his tragic death in the service of his country, on the "Randolph", March 7, 1778. After several voyages on trading vessels sailing from the port of Philadelphia, then one of the most important maritime ports in the Colonies; and after being several times shipwrecked, young Biddle went to England and became a midshipman on board a British Sloop-of-war, commanded by Capt., afterwards Admiral, Sterling; and subsequently was transferred to a vessel in the command of the Hon. Capt. Phipps, which was sent northward, where he first met Horatio Nelson, a volunteer like himself; and both were made coxswain, 1773.

When an armed conflict between the mother country and the American Colonies became imminent, in 1775, Nicholas Biddle returned to Philadelphia with the determination to enter the service and share the fortunes of his native country in weal or woe. He was placed in command of a galley called the "Franklin," one of the first armed vessels fitted out by the sub-committee of the Committee of Safety, viz., Owen Biddle, (first cousin of Capt. Nicholas) and Robert White; for the defense of the Delaware. He was commissioned Captain of the "Franklin", August 1, 1775. Service in this fleet proving too monotonous for Capt. Biddle, he resigned December 9, 1775, and two weeks later, was appointed, by resolution of Congress, Captain of the "Andrea Doria", a little brig of fourteen guns, and with the squadron of Commodore Hopkins, sailed from Delaware Bay, February 17, 1776, on an expedition against New Providence. Capt. Biddle at once showed special valor and skill in the command of his vessel, the little brig succeeding in capturing two armed transports loaded with soldiers, and made so many prizes of merchant ships, that he returned to the Delaware with but five of his original crew, the others having been put in charge of the prizes captured, and their places filled from the crews of the captured vessels. Capt. Biddle was made captain of the "Randolph," sailed with that vessel for the Carolina coast, February 1777, and remained in that vicinity in charge of the naval operations there, until the "Randolph" was blown up in an attack on the British ship "Yarmouth" March 7, 1778.

Capt. Biddle was an able and intrepid commander and a skilled navigator, and would have inevitably attained high rank had he been spared. He died single, having, at the time of his tragic death, been engaged to marry a lady of Charleston, South Carolina. His naval career, though short, was very brilliant, and his services were highly appreciated by Congress.

COMMODORE JAMES BIDDLE, another naval hero of the Biddle family of Philadelphia, was a nephew of Capt. Nicholas, being the second surviving son of Hon. Charles Biddle by his wife Hannah Shepard. He was born in Philadelphia, February 18, 1783, and left University of Pennsylvania to accept appointment of midshipman, with his brother Edward, under Commodore Truxton, September 1800. He went to the Mediterranean under Commodore Murray, 1802, in the "Constitution", and was later transferred to the "Philadelphia", Capt. Bainbridge, which on October 31, 1803, ran upon a bar on the coast of Tripoli, and all on board were captured by the Moors, and held in captivity until January, 1805. He was made First Lieutenant of the "Wasp", Capt. Jacob Jones, and October 18, 1812, led the boarders from that vessel when she captured the "Frolic", and received medal from Congress for his gallant services and a sword from his native State, and was promoted to Master Commandant, and placed in charge of a flotilla of boats to defend the Delaware, and later to the command of the "Hornet", with which he became blockaded at New London, and was ordered to dismantle his ship, to avoid capture; he, however, begged permission to run the blockade and succeeded in doing so on November 18, 1814.

He joined the East India Squadron, March 22, 1815, and in the capture of the "Penguin", in a battle fought after the treaty of peace was signed, was treacherously shot in the neck by the British crew after they had offered to surrender. At the close of the war he returned to the United States and was promoted to the rank of Captain, and at three different periods held commands in South American waters. In 1817 he took possession of the newly acquired territory of Oregon. In 1826 he signed the commercial treaty with Turkey. 1838-1842, he held the position of Governor of the Naval Asylum at Philadelphia. In 1845, he commanded the East India squadron, and exchanged the ratifications of the first treaty with China, as United States Commissioner to that country. During the Mexican War he took command of the Pacific naval force, having long since been promoted to the rank of Commodore. He returned to Philadelphia in March, 1848, and died there October 1, 1848. He was never married.

JOHN BIDDLE, son of William and Lydia (Wardell) Biddle, born at the ancestral home of the family, "Mount Hope", New Jersey, 1707, left there with his brother William, (whose descendants are traced in the preceding pages), in 1730, and located in Philadelphia, where he was a successful business man many years. He married, March 3, 1736, Sarah, daughter of Owen Owen, a wealthy farmer in the present limits of Montgomery county, a descendant of the family of Owen of Dolly Sene, Wales, one of the most ancient in Great Britain, whose ancestry and descendants of the name are noted in another part of this volume.

Sarah, m. (first) James Penrose; (second) John Shaw; (third) Rudolph Tellier;

Lydia, m. Dr. James Hutchinson, b. Bucks county; Surgeon in Revolutionary War and later distinguished physician in Phila.

OWEN BIDDLE, eldest child of John and Sarah (Owen) Biddle, born at the old Biddle residence, Market street, 1737, on arriving at manhood engaged in the clock and watch-making business in Philadelphia, and later entered into the shipping and importing business with his brother Clement. He was a man of high scholastic attainments. He joined early in life the "Junto", which was a continuation of the literary circle founded by Dr. Franklin, and, 1763, was appointed with Isaac Paschall to revise the laws of the society, which then adopted the name of the "American Society for the Promoting and Propagation of Useful Knowledge", which fused with the American Philosophical Society, 1768, and of which he was one of the most distinguished members, among whom were his brother Clement Biddle, Edmund Physick, Isaac and Moses Bertram, Nicholas Wan, and David Rittenhouse. At the time of the transit of Venus, June 3, 1769, Owen Biddle was assigned to the observatory at Cape Henlopen, and his observations were favorably commented upon by the most noted astronomers of Europe and America. He also conducted observations of the eclipse of the sun, June 24, 1778. He was elected one of the curators of the Philosophical Society, January 5, 1770; one of its secretaries, January 1, 1773; delivered the annual oration, March 2, 1781, and was elected one of the councillors, January 4, 1782. He was an original member of the Company for Encouraging the Culture of Silk in America, 1770.

He was from the first an ardent patriot in opposition to the oppressive measures of the mother country. Both he and his brother Clement were among the earliest signers of the Non-importation Agreement of 1765, he was a delegate to Provincial Conference held at Philadelphia, January 23, 1775, became a most active member of Committee of Safety, and one of the delegates to the Constitutional Convention of July and September, 1776, which framed the constitution under which Pennsylvania was governed from that date until 1790. He had charge of the publication of the Declaration of Independence in the counties of Bucks, Chester, Lancaster, Berks and Northampton. Became a member of first Board of War, March 13, 1777, and was a member of Council of Safety, organized the same date. On July 6, 1775, he was one of the Committee appointed by Committee of Safety, of which he was a member, to superintend the construction of armed boats and obstructions for the defense of the Delaware, and on July 14, 1775, was ordered to secure four tons of grape shot in possession of the city. On August 31, 1775, he was directed to procure a seal for the Board of War, "the size of a Dollar with a Cap of Liberty, and the motto 'This is my right and I will defend it.'" He was constantly on committees to procure ammunition, stores and clothing for the use of the army in the field, and in this work co-operated with his brother Clement who had actively entered the ranks and was Deputy Commissioner of Forage and Supplies for the Pennsylvania Militia. He was one of the eighty merchants who became personally responsible for 260,000 pounds of supplies for the army. He was appointed, February 11, 1782, to run the boundary line between Pennsylvania and Virginia, which settled the long standing dispute on that question with Virginia. In his ardent support of the rights of his countrymen, his financial interest, largely centered in the foreign, West India and Coast trade, was completely wrecked. Three of his vessels being captured and destroyed with their cargoes, he made an assignment of all his property for the benefit of his creditors, January 8, 1783, but his assets proved more than sufficient to pay his debts and left him a small surplus. He had been disowned by the Society of Friends for his activity in warlike measures, and, 1781, was one of the organizers of the society of "Free Quakers", with about one hundred others. However, on May 30, 1783, he sought re-instatement in the Philadelphia Monthly Meeting and again became one of its active members. He took a prominent part in educational matters and was one of the first to agitate the question of establishing a boarding school for instruction in the higher branches; which led to the establishing of Westtown Boarding School in Chester county, under the care of Friends, and he was one of the first committee in charge of the school, October 3, 1794, and served until his death, March 10, 1799. He had married, September 29, 1760, Sarah Parke, born Chester county, Pennsylvania, March 29, 1742, died August 16, 1794, daughter of Thomas and Jane (Edge) Parke, and granddaughter of Thomas Parke, born in Ireland, 1660, who with the greater part of his family came to Pennsylvania in 1724.

Thomas Parke Sr., a member of the Society of Friends, was living in 1720, at either Ballilean, Blaughmoor, or Coolis Nachtah, Ireland, (being a landholder in all three places) with wife Rebecca and ten children, seven of whom accompanied him to America. They embarked from Dublin, Ireland, May 21, 1724, in ship "Sizargh", of White Haven, and arrived in the Delaware at Chester, August 21, 1724. After remaining about three months at Chester, he purchased 500 acres of land in East Caln township, Chester county, and removed thereon. He was an elder of Caln Meeting and active in their affairs. He died 1mo. 31, 1738, and his widow survived him about twelve years.

N. as midshipman February 12, 1799, but resigned March 30, 1804. Returning to Philadelphia, he studied law, was admitted to the bar, and practised some years. Believing that a war with England would immediately result from the Chesapeake outrage, 1807, he entered the regular army of the United States as captain of a company in the Regiment of Light Dragoons, was commissioned May 3, 1808, but when the affair was amicably settled he sent in his resignation, dated September 30, 1809, and resumed the practice of his profession. When the war did break out, in 1812, he raised a company known as "State Fencibles", of which he was elected captain, and took them into the service. He was, however, soon commissioned Colonel of the First Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and served throughout the war. NANNIE DUNLAP, daughter of Thomas Dunlap, Esq., of Philadelphia Bar, by his wife Anne Wilkinson, daughter of Col. Clement Biddle, born in Philadelphia, November 21, 1830, married Feb. 4, 1868, George Mecum Conarro, Esq., a most prominent and able member of Philadelphia Bar, born in Philadelphia, November 9, 1831, died at his summer residence near York Harbor, Maine, August 25, 1896.

From "Report of the Nineteenth Annual Meeting of the American Bar Association" (1896), pp. 675-677, we quote the following Memorial of Mr. Conarro:—

"GEORGE M. CONARROE.

"The late George Mecum Conarro, died from an attack of bronchial pneumonia on August 25, 1896, in the sixty-fifth year of his age, near York Harbor, Maine, where he possessed an extensive and beautiful place, high on the bold rocks of the coast overlooking the sea, in which, during his later years, after he had retired from active professional life, he took the greatest interest and delight.

"He was born in Philadelphia on November 9, 1831. He was the son of George W. Conarro, an artist of prominence. He studied law in the office and under the guidance of Charles E. Lex, Esq., and was admitted to the Bar of Philadelphia on May 14, 1853. He was a most careful and accurate student and acquired that real knowledge of legal principles which is sure to bring success, and what is more, gain the recognition of one's professional brothers. He was pre-eminently learned in the law of real estate and of trusts. He was the legal mentor rather than the advocate. He acquired a large practice especially in the management of estates, and his experience was such that he would have made an admirable judge in a probate court. His mind was clear and logical and his use of the English language exact, as shown in his able opinions which treat of many intricate and important questions. His guidance to clients when in financial difficulties often saved, where in other hands there would have been failure, for in addition to his legal attainments he was, contrary to the opinion generally held of lawyers, an able business man, and managed the interests of others as well as his own, with much profit and advantage.

"In politics he had always been a Republican even before the war-times and never wavered in his allegiance to that party, believing in its principles and aims. He was one of the early members of the Union League of Philadelphia, and was an indefatigable worker for the cause of the Union.

"He was never a politician, preferring personally the life of a private citizen, but took the greatest interest in public affairs with which he was thoroughly conversant, and was on terms of intimacy with many public men of the day. His interest in the country's welfare continued unabated even when an invalid. He was most anxious for the election of Mr. McKinley, but did not live to see its accomplishment, dying in the midst of the campaign.

"His interest in everything American made him proud of our history. He was one of the early members of the Society of Sons of the Revolution being the descendant of an officer, and particularly gave his aid to those undertakings of the Society which tended to keep alive the memory of the Revolutionary times as giving the best lessons in patriotism. He was also one of its Board of Managers until his death.

In religion he was a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church by conviction as well as by inheritance, and was what in old times would have been called a high churchman. He was very prominent in its affairs and was repeatedly a delegate to its conventions, where he was a leading figure, and it has been truly said that it will be hard to fill his place. He was learned in ecclesiastical law and was sought as an advisor by bishops and clergy. The position that he occupied in the church was evidenced by the large number of clergymen from various places who showed him the last mark of respect in their presence at his funeral, which took place at the Church of St. James the Less at Philadelphia, and where amidst its solemn rural beauty he now rests.

"His wife who survives him was Miss Nannie Dunlap, the youngest daughter of Thomas Dunlap, Esq., a leading lawyer of Philadelphia of half a century ago. This union was one of those which are truly helpful, for they did all things together, mutually aiding one another and sharing their sorrows and joys. Mr. Conarro was won't to speak with feeling of the goodness and sweetness of his wife whose helpful sympathy he proudly acknowledged.

"In all that Mr. Conarro undertook he was earnest and persevering—no labor and trouble was too great; and in anything that he believed should be done, he was markedly determined of purpose and would not be turned aside.

"He was one of the truest of friends. His friendship was not only that of sentiment, but he ever bore in mind what would be to the real advantage of those for whom he cared, and spared no effort to advance their hopes and ambitions. Many a friend owes his elevation to a position of honor and reward or to success of some other kind to the aid which Mr. Conarro has given him. He has left an example which all might well imitate, both in his private life and in adorning the profession of his choice.

"George Mecum Conarro was admitted a member of the Sons of the Revolution, March 26, 1889, becoming a life member, and was elected to the Board of Managers, 1892. In the annual report of the Board for 1896, there is an obituary notice, much shorter than the above, which says in part:

"Although a man of retiring and domestic tastes, he took an active interest in public affairs, and in the affairs of the Protestant Episcopal Church, to whose conventions he was repeatedly elected a delegate. He was a vestryman of St. Mark's Church, and of the Church of St. James-the-Less, Philadelphia, and a member of the Philadelphia and Penn Clubs."

George Mecum Conarro is said to have been a descendant of Luigi Cornaro, a noble Venetian, descended from one of the most noble and illustrious families of Venice, who died at Padua, 1565, at about the age of one hundred years. At the age of four score, he published a book on the advantages of temperance, in Italian, translated into Latin by Leonard Lessius, a Professor of Philosophy and Divinity in the Jesuit College at Louvain, who died January 5, 1623, aged sixty-nine years; translated into English by Timothy Smith, an Apothecary of London, and published in that city, 1743. An original copy of this quaint old book can be found in the Philadelphia Library.

LUIGI CONNARROE

As a preface to this quaint little volume, is given an "Extract from Collier's Historical Dictionary", which gives the following account of the author:—

"Lewis Cornaro, descended from one of the most noble and illustrious Families of Venice, was born in the 15th Century. He wrote a Book of the Advantage of Temperance, translated into Latin, by Lessius. He died at Padua in 1565, being about a hundred Years old. Thaunus in the 38th Book of his History gives a Character of him Part of which I shall transcribe for the Reader: 'Lewis Cornaro' says he, 'was an extraordinary and admirable instance of Long Life; for he lived a hundred Years without any Decay in his Health or Understanding. By his Temperance and the Regimen he observed, he recovered his Constitution from some Infirmities, the Liberty of his Youth had brought upon him; and likewise by the Force of Thought and Care conquered his natural Propensity to Cholera; insomuch that when he came to be old, he enjoyed an extraordinary Degree of Health, and was remarkable for the Equality and Sedateness of his Temper, as he had been formerly for his Passion. He wrote Books on this Argument in his Old Age, in which he mentions the Disorder of his Youth, and promises himself a great many Years to come: Neither was he deceived in his Expectation; for he held out to above a Hundred, and then died a very easy Death. His Wife who was no less aged than himself survived him."

The following quotation from the Spectator, vol. III, No. 195, is also given:

"The most remarkable Instance of the Efficacy of Temperance towards the procuring of Long Life, is what we meet with in a little Book published by Lewis Cornaro, the Venetian; which I rather mention, because it is of undoubted Credit, as the late Venetian Ambassador, who was of the same family attested more than once in Conversation, when he resided in England. Cornaro, who was the Author of the little Treatise I am mentioning, was of infirm Constitution till about Forty; when by obstinately persisting in an exact Course of Temperance, he recovered a perfect State of Health; insomuch that at Fourscore he published his Book. He lived to give a Third, or Fourth Edition of it; and after having passed his Hundredth year died without Pain or Agony and like one who falls asleep."

"The Treatise I mention, has been taken notice of by several eminent Authors; and is written with such Spirit of Cheerfulness, Religion, and good Sense, as are natural Comitants of Temperance and Sobriety. The Mixture of the old Man in it, is rather a Recommendation than a Discredit to it."

EMLEN FAMILY

In the town of Shepton Mallett, Somersetshire, England, stands the old parish church of Saint Peter and Saint Paul, on whose registers the name of Emlen, with its various spellings, frequently occurs. Of these the earliest is in the "Perfect Register of the names of all those that are now placed in the fore mentioned new erected seats by ye fore named persons to that purpose deputed and designed, made the 29th day of March, 1619, . . . North Aisle on the East Side, Seat no. 4, Thomas Emblin, for his life: payment, 10 s."

According to tradition the Emlen family came into England from Wales, on the early records of which country the name has been found.

The name Emlen can be traced to ancient dates. In Gibson's Camden's Britannia reference is made to "the old British name of Emlin"—"which was common among the Britains anciently, and is partly yet retained." "It was Roman and is the same with Æmilinus mentioned in Denbigshire, which the Inscription calls Aimilini." "Not far from Klokainog we read this inscription on a stone (which is doubtless an epitaph of some soldier of note, who can be but very little, if at all, later than the Romans)

Tovisag' "

"The name Aimilinus we are to understand as the same with Æmilinus and that no other than Æmilianus. As for the second word . . . Tovisag or Tovisaci; if the former, it is British and signifies a leader or general; and if the latter, it seems only the same word Latinised. "The place where this stone lies is called Bryn y Bedheu, which signifies the Hill of Graves, and . . . there is near it an artificial mount . . . also . . . there are several circles of stones; and, in the same neighborhood, a place called Rhys y Gadva, or Battle-field." In "Archæologia Cambrensis," this stone is called "The Sepulchral Stone of Emlyn"; after some explanation it is there stated that: "The late Mr. Aneurin Owen, one of the most eminent Welsh scholars and archaeologists, considered this stone to be the memorial of a Welsh prince or leader, Emlyn; . . . The tradition of the place seems constantly to have been in favor of this being the grave of a prince or nobleman named Emlyn; . . . I think there can be no doubt that this Emlyn Inscription is a very early one and that it dates from the fifth or sixth century."

This stone has now been removed for safety to Pool Park." As to the Roman origin of the name, further information can be educed (see Century Dictionary and Encyclopedia). Down as late as the middle of the sixteenth century, we find on the Emlen family records in England such names as Maximilian and Dionysius. In a history of Pembroke-shire, we read that Wales was "in Ancient tyme devided into Cantredes and Comotts" . . . "of these "Emlyn Cantred containinge three Comottes" . . . In this Cantred was New Castle Emlyn; called New Castle on account of having been rebuilt by Sir Rhys ap Thomas. Its ruins remain to this day, and concerning it, accounts have been written.

Our earliest information in regard to the founder of the family in Pennsylvania is taken from an "Account of the life of George Emlen, late of Philadelphia", as given by his sons, Joshua and Samuel Emlen, which locates the birth-place of their father at Shepton Mallett.

According to the "Account", the parents of George Emlen, who are unfortunately not named, died while he was young, and in consequence George was placed "under the care and tuition of an Aunt, who was a Presbyterian. He was one of that people till he arrived at mature age, when . . . turning a Friend, he was deprived of his Aunt's favor, or expectations from her, who was a Person of considerable substance in the World. When meeting her displeasure, he was necessitated to provide for himself," and came to Philadelphia in 1682, "with William Penn," as the account states.

On 12mo. 3, 1687-8, George Emlen "Vintner", received a Proprietary grant of property on the north side of Chestnut street, between Second and Third streets. He subsequently acquired additional land adjoining and also on Sassafras street, by which name Race street was formerly known.

On 3mo. (May) 3, 1690, he and five others petitioned the Commissioners of Property for a reduction of the quitrents on their lots on Chestnut street, which was granted them.

George Emlen married first, 9mo. 12, 1685, Eleanor, daughter of Penn's commissioner, Nathaniel Allen. She died 1mo. 22, 1690. He married second, Hannah Garrett, June 5, 1694; she was born in Harby, Leicestershire, England, June 23, 1674, daughter of William and Ann (Kirk) Garrett, of Darby, Pennsylvania.

George Emlen died 10mo. 24, 1710. Concerning his death, his sons wrote as follows: "The evening after he had settled his worldly affairs and made his will, he called for his four sons, and his wife being present, he addressed himself to them after the following manner: 'Children I have been appointing somewhat for you, and do now advise you, to live in the fear of the Lord, and to be dutiful and obedient to your mother, and to keep to truth and plainness; to be loving and kind to your sisters;' with diverse other weighty expressions, and the next morning quietly departed this life, being on a Christmas day, so called, and on the 7th of the week, and the day following was decently interred in Friends' burying ground, after the afternoon meeting, the Corpse being first carried to the meeting house and from thence to the burying ground, accompanied by a large number of Friends and others."

Hannah, widow of George Emlen, married, 10mo. 20, 1716, William Tidmarsh, of Chester, Pennsylvania, and died 6mo. 24, 1738. Of Hannah Emlen her sons Joshua and Samuel wrote: "she was a noble example to them [her children] in all that was good and laudable . . . an entire friend to the Poor and Distressed; undaunted in danger, an easy mistress and good neighbor, neither lavish nor penurious, but an example of industry as well to her own children as servants . . . and dyed in peace."

Issue of George and Hannah (Garrett) Emlen:

Mary Emlen, b. 11mo. 1, 1707-8, d. s. p., 2mo. 18, 1791; m. 1728, John Armitt, b. 10mo. 8, 1702, died 5mo. 20, 1762, son of Richard and Sophia Armitt;

Sarah Emlen, b. 1mo. 19, 1709-10, d. 8mo. 2, 1752, at the home of her brother, Joshua Emlen; m. 3mo. 25, 1738, James, son of Solomon and Anna (Watson) Cresson.

GEORGE EMLEN (George), born 5mo. 7, 1695, died 10mo. 24, 1754; married, 2mo. 24, 1717, Mary, born in England, 4mo. 11, 1692, died 6mo. 2, 1777; daughter of Robert and Susannah Heath, who came from Staffordshire, England, about 1701.

Of George Emlen, the second, his brothers wrote that "being the oldest son he became a tender father to his brothers and sisters." He served his apprenticeship with a brewer, in the later following of which business he greatly prospered. He took a prominent part in public affairs, being a member of Common Council of the city from 1730 to 1739, then an office of some distinction. In 1731, when the Philadelphia Library was founded, George Emlen was one of the charter members.

In 1735 he purchased property at Fifth and Chestnut streets, opposite Independence Hall, the family home for many years. It is not known whether he built the house near Camp Hill, Montgomery county, which, in the possession and occupancy of his son, George Emlen the third, became famous as Washington's headquarters. Recorded deeds show that George Emlen, "brewer", did own land in that neighborhood, to which he was no doubt attracted because of its nearness to his brother-in-law, Morris Morris, living at "Hope Lodge," a fine old mansion which still stands, a well preserved example of early Colonial architecture.

"Emlenton," near Tacony, recently taken down by Henry Disston and Sons, was also family property, the first owner of which may have been this George Emlen, or his son George Emlen, third of the name.

Mary (Heath) Emlen was a highly esteemed minister in the Society of Friends for nearly fifty years, and in this calling visited New England and other places.

Issue of George and Mary (Heath) Emlen:—

GEORGE EMLEN, b. 6mo. 21, 1718, d. 1mo. 3, 1776; m. Anne Reckless;

Hannah Emlen, b. 4mo. 1, 1722, d. 1mo. 30, 1777; m. 1mo. 24, 1740, at Philadelphia Meeting, William, son of James and Sarah (Read) Logan. It was to Hannah (Emlen) Logan that the pewter plate (see illustration) belong. The plate is one of a number of dishes so marked, now owned by Mr. Sidney Logan. Burke's General Armory, under: "Emline or Emley, Helmdon, county Hants. Sa. a wild man statant, wreathed about the loins and temples, holding with both hands a tree eradicated, all ppr. Crest: A demi wild man, as in the arms, holding with both hands a club over the right shoulder, all ppr. Motto: Honestum praetulit utili." The supposition is that the set to which the plate belonged was part of the outfit of Hannah Emlen at the time of her marriage in 1740 to William Logan. Several seals of the arms and crest, as above described, are in possession of different members of the Emlen family in America, and the same crest appeared on the envelope enclosing a letter recently received from Dr. Charles W. Emlyn, of London, whose "great uncle, Architect to George IV., is buried in St. George's Chapel," Windsor, where is a tablet to his memory. The Helmdon branch of the family appears about the middle of the 16th century, when Thomas Emylie, Esq., "Lord of the Manor of Netherbury, in the Parish of Helmedon, County Northampton," married Joyce, daughter of Thomas Godwyn, Bishop of Bath and Wells. This marriage may afford some explanation for the appearance of Emlens in the county of Somersetshire. The fact that Dionysius Emylie of Helmedon (who was apparently a brother of said Thomas) went to Wales to live, and there died at the advanced age of eighty-six years, may account for the tradition that the family came from that part of the country, although other Emlyns appear on Welsh records. Said Dionysius had a son Thomas, baptized 1588, who could have been the same person who in 1619, made payment for Seat No. 4 "for his life" in the Parish Church at Shepton Mallet, as hereinbefore described. Another tradition in the American branch is that a family connection existed, by marriage, with the Dryden family, which is explained from the facts that Thomas and Joyce Emylie's eldest daughter married Nicholas Dryden, brother of Erasmus Dryden. The granddaughter of this Erasmus Dryden married Sylvester Emlyn, father of Thomas Emlyn, the noted "champion of Arianism." Sylvester Emlyn was therefore brother-in-law to the Poet Laureate, John Dryden.

Joseph Emlen, b. 5mo. 1, 1728, d. 11mo. 17, 1750; unm.

SAMUEL EMLEN (George), born 2mo. 15, 1697, died 10mo. 28, 1783; married, 10mo. 2, 1731, Rachel, born 9mo. 11, 1707, died 9mo. 12, 1771; daughter of William and Mary (Richardson) Hudson. Samuel Emlen, "the Elder", was described as, "through life a remarkably healthy man, about middle stature, not corpulent, very temperate in living." His will indicates that he left a large estate.

Issue of Samuel and Rachel (Hudson) Emlen:—

Sarah Emlen, d. s. p., 12mo. 16, 1813, in the eightieth year of her age; m. 1mo. 12, 1773, Thomas, son of Richard and Margaret (Preston) Moore, and great-grandson of Gov. Thomas Lloyd.

JOSHUA EMLEN (George), born 2mo. 14, 1701, died 5mo. 22, 1776; married soon after 9mo. 25, 1726 (at which date they "passed Meeting") Mary (Holton), widow of Samuel Hudson, and daughter of Arthur and Elizabeth (Guest) Holton. She died 12mo. 23, 1726. He married second, soon after 9mo. 29, 1728, Deborah, born 8mo. 24, 1706, died 1mo. 16, 1729-30; daughter of Samuel and Abigail (Wilcox) Powell.

Joshua Emlen, "tanner", became a member of the Common Council of the city in 1742, and served at intervals until 1756. He lived at the upper end of Second street, in the Northern Liberties, beyond the then limits of the city.

Issue of Joshua and Deborah (Powell) Emlen:—

SAMUEL EMLEN, b. 1mo. 15, 1730, d. 12mo. 30, 1799; m. first, 7mo. 6, 1761, at Philadelphia Meeting, Elizabeth, dau. of William Moode. He married second, 2 mo. 1, 1770, Sarah, who d. 10mo. 26, 1796; dau. of Asher Mott.

Samuel Emlen was one of the most noted ministers among Philadelphia Friends, and is known as Samuel Emlen "the minister" and "the seer." He is described as a slender, neatly built man, with a light, quick step. He was an apt scholar, being acquainted with Latin and Greek, and so well versed in the modern languages that he was able in his ministry abroad to address his listeners in their own tongues. After finishing his education, he became apprentice in the counting-house of James Pemberton, but having sufficient means was never in business on his own account. He first spoke in the ministry in 1756, at a meeting in Ireland, while on his first visit abroad. Many anecdotes are told of his wonderful insight into the character and condition of those with whom he came into contact, and the startling words addressed to them. He visited England six times, also Ireland, Holland and the Barbadoes.

Issue of Samuel and Elizabeth (Moode) Emlen:—

William Emlen, b. 5mo. 17, 1765, d. under age;

Samuel Emlen, b. 9mo. 4, 1766, d. s. p., 12mo. 29, 1837; m. 4mo. 16, 1795, Susannah, dau. of William and Sarah Logan (Smith) Dillwyn. They lived at "West Hill", Burlington county, N. J., (afterward the home of Eliza Gurney). After his wife's death, Samuel Emlen resided in the town of Burlington. The Emlen Institute for the education of orphan boys of African and Indian descent, first organized in Ohio, but finally removed to Bucks county, Pa., was founded by Samuel Emlen. At present the foundation is vested in the colored school at Cheyney, Chester co., Pa.

Deborah Emlen, d. 4mo. 17, 1789, aged seventeen years;

Elizabeth Emlen, d. 6mo. 19, 1820, aged forty-seven years; m. 9mo. 20, 1800, Philip Syng Physick, M. D.

GEORGE EMLEN (George,² George), styled "the Elder" or "merchant," born in Philadelphia, 6mo. 21, 1718, died 1mo. 3, 1776; married at Chesterfield Meeting, Burlington county, New Jersey, 12mo. 25, 1740, Anne, born 10mo. 4, 1720, died 2mo. 4, 1816; daughter of Joseph and Margaret (Satterthwaite) Reckless.

Joseph was the son of Samuel Reckless, iron-monger, of county of Nottingham, England, who in 1678 purchased one-fifteenth of a proprietary in West Jersey. Samuel's father, John Reckless, was the Nottingham sheriff referred to in the Journal of George Fox.

The following obituary notice appeared in Poulson's American Daily Advertiser, February 10, 1816:

"Died, on the fourth instant, in the ninety-sixth year of her age, Anne Emlen, widow, relict of George Emlen, formerly of this city, whom she survived about forty years. Of their posterity (several of whom have held conspicuous stations in civil and religious society, and departed before her), one hundred and forty-seven yet survive in the relation of children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren. She herself long occupied the rank of an exemplary and charitable citizen, fulfilling with much propriety the duties of parent, friend, neighbor and mistress. She retained her faculties to the last; and very shortly before her departure, sensible of its approach, warmly recommended to her numerous descendants to live in harmony and moderation. Her remains, attended by a very numerous train of relations and friends, were interred on the 6th in Friends' Burial Ground, Mulberry Street." She was buried from "Her late dwelling No. 179 [old number] Chestnut St."

George Emlen's Place, near Camp Hill, Whitmarsh Valley, which still stands, was the headquarters of General Washington from November 2d to December 11, 1777. The first purchase was apparently made by his father and subsequently added to by George Emlen, third, "merchant." His city residence was at Chestnut and Fifth streets, opposite Independence Hall, formerly occupied by his father.

Caleb Peirce was grandson of George Peirce, who with his wife, Anne (Gainer) Peirce, came from England in 1684, and that same year had surveyed to him a tract of four hundred and ninety acres in Thornbury township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. On his arrival he presented two certificates to a meeting of Friends "att the Governor's house", one from "the Monthly Meeting at ffrenshay in the county of Gloucester", and the other from Thornbury in the same county. George Peirce represented Chester county in the Provincial Assembly in 1706 and was very active in the community meetings of Friends. "He was one of a company who erected the Concord Mill, the first mill built in the neighborhood."

James Emlen, after his education was completed, declined to travel abroad, as his parents had intended, preferring to stay with his relative, Hannah, widow of William Miller, of New Garden, Chester county. "He assumed the management of her mill without an assistant and declined compensation, stipulating only that he might grind for some of the poorer customers without taking toll. In this, however, he was careful not to let the left hand know what the right hand did." He removed to Middletown in 1782, where he became owner of considerable land. Although but about thirty-eight years of age when he died he was an elder in the Meeting and served as clerk, recorder, etc. He was appointed one of the first standing committee to give attention to the condition of the Indian natives, and which committee, by successive re-appointments, has continued to the present time.

 1789, died 4mo. 17, 1828; married, 11mo. 4, 1819, Beulah Sansom, daughter of Jacob Valentine, of New York, and his wife, Elizabeth Ann, daughter of Col.
 Benjamin George Eyre.

Although Dr. Samuel Emlen died in the prime of life, he was one of the most eminent physicians of his day. He studied under Dr. Parrish, of Philadelphia; graduated, and in June, 1812, sailed for England. After a stay of over two years abroad, during which time he continued his studies, he returned to this country and took up the practice of his profession in Philadelphia. He soon became prominent as a physician; was a member of the Board of Guardians of the Poor; of the Magdalen Asylum; the Orphan Asylum and the Friends' Asylum for the Insane. He was secretary of College of Physicians and one of the physicians of Pennsylvania Hospital. He was buried at Sixteenth and Cherry streets, Philadelphia.

JAMES EMLLEN (James,⁴ George, George, George), born 6mo. 17, 1792, died 9mo. 20, 1866; married, 1mo. 11, 1816, at Middletown Meeting, Sarah (Foulke) Farquhar, daughter and only child of Cadwalader and Phebe (Ellis) Foulke, and widow of William Farquhar, born 4mo. 27, 1787, in Upper Freehold, New Jersey.

James Emlen left an orphan at six years of age; was educated at Westtown School and subsequently went to New York City, where he resided until his majority, with his sister Mary, who had married George Newbold. He was twenty-one years old when he removed to Middletown, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and occupied one of his father's farms, living in the old home called the "Upper House." Here he became a plain Friend; married; and after the birth of his third child, moved to the "Lower House", close at hand, also owned by his father, where the rest of his children were born and where he remained until his removal to Westtown School, in the spring of 1836. During this period he was appointed Elder of Society of Friends, a position which he continued to hold as long as he lived. It was also at this time, that, in harmony with his inclination for a quiet but useful life, he conducted a private school for boys, to accommodate which he erected a building on his farm, which was used as a Meeting house by Orthodox Friends at the time of "the Separation in 1827," until a new Meeting house was built.

After moving to Westtown School, he, with his family, occupied one of the dwellings on the grounds of that Institution. In the spring of 1848 he removed to West Chester, Pennsylvania, where he passed in retirement, the last eighteen years of his life. His wife (for many years a recorded minister of the Society of Friends) during the family's residence at Westtown, went on a religious visit to England, where she remained about two years. year following the removal to West Chester. The impulses, ideals and principles of James Emlen's character are well illustrated by the following concluding expressions in his will:

"Feeling grateful for the love and harmony that has always prevailed amongst my children, I much desire the same may be continued and descend to children's children, and this will be the case in proportion as it becomes the love and fellowship of the Gospel."

WALN FAMILY

Of Nicholas Waln, emigrant ancestor of the Pennsylvania family of that name, as well as of a number of other families who were prominent in Colonial history of Philadelphia and vicinity, friend and counselor of William Penn, and a fellow passenger with him in the "Welcome" in 1682, much has been written. Until recently, however, nothing was known of his parentage or place of residence in England, but we are now able to give some account of his parents and the place of his birth.

Richard Waln and Jane his wife, who lived in the small village of Burholme, in district called Bolland, in West Riding of Yorkshire, England, were among the earliest converts to Quakerism, in Yorkshire. They belonged to Bolland Meeting, a branch of Settle Montly Meeting, as early as 1654, a date very shortly after the rise of the Society of Friends.

The exact limits of the district called Bolland were somewhat indefinite, and even seem to have varied from time to time, or at least to have been variously apprehended by different authorities. Before Richard Waln's time there had been a forest here called "Bolland Forest" and there were, no doubt, remains of it even in his day, though no longer a forest in the official sense. It is presumed that the Bolland of the old records was Bolland Liberty, and that it coincided with the ancient extent of the Forest. Baines' "Gazetteer of the County of York," 1822, speaks of Burholme as in the parish of Bolland, but this was doubtless an error, as no other authorities mention a parish of that name, while several show conclusively that Burgolme was in the parish of Slaidburn. The name Bolland, now spelt Bowland, which probably represents its proper pronunciation formerly as well as now, also applied to three townships included in the same region; one of these being High Bowland-Forest, a township entirely in the parish of Slaidburn and wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewcross, West Riding of Yorkshire; another, Low Bowland-Forest, partly in the same parish and wapentake, and partly in the parish of Whalley, Blackburn Hundred, Lancashire; and the third altogether in the latter parish, hundred and shire. High and Low Bowland-Forest together constituted Bowland Liberty, which as abovesaid was no doubt what was meant by the Bolland in the old records.

Burholme itself, called "Borholme" in Baines' Gazetteer above referred to, and "Burham in Bolland" in the registers of Settle Monthly Meeting of Friends, can be definitely located. It was about eight miles northwest of Clitheroe, and in the parish of Slaidburn and Liberty of Bolland, most probably in the township of High Bowland-Forest, as that was all within said parish and most certainly in Yorkshire.

Of the personal affairs of Richard and Jane Waln we have little record. In 1664 Richard Waln was sued at Whitwell Court for tithes and had a mare taken from him worth four pounds. Jane Waln was daughter of Edward Rudd, of Knowmeare, Yorkshire, a place at present not identified, but doubtless also in parish of Slaidburn. As to her family besides her father, we know of two sisters, Dorothy and Mary Rudd, who married respectively the brothers, William and Cuthbert Hayhurst Jr., sons of Cuthbert and Alice Hayhurst, of Easington, in the same parish of Slaidburn, West Riding of Yorkshire; also an undoubted cousin, Elizabeth, daughter of Giles Rudd, probably brother of Edward, of Mouldhills, in the same locality, who married Thomas Walmsley, of Wadington Eaves, in the same wapentake as all of the above Staincliffe and Ewcross, but in a different parish, Milton. All of these parties will be mentioned later as most of them accompanied Nicholas Waln to Pennsylvania.

Richard Waln died April 7, 1659, and his widow, Jane Waln, then of Slainmerow, parish of Slaidburn, married, October 31, 1667, at the house of Robert Walbancke, Newton, same parish, William Birket, of Newton. Their subsequent residence was her house in Slaidberow, instead of his house in Newton, and here a number of her relatives or connections were married. In the records of some of these marriages her residence, or that of her husband, is given differently, but the duplicate or complementary entries show that Slaidberow continued to be her home. Thus at the marriage of Elizabeth Rudd and Thomas Walmsley, which took place there November 13, 1665, her residence in one entry is given as "Smelfats", which is also given as Elizabeth Rudd's own residence, but the duplicate entry shows it to have been as above (though a copyist's error made it "Rainemerow"). In one record of Jane Birket's son Nicholas Waln's marriage at the same house, October 1, 1673, it is called "Will^m Birket's, Chapelcroft," the latter place being really Nicholas Waln's own residence; but two counter entries give it correctly, "Will^m Birket's Slainmerow". If she was the same Jane Birket, at whose house in Slainmerow, Jenet Stackhouse and Richard Scott were married, April 9, 1696, and she probably was, as the Stackhouse family were connected by marriage, she must have survived her first husband thirty-seven years, living all that time in this place.

On the register of Settle Monthly Meeting occur the births of two children of Richard and Jane (Rudd) Waln, Anne, born August 15, 1654, and Edward, September 22, 1657. Of Edward we know nothing further, but Anne married James Dilworth and came to Pennsylvania as will be shown below. Richard and Jane are known to have had an elder son Nicholas, who came to Pennsylvania and founded the family which is the subject of this sketch, and there are supposed to have had another and still older son Richard Waln, also an early settler in Philadelphia county, and perhaps other children, the births having occurred before the parents joined Friends, and hence their births are not entered on Friends records.

RICHARD WALN, supposed to have been eldest son of Richard and Jane (Rudd) Waln, came to Pennsylvania in 1682, and settled in what was afterwards Cheltenham township, Philadelphia, now Montgomery county. He was a member of the Society of Friends. About this time there was filed in the Philadelphia Monthly Meeting a certificate for one Richard Wall from a Monthly Meeting "held at the House of Edward Edwards of Stock Orchard, in ye County of Gloucester" dated 4mo. 26, 1682, but whether this was our Richard Waln (whose name was as frequently spelled Wall as Waln in the early records here), or another, is not certain; nor does it suggest any relationship to Richard and Jane Waln, of Burholme, for Gloucestershire is not very near to Yorkshire. In tomo., 1683, a meeting was established at the house of Richard Waln in Cheltenham, which was the nucleus of Abington Particular Meeting. There were two other meetings in the vicinity at that time, one at Tacony, afterwards called Oxford Meeting, and one at John Hart's called Poquessing and later Bybery Meeting; these three formed a monthly meeting early called indiscriminately by either of these names, but in 1702 definitely named Abington Monthly Meeting. Richard Waln was a leading spirit in the organization and served on many of the committees of this monthly meeting, and was frequently its representative in Quarterly Meeting. On 9mo. 24, 1690, he was granted a certificate to travel to Maryland, no doubt on a religious visit. He died March 26, 1698, and was buried the 28th, at Cheltenham. His wife Joan died February 2, 1701-2, and was buried the 4th, also at Cheltenham. They were accompanied to Pennsylvania by their son, Richard Waln Jr., and the latter's daughter Sarah. Richard Jr. died April 6, 1689, and Sarah married, February 14, 1694-5, at her grandfather's house in Cheltenham, George Shoemaker. There seems to have been no other descendants of Richard Waln Sr. except Sarah Shoemaker, who was made sole executor of her grandfather's will, dated March 15, 1697-8, proved February 9, 1701-2, which mentioned no other relatives except his wife Joan.

Anne Waln, daughter of Richard and Jane (Rudd) Waln, born August 15, 1654, became a minister in the Society of Friends. She married, about 1680, James Dilworth, of Yorkshire, also a minister, and they afterwards went to Pennsylvania, at about the same time as her brother, Nicholas Waln. An account of him in "The Friend," (Philadelphia, vol. xxvii, gives some personal particulars as to both: "James Dilworth, was an inhabitant of Thornby in Yorkshire before his removal to Pennsylvania, and was convinced of the Truth there. For a meeting held at his house on the 13th of Tenth Month, 1676, a fine was imposed on him, to satisfy which he had two oxen taken. At what time he came forth in the ministry we cannot tell, but he laboured faithfully therein according to his measure, having a loving helpful companion in his wife Ann, who was also a minister of the Gospel.

"James Dilworth and Ann Waln were married about the year 1681, and some time after removed to this country, and settled in Bucks county. He was in public life for a time, representing his neighbors in the Assembly. In their religious labors, he and his wife travelled much together, visiting in this way, in 1689, the meetings of Friends in New England. In 1697 and perhaps the early part of 1698, they travelled southward through Maryland, Virginia and Carolina, having with both these visits the unity of the Yearly Meeting of Ministering Friends."

On 7mo. 26, 1698, Abington Monthly Meeting granted Ann Dilworth alone a certificate to visit Friends in England, by way of Barbados; the Yearly Meeting of Ministers, in March, 1698-9, approved her certificate, and she left about the end of the month. "The parting from her husband was a final one. A few months after her departure the yellow fever broke out in Philadelphia, and among the valuable Friends removed by it from works to rewards was James Dilworth. He died in the Seventh Month (September), 1699, being buried on the 15th, the First-day before Yearly Meeting."

James Dilworth appears to have served but one term in Assembly, that of 1685. About 1693 he removed to Bristol township, Philadelphia county, where he died. In his will dated September 8, 1699, proved December 10, 1700, he named his wife Ann, sole executrix, and mentioned his children: William, Richard, Jane, Hannah, Jennett, Rebecca and James Dilworth (brother-in-law, Nicholas Waln, and friend, Edmund Orpwood, Ann (Waln) Dilworth married (second) in 1701, probably in November, Christopher Sibthorp, of Philadelphia, a large landholder in the Northern Liberties, whose will dated December 25, 1707, proved January 24, 1707-8, mentioned his wife Ann and children, not named, sister Elizabeth Whitwort, and her daughter Mary, and friends Joshua Fisher, Barbara Wright and her daughter Rebecca Corker. Ann (Waln) Sibthorp's own will, dated August 27, 1710, mentioned her children: James, William, Richard and Rebecca Dilworth, making the sons William and Richard executors and Nicholas Waln and Edmund Orpwood overseers.

James and Ann (Waln) Dilworth had eight children, as given below, the record of the births of the first six appearing on the register of Middletown Monthly Meeting in Bucks county, and those of the last two at Abington Monthly Meeting in Philadelphia county:

William Dilworth, b. in England, July 25, 1681;

Richard Dilworth, b. July 8, 1683; m. 1707, Elizabeth Worrell;

Jane Dilworth, b. March 18, 1684-5, d. 1701; m. May 8, 1701, at Oxford Meeting, Phila. co., Thomas Hodges, of Oxford twp., Phila. co., who d. March 28, 1708; he m. (second) his first wife's cousin, Hannah Waln, dau. of Nicholas, of whom hereafter; Jane (Dilworth) Hodges had no issue;

Hannah Dilworth, b. Feb. 25, 1688-9; m. June 9, 1709, at Oxford Meeting, John Worrell, of Oxford twp., brother of Elizabeth, wife of her brother, Richard Dilworth;

Jennett Dilworth, b. March 20, 1690-1; m. 1710, Samuel Bolton;

Ann Dilworth, b. Feb. 9, 1691-2;

Rebecca Dilworth, m. Dec., 1711, George Shoemaker;

James Dilworth, b. Nov. 3, 1695; m. 1718, Sarah Worrell.

NICHOLAS WALN, son of Richard and Jane (Rudd) Waln, of Burholme, Bolland, parish of Slaidburn, West Riding of Yorkshire, England, was born there about the year 1650, doubtless before his parents joined the Society of Friends, as his birth does not appear of record on the register of any Monthly Meeting in Yorkshire.

Before the date of his marriage, he had removed to Chapelcroft, same locality. On June 7, 1682, Settle Monthly Meeting issued a joint certificate to Nicholas Waln and family, together with a number of other persons, mostly connected with him by ties of more or less remote kinship, all intending to remove to Pennsylvania. The persons included in this certificate, besides Nicholas Waln, his wife and three children, were: Cuthbert and William Hayhurst, his uncles by marriage, mentioned above as having married Mary and Dorothy Rudd, sisters to Nicholas Waln's mother, and the former's wife, Mary and children, William's wife, Dorothy, having died in 1676, and their daughter Ann, in 1678; the Hayhurst's sisters, Alice and Margery, and their husbands, Thomas Wigglesworth and Thomas Stackhouse; Thomas Walmsley and his wife Elizabeth Rudd before mentioned as having married in 1665 at Nicholas Waln's mother's, whose cousin she was; Widow Ellen Cowgill, perhaps a sister of Thomas Stackhouse, and her children; Thomas Croasdale, Agnes, his wife, and six children, whose relationship is not so clear. A more particular account of this certificate and these people is given in the Cowgill descent of the Pemberton family in these volumes.

This whole party embarked on the ship, "Welcome", within a few months of the date of their certificate, accompanying William Penn, Lord Proprietary of Pennsylvania, on his first voyage to his Province, and arrived at New Castle, Delaware river, Territories of Pennsylvania, October 27, 1682. All these allied families proceeded to Bucks county, where the heads of the families, having already purchased land from the proprietary, had their land laid out to them. Here they took up their residences and laid the foundation for a considerable section of the local aristocracy of Colonial times, while the family connection already existing on their arrival was further strengthened by a number of inter-marriages between their descendants.

By deeds of lease and release dated April 21 and 22, 1682, Nicholas Waln bought of William Penn 1,000 acres of land in Pennsylvania. A Patent for 500 acres of this was issued to him by the Commissioners of Property, January 29, 1684-5, the land having been laid out in two tracts of 250 acres each, (the warrant for one bearing date March 21, 1683-4) on Neshaminy creek, one in Middletown township, and one across the creek in Northampton township, Bucks county. Both of these tracts are shown on Holme's Map of the Province. Waln sold all of this 500 acres, 200 to Edmund Cutler and 50 to Thomas Stackhouse in 1686; 50 to William Hayhurst in 1689, and 200 to John Stackhouse in 1695-6. Of the other half of his 1,000 acres purchase, the land was apparently never laid out in his name, he having sold his rights, 150 acres to Henry Walmsley; 100 to Thomas Walmsley, brother of Henry; 230 to Jediah Allen, of Shrewsbury, East Jersey, all in 1686; and to John Goodson his right to the Liberty Land in the County of Philadelphia appurtenant to his purchase, which under the original conditions would have been 20 acres, completing the purchase of 1,000 acres. These Liberty Lands, by a later ruling reduced to 16 acres, were ordered to be surveyed to John Goodson, by the Commissioners of Property, July 6, 1692. Besides these tracts Nicholas Waln purchased three other tracts in Bucks county, 118 acres of Thomas Holme's tract in Bristol township in 1686, which he sold to John Town in 1697; 340 acres in the same township of Elizabeth, relict of Edmund Bennett in 1692, which he sold to Robert Heaton in 1697; and 250 acres of Thomas Croasdale, which he sold to Robert Heaton in 1702.

On the tract laid out to Nicholas Waln on the Neshaminy in Middletown township he erected a dwelling for himself, and here on January 1, 1682-3, the first Friends Meeting of the locality was held, for some years known as Neshaminy and afterwards down to the present as Middletown Meeting. It continued to be held at the house of Nicholas Waln, and that of Robert Hall alternately until the Meeting-House was ready for use nearly five years later. The Bucks County Quarterly Meeting, 9mo. (November) 4, 1684, met at Waln's house, and afterwards alternated between that and William Biles's house in Falls, for a time, and continued to be held with him at least once a year until 1695, after which it convened at Falls and Middletown Meeting-houses.

Nicholas Waln was unquestionably the leader of the little party which had accompanied him into the wilderness along the Neshaminy. He was a member of the first Assembly, which met at Philadelphia, March 12, 1682-3, and represented Bucks county in that body in 1687-88-89-92-95. He was a member of the first Grand Jury empaneled October 25, 1683, was Sheriff of Bucks county in 1685, and Justice of the Courts of that County.

In 1696 he removed to Philadelphia county, taking up his residence in what was then known as the Northern Liberties, which embraced at that time a much larger part of the county than was comprised within the district subsequently incorporated under that name, extending a few squares above Vine street. His new neighbors placed the same value upon his abilities as had those of Bucks county, for he was immediately chosen a representative from Philadelphia county in the Assembly and served during the sessions of 1696-97-1700-01-13-14-15-17. He was also named as one of the directors of the public school with James Logan, Isaac Norris, Edward Shippen and others in 1711. As already shown Nicholas Waln was active in the councils of the Society of Friends. He was practically the founder of Middletown Monthly Meeting as above shown, and on his removal to Philadelphia became active and prominent in the Monthly Meeting there. In 1702 that meeting authorized him in conjunction with John Goodson to purchase for the use of Friends, four acres of Liberty Lands, and here was established the Fair Hill Burying Ground, and about 1706 or 1707, erected Fair Hill Meeting House on the Germantown road. He continued active in the Society of Friends until his death in 1721.

An extended account of him was published in "The Friend," vol. xxviii, from which we quote:—

"Sometime in the year 1682, Nicholas Waln, Jane his wife and their children reached Pennsylvania, and settled in Bucks County, near the Neshaminy. They probably were located before midsummer for before the end of that year he was elected one of the members of Assembly, which met in the First Month 1683. At this time, although noted among the 'faithful Friends', it does not appear that he had received a gift in the ministry. It was not long however, before he was called to labour by word and doctrine for the everlasting good of his fellow men. In this service he was much employed by his Divine Master at home and abroad, and he endeavored to acquit himself of the duties that devolved upon him, as respected his own self, the claims of his family, and of the public. This last was no light task, being fourteen times elected as a legislator of the new Colony.

"Early in the year 1689, with the approbation and unity of Friends Nicholas Walln paid a religious visit to Maryland. He was accompanied by James Radcliff. On returning from this visit he could gratefully acknowledge the comforting presence of their divine Master in the journey, and that they had had 'many good meetings.'

"Nicholas Walln had a share of the labour with George Keith, being one of the committee of the Meeting of Ministers to advise with and admonish him. He bore his testimony against the spirit under which Keith was acting, and signed various of the documents issued by the Yearly Meeting of Ministers and the Yearly Meeting of business, relative to that opposing and contentious one. About 1696 he removed to the neighborhood of Philadelphia and became a member of that Monthly Meeting. He was soon much employed by the meeting in transacting its business, and, like his friend Griffith Owen, was a member of almost all committees on important subjects.

"In the First Month, 1699, he informed his Friends of the Select Meeting, that he had a concern to visit 'New England and thereaway' on religious service. This visit appears to have occupied several months."

The Friend publishes a letter from him soon after his return from this journey, to William Ellis, in England, telling him of the death of many Friends in Philadelphia from yellow fever in this year, among them his own brother-in-law, James Dilworth, and requests Ellis to remember him and his son Richard to their sister and aunt Ann Dilworth, then also in England, and "to all our relations and friends in Bolland."

"After the Yearly Meeting in the Seventh Month 1702, Nicholas Waln, in company with John Lea, visited Friends in East and West Jersey and Long Island." In 1706 he was one of the representatives from the Quarterly Meeting that had charge of bringing that body's resolution against tombstones before the Yearly Meeting, recommending the latter to make a rule of discipline against their erection. At the same Yearly Meeting he was a member of the committee to draw up an epistle of instruction etc. to the Quarterly Meeting and Monthly Meetings, which is printed at length in The Friend.

"Nicholas Waln continued to be much employed in visiting neighboring meetings, and in fulfilling the various appointments laid on him by his Friends. Respected for his devotion to the Truth; honoured for his faithfulness in the discharge of his duty as a minister of the gospel, he passed along comfortably to a green old age. He was useful in the church, and in the world, almost to the very end of his days, taking an active share in the business of his Monthly Meeting only nine days before his death."

On his removal to Philadelphia county, Nicholas Waln immediately began to invest in land, principally in Liberty Lands, which he bought up in small quantities, afterwards taking out patents for the consolidated tracts. During the years 1696-97-98, he purchased altogether of many different persons, 651 acres, of which he sold at different periods before a patent was made to him, in small lots an aggregate of 163 acres, leaving him a right to 488 acres in one contiguous tract. This tract on a re-survey was found to contain 520 acres, for which a patent was issued by the Commissioners of Property bearing date January 24, 1703-4. Besides this tract he had purchased before removing to Philadelphia county, from the executor of George Wilcox, 400 acres in Bristol township, Philadelphia county, being one-half of the 800 acres originally granted to Barnabas Wilcox, father of George; the deed therefor bearing date September 10, 1695. In right of his 1,000 acre purchase Nicholas Waln was entitled to two lots in the city of Philadelphia which he never took up. They were claimed by his descendants and in 1834-35 were patented to his great-great-grandson, Jacob S. Waln.

Nicholas Waln died in the Northern Liberties of Philadelphia, February 4, 1721-2. His will dated January 30, and proved March 19, 1721-2, named his wife Jane and his son Richard as executors, and mentioned the following children: Nicholas, William, Jane, Hannah, Mary, Sarah and Elizabeth; Nicholas receiving the homestead of 300 acres and 3 negroes; William fifty pounds and 2 negroes, and the daughters five shillings each. His wife survived him but the date of her death is not known.

According to the certificate granted by Settle Monthly Meeting, before referred to, Nicholas Waln was accompanied to Pennsylvania by his wife Jane, nee Turner, and three children. The register of Settle Monthly Meeting shows the dates of birth of the following children of Nicholas and Jane (Turner) Waln:

- Jane Waln, b. 5mo. 16, 1675;
- Margaret Waln, b. 8mo. 3, 1677, d. inf.;
- Richard Waln, b. 1 mo. 6, 1678;
- Margaret Waln, b. 11mo. 12, 1682.

The register of births at Middletown Monthly Meeting in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, gives the dates of birth of the three children who accompanied their parents to Pennsylvania, and those of five others born in Bucks county. Two of the three dates relative to the older children differ slightly from those given on the Settle register; the date of birth of the second Margaret, given on the Middletown records as "11mo. 10, 1680," is more likely correct than that given on the Settle registry, since at the date given on the Settle Register the family had already left England, in which case the birth could hardly have been recorded in Settle.

The three youngest of the twelve children of Nicholas and Jane Waln were born in Philadelphia county and the dates of their birth given below are from the birth registry of Philadelphia Monthly Meeting. To avoid confusion as to old and new style, the names of the month are given instead of the number as used on Friends' records, and in all cases where the date occurs between January 1 and March 21, the double year is given.

Issue of Nicholas and Jane (Turner) Waln:—

Jane Waln, b. Yorkshire, July 16, 1675; m. May 27, 1691, at "Neshamina", now Middletown Meeting, Samuel Allen Jr., of Neshamina, Bucks co., Pa.; son of Samuel Allen, who with his family came from England in the ship "Bristol Factor," arriving at Chester, Dec. 11, 1681. The Allens were prominent in early times in Bucks co., and intermarried with the leading county families; they were settled on Neshaminy creek in Bensalem twp., then included in a rather indefinite region known as Neshamina or Neshamina creek;

Margaret Waln, b. Yorkshire, Oct. 3, 1677, d. inf.; on the register of Settle Meeting the date of her death is given as March 28, 1676, but this is impossible as that date precedes the date of her birth, perhaps 1678 was intended;

RICHARD WALN, b. Yorkshire, June 6, 1678; m. Anne Heath, of them presently;

Margaret Waln, b. Yorkshire, Jan. 10, 1680-1, d. unm. before her father;

Hannah Waln, b. Bucks co., Pa., Sept. 21, 1684; m. (first) March, 1704, Thomas Hodges, who had previously married her cousin, Jane Dilworth, before mentioned; he died March 28, 1708; she m. (second) Nov., 1712, Benjamin Simcock; she had issue by both husbands, who have left descendants;

Mary Waln, b. Bucks co., Pa., April 7, 1687, d. July 19, 1721, m. 1706, John Simcock, brother of Benjamin; she was a minister of the Society of Friends and an account of her published in The Friend, vol. xxxv, begins as follows:

"Mary Walln, a daughter of that worthy minister of the Gospel of Christ, Nicholas Walln and Jane his wife, was born in Middletown, Bucks County, in the year 1686 or 1687. Her parents soon after her birth, removed into the limits of Philadelphia Meeting, and there she was brought up. Being tenderly visted in early life by the Spirit of the Lord Jesus, and giving up thereto, the pious precepts and example of her parents were blessed to her, and she was enabled to manifest by conduct and conversation that her soul was enamored with the beauty of holiness, and the blessed consistancy of the Truth. Early in the year 1706, when about nineteen years of age she was married to John Simcock, the son of that eminent minister of that name who resided near Chester. The newly married couple resided near Abington for many years, where Mary received a gift in the ministry which she exercised to the comfort of Friends. After passing many years of usefulness in that neighborhood, both in the church and in the world, they, about the year, 1740 removed to Kingwood, New Jersey." Then follows a memorial of her husband too long for insertion here. She d. at Kingwood, May 19, 1771, "in the 80th year of her age, as Minister upwards of 50 years"; and her husband d. there April 23, 1773, "in the 86th year of his age"; on the records of Kingwood Monthly Meeting appear tender and eloquent memorials of both;

Ellen Waln, b. Bucks co., March 27, 1690, d. unm. Jan. 4, 1707-8;

Sarah Waln, b. Bucks co., June 9, 1692; m. (first) in 1711, Jacob Simcock, brother of Benjamin and John above mentioned. These three brothers were sons of Jacob and Alice (Maris) Simcock, and grandson of John Simcock, and George Maris, both members of the Provincial Council and otherwise prominent in the early history of Pa., and founders of two very prominent and aristocratic Chester county families.

Sarah (Waln) Simcock m. (second) Feb. 27, 1721-2, Jonathan Palmer, whose family occupied in Bucks co. a position similar to that of the Simcocks and Marises in Chester co.;

Jacob Simcock was b. Sept. 28, 1686, and d. Feb. 1716-17, leaving issue;

John Waln, b. Bucks co., Pa., Aug. 10, 1694, d. 1720, and is therefore not mentioned in his father's will; he m. Aug. 30, 1717, Jane, b. 1696, dau. of John and Elizabeth (Hardy) Mifflin, of "Fountain Green", now part of Fairmount Park, Phila., and granddaughter of John Mifflin, of Warminster, Wiltshire, England, b. 1638, who came to America between 1676 and 1679, settling among the Swedes on the Delaware river, and in 1680 took up the "Fountain Green" plantation on the Schuylkill; (see Life and Ancestry of Warner Mifflin, by Hilda Justice, Phila. 1805, abstracts from which are given in our sketch of the Justice Family in these volumes. In which publication, however, the name of Jane Mifflin's husband is given as John Waller, instead of Waln.) Their dau. and probably only child, Elizabeth Waln, m. June 11, 1741, at Phila. Monthly Meeting, Robert Worrel, of Phila., son of Richard Worrel, of Lower Dublin twp., Phila. co., Pa.;

Elizabeth Waln, b. Northern Liberties, Phila., March 27, 1697, is supposed to have been the Elizabeth Waln who m. April 24, 1719, James Duberry, (properly Dubree), son of Jacob and Jane, b. June 22, 1698;

Nicholas Waln, b. Northern Liberties, Phila., March 24, 1698-9, d. there, unm., Feb. 11, 1721-2; his will, which states that he is a son of Nicholas Waln, late of Northern Liberties of Phila., was signed Feb. 6, 1721-2, two days after his father's death, and probated March 19; it mentioned his brothers William and Richard, and his sisters, but not by name; his mother Jane and brother Richard were named as executors; a "friend Hannah Maris" was also mentioned, who was most likely his fiance; if they had married this would have been four marriages of Nicholas Waln's children with the Maris family, but death canceled the engagement;

William Waln, b. Northern Liberties, Phila., March 15, 1700-1; m. Ann Hall, daughter of Samuel and Mary, of Springfield twp., Chester co., Pa.; they appear to have had but one child, Samuel Waln, who m. (first) Nov. 13, 1747, Ann Rushton; (second) June 11, 1767, Sarah Steel; he had eight children, all by his first wife, concerning whom we have little data, aside from the fact that the fourth child, Hannah, b. March 24, 1754, m. at Christ Church, April 24, 1773, Jonathan Matlack.

RICHARD WALN, eldest son of Nicholas and Jane (Turner) Waln, born at Burholme, parish of Slaidburn, West Riding of Yorkshire, England, June 6, 1678, although not as prominent in the public affairs of his day as his father, was, however, keenly alive to the developing conditions in the Northern Liberties, where he continued to reside after his father's death for a number of years. The Provincial Council at a meeting held September 20, 1734, appointed him, together with Isaac Norris, Thomas Griffiths, Thomas Masters, James Steel and Benjamin Eastburn, all conspicuous men in that section of Philadelphia county, a commission to review Germantown road from the boundary of the city to Cohocksink creek, "& make such Alterations therein as may best suit the Publick Service, with as little damage as possible to any private Persons."

Richard Waln married, prior to September 30, 1706, at Abington Meeting, Anne, daughter of Robert Heath. The minutes of the monthly meeting of that date, at which the marriage was reported as having been accomplished previously, evidently since the last Monthly Meeting, state that he was a son of Nicholas Waln, and belonged to Fair Hill Particular Meeting.

Richard Waln later removed to Norriton township, Philadelphia, now Montgomery county, where he resided several years, and where he died in 1756. In his will dated December 1, 1753, proved June 16, 1756, he mentioned his children: Richard, Robert, Nicholas, Joseph, Ann, Susanna and Mary; also his grandchildren, but not by name; his son Joseph being named as executor. The dates of birth of the children of Richard and Anne Waln as given below are taken from the register of Philadelphia Monthly Meeting.

Nicholas Waln, b. Aug. 25, 1707; bur. Sept. 3, 1707;

NICHOLAS WALN, b. March 19, 1709-10; m. Mary Shoemaker, of whom presently;

Jane Waln, b. Aug. 6, 1711, d. Aug. 17, 1711;

Jane Waln, b. Feb. 20, 1712-13, d. Oct. 4, 1714;

Anne Waln, b. Feb. 16, 1714-15; m. May, 1753, Jonathan Maris, grandson of George Maris, Provincial Councillor, before mentioned;

RICHARD WALN, b. June 5, 1717, of whom presently;

Susanna Waln, b. June 9, 1719; m. Nov., 1739, Joseph Levis;

ROBERT WALN, b. March 21, 1720-1; m. Rebecca Coffin, of whom hereafter;

Joseph Waln, b. Dec. 18, 1722, d. in 1760, on the plantation inherited from his father; m. Dec. 31, 1747, at Abington Meeting, Susannah, dau. of James Paul, of Abington twp., then of Northern Liberties, Phila.; they had no issue; Joseph Waln's will dated March 5, 1759, proved Oct. 13, 1760, mentioned his wife Susannah, brothers Nicholas, Richard, and Robert; sisters Susanna Levis, Anne Maris, and Mary Brown; nephews and nieces, Richard and Nicholas Waln, William Levis, Jesse and Joseph Waln, and Sarah, Ann, and Mary Waln; father-in-law, James

Paul, who with testator's brother's Richard and Robert Waln was named as executor;

Mary Waln, b. Aug. 15, 1724; m. Joseph Brown.

NICHOLAS WALN, eldest son of Richard and Anne (Heath) Waln, was born March 19, 1709-10, died in August, 1744, having been born and passed most of his life on the old Waln estate in the Northern Liberties, which he inherited; though in his later years he resided in the city proper. He does not appear to have been active in public affairs. His will dated August 16, probated August 3, 1744, named his wife Mary, brother Robert, and children: Richard, Ann, Nicholas and Rebecca, naming as executors Mary Waln, Jacob Shoemaker and Robert Waln.

Nicholas Waln married, May 23, 1734, under the care of Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, Mary, daughter of George and Rebecca (Dilworth) Shoemaker. She was a distant cousin to her husband, her mother, Rebecca (Dilworth) Shoemaker, being the youngest daughter of James Dilworth by his wife Anne Waln, sister to Nicholas Waln, emigrant, grandfather of the Nicholas Waln now under consideration.

After her husband's death, Mary (Shoemaker) Waln resided on his Northern Liberties property and died there in 1756. Her will dated January 19, 1745-6, proved June 23, 1756, mentions her children: Ann, Rebecca, Richard and one other (Nicholas) not by name; her parents, George and Rebecca Shoemaker, and her brother, Jacob Shoemaker.

Issue of Nicholas and Mary (Shoemaker) Waln:—

Ann Waln, eldest child, d. unm.;

RICHARD WALN, b. about 1737; m. Elizabeth Armit, of whom presently;

Rebecca Waln, m. Abraham Howell; their only child who survived infancy, Mary Howell, m. Henry Drinker, eldest child of John and Rachel (Rynear) Drinker, and nephew of Henry Drinker, whose wife was Elizabeth Drinker, the diarist. His father, John Drinker, was one of the most active of the Quakers in opposing the Revolution, on religious grounds, and being of a literary turn, he published some pamphlets on this and other subjects, as well as some poems. He was one of the victims of the mob that started the "Fort Wilson" riot on Oct. 4, 1779, and was ill-treated by another mob in 1781. Henry and Mary (Howell) Drinker had five children: John Drinker, of the Philadelphia bar; Henry Waln Drinker, of Luzerne Co., Pa., where he owned very extensive tracts of land which he developed and opened up for settlement; Rebecca Drinker; Richard Drinker, of Bloomsburg, Pa., afterwards of Scranton, Pa., who like his grandfather was "possessed of a turn for poetry, and wrote and published several poems; William Waln Drinker, a member of the New York bar, who also "Possessed a poetical gift." All four of the sons married and left issue, their numerous descendants being now widely scattered throughout the country;

NICHOLAS WALN, b. Nov. 14, 1742; m. Sarah Richardson, of whom later.

RICHARD WALN, eldest son of Nicholas and Mary (Shoemaker) Waln, was born about 1737, died May 23, 1809. He was engaged in mercantile pursuits in Philadelphia and acquired considerable wealth. He removed in 1774 to Monmouth county, New Jersey, where he purchased a large tract of land near the Burlington county line, adjacent to the village of Crosswicks, where he built his mansion, a large frame dwelling, still standing. A recent historical sketch of that part of New Jersey says of his purchase, "This entire section of the State was purchased from the Lahwah Indians, many years ago, by a man of the name of Waln, for a barrel of cider and a few beads." "The grotesqueness of this statement", writes a more careful historian, "will be appreciated by all students of New Jersey history. For an hundred years prior to Waln's advent in New Jersey, the Indians of that Colony had very little land to dispose of, for cider, beads or articles of great intrinsic value."

Richard Waln named his place Walnford, a name it bears to this day. Here he lived during the Revolutionary period, and sometime after its close returned to Philadelphia, where he continued to reside until his death, Walnford being his summer home. He married, December 4, 1760, Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph Armitt, a Philadelphia merchant, but of an old Burlington county, New Jersey, family, from which descended Henry Armitt Brown, the eloquent orator and able lawyer of Philadelphia a generation ago. Mrs. Elizabeth (Armitt) Waln died in 1790.

Richard Waln and his wife are referred to a number of times in the "Extracts from the Journal of Elizabeth Drinker," edited by Henry D. Biddle, Philadelphia, 1889, Mrs. Drinker and her husband, Henry Drinker, being among their close friends. Some of these references are as follows, the initials H. D. and E. D. referring to the journalist's husband and herself:

"1774, June 6. H. D. and E. D. went in our chaise as far as Frankford with our neighbors Rich^d and Eliz^b Waln who are on their way to their mill near Crosswicks, N. J., where they are going to reside. Rob^t Waln and wife went with them as far as Bristol. We took leave of them at our place at Frankford."

"1776, September 12. H. D., E. D. and Billy left home fifth-day after breakfast * * * came to R. Waln's after dark. Sept. 13, * * * we walked about Rich^d Waln's place; examined ye Mill and got weighed; E. D. weighed 130 lbs., Billy, 56 E. W. 116," (the last being Richard Waln's wife) "Sept. 16, Left Walnford after 12 o'clock. Betsy Waln in the chaise with me"—after spending the night at Joseph Smith's near Burlington, the Drinkers returned to Philadelphia, having evidently parted with Mrs. Waln, though the Journal does not say so.

"October 23. Fourth-day H. D. and E. D. left home about half past 7 o'clock * * * and reached R^d Waln's before dark. Found R. W. very unwell. Oct. 24, R. W. better to-day, and our prospect is to set off in his waggon, with his Betsy on seventh day morning; his health and weather permitting. Oct. 25. Spent this day at R. W's—he being very unwell * * *. We set out in his wagon with his son Nicholas, and his negro Peter as a driver, about 9 o'clock. * * *. Oct. 30. Breakfasted at R.L's, and began our return homewards; * * * and came to R.W's about 5, found Richard much better. November 1. Between 9 and 10 this morning the weather being fine, we left our Friends and proceeded homeward." Richard Waln being a Friend was a non-combatant, and, as is well known, non-combatants were in those days classed as Tories. The Journal has this entry under date of Oct. 22, 1777, a month after the British had taken possession of Philadelphia:—"Richard Waln is taken up, and sent to New York. He had his choice of 3 things, either to go to jail, take ye Test, or go within ye English lines. Ye latter was chosen."

"1777, Dec. 11. Near 10 o'clock this evening, who should come in but Rich. Waln—he came from New York in a vessel with a number of others. He's hearty and well." He seems to have stayed in Philadelphia for some months after this as he is mentioned among callers at Drinker's on February 17 and April 2, 1778, and dined there May 8; his family, however, stayed at Walnford. "June 14, First-day. Richard Waln dined with us. He seems at a loss how to determine, whether to stay here or go" This was when the British were withdrawing from Philadelphia. "June 17, Richard Waln took leave of us today" "Sept. 4, H.D. received a letter yesterday from Rich^d Waln, dated from Walnford. We are pleased to find he is with his Family but we do not yet know upon what terms." Thereafter he remained at Walnford until the end of the Revolution. "1783, June 16. Sally, Nancy, and Billy were to leave Middletown this day for Rich^d Waln's, near Crosswicks, in ye Jerseys." "June 28, or thereabouts our children returned from R. Waln's." "1785, July 28. Fifth-day. Left home after dinner * * * July 29, came to Richard Waln's before dark, should have got there sooner, but were delayed sometime on the road, about 3 miles from R.W's by the oversetting of ye chaise. Henry drove. * * * Found R.W's family well. July 30. Betsy Waln and her daughter set off with us for shrewsbury, H.D., E.W., H.D.Jr., and E.D. in R.W's waggon; Nancy Drinker and Polly Waln in our chaise, * * * July 31 * * * journeyed on to Lippincott's at Shrewsbury. 11 o'clock H.D. his son, and ye girls went to meeting, E.W. and self staid at ye Tavern, where we dined, * * * Rode down to ye Bath house in ye evening. Polly Waln and our Nancy went into ye water. August 1. E.W., myself and our daughters went into ye Bath this morning. * * * Aug. 4. * * * We set off after Breakfast for Long Branch on ye Sea Shore. H.D., E.W., and E.D. went round in ye waggon—George Eddy and wife, Nancy, Henry and Polly Waln, and John Fry went in a Boat. * * * August 5. Betsy Waln and daughter, G. Eddy and wife left us this morning for their respective homes. * * * We shall miss Betsy Waln very much." Polly Waln mentioned in the Journal was the one who afterwards married Thomas Wister. "August 10. Left John Corlas' this morning * * * arrived at Richard Waln's towards evening, 40 miles. * * * Richard Waln gone to Philad^a with our Horse and Chaise, which detained us there a day longer than we intended. Aug. 11, Spent this day at R.W.'s Richard returned home this evening, bringing us word that all were well at home. Aug 12, Left R.W.'s after Breakfast."

The will of Richard Waln, "of Philadelphia, Gent.", signed June 3, 1808, proved June 7, 1809, mentioned his sons, Joseph; Nicholas, to whom he devised his estate in Monmouth county, New Jersey, "commonly called Walnford"; his daughter Rebecca Harrison; son-in-law Thomas Wister; daughters, Elizabeth Waln and Hannah Ryers, and the latter's father-in-law J. Ryers; and appointed Joseph, Nicholas and Jacob Waln executors; a codicil dated May 14, 1809, adds his daughter Elizabeth Waln and son-in-law Thomas Wister to the executorship.

Joseph Waln, b. 1761, d. either Sept. 10 or Oct. 9, 1824, aged sixty-three; m. Feb. 12, 1801, Elizabeth, dau. of John Stokes, of a well-known Burlington county family. They resided in Darby, Delaware co., Pa., and had no children; after her husband's death, Mrs. Waln m. (second) April 9, 1829, at Upper Darby Friends Meeting House, Hon. Thomas Pim Cope, of Philadelphia, son of Caleb and Mary Cope, of Lancaster, Pa., and one of the most successful merchants of his day, an eminent philanthropist; a member of the Pennsylvania legislature, and otherwise prominent in public life. Elizabeth (Stokes) Waln was his second wife, and had no children by him.

On Dec. 10, 1794, Joseph Waln was a groomsman at the wedding of Henry Drinker Jr. son of Elizabeth Drinker, the diarist, in whose journal he is mentioned a few days later;—"Feb. 13. * * * As our son Henry was desirous of having the young people invited here after his marriage, this afternoon was appointed, tho' we are not fond of such parties, * * * ye other two (groomsman) Isaac Morris and Joe Waln were absent."

Mary Waln, b. 1765, d. 1844; m. 1786, Thomas Wister, b. 1764, d. 1851, son of Richard and Sarah (Wyatt) Wistar and brother of Caspar Wistar, M.D., the eminent physician and scientist of a century ago; see Wistar Family in these volumes, where an account of the twelve children of Thomas and Mary (Waln) Wistar is given; the death of one of whom is mentioned in Elizabeth Drinker's Journal, before quoted in regard to Mary (Waln) Wister, referred to therein as "Polly Waln".

"Sept. 7, 1793, Nobody here to day but H.M. and Betsy Emlen who drank tea with us; Henry and Molly went with them this evening over to Hesser's to see Molly Wharton, who has returned here with her Baby, 4 weeks old. She informed M.D. that about a week past, a little son of Tommy Wister who was at his grandfather's Rich^d Waln's, as unfortunately drowned in the mill-pond." The Molly Wharton mentioned was daughter of Jesse Waln, Richard's first cousin, who will be mentioned hereafter.

Among the more recent descendants of Thomas and Mary (Waln) Wistar were: Richard Vaux, Mayor of Philadelphia, and Member of Congress; General Isaac Jones Wistar et al.;

Elizabeth Waln, b. about 1767, lived mostly in Phila.; was one of her father's executors in 1809; d. unm. in Phila., Dec. 22, 1837, aged seventy years. Her will dated May 5, 1834, proved Jan. 4, 1838, was of unusual form and evidently drawn by herself, it devised everything she possessed except a few personal articles to her niece, Elizabeth Waln Smith, daughter of her sister, Hannah Ryers, and named her nephews, Joseph W. Ryers and S. Morris Waln, as executors;

Hannah Waln, m. John Ryers, and had issue:

NICHOLAS WALN, second surviving son of Richard and Elizabeth (Armitt) Waln, succeeded his father in the ownership of Walnford, where his entire life was spent, he having assumed charge of the estate there on his father's return to Philadelphia, after the Revolution, and inherited it under his father's will in 1809.

He married Sarah, born November 8, 1779, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Wright) Ridgway, of Burlington county, New Jersey, an account of whom and their ancestry and descendants is given in these columns under the title of "The Ridgway Family".

Issue of Nicholas and Sarah (Ridgway) Waln:—

Richard Waln Meirs, of Philadelphia, married, October 31, 1894, Anne Walker, daughter of Dr. William Weightman Jr. and his wife, Sabine d'Inville, and granddaughter of the late William Weightman, a prominent Philadelphia manufacturer.

William Weightman Meirs, b. Sept. 18, 1895;

Jarvis Meirs, b. June 12, 1901.

JACOB SHOEMAKER WALN, youngest son of Richard and Elizabeth (Armitt) Waln, born at Walnford, New Jersey, 1776, chose a mercantile career, and entered the counting house of his relatives, Jesse and Robert Waln, Philadelphia, and in time became one of Philadelphia's most prominent and prosperous merchants. He took an active part in public affairs, serving for several years in City Council, and later was a member of the Legislature from Philadelphia. He died in Philadelphia, April 4, 1850.

He married, August 5, 1804, Sarah, born September 2, 1788, died May 18, 1862, daughter of Benjamin Wistar Morris, of Philadelphia, and his wife, Mary Wells, an account of whom and their ancestry is given in "The Morris Family" in these volumes. They had nine children, all of whom lived to mature years, yet but two of them married, a son and a daughter. The second child, Samuel Morris Waln, born October 24, 1807, was the head of the firm of S. Morris Waln & Company, and one of Philadelphia's most conspicuous merchants for many years. He was one of the managers of the Pennsylvania Hospital, and also of the Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and was widely known for his benevolence. He died unmarried December 22, 1870.

Edward Waln, another son of Jacob S. and Sarah (Morris) Waln, born October 22, 1811, (only son who married) was married, November 29, 1843, to Ellen Cora Nixon, born September 5, 1825, who still survives him, residing at "Williamstowe", Cheltenham township, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. She is a daughter of Henry Nixon, born in Philadelphia, 1776, died 1840, by his wife, Maria, daughter of Robert Morris, the "Financier of the Revolution" and signer of the Declaration of Independence. She is also a granddaughter of Col. John Nixon of the Revolution, who read the Declaration of Independence to the assembled people at the State House, Philadelphia, July 8, 1776. Edward Waln was one of the leaders of the Philadelphia bar a generation ago. He died October 1, 1891. Edward and Ellen Cora (Nixon) Waln had twelve children, six sons and six daughters; of the sons, the eldest, Jacob Shoemaker Waln, who resides at Haverford, and Edward Waln, of The Burlington, are the only ones who reside in or near Philadelphia. Ellen Nixon Waln, the second and eldest married daughter, is wife of Charles Custiss Harrison, provost of the University of Pennsylvania, and they reside at 1618 Locust street, Philadelphia. Another daughter is Mrs. Peter Meredith Graham, of Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia; and the youngest daughter, Rebecca Waln, is wife of Rev. Richard Bowden Shepard, rector of Christ Church, Riverton, New Jersey. Another son, Samuel Morris Waln, was murdered by his guide in 1881, while hunting in Wyoming. Among the married grandchildren of Edward Waln are: Charles C. Harrison Jr., Henry Waln Harrison, Mrs. C. Emory McMichael, Mrs. Edward K. Rowland, Mrs. Walter Abbott Wood, Mrs. John Baird, Mrs. Alfred P. Morris, and the Baroness de Saint Marc.

The only daughter of Jacob Shoemaker and Sarah (Morris) Waln who married was Mary Morris Waln, who became the wife of Richard Vaux, himself a descendant of Nicholas Waln, the emigrant as heretofore shown. He was Mayor of Philadelphia in 1856-7, and later a member of Congress. His surviving children are: Mrs. Edward Buckley, of 1508 Spruce street; Mrs. Harry Connelly, of 731 South Broad street, and Misses Meta and Elizabeth Waln Vaux, of "Westleigh" Chestnut Hill. The sons and daughter of Jacob Waln Vaux, deceased, are his grandchildren.

NICHOLAS WALN, second son of Nicholas and Mary (Shoemaker) Waln, born September 19, 1742, was one of the most striking characters of his day and generation in Philadelphia, although not directly identified with public life in any manner. He was educated at the Penn Charter School, and began the study of law at a very early age, being admitted to the Philadelphia bar before attaining his majority. In 1763, however, he went to England and renewed his studies at the Temple. After an absence of a little more than a year, he returned to Philadelphia and took up the practice of law in that and Bucks counties. He speedily became one of the most distinguished lawyers in Pennsylvania. After practicing for less than ten years and when in the zenith of professional success, he suddenly abandoned the law and became a Quaker preacher. Many references to him and his standing as a lawyer are found in contemporary records and correspondence. Under date of August 28, 1774, John Adams, who had just arrived in Philadelphia to attend the first session of Continental Congress, writes thus in his diary: "Jo Reed is at the head of his profession in Philadelphia, Fisher is next. Waln and Dickinson have retired." Mrs. Joseph Reed, nee Esther de Berdt, wife of the "Jo Reed" referred to by Mr. Adams, writing to her father in England, February 29, 1772, said: "Out of the four greatest lawyers in the city, three have resigned practice, Mr. Galloway, being a good deal advanced in life, and having a very large fortune, cares very little about it. Mr. Dickinson, also married a wife worth £30,000, is improving and building on his estate, and Mr. Waln, whom you may remember in the Temple with Mr. Reed, has on a sudden turned Quaker preacher. He had a very great business, they say near £2,000 a year, but he has resigned on principle, as he says no good man can practice law." Janney, the Quaker historian, tells of an incident marking the beginning of the radical change of life as follows: "His friend Thomas Austin, who resided near Pennypack, on the Middle Road from Philadelphia to Newtown, informed a friend that Nicholas called at his house, on his way to Newtown, where the courts of Bucks county were then held, and in the course of the conversation told Thomas 'that he was engaged in an important case that was to come before the court relative to property.' Austin requested him to stop at his house on his return. He did so, and when Austin asked him how the case he had spoken of was issued, Nicholas replied, 'I did the best I could for my client, gained the cause for him, and thereby defrauded an honest man out of his just due.'" It was at this juncture, February 4, 1772, that Waln attended service at the Market Street Meeting House. He had been a man of the world, and had not been in the habit of attending Friends' meetings, though nominally a Quaker. At this particular meeting, greatly to the surprise of those in attendance, he walked to the preacher's gallery, knelt and poured forth this supplication, "O Lord God! arise, and let thine enemies be scattered! Baptise me, dip me yet deeper in Jordan. Wash me in the lava of regeneration. Thou hast done much for me, and hast a right to expect much; therefore in the presence of this congregation, I resign myself, and all that I have, to thee O Lord—it is Thine! and I pray Thee, O Lord to give me grace to enable me to continue firm in this resolution. Wherever Thou leadest me O Lord, I will follow Thee; if through persecution, or even to martyrdom. If my life is required, I will freely sacrifice it. Now I know that my Redeemer liveth, and the mountains of difficulty are removed, Hallelujah! Teach me to despise the shame, and the opinions of the people of the world. Thou knowest O Lord my deep baptisms. I acknowledge my manifold sins and transgressions. I know my unworthiness of the many favors I have received: and I thank Thee O Father, that Thou hast hid Thy mysteries from the wise and prudent, and revealed them to babes and sucklings. Amen."

In commenting upon this wonderful scene a Quaker writer has said: "Slowly, sentence by sentence came forth, and while breathing the spirit of humble supplication or bursting forth in a hallelujah of praise, they baptised the hearers into tears."

From that time Nicholas Waln, throwing aside the fashionable garments of the day and arraying himself in the subdued garb of the Friends, withdrew from the scenes of his former achievements and devoted himself solely to the work of the Quaker ministry. He became renowned as a great preacher, not only in his own land, but also in England, where he visited Friends and ministered to them. A local writer, belonging to his own sect, referring to his power as a preacher, illustrates with an incident which occurred at a meeting held at Abington, August 11, 1797:

"After a solemn pause, Nicholas Waln rose on his feet. His heart seemed filled with Gospel love, to which his richly-melodious voice gave utterance, while the baptizing power of the Holy Spirit accompanying the word preached, softened the hearts and moistened the eyes of those there gathered. He stood and ministered for about an hour; after which, upon his knees, he lifted up the voice of prayer and praise. A solemnity very unusual covered those assembled, as he ceased to offer on their behalf supplication to the God of Mercy and grace. The solemnity continued, and they remained sitting together, baptized into oneness of feeling. Those at the head of the gallery at last shook hands in token that the meeting had closed. The solemnity was still unbroken and no one seemed willing to depart. A pause ensued; Nicholas then spoke out: 'Under the solemn covering we are favored with, perhaps Friends had better separate'. A few young men near the door then rose on their feet, but the solemnity was still over them, and observing none follow their example, they sat down again. Sweet, awful silence continued, until Richard Jordan, standing up broke forth with the song of triumph, which greeted our Saviour's entrance into Jerusalem, 'Hosanna! blessed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord!' A few sentences followed, setting forth the blessedness of those merciful visitations, these seasons of fervor, wherein the Saviour makes Himself known among his people. He sat down, and again shaking hands with the Friend by his side the meeting was ended."

One of his contemporaries who had frequently sat in meeting with him, thus commented upon him in after years: "Nicholas Waln appeared at all times with a smile of sunshine upon his countenance."

During the Revolution it is needless to say, Nicholas Waln in no way participated in the pending strife; but he was one of the party of six Friends who, acting as a committee on behalf of the Yearly Meeting held October 4, 1777, while the battle of Germantown was in progress, waited on General Washington and General Howe a few days afterwards in the interest of peace. Twelve years later, almost to the day, October 3, 1789, it fell to the lot of Nicholas Waln as clerk of the Yearly Meeting, to address another communication to General Washington, then in the first year of his first term as President of the United States, in which he set forth:

"We take the liberty to assure thee that we feel our hearts affectionately drawn towards thee, and those in authority over us, with prayers that thy Presidency may, under the blessing of Heaven, be happy to thyself and to the people. And it is our earnest concern, that He may be pleased to grant thee every necessary qualification to fill thy weighty and important station to his glory; and that finally, when all terrestrial honours shall fall and pass away, thou and thy respectable consort may be found worthy to receive a crown of unfading righteousness in the mansions of peace and joy forever."

Nicholas Waln died September 29, 1813, having just passed his seventy-first milestone. By his will dated April 8, 1811, proved October 13, 1813, he gave legacies to James Simson, Benjamin White, of Bucks county, John Townsend, the Monthly Meeting of Philadelphia, Southern District, to be paid to Jesse Williams; the children of his first cousin, Mary Drinker, wife of Henry; Jane Halfpenny, and his servant Tom; and the residue of his estate to his wife Sarah, making his sons William and Nicholas, executors.

Nicholas Waln married, May 22, 1771, Sarah, only child of Joseph and Sarah (Morris) Richardson, and great-granddaughter of Anthony Morris, the founder of the family in America, by his second wife, Mary Coddington. She was born in Philadelphia, October 11, 1746, died April 13, 1825. George Ross, son of George Ross, the "Signer", in commenting on Nicholas Waln as an early practitioner at the Lancaster county courts, makes this reference to his marriage: "And to crown his brilliant career at the Bar, he married Sarah Richardson, an only child of Joseph Richardson of Philadelphia of large fortune, and what was of infinitely more value, possessed of every endowment that could render the married state agreeable and happy."

She was an exceedingly small woman, and there is a tradition in the family that her father balanced her in a pair of scales with a bag of gold coin, which was to be her dowry, she being thus literally "worth her weight in gold." Before her marriage she moved in the most fashionable circles in Philadelphia and had all the luxuries her wealthy and doting parent could supply; but after her marriage she was obliged to conform to the more simple tastes of her husband. This was not agreeable to her, and she complained to him of not being able to ride in the same style as formerly with a footman to open and close the carriage door. In advanced life Sarah is described as "a small thin old lady, with rather masculine features and great vivacity of manner." Ann Warder in her diary under date of June 21, 1786, writes: "Dined with Nicholas Waln's wife, (he is in New England with John Townsend). We had a truly comfortable and agreeable visit. Friend Waln is a woman whose acquaintance will enrich anybody, she is lively and sprightly, but much of the Friend and gentlewoman and nothing in her dress or house or conduct bespeaks that gaiety we had been told in England she possessed." (Ann Warder had recently come from London, where she had married John Warder, the son of a rich Philadelphia merchant, representing his father's house there).

Mary Waln, b. May 11, 1772, d. same day;

William White, (afterwards Bishop) rector of Christ Church, Philadelphia, to Mary, born 1781, died December 3, 1841, daughter of John and Mary Willcocks, of Philadelphia.

Issue of William and Mary (Willcocks) Waln:—

SARAH WALN, daughter of William and Mary (Willcocks) Waln, born in Philadelphia, May 22, 1806, died June 6, 1886. She married, October 10, 1842, her cousin, Benjamin Chew Willcocks, born December 13, 1776, died December 1, 1845, son of Alexander and Mary (Chew) Willcocks, and grandson of Chief Justice Benjamin Chew. They had issue:

MARY WALN WILLCOCKS, b. July 13, 1843; m. Alexander Dallas Campbell, of whom presently;
 Helen Julia Willcocks, b. Jan. 20, 1845, d. March, 1868; m. Chandler Robbins.

MARY WALN WILLCOCKS, daughter of Benjamin C. and Sarah (Waln) Willcocks, born July 13, 1843, was married October 20, 1870, by Rev. John Andrews Harris, in St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, to Alexander Dallas Campbell, of the Philadelphia bar, son of St. George Tucker Campbell, of a noted Virginia family. They lived at 1522 Pine street, Philadelphia, and had issue:

Helen Campbell, b. July 20, 1871; m. 1892, James Cheston Morris Jr., b. April 1, 1861, son of James Cheston Morris, M. D., of 1514 Spruce st., Philadelphia, one of Philadelphia's distinguished physicians, member of numerous medical societies, etc., by his wife, Hannah Ann Tyson, of Baltimore branch of old Germantown family of Tyson, an account of which is given in these volumes. James Cheston Morris Jr. is a descendant in the eighth generation from Anthony Morris, founder of that family in Phila., from which his wife, Helen Campbell, is also descended through her ancestress, Sarah (Richardson) Waln, whose mother, Sarah Morris, was a daughter of William and Sarah (Dury) Morris and granddaughter of Anthony, the founder. James Cheston and Helen (Campbell) Morris, had one daughter:

Mary Campbell Morris, b. Sept. 30, 1893;

Elizabeth Mason Campbell, b. Jan. 12, 1875; m. Dec. 10, 1896, at the Church of the Ascension, Phila., by the rector, Rev. George Woolsey Hodge, assisted by Rev. John Andrews Harris, of St. Paul's, Chestnut Hill, to Percy Child Madeira, b. in Phila., son of Louis Cephas and Abeline Laura (Powell) Madeira. She was his second wife.

RICHARD WALN, second surviving son of Richard and Anne (Heath) Waln, was born June 5, 1717, died August, 1764. He resided on the Waln plantation in the Northern Liberties, (where he was doubtless born) until his marriage, after which he followed his father to Norriton township, now Montgomery county. This section was within the compass of Gwynedd Monthly Meeting, on the minutes of which for August 28, 1744, it is stated that "Richard Waln, Junr. produced a certificate for self and wife from Philadelphia, dated 29th of 4th month last." He lived in Norriton about eleven years. At the Monthly Meeting of August 26, 1755, a certificate was granted to Richard Waln and wife to Abington, which he presented to and was accepted by the latter monthly meeting, January 26, 1756. This removal was to Germantown, and he resided there the remainder of his life.

As Richard Waln did not reside in the city of Philadelphia, his name does not figure so often in the "Journal of Elizabeth Drinker" as do those of some of his relatives, but he appears to be mentioned at least once; on November 26, 1777, Mrs. Drinker records Richard Waln as one of their callers, and at this date the Drinkers were intimate friends, Richard Waln, of Philadelphia and Walnford, New Jersey, was in New York, so the caller referred to was probably his uncle, Richard Waln, of Germantown. The death of the latter's daughter, Ann (Nancy) Thomas, and the marriage of another daughter Mary, are also noted by Mrs. Drinker.

In his will dated August 10, 1764, proved September 5, 1764, Richard Waln mentioned his wife Hannah; children: Sarah, Jesse, Mary and Ann Thomas; grandchild, Richard Thomas; brother, Robert; cousin, Thomas Livezey; son-in-law, Elisha Thomas; and named as executors, Robert Waln and Thomas Livezey.

Richard Waln married, about 1740, Hannah ———, and they had issue:—

Sarah Waln, living at her father's death, nothing further known of her;

Ann Waln, m. Elisha Thomas, probably son of Robert Thomas, of Lower Dublin twp., Phila. co. After their marriage they lived in Moreland twp., now Montgomery co. From Elizabeth Drinker's Journal under date of July 26, we quote the following, "Nancy Thomas was this afternoon buried from neighbor Waln's. She had been a long time very ill and suffered more than any one that has come within my knowledge of a disorder of ye nature hers was." The "Neighbor Waln," was Rebecca, widow of Robert Waln, uncle to Nancy Thomas, a son of Elisha and Ann;

Jonathan Thomas lived in Northern Liberties; he m. Nov. 17, 1808, at Abington Meeting, Sarah Mather, dau. of Benjamin and Ann, of Cheltenham twp.; both Elisha and Ann Thomas were deceased at the date of this marriage;

Mary Waln, m. Feb. 11, 1777, Charles Mifflin, son of George and Anne (Eyre) Mifflin, of Phila.;

JESSE WALN, m. Rebecca ———, of whom presently;

Joseph Waln, d. y., before his father.

JESSE WALN, born about 1750, died March 29, 1806, was the only surviving son of Richard and Hannah Waln. He was one of the most prominent and successful merchants of Philadelphia in his day, having associated with him in business his cousin, Robert Waln, Congressman, hereafter mentioned. He was one of the founders of and first directors of the Insurance Company of Pennsylvania, established in 1794. In 1791 he was living in Germantown, as shown by extracts from the "Journal of Elizabeth Drinker," quoted above, we have the following, under June 20 of that year: "There are a number of Philadelphians at Germantown, Pattison Vanhorne's family, John Prout's family, Jerem^h Warder's, Jessy Waln's &c. &c." The Pattison Vanhorne mentioned married Jesse Waln's cousin Susannah, daughter of Robert Waln. The Journal also records Jesse Waln's death: "1806, March 29, Jessy Waln is dead. He died rather suddenly; some say of pleurisy, others of an apoplexy".

Jesse Waln married Rebecca ———, who died November 4, 1820. "Elizabeth Drinker's Journal" mentions her during the yellow-fever year, 1793, October 3; "Becky Waln, Jessy's wife, came to see us. She informed us of the death of several persons whom we do not know."

Issue of Jesse and Rebecca Waln:—

Mary Waln, m. William Moore Wharton, b. June 24, 1768, son of Thomas Wharton Jr., President of the Supreme Executive Council of Pa., by his wife, Susannah Lloyd. She was his first wife. Elizabeth Drinker, whose previous mention of her has been quoted in our account of her cousin, Polly (Waln) Wistar, records Mrs. Wharton's burial in 1800; "July 10, Molly Wharton, wife of Mayor Wharton, and daughter of Jesse Waln, was buried this afternoon from the country, 11 or 12 carriages, and several chairs attended. They passed our door. She died of a consumption—an old acquaintance of our Molly's." Mayor Wharton is a mistake, an error for Moore Wharton.

By his second wife Deborah Shomaker, Moore Wharton had eight children, one of whom, Daniel Clark Wharton, b. July 9, 1808, m. Feb. 1, 1843, Ann Waln, dau. of Thomas Waln Morgan, who was son of Thomas Morgan, by his wife, Ann, dau. of Robert Waln, mentioned hereafter;

Sarah Waln, m. April 26, 1797, at Christ Church, Thomas Buckley; Elizabeth Drinker's Journal under date of April 27, 1797, says: "Jesse Waln's daughter was married last night to T. Buckley, she is going with him to Lisbon, where he and his parents resided—to the great grief of her mother— No wonder, perhaps never to see her more;"

Jesse Waln, b. March 17, 1784, d. unm. May 2, 1848;

Ann Waln, b. 1788, d. Jan. 12, 1789;

Ann Waln, b. Feb. 25, 1790, d. Oct. 26, 1875; m. Jan. 2, 1811, at Pine st. Meeting House, Samuel Burge Rawle, of Phila., son of William and Sarah C. Rawle. She was b. July 1, 1787, d. Sept. 2, 1858. They had five children, viz:

William S. Rawle, m. Nov. 12, 1831, Maria, dau. of Count Jose Elcorrobarutia, of Lima, Peru;

Mary Wharton Rawle, d. unm. 1886;

Rebecca Shoemaker Rawle, m. James Smith Lewis, in 1833;

Burge Rawle, d. inf.;

Elizabeth M. Rawle, m. 1835, Thorndike Deland;

Rebecca Waln, b. 1792, d. July 15, 1796;

Rebecca Waln, m. Edward Tilghman, b. Feb. 27, 1779, d. Jan. 17, 1826, son of Edward Tilghman, by his wife Elizabeth Chew, dau. of Chief Justice Benjamin Chew, and grandson of Col. Edward Tilghman, of Wye, Talbot co., Md., and his second wife, Elizabeth Chew, sister of the Chief Justice.

ROBERT WALN, third surviving son of Richard and Ann (Heath) Waln, born on the Waln plantation in the Northern Liberties of Philadelphia, March 21, 1720-1, died in Philadelphia, July 12, 1784. He established a successful mercantile business in Philadelphia, which was continued by his son of the same name. Like most of the merchants of his day, he was also a ship owner; among the ship-registers for the port of Philadelphia his name occurs as owner of the 40-ton brigantine, "Rebecca", built at Marcus Hook, registered in 1753; the 49-ton brigantine, "Lark", built at Sussex on Delaware, registered in 1754; the 90-ton brigantine, "Rebecca and Susannah" registered 1757; the 30-ton sloop, "Nancy", built in "Queen's County, Maryland" (Queen Anne's county?) registered 1758; the 75-ton brigantine, "Lark", built in Philadelphia, registered 1758. These were fair-sized vessels for that time, very few on the registers then exceeding 100 tons. In 1765 he affixed his signature to the Non-importation agreement, which had so much influence in precipitating the Revolution.

Robert Waln married, about 1750, Rebecca, who died in 1799, daughter of Jacob and Rachel (Rakestraw) Coffin, of Philadelphia. Her father had died in 1736. Her mother, Rachel, was a daughter of William Rakestraw, of Philadelphia, whose will dated August 28, 1736, proved October 5, 1736, mentions his wife Anne; children, William, Grace and Rachel; grandchildren, Rebecca and Hannah, daughters of Rachel; and makes Anne and William Rakestraw, executors. Rebecca (Coffin) Waln's sister Hannah, mentioned with her in the above quoted will, married, October 17, 1758, at Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, Isaac Cathrall; she is frequently mentioned in the Journal of Elizabeth Drinker, above quoted.

For a great part of their married life Robert and Rebecca Waln, with their family, resided on Front street, below Sassafrass, now Race street, near to Henry and Elizabeth Drinker, who lived on the northwest corner of Front street and Drinker's alley, and they are frequently mentioned in the latter's Journal, from which the following are some of the extracts:

"June 6, 1774, when Richard Waln and family removed to Walnford, as noted above, "Robert Waln and wife went with them as far as Bristol" "June 22, our children, Nancy Waln, Hannah and Polly Drinker, went in our waggon to Kensington. * * * Aug. 26, Reb^k Waln and her daughter Nancy, M.S.E.D., Sally, Nancy and Billy went to see the Waxworks made by Mrs. Wells, "opposite ye Royal White Oak." 1777, Nov. 7. "Sally and Nancy went this afternoon, with Hannah Drinker and Nancy Waln, up to Phillips Rope-Walk, to see ye Redoubts which are erected thereabouts." Nov. 12 "Robt Waln, C. West, and Edw^d Drinker's widow called." Nov. 21. "C. West, Sam^l Smith, and Reb^k Waln were here. Ye last came in ye evening; she is afraid to go to Bed, as there is talk of Washington making an attack on ye city before morning." Dec. 9. "Neighbor Waln sent a Horse and Chaise here this afternoon to put into our stable, which Patterson's sisters came with from Bristol". Patterson was probably Pattison Hartshorne, Robert Waln's son-in-law. 1778, Feb. 23. "Robt Waln, Jos^a Howell, and John Drinker called" March 5. "Old Edward Drinker and Robt Waln called." Sept. 6. Rob^t Waln, myself my two sons, Bob Waln, Neddy Howell, and Anna Waln took a walk this afternoon to Springettsbury to see ye Aloes Tree. We stopped on our return at Bush-Hill and walked in ye Garden. We came home after sunset very much tired * * * Sept. 18, Rebecca Waln came over. With her I went to ye Burial of my old friend and acquaintance Nancy Potts, formerly Mitchell, whom I much valued.

1779, Feb. 19. "R. Waln here this evening. She proposed my being an overseer with her at C. Howell's approaching Nuptials. She is to pass meeting on third day next with Johns Hopkins from Maryland * * * Feb. 23. "Went to Monthly Meeting this morning with Johns Hopkins and Caty Howell; Rebecca Waln is my partner on ye occasion—felt a little comical on going into ye men's meeting." May 2. "On Third day last, at Monthly Meeting Hannah Cathrall made a minute, (that one of ye Friends who attended ye marriage of Johns Hopkins &c. reported that it was orderly accomplished) which as Rebecca Waln was the person who spoke and I only stood up, made it necessary for me to repeat what she had before said, or to ye same effect, which was something trying to me, as I do not remember an instance of its being required of both, as my appearance fully attested to what 4.2. delivered." 1782. "February 5. Sally, Nancy, Nancy Waln, Jacob Downing, Ezra Jones and Billy Sansom went over ye River on the ice before dinner." 1784. "July 12. This morning about 2 o'clock, our neighbor Robt Waln departed this Life, after a lingering illness, aged 63 years—second day."

Aug. 20, the Drinkers living then in Germantown; "Neighbor Waln and Anna Wells paid us a visit this morning—say tis very sickly in Philadelphia"—This is one of the years of the yellow-fever epidemic. Aug. 28. "P. Hartshorne's family and Neigh^t Waln's are also out; the inhabitants are leaving the city in great numbers." Sept. 2. Neighbor Waln and Nancy Morgan came to visit us this forenoon. R.W. stays with her son Robert."

Several other notices of visits from "Negh" Waln, Tommy and Nancy Morgan" et al, in October, 1793.

Her death is also mentioned in the Journal, while Mrs. Drinker was on a trip to Wainford and Shrewsbury, 1785, August 1: "John Fry, came about this time, left Philadelphia on Seventh day last; he brings us ye afflicting account of the death of our neighbor Waln's daughter, Becky Jones, who we suppose died on fifth or sixth day last, as she was ill and her mammy with her, when we left home." SUSANNAH WALN, daughter of Robert and Rebecca (Coffin) Waln, married,

February 10, 1776, Pattison Hartshorne, son of Hugh and Hannah Hartshorne, and a descendant of Robert Hartshorne, an early Governor of East Jersey. The "Journal of Elizabeth Drinker" makes frequent mention of the Hartshorne family. "1776, December 10, H. D. and E. D. were this day at ye wedding of P. Hartshorne and S. Waln" "1777, Nov. 25, S. Hartshorne came over this morning to go on ye top of our House to see ye Fleet come up; 2 or 3 20-Gun Ships, and a great number of smaller vessels came up to day" 1778, Jan. 28. "Chalkley James, Pattⁿ and Sucky Hartshorne called."

The Hartshornes spent the summer of 1791 in Germantown; in the yellow-fever summer of 1793 they were also out of the city. In August, 1796, Mrs. Drinker was much excited by the runaway marriage of her daughter Mary to Samuel Rhoads; on August 10, she wrote, "Day before yesterday the 8th inst. Molly was gone as I thought with Sally Large shopping. * * * The next day the 9th * * * sister went over to R. Waln's to enquire if she had heard where Molly was. She informed her that Pattison Hartshorne had been told in ye morning by Sally Large that there would be trouble in the neighborhood to day—that Molly Drinker was married last night to S. HON. ROBERT WALN, son of Robert and Rebecca (Coffin) Waln, was born February 22, 1765, died January 25, 1836, being at the time of his death a member of the Philadelphia, Southern District, Monthly Meeting. He attained the widest distinction in public life of any of the descendants of Nicholas Waln, Colonist. He became associated with his cousin, Jesse Waln, as before stated, and for years they transacted an extensive business as importers and merchants; the house of Jesse and Robert Waln ranking with those of Girard, Ridgway, Williams, etc. Later in life he became interested in other business enterprises. In 1812 he erected a cotton factory in Trenton, New Jersey, said to have been one of the largest as well as one of the earliest in America. He was also extensively interested in the iron industry at Phoenixville, Pennsylvania.

No man was more active in his day, in all that relates to civic or national progress than Robert Waln. We find him in attendance at many conferences at the State House, the Coffee House and elsewhere, called to advance the interests of Philadelphia and the nation at large, especially during the stirring period between 1790 and 1820, embracing the first years under the Federal Constitution and the War of 1812-14. He also served upon various committees appointed to carry out the resolves emanating from such public conferences.

He was for several terms a member of General Assembly of Pennsylvania, and in 1796 was nominated by the Federalists as their candidate for Congress. He was defeated, however, by Blair McClenachan, by a vote of 1,182 to 910. Two years later Waln was again a candidate and was this time elected. After his congressional service he was chosen a member of City Council and was several times re-elected, serving as President of Select Council, 1816-19. He also filled at various times, the presidency of the Chamber of Commerce, Philadelphia Insurance Company, Atlantic Insurance Company, and Mercantile Library Company. He was also a director of Pennsylvania Hospital, Bank of North America, and Philadelphia Library Company; and was one of the trustees of University of Pennsylvania from 1811 until his death, and a trustee under the will of Stephen Girard.

Robert Waln's residence for the greater part of his life was at 138 (old number) South Second street, above Spruce, on the site of the famous "Governor's House" or "Shippen's Great House", as it was originally denominated. His country seat was "Waln Grove", Frankford. He married, October 10, 1787, at Pine street Friends' Meeting House, Phebe, daughter of Ellis and Mary (Deshler) Lewis, and sister to David Lewis, who lived next door to him. She was born May 17, 1768, died April 16, 1845. See Lewis Family in these volumes.

Issue of Robert and Phebe (Lewis) Waln:—

Dec. 20, 1863; inherited "Waln Grove" from his father and left it to his next surviving brother, William; he was one of the founders of the Philadelphia Board of Trade, 1833; was elected a member of the American Philosophical Society in 1846; was a director of Library Company of Philadelphia for many years, and trustee of Univ. of Pa. from 1837 to his death; he was unm.;

Francis Waln, b. Oct. 28, 1799, d. July 10, 1822;

Rebecca Ann Waln, b. Jan. 5, 1802, d. at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Aug. 18, 1846; m. Dec. 6, 1821, Jeremiah Fisher Leaming, an eminent citizen of Philadelphia, descended from a prominent family of Cape May co., N. J.; their eldest son, Robert Waln Leaming, a graduate of Univ. of Pa. in 1844, inherited "Waln Grove" from his uncle, William Waln;

William Waln, b. June 29, 1805, d. unm. in Jan. 1864; inherited "Waln Grove" from his brother Lewis; his city residence being 914 Walnut street; by his will dated January 11, and probated January 30, 1864, he devised all his estate in trust for the use of his sister, Phebe L. Waln, she to have the use of "Waln Grove" in the 23d. Ward (Frankford), during her life, and at her death to go to his nephew, Robert Waln Leaming; the rest of his estate to go to nephews and nieces, Robert W. Ryers, Rebecca L. Tut, Susan Israel, and Francis W. Leaming; Robert W. Leaming the principal legatee to pay over a sum to be invested for the use of testator's nieces, Phebe W. Bell, Mary L. Smith and Susan Israel;

Susan Waln, b. Sept. 1, 1806, d. July 21, 1832; m. June 3, 1830, by Rev. William White, then rector of Christ Church, to her cousin, Joseph Waln Ryers, son of John Ryers, by his wife, Hannah Waln, dau. of Richard and Elizabeth (Armitt) Waln, mentioned earlier in this sketch; they probably lived during their short married life at her father's country place, "Waln Grove," she at least died there, as shown by Poulson's American Daily Advertiser, of July 25, 1832; "Died 21st inst. at her father's residence near Frankford, in her 26th year, Susan W. Ryers, wife of Joseph W. Ryers, and daughter of Robert Waln." Later Joseph W. Ryers had a fine country place near Fox Chase, which from its name, "Burholme," would seem that he may have named it for the Waln home in Yorkshire by reason of his own Waln ancestry. His only son by Susan Waln, Robert Waln Ryers, b. March 8, 1831 or 1832, a graduate of the Univ. of Pa., class of '51, inherited "Burholme" in 1868, and spent the remainder of his life there, and at his death bequeathed the estate to the city of Philadelphia for a park. At one corner of the property is a station of Newtown branch of the Reading railroad, called "Ryers";

After the death of his wife Susan, Joseph W. Ryers m. her sister, Ann Waln, as noted below;

Phebe Lewis Waln, b. Jan. 2, 1808, d. unm.; she inherited a life interest in "Waln Grove" from her brother, William Waln, 1864;

Ann Waln, b. Sept. 6, 1813, became the second wife of her cousin, Joseph Waln Ryers, former husband of her elder sister Susan, but they had no children; they lived at 922 Walnut st., Philadelphia, and at "Burholme," near Fox Chase, in co. of Philadelphia; by his will dated Dec. 24, 1866, probated Jan. 27, 1868, Joseph W. Ryers devised these two residences and all that they contained to his wife Ann, for life, and after her death, they, together with all the residue of his estate to go to his son Robert, in fee.

WARNER FAMILY.

John Warner, of Draycott, in the Parish of Blockley, Worcestershire, England, was of a family long seated in that locality, and was possibly the John Warner baptized at the Parish Church of Blockley, April 22, 1582, who was the son of Richard Warner. The register of Blockley Parish Church shows the baptism of six children of Richard Warner, but the record of that of the five eldest of them omits the name of the mother. The baptismal record of the youngest child, Ursula, gives the name of Richard Warner's wife Margaret, and as some years intervened, she was possibly a second wife. No record of the marriage of John Warner has been found, but the baptismal record of his children shows that his wife's name was likewise Margaret.

Jane Warner, bap. Nov. 29, 1612; no further record;

Mary Warner, bap. Nov. 29, 1613; no further record;

Thomas Warner, bap. Oct. 30, 1616; probably the Thomas Warner who married Ursula _____, and had five children bap. at Blockley Parish Church, viz.: Thomas, Aug. 17, 1651; Jane, March 27, 1653; John, June 17, 1655; Daniel, Sept. 5, 1658; and Isaac, March 2, 1661;

Richard Warner, bap. Jan. 20, 1621; probably the Richard Warner who married Sarah _____, and had three children bap. at Blockley Parish Church, viz.: Richard, Jan. 23, 1647; Sarah, Nov. 30, 1651; and Hannah, July 15, 1655;

Robert Warner, bap. March 1, 1624; possibly the Robert Warner who married Ellenor _____, and had the following children bap. at Blockley Parish Church: Margaret, June 5, 1663; Mary, Dec. 26, 1663; and probably Anne, Sept. 6, 1665; mother's name not given;

WILLIAM WARNER (1), bap. July 8, 1627; came to America, probably in 1675; of whom presently;

Edward Warner, bap. Nov. 3, 1629; probably the Edward Warner who married Ann _____, and had four children bap. at Blockley Parish Church, viz.: John, Sept. 21, 1657; Edward, April 9, 1659; Anne, April 13, 1661; and Isaac, April 3, 1663. Edward and Ann Warner removed to Gloucestershire, became members of Society of Friends, and had three more children born there, viz.: James, 10mo. (Dec.) 26, 1664; Mary, 8mo. (Oct.) 28, 1666; and Elizabeth, 7mo. (Sept.) 17, 1668. It seems likely that they were the Edward and "Annie" Warner, Friends, who subsequently resided in county Essex, and who had four children born there, viz.: Jacob, 3mo. (May) 8, 1670; Sarah, 6mo. (Aug.) 9, 1672; Joseph, 3mo. (May) 17, 1674; and Hester, 6mo. (Aug.) 25, 1676.

Some of Edward Warner's children probably came to Pa. late in eighteenth century. The name, Jacob Warner, appears in list of burials of persons, "not Friends," in the records of Phila. Monthly Meeting (Race street), under date of 4mo. (June) 16, 1717; and there is a tradition that William Roberts, of Merion and Blockley, m. (first) Elizabeth Warner, whom he met on shipboard while coming to America;

John Warner, bap. July 26, 1632; no further record;

Anthony Warner, bap. Jan. 1, 1634; no further record;

Isaac Warner, bap. Aug. 22, 1636; doubtless d. before June 24, 1638, when a second Isaac was bap.;

Isaac Warner, bap. June 24, 1638; probably living at Draycott, Parish of Blockley, Worcestershire, England, Sept. 8, 1703, date of his brother William Warner's will, by terms of which he was to be paid "five Pounds Sterling money of England" by William's son, Robert Warner (5), of whom hereafter.

Note.— Another Isaac Warner who came to America, had a survey of 400 acres of land, one-third in Chester county, Pa. (in that part which is now embraced within Bethel township, Delaware county), and two-thirds in New Castle county, 8mo. (Oct.) 28, 1683 (identified in "Smith's Atlas of Delaware County," 1880). This was a rectangular tract lying lengthwise, northeast and southwest, crossed at Booth's Corners by the road to Naaman's Creek. Perhaps this was also the Isaac Warner whose name appeared on first general tax list for county of Philadelphia, Sept. 26, 1693, when he was assessed to pay a tax of 2 shillings 6 pence, on property valued at £30. Among the "Old Rights" papers in Land Office was No. 49, a warrant and return of survey for city lots, to Isaac Warner & Co., dated 2mo. (April) 26, 1690. This referred to a warrant dated 2mo. (April) 26, 1690, by virtue of which there was laid out by the Surveyor-General's order of 2mo. (April) 25, 1691, a lot on the west side of Strawberry Alley, Phila., the patent for which was issued Feb. 24, 1692-3, to Isaac Warner, and which he assigned to John White, wool-comber, March 2, of the latter year. This Isaac Warner, of Phila., was a currier by trade, while Isaac Warner, of Chester county, appears to have been a carpenter.

The name of Isaac Warner, of Chester county, appears a number of times in the records of that county prior to 1698, in which year he and Joseph Holt were drowned, while coming in a boat from New Castle, and their bodies found on Tincum Island. The Coroner's inquest, held 7mo. (Sept.) 23, 1698, is reported on the docket of Chester County Court, under date of 8mo. (Oct.) 4, same year, when the Court investigated the circumstances attending the finding of the bodies. Isaac Warner's name appears in the list of burials of persons, "not Friends," in the records of Phila. Monthly Meeting (Race street), 8mo. (Oct.) 9, 1698, and letters of administration on his estate were granted at Phila., Dec. 10, 1700, to Catherine Warner, his widow and relict. No will or administration of the Isaac Warner drowned in 1698 are on record in Chester county, and the delay in the appointment of the widow as administratrix may have been due to her removal to Phila., and also to the fact that Isaac Warner had a son who survived him nearly a year, as in the list of burials of persons, "not Friends," in the records of Phila. Monthly Meeting (Race street) appears the name of John Warner, 6mo. (Aug.) 9, 1699, (son of) Isaac and Katherine.

Isaac and Catherine Warner had a dau. Anne, m. at "Skool Creeke" Meeting House, 4mo. (June) 6, 1695, James Thomas, of Merion, Phila. county. Anne was then of "Skookill Creek," same county, spinster. Catherine Warner and Isabell Thomas signed the marriage certificate just below the contracting parties, and among the other witnesses were John Warner, Isaac Warner, James Kite and a second Isaac Warner. James Thomas was a widower, having buried his first wife Margaret 9mo. (Nov.) 2, 1694. By his first marriage he had at least one son, Thomas, born 8mo. (Oct.) 28, 1699; by his second wife Anne (Warner) he had a son Nathan, born 2mo. (April) 13, 1696.

WILLIAM WARNER, son of John and Margaret, was born at Draycott, Parish of Blockley, Worcestershire, England, and baptized in the Parish Church there July 8, 1627. The family tradition is that he "had been a captain under Oliver Cromwell, and had to leave his native land when the Protector died, which was in 1658." This story was repeated to the late John Fanning Watson in June, 1833, by Mrs. Anne (Roberts) Warner, then about seventy-one years of age, and was committed to writing by him, but is not included in his published "Annals." She was widow of another and later William Warner whose great-grandfather Isaac Warner came to America with the first William Warner or about the same time and was one of his sons. There is certainly nothing unlikely in this tradition, as many officers under the Commonwealth are known to have come to America after the Restoration, and no trace of William Warner and of his children who came to America has been found in England subsequent to the middle of the seventeenth century.

Thomas Allen Glenn, in his work "Merion in the Welsh Tract," states that "it seems apparent that William Warner settled first in New England, or at least remained there some time," and that "it may be presumed that he drifted into Pennsylvania by way of New Jersey." The suggestion has also been made that William Warner went from New England to the settlements on the Delaware by way of New York, with Sir Robert Carre's expedition, 1664, in which he may have obtained his military title, (if he had one). But none of the Warners in New England, so far as known, were from the county of Worcester, and no evidence has been produced to connect them with the Warners who came to New Jersey about the time of its first settlement by the English.

The first English ship that brought permanent settlers to West Jersey was the "Joseph and Benjamin," Matthew Paine, master. This vessel landed passengers on the south side of the Asamohacking River, (now Salem Creek,) at a point three miles from its mouth, March 13, 1674-5. The month and day have been variously stated, partly owing to the confusion caused by the difference between the old style calendar then used by the English and the new style followed by the Dutch. The vessel was bound for Maryland.

Major John Fenwick and others arrived at or near the same place, on the ship "Griffin," Robert Griffin, master, November 23, 1675, (Old Style,) and established there a town, which he called New Salem. Fenwick, in order to carry out his plans for a colony, had borrowed money of Edmund (or Edmond) Warner, citizen and poulterer, of London, and John Eldridge (or Edridge,) conveying to them the ten parts which he had drawn as his tenth interest in one-half of New Jersey, as security, with the right to sell lands therefrom for the satisfaction of his debts to them. Fenwick also conveyed lands, absolutely, to Edmund Warner. It is reasonable to suppose that Edmund Warner sought to interest his wealthiest and most influential relatives in his ventures in the New World, and that he may have solicited the active participation of the Warners of the Parish of Blockley in the settlement of Fenwick's Colony, if they were related to him,—circumstances concerning which we are without information.

In any event it seems probable that William Warner, his wife Anne, his children John, William, Mary, Robert and Isaac, and several other members of the Warner family of Draycott, Worcestershire, England, arrived at the Delaware River plantations during the summer or autumn of 1675, either in the first English ship that brought permanent settlers to West Jersey, or with Fenwick, or several months later, when the "Griffin" stopped at New Salem a second time, it is said, with emigrants, after having returned to England, and while on a voyage to Maryland. For before April 1, 1677, William Warner's son William was a land-owner in West Jersey, as will appear hereafter, and there is no record of any vessel having arrived within the capes after the "Griffin," until August, 1677, when the "Kent" came with companies of Quakers from London and Yorkshire. The improbability that any English family would have emigrated for the special purpose of settling among the Swedes or Dutch, adds force to the presumption that the Warners did not come earlier than 1675; and in the absence of good evidence to the contrary it may be assumed that they arrived in West Jersey in that year.

Many of those who originally intended to take up land in the vicinity of New Salem went elsewhere, owing to the unsatisfactory state of affairs in Fenwick's colony, particularly as affecting surveys and titles to land. Edmund Warner and his associates had become involved in a dispute with Fenwick, about the time of the latter's departure from England, and Edmund Andros, Governor of New York, caused the Proprietor to be thrown into prison late in 1676, where he remained until August, 1677. Assuming that William Warner originally intended to settle in Fenwick's colony, the conditions which existed at New Salem, and the troubles which others were having there, doubtless caused him to change his plans and seek a residence free from turmoil and uncertainty, on the west side of the river.

The name William Warner appears attached to "The Concessions and Agreements of the Proprietors, Freeholders and Inhabitants of the Province of West New Jersey, in America," a document executed in London, March 3, 1676-7, and subsequently brought to West Jersey and circulated for additional signatures. Perhaps this William Warner was the William Warner, cordwainer and planter, of Alloway's Creek and elsewhere in Salem county, whose wife was Jane, daughter of Samuel Curtice, of Crewkerne, county of Somerset, England, and who had a son Simon Warner,—a name found also among the Warners of the Parish of Blockley.

It may be presumed that the Warners remained in West Jersey, though probably not in Fenwick's colony, at least until September, 1677, as their names are not on the list of taxables who were within the jurisdiction of the Upland Court at that time. There is no mention of any of them on the west side of the river, in any known extant records, until the June term of the Upland Court, 1678, when "William Warner desiring of the Court a grant to take up one hundred acres of Land, The Court granted y^e same hee seating & Improoveing y^e same according to the Regulacons of his hono^r the governo^r;"'. The date of this grant has been frequently erroneously stated as April 3, 1678. The mistake arose by the loss of four pages of the original docket covering the end of the April term and the beginning of the June term, so that in the printed record all appears to be the April proceedings, but internal evidence shows that the part after the hiatus belonged to the June proceedings, though the exact day is uncertain.

At a court held March 10, 1679-80, "Upon the Peticon of william warner senior; The Court doe grant and permitt him to take up on the west syde of this River w.thin the Limits of this Court, Twoo hundred acres of Land, w^{ch}: heretofore hath not ben granted taken up or improved: Provyded the s.^d Peticon^r: makes p^rsent Settlement & Improvement thereof according to Lawe Regulacons and orders;"'.

The statement of some writers that the first of these grants was located on the west side of the Schuylkill River (and formed part of the plantation called Blockley) is not warranted by the record. Nor was the second one any more certainly in that place; "the west syde of this River" referred to the Delaware; the grants were not for lands already seated, but only conferred the right to take up so much land, the selection of site and survey to be made later. Besides, it is very probable that William Warner never located any tracts under the first of these grants, for at a Court held November 12, 1678, Gov. Andros's order was proclaimed declaring that those who had obtained grants and not yet seated and improved the lands should forfeit their rights.

The statement that William Warner was the first English settler on Pennsylvania soil is not substantiated by the above facts. There were many other Englishmen living there before Warner appeared at all. Particularly erroneous is the statement of Watson, who in his "Annals of Philadelphia," speaks of Warner's settlement, but the date he gives is obviously too early, and the place of actual settlement is too far out, though the place mentioned was within Warner's purchase. "But the chief pioneer must have been Warner, who, as early as the year 1658, had the hardihood to locate and settle the place, now Warner's Willow Grove, on the north side of the Lancaster Road, two miles from the city bridge." But as we have seen, Warner's first grant was obtained in 1678, a date easily confused with 1658 on account of the family tradition. Again, we know that Warner's house was only a few hundred feet back from the river, just north of the present Girard avenue, while the spot indicated by Watson was the residence of a much later Warner, and was no doubt the house marked "Warner" on Ellet's map of 1839, on the southwest side of Lancaster Road, about half a mile east of Hestonville, and so about two miles from Market street bridge, the "city bridge" of Watson.

The estate which Warner called Blockley was part of a large purchase made by him and others direct from the Indians, and not obtained by grant from the Upland Court, though the Court had to be appealed to for collection of some of the purchase money. On June 14, 1681, the Court, upon the request of William Warner and William Orian, ordered that the several people who held lands which the petitioners had bought of the Indians, lying on the Schuylkill, repay to the petitioners their proportion of the 335 guilders which Warner and Orian had paid for the whole; the following persons holding the lands within the limits of the purchase: Andries Inckoren, 200 acres; Andries Homman, 200 acres; Pelle Laersen alias Put Pelle, 100 acres; Peter Erikson, 200 acres; William Warner, 100 acres; William Orian, 100 acres; John Booles and John Schoeten, 400 acres; and Swen Lom, 300 acres; making in all 1600 acres. Reed, in the Explanation to his Map (Philadelphia, 1774.), calculated the amount of the "Swedes' land" actually laid out on the west side of the Schuylkill by about 1683 to have been 1506 acres. Of the original purchase from the Indians, Warner's share was only 100 acres, as above recited, but it will be seen that he and his family eventually obtained much more than this, his main plantation on the river having been 300 acres in extent, and his lands further inland over 200, while his son John had 100 acres on the river, all shown on Reed's Map as having been within this purchase. This may be explained by the very likely supposition that some of the original subscribers did not pay their proportion, and that Warner and his son John took up their shares. It was land so obtained that constituted the estate Warner called Blockley, by patent of 1702 stated to be about 300 acres. This was confirmed to Warner by Penn's Commissioners of Property, at whose meeting 12mo. (February) 23, 1701 (o. s.), a warrant was signed for him, it being shown that he had settled on a tract of land on the Schuylkill before the grant of the Province (to Penn), which tract was reputed 300 acres, and he craving a resurvey so that if it prove deficient it may be made out of the adjoining, according to the Proprietor's promise. At the meeting 3mo. (May) 4, 1702, William Warner, having obtained a resurvey, and survey of the deficiency, of 300 acres of land in Blockley township, produced a return of it, and a patent for it was granted him, which was signed 3mo. (May) 19, 1702.

Among the Old Rights papers in the Land Office were: No. 215, a warrant for William Warner for 200 acres, dated 4mo. (June) 19, 1684; No. 47, a return of 200 acres of his land, dated July 12, 1684; and No. 46, a description of his 288 acres in Philadelphia county, not dated. The latter is undoubtedly his Blockley estate, showing a deficiency of 12 acres; the other two papers were doubtless for the same land, the 200 acres being more or less, as shown by a recital from the patent (the patent itself not being extant so far as known), in a deed from William Warner, grandson of the original William and wife, to their son Isaac, dated January 17, 1758, to the effect that the Commissioners of Property by patent of May 18, 1702, had granted to William Warner, of Blockley township, 300 acres in said township, in two pieces, one of about 200 acres more or less, and the other of 12 acres and 40 perches. (The 200 acres more or less should have been 288 to make up 300 acres).

The value of William Warner's lands beyond Schuylkill, September 26, 1693, the date of the first general tax list for the county of Philadelphia, was £120, according to the report of the Assessor, Thomas Paschall, Junior. On this the tax was 10 shillings. As John Warner's lands were valued at £40, in the same list, it is evident that he held one-third as much land in value, and doubtless in extent, as William. John's tax was 3 shillings, 4 pence.

By his will, William Warner, besides the Blockley estate proper, devised 200 acres of "backward land" (also mentioned in the inventory), and an uncertain quantity of meadow attached to it, which lay to the northwest of the main plantation, but not adjoining, which included the site of Hestonville; and another 100 acres where his son-in-law James Kite lived, presumably adjoining the homestead. Whether some of these were taken up under the old grants from the Upland Court, or were later purchased from previous settlers, remains unknown, as deeds or patents for them are missing. The "backward land" is stated in a deed of James Kite to Isaac Warner, January 18, 1717 (o. s.), to have been 269 acres.

Warner's estate, including Blockley, stretched from the Schuylkill River half way to Cobb's Creek, some distance north of Haverford Road (now Haverford avenue) and on both sides of Lancaster avenue and of the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad, including a great part of Blockley township, now the northern part of West Philadelphia (24th and 34th Wards). It embraced the site of the old village of Hestonville, situated around 52nd street where it is crossed by Lancaster avenue. Blockley township, originally laid out by another name, was soon renamed after Warner's plantation.

On June 14, 1681 (the same day the payment for the Indian lands was ordered), the Upland Court granted to the following persons the quantity of land mentioned: Reynier Petersen, 200 acres; Andries Boon, 200 acres, William Warner, Senior, 400 acres; Richard Tucker, 100 acres, Otto Ernest Koch, 400 acres, Lionel Brittain, 200 acres; and Jan Claassen, 200 acres. These were separate grants, and not necessarily all in any one locality. Reynier Petersen had 125 acres, partly in Chester and partly in New Castle county, July 26, 1695; Andries Swanson Boon had in 1688 a tract in Darby of 250 acres, laid out for Andries Boon as 200 acres in 1680, and he and Otto Ernest Koch had many separate tracts in Darby and Kingsessing by 1688; Richard Tucker had a tract on both sides of Darby Creek surveyed in 1690; but which of these came under the above grants is now uncertain. Lionel Brittain and Jan Claassen located theirs in Bucks county. William Warner probably sold his rights under this grant, as none of his known holdings can be traced to it.

William Warner was Under Sheriff (or as now called, Deputy Sheriff), of the county of Upland in 1679 and 1680, probably succeeding Michael Yzard, who was spoken of as "Late undersherrife" on November 25, 1679. From the fact that he was then mentioned simply as William Warner, and elsewhere as William Warner, "Senior," some writers have inferred that it was his son William who was Under Sheriff, but such was not the case, as the son resided in Gloucester county, New Jersey; moreover, the "Senior" was omitted in some other places.

It was when William Markham assumed the government as Penn's Deputy Governor that Warner became most prominent politically. Arriving probably late in June, 1681, Markham proceeded to appoint Council to assist him in administering the affairs of the newly established Province of Pennsylvania; and of the nine members so chosen, who took the oath of office August 3, 1681, William Warner was one. A fac-simile of the oath with signatures attached, is to be found in the edition of the "Duke of York's Laws," published by the State of Pennsylvania, 1879. The capital of the Province was established at Upland, its name being changed to Chester, and on September 13, 1681, Markham reorganized the Upland Court, as the Chester Court, by commissioning a new set of Justices. William Warner was one of these. He was also a member of the second Provincial Assembly, which met at Philadelphia March 10, 1683-4.

William Warner was living on his plantation west of the Schuylkill River at least as early as 6mo. (August) 24, 1684, when he was one of the subscribing witnesses at the marriage of Paul Saunders and Edith Hand, which was under care of Haverford (now Radnor) Monthly Meeting. The region was then covered by a stately forest, the growth of centuries, and "great quantities of rabbits, squirrels, pheasants, partridges, and others of the same kind" continued to infest the dense wilds for many years thereafter. In the midst of these primitive surroundings Warner resided until his death, which occurred probably early in October, 1706. His house, the first, perhaps, erected west of the Schuylkill, was situated a short distance north of Girard avenue, in that portion of the West Park which is called "Eglesfeld." Near by was the landing place from which, according to a family tradition, he rowed out in his boat with his guns, to a rock near the bank of the river, where he fished and shot ducks,—his large dog usually accompanying him and recovering the birds. Warner's Rock, the point alluded to, is no longer visible since the building of the dam at Fair Mount.

By his will, dated September 8, 1703, proved at Philadelphia October 18, 1706, William Warner left a life interest in half the Blockley estate to his wife Anne, also a life interest in half of his "backward meadow," and some personal estate; to his son John Warner he left 100 acres of his "backward land" and the half of the meadow belonging to said "backward land" (that is, to the whole of it, not half of the 100 acres only), also 20 pounds and the use of some implements, etc.; to his son Isaac Warner, 50 acres of "backward land" without any meadow (all the meadow being disposed of above), also half the plantation (Blockley), and on his mother's death the balance of the plantation and of the meadow left to her above, at Isaac's death all these to go to Isaac's eldest son; to Isaac also, some personal estate, and the use of some implements; to his son William Warner, 10 pounds and an annual allowance for eight years, of three bushels of wheat and three of rye; to his son-in-law James Kite, 50 acres of "backward land" without any meadow, and 100 acres where Kite then dwelt, for life, and after his decease to whichever of his sons—James or Abraham—he should nominate (this land having been on the Schuylkill south of and adjoining the Blockley estate); to his son Robert Warner, two houses in Draycott, Worcestershire, England, he paying the testator's brother Isaac Warner "five Pounds Sterling money of England;" and he ordained his wife Anne and son Isaac executrix and executor. Thus the principal plantation, Blockley, was left a life interest, half of it to his wife Anne and half to his son Isaac, and after his wife's decease, a life interest in the whole to his son Isaac, the whole eventually to descend to his grandson, the eldest son of Isaac (who was William Warner, the "Baron," of whom hereafter).

According to the records of Blockley Parish Church, "William Warner and Mary George were married on the 6th of November, 1642;" and if William, son of John and Margaret Warner, was not an infant at the time of his baptism, July 8, 1627, he may have been the William who was Mary George's husband, in which case she was his first wife, as the maiden name of William Warner's wife who survived him was Anne Dide (or Dyde).

William and Mary (George) Warner had six children baptized at Blockley Parish Church, as follows:

Jane Warner, bap. July 16, 1643;
 Henrie Warner, bap. April 8, 1646;
 John Warner, bap. March 16, 1646-7;
 Samuel Warner, bap. Jan. 20, 1650-51;
 William Warner, bap. Oct. 9, 1653;
 Alice Warner, bap. Dec. 23, 1657.

William and Anne (Dide) Warner were probably Puritans or Independents for a time, if he was in the Parliamentary Army; but some of his children married Quakers, and later generations were mostly members of the Society of Friends.

William Warner's children mentioned in his will were:—

JOHN WARNER, m. Anne Campden; of whom presently;
 WILLIAM WARNER, m. Christian ———; of whom hereafter;
 MARY WARNER, m. James Kite; of whom hereafter;
 ROBERT WARNER, probably m. Sarah ———; of whom hereafter;
 ISAAC WARNER, m. Anne Craven; of whom hereafter.

According to a tradition recorded by one of his descendants, John Warner (2) was born in 1649. If this statement is correct, Anne Dide was probably the only wife of his father William Warner (1), but if John was the John Warner baptized in 1646, Mary George was the mother of John and William, and possibly of Mary and Robert, while Anne Dide was probably the mother of Isaac, who was the most favored child in his father's will.

Note.—The Warners of the Parish of Blockley, Worcestershire, England, were not the only persons bearing the Warner name who settled in Philadelphia at an early period, as shown by the following facts:

Edmund (or Edmond) Warner, citizen and poulterer of London, whose transactions with Major John Fenwick and possible relationship to the Warners of Blockley have been mentioned previously, married, 9mo. (November) 14, 1671, Rachel Middleton, at Peel Monthly Meeting, according to Friends' records preserved at Devonshire House, London. He had a warrant for a city lot in Philadelphia, 3mo. (May) 29, 1683, but died in less than a year thereafter, as letters of administration on his estate were granted at Philadelphia to Silas Crispin, 12mo (February) 7, 1683-4. About a year later, 10mo. (December) 2, 1684, the Philadelphia Monthly Meeting took under consideration the business of Edmund Warner's widow, and recommended that William Clark, William Berry and William Southerby be appointed for administrators, "that the said widow and children may not suffer for want of Relief, and her Estate run to Ruin for want of looking after." On the 19th of the same month, William Bury, "desiring to take out Letters of Administracon upon the estate of Edmond Warner deceased As also by the approbation and appointment of friends of Philadelphia," was granted letters of administration on his estate by William Clark, Deputy Register of the counties of Sussex and Kent, in Delaware. Letters of administration on Edmund Warner's estate in New Jersey were granted April 6, 1688, to James Nevill, as attorney of Nathaniel Lowe, of the Parish of St. James, "Clarbonwell" (Clerkenwell), county of Middlesex, England, innholder, jointly with whom "Edmund Warner late of the Pvince of Penssilvania deceased" was bound for the payment of £50 to Thomas Arrow-smith, of the Parish of Northweald Bassett, county of Essex, England, which the latter had been paid by Nathaniel Lowe as security for Edmund Warner. Rachel, widow of Edmund Warner, married (second) Henry Jones, of Philadelphia, merchant, 1mo. (March) 8, 1687. Nothing is known of the descendants of Edmund and Rachel (Middleton) Warner, except that they had a son Edmund Warner buried 6mo. (August) 29, 1694, according to the records of Philadelphia Monthly Meeting (Race street).

Several other families of Warners settled in Philadelphia early in the eighteenth century, one from Bristol, Gloucestershire, England; one from Maryland, and one from Germany, which got the name by adopting it.

JOHN WARNER, eldest son of William Warner, was born in England, in 1649, according to a family tradition, in which case Anne Dide (or Dyde) was probably his mother; but if he was the John Warner who was baptized at Blockley Parish Church March 16, 1646 (o. s.), his mother's maiden name was Mary George, as heretofore shown. He came to America in 1675, probably, with his father and other relatives, and located land on the west side of the Schuylkill River, above his father's Blockley estate, and separated from it by William Orian's tract. This was no doubt part of the purchase of his father and others from the Indians in 1681, which John obtained by paying for an unpaid interest, though there are no known papers extant which show this to be a fact. John Warner's tract should have been 100 acres, but the return of survey quoted in the "Explanation to Reed's Map" gave it as 93 acres, and the tract as shown on Reed's Map is called 94 acres. On the same map is shown, in his name, a smaller tract, to the north of, but not directly adjoining, the western part of this; no quantity given, but apparently about 20 acres. John Warner afterwards acquired William Orian's tract of about 94 acres between his own land and his father's estate of Blockley. In the Schuylkill River, on the line between John Warner and William Orian, was an island of 12 acres (the island now just below the Belmont Water Works), belonging half to each, making up their quota of 100 acres each. John Warner acquired Orian's share in the island also. He had thus 200 acres on the Schuylkill next above the Blockley plantation. His father also left him 100 acres of his "backward land" (described above) near Hestonville, with the proportional share of meadow which belonged to it, in all about 135 acres.

John Warner was a member of Provincial Assembly, 1713-14-15. He resided on his plantation on the Schuylkill until his death, living in the style of a gentleman of landed estate of that time; and he built there a large log house which continued in the possession of his descendants until 1799, in which year it was torn down by his grandson Col. Edward Warner Heston. The massive timbers were then found in such an excellent state of preservation, that Col. Heston utilized them in the construction of his own house the following year, and they were still in fair condition when this building was demolished, 1901.

John Warner died 2mo. (April) 12, 1717. By his will, dated September 17, 1716, proved May 20, 1717, he directed his plantation to be divided equally between his sons William Warner and Isaac Warner; to his son John Warner he left the 100 acres of "Back Land where he now lives, with all the meadow and wood" belonging to it (which John Warner, Senior, inherited from his father William Warner), John paying 10 pounds to the testator's daughter "Margaret Roades;" to his daughters, Mary Warner, Esther Warner, Sarah Warner and Jane Warner, and his son Joseph Warner, all stocks on the plantation, household goods, etc.; and the executors were his "son Swen Warner," John Warner and Mary Warner. It has long been taken for granted that this "son Swen Warner" was John Warner's eldest son, already provided for, and so not otherwise mentioned in his will, and this has been a source of confusion in accounts of the family, but it is now known that he was not a son but a son-in-law, and also a nephew, having been the husband of John Warner's daughter Esther, and the son of John Warner's brother, William Warner, of Gloucester county, New Jersey.

John Warner married Anne Campden. Her surname suggests that her family was of Chipping-Campden, where some of the Warners were prominent, a town situated about three miles beyond the limits of the Parish of Blockley. According to the records of Philadelphia Monthly Meeting (Race street) she was buried 5mo. (July) 19, 1715.

Issue of John and Anne (Campden) Warner:—

Edward Warner, b. 8mo. (Oct.) 29, 1680, according to records of Haverford (now Radnor) Monthly Meeting, which give the dates of birth of four eldest children of John and Anne Warner; probably the Edward Warner who was a witness to John Warner's will Sept. 17, 1716, though not otherwise mentioned in it, possibly for the reason that, as his eldest son, he had already been provided for. Presumed to have d. before Feb. 15, 1723 (o. s.), as in a deed of that date (Phila., Book H, 15, page 190), from his uncle Isaac Warner, and Abraham Kite, to his brother John Warner, of whom hereafter; John Warner is described as eldest son of John Warner, eldest son of William Warner (doubtless meaning eldest living son).

If evidence furnished by the above-mentioned deed is to be accepted as conclusive, this Edward Warner could not have been the Edward Warner who was "living at James Poultis's in the Second street in Philadelphia" in July, 1723, who was afterwards one of the earliest elected members of the Carpenters' Co., and member of Provincial Assembly continuously for nineteen years, 1735-1754 (see The Pennsylvania Magazine of History and Biography, vol. i., pp. 358-9);

Margaret Warner, b. 1mo. (March) 23, 1683-4; m. Jacob Rhoads, b. Feb. 16, 1670-71, son of John and Elizabeth Rhoads, and had five children, viz.: Jacob; Margaret, d. 7mo. (Sept.) 25, 1741; Abraham, b. about 1706, d. 1746, m. 7mo. (Sept.) 24, 1733, Eleanor, b. 8mo. (Oct.) 7, 1708, dau. of John and Hannah Rees; Isaac; Anne, m. Nov. 24, 1729, William, son of William Coulston, of Plymouth Meeting. Among the living descendants of Abraham and Eleanor (Rees) Rhoads are Charles Woods Coulston, Esq., and Samuel Castner, Jr., of Phila.;

Mary Warner, b. 10mo. (Dec.) 3, 1684; unm. in 1716;

ESTHER WARNER, b. 6mo. (Aug.) 18, 1686; m. her first cousin, Swen Warner, son of her uncle William Warner, of Gloucester county, N. J.; see forward;

Sarah Warner, b. 1688; unm. in 1716;

John Warner, b. 9mo. (Nov.) 26, 1689, according to a pedigree compiled by Silas Warner, of Harford county, Maryland, in which all the children of John and Anne Warner are mentioned, except Edward. This would make John the eldest son, agreeing with the deed of 1723, previously cited; but as has been shown, he was not the eldest son; see Edward Warner.

John Warner m. 8mo. (Oct.) 20, 1715, Mary, b. 12mo. (Feb.) 12, 1694-5, d. 1mo. (March) 11, 1782-3, dau. of John Kirk, of Darby township, Chester county, Pa., who m. Joan, of the same place, dau. of Peter Elliott. He was buried 9mo. (Nov.) 19, 1748, in Friends' Grave Yard, at Merion Meeting House, and letters of administration on his estate were granted at Phila., Nov. 26, of same year, to his widow Mary and Jacob Heston.

John and Mary (Kirk) Warner had eight children, as follows: Mary, m. 11mo. (Jan.) 11, 1739-40, Jacob Heston, of Wrightstown, Bucks county, Pa., b. May 20, 1713, son of Zebulon and Dorothy Heston, and their son Edward Warner Heston was Lieutenant-Colonel in the Revolution and founder of the ancient village of Hestonville, and d. in 1824, aged 78 years; Edward, probably the Edward Warner buried 9mo. (Nov.) 11, 1749, in Friends' Grave Yard, at Merion Meeting House; Sarah, m. Thomas Pollin; Elizabeth; Esther, m. 10mo. (Dec.) 7, 1748, Joseph Lacey, of Buckingham, Bucks county, Pa.; Joseph, m. Charity Moore; Rachel, m. 10mo. (Dec.) 14, 1750, Thomas Williams, son of Thomas and Mary (Reed) Williams; and Benjamin, m. (first) Sarah Ely, (second) Sarah Terry, (third) Ellen Holland;

William Warner, b. 1694;

Isaac Warner, b. 1696; m. by Friends' authorization, dated 12mo. (Feb.) 24, 1715-16, Veronica de la Plaine Cassell; d. 8mo. (Oct.) 25, 1748. Letters of administration on his estate were granted at Phila. to his widow Veronica Warner, Nov. 21, 1748; she d. May 2, 1769, aged 71 years.

Isaac and Veronica (Cassell) Warner had ten children, viz.: John, m. Sarah ———, who after his death (which occurred in 1749, leaving children Jacob, Arnold, Susanna and Jane) m. (second) 9mo. (Nov.) 9, 1750, at Goshen Meeting, Samuel, son of Thomas Hall, of Willistown; Arnold, m. Nov. 10, 1753, Margery Hall; Susanna, by Pa. license dated July 13, 1748, m. James Skerrett; Anne, m. 3mo. (May) 26, 1741, at Phila. Monthly Meeting, Thomas Tilbury, of Wissahickon, son of Thomas Tilbury, of the Parish of Garlick Hill, London, England, then deceased; Jane, m. Jan. 24, 1753, Jacob Widdows (or Widdos); Elizabeth, m. Joab Walker; Lydia; Isaac; Hannah, d. at the age of 9 years; and Margaret, d. young;

Jane Warner, b. 1698; unm. in 1716;

Joseph Warner, b. 2mo. (April) 15, 1701, d. 1746; m. 2mo. (April) 16, 1723, Agnes Croasdale; settled in Wrightstown township, Bucks county, Pa., and was founder of Warner family of that county. Joseph and Agnes (Croasdale) Warner had nine children, as follows: John, b. 12mo. (Feb.) 16, 1723-4; Mary, b. 11mo. (Jan.) 28, 1725-6; Joseph, b. 11mo. (Jan.) 10, 1727-8; Croasdale, b. 12mo. (Feb.) 5, 1729-30; Ruth, b. 8mo. (Oct.) 8, 1732; Abraham, b. 7mo. (Sept.) 14, 1735; Sarah, b. 11mo. (Jan.) 7, 1737-8; Nancy, b. 9mo. (Nov.) 28, 1741, d. Nov. 28, 1829; and Thomas, b. 10mo. (Dec.) 6, 1746, d. Feb. 19, 1821.

WILLIAM WARNER, son of William Warner, was possibly the William Warner whose mother's maiden name was Mary George, and who was baptized at Blockley Parish Church October 9, 1653, as already stated; but it seems more likely that his mother was Anne Dide (or Dyde) or an earlier wife of his father of whom we have no knowledge. In any event he was born in England, doubtless before 1656, and came to America, probably in 1675 with his father and other relatives. He was a landowner in West Jersey at least as early as April 1, 1677, as evidenced by a receipt of that date from Thomas Pearson and Joseph Helmsley, for the purchase money. On March 24, 1681-2, William Warner, who was then of "Redhooke," West Jersey, gave a memorandum of deed for 1-24 share in the First Tenth, to William Beard of Mansfield, this being part of the share bought of Pearson and Helmsley.

In November, 1683, Henry Tradway and William Warner had a return of survey for 300 acres at "Redbanck alias Bachelours Banck" on the Delaware River, from the mouth of Long Harries Creek to Richard Lawrence's; and by deed of March 2, 1685-6 Thomas Matthews conveyed to William Warner 400 acres on the northeast side of Woodbury Creek, in the Fourth Tenth, part of Matthews' $\frac{3}{8}$ share which he purchased November 14 and 15, 1681, of Edward Byllinge and his trustees.

Red Bank appears to have been divided into upper Red Bank and lower Red Bank. It was at the latter place that Tradway and Warner settled in 1683. Long Harries Creek was then "vulgarly called Redbank Creek," but soon came to be known as Woodbury Creek, the name which it now bears.

By deed of April 24, 1697, John Healy, "late of Pennsylvania, now of Ireland, mariner," by his attorneys Charles Saunders and John Duplouvre of Philadelphia, sold William Warner 484 acres on Woodbury Creek, bought of John Test, June 3, 1693. But Warner soon parted with all but 100 acres of this tract, conveying 180 acres of it to James Ward, April 10, 1698, and 204 acres of it to John Tatem by deed of December 1, 1699.

May 25, 1696, William Warner, Thomas Gardiner, of Grovely, Esq., and Joshua Lord, by deed of John Wood, of Woodbury Creek, were conveyed a lot, 100 by 70 feet, near John Wood's dwelling place, to be used as a graveyard by the inhabitants of the county between Gloucester River and Great Mantus Creek.

William Warner was a member of Provincial Assembly from the Fourth Tenth, with Peter Dalboe, May and November, 1685; he was High Sheriff of Gloucester county, May, 1697, and December, 1699; and Justice, May, 1700, and May, 1701.

The plantation which Warner had on Woodbury Creek was conveniently accessible from the Schuylkill, by means of small boats, and it may be taken for granted that there was much visiting, back and forth, between the Warners of Blockley township, Pennsylvania, and their kindred in Gloucester county, New Jersey. In the will of William Warner of Philadelphia, dated 1703, proved 1706, there is the following reference to his son William: "I give and bequeath unto my son, William Warner the sum of ten Pounds to be paid to him by my Executors within one year after my decease; as also, six bushels of corn each year, for eight years, next after my decease, to wit, three bushels of wheat and three of Rye by my executors." The word "corn" is still generally applied to wheat, rye, oats and barley, in England.

William Warner died about February 16, 1713-14, on which date he was owed debts amounting to £126.10.03, according to the inventory of his personal estate, appraised February 20, 1713-14, by John Ladd, Henry Tredaway (or Tradway) and Richard Bull. This sum included "Dubious Debts" amounting to £37.08.05. His goods and chattels and other personal property, were valued at £266.04.00, in addition, making his entire personal estate £392.14.03, as shown by the inventory, which was certified by the executors, June 16, 1714. This included a white servant, Robert Downey, £15., and a negro woman called Ann, £40.10.00.

In his will, dated December 10, 1712, proved June 18, 1714, William Warner left legacies to Ann Hartman, widow, William Tatem, Robert Lord, George Ward, and Nathaniel Chew, "and to my son William Six Shillings," and bequeathed the bulk of his estate to his wife Christian, and children Swen, Isaac, Hannah and Jacob. The executors were his son Swen, wife Christian, Thomas Nixon and Joshua Lord, and the witnesses were Jacob Willis, Elias Rambo and James Whiteall.

Though William Warner's wife is called Christian in his will, her name was doubtless Christina, as it is known that she was of Swedish descent or birth. She was possibly a daughter of Lieut. Swen Schute (or Swänn Skuuta), who emigrated to New Sweden with one of the first five Swedish expeditions, and was the officer in command at Fort Elssborgh when John Printz, the Governor, made his second report, dated at Christina, June 20, 1644, and who subsequently took an important part in the affairs of the colony. In recognition of his services to the crown he was granted lands by Queen Christina, August 20, 1653. These were located on the west bank of the Delaware, and extended some distance up the Schuylkill River and Darby Creek, and were almost opposite Red Hook, West New Jersey, where William Warner settled, but they were a short distance further up the Delaware. If Swen Schute settled upon this tract, he and his family were the first white inhabitants of any portion of the site of Philadelphia, as the Dutch grant to the Swansons, at Wickaco, was not made until more than ten years later. The surname of Swen Schute's wife was Christina, it is believed, and by her he had an eldest son Swen Schute, born 1653; a second son John Schute, born September 4, 1654, of "Nitapkung" on the Schuylkill River, who married Armgott ———, and had a daughter Christina Schute, born September 4, 1687, who married John Johnson of Philadelphia county; and a daughter Magdalen Schute, born March 25, 1660, who married Peter, son of Peter Gunnersonn Rambo. Swen and Christina Schute probably had several other children, and it is presumed that one of these, an eldest daughter, Christina Schute, named after her mother and also in honor of the Queen of Sweden, was the wife of William Warner.

The late John Clement, in his "Sketches of the First Emigrant Settlers in Newton Township, Old Gloucester County, West New Jersey," (page 329,) states that Walla Swanson of Wickaco in his will dated 1692 gave lands about the mouth of Woodbury Creek to his children, among them "Mary, wife of William Warner;" but the authorities quoted by Clement fail to support his assertion that William Warner had a wife named Mary. This mistake probably arose from Clement's having adopted the very likely supposition that William Warner's son Swen Warner derived his Christian name from his mother's family name, and the circumstances that Walla Swanson, who had a brother Swan Swanson, had 200 acres near Warner's plantation. It is now known, however, that Walla Swanson's daughter Mary died in her minority, doubtless unmarried, whereupon her share of a tract of land in Philadelphia, being an interest which she inherited under her father's will, became vested in her surviving brothers and sisters, as recited in certain deeds dated April 21 and 26, 1709. (Philadelphia Deed Book E 5, pages 346 and 349, mentioned in the Brief of Title to the Old Navy Yard.)

Among William Warner's neighbors was Michael Laican, who had a daughter Christina, born February 17, 1684, (O. S.,) whom he called Christian in his will dated August 17, 1703, proved September 24, 1707. Another daughter was Yearteo (Gertrude) Cock, born December 16, 1675. The inventory of Laican's personal property was made by Peeter Cock and William Warner, November 17, 1704, and there may have been some connection among these families. Michael Laican was born in Sweden in 1644, and married in 1670, Helena ———, who was born in 1650. He was a son of Nils Laican, of Sweden, who possibly emigrated to New Sweden with his sons in 1654 or 1656. The names Nicholas Laycon, Widdow Laycon and Mickall-Laycon are in the list of persons who owed debts to William Warner at the time of his decease. The name Laican or Laycon would have been Nilsson had the Swedish custom been followed of making the Christian name of the father the surname of his children.

Christina Laican was unmarried when her father made his will in 1703, and it is highly improbable that she subsequently became the wife of William Warner. She certainly was not the mother of his eldest children, but in the event of her having been a second wife who survived him, she was young enough to have been the Christian Warner who married John Smith at Christ Church, Philadelphia, December 20, 1731. The most likely explanation of the Christ Church record, however, is that the name Warner should have been Warmer, as a family which bore that name was connected with that congregation, and Christian was a baptismal name among them.

In view of the above facts, and as the name Swen was a Christian name among William Warner's descendants for several generations, and as Elizabeth Shute (Schute) was among the relatives and subscribing witnesses at the marriage of one of his family, it may be assumed in absence of further evidence, that William Warner's wife Christian or Christina was a daughter of Swen Schute, and that by their union the blood of the first Swedish and English proprietors of the site of the city of Philadelphia became the common heritage of their descendants.

Issue of William and Christian (Schute?) Warner:

Swen Warner, b. 1688, removed to Phila., where he resided until his death, which occurred at the age of 73 years, the records of Phila. Monthly Meeting (Race street) giving date of his burial at Friends' Burying Ground, Phila., 12mo. (Dec.) 8, 1761; m. before 1714 first cousin Esther, dau. of his father's brother, John Warner, of Blockley township, Phila. county, who m. Anne Campden. Esther Warner was b. 6mo. (Aug.) 18, 1686, as shown by the records of Haverford (now Radnor) Monthly Meeting, d. April 9, 1740, according to family records kept by son-in-law Philip Syng, in his Bible, buried 7mo. (Sept.) 10, 1740, according to records of Phila. Monthly Meeting (Race street). Swen Warner m. (second), by license dated Feb., 1747, Sarah Hastings, who survived him.

By deed dated Dec. 3, 1723, Swen Warner, of Phila., and John Bayley, of same city, and Hannah, his wife, Swen being "eldest son," and Hannah, a daughter of William Warner, deceased, conveyed to Isaac Warner, of Gloucester county, N. J., land surveyed to William Warner; and by deed dated the following day, Isaac Warner and Mary, his wife, conveyed the same property to John Bayley.

Swen Warner and his wife Esther, by deed dated May 12, 1733, conveyed to John Wood, of Gloucester county, N. J., for a consideration of £100, 100 acres (more or less), late the estate and hereditaments of William Warner, deceased, father of Swen Warner.

In his will, written by himself, dated July 2, 1759, proved Dec. 11, 1761, Swen Warner left property to his wife Sarah and children Joseph Warner and Elizabeth Syng. The executors were his son Joseph Warner, his son-in-law Philip Syng, Joseph Stretch and Joseph Norris. The witnesses were James Graisbury (or Graysbury), William Craig and William Colladay.

The children of Swen and Esther (Warner) Warner were:

Isaiah Warner, d. 7mo. (Sept.) 15, 1716;

Elizabeth Warner, b. Jan. 29, 1714-15, m. Philip Syng, Jr., the famous silversmith, and had eighteen children (see forward);

Joseph Warner, by license dated Dec., 1747, m. Jan. 2, 1747-8, at Christ Church, Phila., Anne, dau. of James and Mary Graysbury, granddaughter of James Graysbury, ship-carpenter, who came to Phila. from Bermuda in 1682, and settled on south side of main branch of Newton Creek, in Gloucester county, N. J., with his brothers Joseph and Benjamin, the following year. Joseph Warner was buried 10mo. (Oct.) 20, 1780, in Friends' Ground (Race street). His will, signed June 27, 1780, proved Oct. 31, the same year, mentions his wife and children. The executors were his wife Ann Warner, Joseph Graisbury (or Graysbury) and Benjamin Paschall; the witnesses were Benjamin Conay and Jacob Mayer. Joseph and Ann (Graysbury) Warner had five children, as follows: Joseph, m. Charity —, and had issue, William, Hester and Joseph; Ann, m. Christian Wiltberger, survived her husband, and d. 1805; Mary, m. Joseph Pole; Elizabeth; and Swen.

Swen Warner, son of Joseph and Ann (Graysbury) Warner, b. Dec. 3, 1760, d. Jan. 30, 1799. His body was interred with military honors in Christ Church Ground, near the graves of his relatives, the Syngs and Graysburys (section N, No. lxi).

In the inscription on his tomb he is referred to as Major Siven Warner, and there are the following lines:

Let undisturb'd his ashes lay
 Until the joyful sound
 Shall him awake upon the day
 When blessed souls are crowned.
 In strains of perfect harmony
 The Savior's praises sing,
 Then, Grave, where is thy victory!
 Oh Death, where is thy sting!

Major Swen Warner m. (first) Eley Edwards, June 6, 1785, (second) Mary Hawkins, Jan. 17, 1799. He had two sons, Joseph and Mark, who survived him, and a son Alexander and dau. Ann previously buried in Christ Church Yard. Swen Warner buried there July 28, 1831, was doubtless a descendant.

Isaac Warner removed to Phila., m. 9mo. (Nov.) 25, 1714, at Phila. Monthly Meeting (Race street), Mary Salway, sister of Hannah Salway, who m. before 1719, Thomas Skelton. Among subscribing witnesses at Isaac Warner's marriage were Swan Warner, John Warner, John Warner, Jr., Isaac Warner, John Warner, William Warner, Hannah Warner and James Kite, including, as will be seen, several of the Phila. cousins.

William Salway, father of Mary (Warner) and Hannah (Skelton), had a removal certificate to Phila., from the Monthly Meeting at Taunton, county Somerset, England, 6mo. (Aug.) 13, 1683, and one from Abington Monthly Meeting, dated 6mo. (Aug.) 22, 1688, to marry Sarah, dau. of Christopher and Mary (Collet) Pennock. Among the "Old Rights" papers in the Land Office were five warrants to William "Salloway," the earliest dated 11mo. (Jan.) 7, 1681-2. He also had land in West Jersey, as Revel's Book of Surveys (page 61) contains a record of 200 acres for Godfrey Hancock, sold to William "Salloway" 1mo. (March), 1684. At a meeting of Provincial Council of Pa., held at Phila., April 27, 1693, William Salway took his place at the board by order of Benjamin Fletcher, Capt. Gen. and Governor. On May 5, 1693, William Salway gave his promise to execute the office of Justice of the Peace "throughout the whole province and Countrey." It was while he was a member of Provincial Council that William Salway was appointed Commissioner to represent Pennsylvania and to meet the commissioners of the neighboring colonies at New York, to concert and agree upon a quota of men and money or other assistance to be given by each colony or province for the defense of the frontier of New York against the French and Indians. The date of his election to this important mission was Oct. 1, 1693. He continued a member of the Council until his death, 1695.

ELIZABETH WARNER, daughter of Swen and Esther (Warner) Warner, born January 29, 1714, died October 3, 1786; married, February 5, 1730, Philip Syng Jr., silversmith, of Philadelphia, who was born (probably in Ireland,) September 29, 1703. At the age of eleven years he accompanied his father Philip Syng Sr., to a goldsmith, to Philadelphia, arriving in that city September 29, 1714. Philip Syng Jr., was a Warden of Philadelphia, 1753; Treasurer of the City, 1759-69; a founder of Philadelphia Library Company; an original member of American Philosophical Society, inventing an electrical machine and experimenting along with Dr. Franklin, who acknowledges his valuable suggestions and discoveries. Mr. Syng was the promoter of the "Association Battery," organized for the defence of the city 1748. He was Provincial Commissioner of Appeals for Philadelphia, under Gov. John Penn, 1765; was a vestryman of Christ Church, 1747-9; and a trustee of the College and Academy of Philadelphia, from its organization 1755, and a member of Franklin's "Junto." He was an original member of the "Colony in Schuylkill," the ancient fishing company organized May 1, 1732, now "The Schuylkill Fishing Company of the State in Schuylkill," the name it adopted after the signing of the Declaration of Independence. He took an active interest in the institutions of the city; was a Director of the Hand in Hand Insurance Company, 1752, and one of the signers of the Non-importation Resolutions, 1765. He died May 8, 1789, and is buried at Christ Church. He was a Contributor to the Pennsylvania Hospital, and was Grand Junior Warden of first Masonic Lodge organized in America. He made the silver inkstand used at signing of Declaration of Independence.

ESTHER SYNG, daughter of Philip Syng Jr., by his wife Elizabeth Warner, born July 28, 1736, died September 21, 1813; married (first) at Christ Church, April 30, 1762, Samuel, son of Samuel Bunting who came to Philadelphia from England in 1722, by his wife Sarah Fearne; he was born in Philadelphia 1743; died in North Carolina August 20, 1767, and was buried at New Berger Creek, Pasquotank county, North Carolina. Esther (Syng) Bunting married (second) Tobias Rudolph.

William Warner, probably living in Gloucester county, N. J., as late as May 27, 1729, when his name appeared in an account of estate of Henry Tredway, whose will was proved March 6, 1726-7. It seems probable that he was father of Swan Warner, deceased, 10mo. (Dec.) 28, 1758, son of William, according to the records of Phila. Monthly Meeting (Race street). It is possible that he was the William Warner who m. 9mo. (Nov.) 25, 1731, at Phila. Monthly Meeting (Race street), Mary, dau. of John Welton, of Southampton township, Bucks county, Pa., witnesses John Welton, Christian Warner, Elizabeth Shute (doubtless Schute), William Robinson and 27 others. William and Mary (Welton) Warner were not, however, the parents of Swan Warner; Hannah Warner, m. before Dec. 3, 1723, John Bayley, of Phila.; Jacob Warner, possibly the Jacob Warner whose marriage to Charity Purdy took place at Christ Church, Phila., Sept. 10, 1730, by banns.

PHILIP SYNG BUNTING, son of Samuel and Esther (Syng) Bunting, born in 1763, died September 5, 1822. He married, 1788, Elizabeth Tomkins.

JOSHUA BUNTING, son of Philip Syng and Elizabeth (Tomkins) Bunting, born December 15, 1797, died March 31, 1850. He married, June 6, 1831, Henrietta Barron Wade.

JOSHUA BUNTING, son of Joshua and Henrietta Barron (Wade) Bunting, born December 1, 1837, died December 19, 1882; married Anne Elizabeth Bunting Jones, and they had issue:—

Mabel Syng Bunting, b. at Claymont, Del., Jan. 5, 1869;

Joshua Bunting, b. at Claymont, Del., Nov. 26, 1871;

HENRIETTA BUNTING, b. at Claymont, Del., Nov. 20, 1873; m. June 14, 1900, Porter Farquharson Cope, b. June 14, 1869, in Phila. (see Cope Family); they have issue:

Millicent Syng Bunting Cope, b. April 25, 1901;

Loretta Porter Cope, b. Feb. 17, 1905.

Lawrence Bunting, b. at Claymont, Del., May 24, 1880, d. there Jan. 18, 1882.

MARY WARNER, daughter of William Warner, was born in England, and came to America probably in 1675 with her father and other relatives. She married before 1680, James Kite (Keyt, Keyte or Keite). He also probably came from Worcestershire, or from the adjoining county of Gloucester, as the name seems indigenous there. In the baptismal records of Blockley Parish Church, under date of April 26, 1645, appears the name of Zacharius, son of Zachary Kite and Mary Warner; and in the register of the nearby Parish Church, of Bretfort, is recorded the marriage of Thomas Kitchen and Sarah Keyt, of Blockley, in 1678. William Keyt, Esq., of Ebrington, in Gloucestershire, buried October 12, 1632, "was High Sheriff of the county of Worcester, and rich in good works, as well as in worldly estate, being not only charitable to the poor in his lifetime but also at his death; he ordered the milk of ten cows to be given every year, May 10-November 1, unto the poor of Ebrington, for ever." He belonged to "an ancient and worshipful family," the members of which bore as their arms "Azure, a cheveron, between three Kites' Heads, eras'd, Or." The statement in an old pedigree (published in The Literary Era, volume iv., page 212) to the effect that Mary Warner's husband was a son of Sir George Kite, Baronet, Admiral under Oliver Cromwell and Charles II., is probably not correct.

James Kite had a sister Grissel (Griselda) in Philadelphia, who married John Simonds. The latter's will, dated October 2, 1699, proved March 1, 1699-1700, mentions his wife Grizegon, and makes bequests, among others, to kinsman John and kinswoman Grize, children of his "brother James Kite living on west side of Schuylkill," who was also made sole executor.

Mary (Warner) Kite was buried 1mo. (March) 3, 1686-7, at "Skoolkill Buring Place west side," and it is probable that there was an element of tragedy in connection with the causes that led to her death, as at the Friends' Quarterly Meeting held at Philadelphia 1mo. (March) 7, 1686-7, it was "reported to this meeting concerning the necessity of James Kite, he having received of late great damage by fire," and at a Monthly Meeting held 3mo. (May) 27, 1687, "Thomas Duckett & Henry Lewis having made Enquiry into James Kite's necessity, make Report to this meeting that his condition is very low, and his loss according to their information about £60." The records of this and several later meetings show that Friends throughout the county, and elsewhere, subscribed freely to Kite's relief; and his receipts for the sums paid him were reported to the Quarterly Meeting held at Philadelphia 1mo. (March) 5, 1687-8. He gradually retrieved his fortunes, and in the tax list dated September 26, 1693, his property beyond Schuylkill was valued at £40, on which he was assessed to pay 3 shillings, 4 pence.

Mary (Warner) Kite having died before the date of her father's will, was not mentioned in it; but the will contained bequests to her husband and two sons. After her death James Kite married (second) 3mo. (May) 13, 1698, Martha, widow of Daniel Medlicott, of Merion, Philadelphia county. At the head of the names of relatives, on their marriage certificate, is the name John "Simandes" (Simonds). Daniel Medlicott's certificate of removal dated 2mo. (April) 16, 1683, from the Monthly Meeting at Salop, England, was received at Philadelphia Monthly Meeting 9mo. (November) 4, 1684. James Kite was buried 9mo. (November) 6, 1713, according to the records of Race Street Monthly Meeting. Martha, his widow, married (third) 8mo. (October) 13, 1715, Jonathan Cockshall (or Cogshall).

The Kite family which descended from Mary Warner has long been prominent in West Philadelphia, and its members have intermarried with many other noted families of Blockley Township and vicinity, among them the Sellers family of "Sellers' Hall" in Upper Darby.

Issue of James and Mary (Warner) Kite:—

James Kite, Jr., b. 10mo. (Dec.) 12, 1682; lived in Phila; inherited the 100 acres on the south side of Blockley plantation which William Warner had devised to James Kite, Sr., and conveyed same, Jan. 18, 1717 (o. s.), to his cousin Isaac Warner, son of William Warner; d. unm., buried in Friends' Grave Yard at Merion, 5mo. (July) 31, 1745;

Abraham Kite, b. 10mo. (Dec.) 19, 1685, d. Oct., 1748; m. 7mo. (Sept.) 9, 1708, Mary, dau. of Thomas and Elizabeth Peters, of the celebrated family of that name, whose estate of Belmont lay about a mile above Blockley, on the Schuylkill. Abraham Kite was buried in Friends' Grave Yard at Merion, 9mo. (Nov.) 9, 1748. Mary, his widow, was buried at same place 12mo. (Feb.) 12, 1750-51;

John Kite, d. young, May 25, 1701.

ROBERT WARNER, son of William Warner, was born in England, probably before 1668, and if he came to America with his father and other relatives in 1675, it seems likely that he returned to his native land, as by his father's will, dated September 8, 1703, he was bequeathed two houses in Draycott, Robert Warner paying "unto my brother, Isaac Warner, five Pounds Sterling money of England, or to his assigns."

The records of Blockley Parish Church contain the names of a number of children of "Robert and Sarah Warner," as follows:

Robert Warner, bap. Jan. 12, 1690; probably d. inf., as another Robert was bap. later;
Anne Warner, bap. Oct. 10, 1692; doubtless the "Ann Warner of Draycott" who m.

William Minchin, in 1714, according to register of Blockley Parish Church, and whose remains lie buried in Blockley Church Yard, her grave having borne the following inscription: "Anne Minchin, relict of William Minchin, died February 23, 1773, at the age of 80 years;"

Maria Warner, bap. Aug. 4, 1695;

Ellenor Warner, bap. May 23, 1697;

Robert Warner, bap. April 8, 1700; probably d. inf., like the first Robert, as another Robert was bap. later;

Isaac Warner, bap. June 22, 1701; believed to have been the Isaac Warner who came to America probably about 1725, d. in Phila. soon after his arrival. By his will, dated Jan. 17, 1725-6, and proved at Phila. March 8, following, he devised all his lands in Parish of Blockley, England, to his sister Anne Minchin, of Blockley, and also the accumulated rents of houses in Draycott, the title to which he devised to his sister Mary Warner, of Blockley. To his "Cousin Mary Warner" residing with him in Phila., he devised all his personal estate in Phila., and also that that had been sent to sea, and he made her the executrix of his will.

As there is no mention of a wife or children in Isaac Warner's will, and as he was doubtless about twenty-five years of age at the time of his death, it is evident that he was unmarried. His "Cousin Mary Warner," residing with him, may have been his first cousin Mary, dau. of John and Anne (Campden) Warner, who was forty-two years of age at the time of his death, or less probably was his first cousin once removed, Mary, dau. of his great-uncle Edward Warner, brother of William Warner, or some other more remote relative;

Robert Warner, bap. Sept. 24, 1703; apparently third son of that name.

The recurrence of the name Robert in the above list was probably due to the decease in infancy of the first and second sons, but it is possible that another Robert Warner, of Draycott, who was the son of Edward and Mary, may also have had a wife Sarah, and have been the father of some of the children mentioned above.

ISAAC WARNER, son of William Warner, was possibly the youngest son, though his father made him heir to his principal landed estate. He was born in England, doubtless before 1670, and came to America probably in 1675 with his father and other relatives. By his father's will he inherited on the death of his mother, whose maiden name was Anne Dide (or Dyde), the whole of the plantation called "Blockley," consisting of 300 acres on the west side of the Schuylkill River (in two pieces, 288 acres in one, and 12 acres and 40 perches in another); also fifty acres of the "backward land" and half of all the "backward meadow" (about 35 acres); these last, however, were only to be held by him for life, and were to descend to his eldest son. Isaac Warner added to these tracts by purchase 50 acres on the Schuylkill; being 44 acres of mainland and 6 acres on an island which he bought of his brother John Warner, which was originally part of William Orian's share in the Indian purchase previously mentioned; 16 acres on the west side of the Schuylkill River in the Liberties of Philadelphia, adjoining Isaac Warner's other lands, bought of John Powell (no doubt part of the "Powelton" estate); 9 acres in Kingsessing township, Philadelphia county (but formerly called 6 acres and 60 perches), adjoining Widow Rambo's and Capt. Roach's lands, bought of John Powel October 15, 1700; 100 acres adjoining Blockley, bought January 18, 1717, from his cousin James Kite, Jr., inherited by the latter from Isaac's father William Warner, who was the grandfather of James Kite, Jr.; and 67 acres bought of Philip Howell, near to or adjoining the Blockley plantation.

Isaac Warner died 2mo. (April) 10, 1727. By his will dated April 6, 1727, proved May 6, 1727, he left his wife Anne Warner the plantation of 100 acres bought of James Kite, Jr., with the dwelling house on it, etc., during her life if she should so long remain a widow, and after her death or marriage to his son John Warner; the 67 acres bought of Philip Howell he also devised to his wife, and after her death or marriage, to his son Isaac Warner; to his son William Warner he devised the 50-acre tract bought of Daniel Pegg (really of John Warner) and 16 acres bought of John Powell and 9 acres in Kingsessing township, adjoining the estates of Widow Rambo and Capt. Roach; to his sons John Warner and Isaac Warner, he devised the meadow lying against "Persion," containing about 30 acres, to be divided between them equally; to his wife Anne Warner he bequeathed a negro woman Sarah; to his son William Warner, a negro boy Cuffe and a negro man Fortune, William paying yearly to his mother Anne Warner three pounds during her life or widowhood; to his son John Warner, a negro boy Sambo; to his son Isaac Warner, a negro boy Primus; to his daughter Esther Humphreys, a negro girl Hagar; to his daughter Hannah Warner, a negro girl Zilpha; and cattle, money, etc., he bequeathed to his wife, son William, and daughters Esther, Hannah and Anne, with the residue to his wife for life or widowhood, and then to his four daughters, Mary, Esther, Hannah and Anne. The executors were his wife Anne and son William Warner.

Isaac Warner and Anne Craven were authorized to marry, by Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, 10mo. (December) 30, 1692. She was probably a daughter of James Craven, a native of Limerick, Ireland, who, it is supposed, was granted 1,000 acres of land by William Penn, May 3-4, 1682, and whose name appears in several warrants and returns of survey of later date. James Craven, with others, had a patent dated 12mo. (February) 24, 1700 (o. s.), for 100 acres of Liberty Lands, in West Philadelphia, on Mill Creek, adjoining Benjamin Chambers and John Penington's lands, and lying some distance back of Blockley plantation, though in Blockley township, near Haverford Road, in what was afterwards called the Valley of West Philadelphia.

The will of Anne Warner, of Blockley township, widow of Isaac, who survived her husband about twenty-seven years, was dated 11mo. (January) 23, 1746-7, and proved October 17, 1754. By it she devised to her son William Warner three pounds out of the annual sum he was to pay her for the negro man named Tom Fortune, under his father's will; to her son John Warner, rents due her from him for her plantation at Schuylkill, 3mo. (May), 1745; to her son Isaac Warner, twenty shillings and the stone house she had built at a great charge of trouble, on the land that was to go to him at her death, by her husband's will; to her daughter Anne Wynne, a feather bed, etc.; and the residue of her estate she divided among her four daughters Mary, Esther, Hannah and Anne. Her son-in-law Richard George, of Merion, in the county of Philadelphia, was named as the sole executor. The witnesses were Hugh Evans and Edward William.

Buried Nov. 13, 1757, in Friends' Meeting Ground at Haverford. His will, dated Nov. 13, 1757, proved Dec. 3, 1757, mentions eight children, viz.: Hannah Warner, William Warner, Mary Warner, Abraham Warner, Isaac Warner, Jacob Warner, Anthony Warner and Ann Warner.

Anthony Warner, son of Isaac and Elizabeth (Lewis) Warner, m. Rachel Evans, and had a number of children, three of whom are still living (1908), viz.: Gardiner Latch Warner, resident of Haverford more than seventy-two years; C. Anderson Warner, Ardmore, Pa.; and Mrs. Charles Arthur, Rosemont, Pa.;

Mary Warner, m. (first) by Friends' authorization dated 10mo. (Dec.) 28, 1722, Thomas Wynne, who was devised a plantation in Blockley township by his father Jonathan Wynne, son of Dr. Thomas Wynne. After death of her first husband, Mary (Warner) Wynne m. (second) 1762, James Jones, of Blockley township, widower. An account of her descendants is given in these volumes under the title of "The Wynne Family;"

After death of her first husband, Esther (Warner) Humphrey m. (second) 10mo. (Dec.) 19, 1740, Richard George, of Merion. An account of some of her descendants is given in these volumes under title of "The Tunis Family;"

Anne (Warner) Wynne d. after April 9, 1788, the date of her will, but before 19th of same month, when her husband d. on same day her will was proved.

WILLIAM WARNER, eldest son of Isaac and Anne (Craven) Warner, inherited the Blockley plantation and other lands under the will of his grandfather William Warner, as well as lands under his father's will, all of which he and his wife conveyed to their son Isaac Warner by deed of gift dated January 17, 1758. The "History of the Schuylkill Fishing Company of the State in Schuylkill," (the oldest social club in the world, which was known as "The Colony in Schuylkill" until October 11, 1782), states that William Warner was a member of the Colony from the date of its inception, May 1, 1732, and says in regard to him: "He granted the Company the right to build the Court House or Castle on his property, and gave for the use of the members about an acre of ground. For this favor 'the lord of the soil,' who was dubbed by the citizens of the Colony in Schuylkill, Baron Warner, received in the month of June three sun perch, which were carried to his house on the large Penn Platter." This history also says, erroneously, that he married Mary, daughter of John Welton, September 25, 1731, and that he died September 12, 1794. But the William Warner who married Mary Welton was another William, possibly a son of William Warner, of Gloucester county, New Jersey.

"Baron" William Warner's will, dated April 19, 1762, was proved September 13, 1766, doubtless within a few days after his death. By it he devised to his wife about 50 acres in Blockley township "on which premises I now Intend to Build a House," to her for life or widowhood, and then to his youngest son William Warner (the balance of his land having been previously conveyed to his eldest son Isaac Warner, by the deed of 1758); he gave his old negro man called Cuff his freedom, and gave his other negroes Nann, Primus, Sam, Virgil, Cuff, Sarah, Zilpha and Lucy, to his wife and children; and left legacies to his daughters Barbara, Catherine and Anne. William Warner's wife Anne and son William were named as executors, and the will was witnessed by Rebecca Humphreys, Edward Humphreys and Charles Humphreys.

The family name and ancestry of Anne, wife of William Warner, are not known, neither has the date of her death been ascertained.

Issue of "Baron" William and Anne Warner:—

ISAAC WARNER, eldest son, m. Lydia Coulton; of whom presently;

William Warner, Jr., m. Dec. 12, 1765, Sarah, dau. of Thomas and Hannah Pearson, of Darby, and had a son, Pearson Warner, who d. May 22, 1769, aged 8 months. By deeds dated June 13, 1768, and Feb. 15, 1775, William Warner, Jr., conveyed to Stephen Paschall the use of a quantity of land sufficient for a mill race and dam, part of the land which he inherited from his father, the whole of which was by estimation 50 acres, more or less. In the first of these deeds there is a reference to "a Run or Rivulet of Water passing through the said Land;"

Barbara Warner, d. unm., buried Oct. 6, 1771, in Friends' Grave Yard at Merion Meeting House; letters of administration on her estate were granted to her brother Isaac Warner and sister Anne Warner, Nov. 2, 1771;

Anne Warner, unm. in 1771, when administratrix of the estate of sister Barbara Warner;

James Warner, d. 9mo. (Nov.) 29, 1723;

Susanna Warner, d. 8mo. (Oct.) 30, 1725;

John Warner, probably also son of "Baron" Warner, though his name appears in the list of persons, "not Friends," in the burial records of Phila. Monthly Meeting (Race street) 5mo. (July) 15, 1726.

ISAAC WARNER, eldest son of William Warner, the "Baron" of the Fishing Company of "The Colony in Schuylkill," acquired the original Blockley estate and much other land by deed of gift and sale from his father and mother, January 17, 1758. He was admitted a member of the Colony May 1, 1748, and upon the death of his father in 1766 he succeeded him as "lord of the soil" on which the "Castle" was built, and became second "Baron." After the Revolution the Fishing Company was reorganized as the "new State in Schuylkill" and the office of "Baron" was discontinued, but on October 11, 1782, when the old code of laws was amended so as to be adapted to the altered circumstances of affairs of government, it was resolved that "Isaac Warner be during his natural life Chief Warden of the Castle and its dependencies, who shall have a seat and vote in Council, and shall be entitled to all the privileges of a member of this State."

At the outbreak of the Revolution Isaac Warner was a member of Haverford (now Radnor) Monthly Meeting, but he conceived it his duty to take part in measures for the defense of his native soil against invasion by the British army, and became active among the "associators." This led to his being disowned by the Society of Friends, 5mo. (July) 10, 1776, for persisting in the practice of bearing arms. Early in 1777 he was commissioned Lieutenant-Colonel of the Seventh Battalion, Philadelphia County Militia, and later in the same year he became Colonel of the battalion, and took an active part in the operations for the defense of Philadelphia, in September. He also rendered important service to the patriot cause as Deputy Commissary General of Forage and in other useful capacities.

Isaac Warner married Lydia Coulton, license for their marriage having been issued August 25, 1757, in New Jersey, though both the contracting parties were Pennsylvanians. She was then a member of Darby Monthly Meeting. Col. Warner died 1794, and was buried September 20 of that year. His will, dated July 9, 1794, was proved November 20 following. In it he left bequests of personal property to his wife Lydia and daughters Tacy Roberts and Lydia Cress, and of cash to his grandsons John Roberts, Isaac Roberts and John Cress; to his son William Warner he gave his black boy Joe, part of the Blockley plantation, land bought at Sheriff's sale of Thomas Proctor, and part of his tract in Kingsessing township; and to his sons Joseph Warner and John Warner he devised the remainder of his Blockley estate and of the Kingsessing tract, also a lot in Northern Liberties bought of Andrew Supplee. Lydia (Coulton) Warner, widow of Col. Isaac Warner, died August 9, 1797. Her will, dated March 10, 1798, was proved January 18, 1800.

Ten years previous to his death, by deed dated July 20, 1784, Col. Warner and Lydia his wife, for a consideration of £1039 .10 .10, conveyed to Hon. John Penn, Jr., Esq., between 15 and 16 acres, the southeast part of the Blockley plantation. This land afterwards constituted Penn's estate called "Solitude," now the Zoological Gardens.

The share of Col. Warner's real estate which he devised to his sons Joseph Warner and John Warner, consisting of about 132 acres, was conveyed by them to Robert Eglesfeld Griffith, by deed dated April 2, 1798 (in which their mother Lydia Warner joined), and now forms that portion of the West Park which is known as "Eglesfeld."

Issue of Col. Isaac and Lydia (Coulton) Warner:—

Ann Warner, b. Jan. 30, 1758, m. Clement Smith, of Darby;

William Warner, b. Sept. 14, 1759, m. May 10, 1790, at Old Swedes' Church (Gloria Dei), Ann Roberts, b. about 1762, d. Oct., 1842. She was dau. of William and Hannah Roberts, and sister of Joseph Roberts, Esq., first teller of Stephen Girard's bank, who succeeded George Simpson as Girard's cashier after Mr. Simpson's death, Dec., 1822, and was also one of the five executors of Girard's estate to whom letters testamentary were granted Dec. 31, 1831.

William and Ann (Roberts) Warner by deed dated Oct. 13, 1795, conveyed to Jacob Lincoln the land in Kingsessing township which William Warner had received under will of his father.

The historic house in which the widow of William Warner resided until her death stood on the southwest side of Lancaster Road (now Lancaster avenue), near its present intersection by Forty-fifth street. It was a spacious mansion, designed according to the best standards of the Colonial period, and it is said that it was built 1747. A picture of the old house was drawn by Miss Beck, an artist, at the instance of John Fanning Watson, the annalist, but it has not been found among his papers. Watson left a manuscript account of an interview which he had with Mrs. Ann (Roberts) Warner when he called on her in June, 1833. The building was sold about 1845, and in the course of time became a hotel, known as the "Warner House."

William Warner's will, dated April 28, 1812, was proved Oct. 7, 1813; no children;

Tacy Warner, b. Oct. 11, 1761, d. May 9, 1828, m. Jan. 18, 1781, at Old Swedes' Church (Gloria Dei), Algernon, son of John and Rebecca (Jones) Roberts; had ten children;

Rachel Warner, b. March 6, 1763; probably d. young;

Isaac Warner, b. March 24, 1765; probably d. young;

JOSEPH COULTON WARNER, b. Nov. 15, 1767, m. Sarah Powell; of whom presently;

John Warner, b. April 2, 1770, d. Dec., 1816, unm. In his will, dated Nov. 28, 1816, proved Dec. 14, of same year, he described himself as a lumber merchant, and left legacies to sister Lydia Cress, nephews John Cress, Peter Cress, William Cress, Isaac Cress, nieces Eliza Cress, Lydia Warner, Mary Warner, Rebecca Warner, and the ten children of Algernon Roberts, late brother-in-law;

Lydia Warner, b. Jan. 2, 1772, m. (first) John Cress, had a number of children; m. (second) Lloyd Jones.

JOSEPH COULTON WARNER, son of Col. Isaac Warner, of Blockley, by his wife Lydia Coulton, resided in Philadelphia. He was a consistent member of the Race Street (Orthodox) Meeting of Friends. He married out of meeting, however, at the First Baptist Church, of Philadelphia, William Rogers, Pastor, on April 16, 1795, Sarah, daughter of William Powell, a private in Capt. Peter Z. Lloyd's company, Col. Atlee's Battalion, who was killed at the battle of Long Island, August 27, 1776. William Powell enlisted March 6, 1776. He had married, by license, at his house in Arch street, January 3, 1765, Mary, daughter of Jenkyn Thomas, who, like himself, was of Welsh descent. The ceremony was performed by Morgan Edwards, then pastor of First Baptist Church of Philadelphia. Mary (Thomas) Powell died at her residence at the northwest corner of Eighth and Arch streets, Philadelphia, December 23, 1817, aged seventy-five years, and was buried on Christmas day. Sarah (Powell) Warner, their youngest child, was born October 9, 1771. She died at the residence of her daughter Mrs. John P. Harrison, on Race street above Fourth street, Cincinnati, Ohio, November 24, 1845, having survived her husband more than forty-two years, Joseph Coulton Warner having died in Philadelphia, January 20, 1803. He did not leave a will, and letters of administration on his estate were granted to his widow Sarah Warner and Algernon Roberts, February 10, 1803.

By a deed dated April 2, 1798, Joseph Coulton Warner and Sarah his wife, John Warner, and Lydia Warner, widow, the mother of Joseph Coulton Warner and John Warner, conveyed to Robert Eggesfield Griffith, in consideration of £4,762 10. 00, the 132 acres of land which Isaac Warner, the father of Joseph Coulton Warner and John Warner, had devised to them. This was the property on which the "Castle" of the State in Schuylkill was located.

Issue of Joseph Coulton and Sarah (Powell) Warner:—

Lydia Coulton Warner, b. Feb. 16, 1796, m. Nov. 17, 1829, Isaac Stewart;
 Mary Thomas Warner, b. Sept. 26, 1798, m. Dr. John P. Harrison, of Cincinnati, Ohio;
 REBECCA ASHTON WARNER, b. Sept. 14, 1800, m. June 26, 1823, Henry Erwin, d. Aug. 7, 1881; of whom presently.

JOHN ERWIN, the grandfather of Henry Erwin, who married Rebecca Ashton Warner, before mentioned, according to an entry made in his Edinburgh Bible, presumably by himself, was born in the north of Ireland in the year 1727. He is supposed to belong to the same family as Hugh, Arthur, William, Nathan and Alexander Erwin, who came from the north of Ireland in or about the year 1760, but nothing is known to the writer of these lines to confirm this theory or to show where he was born. He was a strict member of the First Presbyterian Church of Wilmington, Delaware, was Assistant Burgess of Wilmington in 1763, and held that position almost continually until about the year 1788, possibly until his death, at Wilmington, May 30, 1797. He is buried in the churchyard of the First Presbyterian Church at Wilmington. He married Letitia, maiden name unknown, and they had issue as follows:

JOSEPH WARNER ERWIN, only son of Henry Erwin, by his wife Rebecca Ashton Warner, married, July 23, 1850, Caroline A., born November 19, 1830, in Cincinnati, Ohio, daughter of Samuel Borden, born in Philadelphia, May 2, 1807, died at Cold Spring, Kentucky, March 1, 1898, by his wife Catharine Dudley Upjohn, who died at Cold Spring, Kentucky, July 12, 1871; and whom he had married July 2, 1828.

Gen. Samuel Borden, father of the above named Samuel Borden, belonged to the prominent New Jersey family of the name, for whom Bordentown was named, and was born in New Jersey, May 2, 1781. He came to Philadelphia early in life, engaged in mercantile pursuits, and was a captain in the regular U. S. A., during the war of 1812-1814; but tiring of the inactive military routine, after the close of the war, resigned from the army, in 1816, removed to Cincinnati, Ohio, and engaged in mercantile pursuits there. He was an active public-spirited man, and held a number of city and county offices. He also took an active interest in military affairs, and passed through the various grades of militia service, to the office of Brigadier General of State Militia of Ohio, which he held at the time of his death, October 22, 1834, at the age of fifty-three years.

Issue of Joseph Warner and Caroline A. (Borden) Erwin:—

IDA WARNER ERWIN, b. May 14, 1851, m. Dec. 12, 1876, Joseph Ingersoll Doran, of whom presently;

Marie Louise Erwin, b. Dec. 10, 1854, m. Russell Hinman, Nov. 6, 1883; four children, Caroline Borden, Katharine Doble, Russell, Jr., and Eunice Bowditch Hinman.

JOSEPH INGERSOLL DORAN, ESQ., of Philadelphia, who married Ida Warner Erwin, whose descent from the Warner family of Blockley has been previously given, is a descendant of one of the earliest Colonial families of America. Through his mother Ann Luker (Callahan) Doran, he is a lineal descendant of Sir George Yeardley, or Yardley, Governor and Captain General of Virginia, 1619-1627.

THE YARDLEY FAMILY, three representatives of which settled in America, was a very ancient one in county Stafford, England, and is spoken of in "Patronymica Britannica" as one of the ancient families of Staffordshire, whose heads were called "Lords of Yardley." Their coat-of-arms, were "Argent on a chevron azure three garbs or, on a canton gules, a fret or," and their crest, "a buck, courant, gu. attired or."

The first of the family of which any definite record has been found was "William Yardley, L. M.," a witness to the signing of the first Magna Charta given by John I. to England, dated June 15, 1218. From this date, however, to 1400, no clear record of the line of descent has been obtained; from the latter date down to the emigration to America the line is as follows:

JOHN YARDLEY, of county Stafford, married, 1402, a daughter of Marbury, of Dadesbury, and had a son,

JOHN YARDLEY, of Killingsworth, county Warwick, who married a daughter of Tickens, and had a daughter Margaret, his sole heiress, who married John Yardley, son of Oliver Yardley, of Yardley, a contemporary of Henry VI., and had a son and heir,

JOHN YARDLEY, of Yardley, county Stafford, who married Elizabeth, daughter of William Birkes, of county Stafford, and their son,

WILLIAM YARDLEY, of county Stafford, living in 1583, married Eliabeth, daughter of William and Alice (Brereton) Morton, of Morton, Cheshire, and had five sons:

William Yardley, m. Margery Lawton, dau. of John Lawton, of Lawton; had sons John and William; the latter by his wife Dorothy, dau. of Sir John Drake, being father of William Yardley, of Ransclough, b. 1632, m. Jane Heath; emigrated to America in 1682, and settled in Bucks county, Pa.; was a member of Assembly, Provincial Councilor, etc. He and all his family d. prior to 1704, and were succeeded by his nephew Thomas, son of Thomas Yardley, of Rushton Spencer, county Stafford, another son of William and Dorothy (Drake) Yardley.

Richard Yardley, who came to N. J. about the same date that Thomas settled in Bucks county, is with Thomas, ancestor of the numerous and prominent family of Bucks county, whose representatives in nearly every generation to the present, have been prominent in official life of the county, state and province. Richard is supposedly a descendant of John Yardley, b. 1579 (another son of William and Dorothy (Drake) Yardley), who m. Alice, dau. of Richard Sutton, of Rushton Spencer, county Stafford; Ralph Yeardley, of Caldecot, Chester, m. Elizabeth, dau. of Randall Dodd, of Edge, county Chester. Was a druggist in London in 1627, when he administered on the estate of Sir George;

John Yardley, m. Mary, another dau. of Randall;

SIR GEORGE YEARDLEY, of Virginia, m. Temperance West; of whom presently; Randall Yardley, of whom we have no further record.

SIR GEORGE YEARDLEY (for some reason Sir George Yeardley, after his settlement in Virginia, adopted that form of spelling the name and in that form it was borne by his descendants) was born in England, between 1577 and 1580. He was a captain in the British army, and served with distinction in Holland, in the war with Spain. He was a subscriber to the Virginia Company of London, and a champion, from the first, of the rights of Jamestown pioneers, as opposed to the Court Party in the Company, who looked upon the colonists as servants of the Company, employed to do its bidding and entitled to no political rights. Capt.

Yeardley sailed for Virginia in the "Deliverance," June, 1609, as one of Her Majesty's Council of Virginia, but was wrecked on the Bermuda Islands, and did not land at Jamestown until May, 1610. He was a "man of wealth and of well deserved influence." Serving as President of Colonial Council until 1616, he was enabled to form a just estimate of the needs of the colonists, and a true conception of their rights. "His character and modes of thought made him the friend and supporter of popular rights," and he was greatly loved and respected by the colonists. On the departure of Gov. Dale for England, 1616 (with John Rolfe and his wife Pocahontas), Capt. Yeardley was made Deputy Governor. His mild and popular rule alarmed and enraged the Court Party in the Company, and Capt. Samuel Argall, a relative and the commercial agent of President Thomas Smith, of the Virginia Company, was appointed to succeed him. This action was received by the colonists as a public calamity and Capt. Yeardley went to England to intercede for them with the Crown and the Company. He was successful, the Court party was overthrown and Capt. Yeardley was named Governor General of the Colony of Virginia. James I. assented to the new policy, sent for the Governor elect, accorded him a lengthy interview, and finally as a signal mark of favor conferred upon him the honor of knighthood, November 22, 1618.

As Governor General of Virginia, Sir George Yeardley sailed for the Colony on January 29, 1619, with his commission and instructions from his sovereign and the Virginia Company to confer on Virginia the right of local self-government. Arriving at Jamestown he entered upon his duties as Governor April 19, 1619, and from that date, says Bancroft, "dates the real life of the Colony." Early in June he sent out summons to the members of the Council to attend, and ordered an election, the first in America, of representatives of the people to the House of Burgesses. July 30, 1619, the twenty-two newly elected Burgesses convened at Jamestown, the first representative governmental body in America, and to Sir George Yeardley is universally accorded the honor and title of "Father of Representative Government in America." He continued as Governor General until 1621, when he was succeeded by Sir Francis Wyatt, but continued a member of the "Counsel of State" until 1626. He was named as Deputy Governor in the absence of Wyatt, September 18, 1625, was again commissioned Governor General by Charles I., April 19, 1626, entered upon his duties May 17, 1626, and continued in office until his death, November, 1627. Bancroft says, "The reappointment of Yardley, was in itself a guarantee that representative government would be maintained; for it was Yardley who had introduced the system."

Sir George Yeardley married, 1618, Temperance West, who had come to Virginia in the "Falcon," 1609. In January, 1625, they were living in Jamestown with their three children, Elizabeth, Argall, and Francis, but at the date of the will and codicil of Sir George in October, 1627, they were living in James City, the new capital, as he bequeathed to his wife Temperance "all and evry prt & p'cell of all such household stufte, plate, linen, woolen, or any other goods moveable or immoveable of what nature or quality soever as to me are belonging and wch now att the tyme of the date hereof are being and remaying within this house in James Citty wherein I now dwell." His lands in James City were devised to his son Argall, but by the codicil were directed to be sold by Temperance as executrix. She did not long survive him and letters of administration were granted on both her estate and that of Sir George, to his brother Ralph Yardley, of London, to settle the estate abroad, February 14, 1628-9.

Issue of Sir George and Temperance (West) Yeardley:—

Elizabeth Yeardley, probably eldest child; if she lived to mature age and married, it was probably in England, as the Court records of Virginia mention nothing of her. We have no record of her after appointment of her uncle Ralph Yardley, of London, as her guardian, 1629;

ARGALL YEARDLEY, eldest son, b. about 1621, of whom presently;

Francis Yeardley was appointed Captain of Militia during the Indian scare on the eastern shore, and was a bold and dashing officer, held in high esteem by Governor and Council, as well as by the inhabitants of the Colony. He later became Colonel. He married widow of Capt. John Gookin, who was a Sarah Offley, of London, when she m. (first) Capt. John Michael, Sr., of Board of Commissioners of Northampton county, Virginia. Sarah (Offley) Thorogood m. (second) Capt. John Gookin; (third), about 1645, Col. Francis Yeardley. She d. 1657. It is not known that Col. Yeardley left issue. (See Thorogood and Michael families, later in this narrative).

COL. ARGALL YEARDLEY, eldest son of Sir George and Temperance (West) Yeardley, born at Jamestown, Virginia, about 1621, was a very prominent man in affairs of the infant Colony in Virginia. He was appointed, by Sir William Berkely, Commander of Accomac (later Northampton) county, then comprising the whole eastern shore of Virginia, on June 30, 1642, probably on his coming of age; and was a member of Council of State, December 20, 1643. He died intestate. He married (first) about 1640, but the name of his wife is unknown. He married (second), in 1649, while on a visit to Europe, Ann, daughter of John and Joane Custis, natives of England, but then living in Rotterdam.

Argall Yeardley, and grandson of Sir George and Temperance (West) Yeardley, was very prominent in Northampton county, Virginia, and was High Sheriff of the county at the time of his death, 1682. He married, about January 23, 1678, Sarah, eldest daughter of John Michael, Sr., by his wife Elizabeth Thorogood, daughter of Capt. Adam Thorogood and Sarah Offley.

The ancestry of Capt. Adam Thorogood traces back to John Thorogood, of Chelston Temple, county Hertford, England, who had sons, Nicolas and John Thorogood, the latter of whom had a son John Thorogood, of Felsted, county Essex, who married ——— Luckin, and was father of William Thorogood, of Gumstone, Norfolk, official of the diocese of Norwich, who married Ann Edwards, of Norwich, and had issue:—

His will, dated February 17, 1639-40, was probated April 27, 1640. Norfolk, Virginia, was named by him after his birthplace and home in England. He married Sarah Offley, who married (second) Capt. By his wife Elizabeth, he had a son John Powell, who was father of John Powell, who married Frances, daughter of Nathaniel Wilkins, and had two sons, Nathaniel Powell, died in 1732, and John Powell, married Sarah Yeardley prior to 1698. Dr. Michael Christian was a lineal descendant of Captain William Christian, of Ronaldsway, Isle of Man, popularly known as "William Dhome," who was executed in 1663 for the patriotic part he took in protecting his countrymen's laws and liberties. Joseph Reed Ingersoll, and was admitted to Philadelphia Bar April 3, 1824. He was Solicitor of the District of Southwark in 1835; member of Constitutional Convention of 1837, President of Repeal Association of Philadelphia, and Judge of Court of General Sessions, of Philadelphia, 1840-1843. JOSEPH INGERSOLL DORAN, born Philadelphia, January 17, 1844, only surviving issue of Joseph Michael and Ann Luker (Callahan) Doran, received his preliminary education in private schools, principally at the well-known school of Dr. John W. Faires, where he prepared to enter the University of Pennsylvania. He, however, remained but a short time at the university, and in the autumn of 1860, entered the office of John C. Bullitt, Esq., first as clerk and later as student at law. He was admitted as a member of Philadelphia Bar in April, 1865, and two years later to practice in Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. He has devoted his attention principally to railroad and corporation law, and is well known in that branch of his profession. He is Consulting Counsel for a great number of corporations, and has been General Solicitor for the Norfolk & Western Railroad Company since the organization of that company. Since 1880 he has been closely identified with the, since then, rapid development of the coal and iron districts of West Virginia and Virginia. Retaining his habits of industry, study and close application to business, and devoting himself with a commendable zeal and earnestness to the practice of his chosen profession, and the administration of his manifold business interests, he has built up a large practice and has been eminently successful in his business operations. In the midst of an extraordinarily busy life he has found time to devote to subjects of national and local interest. In 1876 he read an interesting paper before the American Social Science Convention on "Building Associations," which was extensively commented on. In 1888, he published a pamphlet on "Our Fishery Rights in the North Atlantic," which showed an exhaustive investigation of that intricate and most important subject. It was received generally as a forcible argument, and the best statement of the American side of the much debated fishery question. The Philadelphia Ledger referred to it as a "brief, pungent and able pamphlet," and the Boston Evening Transcript spoke of it as "one of the most satisfactory contributions to the literature of the Fishery controversy."

Joseph I. Doran married, December 12, 1876, Ida Warner, daughter of Joseph Warner Erwin, of Philadelphia, by his wife Caroline, daughter of Samuel and Catharine D. (Upjohn) Borden, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and granddaughter of Henry Erwin, by his wife Rebecca Ashton Warner, whose paternal ancestry back to John Warner, of Blockley, Worcestershire, England, through his son William Warner, first settler of Blockley, West Philadelphia, is traced in preceding pages.

WISTAR-WISTER FAMILY.

HANS CASPAR WÜSTER, ancestor of the Wistar and Wister families, prominent in the Colonial history of Philadelphia, was "Jager" or Forester to the Prince Palatine, an office that had been hereditary in the family. He resided in the rural village of Hilspach, six miles from Heidelberg, in the then Electorate of the Rhenish Palatinate. Hans Caspar Wüster died at Hilspach, January 13, 1726, at the age of fifty-five years, less three months. By his wife Anna Catharina Wüster he had issue:—

- Maria Wüster, b. Hilspach, 1690, m. David Deshler, Aide-de-camp to Prince Palatine, whose son David Deshler came to Pa., about 1730, and entered the counting house of his uncle John Wister;
- CASPAR WÜSTER, b. Hilspach, Feb. 3, 1696, came to Pa. 1717, d. at Phila., March 21, 1752, m. May 25, 1726, Katharine Johnson, of whom presently;

- Dorothea Wüster, b. 1705, m. ——— Dushorn, mentioned in will of Caspar Wüster;
- Maria Margaretha, b. June 10, 1707, no further record;
- JOHANNES (JOHN) WÜSTER, b. at Hilspach, Nov. 7, 1708, came to Phila. 1727, d. there 1789, m. (first) Salome Zimmerman, and (second) Anna Catharine Rubenkam, of whom later;
- Johan Ludovick Wüster, b. Jan. 29, 1711, remained in Hilspach, but is said to have d. s. p.;
- George Bernhardt Wüster, b. Sept. 18, 1713, no further record.

CASPAR WÜSTER, as he always wrote his name, though at the time of his naturalization it was recorded "Wistar," and in that form has been borne by his descendants to the present time, was born as above shown, in the village of Hilspach, in a quaint old house still standing, February 3, 1696. On attaining his majority, 1717, his father offered to resign his position of Huntsman to the Prince Palatine and have Caspar appointed in his stead, but the ambitious youth, doubtless hearing of the success of some of his countrymen in Penn's colony in America, decided to seek his fortune in the new country beyond the seas. Bestowing his patrimony on the younger members of the family, he sailed for Philadelphia, where he arrived September 16, 1717, without other worldly goods than his clothes, a double-barreled rifle still in possession of the family, and a single pistareen (nine pence Sterling). His first employment was in assisting to gather apples from an orchard on Arch street, for which he was paid in a portion of the fruit, and his first meal in America was made from bread and apples, a fact that was commemorated many years after by his distinguished descendant, Dr. Caspar Wistar, who entertained a number of distinguished guests at his house with a menu of bread and apples only. He later found regular employment with a button-maker and learned the art of making buttons of metal, wood and horn, and eventually took up that business on his own account. He also evidently engaged in the mercantile trade within a few years of his arrival, as in 1726, he is named in a list of "the principal Merchants of the City" in the "Weekly Mercury," who had signified their willingness to accept "New Castle and Kent Bills."

He took the oath of allegiance to the British crown in 1721, and as early as 1725, was interested in the manufacture of iron. About 1729, while travelling in the southern part of West Jersey, he noticed a deposit of sand similar to that used in his native country for the manufacture of glass, and securing the necessary capital, purchased a tract of land near Salem, and established the first glass making establishment in America. His several business ventures proved successful and he became a prosperous merchant and manufacturer and a considerable land-owner in various parts of Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Among his other purchases was a large tract in Northampton county, which he sold in smaller tracts to German settlers at a considerable profit. He also owned large tracts in Berks and Lancaster counties, on part of which he settled his brothers-in-law, whom he had induced to emigrate to Pennsylvania. His home was for many years on Front street, near that of Anthony Morris, but in 1743, he purchased a house on Market street between Second and Third, where he resided until his death on March 21, 1752, at that date one of the wealthiest men in the Province. He was one of the earliest contributors to the Pennsylvania Hospital, and was present at the first meeting of the contributors, May 1751.

Caspar Wistar, married, at Germantown Friends' Meeting, May 25, 1726, Catharine Jansen, or Johnson, as the name came to be spelled at about this date. She was born at Germantown, September 20, 1703, and died 12mo. 18, 1786, daughter of Dirck and Margaret (Millan) Jansen, both natives of the Palatinate and early settlers in Germantown. Her maternal grandfather, Hans Millan, came to Germantown in 1683, and was a considerable land owner there. He erected the Wyck house about 1700.

Issue of Caspar and Katharine (Johnson) Wistar:—

He later established a manufactory of glass and bottles in Philadelphia, where he resided until his death, which occurred August 4, 1781. He married (first), November 27, 1751, Sarah Wyatt, daughter of Bartholomew Wyatt, of Salem county, New Jersey, by his wife Elizabeth Tomlinson. RICHARD WISTAR, son of Richard and Sarah (Wyatt) Wistar, born in Philadelphia, July 29, 1756, turned his attention in early life to mercantile pursuits, in which he was very successful. He established a large wholesale and retail hardware business in Philadelphia, which he carried on many years. He invested largely in real estate in and near Philadelphia, which later became very valuable. He was, until the outbreak of the Revolution, a member of the Society of Friends, but was disowned for too active participation in warlike measures, contrary to the discipline of the Society. He became a Free Mason August 27, 1779, and achieved high rank in the order. The "Silk Stocking Lodge" was created for him and he became its first Worthy Master. He was an early supporter of Philadelphia Library and Pennsylvania Hospital, serving as a manager of the latter institution, 1803-6. His country seat, which he named "Hilspach" from the birthplace of his grandfather, Caspar Wüster, extended from Fifteenth street to Broad, and from Spring Garden to Wallace street. He died June 6, 1821.

Richard Wistar married, March 14, 1782, Sarah, born January 19, 1758, died January 7, 1831, daughter of Capt. Samuel Morris and his wife Rebecca Wistar, daughter of Caspar and Katharine, above mentioned. An account of her ancestry is given elsewhere in these volumes.

CASPAR WISTAR, M. D., son of Richard and Sarah (Wyatt) Wistar, born in Philadelphia, September 13, 1761, died there January 22, 1818. He was educated at Friends' schools of Philadelphia, and received a thorough classical training under private tutors. He became interested in medical science through assisting in caring for wounded soldiers after the battle of Germantown, and studied medicine under Dr. John Rodman, also taking a regular course in the Medical Department of University of Pennsylvania, where he received degree of Doctor of Medicine, 1782. After receiving his degree he went to Europe and, after spending a year in London, went to Edinburgh, and entered University of Edinburgh, from which he received his degree 1786. He was for two years President of the Royal Medical Society of Edinburgh. Returning to Philadelphia, 1786, he at once took up the practice of medicine there and became one of the most eminent and successful physicians in America.

Dr. Wistar was made a Fellow of Philadelphia College of Physicians 1787, and was one of its censors from 1794 until his death. He was many years physician of Philadelphia Dispensary; Professor of Chemistry at University of Pennsylvania, 1789-92; Professor of Anatomy, Midwifery, and Surgery, 1792-1808; and at the death of his associate, Dr. William Shippen, Jr., 1808, took the chair of Anatomy at the university, which he filled until his death, 1818. He was a member of the American Philosophical Society from 1787, its vice-president 1795-1815, and president from the latter date to his death. He was also president of the Society for the Abolition of Slavery. He was much interested in natural science and gave a great deal of time to scientific researches. His house at Fourth and Locust streets was a notable gathering place for students, scientists, and travellers and scholars of all grades. The "Wistar Parties" maintained in Philadelphia for many years had their origin in his custom of keeping "open house" once every week during the winter months, when kindred spirits gathered around his table and discussed science, literature and questions of the day. The noted travellers that visited Philadelphia were likewise his guests. Baron Von Humboldt was entertained there, 1804.

Caspar Wistar, M. D., married twice, (first) May 15, 1788, Isabella, daughter of Christopher Marshall, Jr., and Ann Eddy, granddaughter Christopher Marshall, Sr., and his wife, Sarah Thompson. THE WISTER FAMILY.

JOHN WÜSTER, second son of Hans Caspar and Anna Catharina Wüster, born in Hilspach, Rhenish Palatinate, November 8, 1708; remained with his father in Hilspach until the latter's death in 1726, when he at once made preparations to join his brother Caspar in Pennsylvania. In May, 1727, he embarked for Philadelphia, where he arrived in September of the same year. Like his brother, he brought little of this world's goods with him, and for the first few years of his residence in the city was probably employed in connection with some of the industries established by his brother. He later engaged in the business of a wine merchant. In 1731, he purchased a lot on Market street between Third and Fourth streets, and having married, April 9, 1731, Salome Zimmerman, of Lancaster county, also a native of Germany, he took up his residence on his new purchase, which continued to be the city home of the family for three generations. Like his brother Caspar, John Wister prospered in his business undertakings and acquired a comfortable fortune, becoming the owner of several dwelling and business places in the city, and a large tract of land in Germantown and Bristol townships, including "Wister's Woods" still owned by his descendants, and a large tract on Shoemaker's Lane and Germantown Road. On the latter tract, purchased 1741, he erected 1744, the old mansion, ever since occupied by his descendants, which they have christened "Grumblethorpe," now occupied by his great-grandson Charles J. Wister, Jr. He also owned a large tract of land in Lancaster county, which remained in the family three generations. He made the Germantown Mansion his summer residence, retaining his fine city residence on Market street, where he died January 31, 1789.

John Wister was a man of the strictest uprightness and integrity, of a kindly and charitable disposition. For many years he kept up communication with his relatives in Germany and sent them financial assistance. He also dispensed a liberal charity in his own city. Becoming on his marriage a member of the Society of Friends, during the Revolution he took no active part in the contest, though there is evidence that he was in sympathy with the cause of independence. He remained in Philadelphia during its occupation by the British, occupying the house at 325 Market street, long afterwards occupied by his sons and grandsons. As before stated, he married, April 9, 1731, Salome Zimmerman. She died 1736. Of her four children only one lived to mature years, Salome, who married William Chancellor. On November 10, 1737, John Wister married (second) Anna Catharine Rubenkam, who was born in the city of Wanfried, Germany, and was a daughter of John Philip Rubenkam, a clergyman of that city. She died May 17, 1770, having borne her husband five children of whom three lived to maturity. Mr. Wister married (third) Anna Thoman, who had come to Pennsylvania with her father, Durst Thoman, 1736. By her he had no children. John Wister was at one time much inclined towards Moravianism and became the intimate friend of Count Zinzendorf, who during his visit to Pennsylvania in 1741, was a frequent visitor at the Wister home in Philadelphia, and two chairs presented by him to John Wister are still prized possessions of his descendants.

Issue of John and Anna Catharine (Rubenkam) Wister:—

DANIEL, b. Feb. 4, 1738-9, d. Feb. 15, 1804, m. May 5, 1760, Lowry Jones; of whom presently;

Catharine, b. Jan. 2, 1742-3, m. Samuel Miles;

William, b. March 29, 1746, d. 1800, unm., was a wholesale merchant of Phila.

DANIEL WISTER, eldest son of John and Anna Catharine (Rubenkam) Wister, born in Philadelphia, February 4, 1739 (N. S.), on coming of age became associated with his father in the mercantile business, residing during the earlier days of his married life in the old homestead at 325 Market street, where all his children were born; spending the summer months at the Germantown house. After the death of his father, however, he made Germantown his permanent residence. He became one of the prominent merchants of Philadelphia. Both he and his father were signers of the Non-importation Agreement, but like his father, Daniel Wister took no part in the active struggle.

Daniel Wister, married, by Friends' ceremony, 5mo. 5, 1760, Lowry Jones, born in Lower Merion, 10mo. 30, 1742, daughter of Owen and Susanna (Evans) Jones, of Lower Merion, later of the city of Philadelphia. She was a granddaughter of Jonathan and Gainor (Owen) Jones, and great-granddaughter of Dr. Edward Jones, the pioneer of the colony of Welsh settlers in Merion and Haverford townships, who came from the neighborhood of Bala, Merionethshire, Wales, 1682. The wife of Dr. Edward Jones was Mary Wynne, daughter of Dr. Thomas Wynne, of Caerways, Flintshire, Wales, an early minister among Friends, who with his second wife Elizabeth Mode, came to Pennsylvania with William Penn, in the "Welcome," 1682, and was Speaker of the first Pennsylvania Assembly. While Daniel Wister was of pure German descent, his wife Lowry Jones was of pure Welsh stock, and descended through a long line of worthy ancestors from the ancient princes of Britain. Her grandmother Gainor Owen, was a daughter of Robert Owen, and Rebecca Humphrey, of Merion, who came from Fron Goch, Merionethshire, to Pennsylvania, 1690, and whose descent from the Twelfth Century chieftain, Rhirid Flaid, is given elsewhere in this volume. Her mother Susanna Evans, born 1719, died 1811, was a daughter of Hugh and Lowry (Williams) Evans, and a granddaughter of Rees John Williams, who with his wife Hannah Price (ap Rhys), a descendant of Owen Glendower Tudor, and of Edward I., came to Pennsylvania 1684, and settled near Gwynedd. Hugh Evans, maternal grandfather of Mrs. Wister, born 1682, died 1772, many years a representative in the Provincial Assembly, was a son of Thomas and Ann Evans, who emigrated from Wales, 1698, and settled at Gwynedd; and a descendant of Owen, Prince of Gwynedd and of Bleddyn, Prince of Wales.

In the autumn of 1776, Daniel Wister removed his family to the Foulke homestead near the present Pennlynn station on the North Pennsylvania Railroad, then occupied by Hannah, the widow of William Foulke, and her three unmarried children, Jesse, Priscilla and Lydia. An elder son Amos, had married Hannah Jones, sister to Mrs. Wister, which may account for the selection of the Foulke homestead for a place of refuge during the period when Philadelphia was threatened and occupied by an armed force of the enemy. The family of Daniel Wister then consisted of his wife Lowry, and five children—his eldest daughter Sarah, aged fifteen, the "Sallie Wister" whose delightful "Journal," written at the Foulke homestead, during her exile from her girl friends in the city, to one of whom, "Debby Norris," later Mrs. George Logan, it was addressed, has been printed; Elizabeth ("Sister Betsy" of the Journal), then in her thirteenth year; Hannah, aged nine years; Susannah, in her fourth year; and John, a toddler of ten months. Their residence at Pennlynn covered the period of the battles of Germantown and Brandywine, and the encampment of Washington and his army at White Marsh, but a few miles away, and the "Journal" covers the period from September 24, 1777, to the return of the family to Philadelphia, August, 1778, after its evacuation by the British, during a great portion of which time the Foulke house was the headquarters of Gen. Smallwood of the Maryland Troop and his staff, with whom and many other officers of the Continental army, "Sally Wister" was closely associated and on intimate terms. Sally Wister was a bright, intellectual girl, just budding into womanhood, and her journal, somewhat in the nature of a series of letters to her girl friend, recorded her everyday impressions of the scenes and happenings of that eventful period, and its reference to her friends and acquaintances gives us delightful glimpses of the social life of that period. Both Sally and her sister Elizabeth, developed into fine types of womanhood, they both wrote poetry of more than ordinary merit and were contributors to the Portfolio, Sally, under the nom-de-plume of "Laura" and Elizabeth under that of "Elvira." Neither ever married. Sally was ardently devoted to her accomplished and charming mother and at the latter's death, 2mo. 15, 1804, was so broken hearted over her loss that she did not long survive her, dying 4mo. 21, 1804. Daniel Wister died 10mo. 27, 1805, at his Germantown residence, where the family had permanently resided after the death of his father, 1789.

JOHN WISTER, eldest son of Daniel and Lowry (Jones) Wister, became associated with his uncle William Wister in the wholesale mercantile trade in Philadelphia, and at his uncle's death formed a partnership with his brother Charles under firm name of John & Charles Wister and continued the business until 1819, their brother-in-law, John Morgan Price, becoming a member of the firm also, a short time after its organization. In 1819, the firm closed out the business and both brothers retired to their Germantown homes, John to "Vernon" and Charles J. to "Grumblethorpe," both in the same immediate neighborhood. The brothers were devotedly attached to each other and kept up the closest associations throughout their long life. Both had retired with ample fortunes, and devoted much of their time to literary and scientific pursuits. John, in early life, was convivially inclined and took much delight in fox-hunting, belonging to an aristocratic fox-hunting club, and also to the celebrated "Denny Club," founded by Joseph Denny, the accomplished editor of the Portfolio. The club was composed of a number of literary gentlemen of Philadelphia, who were in the habit of entertaining each other and foreigners, and others of distinction, when visiting the city. Thomas Moore, while in Philadelphia in 1804, was entertained by this congenial club, and to its members addressed the lines in the Letter to Spencer, beginning,—

"Yet ye forgive me, O you sacred few,
Whom late by Delaware's green banks I knew:
Whom known and loved thro' many a social eve,
'Twas bliss to live with and 'twas pain to leave."

In a note to the poem he states that it was in the society of Mr. Denny and his friends, that he passed the few agreeable moments of his tour.

John Wister, however, later became a member of the Society of Friends, adopted the plain dress and address common to that sect, and was extremely domestic and retired in his habits, seldom seeking society beyond his own fireside and the circle of his closest and immediate friends, by whom he was greatly beloved. The obituary notice of him at the time of his death most happily and truly portrays the estimation he was held in by his acquaintances. "Mr. John Wister was the head of a large, influential and wealthy family; and his name and position were as familiar to this community for half a century, though living in close retirement, as if his life had been the most ostentatious and prominent. Few of our citizens can remember when, more than forty years ago, he retired with a very large fortune to his late residence in Germantown, where he found, during that long period, those enjoyments, in the midst of a devoted fireside, which few so fondly appreciated, and with which fewer have been blessed to the same extent. His peace appeared to be round his own hearth. His home was his paradise, and all were made happy who came within its gates. Mr. Wister affected no display; there was not a grain of factitious pride in his nature. He possessed a firm and manly will, and had a decided opinion upon all questions; but in it all there was an ever-flowing spring of geniality, extremely pleasing and at once putting everybody at ease. If the acts of Mr. Wister are to be received as the best evidence of character, then there was no better Christian than he. Indeed his whole life was a beautiful model for example. To an austere uprightness he added an unchangeable consistency, and a religious affluence that pervaded his well balanced mind, and illustrated his daily practices. No charity passed under his eye unassisted; and no one deserving pity left him empty handed. Thus while he shut himself up, technically, from 'society' and the 'world,' no one fulfilled his allotted duty more studiously, more usefully, and more in accordance with the truest dictates of a discriminating wisdom and humanity. From our personal knowledge of the deceased, we are warranted in thus speaking of him. His memory requires no eulogium at the hands of any one. Sufficient be it to say no man passed through life more scatheless, so entirely unaffected with its worldliness and heresies; or, when laid in the receptacle of all living, was more devoutly regretted than John Wister." He died at "Vernon," his Germantown seat, 12mo. 27, 1862, in his eighty-seventh year, after a residence there of half a century.

John Wister married, 1798, Elizabeth Harvey, of Bordentown, New Jersey.

She was to an eminent degree an estimable woman, and exercised through life a potent influence for good in the community in which she lived. A testimony to her worth, written after her death, December 26, 1891, says, among other things, "Her power of making others happy came from a strong spring of happiness in herself, and its source was goodness. * * * No word or deed of hers had a double motive, and she never said anything for effect. * * * She was religious, but her strong, unspoken piety found no other expression than in acts of love and devotion to those around her, and in lifelong regular attendance at Friends' Meeting, to which she belonged from birth. * * * She helped to build up a home with a tradition of popularity beyond any we have ever known."

CHARLES JONES WISTER, second son of Daniel and Lowry (Jones) Wister, born at the old Wister house, 325 Market street, Philadelphia, April 12, 1782, in the house upon which Benjamin Franklin erected his first lightning rod—still in possession of the Wister family—connecting it with a bell which gave an alarm whenever the atmosphere was surcharged with electricity. The bell so annoyed Mrs. Daniel Wister, that it was removed at her request. Charles Jones Wister's first educational effort was in a private school on Arch street, and at the age of nine years he entered the "Quaker Academy" on Fourth street, below Walnut, then under the charge of Jeremiah Paul, and when, during the summer months, the family were domiciled at the Germantown residence, he attended Germantown Academy, at that time presided over by Col. Thomas Dungan. He continued at school until his seventeenth year, when he was apprenticed to his uncle William Wister, who had succeeded his father John Wister, the pioneer, as a merchant at the old store, now 325 Market street, and after a year's experience in the store was sent on collecting tours for the firm, his trips extending as far west as Pittsburg, and south to Winchester, Virginia. Many novel experiences in these journeys, made on horseback through a sparsely settled country, are narrated in letters exchanged between him and his sisters and mother at Germantown, still in possession of his son, Charles J. Wister, Jr., of Germantown. Many of those written to him by his talented sisters, Sally and Elizabeth, were couched in rhyme, and possess real merit, both for poesy and humor. In the winter of 1801 he attended a course of lectures on chemistry at University of Pennsylvania, delivered by Professor James Woodhouse, and thought seriously of preparing himself for the practice of medicine. He later associated himself with Dr. Seybert, apothecary and protégé of his distinguished cousin Dr. Caspar Wistar, who was an enthusiastic chemist, and they conducted a number of experiments for their mutual enlightenment. Seybert was also an expert mineralogist, having studied that science in his native country, Germany, with Werner and Blumenbach, of Freiberg, and had brought with him to America the first mineralogical specimens ever introduced into this country. Through him Mr. Wister became greatly interested in that science, and in his collecting tours, and many solitary rambles among his native hills, with specimen box and hammer, laid the foundation of a mineralogical cabinet of which he might be justly proud. In 1814 Mr. Wister further advanced his knowledge of chemistry and mineralogy, by attending a course of lectures delivered by the distinguished Professor Parker Cleveland, of Bowdoin College, Maine, with whom he formed an intimacy that lasted many years, and Mr. Wister gave him material assistance in the preparation of his work on mineralogy, first on the subject ever published in America, and is profusely quoted therein.

In 1803 Charles J. Wister, having attained his majority, and his uncle William being deceased, became a partner in the firm, with his brother John, under title of John & Charles Wister, and later their brother-in-law John Morgan Price, was admitted and the firm name changed to Wister, Price & Wister. He likewise inherited from his uncle and his grandfather John Wister, considerable landed property, including the old mansion, woods and farm at Germantown, where he ever after made his home. He had a birthright in the Society of Friends, but was disowned for paying a militia tax, 11mo. 25, 1803. He married, December 15, 1803, Rebecca, daughter of Joseph and Hester (Baynton) Bullock, of Philadelphia. Her mother, Hester, was a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Chevelier) Baynton, who were married December 17, 1747, and granddaughter of Peter Baynton (son of Benjamin Baynton, of England), born December 27, 1695, who came to Philadelphia and engaged in the business of a shipping merchant about 1720, and was drowned in the Delaware, 1723. Mr. Wister continued to reside with his family in Philadelphia during the winter months until 1812, when he removed permanently to Germantown. In 1819, the firm of Wister, Price & Wister dissolved, and the mercantile business so successfully conducted in Philadelphia by the family for three generations and covering nearly a century, passed into other hands. Mr. Wister was one of the little coterie of young business men calling themselves the "Twilight Club," who formed the habit of gathering at the store of a mutual friend, J. Pemberton Parke, after the close of their daily labor and discussing questions of the day, as well as science and literature, from which gatherings, it is said, sprang the foundation of Academy of Natural Science, instituted August 1, 1815. He was also a frequent visitor at the "Debby Club." Charles J. Wister became a member of Philadelphia Library Company, 1806; of Library Company of Germantown, December 1, 1808, of which he was a director and many years secretary and treasurer. He was also a member of the "Linnæan Society of Philadelphia," instituted in 1806, "for the cultivation of natural sciences;" of the "Humane Society of Philadelphia," "for the recovery of persons from suspended animation," 1806; Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, May, 1809; "Philadelphia Society for Promotion of Agriculture;" "American Philosophical Society of Philadelphia," trustee of Germantown Academy, May 7, 1810; member of Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia, 1mo. 11, 1814. He was elected secretary of first board of directors of Bank of Germantown, instituted 1814, and served as a director for half a century. He was likewise one of the most active trustees of Germantown Academy, from his election, 1810, until the revocation of its charter, 1837. In 1820 and again in 1821, he delivered a course of lectures for its benefit on mineralogy and geology. He kept in close touch with the institutions of Philadelphia and vicinity, and enjoyed a wide acquaintance with the learned men and scholars of his day. He was an ardent student of botany and an authority on local flora. The plant named in his honor, Coralrhiza Wisteriana, by Professor Nuttall, was a discovery of Mr. Wister's.

Charles Jones Wister died July 23, 1865, universally lamented. His first wife, Rebecca Bullock, died September 20, 1812, shortly after the conclusion of a tour through western Pennsylvania, undertaken for her health. On December 4, 1817, he married Sarah, daughter of John and Sarah Whitesides, of Philadelphia, at St. Luke's Church, Germantown. Mrs. Wister survived her husband, and died May 31, 1869, in the seventy-first year of her age.

WILLIAM WYNNE WISTER, eldest son of Charles Jones and Rebecca (Bulloch) Wister, born in Germantown, Philadelphia, March 25, 1807, died there December 16, 1898. He was educated at Germantown Academy, graduating in the class of 1824; was thoroughly proficient in the Greek and Latin languages, and an ardent student of the classics all his life. He also taught himself the German language, in which he attained such fluency, that he was often taken for a native of Germany. He was a good botanist and collected a valuable herbarium, to which reference was often sought by his townsmen, when they wished to classify plants and flowers of rare varieties. In disposition he was most retiring, averse to publicity and preferred to devote himself to his books in his well selected library to any other pastime. With unimpaired faculties and a clear intellect he attained the age of ninety years, and was known among his intimates in Germantown, as the "Grand Old Man" of the town. He was vice-president and later president of National Bank of Germantown, from 1862 until his death in 1898.

CASPAR WISTER, M. D., eldest son of Charles Wister, by the second marriage with Sarah Whitesides, was born September 15, 1818. He was a student at Germantown Academy until his fifteenth year, and was then sent to Dr. Bolmer's French School at West Chester, Pennsylvania. He completed his academic education at Samuel Gummere's Academy at Burlington, New Jersey, and became a civil engineer. Several years he followed a roving life. Going to Texas, he served with the Texan patriots in their struggle for independence, under Gen. Sam Houston, in the Texas Mounted Rifles, all through the desperate conflict. He later came east and travelled back and forth several years, meeting with many adventures and hair-breadth escapes. He finally gave up his wanderings and entered the Medical Department of University of Pennsylvania, received degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1847, and settled down to the practice of his profession in Philadelphia. He became one of the foremost successful physicians of the city. He was president of Rittenhouse Club, formerly Social Art Club, director of Philadelphia Library Company, president of Board of Inspectors of County Prison, manager of House of Refuge, director of Philadelphia Savings Fund Society, Examining Surgeon of New York Life Insurance Company, member of American Philosophical Society, as well as member of a number of other scientific, philanthropic, social and business societies and associations.

Dr. Wister was struck down at the Pennsylvania Railroad station, 1879, and his skull fractured, but he recovered and resumed his life work, though a large part of the frontal bone had to be removed on the right side of his forehead, so that the pulsations of his brain were plainly visible. Though he lived for nine years after the accident, his death is thought to have been due to the injuries then received. He died December 28, 1888.

A testimonial of him adopted by the government of the Rittenhouse Club says of him: "Open, frank, decided, and truthful, his convictions, from their sincerity, impressed themselves upon every one he met, and, though you might not agree with him, it was impossible not to respect him. With the sternest sense of honor, he had the gentleness of a woman towards those whose weaker nature had been their cause of deviation from the path of rectitude. While he could not understand it, he could always pity it. To the young and the old, to the man of business, and to the man of leisure, at the hospital and in the prison, his presence was always welcome as at the play-ground, where he mingled with the most youthful of his friends."

Dr. Wister married (first), July 20, 1846, Lydia H. Simmons, who died in 1848, leaving a daughter, Lily Wister, who married, October 31, 1878, Clifford Rossel. Dr. Wister married (second), June 26, 1854, Anna Lea, daughter of Rev. William H. Furness, D. D., who survives and is an eminent translator.

OWEN WISTER, son of Dr. Owen Jones Wister and his wife Sarah Butler, was born in Philadelphia, July 14, 1860. He prepared for college at St. Paul's School, Concord, New Hampshire, and graduated at Harvard University, class of 1882, with degree of A. M., and from Harvard Law School with degree of LL. B., in 1888. He was admitted to Philadelphia Bar in 1889, but soon after devoted his time to literary pursuits, taking up literary work exclusively in 1891. He is author of "The Dragon of Wantley; His Tail," 1892; "Red Man and White," 1896; "Lin McLean," 1898; "The Jimmy John Boss," 1900; "U. S. Grant, a Biography," 1900; "The Virginian," a novel, for which he is chiefly famous, 1903; "Philosophy," 1903; "A Journey in Search of Christmas," 1904. He has also written much prose and some verse for magazines, and was collaborator on Musk-Ox, Bison, Sheep and Goat, for Whitney's American Sportsman's Library, 1904. He resides in Philadelphia.

PEMBERTON FAMILY.

Lower in his Patronymica Britannica states that the family name of Pemberton is derived from the chapelry of that name in the parish of Wigan, hundred of West Derby, Lancashire, and it is certain that Pembertons are found at a very early period as lords of the manor of Pemberton, in Wigan parish, within a few miles of Aspull. Lower is perhaps not quite accurate; the manor of Pemberton must have existed long before the chapelry became an entity, and the family took their name from their manor, which afterwards gave the name to the chapelry. Of these early Pembertons it will suffice to mention Adam de Pemberton, who was living in the reign of Richard I., and whose son, Alan de Pemberton, 3 John, paid ten marks to have seizin of his lands in Pemberton, and for his relief, etc.

Others of the name at a later date were: Adam de Pemberton; Henry, son of Lawrence de Pemberton; Alan, son of Aldich de Pemberton; and another Adam de Pemberton, who was living 24, Edward I. The eldest branch of this line ended in co-heiresses, who acquired the estates, but descendants of younger sons continued in the neighborhood of Wigan.

The first Lancashire Pemberton, known with absolute certainty to have been an ancestor of the Pennsylvania Pembertons, and the first of the line concerning whom we have reliable information, was William Pemberton, born in the township of Aspull, parish of Wigan, county Lancaster, England, circa, 1580. If the register of the parish church of Wigan could be searched and the wills of various Pembertons examined, the pedigree, no doubt, could be carried much farther back than this William Pemberton, with whom we begin the Pennsylvania line, and who was, doubtless, a descendant of those persons of the name who appear early in the history of Lancashire.

Mr. Townsend Ward, on page 141, of ms. "Genealogy of the Lloyd, Pemberton, Hutchinson and Kirkbride Families," says:

"After much research, all the particulars respecting its" (the Pemberton Family's) "members that could be collected, are comprised in an account of the family in ms. by J. P. P." (James Pemberton Parke). See also "Memoirs of Samuel Fothergill," by George Crosfield, page 160, and "The Friend," vol. xxi., pp. 46, 61, et seq. Lieut. Col. Thomas Allen Glenn, in his printed edition of Mr. Townsend Ward's ms., mentioned above, with additions, says:

"The information here given is from the above sources, and from 'Friends Miscellany,' vol. vii., p. i; 'The Pemberton Family' (of New England), by Walter K. Watkins, Boston, 1892; 'The Pemberton Papers,' in Historical Society of Pennsylvania; vol. i., the publications of the Haeleian Society, London, and Public Records. It is curious to note that there was at least one other family of Pemberton in Pennsylvania, whose connection, if any, with the Pembertons under consideration does not appear. John Pemberton was born in Glasgow, Scotland, 1717, and his wife in Newton Clanebois, Ireland; they settled at Abington and were Friends. They had issue, several children, who are believed to have left descendants."

William Pemberton, named above as first of this branch of the Pemberton family, of whom we have any account, seems to have been a man of considerable estate. By a "lease for three lives" dated May 30, 1625, it appears that a message and its "crofts or slosures of land, gardians, pastures, feedings," etc., in Aspull, were let to him by Roger Hindley, of Hindley Hall, during the lives of Ralph, Alice and Margery, his children, and the survivors of them. Two years later, this lease was assigned by William to his son Ralph.

William Pemberton married, December 10, 1602, Ann ———, who died December 23, 1642. He died at Aspull, November 26, 1642. Their children, so far as known, were:

Alice Pemberton, d. at Aspull, Jan. 29, 1675. An Alice Pemberton, and six others, were committed to the House of Correction (at Manchester?), for three months in 1664, for attending Quaker worship (Besse's Suffering, i, p. 315);

Margery Pemberton, d. in 1670;

RALPH PEMBERTON, b. June 3, 1611, of whom presently;

Ellen Pemberton, m. before Dec. 4, 1674, John Allred; she d. in England, Dec. (22?), 1684; they had issue:

Alice Allred;

Phineas Allred;

John Allred, m. and had issue;

Owen Allred, b. 1674;

Theophilus Allred, b. 1686;

Solomon Allred, b. 1689, m. ——— ———.

"Nothing further is known of these," says Mr. Parke.

RALPH PEMBERTON, son of William and Ann Pemberton, was born in the township of Aspull, parish of Wigan, county Lancaster, England, January 3, 1611, died in Bucks county, Province of Pennsylvania, "in the American Plantations" July 17, 1687. He was a man of considerable property, and seems to have been well thought of, and trusted in Aspull and its neighborhood. In 1673 he was living at Boulton-le-Moors, generally called Bolton, also in parish of Wigan, and from here he removed in 1676 to Radcliffe Bridge, finally going with his son Phineas and the latter's wife and children to Pennsylvania, in 1682, dying there five years later. He was probably a member of Society of Friends; while living at Bolton, he, in 1673-74, rendered an account of money distributed to the poor (Friends?) of Aspull.

Referring to the "Armorial Devices" of the Pembertons, Mr. Parke gives several coats of different families, as mentioned in "Burke's General Armory." He also speaks of a seal used by John Pemberton, on a letter dated Woburn, March 16, 1789, viz: Quarterly, first and fourth, Ar. a chevron vert between three buckets sa. Second and third, Ar. three dragons' heads erect, coupéd. Crest, A dragon's head erect, coupéd. Motto: Nec temere nec timide.

Glenn, already quoted, says: "An ancient steel seal in the possession of Henry Pemberton, Esq., of Philadelphia, bears the following arms: Argent, a chevron sable (instead of vert), between three water bougets of the second, hooped and handled or. Crest, A dragon's head coupéd, proper." Glenn mentions a steel seal, but Mr. Pemberton, whom he names, wrote in 1906: "The earliest mention that I have found of their Coat-of-Arms, is on a letter written in 1740, bearing the imprints of seals, some of which (Carnelian and Gold) are in my possession. The Arms are, 'Argent a chevron between three buckets; Sa. hooped, and handled, Or.; Crest, a Dragon's Head, sa. coupéd and langed.' I enclose my book plate thereof; also an imprint from one of the old seals. In 1864 I met in Quebec the Hon. Henry Pemberton, there residing, and he showed me his Arms, similar to ours, but bearing a motto, which ours never had. In 1864, in the Heralds' Office, London, I saw the Arms of Sir Francis Pemberton, Lord Chief Justice of England. His father had been a merchant, named Ralph Pemberton, from Lancashire; they told me the Arms had been granted some years before to the said Ralph Pemberton. They were, first and fourth, Argent; a chevron between three buckets; Sa. coupé, and handled, Or. Second and third, three dragon-heads, erect sa, coupé and langued, Gu. Crest, a Dragon's Head, as above."

Mr. Pemberton continues: "Notwithstanding the similarity of names, of times, of places, and apparently of social positions, I could never trace any connection. The Pembertons of Boston arrived there in 1638, and appear to be of the same stock, and have the same Arms, except that their Crest is a Boar's head. Some of the works on Heraldry state that the Arms—(buckets, dragons, crest) were granted originally to one of the Pembertons of Pemberton, in the County of Lancashire, in the 12th Century, who was then Mayor of London, for his efficiency in saving the town from one of its dangerous fires. The Family is unquestionably a very old one, and the Epitaph on Sir Francis Pemberton's monument states that he was, 'Generoso, Ex Antiqua Pembertonorum Prosopia in Com. Palat Lancastriae, Oriundo.' The name is derived locally from Anglo-Saxon, and was no doubt originally 'Pen-Berton,'—signifying the Berton, or walled-in-farm-enclosure on the Pen or Hill-top. Euphony and verbal structure has unavoidably changed the N to an M."

Ralph Pemberton married, June 7, 1648, Margaret, daughter of Thomas Seddon, of Warrington; she died September 2, 1655. The Seddon family was an old one in Wigan, and in the neighboring parishes of Leigh and Rochdale, and the Seddons of Seddon Hall were noted non-conformists.

Issue of Ralph and Margaret (Seddon) Pemberton:

Phineas Pemberton, b. Jan. 30, 1650; of whom presently;
Joseph Pemberton, b. April 12, 1652, d. Aug. 3, 1655;
Probably other children who d. inf.

PHINEAS PEMBERTON, son of Ralph and Margaret (Seddon) Pemberton, was born January 30, 1650, in parish of Wigan, and probably in township of Aspull, Lancashire, England, and died on his plantation, called "Bolton," Bucks county, Province of Pennsylvania, March 1, 1702. In 1665, being aged fifteen years, he went to Manchester to live, and in 1672 to Bolton, and lived there until 1682, when with his wife and three children, and his father, Ralph Pemberton, he embarked for Pennsylvania, in the ship, "Submission," from Liverpool, 7mo. 5, and arrived at Choptank, Maryland, 9mo. 2, 1682, thus making the voyage in fifty-eight days from port to port.

A more extended account of this voyage appears later. After landing, Phineas Pemberton and his father-in-law, James Harrison, left their families at the house of William Dickinson, at Choptank, and proceeded by land to their original destination, the "falls of the Delaware," in Bucks county, Pennsylvania. Penn had arrived in his province October 24, and Pemberton and Harrison had hoped to find him at New Castle, but when they arrived there, Penn had gone to New York. When they arrived at the present site of Philadelphia, they could not procure accommodations for their horses, so "spancelled" them and turned them into the woods; the next morning they sought for them in vain, they having wandered so far into the woods that one of them was not found until the following January; after two days searching the men were obliged to proceed up the river in a boat. An uncle of Pemberton's wife, William Yardley, had arrived a few weeks before, and had taken up land at the Falls, where he commenced to build a house. They stopped at Yardley's and Pemberton concluded to settle in the vicinity. In the spring of 1683, Harrison and Pemberton brought their families and household goods from Maryland to Bucks county, Harrison stopping on the way south at Upland, now Chester, to attend the first Assembly of the Province of Pennsylvania, to which he had been elected. Until Phineas Pemberton could erect a house in Bucks county, he and his family stayed at the house of Lyonel Brittain, who had arrived in Bucks county, 4mo. (June), 1680. On 11mo. 17, 1683, Phineas Pemberton purchased a tract of 500 acres on the Delaware, opposite Oreclan's (later Biles') Island, and built a house there. It must have been a satisfaction to him after the storms at sea and wanderings by land to have his family at last under his own roof-tree. This plantation he called "Grove Place." He appears, however, at first to have called it "Sapasse" since letters to him from friends in England in 1684 were addressed "Sapasse, Bucks County." It was part of a tract of over 8000 acres of land, purchased by Penn of an old Indian king and had once been a royalty called "Sepessin." (On Peter Lindstrom's map of 1654, in Sharp and Westcott's "History of Philadelphia" vol. i., p. 75, the name appears as "Sipaessing Land"). The old burying-ground of the Pemberton family, hereafter referred to, was on this tract. Being desirous of erecting a more comfortable home for his family, Phineas Pemberton finished one in 1687. On the lintel of the door was this inscription:

P.
7 D 2 mo. 1687

The initials signifying Phineas and Phebe Pemberton. This lintel is now in the possession of Historical Society of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia. This house Pemberton moved after his second marriage to another tract of land, five miles distant, and more in the interior. It was taken down in 1802 by his grandson, James Pemberton. In 1687 a great deal of sickness prevailed in the Colony, and Phineas Pemberton lost his father, Ralph Pemberton, and his father-in-law, James Harrison. The father of James also died. Three years later Anne (Heath) Harrison, widow of James died; and in 1696 Phineas lost his wife, Phebe, who died 8mo. 30, 1696, exactly fourteen years after her arrival in Patuxent river, Maryland.

On his estate opposite Biles' Island, Pemberton laid out a burial-ground, ten rods square; walling in two square rods as a family plot, which is still preserved and is one of the oldest burial lots in existence in Bucks county. Four generations of Harrisons and Pembertons lie therein. The original tombstones, small with only initials on them, having almost entirely disappeared (in 1904 only two could be found, much broken, and only one with initials "Ph. P.," very faint), Mr. Henry Pemberton, of Philadelphia, a descendant of Phineas, in 1905 had erected on the lot a large granite slab, with the names engraved on it of all the family known to have been buried there, as follows:

"Agnes, wife of Immanuel Harrison,
 Born 1601, died August 6, 1687"

Phineas Pemberton, like his father-in-law, Harrison, as well as his own father and other relatives, was a member of the Society of Friends, and was frequently imprisoned and fined for attendance at their worship. The "Annals of the Pemberton Family," before referred to, says of him: "Phineas Pemberton, as he grew up in the innocent life in those days, was visited with religious impressions, to which, as he rendered obedience, he became confirmed in the principles of an upright and holy conversation." "The serious impressions on the mind of Phineas Pemberton, inducing him to refuse compliance with the empty forms of the established church, he became a mark for those in power, and was several times imprisoned in Chester and Lancaster castles, for his attendance of the religious meetings of Friends." "In the 11th month, 1669, Phineas Pemberton and Roger Longworth with some others, were carried before three justices, for holding a meeting at Nehemiah Pool's house, and on the 1st of 2d month, he was imprisoned; remaining nineteen weeks and five days in Lancaster Castle." "But through all these trials and difficulties, by his uprightness and integrity, Phineas became much respected by his friends, and many of his neighbors. He held the office of overseer of the poor at Bolton, and was for many consecutive years a delegate for Friends to Hardshaw Monthly Meeting." It was from this Hardshaw Monthly Meeting that he took his certificate on going to Pennsylvania.

Phineas Pemberton took an active part in the public affairs of the Colony as well as of Bucks county. He was a member of Provincial Council of Pennsylvania, 1685-87-95-97-99, was a member of Assembly, 1689-94-98 (filling the position of Speaker in the latter year), and in 1700-01.

It was, however, in the affairs of Bucks county, where he lived, that his activity and usefulness were the greatest, and his work of the most value. He was beyond doubt the most prominent man of his time in the county, and the most efficient, as shown by the mass of records he has left behind him in his own handwriting, and by the number of official positions he filled. In addition to filling the office of Clerk of the County Court, he held the position of Deputy Master of Rolls, Deputy Register-General, and Receiver of Proprietary Quit Rents for Bucks county. The records of the county up to the time of his fatal illness are entirely in his handwriting, and are models worthy the imitation of officials of our day. The records of the different courts left by him are invaluable to the historian, and greatly superior to those of his successors in office in the matter of lucidity and completeness. Many of our historians have noticed and acknowledged this fact, which is apparent to all that have had access to them. Buck, in his "History of Bucks County," referring to records left by Pemberton, says, "they comprise the earliest records of Bucks County offices, and though they have been referred to by different writers, comparatively little has been heretofore published from them. To us they have rendered valuable aid and we must acknowledge our indebtedness for information that could, possibly, from no other source have been obtained."

The original Record of Arrivals in Bucks county, now in the custody of Bucks County Historical Society, but long part of records of Register of Wills' Office, at Doylestown, is also in the handwriting of Phineas Pemberton.

Phineas Pemberton died March 1, 1701-2, at the age of fifty-two years, and was buried in the old graveyard above described. "Poor Phineas" wrote Penn to Logan, on September 9, 1701, "is a dying man and was not at the election, though he crept (as I may say) to Meeting yesterday. I am grieved at it; for he has not his fellow, and without him this is a poor country indeed." Again in a letter from London to Logan in 1702, Penn writes, "I mourn for poor Phineas Pemberton, the ablest as well as one of the best men in the Province. My dear love to his widow and sons and daughters." Samuel Carpenter in a letter to Penn, quoted in J. Pemberton Parke's ms., writes, "Phineas Pemberton died the 1st month last and will be greatly missed, having left few or none in these parts or adjacent like him for wisdom, integrity and general service, and he was a true friend to thee and the government. It is a matter of sorrow when I call to mind and consider that the best of our men are taken away, and how many are gone and how few to supply their places."

Logan wrote to Penn, 3mo. 7, 1702: "That pillar of Bucks County, Phineas Pemberton, worn away with his long-afflicting distemper, was removed about the 5th of 1st month last. Hearing he was past hopes, I went to visit him the day before he departed. He was sensible and comfortable to the last, and inquiring solicitously about thy affairs and the parliament; gave his last offering, his dear love, to thee and thine, and particularly recommended the care of his estate to me in thy behalf, desiring that his services in collecting the rents with Samuel Jennings might be considered in his own, otherwise he should be wronged; and that his attendance at Newcastle Assembly, when his plantation and business so much suffered by it, might according to thy promise, be paid, with his overplus in Warminster, which he said was but little, and not valuable. I was with him when he departed and coming to Philadelphia that day, returned to his burial. He lies interred in his plantation on the river, with the rest of his relations. His daughter, they say, is to be married to Jeremiah Langhorne." This last sentence is doubtless what led Gen. Davis to say, in his "History of Bucks County," (First Edition, p. 86) that one of Pemberton's daughters married Jeremiah Langhorne (afterwards Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the Province) but the marriage did not take place. On the same page Davis says, "No doubt the Pemberton's lived on the fat of the land. His daughter Abigail wrote him in 1697, that she had saved twelve barrels of cider for the family; and in their letters frequent mention is made of meat and drink." "He lived in good style and had a 'sideboard' in his house. He owned land in several townships in Bucks." He left a considerable estate; one part of it was "Grove Place," which was afterwards sold to Willoughby Warder, another was the plantation of 354 acres on which he last resided and which was left to his son Israel, who named the two divisions of it "Bolton" and "Wigan," in remembrance of the country of his father; about forty acres in Bristol township, and eight hundred acres in Wrightstown township; also a lot on High street, Philadelphia. Of course much of this land was his wife's heritage from her father, James Harrison.

Phineas Pemberton married (first) January 1, 1676-7, at the house of John Haydock, in Coppull, near Standish, Lancashire, under the care of Hardshaw Monthly Meeting of Friends, Phoebe, daughter of James and Anne (Heath) Harrison, of Stiall-Green, Cheshire, England. James Harrison was a son of Immanuel Harrison, who died August 8, 1658. Immanuel Harrison and Agnes his wife had issue, as follows:

Anne Harrison;

JAMES HARRISON, b. 1628, d. Oct. 6, 1687; m. March 5, 1655-6, Anne Heath; of whom presently;

Robert Harrison;

Mary Harrison, m. Joseph Endon, and had issue:

Mary Endon, m. John Clark;

Margaret Endon, m. John Walker.

Perhaps others, now unknown. Some accounts have added a Jane, m. William Yardley, on the strength of Phineas Pemberton's calling Yardley "uncle," but Yardley's wife was Jane Heath, which explains the relationship.

JAMES HARRISON, son of Immanuel and Agnes, became an eminent minister in the Society of Friends and suffered much persecution for his faith. In 1660 he and several others were imprisoned in Burgas-gate prison, Shrewsbury, for nearly two months; he and his friends, among whom was his brother-in-law, William Yardley, were released from this place in consequence of a royal proclamation, dated at Whitehall, May 11, 1661; in 1663 he was imprisoned in the county gaol of Worcester; in 1664-65-66, in Chester Castle. Among other persecutions of Harrison related in Besse's "Sufferings of Friends," Lancashire Chapter, is the following in 1679: "On the 9th of November, as James Harrison was preaching at a Meeting in his own House, the Constables came and plukt him away. They caused him to be fined and by a Warrant from Thomas Laver and John Kenyon Justices, made a Seizure of Leather and other Goods to the Value of £10 19s. Phineas Pemberton, for himself and wife being at said Meeting, had Goods taken from him to the value of £4 15s. 4d." At this time he lived at Stiall-Green, in Cheshire. In 1655 he had travelled in the service of the Gospel, in the north of England, one of his earliest religious services.

From several evidences and allusions, it appears that Phineas Pemberton wrote a narrative, describing the early sufferings of James Harrison and his wife, and of himself also, in England, on account of their religious principles; and of their subsequent migration to this country to seek an asylum from persecution. James Pemberton once had this book in his possession, but having lent it to some person whom he could not recollect, it was lost. His brother John had, however, made some extracts from it previously. The letters following were written while James Harrison was confined in Chester Castle; one is;

"Most dear, and right dearly beloved wife, whom I love in the Lord our Saviour, Jesus Christ, for thy reverent, courteous behaviour in gesture and words towards me and the Lord, whom we serve. Thy words are penetrating words and have entered my heart with impressions that can never be blotted out; and thus, with a real acknowledgement of thy spiritual and lively testimony that breaks and tenders my heart, I rest thy very loving husband,

JAMES HARRISON.

Castle of Chester, 26th of 8th mo. 1666."

The other :

"J. H. Dear Love,—I had a great desire to come to see thee, with my little child, if it were the will of the Lord; but as yet I see little way made; but this I believe, that neither death nor life, nor any other thing, shall be able to separate us; so, dear heart, farewell. Let us hear from thee as often as thou can.

ANNE HARRISON."

In 1668 James Harrison removed out of Cheshire, and probably lived somewhere in the neighborhood of Phineas Pemberton, at Bolton or Manchester. When William Penn received his grant of Pennsylvania in 1681, his intentions of founding a colony there were often made the subject of conversation among the persecuted Friends, the attention of their minds directed to a spot where they might seek an asylum for the security of their civil and religious privileges. In a letter from James Harrison to Roger Longworth, dated 8mo. 4, 1681, is the following hint given by him of these views: "I am about to bargain for my house in case I should go with William Penn." And he expressed a wish that Eleanor Lowe, a valued minister of the Society of Friends, might purchase it, that it might be "preserved for the Lord's service," having been frequently used for a place of Friends' worship, "for I do not question but our testimony will be of force, when we are gone."

This prospect of removing to Pennsylvania gradually grew brighter in their view, till at length resolutions were taken accordingly. Harrison was with Penn, and the latter made the former his agent in England for the sale of his American lands. In 1682 James Harrison, his son-in-law, Phineas Pemberton, and some others chartered the ship, "Submission," and sailed for Pennsylvania, September 5, of that year. The passengers in this ship were fifty-two persons, among whom were Ralph Pemberton, aged seventy-two; Phineas Pemberton, his son, aged thirty-three; Phebe the latter's wife, aged twenty-three; Abigail and Joseph, their infant children; Agnes Harrison, aged eighty-one years; James Harrison, her son, aged fifty-seven; Anne, his wife, aged fifty-eight; Robert Bond, aged sixteen; Lydia Wharmsby aged forty-two; Randall Blackshaw, and Alice his wife, with their four children; Dr. Thomas Wynne's wife, and her two daughters, Jane and Margery Maud; James Clayton, Jane his wife, and six children. Lydia Wharmsby, above mentioned, had long lived in the capacity of housekeeper in James Harrison's family; and being much attached to them determined to remove with them to the new country. Robert Bond was a youth whom his father had confided to the protection and tuition of James Harrison. According to the original terms between the passengers and the master of the "Submission," they were to have been transported to the "Delaware river, or elsewhere in Pennsylvania, to the best conveniency of freighters." But through fraud on the master's part, as it is claimed, or perhaps on account of a severe storm which they are known to have encountered, they sailed up Chesapeake bay, arrived in the Patuxent river, on 8mo. (October) 30, 1682, and disembarked at Choptank, Maryland, on 9mo. 2, and James Harrison and Phineas Pemberton proceeded thence to Bucks county, Pennsylvania, as detailed above, in the account of Phineas Pemberton. Here James Harrison had laid out a large part of the 5000 acres of land that he had bought of William Penn, most of it immediately adjoining the latter's Manor of Pennsbury. In the county, and in the affairs of the Colony at large, Harrison at once took place as a leader, still continuing to act as Penn's land agent until his death. He was a member of first Provincial Council that met in Philadelphia, tenth day of first Month, 1682-3. In the same year he was a member of the committee to draw up the charter of the colony. In 1685 he was appointed by Penn as Chief Justice of Supreme Court of the Province, but declined to serve. The following year, however, he accepted the position of Associate Justice of the same Court. On April 6, 1685, he was commissioned a Justice of Bucks County Court, and probably still acted as such after his appointment to the Supreme Bench. Proud, the historian, says of him: "He was one of the Proprietor's first Commissioners of Property, was divers years in great esteem with him, and his agent at Pennsbury, being a man of good education and a preacher among the Quakers." Among the Penn mss. "Domestic Letters," in the Library of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, there are many original letters from Penn to Harrison, some of them written before Penn left England. Many of these letters from Penn are interesting in that they contain reference to matters current in the earliest days of the colony, and also occasionally give a picture of political life in England. Gen. Davis in "History of Bucks County," (p. 86) says: "James Harrison was much esteemed by William Penn, who placed great reliance on him. Before leaving England Penn sold him five thousand acres of land, which he afterwards located in Falls, Upper Makefield, Newtown, and Wrightstown." * * * "In 1685 (1686) he was made one of three provincial judges, who made their circuit in boats rowed by a boatman paid by the province." * * * "Harrison's certificate from Hartshaw Monthly Meeting, gives him an exalted character, and his wife is called 'a mother in Israel.'" He died October 6, 1687, during the time of great sickness in the county, mentioned above. "James Harrison being also seized with the prevailing disorder, sunk under it, and departed this life on the 6th of the 8th month. He also was an example of patience under suffering, even to the last, and died in a state of calmness and Christian composure. He was a firm and strenuous advocate for civil and religious liberty, having suffered much in his native land for the cause of truth, and his character stood high for integrity and religious usefulness. The commissions he received from the Governor, his friend, William Penn, show the confidence placed in his talents and uprightness of conduct; and many letters from the latter, giving minute directions concerning the management of the estate at Pennsbury, are yet preserved among the papers of the family. A memorial concerning him is also found in the printed collection of memorials concerning deceased Friends, published by the Society in 1787, written by William Yardley and Phineas Pemberton."

James Harrison married, 1mo. (March) 5, 1655-6, Anne Heath, born February 13, 1624, died March 5, 1690. Some account of her by her son-in-law, Phineas

Pemberton, has been given above. Her sister, Margery Heath, married Thomas Janney, of Stiall-Green, Cheshire, a minister of Friends, who also removed to Pennsylvania, where he became a Provincial Councillor, and a large landowner in Bucks county. And it seems more probable that William Yardley's wife was another sister, Jane Heath, rather than James Harrison's sister Jane, a supposition mentioned above.

James and Anne (Heath) Harrison had issue:

Phoebe Harrison, b. April 7, 1660, d. Oct. 30, 1696; m. Jan. 1, 1677, Phineas Pemberton;
Joseph Harrison, b. June 20, 1662, d. an infant, before 1665;
Other children of James and Anne (Heath) Harrison died in childhood.

Phineas Pemberton (second), May 18, 1699, at Falls Monthly Meeting, Alice Hodgson, "of Burlington, in the Province of West Jersey, spinster, daughter of Robert Hodgson, late of Rhode Island, deceased." They had no issue. Their marriage certificate is now in possession of Henry Pemberton, of Philadelphia, one of the descendants of Phineas by his first wife. Alice (Hodgson) Pemberton married (second) in 1704, Thomas Bradford, being also his second wife, and they had issue. She died August 28, 1711. Thomas Bradford was elected a member of Common Council of Philadelphia, October 2, 1705.

William Jenkins was an active and influential member of the Society of Friends, and had suffered persecution in his native country. He was a member of Assembly from Chester co., 1690-95, and was commissioned a Justice of the Chester County Court, 1691-92. In 1697 he moved to Abington twp., where he purchased 400 acres of land, including the present site of Jenkintown, named in honor of the family. He had purchased 1000 acres of land of William Penn in 1681, before leaving Wales. He d. June 7, 1712, aged about 54 years, leaving a son Stephen, above named, and Margaret, wife of Thomas Paschall. Stephen Jenkins inherited his father's lands at Abington and continued to reside there until his death in 1761. He was an active and prominent member of Abington Monthly Meeting of Friends.

Stephen and Abigail (Pemberton) Jenkins had issue:

April 17, 1696; while he was an infant his mother was very ill and he was taken to nurse by one of her friends, wife of Samuel Jennings, sometime Deputy-Governor of New Jersey, on which account he was given the middle name of Jennings, middle names being unusual at that time. He is said to have died in 1701.

ISRAEL PEMBERTON, only surviving son of Phineas and Phoebe (Harrison) Pemberton, born at the newly erected mansion at "Grove Place," Bucks county, Pennsylvania, February 20, 1684-5, was carefully educated and trained in his childhood by his pious parents. Part of his elementary education was obtained in Philadelphia, but in 1698, he had a serious difference with his schoolmaster, Pastorius, and his father took him back to Bucks county.

When a young man Israel Pemberton removed from Bucks county to Philadelphia, where he entered the counting house of his father's friend, Samuel Carpenter, and he later became one of the wealthiest and best known merchants of the city. He was elected to the Common Council of the city, October 7, 1718; Alderman, October 4, 1720, and these offices being then of life tenure, probably served until his death in 1754. He was at least an Alderman, October 2, 1722, and October 2, 1733. He was one of the city's two members of Provincial Assembly twenty years, nineteen of them being consecutive, his first term beginning in 1718, when he succeeded Richard Hill, who for several years held that position. He, however, served but a single session at this time, and was not again elected until thirteen years later, in 1731, when he was returned together with Dr. John Kersley, and was returned annually thereafter until the session of 1749-50, when his public service closed. He occupied a position of great importance in the affairs of the Society of Friends; was largely employed in looking after its property, in supervising its schools, and in adjusting differences between its members. An account of him in "The Friend," xxxi., 141, says in part: "When he reached maturity, he entered into business for himself, and, having an excellent talent for mercantile pursuits and being industrious in his habits, he soon was as extensively engaged in trade as was desirable. In the year 1708 he visited Barbadoes and other West India Islands for purposes of traffic, and doubtless to enter into business arrangements with men of standing there, as consignees or factors. On this occasion, although expecting to be absent from Philadelphia but a few months, he thought it right to take a certificate of membership with him, which says: 'He hath been of a good conversation from his childhood, having been brought up amongst us, and is well beloved for his innocent life and good behaviour in the Truth. We desire his growth and preservation therein to the end of his days, that the same may be the portion of God's People everywhere, is our sincere and hearty prayer.'

"The honorable business habits of Israel Pemberton, and his sterling integrity won him the respect and confidence of his fellow citizens generally. This was manifested in the public offices placed upon him. * * * He was much employed in the church, in looking after its property, in watching over the interest of the schools under its care, in treating with those who had violated its discipline, and in composing and ending differences which, from the clashing of pecuniary interests, sometimes arose amongst its members. He appears to have been peculiarly gifted as a clerk, and held that office in several meetings for discipline, for many years. He was an overseer by appointment of the meeting, and in 1729, an elder and filled that station with honesty, firmness and love to the close of his earthly existence."

From the "Annals of the Pemberton Family," we get some information supplemental to that in "The Friend." On his trip to Jamaica, in 1708, "he became acquainted with John Fothergill and William Armistead, who were travelling on the island in the service of Truth," and also that it was at the funeral of the wife of Richard Hockley, in the Baptist burial-ground, in Second street, that he was seized with the apoplectic fit, "which notwithstanding the prompt application of medical aid, soon terminated his valuable life."

In July, 1718, we find Israel Pemberton spoken of as "of the Northern Liberties," soon after his city residence was situated at the southwest corner of Front and Market streets; in the middle of the life and bustle of the city. He remained in that house, which afterwards became the London Coffee House, until 1745, when he purchased the mansion at the southwest corner of Third and Chestnut streets, known as "Clarke Hall." This property was bounded on the west by house and grounds of William Hudson. A lot on the south, extending westward, later purchased by Israel Pemberton, gave an outlet on the passage afterward known as Whalebone, or Hudson's Alley. There was space sufficient in the grounds appurtenant to the mansion to render it exceedingly attractive. The ground rose gently from Dock creek toward Chestnut street in a succession of terraces or platforms, which allowed a full view of the gardens, upon which care and attention were spent. Graydon in his "Memoirs" thus describes their condition about the year 1767: "Israel Pemberton's garden was laid out in the old-fashioned style of uniformity, with walks and alleys nodding to their brothers, and decorated with a number of evergreens carefully clipped into pyramidal and conical forms. Here the amenity of the view usually detained me for a few minutes; thence turning into Chestnut Street corner to the left, and passing a row of dingy two-story houses, I came to the whalebones which gave name to the alley at the corner of which they stood."

During Israel Pemberton's occupancy of "Clarke Hall" it was the general resort of Friends from Europe, and indeed of all strangers of note. We are told that "the mansion was large and was the scene of a hospitality not often surpassed in the Province." Under Israel Pemberton's will this house became the property of his son John.

As became a gentleman of means and position in society of that day, Israel Pemberton had his country house. In February, 1738, he bought of Thomas Masters, seventy acres of land, just south of the angle of Twenty-third and South streets and Gray's Ferry Road. Here he built a mansion house before 1751, which he called "Evergreen." By his will Israel Pemberton devised "Evergreens" to his son James.

Israel Pemberton married, April 12, 1710, Rachel, born 1691, died February 24, 1765, daughter of Charles Read, merchant, of Philadelphia, by his second wife, Amy (Child) Stanton (whom he had married in 1690). Her younger sister, Sarah Read, became the wife of James Logan, William Penn's confidential friend and adviser. Israel Pemberton is mentioned in "The Courtship of Hannah Logan," where he is called "uncle." Rachel Pemberton's half-brother, Charles Read, was Sheriff and Mayor of Philadelphia, Judge of the Admiralty, and Provincial Councillor. Her father, Charles Read, was a member of the Church of England in later life (though married at Middletown Monthly Meeting in Bucks county), but was much respected by the Quakers. He was an Alderman of the city in 1701, and a representative in Provincial Assembly in 1704. He died about 1705. The "Friend", vol. xxxii., p. 156, has a sketch of Rachel (Read) Pemberton, which is in part, as follows:

"RACHEL PEMBERTON.

"Rachel Read was born at Burlington, West Jersey, in the year 1691. She was a daughter of Charles Read one of the early settlers of Pennsylvania under the grant to William Penn. About the eighteenth year of her age she was married to our worthy friend, Israel Pemberton. * * * After his death she continued her house open for the reception of Friends near and from remote parts, as it had been in her husband's time, particularly for the entertainment of those who came from Europe on religious visits to America, with whom she was often dipt into much feeling sympathy under their weighty travail and exercise. * * *"

The death of Israel Pemberton took place January 18 (or 19), 1754, in the sixty-ninth year of his age. His wife departed this life February 24, 1765, aged about seventy-four years. There is an obituary notice of him in the Pennsylvania Gazette of January 22, 1754, and one of her in the same paper for February 28, 1765.

Issue of Israel and Rachel (Read) Pemberton:

 JOHN PEMBERTON, b. Nov. 25, 1727, of whom later;
 Charles Pemberton, b. July 4, 1729, d. May 21, 1748.

Although the family might have seemed likely to become extensive in descendants, yet in 1812 it was reduced to one male representative.

ISRAEL PEMBERTON, JR., son of Israel and Rachel (Read) Pemberton, was born May 10, 1715. He was engaged in mercantile pursuits with his father and attained a large measure of success. He also became very active and conspicuous in the councils of the Friends, to such a degree indeed, that he became known by the nickname of "The King of the Quakers." He stood in the van with those of that faith who battled with the Proprietaries (no longer so tender toward Quaker interests as the Founder), as represented by the several governors of his day. As a result of his criticisms of Gov. George Thomas, the latter had him arrested February 23, 1739-40, but obtaining a writ of habeus corpus, he was released on bail. This difficulty arose from a controversy respecting a proposed alteration in the charter of the city of Philadelphia, concerning the imposition of taxes.

Throughout his life Israel Pemberton, Jr., was a staunch friend of the Indian. He was one of the six signers of a vigorous address presented to Gov. Robert Hunter Morris and the Provincial Council, April 12, 1756, protesting against a declaration of war against the Delawares, which, however, was issued two days later.

In the same year, 1756, Pemberton was one of the principal promoters in the formation of "The Friendly Association for Preserving Peace with the Indians," which was established and almost entirely supported by the Quakers. Later in the same year, he was largely responsible for bringing about the famous conference at Easton, which resulted in a treaty of peace, whereby the difficulties with the Indians were adjusted and further bloodshed averted. He was also a founder of the "Friendly Association for regaining and preserving peace with the Indians by pacific measures." By reason of his prominence in all matters affecting the welfare of the red men he was sometimes designated as "King Wampum."

At the breaking out of the Revolution, like most of the conspicuous and influential Quakers, he took as strong a stand against precipitating the impending struggle, and because of his vigorous efforts to prevent hostilities he was treated as a Tory, and, without trial, was imprisoned in 1777, and finally exiled to Virginia, together with his two brothers and a score of prominent Quakers, where he was compelled to remain for a period of eight months.

Israel Pemberton, Jr., succeeded his father in the Assembly immediately upon the latter's withdrawal, being elected from the county of Philadelphia in 1750, but he was not disposed to continue in that body. His influence in Pennsylvania was very great, but it was exercised in moulding the policy of the Quaker party outside of the Assembly. He gave great attention and constant activity to the councils of the Society of Friends, wherein he very frequently found himself arrayed against the proprietary policy. The Quaker party and the anti-proprietary party were not identical, but their interests and policies so often lay in the same direction as not to interfere with Pemberton being a leader in both.

Israel Pemberton, Jr., died in Philadelphia, April 22, 1779. He married, March 30, 1737, Sarah, born 1714, died July 31, 1746, daughter of Joseph Kirkbride, of Bucks county, Pennsylvania, by his second wife, Sarah, daughter of Mahlon Stacy, one of the most prominent men of the Province of New Jersey, Kings' Councillor, Assemblyman, Justice of the Courts, etc. Her father, Joseph Kirkbride, a prominent figure in the Colonial history of Pennsylvania in the first half century after its founding, was three times married, his first wife being Phebe, daughter of Randall Blackshaw, who was the ancestor of later generations of the Pemberton family as shown later.

Israel Pemberton married (second) December 10, 1747, Mary (Stanbury) Jordan, widow of Robert Jordan, and of Capt. Richard Hill, and daughter of Nathan and Mary (Ewer) Stanbury, early members of Philadelphia Monthly Meeting. She was the Mary Pemberton whose coach Gen. Howe seized and appropriated to his own use during the British occupancy of Philadelphia in 1777. She died October 25, 1778.

Issue of Israel Pemberton, Jr., and his first wife, Sarah Kirkbride:

Mary Pemberton, b. Oct. 17, 1738; m. Samuel Pleasants, and through her dau. Sarah Pleasants, was the ancestress of a branch of the Fox family of Phila., as well as of the Emlens of Phila., as shown by accounts of these respective families, in these volumes;

Rachel Pemberton, b. April, 1740, d. June 21, 1753;

Sarah Pemberton, b. July 9, 1741; m. Samuel Rhoads;

Israel Pemberton, b. 1743, d. Aug. 30, 1764;
 Phineas Pemberton, b. 1744, d. 1746;
 JOSEPH PEMBERTON, b. 1745; m. Ann Galloway; of whom presently;
 Jane Pemberton, b. July 17, 1746, d. Aug. 23, 1747.

Issue of Israel Pemberton, Jr., by his second wife, Mary (Stanbury) Jordan:

Charles Pemberton, b. Oct. 9, 1748, d. April 8, 1772; m. March 8, 1770, Esther House, dau. of Joseph and Elizabeth, and had issue, one child:

Mary C. Pemberton, b. March 25, 1771, d. July 2, 1801; became the first wife of Hon. George Fox, of "Champlot," a brother to Samuel Mickle Fox, who married her cousin, Sarah Pleasants. She had issue, three children, only one of whom, Elizabeth Mary Pemberton Fox, m., she becoming the wife of John Roberts Tunis, and the ancestress of the Tunis family of Phila., an account of which is given in these volumes.

JAMES PEMBERTON, another son of Israel Pemberton, the elder, by his wife, Rachel Read, born in Philadelphia, August 26, 1723, was educated at Friends School in Philadelphia; travelled to the Carolinas in 1745; visited Europe in 1748, and travelled much through England. Like his brother, Israel, Jr., he was largely and successfully engaged in mercantile pursuits, and like him also displayed an active interest in the welfare of the Indians. He was likewise friendly to the negroes in slavery, and was one of the organizers of the Pennsylvania Abolition Society, of which he became President in 1790, upon the death of Dr. Franklin. He was a member of the Assembly in 1756, when Gov. Morris published his proclamation of war against the Delaware Indians, whereupon, June 10, 1756, he resigned his seat because of his antagonism, as a matter of conscience, to war measures. He was also a founder of Pennsylvania Hospital and was a manager from 1758 to 1780, and secretary from 1759 to 1772.

In 1757 he published "An Apology for the People called Quakers, containing some Reasons for their not complying with Human Injunctions and Institutions in Matters relative to the Worship of God." Like his elder brother, James Pemberton, he vigorously opposed the popular movements aimed at armed opposition to the British government, and he, too, was banished to Virginia, in 1777, for his religious convictions and opposition to war measures.

James Pemberton's town house was on Second street, adjoining the residence at the northwest corner of Second street and Lodge alley, afterwards Gothic street, erected by William Logan, son of Secretary James Logan, between 1750 and 1760. His country seat was "The Plantation," originally the property of Chief Justice John Kinsey, purchased by James Pemberton at sheriff's sale in 1758. It remained in the family only during the purchaser's lifetime, being sold by his executors in 1809, and since 1826 has been the site of the United States Naval Asylum, on the east bank of the Schuylkill. He also inherited from his father "The Evergreens," the country seat of the latter, on the opposite side of Gray's Ferry road.

During the winter of 1777-8, while James Pemberton was an exile in Virginia, and the British were in possession of Philadelphia, Mrs. Pemberton was in charge of the "Plantation." As was the case generally with all the property within the zone of occupancy, the Pemberton estate suffered severely at the hands of the soldiers, who became so destructive, that Mrs. Pemberton was compelled to appeal to Lord Howe, to wit:

"Esteemed Friend, I am extremely concerned that I am once more obliged to Trouble Gen'l. Howe with any affair of mine, when his own important engagements no doubt engross his time and thoughts; but by the cruel Banishment of my Husband his business necessarily devolves upon me, and being possessed of two small farms near the city, on one of which there is a small piece of wood, Intended for Firing for myself and children, with a few of the Inhabitants, some of whom are not able to pay for it, but have constantly partook of My Beloved Husband's bounty, by supplying them in the Winter season with a small quantity, which I shall be rendered incapable of doing, as the soldiers are taking it away, and say they do it by permission of the General's Secretary. * * * The General's kind interposition in this matter will Greatly oblige.
 THY ASSURED FRIEND."

Later, February 14, 1778, Mrs. Pemberton found occasion to write to a certain British officer, one Lord Murray, as follows:

"I was yesterday informed that a certain officer of the Guard who passes by the name or style of Lord Murray, being stationed at my Husband's Plantation near Scuyllkill, did there behave himself in an ungentlemanly manner by abusing part of the effects on said place, and also breaking open the doors of that part of the house occupied by my tenants, and treating the family with barbarous and unbecoming behaviour, very unworthy of a British nobleman and officer, after being previously shown Genl. Howe's protection posted up in the house, at which sight he used several expressions highly insulting and derogatory to the General's honour. I take this method of informing the said Lord Murray, that if he dont think proper to make some suitable acknowledgements, I shall immediately enter A complaint at Headquarters.
 Phoebe Pemberton."

James Pemberton, long after the Revolution, cherished the costume of his fathers, and Watson says of him: "He was almost the last of the race of cocked hats, and certainly one of the very best illustrations of bygone times and primitive men."

James Pemberton married (first) October 15, 1751, Hannah, daughter of Mordecai and Hannah (Fishbourne) Lloyd, born April 17, 1734, died April 17, 1764; (second) March 22, 1768, Sarah, daughter of Daniel Smith, of Burlington, New Jersey, who died November 28, 1770; (third) July 12, 1775, Mrs. Phoebe (Lewis) Morton, widow of Samuel Morton, and daughter of Robert and Mary Lewis. She was born March 11, 1738, died August 22, 1812.

Issue of James and Hannah (Lloyd) Pemberton:

Phineas Pemberton, b. Feb. 4, 1753, d. May 20, 1778, unm.;

Rachel Pemberton, b. Feb. 4, 1754; m. April 13, 1775, Thomas Parke, M. D., son of Thomas and Jane (Edge) Parke, b. Aug. 6, 1749, d. Jan. 9, 1835; he was an eminent physician, having, after graduating from the College of Philadelphia in 1770, spent two years in the leading hospitals of London and Edinburgh. He was a member of the American Philosophical Society, president of the College of Physicians, a director of the Philadelphia Library, and from 1777 to 1823, a period of nearly half a century, a member of the staff of the Pennsylvania Hospital;

Hannah Pemberton, b. Oct. 27, 1755, d. Sept. 4, 1788; m. Oct. 14, 1784, Robert Morton, son of her father's third wife, Phoebe Lewis, by her first husband, Samuel Morton. He was b. in 1760, d. Aug. 17, 1786, without issue; Hannah (Pemberton) Morton was a girl of keen intellect, and possessed no meager literary genius. While on a visit, during the Revolution, and before her marriage, to "Bolton Farm," a part of the original Phineas Pemberton tract, in Bristol twp., Bucks co., now the property of a descendant, Evingham B. Morris, President of the Girard Trust Company, she wrote some verses to her sister Sarah, from which the following lines are extracted:

"The muse inspires, from Bolton Farm I write,
 "Whose varied prospects please th' admiring sight.
 "There, at a distance on rising ground,
 "Stands beauteous Clifton, with each charm around;
 "Here Roxborough Manor, elegantly gay,
 "With smiling neatness, owns the master's sway;
 "Whose plenteous gardens, rich with fruits, appear;
 "The peach, all luscious and delightful pear;
 "The cantaloupe, with yellow verdure shines;

"And cooling Melons deck the circling vines;
 "Oft have I here some pleasing moments past,
 "And shared with pleasure in the sweet repast."

James Pemberton, b. Feb. 27, 1758, d. June 17, 1758;

Mary Pemberton, b. March 12, 1759, d. Oct. 11, 1765.

Issue of James and Sarah (Smith) Pemberton:

Mary Smith Pemberton, b. Nov. 19, 1770, d. 1808; m. May 13, 1790, Anthony Morris, son of Capt. Samuel and Rebecca (Wistar) Morris, and great-great-grandson of Anthony Morris, second Mayor of Phila. under the charter of 1701. Anthony Morris, the husband of Mary Smith Pemberton, was b. Feb. 10, 1766, d. Nov. 3, 1860; he established himself in business as a merchant in Phila., and in the meantime, July 27, 1787, was admitted to the Phila. bar. He was elected to the State Senate at an early age, and in 1793, succeeded Samuel Powell as Speaker, being the third to fill that position, under the constitution of 1790; from 1813 to 1815 he was United States Minister to Spain.

Anthony and Mary Smith (Pemberton) Morris had four children, three of whom married, two daughters, and a son, James Pemberton Morris. Phineas Pemberton Morris, an able lawyer, who d. March 1, 1888, was a son of the latter.

JOHN PEMBERTON, third surviving son of Israel and Rachel (Read) Pemberton, born in Philadelphia, November 25 (or 27), 1727, like his brothers engaged in mercantile pursuits in his native city, and attained a large degree of success. He was also a conspicuous Quaker, rather more so, indeed, than either of his brothers. John Pemberton devoted much of his life to religious work, largely abroad. He made three voyages to Europe, in 1750-82-94, spending several years in Great Britian, Holland and Germany, preaching and proselyting in those countries. He published numerous journals and accounts of his travels and services in foreign lands, mainly in the "Friends' Miscellany."

In 1783, while returning from England in the ship "Apollo," Dr. Benjamin Barton, the eminent naturalist, was a fellow passenger, and has left us a very interesting account of a series of conversations with John Pemberton on ship-board, in which the latter furnished much valuable information concerning old Philadelphia and old Philadelphians.

In 1777, John Pemberton, being, like his brothers, a non-combatant, and open in his opposition to the belligerent position taken by the popular party in Philadelphia, was subjected to arrest, imprisonment and exile with his two brothers and other leading Quakers. His journal containing an account of his experiences during the exile in Virginia is extant. Sabine, in his "Loyalists of the American Revolution," says of John Pemberton, "His offense was the publication of a seditious paper in behalf of certain persons in Pennsylvania and New Jersey, which attracted the attention of Congress."

John Pemberton married Hannah Zane, but had no issue. He died January 31, 1795, at Pymont, Westphalia, Germany, during his last religious journey abroad. He left, we are told, a large estate, much of which he gave by his will to several charitable, benevolent and religious organizations, with which he had been associated, and for the purpose of aiding in the formation of like organizations. Under the will of his father, John Pemberton inherited "Clarke Hall," and he made it his residence during his lifetime; his widow continuing to live there some time after his death. The mansion, however, was much larger than was necessary for her accommodation, and she withdrew to the western portion, and the eastern portion was rented to the United States Treasury Department, and was occupied in 1795-96 by Oliver Wolcott, Secretary of the Treasury, and his staff. It remained in that tenancy until the removal of the Federal government to the city of Washington.

JOSEPH PEMBERTON, son of Israel Pemberton, Jr., and his wife, Sarah Kirkbride, born in 1745, married, June 2, 1767, Ann, daughter of Joseph and Ann Galloway, of West River, Anne Arundel county, Maryland; granddaughter of Samuel and Anne (Webb) Galloway, of the same place; and great-granddaughter of Richard Galloway, who was in America about 1650. She was a cousin of Joseph Galloway, the famous Bucks county Loyalist of the Revolutionist.

Though both Joseph Pemberton and his wife came of strict Quaker families, they appear to have renounced the plain dress of their ancestors, as attested by two handsome oil paintings of them now in possession of their grandson, Henry Pemberton, which show them attired in the height of the mode of their day. It was in their time, too, that the name of Pemberton first appeared on the list of the Philadelphia Dancing Assemblies.

LIEUTENANT GENERAL JOHN CLIFFORD PEMBERTON, C. S. A., second son of John and Rebecca (Clifford) Pemberton, born in Philadelphia, August 10, 1814, died at Penllyn, Pennsylvania, July 13, 1881. He was appointed to the United States Military Academy, on his own application, by President Jackson, who had been a friend of his father. After his graduation in 1837, he was assigned to the Fourth Artillery, and served against the Indians in Florida in 1837-9, and on the northern frontier during the Canada border disturbances in 1840-2. He was promoted First Lieutenant March 19, 1842, and was on garrison duty until the Mexican War, during which he served with credit as aide to Gen. Worth, receiving the brevet as Captain for gallantry at Monterey, and that of Major for services at Molino del Rey. At the close of the war he was presented with a sword by citizens of Philadelphia, and was thanked, with other Pennsylvania officers by resolution of the Legislature of that State.

He was promoted Captain, September 16, 1850, took part in operations against the Seminole Indians in 1849-50, and 1856-7, and served at Fort Leavenworth during the Kansas troubles, and in the Utah expedition of 1858. At the beginning of the Civil War he was ordered from Fort Ridgely, Minnesota, to Washington, and after his arrival there, in spite of the personal efforts of Gen. Winfield Scott to prevent him, resigned his commission and was appointed Lieutenant Colonel of Virginia State Troops, to date from April 28, 1861. He was intrusted with the organizing of the artillery and cavalry of the state and became Colonel on May 8, 1861. On June 15, 1861, he was made Major of Artillery in the C. S. A., and two days later Brigadier General. On February 13, 1862, he was promoted Major General and at the request of Gen. Robert E. Lee, whom he succeeded, was appointed to command the department that included South Carolina, Georgia and Florida, with headquarters at Charleston. Here he strengthened the harbor defences, planning and beginning Fort Wagner and Battery B, and planting submarine obstructions. On October 13, 1862, he was promoted to Lieutenant General, and assigned to the charge of the department that comprised Mississippi, Tennessee and eastern Louisiana, with headquarters at Jackson, Mississippi. Pemberton's operations around Vicksburg and his defense of that city against Gen. Grant, are described in all histories of the Civil War of any note. After his surrender of the city and garrison of Vicksburg on July 4, 1863, he returned on parole to Richmond, where he remained until he was duly exchanged. After his exchange, finding no command that was commensurate with his rank, he resigned and was reappointed as Inspector of Ordinance, with the rank of Colonel, in which capacity he served until the close of the war. He then retired to a country estate near Warrenton, Virginia, but in 1876 returned to Philadelphia, which was the home of his brothers and sisters, two of the former having served on the Union side in the late conflict. In the spring of 1881 his health began to fail, and he removed, with the hope of benefiting it, to Penllyn, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, where he died July 13, 1881.

Gen. John C. Pemberton married, January 18, 1848, Martha O., born 1825, died August 14, 1907, daughter of William H. Thompson, of Norfolk, Virginia. After her husband's death she lived some time in Philadelphia, and afterward in New York City, where she died, and was buried in South Laurel Hill Cemetery, Philadelphia.

Henry Pemberton, Jr., married at Germantown, Philadelphia, March 28, 1894, Susan, born August 14, 1868, daughter of Joseph S. and Mary Barratt (Cowgill) Lovering, of Philadelphia.

Issue of Henry, Jr., and Susan (Lovering) Pemberton:

Joseph Lovering Pemberton, b. April 6, 1895, d. Jan. 18, 1896;

Carolyn Hollingsworth Pemberton, b. June 14, 1896;

Henry Rawle Pemberton, b. April 27, 1898;

Robert Pemberton, b. Oct. 16, 1900.

Henry Pemberton, Jr., and his wife, Susan Lovering, both being descendants from the Cowgill and Shallcross families, an account of both these families is appended hereto, which includes the Pemberton descent from the Blackshaw, Clifford and Hollingsworth families.

The first knowledge we have of the Cowgill family in America is contained in a certificate issued by Settle Monthly Meeting of Society of Friends in Yorkshire, England, dated 4mo. 7, 1682, to a number of persons, probably all related, intending to emigrate to Pennsylvania, among whom were Ellen Cowgill, a widow, and her children. These children are not named in the certificate, nor are their births to be found on the registers of any Monthly Meeting in Yorkshire. The Certificate is as follows:

"These are to Certify all whom it may concern that it is manifested to us that a necessity is laid upon severall friends belonging to this Monthly Meeting, to remove into Pennsylvania, and particularly our dear friends Cuthbert Hayhurst, his wife and family, who hath been and is a laborer in ye truth, for whose welfare and prosperity we are unanimously concerned, and also for our friends Nicholas Wain his wife and three children; Thom: Wigglesworth and Alice his wife; Thom: Walmsley, Elizabeth his wife; and Tho: Croasdale, Agnes his wife and six children; Tho: Stackhouse, his wife; Ellin Cowgill widdow and her children: Will^m Hayhurst, who wee believe are faithful friends in their measures and single in intentions to remove into the aforesaid America there to if the Lord permit, and we do certify our unity with their said intentions, and desire their prosperity in the lord, and hope what is done by them will tend to the advancement of the truth in which we are unanimously concerned with them.

Samuel Watson	francis Tennent	George Blande	Nicholas Franklyn
George Atkinson	John Moore Junior	John Hill	John Driver
Thomas Rudd	Anthony Overend	Christopher Jonson

The children mentioned as coming with Ellen Cowgill, though not named in the certificate, are believed with great assurance of certainty to have been four, namely, Jane, Jennett, John and Edmund Cowgill; her elder son, Ralph Cowgill, is with equal sureness, taken to be the Ralph Cowgill who came over in the "Friends Adventure" earlier in the same year. The dates of the marriage of these five Cowgills within the next twenty years show that they must have all been born before Ellen's emigration, and all minors at that time; Edmund, in fact only an infant; this by itself, constitutes a strong argument that four of them were the "children" who came over with their mother Ellen Cowgill. These five generally signed each other's marriage certificates close to the signatures of the principals. That Ralph was positively a brother of Jennett is proved by the latter's daughter, Sarah Lane, choosing her "uncle, Ralph Cowgill" as her guardian, the relationship being so stated in the paper attesting her choice filed with her father's will. Similar relationship of the others is therefore almost unquestionable.

The name of Ellen Cowgill's husband is unknown; no record of their marriage has been found on the register of any monthly meeting in Yorkshire. If he was alive when the holders of the Settle certificate first determined to remove to America, and had intended to accompany them, he would most likely have purchased land from William Penn as they did, but there is no record of him in the early Philadelphia deed books, which contain the record of leases and releases and patents of the first settlers of the whole province; nor is the name of Ellen herself or any other Cowgill attached to any plot of land on Holme's map. Ellen's maiden name was possibly Stackhouse, as Thomas Stackhouse, who came over with her, mentions in his will his sisters Ellen and Jennett, though not their surnames. That Ellen had a daughter Jennett strengthens this theory. If she was a sister of Thomas Stackhouse, the fact would doubtless settle the question of her residence; she had no land of her own, and his wife died without issue within a few months of their arrival in Bucks county. His plantation was on Neshaminy creek in the present Middletown township, and is shown on Holme's map under the name of Thomas Stackhouse, Senior, and it would have been most natural for the widowed sister to live with him. We have no record of the death of Ellen Cowgill; but it was doubtless before 1701, in which year Thomas Stackhouse went to live with Margaret Atkinson, widow of Christopher, in Bensalem township, whom he afterwards married. By this time all of Ellen Cowgill's children, except Edmund, were married.

An account of the children of Ellen Cowgill compiled by some descendant in the State of Delaware, leaves out Edmund and Jennett, and gives her two elder children, Ezekiel, who moved to Virginia, and was supposed ancestor of the Cowgills of Ohio, and Thomas, who settled in New Jersey, and had descendants there. But investigations of this story show that the Ezekiel and Thomas Cowgill were really great-grandsons of Ellen, through her son John, being sons of the latter's son Thomas, by his wife, Sarah Clayton. Another account, current among the Ohio Cowgills above mentioned, asserts that the brothers, John and Thomas Cowgill (the latter stated to be the ancestor of the Ohio branch), came to America in 1667, and that a younger brother, Ralph, came in 1684. This is easily seen to be a variation of the Ezekiel and Thomas romance, the names of more recent ancestors having been placed about a century too early, the date of their arrival, 1667, being entirely imaginary. The known issue of Ellen Cowgill, father's name unknown, were:

RALPH COWGILL, of whom presently;

Jane Cowgill, buried Nov. 26, 1699; m. Oct. 25, 1685, Stephen Sands, of Bucks co., Pa., and had several children who have left numerous descendants in Bucks co., Phila., and elsewhere;

Jennett Cowgill, m. Feb. 2, 1687-8, Bernard Lane, of N. J., and left issue;

JOHN COWGILL, m. (first) Oct. 19, 1693, Bridget Croasdale; (second) Jan., 1703-4, Rachel (Baker) Bunting; of him later;

Edmund Cowgill, m. (first) May 29, 1702, Catharine Blaker; (second) Oct., 1707, Ann Osborne; lived for a time in Newtown, Bucks co., Pa., removing after his second marriage to N. J., where he died prior to 1743.

RALPH COWGILL, born in England about the year 1668, came to Pennsylvania in the ship, "Friends' Adventure," which arrived in Delaware river, September 28, 1682, as shown by Register of Arrivals, made by Phineas Pemberton, as Clerk of Bucks county. In order to obtain his passage, he had engaged himself to Randall Blackshaw for four years without pay, and therefore designated on the Register as "Servant" to Blackshaw. Those so called who came with the early settlers to Pennsylvania, were, however, in no sense domestic servants, as we understand the term, nor in any way menials, many of them being closely related to and fully social equals of their masters, indeed, Ralph Cowgill afterward married Randall Blackshaw's daughter. They simply took this means when unable to pay their own passage, to accompany more prosperous relatives or friends to the new world, and at the termination of their term of service received an allotment of land, at least fifty acres; the amount received by Ralph Cowgill; Penn having guaranteed the granting of that much land to all who came as servants, in order to secure a class of settlers trained to work for a livelihood to assist in developing his new Province, and avoid the difficulties experienced by the Virginia Colonists, where too many were "Gentleman," unskilled and otherwise unfitted for the labors required to maintain a settlement in the wilderness. These early servants were of a different status from the numerous indentured servants of "redemptioners" who followed in later years, and sold themselves or were sold by the masters of the ships that brought them to strangers among the settlers.

Ralph Cowgill no doubt received his fifty acres out of Blackshaw's 500 acres in Falls township, Bucks county, though no record of its assignment to him or his disposal thereof has been found of record, unless it was included in the 112 acres more or less which Randall Blackshaw conveyed to him on March 1, 1694-5, part of the tract on which Blackshaw then lived, purchased of James Harrison. On March 1, 1696-7, Cowgill sold this tract to Joseph Kirkbride, and removed to Burlington, New Jersey. He had married in 1689, Sarah Blackshaw, daughter of Randall and Alice; she was born in England about 1668, died September 15, 1694. On the date of the deed from Randall Blackshaw for the 112 acres, Ralph Cowgill executed a bond to his brother-in-law, Nehemiah Blackshaw, and Joseph Kirkbride, securing the tract that day conveyed to his children by his late wife Sarah, daughter of said Randall Blackshaw, viz.: Abraham, Nehemiah and Sarah Cowgill. On the same day that Ralph Cowgill executed the deed to his brother-in-law, Joseph Kirkbride, Randall Blackshaw made a conveyance of 200 acres of land in Wrightstown to his grandsons, Abraham and Nehemiah Cowgill, sons of Ralph Cowgill, and inasmuch as Joseph Kirkbride conveyed to his father-in-law, Randall Blackshaw, the 112 acres, with other land, and the latter immediately conveyed it to his son Nehemiah, it is probable that these several conveyances absolved Ralph Cowgill from the terms of his bond.

As before stated Ralph Cowgill removed to Burlington, New Jersey, at about the date of his sale of his Bucks county land. He married (second) at Burlington Meeting House, September 2, 1697, Susannah, of the town of Burlington, daughter of John Pancoast, late of Burlington, deceased, formerly of Ashton, Northamptonshire, England, who had presented a certificate to Burlington Meeting dated 3mo. (May) 13, 1680, from the Men's Monthly Meeting at Ugbrooke, county of Northampton. The will of John Pancoast, of Mansfield, Burlington county, dated November 30, 1694, proved December 22, 1694, mentions his wife Jane, and children: Mary, Ann, William, Joseph, Elizabeth, Sarah, Hannah and Susannah. These children were doubtless by a former wife, as he, was dealt with by Burlington Monthly Meeting, September 8, 1689, for marrying before his former wife had been dead five months.

Shortly after his second marriage Ralph Cowgill removed to that part of Burlington county lying below the town, as when the road from the present town of Pemberton to the river Delaware was laid out in December, 1712, it is described as extending "along the old path as it is marked in the township of Wellingborough to the Salem Road; thence along the same over the bridge to the upland; thence as it is marked, by Ralph Cowgill's house; thence as it is marked, to Ferry Point." This residence was within the compass of Burlington Monthly Meeting, and August 6, 1716, that meeting granted a certificate for Ralph Cowgill and his wife to Chesterfield Meeting, they having already removed to Chesterfield township, where they were living in 1717, at the time of the marriage of his son Nehemiah, and in 1721, when he was one of the appraisers of the estate of John Fisher of that township, deceased. He was Overseer of the Highway for Chesterfield township in 1722, and Overseer of the Poor in 1729. Sometime after this latter date Ralph Cowgill, with perhaps his two youngest children, Jacob and Susannah, his wife being deceased, and his other children grown, removed with his grown son Isaac, within the compass of Haddonfield Monthly Meeting, probably somewhere in Gloucester county. On December 14, 1741, Haddonfield Meeting granted him a certificate to Burlington Monthly Meeting, and he returned with his son Isaac to Springfield township. A letter from Isaac Cowgill to his nephew, Thomas Clifford, in Philadelphia, dated at Springfield, 7mo. 17, 1756, indicates that Ralph Cowgill's death had occurred before the 30th of the preceding month. The letter states that Isaac had been a good child to his father and latterly his main support, and describes his father's last days and death, saying these days began "last first day, being the 13th of this instant," but the previous and following text of the letter indicate that it was 13th ultimo that was meant, and no doubt referred to his father's "last First day."

CAPT. BLACKSHAW, paternal grandfather of Sarah (Blackshaw) Cowgill, commanded a company in the army of King Charles I., in the early part of the Civil War in England, 1642-60. He was gentleman of good estate in Cheshire, his seat being Hollingee Manor, parish of Mobberly, Bucklow Hundred, which in his day had a moat and draw-bridge. He was probably the "Ralph Blackshaw, of the Hollingee within Mobberly" whose inventory was filed at Chester, in 1669. He presumably died intestate, though if his property were entailed no will was necessary.

RANDALL BLACKSHAW, son of Capt. Blackshaw, born about 1622, inherited Hollingee Manor from his father; it had formerly belonged to Sir John Radcliffe, of Ordsall, as stated in George Ormond's "History of Cheshire," London, 1882 (Helsby's edition), vol. i., which after reciting the owners of the township of Mobberly in the parish of the same name, continues (p. 418), "The other moiety of Mobberly, lately belonging to the Radcliffes, of Ordsall in Lancashire, nigh Manchester, was sold away by Sir John Radcliffe, about the beginning of King James's reign over England, to his tenants there. The names of the freeholders in Radcliffe's part, since the several purchases from Radcliffe, as they now stand, 1672, * * * Randle Blackshaw. This was bought from Sir John Radcliffe, of Ordsall, by deed dated the eighth day of August, 1611, and is said to be the ancient demain-house of Mobberly, which did belong to Radcliffe."

Randall Blackshaw joined the Society of Friends and was persecuted for his religion. Besse's "Sufferings of Friends," vol. ii., Cheshire chapter, p. 90, says,

"In the year 1665 James Harrison of Hanford, Randal Blackshaw (and others) of Moberly * * * were arrested at a peaceable meeting" and "imprisoned two months in the house of correction at Middlewick."

Randall Blackshaw sold Hollingee to his wife's brother, Peter Burgess, and after paying his father's debts moved to Pennsylvania in 1682. He sailed with his wife and seven children in the ship, "Submission," from Liverpool, September 5, 1682, arriving in the Choptank river, Maryland, November 2, 1682. The log of the vessel has been printed in the "Publications of the Genealogical Society of Pennsylvania," vol. i., p. 7, et seq. In the same vessel were James Harrison, Phineas Pemberton, James Clayton and Ellis Jones with their families and dependants. In "A Registry of all the people in the county of Bucks within the Province of Pennsylvania that have come to settle the sd County" kept by Phineas Pemberton, is this entry:

"Randolph Blackshaw of Hollingee in the county of Chester arrived in Maryland the 2d of the 9th mo. 1682 in the ship Submission of Liverpool, Randolph arrived in this province at Apoquemene the 9th 3d mo. 1683. Phebe arrived in this Province with her father, Sarah, Jacob, Mary, Nehemiah, Martha arrived in this province with their mother. Abraham dyed at sea the 2d 8th mo. 1682."

Randall Blackshaw bought 1500 acres of unlocated land of James Harrison, 500 acres of which he located in Falls township, Bucks county, near where the Meeting House was afterwards built, part of which he conveyed to his son-in-law, Joseph Kirkbride, on which the latter lived; part to his son-in-law, Ralph Cowgill; and the remainder to his son Nehemiah; the latter also becoming the owner of the Cowgill tract as before recited; 200 acres of the 1500 were located in Wrightstown, and conveyed to his grandsons, Abraham and Nehemiah Cowgill, in 1697; 300 acres were located on the Neshaminy, in what became Warwick township, and also passed to Nehemiah, and 500 acres in Solebury, the greater part of which passed to his son-in-law, Ephraim Fenton.

No record of the death of Randall Blackshaw has been found; he was still living, aged about seventy-seven years, at the second marriage of Phineas Pemberton (to Alice Hodgson), May 18, 1699, and signed the certificate.

Randall Blackshaw married, in England, about 1665, Alice Burghes or Burgess, born about 1639, died January 18, 1688-9, of a family of some local importance in Moberly parish, Cheshire. The dates of births of the children of Randall and Alice Blackshaw as given in the following list are calculated from their ages as given in Register of Arrivals.

Issue of Randall and Alice (Burgess) Blackshaw:

Phebe Blackshaw, b. about 1666, d. 1701; m. March 13, 1687-8, at the house of Randall Blackshaw, Joseph Kirkbride, who by his second wife, Sarah Stacy, was the father of Sarah Kirkbride, who became the wife of Israel Pemberton, Jr., as heretofore mentioned;

The record of the births of the children of Ralph and Sarah (Blackshaw) Cowgill's children, appear on Register of births at Middletown Monthly Meeting, Bucks county, and with the exception of that of John, the second son, who died in infancy, also are entered in Ralph Cowgill's Bible. This Bible was published in 1716, and the child being long since deceased no record of him seems to have been made. The date of his birth as copied from the Register for the Historical Society is incorrectly given as "10mo. 30, 1692" that being the date of his death.

Issue of Ralph and Sarah (Blackshaw) Cowgill:

SARAH COWGILL, youngest child and only daughter of Ralph Cowgill by his first wife, Sarah Blackshaw, was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, September 3, 1694, died August 1, 1724. She married, in 1715, Thomas Clifford, a man of some means, and good connection in England, who had settled in Falls township, Bucks county, sometime previous to his marriage, and died there March 20, 1737-8. His descendants living in Philadelphia corresponded with some relatives of the name who were merchants in Bristol, England, and Amsterdam, Holland, and elsewhere, among them one Edward Clifford, a kinsman, living in Warwickshire in 1750, some of whose letters are preserved in the Clifford Correspondence in the Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

Issue of Thomas and Sarah (Cowgill) Clifford:

Elizabeth Clifford, b. Jan. 20, 1716-17; m. May 24, 1743, John Nutt, of Falls twp., Bucks co.;

THOMAS CLIFFORD, son of Thomas and Sarah (Cowgill) Clifford, born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, April 8, 1722, removed to the city of Philadelphia, where he became an eminent merchant and was a signer of the non-importation agreement in 1765. He had a country seat on the Delaware river in Falls, of Bristol township, Bucks county, which he inherited from his father. He married, about 1745, Ann Guest, of Burlington, New Jersey, of the family prominent in the early settlement of Philadelphia. Thomas Clifford and his wife and family were all members of the Society of Friends. He died in 1793, and his wife in 1803, and both are buried in Friends' Burying-Ground in Philadelphia. The will of Anna Clifford, the widow, dated January 11, 1790, was proved November 29, 1803.

Issue of Thomas and Ann (Guest) Clifford:

Sarah Clifford, b. March 10, 1745-6;

Elizabeth Clifford, b. May 25, 1747; m. Sept. 22, 1772, Thomas Smith, of Phila., son of William and Elizabeth Smith, of Bermuda;

Edward Clifford, b. June 28, 1756;

Deborah Clifford, b. March 29, 1759;

Thomazine Clifford, b. Oct. 7, 1760.

JOHN CLIFFORD, third child and eldest son of Thomas Clifford, by his wife, Ann Guest, born March 8, 1750, married Anna, daughter of Francis Rawle, of Philadelphia, by his wife, Rebecca, daughter of Edward and Anna (Coleman) Warner. Her father, Francis Rawle, born in 1729, was accidentally killed in 1761, when Anna was a mere infant, and her mother married (second) Samuel Shoemaker "the loyalist," City Treasurer, Justice of City Courts, and Mayor of Philadelphia during the British occupancy of Philadelphia.

Thomas and Anna (Rawle) Clifford, had one child, Rebecca Clifford, born January 1, 1792, married, July 15, 1812, John Pemberton, grandfather of Henry Pemberton, Jr., whose wife Susan Lovering's descent from the Cowgill family is as follows:

JOHN COWGILL, brother of Ralph Cowgill, ancestor of Rebecca (Clifford) Pemberton, as heretofore shown, both being sons of Ellen Cowgill, who came to Pennsylvania in the ship, "Welcome," in 1682, was born in England and came to Bucks county, Pennsylvania, with his mother, when a child. After living for some years in Bucks county with his mother, John Cowgill married, in 1693, Bridget Croasdale, who had come to Pennsylvania in the same ship with him. He probably went to live on a part of the Croasdale tract on his marriage, as February 20, 1698-9, he purchased of his brothers-in-law 197 acres, part of a larger tract laid out to Thomas Croasdale, and after his decease, patented by the Commissioners of Property, June 28, 1692, to his heirs. This tract was located in Middletown township, Bucks county, fronting on Neshaminy creek, and appears on Holme's map in the name of "Widow Croasdal." John Cowgill's purchase included the creek from the whole width of the tract. It was afterwards resurveyed and found to contain 232 acres, and as such was patented by the Commissioners of Property, June 14, 1712. Two days after the date of this patent, John Cowgill, who had already removed to New Castle county, conveyed this tract to Nicholas Bernardson, of Bergen county, New Jersey. He had, however, probably on his second marriage in 1704, removed from his Middletown farm, and in 1707 was living at Trevoise, in Bensalem township, as shown by the deed dated December 18, 1707, by which he and his wife Rachel, widow and executrix of Job Bunting, conveyed 200 acres of land in Bristol township, to Edward Radcliffe. Trevoise, part of the old Growdon estate, was probably his residence from his second marriage until his removal to New Castle in 1712.

From his arrival in Bucks county until his removal in 1712, John Cowgill was a member of Middletown Monthly Meeting of Friends, and served on numerous committees of that meeting. On May, 1, 1707, he was appointed an Overseer. At a meeting held November 6, 1712, John Cowgill requested a certificate, he having previously removed to New Castle county, in the "Territories of Pennsylvania" now the state of Delaware. On January 1, 1712-13, a certificate for him was ordered to be signed and sent to him which was produced at Duck Creek Monthly Meeting, on the 19th of the same month. When Little Creek was set off from Duck Creek as a separate meeting, he belonged to that particular meeting, which remained a constituent of Duck Creek Monthly Meeting, and he served on numerous committees for the Monthly Meeting and was very active in its business. From John Cowgill descend the present Delaware branch of the Cowgill family.

John Cowgill married (first) October 19, 1693, at "Neshamina" (now Middletown) Meeting, Bridget, born in England, October 7, 1671, daughter of Thomas and Agnes (Hathornthwaite) Croasdale, "of Neshamina, in Middletown township," who were named in the same certificate from Settle Monthly Meeting, and came over in the "Welcome" with Ellen Cowgill and her children. Thomas Croasdale and Agnes Hathornthwaite were married May 1, 1664. They settled, on their arrival, on the plantation in Middletown before referred to, where he died November 2, 1684, and his wife, October 23, 1684.

Bridget (Croasdale) Cowgill died April 26, 1701, and John Cowgill married (second) in 1703-4, Rachel (Baker) Bunting, widow of Job Bunting, and daughter of Henry Baker, one of the most prominent men of Bucks county. She was born in West Darby, Lancashire, April 23, 1669, and came to Pennsylvania with her parents in 1684.

Issue of John and Bridget (Croasdale) Cowgill:

Elizabeth Cowgill, b. Aug. 24, 1694; m. in 1715, William Brown;

Thomas Cowgill, b. June 21, 1696; m. 1727, Sarah Clayton, of New Castle co., and was the father of Ezekiel and Thomas Cowgill, before referred to, the latter supposed to be the ancestor of the Cowgills of Ohio;

JOHN COWGILL, b. July 8, 1698; m. 1720, Lydia Clayton; of whom presently;

Ellen Cowgill, b. Dec. 14, 1700, d. Jan. 15, 1772; m. (first) 1719, Thomas Brown; (second) Lewis Clothier.

Eleazer Cowgill, b. March 21, 1711; m. Aug. 29, 1739, Martha Pain.

JOHN COWGILL, son of John and Bridget (Croasdale) Cowgill, born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, July 8, 1698, removed with his father to New Castle county in 1712, and spent the remainder of his life there. He was an active member of Duck Creek Monthly Meeting of Friends. He married, December 16, 1720, Lydia, daughter of Joshua Clayton, of Little Creek Hundred, Kent county, on the Delaware, and a descendant of Thomas Clayton, of Clayton Hall, parish of High-hoyland, county York, England. Lydia was a sister to Sarah Clayton, who married Thomas Cowgill, brother of John. The will of Joshua Clayton dated September 2, 1760, probated at Dover, January 6, 1761, devises to his granddaughter, Eunice Osbourne, wife of Jonathan Osbourne, his dwelling plantation, being part of tract called "Higham's Ferry" and part of tract called "Wilton Creek" and devised lands and slaves, etc., to grandchildren, John Cowgill, Clayton Cowgill, Ezekiel Cowgill, Thomas Cowgill, Sarah, wife of John Register, of Talbot county, Maryland, Elizabeth Neal, Jean Smith, Lydia Durborrow, and the said Eunice Osbourne. Joshua Clayton, the testator, was a minister among Friends; his only other child, beside Sarah and Lydia Cowgill, was Elizabeth, who married Mark Manlove, Jr., August 19, 1730.

Issue of John and Lydia (Clayton) Cowgill:

John Cowgill, m. Mary Worrall;
 HENRY COWGILL, of whom presently;
 Clayton Cowgill;
 Eunice Cowgill, m. Jonathan Osbourne; probably others.

HENRY COWGILL, son of John and Lydia (Clayton) Cowgill, married Elizabeth Osbourne, and resided in Kent county, Delaware. Their children as given in an incomplete family record were:

Lydia Cowgill, m. David West;
 Jonathan Cowgill;
 Eunice Cowgill, d. y.;
 Elizabeth Cowgill, m. Joseph Corbit;
 Clayton Cowgill, d. y.;
 JOHN COWGILL, m. Mary Ann Corbit; of whom presently;
 Joshua C. Cowgill, m. Martha Newlin.

JOHN COWGILL, son of Henry and Elizabeth (Osbourne) Cowgill, of Kent county, Delaware, married Mary Ann, daughter of Daniel and Ann (Lea) Corbit, of Kent county, and resided in that county. They had issue:

Lydia Cowgill, m. Robert B. Wilson;
 Ann Lea Cowgill, m. her second cousin, Charles, son of John and Martha (Stout) Cowgill;
 Henry Cowgill, m. his second cousin, Angelina, dau. of John and Martha (Stout) Cowgill;
 Sarah Cowgill;
 DANIEL CLAYTON COWGILL, of whom presently.

DANIEL CLAYTON COWGILL, son of John and Mary Ann (Corbit) Cowgill, lived in Dover, Delaware. He married Susan Smithers Green, who died at Dover, December 14, 1907, in her eighty-fifth year, and they had issue:

Thomas Cowgill;
 Joseph C. Cowgill;
 MARY BARRATT COWGILL, b. Oct. 12, 1847; of whom presently;
 Eliza Cowgill;
 Edgar Lea Cowgill;
 Alice Clark Cowgill, unm., living at Dover;
 Robert P. Cowgill;
 Susan Cowgill.

MARY BARRATT COWGILL, daughter of Daniel C. and Susan S. (Green) Cowgill, born in Dover, Delaware, October 12, 1847, married, October 10, 1867, Joseph Shallcross Lovering, of Philadelphia, born April 27, 1832, died December 10, 1882, son of Joseph Samuel and Ann (Corbit) Lovering, and grandson of Joseph and Elizabeth (Cowgill) Corbit, above mentioned; they being second cousins through two lines, both being descended from the Cowgill and Corbit families: Mrs. Lovering's mother's father and Mr. Lovering's mother having been double first cousins. The full list of their children will be given later in the Shallcross line, one of them was, Susan Lovering, m. Henry Pemberton, Jr.

About the year 1700, perhaps as early as 1698, two brothers, Leonard and John Shallcross, arrived in the Province of Pennsylvania. They undoubtedly came from England, but in what part of that kingdom they had lived before their departure we have no present knowledge, for no contemporary account of their arrival has been handed down. They were members of the Society of Friends, and as such, no doubt, brought the customary certificate from some meeting of that Society in England, but the earliest archives of Oxford Meeting in Philadelphia county (to which John certainly belonged and most likely Leonard also, before he moved on further), among which these certificates would most likely have been filed, are now missing; it is said that they were forwarded to the London Yearly Meeting early in the eighteenth century. It is presumed that they were of a younger branch of the family of Shallcross, of Shallcross, in the High Peak of Derbyshire, in which the name Leonard was a favorite; but none of the records of Friends' meetings in Derbyshire have any mention of them, so it seems that their branch must have lived in some place remote from the ancestral home.

A tradition has long been prevalent in the comparatively modern generation of the family (for of course the first four or five generations knew better) that three brothers came over, the youngest, Joseph, settling in Chester county, Pennsylvania. But we know now, as the earlier members of the family knew, that Joseph was not a brother, but the grandson of Leonard, born over thirty years after the arrival of his grandfather and granduncle. This tradition also makes John the older brother, but our present knowledge gives this claim to Leonard.

LEONARD SHALLCROSS, born in England, about 1675, died in Pennsylvania, 1730. He came to the latter province about 1700, and probably lived a short time in Oxford township, Philadelphia county, where his brother John located permanently, but by 1702 he had removed to Bucks county. For the plantation he became possessed of there, no deed has been found on record to show the date of its purchase, its location or how many acres there were, but a mortgage from John Fisher to Samuel Baker, November 8, 1713, secured upon land in Makefield township, mentions Leonard Shallcross's land adjoining, and a deed for the Fisher tract in 1722 shows that Shallcross still owned the same place at that date.

Leonard Shallcross was a member of Falls Monthly Meeting of Society of Friends, and was appointed on a committee of that meeting on December 5, 1722. By his will dated February 28, 1729-30, proved November 16, 1730, he left his house and plantation to his son Leonard; £10. each to his sons William and Joseph; £20. each to his daughters Rebecca and Rachel; one shilling to his son John; and made his wife Sarah sole executrix.

Leonard Shallcross married (first) January, 1702-3, Ann, daughter of William Ellet, of Bucks county. They declared their intentions of marriage before Falls Monthly Meeting, December 2, 1702, "passed second meeting" January 6, 1702-3, and were married within the month. Her father, William Ellet, was a brother of Andrew Ellet, a prominent early settler in Bucks county, from whom he obtained 100 acres of land there. They were from Somersetshire, England. William Ellet, by will dated December 13, 1714, proved September 15, 1721, left his estate to his son-in-law, James Downey, subject to the life interest of his widow, and legacies to his daughters, Elizabeth Downey, Ann Shallcross, Mary Hawkins and Sarah Bidgood. (The son-in-law, James Downey, was not the husband of the daughter Elizabeth, but of a deceased daughter Hannah; Elizabeth was the wife of William Downey, relationship to James unknown).

Issue of Leonard and Ann (Ellet) Shallcross:

John Shallcross, Jr., m. May, 1728, Sarah Knowles;
 WILLIAM SHALLCROSS, m. 1733, Ruth (Palmer) Hulme; of whom later;
 JOSEPH SHALLCROSS, d. Oct. 11, 1787; m. April, 1737, Sarah Worth; of whom later;
 LEONARD SHALLCROSS, d. Feb. 14, 1813; m. Nov. 14, 1752, Judith Wood; of whom later;
 Rebecca Shallcross, living unm. 1754;
 Rachel Shallcross, living unm. 1754.

Leonard Shallcross married (second) in 1724, Sarah (Hough) Atkinson, widow of Isaac Atkinson, of Bristol township, daughter of Richard and Margery (Clows) Hough, of Makefield township, Bucks county; they had no issue. Her father, Richard Hough, was a Provincial Councillor of Pennsylvania, Member of Assembly, and a Justice of the Bucks County Court.

JOHN SHALLCROSS, born in England, 1677, died in Pennsylvania, September 4, 1758, and was buried in the graveyard of Oxford Meeting House. He came to Pennsylvania with his brother Leonard about 1700, and settled in Oxford township, Philadelphia county. Being a member of the Society of Friends he joined Oxford Meeting, one of the constituents of Abington Monthly Meeting.

By deed dated December 4, 1708, John Shallcross bought of the widow, Mary Fletcher, two tracts in Oxford township, one of 265 acres, extending from the Bristol pike to and beyond the present Bustleton pike, which was then only a private lane; and the other 112½ acres adjoining this and lying on both sides of the Bustleton pike. The first mentioned of these was left to John Fletcher, husband of Mary, by his kinsman, Capt. Thomas Holme, late of the Parliamentary Army of England, Surveyor-General of Pennsylvania, and sometime President of the Provincial Council. The deed mentions a house already standing on this tract, but it was no doubt a log house, and it was almost certainly John Shallcross who built the stone mansion still standing and still owned by a Shallcross. It is on the southeast side of the Bustleton pike about two miles from the old village of Frankford, and is now occupied (1907) by George M. Shallcross, a descendant of John's brother Leonard.

On August 12, 1718, John Shallcross bought from his wife's cousin, Paul Wilmerton, twelve and three-quarters acres, adjoining his 265 acres tract on the northeast; and at another time from Sarah Busby, he bought seventy-five acres on the northwest side of the present Bustleton pike, opposite his 265 acre tract and adjoining that part of the 112½ acre tract which lay on that side of the said wood. Besides these, John Shallcross, from time to time, made other purchases of land in Oxford township, mostly adjoining the above tracts, and one of about 200 acres in the adjacent township of Lower Dublin. He also held mortgages on many lands mostly in Bucks county, though he does not appear to have obtained full possession of any of them by default in payment. From all of this we infer that he was quite a wealthy man for his time and locality. These lands have gone through a number of divisions among the different branches of the Shallcross family, descendants of John's brother Leonard, many of whose representatives are still living on some of the subdivisions. John Shallcross had also three lots in Philadelphia.

John Shallcross was very active in the affairs of Abington Monthly Meeting, of which Oxford, his particular meeting, was a part. He was appointed to represent it at Abington Quarterly Meeting, first on 2nd month 29, 1717, and twenty-seven times thereafter, the last being on 5th month 27, 1747, after which advancing age compelled him to inactivity, although he continued to attend the monthly meeting several years longer. On 1mo. 25, 1723, he was appointed one of three trustees for the real estate belonging to Oxford Meeting, and was reappointed 8mo. 31, 1726, when a new board of six trustees was named. He was appointed a member of the committee to visit families of members of Oxford Meeting, 12mo. 24, 1717, and reappointed eight times, the last being 11mo. 30, 1748. He also served on numerous minor committees, and became an Elder of Oxford Meeting by appointment of Monthly Meeting, 8mo. 28, 1723. At the Monthly Meeting held 12mo. 22, 1724, it was reported that he had been chosen an Overseer of Oxford Meeting, and again 10mo. 1741; he served until his nephew, Joseph Shallcross, was chosen his successor, as reported at the Monthly Meeting, of 1mo. 30, 1747.

By his will dated June 13, 1754, proved September 21, 1758, John Shallcross named his wife Hannah, and his nephew, Leonard Shallcross (son of his brother Leonard Shallcross, deceased) as his executors. He devised to his wife Hannah a lot in Philadelphia, between Second and Third streets, adjoining lots formerly belonging to Israel Pemberton, which he had purchased of James Steel; and also £500, household goods, and one-half of the income of his plantation; the other half being devised to his nephew, Leonard Shallcross; on the death of the wife, the whole of his plantation of 400 acres in Oxford township to go to his said nephew; the income from two lots in Philadelphia, one on High street, the other between Second street and Letitia court, to be divided between his wife Hannah, and nephew, Leonard Shallcross, and on the wife's death both lots to go to Leonard. To his nephew, Joseph Shallcross (son of his brother Leonard Shallcross, deceased), was devised a plantation of 200 acres in Lower Dublin township, whereon the said Joseph then resided for life, then to said Joseph's son John; also £100 to be divided between all children of said Joseph Shallcross, and £50 to each of the children of his nephew, William Shallcross, deceased, to wit, William, Ann, and Ruth; £200 to Joseph, son of his nephew, John Shallcross, deceased; £100 to Ann, daughter of said John, and £100 each to Rebecca and Rachel, daughters of his brother, Leonard Shallcross, deceased. Legacies were also given to his brother-in-law, Edward Brooks, his sister-in-law, Catharine Wilmerton, widow of Paul, his kinswoman, Hannah Robinson (daughter of the above named Edward Brooks) and to his friends, Thomas Wood, Samuel Spencer, and Hannah, wife of Thomas Dews. The residuary legatees were his wife Hannah, and nephew Leonard.

John Shallcross married in May, 1710, Hannah, daughter of William and Hannah (Newman) Fletcher, of Philadelphia county. They had no issue. Her parents, William Fletcher, of Middle Barton, Oxfordshire, and Hannah, daughter of Paul Newman, of Eaton, Berkshire, England, were married 4mo. 30, 1680, at P. Whitwicks's house in Appleton, Berkshire. They came to America at about the same time as the Shallcrosses. William Fletcher died 5mo. 5, 1688, and was buried "in the burying place in Oxford, neare Tacony bridge;" on 6mo. 13, 1689, at Oxford Meeting, his widow married Attwell Wilmerton, the Paul Wilmerton mentioned in John Shallcross's will being her son. William Fletcher was a brother to John Fletcher whose widow, Mary, sold the land above mentioned to John Shallcross. They had another brother, Robert Fletcher, who also came to Pennsylvania and was a miller in Abington township, and whose descendants are still a family of prominence in Philadelphia county. Another brother, Thomas Fletcher, remained in Middle Barton, England. Hannah Newman had two sisters who also came to Oxford township, Philadelphia county; Elizabeth, who married at Appleton, Berks, 10mo. 21, 1681, John Knowles, of West Challow, Berks (one of their granddaughter marrying a Shallcross as shown below); and Jane Newman, who married at Appleton, Berks, 8mo. 17, 1686, Edward Orpwood, of Curner, Berks; the will of the latter, of Oxford, county of Philadelphia, in 1728-9, mentions his cousin, Hannah Shallcross, and a number of relatives by name of Knowles, Wilmerton, &c.

Hannah Shallcross, of Oxford township, Philadelphia county, widow of John, by her will dated October 25, 1758, proved September 5, 1759, made her cousin, Hannah Robeson (daughter of Edward Brooks) executrix, and made bequests to the six children of her kinsman, John Wilmerton, John, Hannah, Mary, Elizabeth, Paul and John; to the three children of Hannah Robeson by her first husband, Stephen Simmons, Elizabeth, Mary and Edward; and to the said Hannah the lot in Philadelphia left by her husband.

JOHN SHALLCROSS, JR., son of Leonard and Ann (Ellet) Shallcross, was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, but in early life removed to Oxford township, Philadelphia county, living there with her uncle, John, the "Junior" being added to his name to distinguish him from this uncle, who had doubtless selected him for his heir, which may account for his own father having bequeathed him but one shilling. He died, however, before his uncle. He was one of the six trustees for the real estate of Oxford Meeting, and on January 25, 1730-1, was appointed representative from Abington Monthly Meeting to the Quarterly Meeting. He died intestate and letters of administration were granted on his estate, September 19, 1733, to his widow, Sarah Shallcross, of Philadelphia county.

John Shallcross married, May, 1728, Sarah, daughter of John and Ann (Paul) Knowles, of Oxford township, and granddaughter of John and Elizabeth (Newman) Knowles, mentioned above. After her husband's death, Sarah Knowles Shallcross removed with her two children to Chester county, Pennsylvania, where her brother and several of her sisters were living. There she married later John Buckingham, by whom she had other children.

At the time of his death, however, he was living in Falls township. Letters of administration were granted on his estate, May 16, 1749, to his widow, Ruth Shallcross.

He married, in 1733, Ruth (Palmer) Hulme, born September 18, 1693, widow of George Hulme, of Middletown township, Bucks county, and daughter of John and Christian Palmer, of Falls, who came to Bucks county from Yorkshire, England. Her certificate from Middletown Monthly Meeting to Falls was received at the latter meeting, February 4, 1735-6, and she served on committees ten times between 1746 and 1753. On May 2, 1759, Jonathan Palmer requested leave of Falls Monthly Meeting for his sister, Ruth Shallcross, to build a house on the Meeting's land, but it was refused at the following meeting, June 6, 1759. After this date she appears to have removed with her children from Falls, probably into Upper Makefield or Buckingham township.

On September 5, 1733, Falls Monthly Meeting granted him a certificate which he presented at Abington Monthly Meeting, October 29, 1733. His particular Meeting was thereafter Oxford, by which he was chosen as Overseer in place of his uncle, John, as reported to Abington Monthly Meeting, March 30, 1747, and on April 28, 1755, he was appointed an Elder, also as his uncle's successor. He died October 11, 1787, and was buried on the 13th, at Frankford, Oxford township.

Like his uncle and two of his brothers, he was active in the affairs of Abington Monthly Meeting, and Oxford Particular Meeting, succeeding his brother Joseph as Overseer of Oxford Meeting in 1771, and later was made an Elder. He died on his plantation near Frankford, February 14, 1813, and was buried at Frankford, in the graveyard of Oxford Meeting. By his will he devised his plantation to his son John, and to his sons, Leonard, William, Thomas and Benjamin, the houses and land they respectively occupied; directing his houses in Letitia Court, and a Water Lot in Philadelphia to be sold and the proceeds to be divided among his daughters, Hannah Paul, Mary Kirkner, Martha Knight and Rachel Johnson.

FOX FAMILY.

Six years after Charles II. had, under the Great Seal of England, given to William Penn by Letters Patent, the "Province of Pennsylvania with diverse great powers and Jurisdiction for the well Government thereof," and four years after the "Welcome" had brought Penn on his first visit to his infant colony, the ship "Desire," from Plymouth, England, on June 23, 1686, cast anchor in the river Delaware, bringing to the rapidly growing town of Philadelphia, which then contained about three thousand inhabitants, a company of emigrants known as the Plymouth Friends. Among them were Francis Rawle and his son of the same name, with six servants, Richard Grove and two servants, Nicholas Pearce with two servants, James Fox with his family and eight servants, John Shellson with his wife and four servants. Of those here classed as servants to the other passengers were John, Richard, and Justinian Fox, who, unable to pay for their passage to and outfit in the young colony, according to the custom of the day, had no doubt bound themselves for a certain time, at the end of which they were to receive an agreed-upon number of acres of land. Many of the emigrants themselves not rich in this world's goods, brought relatives with them in this way.

On March 13, 1685-6, before leaving England, Fox and Rawle, for themselves and their associates, had purchased five thousand acres of land of William Penn.

It was the purpose of these emigrants to make their settlement an industrial one. James Claypoole and Robert Turner, Penn's commissioners, writing to Thomas Holme, Surveyor General, say: "At the request of James Fox, Francis Rawle, Nicholas Pearce and Richard Grove, in behalf of themselves and other Friends of Plymouth, joynt purchasers with them of five thousand acres of land, that we would grant the said five thousand acres of land together, for a township, in the most convenient place for water for the encouragement of the woolen manufacture, intended to be set up by them; these we therefore, in the Proprietary's name, do will and require thee forthwith to survey * * * and make return hereof to the Secretary's office at Philadelphia the 5th of 5Mo., 1686."

Pennsylvania Archives, 2d. Series, volume xix, page 35, has the following: At a meeting of the Commissioners, 4Month 7, 1690, "James Fox and Fran. Rawle Request they may have a Patent for the 5,000 acres they Purchased now called the Plymouth Town, and that the Six Hundred Acres which was formerly Intended for a Town be Returned as part of the 5,000 acres. Ordered that a Warr't be made for the Returning the 5,000 acres of land in manner aforesaid.

"Ordered that Fran: Cook have the other half of the vacant lott next to the Plymouth Friends Lott in the High Street."

The five thousand acres were laid out in what is now known as Plymouth township, Montgomery county, but was at that time part of Philadelphia county. With their associates, Fox and Rawle took up their residence upon the land. A Friends' Meeting was at once established at the house of James Fox, which has continued to the present day and is known as Plymouth Meeting. The country was too young for such an industry as this company had planned and the scheme was abandoned. Neither Fox or Rawle remained long in the new settlement. It is said that their wives found it too lonely.

Francis, father of James Fox, is said to have been born in Wiltshire, England, about 1620. During the civil war he removed to Cornwall and settled in the parish of St. Germans. Having joined the Society of Friends in 1646, he married Dorothy Kekewich of Exeter, Cornwall. Francis Fox died in 1670 and his widow Dorothy in 1693.

Issue of Francis and Dorothy (Kekewich) Fox:

Francis Fox, b. at St. Germans, Cornwall, 1647; d. 1704; m. (first) Joan Smith, had two sons who d. young, and two daus., Rachel and Deborah, and settled in England. His second wife, whom he m. March 30, 1686, was Tabitha Croker, d. 1730. Of their children, Mary Fox, m. The others, Francis, Sarah, George, Dorothy and John, m. and settled in England;

John Fox, d. young;

JAMES FOX, b. about 1650; d. Sept. 19, 1699; m. Elizabeth Record.

JAMES FOX* (Francis'), born about 1650 in England; died Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, September 19, 1699; married Elizabeth Record, and was settled at Plymouth, Devonshire, England, where he was engaged in manufacture of cloth. He appears to have been leader, (with Rawle as his associate,) of the emigrant company of Plymouth Friends. Of the two, Fox is usually first named in the records. With James Fox there came to this country, his wife Elizabeth and children George, James, Elizabeth and Sarah. After the abandoning of their settlement in Plymouth, Pennsylvania, James Fox removed with his family to Philadelphia, where he became interested in public affairs. He was a member of Pennsylvania Assembly in 1688, and again, 1693-9. In his will he is styled a baker, and from the same source it may be learned that his business included more than the mere making of bread, for he leaves to his heirs, his "dwelling house, granaries, bake-house, boulting mills, bags, weights, seals," etc.

Issue of James and Elizabeth (Record) Fox:

George Fox, b. Plymouth, England, 1675; d. Phila., Sept. 8, 1699; m. at Burlington Meeting, N. J., May 20, 1696, Susannah, dau. of Joseph Hackney, "late of Hempstead, Hertfordshire, Old England," and his wife Elizabeth Jennings, sister of Gov. Samuel Jennings of N. J. Justinian Fox was present at the marriage and signed the certificate. In his will, which was witnessed by Justinian Fox and James Fox, Jr., George Fox made a bequest to Phila. Meeting for the use of a "public School lately established or about to be established." George and Susannah Fox had one son, George Fox, d. June 13, 1698;

James Fox, b. Plymouth, England; d. Phila., Jan. 30, 1700-1; m. at Phila. Meeting, March 31, 1699, Anne, dau. of Daniel Wills, of Northampton, Burlington county, N. J. She d. Oct. 27, 1701. Their only child, Mary Fox, d. July 16, 1702;

Francis Fox, b. Phila., May 22, 1691; d. there May 12, 1702.

JUSTINIAN FOX, as has been shown, came from Plymouth, England, 1686, in the ship "Desire." He settled in Philadelphia, about 1700, where he married Elizabeth, only daughter and fifth child of Joseph and Mary Yard. Joseph Yard is said to have emigrated from Devonshire, England, about 1669, to have settled among the Swedes on the Delaware, and to have built in 1689, Gloria Dei, better known as the Old Swedes Church in Southwark, Philadelphia. On January 13, 1707, William Carter, Thomas Marten, Joseph Yard and John Rodman were appointed to view the hollow in the head of Chestnut street crossing Fifth street, and take the best method for making good the same and giving the water a passage.

The relationship between Justinian and James Fox, previously mentioned, has never been ascertained. That there was some such tie is presumed from the fact that they emigrated in the same vessel; that Justinian Fox was present at the marriage of James' son George, in 1686, and witnessed the will of the latter in 1699, as well as deeds previously made by members of the family. There is also reason to believe that Justinian succeeded to the business of James Fox, with whom he may have been previously associated. The tradition that Justinian Fox had studied medicine, there is nothing on record to confirm. At this late day but few items can be gathered regarding him. In June, 1707, with Anthony Taylor and Isaiah Appleton, he witnessed the will of Samuel Sheppard. The following January the will of Robert Turnham was witnessed by Joseph and William Yard and Justinian Fox, while in March of the same year Anthony Taylor made his will and signed it in the presence of Joseph Yard and Justinian Fox. The witnesses signing the will of Jeremiah Gray in 1715 were Justinian Fox, George Emlen and Charles Brockden.

It is said that Justinian Fox was a Friend and that his wife joined the society after their marriage. He died leaving but a small property, and letters of administration on his estate were granted to his widow Elizabeth, January 16, 1718-19.

JOSEPH FOX* (Justinian!) born in Philadelphia, died December 10, 1779, aged seventy years; married, at Philadelphia Meeting, September 25, 1749, Elizabeth Mickle, born 1729; died January 1, 1805; daughter of Samuel and Thomazine (Marshall) Mickle.

Archibald Mickle came to Philadelphia bringing a certificate from the Men's Meeting at Richard Boyes' House, near Lisburn, county Antrim, Ireland, dated 6th month, 2, 1682. At Philadelphia Meeting on 12mo. 25, 1686, he married (second) Sarah Watts, and subsequently removed to Gloucester county, New Jersey, where he died in 1706. He was ancestor of the well known Mickle family of that county. His son, Samuel Mickle, born February 10, 1684, died February 18, 1765, married at Philadelphia Meeting, December 28, 1716, Thomazine, born December 15, 1692; died March 28, 1747, daughter of James and Rachel (Garthwaite) Marshall, who came from the city of York, England, with William Hudson. Samuel Mickle was a merchant of good standing, became a member of Common Council of the city in 1732, and so continued until his death. It may be of interest to note that those elected at the same time were Edward Shippen, George House, John Dilwyn, Benjamin Shoemaker, Joseph England, James Bingham, Joseph Paschal, Samuel Powel and Samuel Powel, Jr. There were also serving at the same time, John Cadwalader, Andrew Bradford, Anthony Morris, Samuel Carpenter, Thomas Masters, George Mifflin, George Emlen and a number of others whose names are equally familiar. Benjamin Franklin in his autobiography gives the following description of Samuel Mickle:

"There are croakers in every country, always boding its ruin. Such a one then lived in Philadelphia; a person of note, an elderly man, with a wise look and a very grave manner of speaking; his name was Samuel Mickle. This gentleman, a stranger to me, stopt one day at my door, and asked me if I was the young man who had lately opened a new printing-house. Being assured in the affirmative, he said he was sorry for me, because it was an expensive undertaking, and the expense would be lost; for Philadelphia was a sinking place, the people already half-bankrupts, or near being so, all appearances to the contrary, such as new buildings and the rise in rents, being to his certain knowledge fallacious; for they were, in fact, among the things that would soon ruin us. And he gave me such a detail of misfortunes now existing, or that were soon to exist, that he left me half melancholy. Had I known him before I engaged in this business, probably I never should have done it. This man continued to live in this decaying place, and to declaim in the same strain, refusing for many years to buy a house there, because all was going to destruction; and at last I had the pleasure of seeing him give five times as much for one as he might have bought it for when he first began his croaking."

Joseph Fox was apprenticed by his widowed mother to James Portues, a prominent and wealthy carpenter of Philadelphia. Possessed of ability and application, he devoted himself to the interest of his employer, whose warm attachment he secured and held. Mr. Portues, (who so spelled his own name, and not Porteus, as generally printed), died unmarried, at the age of seventy-two years, on January 19, 1737, and left the bulk of his estate to be equally divided between his two executors, Edward Warner (who had also been an apprentice under him), and Joseph Fox.

To Edward Warner he gave his negroes, Jack and Peter; to Joseph Fox all his household goods and his Indian slave Maria and her son Scipio. He says: "It is my will and desire that the slaves be used with humanity and kindness (as I expect they will), more especially the said Jack and Maria. That they may have necessary subsistence befitting their condition as slaves, and as being aged and infirm."

According to instructions in the will, Mr. Portues was buried in the piece of ground which he says: "I formerly appointed for a burying place in the said city, between the Quaker's burying ground and third street, which piece of ground I bought of Samuel Richardson, cordwainer." Reference is made to the Pennsylvania Magazine, volume iv, page 411, for the following: "The place of burial back of Nos. 46 and 48 N. Third Street is that of James Porteus [sic], who died, 1743. This is the only interment there. His double house, still standing, [1880], was at the time of his death not quite finished, and the funeral passed up the six-foot alleyway on its south side. Great additions to the rear of the building have left but a few feet in width for the grave, which can only be seen from the Arch Street Meeting grounds. The inscription on the massive gravestone was some years ago recut." The date in the above is incorrect, for the will of James Portues, dated November 30, 1736, was proved January 22, 1736, which according to present reckoning would be January, 1737. The grave is also mentioned in Watson's Annals, volume ii, page 421, where one reads: "A Grave Stone to James Porteus, dated July, 1736, now actually heads his grave in a city yard, say in Fox's lot in North Third Street."

James Portues had been a founder of the Carpenters' Company, one of the earliest associations in Pennsylvania, perhaps the oldest now existing. The company has maintained "an uninterrupted organization since the year 1724, about forty years after the settlement of the Colonial Government by William Penn. Among the early associates are many whose names are prominent in colonial history, and whose architectural tastes are impressed on the buildings that yet remain, memorials of that early day. James Porteus, second on the list of members, designed and executed Penn's Mansion on Second Street above Walnut; and the lively interest he felt in the association with his fellows, induced him at his death to bequeath to it his works on architecture."

Both Joseph Fox and Edward Warner were members of the Carpenters' Company. In 1763 Joseph Fox was chosen Master of the company and continued to hold the position until his death. In 1768 the lot on Chestnut street on which Carpenters Hall now stands, was purchased. The building, which has much historic interest, was erected, 1771. Joseph Fox was chairman of the committee to secure the lot, and a generous subscriber to the building fund.

His share of the Portues bequest brought to Mr. Fox much valuable real estate in and around the city. To him came the lot on the west side of Third street below Arch, on which stood the carpenter shop where he had served his apprenticeship, and the ground in which James Portues was buried. After purchasing the adjoining property he either built the large house thereon or added to the one already standing, and there resided for the remainder of his days. The house, the home of succeeding generations, stood until about the year 1890, and from Portues he inherited the estate later known as "Champlost," which will be referred to hereafter.

Joseph Fox became owner of a large amount of real estate outside the city. His name appears upon the records of Philadelphia and Bucks counties as the holder of mortgages to a very considerable amount. His business undertakings prospered and he accumulated a goodly estate, becoming one of Philadelphia's most prominent property holders. He was frequently called upon to act as executor, guardian and trustee of large estates. In 1760 he was trustee of the estate of Robert Shewell. Joseph Fox, Benjamin Franklin and Joseph Galloway were named as executors and guardians in the will of William Masters in 1761.

The Sworn

With James and Israel Pemberton he was an executor of the will of John Jones, who married, 1760, Elizabeth, daughter of James Fox.

So far as discovered, Mr. Fox's first public office was that of City Commissioner, to which he was elected October, 1745. In 1748 he was chosen one of the city assessors. In 1750 he began a long and active career as a member of the Assembly of the Province of Pennsylvania. On October 15th of that year he and his colleague, William Clymer, took their seats as the two burgesses, or representatives, of the city of Philadelphia. Clymer died before the expiration of his year of service, his place being filled by Benjamin Franklin, who, up to that time, had acted as Clerk of the House, with no voice in its deliberations.

Mr. Fox's being at once named for various important committees, is evidence of the assured place he already held in public confidence. In most of the business transacted during the sittings of this Assembly he appears to have taken an active part. Noticeable among the matters presented for consideration at this time was the establishment of Pennsylvania Hospital, which was favorably received, carefully considered and finally acted upon. Mr. Fox was one of the earliest contributors for its foundation and gave it active support in later years.

Of the next election, John Smith, James Logan's son-in-law, writes in his journal:

"Eighth month 1st. 1751: We got home (from Burlington) in the Dark of the Evening. Found the people in a foam of Politicks.

"2d. Obtained a List of the votes for Officers yesterday;" which he proceeds to give, ending with:

"Joseph Fox, 330,
"Benja. Franklin, 40."

The list was for members of the Assembly for Philadelphia county. Both Fox and Franklin were unsuccessful competitors. Mr. Smith continues:

"I am told some people met & agreed to put Jos: Fox in the County, * * * There was some strife about the choice of Burgesses. The tickets on counting them stood thus:

"Benjamin Franklin, 495,
"Hugh Roberts, 473,
"Joseph Fox, 391,
"William Plumsted, 303."

As but two Burgesses, or Members for the City were to be elected, Joseph Fox was again on the losing side, although receiving more votes, counting those given for him as a county member, than did Franklin, whose supporters were not so divided. In 1753 Mr. Fox again took his seat; this time and each succeeding year thereafter until 1772, representing Philadelphia county.

Immediately after the opening of Assembly in 1750, he was appointed on the "Committee of Accounts." Again in 1753, and in each succeeding year of his long service, he was thus chosen, for many years holding the position of chairman of this most responsible committee. The single exception to his appointment was the year in which he was chosen speaker at the opening session of the House. His associates on this committee were the most capable and influential members of the Assembly. It devolved upon them to audit and settle the accounts of the General Loan-office and all other public accounts, to sink and destroy the Bills of Credit received in exchange; to count all the moneys and report, together with the said accounts, the sum they should actually find in the hands of the trustees, with power to send for persons, papers and records. In 1763 he, with others appointed by the House, examined Franklin's accounts for the time the latter acted as agent for the colony in Great Britain, and certified to their correctness.

Mr. Fox was frequently one of the commissioners for the disbursement of the large sums voted by the House for the defense of the Province or for the use of the government. Even after his connection with the Assembly was at an end, he acted in this capacity. One of the items in the account of September, 1774, is the sum paid Joseph Fox, Esq., for his services as a commissioner of the province. In 1770 Mr. Fox was serving on the corporation for the relief of the poor, as Henry Drinker, in writing to his partner, Abel James, says that William Fisher had been elected a manager in place of Joseph Fox.

Another committee on which Mr. Fox served uninterruptedly for many years was that known as the committee of Grievances or Aggrievances, which listened to complaints brought to Assembly for settlement. These were investigated (and probably some of them adjusted,) before being formally presented to the House. For eight of the twelve successive years in which Mr. Fox served on this committee, he acted as its chairman. As long as Franklin remained here he served as one of its members, being succeeded by Galloway, whose legal knowledge made him especially valuable for the position.

It is an evidence of his acknowledged tact, that Mr. Fox was so frequently selected as one of those to wait upon the governor with messages from the Assembly. Owing to the strained conditions which almost invariably existed between the two, this could not have been an agreeable task. On one occasion the Governor vented on the messengers, of whom Mr. Fox was one, such an uncalled-for tirade that his remarks were noted on the minutes, where they may be seen to this day.

In 1763, when Isaac Norris fell ill, Benjamin Franklin was chosen to fill his place as speaker, and while in office aroused so much opposition that he was not elected to Assembly the next year. Isaac Norris, although far from well, was prevailed upon to again accept the position which he had so ably filled for many years. One week served to convince him that he was physically unequal to the strain, and Joseph Fox was "unanimously chosen" speaker. Almost the first business after his taking the chair, was the appointment of Franklin as agent to England.

Among the Norris papers at the Pennsylvania Historical society is a letter written by Dickinson to Isaac Norris, giving an account of the manner in which Norris's resignation as speaker was received by the Assembly. The same unanimity as was shown before, attended the appointment of Mr. Fox as speaker at the opening of the next Assembly, in October, 1765. In 1766 Joseph Galloway succeeded Joseph Fox as speaker, being chosen "by a majority of votes." In May, 1769, Galloway in his turn fell ill, and again Joseph Fox was chosen speaker for the remainder of the term.

While Mr. Fox held his office, in 1764, delegates were chosen for what has since been known as the Stamp Act Congress, when "Mr. Speaker, Mr. Dickinson, Mr. Bryan and Mr. Morton were appointed to that service." The Pennsylvania Gazette of September 26, 1765, notes "The gentlemen appointed by the Assembly to assist at the General Congress at New York, we hear set out this Day for that place." Ford says that although appointed, Joseph Fox did not attend the Congress. (See Stille's "Life of Dickinson" vol. ii. p. 182). Coming at the end of the session, and directly before the new election (shortly after which the new Assembly were to take their seats) it was probably necessary for the speaker to remain in Philadelphia.

In 1765 it was "ordered that the Committee of Correspondence do acquaint Mr. Jackson and Mr. Franklin, the Agents in London, the House request that all their letters on public affairs, may be addressed to the present Speaker, Joseph Fox, Esq., or to a majority of the said Committee in order that the same be regularly laid before the House." One of the letters sent according to these instructions still exists, being addressed by Benjamin Franklin to Joseph Fox, Esq., and is dated London, March 1, 1766, notifying him that the Stamp Act is about to be repealed and making mention of another letter sent shortly before. This is doubtless one of many such communications, now lost.

The Committee of Correspondence was another of those on which Fox invariably served, except when holding the position of speaker. It was at first composed of but three members, of whom Franklin, while still in the Province, was one. Franklin was also Fox's associate on the committee to revise the minutes of the Assembly and prepare them for printing. This committee was a standing one, and was at first composed of Joseph Fox and Benjamin Franklin alone. In 1757 Franklin was succeeded by Galloway and the speaker was added to the number, from which time no change was made in the members until 1763, when we find it composed of Fox, Dickinson and the Speaker. Ability in the same line caused Mr. Fox to be frequently called upon to form one of those named for the framing of laws, drafting bills, preparing messages to the Governor, or answers to those sent by him to the Assembly; all requiring the greatest wisdom and prudence.

Mr. Fox attended, by appointment of the House of Representatives, the Indian Conferences at Easton and Lancaster in 1756 and 1757, but declined to act as one of the Commissioners at Fort Pitt in 1768.

He was for many years trustee of Province Island. This was a low island of 342 acres on the southwest side of the Schuylkill, near its mouth, purchased in 1741 by the Province, held as a quarantine station, and on which was established a "pest-house." Besides the buildings used for hospital purposes there were others leased to tenants.

January 22nd, 1757, Joseph Fox was appointed one of the Superintendents of the State House, in place of Edward Warner, deceased. The site for the State House had been selected by Hamilton and Lawrence, the first purchase made by William Allen in his own name, on October 16, 1730. Additional ground was secured by Hamilton in 1732, in the spring of which year the ground was actually broken. In 1762 it was deemed advisable to entrust both State House and grounds to trustees, and accordingly Isaac Norris, Thomas Leech, Joseph Fox, Samuel Rhoads, Joseph Galloway, John Baynton and Edward Penington were appointed.

Watson tells us that the State House square was walled in with a high brick wall, and at the centre of the Walnut street wall was a ponderous high gate and massive brick structure over the top of it, placed there by Joseph Fox.

In 1764, when the Christian Indians with their Moravian missionaries were taken to Philadelphia for protection from border settlers, the "Paxton Boys" bent on their destruction followed, and at Germantown Benjamin Franklin and other citizens held a parley with them and persuaded them to return home. The Indians were ordered to New York, and William Logan and Joseph Fox, the barrack master, gave them blankets and accompanied them as far as Trenton, but they were sent back. This incursion from the back settlements so alarmed the community that according to the journal kept by Samuel Foulke, "The house, Apprehensive of ye prenicious Consequences which wou'd accrue to the Community from such daring acts of inhumanity & Contempt of All Laws, Divine, Moral, Civil & Military, as the bloody Massacre at Lancaster, if the Miscreant perpetrators were not brou't to Condign Punishment,—prepared a bill for passing a Law to Apprehend them & bring them to trial before ye Judges of Oyer & Term'r in Philada." This bill was framed by Benjamin Franklin, Joseph Fox and John Morton.

The name of Joseph Fox stands third in the list of signers of the Non-importation Agreement in 1765.

This summary does not begin to enumerate all of Mr. Fox's activities as a representative. The minutes show him taking part in a large majority of the measures which came before the House. Small matters as well as great received attention. He was on committees to regulate the size of loaves of bread, to regulate the nightly watch of the city, to consider the petition against the firing of guns on New Year's Eve, etc.

But the long years in the Assembly came to an end at last. The election returns, October, 1772, do not show the name of Joseph Fox. Benjamin Franklin writing from London to Abel James under date of December 2, 1772, says:

"I do not at this Distance understand the Politics of your last Election, why so many of the Members declin'd Service, and why yourself and Mr. Fox were omitted (which I much regret) while Goddard was voted for by so great a number. Another Year I hope will set all right. The People seldom continue long in the wrong, when it is nobody's Interest to mislead them. * * * And tho' it may be inconvenient to your private Affairs to attend Publick Business, I hope neither you nor Mr. Fox will thro' Resentment of the present Slight decline the Service when again called upon by your Country."

When it became necessary to erect barracks in Philadelphia for housing the soldiery, the House resolved, on May 3, 1758, "that Joseph Fox be made Barrack Master, with full power to do and perform every matter and thing which may be requisite for the comfortable accommodation of his Majesty's troops within the Barracks lately erected in the city." This position he held until the time of the Revolution. On November 1, 1775, the Assembly directed that Mr. Miles and Mr. Dougherty should deliver to Joseph Fox, barrack master, the order that required him hereafter to comply with such orders as the Committee of Safety should issue as to providing necessaries and quartering the troops. "These directions mark the period when, from the occupancy of the regular British troops the barracks passed into the tenancy of the soldiers who were opposed to them." Mr. Fox replied that the barracks would be ready for the troops in about ten days. His salary as barrack-master was paid to February, 1776. Major Lewis Nicola succeeded to the position as early as the middle of March of that year. Until the delivery of the orders, as above, Mr. Fox appears to have had unlimited authority in this position. From time to time there were reported sums spent for disbursements of clothing, firewood, candles, vinegar, small beer, bedding and the like; for quarters put up and furnished for the officers, etc., but more frequently the amounts expended were given without detail. In testimony of the manner in which these duties were performed is the following:

"July 23, 1774. Mr. Speaker laid before the House a Letter from Major Hamilton, Commanding Officer at the Barracks of this city, which was read by order, and is as follows:

Philadelphia, July 21, 1774.

Sir: I take the liberty to inform you that his Majesty's troops under my command stand much in need of the aid of the Legislature of this Province; their bedding utensils and apartments, require inspection and want repairs. I have had the pleasure of knowing this Barrack these seven years, and shall always be happy in declaring, that no troops have been better supplied, nor any applications from commanding officers more politely attended to than here; from which I am encouraged to hope, that the House of Assembly will, during this sitting order the necessary inspection, and afford such a supply as their generosity and judgment shall dictate. I have the honour to be, with great respect,

Your most obedient humble servant,

Isaac Hamilton."

When barracks were established at Lancaster, Mr. Fox was the first barrack-master appointed. The active part he took in the preparation for the struggle at the time of the Revolution is evidenced in the minutes of the Committee of Safety. On August 18, 1775, it is recorded that "Joseph Fox, one of the Commissioners for this County, waited on this Board acquainting them that it was found impossible to get completed in any reasonable time the firelocks for this County, unless it be permitted that they make use of such locks as they can procure." On October 7, 1775, it is reported that a copy of yesterday's minutes of the Board relative to the making of the arms ordered by the Assembly was presented to Joseph Fox, who assured them that he would communicate it to the Board of Commissioners and Assessors, and that he would use his best endeavors to promote the necessary business. On the 23rd of the same month Mr. Fox reported that he was ready and desirous to employ persons to make the number of firelocks required by vote of Assembly, but could not get workmen to undertake to make them. He afterward made application for five hundred pounds to advance to the gunsmiths.

When Paul Revere, after his famous ride from Boston, reached Philadelphia, May 20, 1774, a meeting was called at the City Tavern, where a Committee was appointed to act as a general committee of correspondence, and also particularly to write to the people of Boston assuring them of sympathy, commending their firmness, declaring their cause to be that of all the colonies, and promising to stand fast for the right. This committee consisted of John Dickinson, William Smith, Edward Pennington, Joseph Fox, John Nixon, and others. The next day they delivered a letter to Mr. Revere to take back to Boston.

Christopher Marshall informs us that Joseph Fox was spokesman for the committee which, January 18, 1775, waited on the Carpenters' Company for the use of their Hall for the Meeting of the Provincial Committee. The price asked was ten shillings a day. Marshall also writes under date of October 4, 1776: "Some day this week Joseph Fox and John Reynolds refused to take the Continental Money for large sums due them by bond, mortgage, etc., as it is said." Perhaps this is why, in Scharf and Westcott's "History of Philadelphia," it is said that Joseph Fox developed Tory proclivities. On the other hand, Robert Morton, who kept a diary in Philadelphia in 1777, while the city was occupied by the British, writes on November 22: "They have destroyed most of the houses along the lines except William Henry's, which remains entire and untouched, while J. Fox and Dr. Moner and several others are hastening to ruin."

There is no evidence that Mr. Fox had taken part in public affairs for some time before he took the oath of allegiance to the State of Pennsylvania on the 25th of July, 1777. It was in form as follows: "We, the subscribers, do swear (or affirm) that we renounce and refuse all allegiance to George Third, King of Great Britain, his heirs and successors, and that we will be faithful and bear true allegiance to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania as a free and independent State, and that we will not at any time do or cause to be done anything that will be prejudicial or injurious to the freedom and independence thereof, as declared by Congress, and also that we will discover and make known to someone Justice of the Peace of the said State all treasons and conspiracies which we now know or hereafter shall know to be formed against this or any of the United States of America." His son Joseph subscribed to the same two days later.

Strong as the above may seem, it was concluded that it did not cover all the ground required. In the autumn of the following year, both Joseph Fox, Gentleman, and Joseph Fox, Jr., subscribed to this form: "I (the subscriber hereof) do solemnly and sincerely declare and swear (or affirm) that the State of Pennsylvania is, and of right ought to be a free, sovereign and Independent State, and I do forever renounce and refuse all allegiance, subjection and obedience to the King or Crown of Great Britain; and I do further swear (or solemnly, sincerely and truly declare and affirm) that I never have since the Declaration of Independence directly or indirectly aided, assisted, abetted or in any wise countenanced the King of Great Britain, his generals, fleets, armies or their adherents in their claims upon these United States, and that I have ever since the Declaration of Independence thereof demeaned myself as a faithful citizen and subject to this or someone of the United States, and that I will at all times maintain and support the freedom sovereignty and independence thereof, so help me God."

In 1777, while the British occupied Philadelphia, the city was for a time so closely surrounded that the troops suffered for want of blankets and provisions, in order to procure which a petition to the citizens was signed by a great number of the residents who had remained in the city, Joseph Fox being among them.

In contrast with the more serious occupations of Mr. Fox, are the mentions found in Hiltzheimer's Diary. Under date of December 30, 1765: "Dined at Garlick Hall on invitation of Robert Erwin, with Joseph Fox, Thomas Willing, William Parr, Joseph Wharton," etc., and through this Diary are many mentions of Joseph Fox's meeting with the men of his time in social converse. One dinner was given at a rather peculiar place, for, August 20, 1766, Hiltzheimer records that Robert Erwin gave a beefsteak dinner at the Bettering House to J. Fox, Jacob Lewis, etc. The Bettering House was a kindlier name for the Alms House in the early Philadelphia Quaker Days. On January 1st, 1767, "Very, very cold, Delaware frozen over. Three sleigh loads of us went to Darby to Joseph Rudolphs—Joseph Fox, Robert Smith, Robert Erwin and wife, etc.," and on February 27, Hiltzheimer, Fox and others went to a barbecue at Robert Smith's. Under date of September 27, 1770: "This afternoon went to Town meeting at State House, where it was agreed that further non-importation was necessary, a few articles only excepted. Joseph Fox, who was chairman, requested Charles Thompson to speak for him." This request was certainly not because of any lack on his part, but in recognition of Charles Thompson's remarkable ability. The meeting was called in response to an advertisement which was published in the papers and distributed in hand bills around the city and suburbs. The call was as follows: "Many respectable Freeholders and Inhabitants of this City, justly alarmed at the Resolutions formed by a Number of the Dry Goods Importers, on Thursday last, at Davenport's Tavern, which reflect dishonour on this City and Province, earnestly request the Freeman of this City and County to meet in the State-house, this Afternoon, at 3 o'Clock, to consider and determine what is proper to be done to vindicate the Honour of this City, and to avert the danger that threatens their Country." In consequence of the advertisement, "a large Body of respectable Inhabitants assembled at the Time and Place appointed, and having unanimously chosen Joseph Fox, Esq., Chairman," they passed nine resolutions, the first of which was, "That the Claim of Parliament to tax the Colonies, and particularly the Act imposing Duties on Tea, &c., for the Purpose of raising a Revenue in America, is subversive of the constitutional Rights of the Colonies."

On October 20, 1770, Hiltzheimer again dined at Greenwich Hall with Joseph Fox, Samuel Swift, John Cadwalader, John Biddle and others. Unfortunately there is a lapse in the diary by which we probably lost much that would have been of interest. When the entries again begin we find the dinners still continued at intervals. "On November 6, 1773—Went down with Mr. Lawrence and Allen to Robert Erwin's place called Primfield, to dine on beefsteaks with a number of gentlemen," of whom was Joseph Fox.

At Greenwich Hall, that favorite resort, Mr. Fox dined with others, February 5, 1774, and three days later Mr. Hiltzheimer invited Timothy Matlack and Joseph Fox to go with him to see weighed the carcass of his great six-year-old steer, Roger. The weight, we are told, was 1332 pounds. On February 12, Mr. Fox was one of the guests at Mullins', on the Schuylkill, where they dined on "Roger" beefsteaks. On March 1, of the same year, Joseph Fox, Michael Hillegas and others went to Province Island to attend the vendue of Samuel Penrose and dined at the Ferry House. The last item in this connection which the Diary gives is under date of September 10, 1774, when a part of the new goal opposite the State House was raised. Joseph Fox and Edward Duffield, the managers, gave the workmen a supper and subsequently asked a few of their friends to dine with them in the northeast corner of the building.

Joseph Fox was an early member of the Fort St. David's Fishing Company, a social club of the times, afterwards merged with the State of Schuylkill Fishing Company, an organization which still exists.

Trivial matters these, perhaps, yet they serve to complete the picture and give a sense of nearness to the life and times of which they treat.

It is from Hiltzheimer and similar sources that must be gleaned anything of the personal life of Joseph Fox, for he left no records, and indeed, as far as is known, there is not even a letter written by him in existence; some signatures to public documents and a few pieces of furniture owned by him are the only things that can now be associated with him and his life of many activities.

Joseph Fox was a member of Society of Friends at the time of his marriage, and his death is noted in their Meeting records, but in 1756, when a number of the Quaker members resigned from Assembly, Fox was not among them. He was evidently remonstrated with by the meeting, for he is recorded as "having violated our testimony against war," and was disowned in consequence on 4mo., 30, 1756.

A side light is thrown on the character of Joseph Fox by letters of James Tilghman and William Allen to Thomas Penn. In 1766 Mr. Tilghman writes:

"Honored Sir

"A case has lately occurred, the first of the kind since I had the Secretary's Office, in which I must begg leave to trouble you for your Direction—

"Mr. Joseph Fox, a Member of the Assembly, a person of some Influence in the City, and I believe at present not indifferent to the Government, a good many years ago, purchased some old Rights of Liberty Lands * * * and now he applies for a warrant to take up the Liberty Lands * * * I shall not do anything in the affair until I can be instructed. * * * Mr. Fox pressed the matter very much, and thought hard to wait an Answer from you, and intimated a design to do himself Justice, upon which some Warmth passed between us, since which I have not heard of the matter. I shall be obliged for your instructions as soon as it may be convenient to you."

Whether Thomas Penn paid attention to this or, (as was the custom with the descendants of the Founder,) he left the matter to right itself, we do not know, but Fox, having made his claim, did not suffer it to rest, for William Allen, two years later, writing from Philadelphia, February 27, 1768, on the subject says:

"Sir:

"Since writing a long letter by this opportunity I have recollected something that has frequently been the subject of conversation between Mr. Tilghman and me, which he says he mentioned to you some time since, and on which he promised again to write to you, and desired me to do the same, which is an application to the office from Mr. Joseph Fox, who was Speaker of the Assembly two years ago. The case stands thus. He conceiving that he had right to use some liberty-land had made a bargain with a man who has overplus lands within his lines, and having improved the land, and not caring to have any future disputes was desirous to buy rights to cover the overplus.

"It seems the liberty-land of some old right belonging to Mr. Fox had not been surveyed within the liberty, but, as it is said, was included in the surveys made in the usual way in other parts of the Country, which fact Mr. Fox conceives no way clear, but admitting it had been so, he conceives, and is so told by his lawyer, that by the words of your father's grants, the purchasers are intitled to lots on liberty land. There are precedents both ways in the office; Though, of late, chiefly again him. He is a man of wealth, but no way avaritious, of great spirit, and esteemed a very honest man; he at present heartily wishes he never had been entangled with the bargain; but as he has entered into it, he thinks his reputation is concerned in the affairs, as he may be reflected on of having sold lands for which he had no title, for which reason he has it much at heart to compleat his bargain on the foot of the claim he makes. * * *

"The precedent of your allowing him to laying his rights in the manner he desires cannot be injurious to your interest, as that matter is now over, but may rather be of service with regard to overplus-land in other parts of the Country, as that a man of his Character Thought it but right to cover Overplus land with other rights.

"I would not have presumed to have troubled you on this head, but as I have, and perhaps for some short time longer may be engaged in our Political disputes, and Mr. Fox has zealously Cooperated with me in our Assembly in opposing the extravagant conduct of a malignant party among us, I think he has in this great merit; he formerly had been as well as many others, lead away by the specious pretences of that party. But for near four years past, having seen into their designs, he has frequently told them that their schemes were so bad that an honest man could not act with them. He has shown himself, to the great regret of the party, one of the warmest friends of the Government; was greatly instrumental in restoring peace for this two years past, for which they outed him from the Speaker's chair, and he is at present, except myself, the most obnoxious to them of any person: They have this present session used many arts to bring him into their measures, fawned, cajold and threatened him, but he laughs them to scorn, and in our late disputes opposed their violent and truly ridiculous measures with a becoming zeal.

"I need not hint to you that in Government affairs some things may be done prudentially, and I hope and request that this matter may be seen at least in this light, and that an honest man, though he should be mistaken in what he conceives to be his right, should be rather encouraged than otherwise, to persist in his duty.

"I should not have presumed to have said so much upon this head, but I conceive your readily assenting to his application may be of use to your friends and tend to strengthen their hands, and can be no way prejudicial to you."

The will of Joseph Fox was dated April 20, 1779, at which time he was "in good bodily health." It was proven, March 22, 1780. His death is recorded in Friends' Meeting records, and he was probably buried in their grounds.

GEORGE FOX, (Joseph, Justinian,) born November 27, 1759; died September, 1828. Married (first) in Philadelphia Meeting, November 25, 1789, Mary Pemberton, born March 25, 1771, died July 2, 1801, only daughter of Charles and Esther (House) Pemberton; married (second), October 3, 1803, Mary, who died March 28, 1822, daughter of Philemon and Mary (Cadwalader) Dickinson.

George Fox graduated from University of Pennsylvania in 1780. In 1784 he was made a member of the Philosophical Society; in 1789-91, 1812-28, he was a trustee of the university; and in 1800 represented the city in Assembly. In 1799 he was one of the directors of Bank of the United States, and probably in other years also.

Townsend Ward, in his "Second Street and Second Street Road and its Associations," gives the following account of "Champlost," home of George Fox, which lies half a mile from the York Road and near the present Fern Rock station on the Reading Railroad:

"Half a mile west of our route, is Champlost, a charming place, where the Fox family have long lived. In 1722 it became the property of James Portues by whose will, in 1743, it went to Joseph Fox, whose town house, 48 N. Third Street, now bears the two nos. 46 and 48 N. Third Street. * * * In 1782 his son Joseph M. Fox succeeded to the property, and on his death in 1784 it was inherited by his brother George, who held it until his death in 1828, when it went to his children. * * *

"On his travels abroad he (George Fox) was a long time in France, and there, in 1780, at the dinner-table at the chateau of the Count de Champlost, was seized with illness. He was removed at once to Paris, and after a time, died, as was supposed, and was consigned to the care of the Capuchins to be buried. A little warmth in his hands being perceptible, led to the application of restoratives by which he was revived. On his return he gave to this beautiful seat the name of the French place he had cause to remember so well."

George Fox was at one time owner of the largest part of the Franklin papers. (See introduction to Smyth's "Life of Benjamin Franklin," from which the following account is taken.) Franklin by his will bequeathed all his manuscripts and papers to William Temple Franklin, his grandson, who had acted as his secretary in Paris, and who was very dear to him. He seems to have entertained an exaggerated notion of William Temple's abilities, and to have believed him capable of properly sorting, arranging and editing these multitudinous papers and giving them permanent literary form. But William Temple Franklin had neither literary faculty or historic sense; he was indolent and timid, and was aghast at the magnitude of the task before him. He culled out what he imagined to be the most important of the manuscripts and carried them to London with the apparent intention of devoting himself to his editorial task.

The papers left by him in Philadelphia, by far the greater part of the whole collection, he bequeathed to his friend George Fox, from whose son, Charles P. Fox, they came to The American Philosophical Society, where they are now carefully guarded. The announcement of the intention to make the society custodian of these historical documents was made in a letter from Charles P. Fox to John Vaughan, Librarian, September 17, 1840: "Upon conversing with my sisters respecting the papers of Dr. Franklin, bequeathed by William T. Franklin, Esq., to my father, we have concluded they cannot be better disposed of than by presenting them to the society of which he was the founder.

Not all of these papers, however, went to the American Philosophical Society, for after the bulk of them had been delivered some still remained for many years in a garret over the stable at Champlost. About 1862 Miss Fox, who was probably ignorant of their historical importance, gave orders that they should be sold for old paper; but fortunately Mrs. Holbrook, who was visiting Miss Fox at the time, saw the papers being carried out and remonstrated. They were brought back, all but one unlucky barrel, which had already gone to the mill. Miss Fox retained some and gave the rest—a generous trunkfull—to Mrs. Holbrook. From her they descended to her son, George O. Holbrook, from whom they were purchased, 1903, through the efforts of Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, and deposited in the Library of University of Pennsylvania.

SAMUEL MICKLE FOX (Joseph, Justinian), born in Philadelphia, October 4, 1763; died there April 30, 1808; married, November 27, 1788, at Market Street Meeting-house, Sarah Pleasants, born November 3, 1767; died February 3, 1825; daughter of Samuel and Mary (Pemberton) Pleasants.

Samuel M. Fox was so impressed with a belief in the ultimate value of the land in the northwestern part of the state, which came into the market after the Indian treaties of 1784 and 1785, that he sold Philadelphia real estate and purchased largely of what were then known as back-hands. At his death, one hundred and eighteen thousand acres, not including his land in Venango, now Clarion county, were divided. In what is now Clarion county there were a number of warrants granted to George and Samuel M. Fox between 1785 and 1789. About 1795 they took out eight one-thousand-acre warrants, seven of which lay along the Allegheny, north of the Clarion River. These were patented in 1796 and became the sole property of Samuel M. Fox. Much of the land was afterwards disposed of, but a considerable portion of the original purchase at the confluence of the Allegheny and Clarion rivers is still a family possession. The story of its development belongs to a later generation.

Samuel M. Fox was an incorporator of bank of Pennsylvania in 1793, and in 1796 became its president, which position he held until his death. In 1796 he was a member of Select Council of Philadelphia, and a member of a committee to take into consideration the finances of the city, etc., whose report of the then sources of the city revenue is contained in a small pamphlet of much interest. He also served on one or more of the "watering" committees of Philadelphia, and was at one time one of the trustees of University of Pennsylvania.

JOSEPH MICKLE FOX (Samuel M., Joseph, Justinian), born Philadelphia, October 25, 1789; died February 12, 1845; married, April 6, 1820, Hannah, born Philadelphia, February 6, 1790; died November 11, 1869; daughter of George and Sarah (Fishbourne) Emlen.

Joseph M. Fox was admitted to Philadelphia Bar September 7, 1812. At the time of his marriage he was practicing his profession in Bellefonte, Centre county, Pennsylvania, but shortly thereafter removed to Meadville, Pennsylvania. He purchased from the trustees under his father's will, twelve tracts, comprising thirteen thousand acres of land in western part of the state. In 1827, with his wife and son, he settled in the wild, sparsely settled country on one of these tracts, at the junction of the Allegheny and Clarion rivers, where a house was erected and improvement of the land was begun. An attempt was made to plant a town there, which was not then successful, but the name of Foxburg clung to the spot until the town grew, years afterwards. At that time Shippensburg, sixteen miles away, was the nearest post office. Joseph M. Fox was elected state senator in 1829, and nominated but not elected in 1830 and 1843.

The only child of Joseph Mickle and Hannah (Emlen) Fox, was:—

SAMUEL MICKLE FOX, b. Phila., June 29, 1821; d. Dec. 25, 1869; m. Mary Rodman Fisher.

GEORGE FOX, M. D. (Samuel M., Joseph, Justinian), born Philadelphia, May 8, 1806; died there December 27, 1882; married in Friends' Meeting at Bellefonte, Pennsylvania, September 25, 1850, Sarah Downing Valentine, born Bellefonte, February 20, 1825, died February 9, 1888; daughter of George and Mary (Downing) Valentine.

George Fox was a birthright member of Society of Friends, and during his residence in Philadelphia of nearly half a century, he was a constant attendant at meetings of the Society. When sixteen years old he entered University of Pennsylvania, and graduated in 1825, dividing the class honors with his lifelong friend and comrade, Adolph E. Borie, who was at one time a member of President Grant's cabinet. Upon his graduation from the university, George Fox began the study of medicine and took his degree in 1828. He at once became resident physician of the Pennsylvania Hospital, where he devised an apparatus for treatment of a fractured clavicle, which has since come into general use, being described and recommended in the best text books on surgery.

In 1831 Dr. Fox was elected a fellow of the College of Physicians. He was an active member of its Building Committee and took part in the selection and purchase of the present site of the college and in the erection of the building.

At the time of the formation of the American Medical Association, and for several years afterwards, Dr. Fox was prominent in advancing its interests and furthering its objects. On the organization of the Wills Hospital he was elected one of its surgeons, and later became a manager of that institution. He was also appointed one of the visiting surgeons of the Pennsylvania Hospital, and was surgeon of St. Joseph's Female Asylum, 1838-54.

Dr. Fox contributed largely to various medical journals, his first paper appearing in North American Journal of Medicine and Surgery, 1831. One of the most notable of the articles from his pen was a biographical notice of Dr. Joseph Parish, which was read before the College of Physicians in 1846.

Dr. Fox took a very active part in the successful management of the vast tracts of wild, wooded lands left by his father, and for years was trustee of all the parties in interest, which position he held up to the time of his death. In 1854 he relinquished his professional work. A couple of years later he purchased a tract of land in Bensalem township, Bucks county, on the Delaware River. The river front was divided into two parts, known respectively as "Chestnutwood" and "Traveskan." On Chestnutwood he built in 1856-7, the large stone house where he lived up to the time of his death, and at the same time his sisters built a similar house on Traveskan. These properties are still in possession of the family.

Issue of Dr. George and Sarah D. (Valentine) Fox:—

He was a conservative and successful investor and estates increased in value rapidly under his management. Joseph Mickle Fox entered Medical Department of University of Pennsylvania, and graduated with degree of M. D. in 1877. He practiced his profession for several years, residing at Torresdale, Philadelphia, and later at Leesburg, Virginia. He was surgeon of Out-Patient Department of Pennsylvania Hospital, the Children's Hospital of Philadelphia, and the University Hospital; he has been a frequent contributor to medical and scientific journals. His skill as a surgeon is evinced by the fact that he performed the first successful case of abdominal section for a gunshot wound, in Philadelphia. Samuel M. Fox graduated from University of Pennsylvania 1841, was admitted to Philadelphia Bar on June 11, 1844, and was entering upon the practice of his profession which he relinquished when his father's death brought to him other duties in the management of his mother's affairs. He was a man of scholarly instincts and great culture, of a retiring and contemplative disposition; he had no desire for the notoriety of public life, and was devoid of political ambition, although during the Civil War his pronounced views made him in his district a leader and a strong advocate for the cause of the Union. In 1861 he was Republican candidate for state senator from twenty-eighth district, composed of Jefferson, Forrest, Elk and Clarion counties, and although running far ahead of the rest of the party ticket, was defeated, his district being heavily Democratic.

When, in 1865, petroleum was discovered on the Allegheny River, near Oil City, wells were drilled at and near Foxburg and oil was found in paying quantities. Foxburg later became a prominent oil point, and the town of Foxburg, situated a mile and a half from the Fox residence, had its origin. No land was then, nor has been since sold from the estate, but all settlers build on leased ground, the owners holding absolute control.

William Logan Fox, at the time of his father's death, was at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, at Troy, N. Y., from which he graduated as civil engineer. He then spent a year in Europe, and on his return with the assistance of the trustees under his father's will, took up the management of the business at Foxburg. He built and was president of the Foxburg, St. Petersburg, and Clarion Railway, now part of the system of the Pittsburg and Western Railroad. He took a deep interest in politics and in support of his party started a weekly newspaper at Foxburg. Was a member of the Electoral College of Pennsylvania which voted for Garfield in 1880, but died before it met. At the time of his death he was Chairman of Clarion County Republican Committee;

HOLME.

THOMAS HOLME was born in the year 1624; although a great part of his life was spent in Ireland, there is little doubt that his birthplace was in England, most likely in Yorkshire. His parents, whose names are now unknown, appear to have been of good position and family, and Thomas Holme was styled "gentleman" by right of birth. Several facts lead to the supposition that his father belonged to a younger branch of the family of Holme of Huntington, in the county of York. Thomas Holme used an armorial seal on his official papers, corresponding with the arms of this family, which are described in Burke's General Armory as: "Argent, a chevron azure, between three chaplets gules." The shield on Thomas Holme's seal is the same surrounded by a bordure with ten roundels, the bordure being used to distinguish the branch of the family.

While Thomas Holme was quite a young man, the Civil War between the King and Parliament broke out; he took the side of the latter and became a captain in its army. He is said to have taken part in the Hispaniola expedition under Admiral Penn in 1654, either as one of the naval officers, who were largely taken from the army, or as an officer in the land forces under General Venables; his intimacy with the Penns and Crispins in after years might have had its beginning here, and gives a coloring of truth to the statement. He was in Ireland in 1659, and was then a member of the Society of Friends. It is reasonably presumed that he obtained lands in Ireland during the settlement of Cromwell's soldiers there in 1655. There was a Captain Holmes (Holme?) in Sir Hardress Waller's regiment, whose company was given lands in the Barony of Shilmalier, county Wexford, in which county Thomas Holme afterwards resided, at least temporarily. In 1656 many of the parliamentary officers in Ireland joined the Society of Friends. The name of Thomas Holme occurs in the grants under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation passed after the Restoration.

Thomas Holme became an important man among the Friends in Ireland, and traveled extensively over the central and southern parts of that country, attending meetings of the Society. In many places he encountered the opposition of the authorities to his religion, and received abuse and hard treatment from those that had formerly been his companions in arms. In 1659 a number of prominent Friends in Ireland published an address to the English Parliament, reciting their persecutions. It is entitled, "To the Parliament of England, who are in place to do Justice, and to break the Bonds of the Oppressed. A Narrative of the Cruel, and Unjust Sufferings of the People of God in the Nation of Ireland, Called Quakers." London, Printed for Thomas Simmons at the Bull and Mouth near Aldersgate, 1659. It is signed by Thomas Holme and fifty-two others, among them Samuel Clarridge and Robert Turner, both afterwards First Purchasers in Pennsylvania, William Edmondson, the well-known preacher, and some former officers under Cromwell, most of them sufferers mentioned in the narrative. This address tells that "Thomas Holme (late a Captain in the Army), Charles Collins, and several of the Lord's people, being in a peaceable meeting at Wexford, had their meeting forcibly broken, and many of them violently haled and turned out of the Town, by order from Edward Withers, Mayor then." "Thomas Loe, Thomas Holme, William Blanch, and John Wren, being in Cashell on their Journey, were apprehended by Colo. Lehunt's order, and brought before him, and he commanded the Sould. (violently) to turne them out of the town, and to cut their pates, three of them were not suffered to go into the town again for their horses." Thomas Phelps of Limerick, besides other losses, "had his house broken open and rifled with a Guard of Sould. from the Governour (Col. Ingoldesby) which Guard by the same Order rifled the houses of Richard Piercy and Thomas Holme, and took away what books and papers they pleased." In Besse's "Sufferings" it is stated that in 1660 the meetings of Friends in Dublin were frequently molested; a number of persons, of whom Thomas Holme was one, were taken from them and committed to Newgate by order of Robert Dee, then Mayor of the City; Samuel Claridge and Robert Turner were also of this number. In 1661, Thomas Holme, Robert Turner and others were taken from a meeting in Dublin and committed to Newgate, by order of Hubert Adrian, Mayor. In an address of Friends in Ireland to the Lord Lieutenant and Council, in 1673, (quoted by Charles Evans, M. D. in "Friends in 17th Century") occurs the following: "In the county of Wexford, Thomas Holme, having about £200 due to him from one Captain Thornhill, for which judgement was obtained against him in common law, was subpoenaed into Chancery by Thornhill, where he well knew Thomas could not answer on oath; and so this Friend lost his debt." In 1672, Thomas Holme and Abraham Fuller of Ireland, published "A Brief Relation of some part of the Suffering of the True Christians, the People of God (called in scorn Quakers) in IRELAND for these last 11 years, viz. from 1660 until 1671. Collected by T. H. and A. F." In 1731 there was published a work called "A Compendious VIEW of Some Extraordinary SUFFERINGS of the People called QUAKERS both in Person and Substance, in the Kingdom of Ireland from the year 1655 to the End of the Reign of King George the First. In 3 parts. Dublin, Printed by and for Samuel Fuller, at the Globe, in Meath-street." Part I, according to Smith's Catalogue, "Contains the true Grounds and Reasons of their Conscientious Dissent from other Religious Denominations in Sundry Particulars," and was by Fuller and Holme; they were both deceased at the time of this publication, and it was probably the same as their work of 1672. The second part consisted of examples of sufferings, and the third was a synopsis of the number of religious prisoners. These two books are very rare.

Thomas Holme's first appearance in Pennsylvania history is on April 18, 1682, when William Penn appointed him Surveyor-General of the Province. In his commission he is styled "Captain Thomas Holme of the City of Waterford in the Kingdom of Ireland." He sailed for Pennsylvania in the "Amity," which left the Downs, April 23, 1682, bringing with him his family, and also Silas Crispin (son of Captain William Crispin, who is said to have been the first Surveyor-General appointed by Penn, but died on his way to Pennsylvania in 1681), and John Claypoole, son of James Claypoole; the latter wrote from London (to his brother Norton in the country) in this month: "I have been at Gravesend with my son John, who has gone per the Amity, Richard Dimond, Master, for Pennsylvania, to be assistant to the general surveyor, whose name is Thomas Holmes, a very honest, ingenious, worthy Man." The historians, Proud, Gordon and Clarkson, say the "Amity" was one of the three ships that sailed in 1681, and that she was delayed by contrary winds and did not arrive until spring of the following year; other historians dispute this statement on the ground of her sailing in April, 1682. But the former were no doubt partially right, as to the "Amity" being one of the ships that sailed in the summer of 1681, and being delayed by contrary winds. It is likely that this is the vessel in which Captain William Crispin sailed for Pennsylvania, which, when in sight of the capes of Delaware, was blown off and put into Barbadoes, where Capt. Crispin died; it is quite possible that then, instead of continuing to Pennsylvania, she returned to England, carrying the news of Crispin's death, and then again sailed for Pennsylvania in April, 1682, bringing Holme, who had meanwhile been appointed Surveyor-General, and Silas Crispin, having probably been with his father and returned to England with the vessel, going out again in her. The "London Gazette," Monday, April 24, to Thursday, April 27, 1682, has: "Deal, April 23. This Morning the Ships in the Downs, outward bound, Sailed; among them were five bound for the East-Indies, and one for Pennsylvania."

Thomas Holme was one of the First Purchasers, and he was a member of the Free Society of Traders, and one of that society's committee of twelve to reside in Pennsylvania, appointed at their meeting in London on May 29, 1682. On his arrival in Pennsylvania, he and his family took up their residence at Shackamaxon, where there was a settlement of English Friends, who had come out in the preceding year. At first they stayed at the house of Thomas Fairman, who in this year sent a bill of charges to Wm. Penn, for lodging Capt. Holme and his two sons and two daughters. Holme brought a letter from Penn to the Indians, which said in regard to himself: "The man which brings this to you is my especial friend—sober, wise, and loving—you may believe him." He endorsed on the letter, "I read this to the Indians by Interpreter 6th mo. 1682. T. Holme." This letter without the endorsement is printed in Janney's Life of William Penn; there is a fac-simile in the Historical Society of Pennsylvania. The original was exhibited in the Penn Parlor, at the Sanitary Fair, Logan Square, Philadelphia, 1864. He was present at the first court held by Penn at New Castle, November 2, 1682, and also at the Great Treaty at Shackamaxon.

It has been stated that Holme was appointed one of the Commissioners for Settling the Colony, in place of William Crispin, deceased, and while no commission to him as such is extant to prove the statement, the fact remains that he acted with the other Commissioners in forwarding the settlement. The instructions to these Commissioners, dated September 30, 1681 (the original is in possession of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania), have often been printed and need not be repeated here. They were directed to William Crispin, Nathaniel Allen and John Bezar. Their commission is dated October 25, 1681, and names a fourth Commissioner, William Haigue. They were all, except the deceased Crispin, whose place Holme took, in Pennsylvania at the time of Holme's arrival. Their first duty was to choose a spot where navigation was best and large ships might lie close to the bank, the land being at the same time dry, high and healthy, and to lay out there ten thousand acres for the site of a great city. This proved to be a very difficult task, as no place could be found answering the requirements which would bear a city of such size. The Commissioners explored the country and Holme made a survey of the west bank of the Delaware, and they chose the site at the mouth of Dock Creek.

On Penn's arrival in the following October, he changed his ideas as embodied in the instructions, and had about two square miles, or 1280 acres, laid out for the city, which is the original part of the present city of Philadelphia. When the city of ten thousand acres was laid out, the Commissioners were to give every purchaser of 5000 acres a lot of one hundred acres in this town land, in accordance with the conditions and concessions to first purchasers issued by the Proprietary, July 11, 1681. When Penn changed his plan, a tract was surveyed adjoining the city proper, which was called the "liberties," and out of which the first purchasers were to have their two per cent., while in the city itself, they were to have only small lots. Josiah W. Smith, in the large foot-note on land tenure in his "Laws of Pennsylvania," says, "Not a single memorial can be found of this plan, nor any record of the alteration, or any written evidence of the consent of the inhabitants to the new arrangement; but a regular series of uniform facts, upon the books of the Land-Office, establish it beyond a doubt." The method of apportioning the liberty lands and city lots is fully described in the same foot-note. Reed, in the explanation to his map of the "liberties," 1774, quotes part of a letter from Holme, stating that Penn had instructed him not to give over 80 acres in the "liberties" on the east side of the Schuylkill to purchasers entitled to 100 acres. This direction Holme carried out. It was given because the lands east of the Schuylkill were considered more valuable; any purchaser who took his liberty land on the west side got his full proportion.

After Penn's decision was made, Holme, as Surveyor-General, laid out the city, extending from Cedar (now South) street to Vine street, and from the Delaware to the Schuylkill river, and, as appears by the plan, also including three squares beyond the latter, although no city lots were assigned on the west side of the Schuylkill. The lots were then apportioned to the purchasers, being drawn before William Markham, Thomas Holme, William Haigue and Griffith Jones, 7th mo. 9, 1682, they certifying to that effect on the list of lots and owners. Holme drew up a map or plan of the city which he called "A Portraiture of the City of Philadelphia;" this was printed in London in 1683 as part of a book entitled, "A Letter from William Penn, Proprietary and Governour of Pennsylvania, In America, to the Committee of the Free Society of Traders of that Province, residing in London Containing" etc. "To which is Added, An Account of the City of Philadelphia Newly laid out. Its Scituation between two Navigable Rivers, Delaware and Schuylkill with a Portraiture or Plat-form thereof, Wherein the purchasers lots are distinguished by certain numbers inserted, together with the Surveyor General's advertisement concerning the situation and extent thereof. Printed and sold by Andrew Sowle, at the Crooked-Billet, in Halloway-Lane, in Shoreditch, and at several stationers in London, 1683." This book contained: a letter from Penn describing the country and its inhabitants, native and foreign; Holme's plan of the city, divided into lots, which were numbered; an account of the city, being principally a list of the purchasers with the numbers of their lots on the plan; and Holme's description of the city, called "A short advertisement upon the situation and extent of the city of Philadelphia and the Ensuing platform thereof, by the Surveyor General." The plan, list of purchasers, part of Penn's letter, and the "short advertisement" were printed in the appendix of John C. Lowber's "Ordinances of the Corporation of the City of Philadelphia," Philadelphia, 1812, the plan being printed from the original plate, then in possession of Dr. George Logan, of Stenton. Philip Ford, one of the Free Society of Traders, wrote from London, 1st mo. 21, 1684-5, to Thomas Holme in Philadelphia, "As for the map of the city, it was needful it should be printed; it will do us a kindness, as we were at a loss for want of something to show the people." The plan, as published, did not long remain in effect. As early as 1684, all the streets west of Delaware Eleventh, had been moved eastward, and the Broad street was changed from 12th from each river, to 14th from Delaware, the next street west being 8th from Schuylkill; this second plan still remains unchanged except that several streets have been added west of Schuylkill Front street which was some distance back from the river. Reed, in the explanation to his map, 1774, says (and others have followed him), that this change was made by Benjamin Eastburn, who was Surveyor-General about 1740, but more recent investigations have shown that it was made as early as 1684, while Holme was still in office. This change did not effect the part between Delaware Eleventh and Delaware Front streets, which is still the same as on the "portraiture" of 1683.

When the plan of the city and assignment of lots there was finished, Holme turned his attention to the surveying of the country, and made a map of the Province, which was published in London under the name of "Map of the Improved Part of the Province of Pennsylvania in America Begun by Wil; Penn Proprietary & Governor thereof Anno 1681." It has a sub-heading: "A Map of the Province of Pennsylvania, Containing the three Countyes of Chester, Philadelphia & Bucks as far as yet surveyed and laid out, the divisions or distinctions made by the different coullers respect the settlements by way of townships, By Thos. Holme, Surveyr. Gen^l." It was "Sold by Robert Green at the Rose & Crown in Budgrow, And by John Thornton at the Platt in the Minories, London," and dedicated by them to William Penn. This map shows, in black and white, with colored lines for township lines, the settled portion of the Province, and the lands seated, with the owner's name on each tract; the township boundaries are nearly the same as afterwards laid down by juries appointed for that purpose, though not all of them are given names on the map. Geographically, it has a very fair degree of accuracy, except in the outlying districts, though the courses of some of the creeks as given by it are erroneous. The lines of the settlers' tracts are, in general, correct, as far as a map of small scale covering a large extent of territory could give them. There has been a great deal of uncertainty about the date of publication of Holme's map of the province, some writers asserting that it was published in 1684, while others argue that it was not published till much later, as it represents tracts, some of which were not laid out till as late as 1725, as shown by returns of survey and patents. The map is not dated, the only date on it being in the heading "Begun by Wil; Penn Proprietary and Governor thereof, Anno 1681," which, of course, does not refer to the time of printing it. The only tenable theory, in view of the conflicting evidences of the different parts of the map, is that there were several editions, the first showing the earlier surveys only (which are the tracts nearest the city), and the subsequent editions being printed from the same plates, on which the later surveys had been added without any alteration of the parts previously printed. It is certain that an edition was printed between the end of the year 1686 and the beginning of the year 1689, for the extract of Thomas Holme's letter of October, 1686 (printed with Dr. More's letter in 1687), ends thus: "I intend to send the Draught for a Map by the first—" ("opportunity" probably); and during a discussion on the bounds of Chester county by Governor Blackwell and the Council in their meeting 1st mo. 25, 1689, the Surveyor-General's Deputy was sent for, who showed the bounds of the county on the map, and the minutes of the Council say: "Twas observed by ye Governr and Council that ye mapp of The Province was the work of Thomas Holme, Surveyor Genell; that it was dedicated to ye Proprietor by ye Publisher; that many Coppys had been published in England and here in this Province." This settles the date of the first publication of the map some time in 1687 or 1688, and an advertisement in the London Gazette in May, 1688, evidently referring to this map, shows it to have been published by that time. That the date 1684 is too early is shown by the names attached to the tracts nearest the city (that is, the tracts earliest surveyed). Some of these were sold between 1684 and 1687 and the ownership attributed to them by the map corresponds to the latter date. One instance of this is Thomas Holme's own 600 acres in Byberry, which he sold to Nicholas Rideout in 1685; on the map it bears the name of Nicholas Rideout. This first edition could not have shown the bounds of lands that were surveyed at a later date, but copies preserved at the present time contain, as stated above, tracts that were laid out later; for instance, Laetitia Penn's Manor of Mount Joy, and William Penn, Jr.'s, Manor of Williamstadt, both taken up in 1704, Samuel Carpenter's great tract north of Moreland (now in Horsham), laid out in 1706, and others in the more distant parts, some of which were not surveyed before 1725, or even a few years later. Therefore these copies must be of an edition published about 1730, but from the original drawings filled in to that time, for the tracts near the city are still the same on these copies as they were earlier, notwithstanding that many of them had, in the meanwhile, been subdivided and had changed owners several times. The map as a whole represents different parts of the province at different dates, those nearest the city as they were in 1686, the more distant as they were laid out at intermediate periods, from that time to about 1730. Copies of the map may have been printed at any time between these two years, the original drawings remaining always unchanged, the newer surveys being added as they were made. The final edition, however, seems to be the only one that has survived; Harris's reduced copy and the Philadelphia Library copy, from which Smith's fac-simile was taken, both belong to it.

The Commissioners to settle the colony were also empowered to purchase lands from the Indians, but they do not seem to have exercised this right as a body. Markham purchased land near the Neshaminy from the Indians, the deed was dated July 25, 1682, but none of the Commissioners' names are subscribed to it. But Thomas Holme was present at most of the Indian treaties and had an important part in some of them. He was a witness to the deed, made June 23, 1683, from the Indian chiefs Essepenaïke and Swanpees to William Penn for lands between the Penepack and Neshaminy creeks, and also one dated 4th mo. 3, 1684, from Maughoughsin to Penn. In August, 1684, the old Commissioners were superseded by new ones with more limited powers, called the Commissioners of Property. Holme, however, continued to conduct purchases of land. A deed was made July 30, 1685, from the chiefs Shakhoppoh, Secane, Malibor and Tangoras to William Penn for lands bounded on the east by two lines both beginning at Conshohocken Hill, one running to Chester creek and the other to Penepack creek, then up each creek to its source and then back from both points two days' journey into the interior. This deed was, in its own words, "sealed and delivered to Thomas Holme, President of the Council," an office he held temporarily. At a meeting of the Council, 7th mo. 22, 1685, information having been given that body by Captain Cock, of the Indians' willingness to sell all their right to the land between Upland and "Apoaquinamy" (Appoquinimink, in the lower part of New Castle county) as far back as they had any claim, and that they proposed meeting at Widow Scallop's on the 29th instant to treat about the same, the Council ordered Captain Thomas Holme, John Symcock and the Secretary (William Markham) or any two of them to be at this place, with full power to treat and complete the purchase. A deed dated 8th mo. 2, 1685, from a number of Indian sachems for land between Duck Creek and Chester Creek, was sealed and delivered to Captain Thomas Holme, Surveyor-General. A pamphlet called "A letter from Dr. More, with Passages out of several Letters from Persons of Good Credit, Relating to the State and Improvement of the Province of Pennsylvania, Published to prevent false Reports. Printed in the Year 1687," contains an extract of a letter of October, 1686, from Thomas Holme, in which he says: "We have made three purchases of the Indians which added unto the six former sales, they made us, will, I believe, be Land enough for Planters for this Age." He then continues on the conduct of the Indians.

Thomas Holme was a member of the first Assembly of the Province, which began its session at Upland, December 4, 1682, Penn presiding. He was elected to represent Philadelphia county in the Provincial Council for one term of three years, 1683-85, and took a prominent part in its transactions, serving on several important committees. In the 1st mo. 1683 he was a member of a joint committee of the Council and Assembly to draw up the new Charter, or Frame of Government, which was passed and signed on 2nd mo. 2nd.

By letters dated 4th mo. 11th, 1683, William Penn appointed Christopher Taylor, James Harrison, Thomas Holme, and Thomas Wynne, Commissioners in his name, as Governor and Proprietary of the Province of Pennsylvania, to treat with the Governor and Council of West Jersey concerning the satisfaction he demanded of them in a letter of the same date, of which the Commissioners were bearers, for certain great wrongs and injustice done to them and his Province by some of the inhabitants of their colony. In the letter he complains that England was filled with rumors of wars between the inhabitants of Pennsylvania and Lord Baltimore's colony, of Lord Baltimore having claimed all the land from Upland to the Falls of Delaware, and of several having been killed in the conflict; that these rumors, being much talked of in London, discouraged many persons from purchasing land in Pennsylvania; he says that the starting of these reports had been traced to some of the inhabitants of West Jersey, and he demands satisfaction. His letter of instructions to the Commissioners bears the same date and directs them to demand particularly the punishment of Thomas Matthews, as the principal author of the rumors, either by fine or banishment or delivery of him to be tried in Pennsylvania. These Commissioners also had authority to settle with the Governor and Council of West Jersey about the trade on the river and the islands therein. As soon as the first business was finished they were to insist on Penn's title to the river and islands according to his grant. The West Jersey authorities sent an answer by Penn's Commissioners, dated Burlington, 4th mo. 16, 1683, containing an explanation from Thomas Matthews, and saying they were willing to be passive in regard to the river and islands. Four Commissioners of theirs (Thomas Budd, John Gosnell, Henry Stacy and Mark Newby) also came with the answer. The explanation was not acceptable to Penn, as he informed them in another letter from Philadelphia, 4th mo. 20, 1683, but he appears to have obtained no further satisfaction from them.

On 4th mo. 3rd, 1684, Thomas Holme, William Welch and Thomas Lloyd were appointed a committee to look into the actions of Lord Baltimore, and draw up a declaration to hinder his illegal proceedings (referring to threats of his agents to take settlers' lands from them unless they acknowledged Lord Baltimore to be their Proprietor). On 5th mo. 26, Thomas Lloyd, Thomas Holme and William Haigue were appointed to draw up a charter for Philadelphia to become a borough, with a Mayor and six Aldermen. About the middle of Holme's term, Penn sent a commission to the whole Council to act in his place as Governor; this was read at the meeting 6th mo. 18, 1684. In the last year of Holme's term, 1685, Thomas Lloyd, President of the Council, was absent a large part of the time and Holme was elected to act as President in his place, which he did at twenty-seven out of the fifty meetings held that year. Thomas Holme acted as President of the Council at the first meeting of the year, 1st mo. 30, and those immediately following 1st mo. 31, 2nd mo. 1st, 3rd, 4th and 6th; again 2nd mo. 25th and 28th; Lloyd presided at the next two, 3rd mo. 11th and 12th and on the 13th and 14th the Council met as a committee of the whole with Holme as Chairman. Holme was President at the consecutive meetings 4th mo. 11th, 13th, 18th, 19th; 5th mo. 3rd, 4th, 10th, 11th, 28th, 29th, and 6th mo. 19th, Lloyd being in New York; he returned and presided at nine meetings and then again went to New York, Holme presiding on 9th mo. 5th and 6th. Holme was again President at the consecutive meetings held 11mo. 9th, 15th, 16th and 12th mo. 1st and 3rd, 1685-6, the last being the last meeting of the year, with which Holme's term in the Council expired.

During his term in the Council, Holme was attending to his duties as Surveyor-General, and after its expiration, these duties kept increasing because of the rapid growth of the Province. He had deputies in each county, whose returns were made to him, and the whole work of laying out the settlers' tracts, locating towns, highways, etc., was under his direction. This made the office of Surveyor-General one of the most important in the Province. At first the Council did not understand whether Holme's commission applied only to the Province proper or whether it extended to the three lower counties or territories, but on 7th mo. 10, 1684, it decided that the management of the Surveyor-General's office of New Castle county should be put into the hands of Thomas Holme, with Thomas Pearson as his deputy. On October 14th, 1688, Penn issued a new commission to Holme to be Surveyor-General of the Province of Pennsylvania and the annexed counties of New Castle, Kent and Sussex, and the island and territories thereunto belonging, for life, his office in Philadelphia to be an office of record. Both Penn and Holme were in England at this time.

At the meeting of the Council, held 6th mo. 2, 1686, Thomas Holme was one of those recommended for appointment as Provincial Judges, but the commission was not issued to him. He continued to be selected when it was necessary to treat with the Indians. At the same meeting, complaint being made to the Council of violence done Nicholas Scull and his family by Indians, forcibly entering his house and carrying away his goods (further information being given that Nicholas Scull had, contrary to the law, sold them liquor, "whereby they were much Disordered, to ye notorious Disturbance of the neighboring Settlements"), the Council ordered Captain Thomas Holme, assisted by Captain Lace Cock, Zachariah Whitpain and such others as Captain Holme should approve, to inquire into the truth of the report and, if the Indians were guilty, to require them to make speedy satisfaction, leaving the manner of treating the Indians to the discretion of Captain Holme. In 1694 he was appointed one of the Commissioners of Property, which position he held until his death in the following year.

As already mentioned, when Thomas Holme first arrived in Pennsylvania, he and his family, consisting of two sons and two daughters, lived at Shackamaxon. After the city was laid out in 1682, he built a house on his lot at the northwest corner of Front and Mulberry (now Arch) streets and lived there until 1688. Mulberry street was first called Holme street, for Thomas Holme, but the name was changed to Mulberry by Penn. On a part of this lot farther up Front street, sold by Holme to the trustees appointed by the Friends' Meeting, the Bank Meeting House was built in 1685. Thomas Holme was one of those appointed by the meeting, 11th mo. 9, 1683-4, to select the site for the meetinghouse, the others being John Songhurst, Thomas Wynne, and Griffith Owen. This was a fine situation for a residence; the lot was a wide one, and as there were no buildings between Holme's house and the meetinghouse, nor on the east side of Front street, it commanded an uninterrupted view of the river. In 1688, Thomas Holme went to England. He must have gone over in September, for on the fourth of that month he signed a deed in Philadelphia, while his new commission as Surveyor-General, dated October 14, 1688, speaks of him as being then abroad. For a short time before he left he was living on his plantation of Well-Spring, in Dublin township, Philadelphia county; and on his return, probably about the end of 1689, he again resided there. About October, 1690, he again went to England. Before leaving he gave letters of attorney to his son-in-law, Silas Crispin, and three others, and in several deeds made by them in 1691, he is spoken of as being in London. This time he stayed until 1694, and when he came back, went to live at Well-Spring, continuing there until his death, which occurred in March or April, 1695.

In his will, dated 12th mo. 10, 1694 (o. s.), he styles himself "of Dublin township in Philadelphia County, aged full seventie years." It was admitted to probate, April 8, 1695. To his daughter Eleanor Moss he gave power to dispose, at her decease, of "the one moiety of the £150 in the hands of Patrick Robinson," in compensation for her resignation to him of all her right in Well-Spring Plantation, provided that she gave the said moiety to one of her sister Hester Crispin's children. To the children of Richard Holcombe, by his daughter Sarah, thirty pounds, to be paid out of his one thousand acres beyond Hilltown, Philadelphia county, when sold. To his niece, Susannah James, ten pounds for herself and children. To his granddaughter, Sarah Crispin, five hundred acres called Pyne-Spring Plantation, in the upper Dublin township (not the present Upper Dublin), Philadelphia county, to be enjoyed and possessed by her after the death of her parents, Silas and Hester Crispin. To his granddaughters, Rebecca and Marie Crispin, one thousand acres "joining on this side of Hilltown," to be divided between them, his executor having power to convert it into money if he thought best. To his grandsons, William and Thomas Crispin, when of age, fifty pounds apiece; and to his granddaughters, Eleanor and Esther Crispin, twenty pounds each, when of age or at marriage. He left ten pounds "for some charitable purpose in Dublin township" either a school or other purpose. From this bequest originated the Lower Dublin Academy, one of the noted institutions of the neighborhood (and which suggested the name for the village of Collegeville near by), and later the Thomas Holme Free Library of Holmesburg, also.

Before his death Captain Holme laid out one acre on his plantation in Dublin township as a burying-ground for himself and his descendants forever and he was buried in it. The land surrounding this lot was inherited by the children of Holme's daughter, Esther Crispin, who in 1723 divided the estate, reserving the one acre for the use of all. It thus became known in the locality as the "Crispin Burying Ground." In 1831 the heirs to this one acre were very numerous and widely scattered, so on January 22 of that year a number of them met at the house of Benjamin Crispin (whose land was part of the original Holme Plantation) and formed the "Crispin Burial Ground Community," to look after the same. In 1840 a bill was introduced by the same Benjamin Crispin, a member of the State Legislature, and passed by that body granting a charter to Benjamin Crispin, Paul Crispin, Robert C. Green, Thomas Creighton and James A. Creighton and their successors, under the title of the Crispin Cemetery Corporation, to take charge of the property. Their successors still hold this ground in trust for the descendants of Thomas Holme. In 1883 the trustees of the Lower Dublin Academy erected a small monument here over the grave of Captain Holme.

Thomas Holme married before he came to Pennsylvania, but his wife's name is not known. She probably died before 1682, as she did not accompany her husband to Pennsylvania. They had issue:

Sarah Holme, m. Richard Holcombe and remained in England;

Tryall Holme, came to Pa.; had Pyne-Spring Plantation on his father's map; witness to several important Indian deeds; d. s. p. before his father;

Michael Holme, came to Pa.; d. s. p. before his father;

Eleanor Holme, came to Pa. with her father. On Holme's map her name is on part of Well-Spring southwest of the Pennepack; by agreement made Jan. 14, 1694-5, she surrendered to her father all right in that plantation, he putting one hundred and fifty pounds at interest for her, in hands of Patrick Robinson; he mentions this sum in his will. Eleanor m. (first) Joseph Moss, by whom she had no issue. By his will, dated 7th mo. 23, 1687, Joseph Moss, "now of Well-Spring," left all estate and anything that might be due him from anyone in Europe or America to wife Eleanor, whom he named his executrix; witnesses were Michael Holme and Thomas Holme. She m. (second) Joseph Smallwood, had one dau. Sarah. They had dispute with Silas Crispin as to division of Thomas Holme's estate; after arbitration, Crispin had one thousand acres of Holme's unsurveyed lands laid off near Germantown, and conveyed it to them; they sold it to John Cadwalader, of Phila.

Sarah, only child of Joseph and Eleanor Smallwood, m. (first) John Thomas, of Phila. co., at Christ Church, Phila., Feb. 8, 1720; she m. (second) ——— Winthrop Westcomb, and went to Baltimore co., Md., where he probably lived previously; after his death she lived in Passyunk township, Phila. co., probably with her cousin, Sarah Hannis (granddaughter of Esther Crispin). While living there, on Jan. 14, 1745-6, she executed release, as only child and heiress of Eleanor (Holme) Smallwood, to heirs of her aunt Esther (Holme) Crispin of all her right to any part of Thomas Holme's estate undevise by his will, especially Well-Spring Plantation. She is not known to have had children by either husband.

Esther Holme (usually written Hester), came to Pa. with her father; m. 1683, Silas, son of Captain Wm. Crispin, formerly of English navy, and one of Proprietary's Commissioners for settling colony in Pa.

For some account of Thomas Holme's extensive land holdings (11,000 acres) see article on him in Pennsylvania Magazine of History and Biography (vol. xx., pp. 248-256). His principal city lot was the one his residence stood on at the corner of Front and Mulberry streets. It ran from Front four hundred and twenty-six feet along Mulberry to Second street, and one hundred and two feet on Front and Second. This lot carried with it a wharf property on the east side of Front street.

The town of Holmesburg, now absorbed in the city of Philadelphia, the site of which was covered by Thomas Holme's Well-Spring Plantation, was not named for Thomas Holme, whose descendants sold the property before it was a village. It was first called Washingtonville, and was named Holmesburg from John Holme, no relation to Thomas, who afterwards settled there.

CRISPIN FAMILY.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM CRISPIN, companion-in-arms and brother-in-law of Admiral Sir William Penn, and named by his nephew, William Penn, the great founder of Pennsylvania, as one of his first Commissioners of his new Province of Pennsylvania, was the ancestor of the Crispin family in America; but little is known of his ancestry further than that he belonged to an ancient and honorable family in Great Britain; and the part he took in affairs abroad during the time of England's Commonwealth, and in the events which led to the Restoration of King Charles II., also make him a person of some mark among the characters of that period.

An account of the Crispin family, written in 1792 by William Crispin, of Philadelphia (Commissary-General in the American army during the Revolution), a great-grandson of Captain William Crispin, says that the latter was one of Cromwell's train band, and afterwards captain of his guard, but that, finding that Cromwell deviated from his promises, he left him and went to sea with Admiral Penn. As this account has been found unreliable in several points which were not within the personal knowledge of the writer, we may presume it to be faulty in this particular also, for we have evidence that William Crispin had been following the sea for many years before he became an officer in the Commonwealth's navy. The same account states that he was descended from one of the two lords de Crispin who came to England with William the Conqueror; but though this is possible, as the name is uncommon, and evidently of Norman origin, the line of descent has never been traced, for even the names of William Crispin's parents were unknown to his great-grandson, and remain so to later generations. There were several families of the name among the landed gentry of some of the lower counties of England in his day, and he may have belonged to one of them, for he lived in a time when a great many masters of merchant-ships were men of good birth but small fortune, seeking a life of adventure combined with profit, which was always to be found at sea, but could not be had on land except in time of war.

In the Gentleman's Magazine, London, 1832, Part I., pp. 26-30, appears the following:

"TENANTS IN CHIEF OF DOMESDAY BOOK."

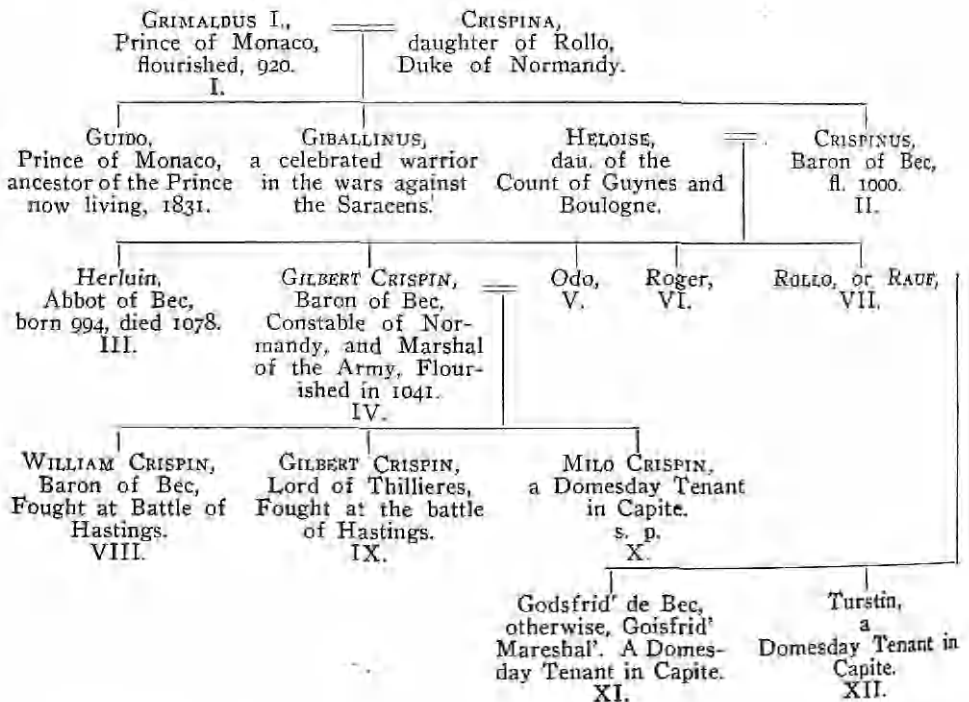

"Amongst the Domesday tenants in capite, will be found the following: "Goisfridus de Bech, Goisfridus Marescal, Milo Crispin, Turstinus Filius Rolf; and I shall be enabled, through the aid of the documents and pedigree of a foreign family, to communicate some particulars regarding them which are unknown to the English antiquary.

"The document affording the greater part of the ensuing information, is a genealogy of the Italian family of Grimaldi, sovereign princes of a small principality named Monaco, situated at the confines of France and Genoa. The manuscript was compiled in 1430 by Nicholas Grimaldi, Seigneur of Seminare in Naples, a nobleman very well skilled in historical matters. In 1647 the then reigning Prince of Monaco published it in a small folio, having employed his secretary, Venasques, for twenty years in collecting further proofs, and in making additions to it.

"The family pedigree is set out in too many English as well as foreign histories to require minute notice here. It appears by Anderson's Royal Genealogies, that the sixth in descent from Pharamond, King of the Franks, was named Grimoald or Grimbald; which Skynner, the etymologist, derives from Grim, anger; and Bald, power. He was Duke of Brabant, and slain in 658. His son, the King of Mentz, died without issue, when the name was used by the Duke's great-nephew, a brother of the renowned Charles Martel. The second of the name was Duke of Brabant and slain in 714, and from his time the surname was hereditary. The fourth in descent from this last named Duke, was the first Prince of Monaco, and one of the principal Commanders of the army of the Emperor Otho I., in his wars with Louis IV., of France; by the strength of his own arm he freed the Emperor from being made captive, in return for which, and other services, Otho granted to him, in 920, the castle and territories of Monaco, to hold in sovereignty; and from this ancestor has this principality descended in lineal succession, unto the present day; for, though revolutionized in 1792, and sold by the French republic to a citizen of Paris, yet it was, by the definite treaty of peace of 1814, restored to the Grimaldi family. The descent was in 1715 continued by a female of the family, who became sovereign Princess, and transmitted the title, and name and arms, to her children, by her husband James Leoner Goyon De Matignon, but foreign jurists have considered the principality as a male fief, and that it belongs to the nearest male heirs, who are, perhaps, the Marquisses Grimaldi, of Genoa."

The following genealogical table of the persons noticed in this communication, will assist in clearly comprehending the detail:

"II. Crispinus, surnamed Ansgothus, on account of his maternal descent from the Goths, settled in Normandy, his mother's country, where he became possessed of the Barony of Bec, in the district of Caux. He married Heloise, the daughter of Rodulph, Count of Guynes and Boulogne, by Rosella, daughter to the Count St. Paul. Of this marriage there was issue, Herluin, Gilbert, Odo, Roger, and Ralph or Rollo.

"III. Herluin was the canonized founder of the very celebrated Abbey of Bec in Normandy, lying within the district of the Barony of Bec. He died in 1078, aged 84 years. Grants of land, and possessions to this Abbey, from our Norman sovereigns, and their Norman followers, are frequently met with, especially from the Crispin family.

"IV. Gilbert Crispin, Baron of Bec, Governor and Lord of the Castle of Thillieres, Constable of Normandy, and Marshal of the Army of the Duke of Normandy in 1041, relinquished the surname of Grimaldi, and assumed that of Crispin from his father, which later he transmitted to his posterity. He had issue, three sons, William Crispin, Baron of Bec; Gilbert Crispin, Lord of Thillieres; and Milo Crispin; all warriors at the battle of Hastings. Dugdale, in his Baronage, deduces the descent of the Clare family from a Gilbert Crispin, Earl of Brion in Normandy; whose son, Richard Fitz-Gilbert, accompanied the Conqueror. This Gilbert Crispin is stated to have been the son of Geoffrey (Godfrey), the natural son of Richard, Duke of Normandy.

"V. & VI. Odo and Roger. No particulars are known to me of these brothers, excepting that in a charter of Herluin, after describing himself as 'Herluinus filius. Ansgoti,' he adds, 'adstantibus et laudantibus fratribus meis Odone et Rogero.'

"VII. Rollo or Rauf; he was the father of Gaisfrid de Bec, otherwise Gaisfrid the Marshal, and of Turstin; called in Domesday Book 'filius Roif.'

"VIII. William Crispin, Baron of Bec, was a celebrated hero in the battle of Mortimer, in the year 1059. He married a daughter of Simon, Earl of Montfort, and was a witness to William the Conqueror's foundation charter of the Abbey of Saint Stephen of Caen, in Normandy. He acquired great glory for his valour in the battle of Hastings, and it is concluded survived that victory, as his name is in one of the copies of the Battle Abbey Roll; but it is difficult to account for his not appearing amongst the great tenants of the Conqueror in Domesday Book, as his younger brother, Milo, had very numerous possessions granted to him. He had issue, William Crispin, Baron of Bec, from whom was a long succession of Barons of the same title, residing in Normandy, and having great hereditary offices in that Duchy, under the Dukes. Some of his descendants also appear in our English records as holding lands in England under the Plantagenet Dynasty.

"Dugdale, in his Baronage, whilst writing of Milo Crispin, adds, 'of this family I presume was William Crispin, one of the Conqueror's chief commanders in the war against Henry, King of France.' Some further particulars of his life are given by Dugdale, which I refer to rather than transcribe, on account of space; but it is evident that, as neither Dugdale nor any other historian mentions William Crispin's parentage, it was unknown; this concluding paragraph in the Baronage greatly corroborates the foreign genealogy.

"All that I shall say further of him is, that he (William Crispin), gave to the Abbey of Bec, in Normandy, the Church of Droecourt, with the lands and tithes thereto belonging, as also (to) the Lordship of Tilla in the diocese of Lisieux.'

"It is evident that the Abbey of Bec was thus endowed, because it was founded by William Crispin's uncle, Herluin; and it appears by the pedigree that the Lordship of Tilla (Thillieres) in Normandy, was amongst the possessions of Gilbert Crispin, his father.

"IX. Gilbert Crispin, the second son of Gilbert Crispin, Baron of Bec, was Seigneur of the Norman fief of Thillieres, and one of the warriors at the battle of Hastings, but not a Tenant in Capite of the Conqueror, or (as far as these researches have extended) a grantee of lands as subtenant, but he is mentioned in the 'Chronicle of Normandy' as 'Le Seigneur de Tilleres,' together with his brother 'Guillaume Crespin,' amongst the companions of William the Conqueror, in 1066.

"The circumstances of thus describing Gilbert Crispin by his Lordship of Tilleres, affords evidence of the difficulty, if not impossibility, of identifying many of the Norman tenants, and their families at this period, since, as in the case of the Seigneur de Tilleres, probably no document, excepting a private pedigree or charter, exists to show the family which held such estate at the time of the Conquest. Indeed, nothing can be more fatal to correct genealogy than the foreign practice of naming individuals solely by fief or seigneuries, which were constantly changing owners; and the preceding proprietors of which, frequently continued the use of the title of the Lordship, after it had been transferred to some new purchaser, so that various persons existed at the same period, using the same designation. No industry can, under such circumstances, prevent the biography of one party being occasionally confused with that of another.

"Of the Battle Abbey Roll, a minute investigation respecting this family proves Camden's assertion that 'whosoever considereth it well shall find it forged;' for only one out of the five Knights of this house who accompanied the Conqueror, is therein named, although three of them were Tenants in Chief in Domesday; and the individual who was planted by the Monks in the Roll, was one who does not appear to have been a Chief Tenant of the Conqueror, and therefore probably had a less share of danger or honour on the eventful day of the battle of Hastings, than either of his brothers or cousins, who had lands granted to them by the King.

"X. Of Milo Crispin, a great Captain, favoured warrior, and Tenant in Capite of the Norman, I have no material particulars in addition to the biography in Dugdale's Baronage (title Crispin), and in Dr. Lipscomb's History of Buckinghamshire; excepting the important fact of his descent, already set forth, and to a knowledge of which neither of these historians could have any reasonable means of attaining. The circumstance of Milo being son to the Baron of Bec, who was the brother of the founder of the renowned Abbey of that name, readily accounts for the large grants which are mentioned by Dugdale and Dr. Lipscomb to have been made by him and his widow to that religious house.

"Milo's possessions are enumerated in Domesday, and comprised the honour of Wallingford and 88 Lordships. He died without issue in 1106, forty years after the battle of Hastings. There are other instances in Dugdale, showing great longevity in these Norman warriors.

"XI. Gaisfrid de Bec, otherwise Gaisfrid the Marshall. This warrior fought at Hastings, and is named in Domesday under both titles, appearing consequently as two distinct Tenants in Capite. There were no means by which the editors of the printed volumes of that survey could have known the fact of such two names applying to one person; and, as Dugdale was ignorant that the Crespin family were the same as the baronial family of Bec, he makes no mention of Gaisfrid, under his account of the Crispins. (There was a Flemish family of the name of Bec, eminent at the time of the Conquest, holding Evesby and other manors; they were not related to the Barons of Bec, of Bec in Normandy). The varied appellation given to Gaisfrid in Domesday, has many similar examples, and is easily accounted for; that survey was made by inquisitions held in the various counties where the lands were situated, and since Goisfrid de Bec was the Conqueror's Marshal, there would be nothing extraordinary in his being designated as Goisfrid the Marescal in Hampshire, whilst in Herefordshire he was called Goisfrid de Bec.

"Goisfrid was brother of Turstin de Bec, and son of Rollo or Ralf, the brother of Gilbert, Baron of Bec, Constable of Normandy, and Marshal of the Army of the Dukes of Normandy in 1041; an office which seems to have been hereditary (see the Clare pedigree in Dugdale's Baronage), like many or all of the Norman offices of honour. Goisfrid de Bec, I therefore presume, succeeded his uncle as Marshal, and was the person designated as Goisfrid the Marshal, in Domesday; and I am further led to the conclusion that he possessed this high post, since his brother Turstin was Standard-bearer to the Conqueror at Hastings, and they were relations of the Invader.

"Turstinus Filius Rolf, is thus mentioned in Domesday as a Tenant in Capite, a descent which is in accordance with the ancient Grimaldi pedigree, where he is called son of Rollo or Ralf; and the agreement which is found here, and in many other instances, between the English records, especially Domesday, and this ancient pedigree, compiled 400 years ago—a time when Domesday was unknown to foreigners, and a reference to, or knowledge of our records was impossible,—is positive proof of the correctness of the pedigree in such instances, and presumptive evidence of its general accuracy.

"Turstin was (as well as his first cousin William Crispin) Baron of Bec. It was customary on the Continent for many members of the same family to take the same feudal title at one time; in the same way that in England we have often several joint tenants of the same manor, who are all Lords or Ladies of that manor. He fought at the battle of Hastings, and held the high office of Standard-bearer, in which capacity he is depicted in the Bayeux tapestry, near the Conqueror. In Dr. Meyrick's History of Ancient Armour, is an account of Turstin, translated from Wace's Metrical History of Normandy, in the Royal Library, stating that the hereditary Standard-bearer of Normandy having declined to carry the Conqueror's gonfanon, William

"Then called a Knight
Who had great prowess,
Toustainz fitz Rou the Fair was his name,
In the fields near Bec was his house.
To him he delivered the gonfanon,
And he knew how most suitably
To carry it willingly, well and handsomely, Bowling most profoundly."

"Thurstan who came in with the Conqueror, is stated in Dugdale's usage of bearing arms, to have been father of Ralph Basset, from whom the ennobled family of Basset was descended, but the account of this family given in the Baronage, is at variance with such a statement, and the foreign pedigree is silent on this head.

"I shall conclude with a few lines respecting the arms of this family. It must be well known to your readers that Mr. Henniker, in a letter addressed to the Society of Antiquaries in 1788, endeavored to prove the use of arms coeval with the Conquest, by means of some Norman tiles with armorial blazonings. He was unable to assign an owner to the tile No. 13, containing a shield Lozengy, 3, 2, and 1. It is to me a probable presumption that it belonged to a member of this family, who was one of the Conqueror's Chieftains. The same appropriation may, I think, be made of the unascertained shield in Westminster Abbey, of the reign of Henry III.; viz., Argent and Gules; for the terms Lozengy and Mascally, or mascally voided, are often used in ancient rolls as synonymous.

"The length to which this memoir has extended, compels me to defer to another number a notice of some of this family who have been connected with English history, or driven by foreign revolutions to preserve their name and lineage upon the hospitable soil of Britain.
S. G."

William Crispin appears to have been born about 1610, though the place and exact date of his birth are uncertain. The first mention of the name found in published public documents is in the "Calendar of State Papers," Domestic Series; on March 3, 1634-5, the officers of customs at Kingston-upon-Hull advised the governor and others of the Company of Merchant Adventurers that the "Adventures," William Crispin, master, was lading in their port with woollen cloths for Amsterdam, contrary to the late proclamation, but these documents throw no light on any further happenings in the matter.

(The "Calendar" has an abstract of a letter, dated Holborn, September 2, 1635, from John Crispin to Secretary Edward Nicholas, in which he expresses hope that Nicholas's respects toward the late affair concerning Kingston-upon-Hull will not be forgotten, and says that because of hurting his mare, and for various causes, he could not prosecute the delinquents, and entreats Nicholas to be his mediator; but there is nothing to show whether or not this letter has any connection with the advice of the customs officers of March 3, as the name Crispin and place Kingston-upon-Hull may be only a coincidence.)

For fourteen years after this the name does not occur in the "Calendar," and then there is a warrant from Colonels Deane and Blake to the Navy Commissioners, dated April 3, 1649, for William Crispin, late purser on the "Recovery," to be entered on the "Truelove." On August 6, 1650, the Admiralty Commissioners wrote to Colonel Deane that six new frigates were to be supplied with officers, and sent the petition and certificates of William Crispin for a purser's place in one of them; they instructed Deane, that if he found the papers correct, to return Crispin as fit to be employed, but to remember that they thought Thomas Phillips should be purser of the first of the frigates. (It is not entirely certain that this William Crispin, the purser, was the same as the captain of the "Adventure;" having already been master of a merchant-ship, he should have been able to obtain a higher office in the navy, especially if there is any truth in the story that he had been in the army. But his circumstances at the time, of which we are ignorant, might have induced him to accept the post of purser).

In 1652 William Crispin commanded the "Hope" in the service of the Commonwealth. At that time there were very few regular naval officers or regular naval vessels; when occasion arose to form a naval force, merchant-ships were impressed and equipped as men-of-war; army officers were generally assigned to them as admirals, captains and lieutenants in command of the soldiers who fought the ships, the navigation and command of the crew being in command of the master. On the other hand, it sometimes happened that, as many of these merchant-ships were already well armed and had a master and crew capable of fighting as well as handling the ship, the master was made captain, retaining full command of both fighting and navigation. William Crispin's captaincy was one of this latter kind. The "Calendar" has one letter written by William Crispin while in command of the "Hope" to J. Turner, November 19, 1652, saying that he mustered Captain Lawson's men on the "Fairfax," and found more landsmen and boys than upon any of the state's ships for the last ten years; that he discharged eighteen and signed their tickets, and sent down one hundred and eighty men to the "Fairfax" in the "Hope," but when they arrived and saw the landsmen, one hundred would not go, but went to other ships. This letter shows that Crispin and the other naval officers were preparing for the more important events of the following year; it also implies that Crispin had been in the service of the state for at least ten years before this date.

In May, 1653, an expedition was sent against the Dutch, under Col. Richard Deane and Col. George Monk, generals and admirals of the Parliament. The fleet in this expedition consisted of three squadrons, the first, or squadron of the red flag, contained thirty-eight ships, under the direct command of Deane and Monk; the second, or white, thirty-three ships, under Vice-Adm. William Penn; and the third, or blue squadron, thirty-four ships, under Rear-Adm. John Lawson. Capt. Crispin commanded the "Assistance," frigate, one hundred and eighty men and forty guns, in Penn's squadron. This fleet on the 2d and 3d of June, 1653, took or destroyed between twenty and thirty Dutch ships-of-war, took thirteen hundred and fifty prisoners, and pursued the Dutch to their own harbors.

After this engagement the "Assistance" spent the remainder of the year cruising, conveying merchantmen, and preying on the Dutch commerce, as evidenced by the following abstracts of letters in the Calendar:

"Aug. 9th, 1653, William Crispin 'Assistance' between the shore and the 'Whittaker' to the Navy Commissioners. Being ordered by the General to bring his ship to Deptford for repairs, he asks orders for masts and other stores.

"Sep. 2, 1653, Captain William Crispin, 'Assistance,' Hole Haven to Admiralty Commissioners. Has received the remainder of his victuals and stores, and will sail to-night for the Downs; the 'Sapphire' and 'Hector' sail to-morrow.

"Oct. 5, 1653, Capt. William Crispin, 'Assistance,' off Plymouth, to Admiralty Commissioners. Sailed from Isle of Wight with the 'Hector,' 'Nightingale' and sixty-five merchant vessels, and meeting the 'Pearl,' sent her with orders to Captain Sparling (of the "President") and the captain of the 'Hopewell,' pink, to join him, but they declined, being bound for Guernsey and Jersey with some money, then to carry defective guns to Portsmouth or the Thames, and then for St. Malo. Parted with the fleet off Ushant, and took a ship of Middleburg, with hoops from Newhaven bound to Nantes, and the 'Nightingale' took her consort; a pink belonging to Delit has come in with the prizes and to get a supply of men and provisions, when he will put to sea again.

"Oct. 12, 1653, Captain John Humphrey, 'Nightingale,' to Admiralty Commissioners. Has been cruising at sea with Captain Crispin of the 'Assistance.' Took a prize from Rotterdam, and had a dispute with some men-of-war from Brest for two hours, but as there were fourteen or fifteen of them, sailed towards Falmouth for assistance; intends to follow them, and then go for Ireland.

"Oct. 22, 1653, Captain William Crispin, 'Assistance,' Falmouth, to Robert Blackborne. Victualled and tallowed his ships for five months, and has been plying eastward by order of the Generals. Put into Falmouth and received some more men; hearing there are some Dutch men-of-war about the Land's End, intends plying that way. Of the forty men pressed by Capt. Mills, all but four are landmen, and taken from their callings in the field, to the prejudice of the country. He suffers the seamen to be cleared on seeing the constables. Has sent Captains Humphreys and Sparling their instructions for sailing to Ireland."

The next year Oliver Cromwell, who was then Protector, decided to send an expedition against the Spanish possessions in the West Indies, which was dispatched secretly because England was at peace with Spain. A fleet of thirty-eight ships was sent out under Admiral Penn, with Gen. Venables in command of the soldiers. The fleet was divided into three squadrons, one directly under Penn, one under Vice-Admiral Goodson, and one under Rear-Admiral Dakins. Capt. William Crispin commanded the "Laurel," one hundred and sixty seamen, thirty soldiers and forty guns, which belonged to Penn's squadron. On Wednesday, December 20, 1654, fifteen ships, some from each squadron, under Rear-Adm. Dakins, sailed from Spithead. The "Laurel" probably was one of these, for the "Calendar" has a letter from Capt. Crispin, dated on the "Laurel," off the Lizard, December 26, 1654, to the Admiralty Commissioners, saying that he was ordered by Rear-Adm. Dakins to lie out, so as to speak with any ship homeward bound, and informing them that the major-general and all the remainder on board the squadron were well and only wanted the "Indian" which was not yet joined. The remainder of the fleet sailed on the 26th. The expedition arrived in sight of Barbadoes, January 29, 1654-5, and having put in there, made their plans and preparations; the leaders decided to first attack Hispaniola, and the fleet sailed from Barbadoes, March 31, 1655; they sighted the port of St. Domingo, April 13, and landed the soldiers the same day. Capt. Crispin sailed along the shore to make observations. The journal of the expedition, April 24, says, "Letters at eleven o'clock at night, came from General Venables and the rear-admiral (on shore, the latter in command of a party of sailors on land service). The general intimated that the army was just on the point to march, and that they intended that evening, or next morning betimes, to be at the landing place discovered by Captain Crispin, to the northward of the Fort Jeronimo, in a little sandy bay." Some days of fighting resulted in failure, and it was then determined to try Jamaica. The fleet sailed for that island Friday, May 4, 1655, and on the 10th anchored in Jamaica harbor, except Capt. Crispin's ship, the "Laurel," which again cruised about outside. The same day the attack was made; the Spaniards made little opposition, and on the 17th formally surrendered. (The account of Captain Crispin by his great-grandson, already mentioned, gives a story of this engagement which appears to be entirely without foundation. It is to the effect that, the fleet having arrived before St. Jago, the then capital of Jamaica, William Crispin fired the first and third shots, the latter striking the flag-staff and felling it, whereupon the Spaniards surrendered; and that on the return of the expedition to England, its commander, Adm. Penn, was granted an addition of three balls to his coat-of-arms, in recognition of the three shots). A few days later it was decided that, on account of scarcity of provisions, part of the fleet should return to England, three ships go to New England to procure supplies, and fifteen stay at Jamaica. On Monday, June 25, the ships selected to go home set sail, Penn's being one of them. Penn went with her, leaving Vice-Admiral Goodson in command at Jamaica. The "Laurel" was one of those that remained, and, although Crispin and some of the other captains expressed a desire to leave, Crispin appears to have stayed with his ship.

It has been stated that the rear-admiral then acted in Goodman's place as vice-admiral, and that Capt. Crispin became acting rear-admiral. The journal of the expedition (as quoted by Granville Penn in his "Memoirs of Admiral Penn"), at this point, says, "Some of the captains expressed their desire to go home, notwithstanding their vessels remained, viz: rear admiral Captain Crispin (of the Laurel), C. Newberry and C. Story."

Capt. William Crispin, Richard Wadeson, and Thomas Broughton, who were appointed to take charge of supplying the English forces in the island, were called by the home authorities the "Commissioners for supplying Jamaica." Crispin returned to England early in the spring, for the Calendar has a letter dated London, April 24, 1656, from him to Col. John Clerke and Mr. Hopkins, about some Jamaica hides to be disposed of for the use of Gen. (Admiral) Penn.

Penn and that part of the fleet that returned had arrived at Spithead, August 31, 1655, and soon afterwards he and Venables were committed to the Tower, the reason given being that they had disobeyed orders by returning, but in reality because Cromwell knew that they favored the Prince of Wales. Penn was soon released but was dismissed from the service of the Protector, and retired to his Irish estates. (In the autumn of 1657 he was living on his estate of Macromp in county Cork; this was the confiscated estate of Lord Muskerry; after the Restoration it was restored to the latter (then Earl of Clancarty), and, in compensation, Penn was given the estate of Shannagarry, in the same county). About this time many of the principal men in the navy and their adherents found much cause for dissatisfaction in Cromwell's conduct, especially in the ascendancy of the army over the navy which he fostered. For a number of years they had borne the brunt of foreign wars and successfully carried out expeditions of conquest; in return for which, instead of being given higher commands or other suitable rewards, they were dismissed from the service or required to serve under Cromwell's land officers, whom he made admirals and generals-at-sea over the heads of tried and experienced naval officers. During the internal troubles most of the leading naval officers had had little to do with party strife at home, being at sea engaged in fighting the common enemies of the whole English nation, consequently they had not much sympathy with Cromwell and his party; some of them, indeed, were royalists by birth and education, and had been in the navy before the struggle between King and Parliament began. Penn was one of these, and, as we have seen, he had been dismissed by the Protector. Crispin was retained longer; but when the naval party began to plan opposition to the Protector's government and adherence to the King, he was among the leaders of the movement. Granville Penn in his "Memoirs of Admiral Penn" has shown that the naval party laid the foundation for the Restoration, which was afterwards accomplished by Gen. Monk. This naval party had been gradually forming for some time, and circumstances contributed to increase its following. Hume in his "History of England" says that many of the inferiors, as well as the leaders of the West Indies expedition, were inclined to the King; and that, when Spain declared war against England on account of the violence of treaty by the sending out of this same expedition, several sea officers, entertaining scruples against this war, threw up their commissions. Crispin was undoubtedly one of the latter; and they, with the officers dismissed by Cromwell and their friends still in the service, formed the nucleus of the naval party which took part in the succeeding events.

In 1656 the fifth-monarchy men began to hold secret meetings and prepare for an outbreak; at the end of the year the naval party and some of the royalists hearing of it, attempted to turn it to their own account, and in the beginning of the next year (March, 1657) had come to terms with them and were preparing for a rising against Cromwell. Sec. Thurloe made a report of the discovery and frustration of this scheme, which is published in his collection of State Papers (vol. vi., pp. 184-186). (In the index to this volume Crispin is described as a fifth-monarchy man, but as Granville Penn points out, the report to which the index refers shows him to have been one of those Thurloe calls "behind the curtain"). After describing the actions of the fifth-monarchy men, Thurloe's report says:

"Things being thus settled among the men of these principles, those, who were all this while behind the curtain, and thought themselves as well of their own judgment as some of others, began to thinke, that these men might be made good use of; and in order thereto, the first step must be to reconcile the fifth monarchy and the common wealth partye. And to this end a meeting was betweene them, which they agreed should consist of twelve. The persons who met, wer vice-ad. Lawson, col. Okey, capt. Lyons, capt. Crispin, capt. Dekins, one Portman, Venner, mr. Squib, and some others. Four of these were officers at sea, and three deserted the fleet, when it went upon the coast of Spayne."

Cromwell had dismissed Lawson in the summer of 1656, and the three who, Thurloe says, deserted the fleet, but had, in fact, thrown up their commissions, as mentioned above, were Lyons, Crispin and Dakins (the latter the rear-admiral in the West Indies expedition). Venner, who was the leader of the fifth-monarchy men, was a wine-cooper, and Thurloe calls him a person of very mean quality. The report continues:

"These twelve being met together, engaged solemnly to each other to secrecy, and not to disclose to any creature, that there was any such meetinge save that a liberty was given to communicate all to m. g. Harrison and col. Rich, both of whom had bene sounded * * * One party was for actinge under a visible authority; and for that purpose propounded, that forty of the longe parliament should be convened in some fitting place, for they would not have all of them neither, under whom they would act."

This was probably the naval men and royalists, while what follows accords better with the fifth-monarchy ideas:

"The other were neither carefull for any authority to act under, nor that any way of government should be propounded beforehand; but were for action with such members as they could get, and wait for such issue as the providence of God should bring things to. Thus the difference stood betweene them, and many meetings there were upon it * * * These meetings continued thus, till it was resolved by his highnes (Cromwell) that a parliament should be called, and some of the chief of this meeting were apprehended and secured."

The report does not name those taken, and we do not know whether Crispin was among them. Venner escaped, and he and his fifth-monarchy partisans resolved to take up arms at the first opportunity; but early in April several of their meeting places were broken up, their arms seized, and twenty of them captured. This conspiracy came to naught, but the naval party continued their secret activity in conjunction with the other royalists. If Crispin participated in any of the latter conspiracies, there is nothing at present known in evidence of it. After the last attempt he may have gone at once to Kinsale, in Ireland, where he is found soon after the Restoration. His former commander (and connection by marriage), Admiral Penn, was living at that time on his estates in county Cork, which were not far from Kinsale, and this probably drew Crispin to that place. (It has been stated that Cromwell gave Crispin a forfeited estate near the Shannon, not far from Limerick, but no evidence in support of the statement has been found after considerable search; there is no proof that Crispin was ever in that vicinity. His name may have been confused with that of Sir Nicholas Crispe, one of the London adventurers, who had an estate in the locality mentioned). In 1660, after the Restoration, Penn, who took an important part in the final acts of that event, was knighted and made Commissioner of the Admiralty and Governor of the town and fort of Kinsale. Crispin probably assisted Penn at this time, and no doubt came in for a share of the royal favor; he may have obtained a magistracy or judicial office of some kind in county Cork, as the Admiral's son afterwards wrote that Crispin was skilled in court-keeping. He lived in Kinsale about twenty years, but left very little of record there that has survived. The Council Book of the Corporation of Kinsale (from 1652 to 1800) mentions the reading at the meeting of July 18, 1662, a letter of protection from arrest granted to William Crispin by Thomas Amery, dated June 20, 1662. In the Marquis of Ormonde's papers (catalogued by the Historical Manuscripts Commission) is a letter from William Crispin dated at Kinsale, December 12, 1665, the last record of him here until his appointment to Pennsylvania. If he ever joined the Society of Friends he may have done so while at Kinsale, for the Friends were quite numerous in county Cork, and many of the Commonwealth soldiers there had adopted their tenets. It is supposed, however, that he was not a Friend.

In 1681 William Penn, son of the Admiral, having obtained the grant of Pennsylvania, proceeded to plant a colony there. He first sent his cousin, William Markham, as Deputy-Governor, to receive the government from the Duke of York's representatives at New York. In September he appointed three Commissioners for settling the colony, with authority to purchase land from the Indians, select the site for a city, etc. In his letter of instructions to them, dated September 3, 1681, he calls them "My Commissioners for the Settling of the present Colony this year transported into y^e said Province."

These Commissioners were William Crispin, John Bezar and Nathaniel Allen. The next month he gave them further instructions, and added another Commissioner, William Haigue. The commission to the four is dated October 25, 1681, and refers to instructions of October 14. This may have been the first commission issued, as no other is known to exist at the present day, nor have the instructions of October 14 been found. These Commissioners sailed for Pennsylvania soon afterwards, but not all in the same ship. There were three ships that sailed from England for Pennsylvania in the year 1681, the "John and Sarah," the "Bristol Factor," and the "Amity." Allen sailed in the "John and Sarah" the first that arrived in Pennsylvania, and Bezar probably in the same. Crispin went in one of them and the facts points to the "Amity," of London, Richard Dimond, master, as the one. The historians, Proud, Gordon and Clarkson, all say that the "Amity" was one of the three that sailed this year, that she was delayed by contrary winds and did not arrive until spring of the following year. Hazard says that the "Amity" was said to have been blown off the coast to the West Indies and did not arrive until spring, but remarks that we have proof that she did not sail until April of the next year; and later historians follow Hazard's statement. But we only have proof that she did sail from the Downs, April 23, 1682; none that she had not sailed before and returned without reaching Pennsylvania. By all accounts the ship Crispin sailed in was blown off after nearly reaching the capes of Delaware, and put into Barbadoes, and there we lose sight of her. The similarity of the accounts shows that Crispin's ship was the "Amity," and that the earlier historians were correct, as far as they went, while Hazard is mistaken in placing her first voyage in April, 1682, as she no doubt returned from Barbadoes to England, and made a new start in that month. William Crispin died in Barbadoes, when the ship put in there, and the news of his death was probably taken back to England by the "Amity," for Thomas Holme, Surveyor-General of Pennsylvania, who is said to have succeeded Crispin as Commissioner, came out in her next voyage. Crispin is also said to have been the first appointed Surveyor-General, but no proof of this has been found. Silas Crispin, son of William, came out with Holme. He had probably first sailed with his father and returned to England in the "Amity," as no doubt many of the other passengers did, to get another chance to reach Pennsylvania.

Penn also intended Captain Crispin to be Chief-Justice, as evidenced by the following extract from a letter to Markham:

"London, 18th 8th mo. 1681.

"Cosen Markham:

"* * * I have sent my Cosen, William Crispin, to be thy Assistant, as by Commission will appear. His Skill, Experience, Industry & Integrity are well known to me, & perticularly in court-keeping &c; so that it is my will & pleasure that he be as Chief Justice, to keep the Seal, the Courts & Sessions; & he shall be accountable to me for it. The profits redounding are to his proper behoof. He will show thee my Instructions, which will guide you all in the business. The res is left to your discretion; that is, to thee, thy two Assistants & the Counsel * * *"

"Pray be very respectfull to my Cosen Crispin. He is a man my father had great confidence in and value for * * *"
"William Penn."

William Crispin was one of the "First Purchasers" of land in the Province; but his purchase of five thousand acres was never laid out to him. After his death this amount was confirmed to his children, in separate portions, by the Pro-prietary's patents, in which it is stated to be of the latter's "free gift." William Penn granted five hundred acres to his son Ralph, one thousand acres to his daughter Rachel, and three thousand acres to his seven younger children, and his son Silas in 1692 obtained a patent for five hundred acres, stated to be in right of a purchase of five thousand acres (presumably his father's).

William Crispin's city lots are shown on Holme's "Portraiture," or plan of the city. They were: No. 43, on the south side of Vine street, running from Delaware Front to Second street; and No. 74, half on the southeast and half on the northeast corners of Eighth and High streets, each sixty-six feet on High and three hundred and six feet on Eighth street. These lots were never patented to him, but Silas Crispin obtained patents to some other city lots, presumably in place of these.

Capt. William Crispin married (first) about 1650, Anne, daughter of John Jasper, a merchant of Rotterdam, Holland, who was a sister of Margaret Jasper, wife of Adm. Sir William Penn, and mother of William Penn, Proprietary of Pennsylvania. Some authorities state that John Jasper was a native of Rotterdam, others that he was an Englishman by birth. Samuel Pepys, in his Diary, describes John Jasper's daughter, Lady Penn, as a "well-looking, fat, short old Dutchwoman," but her appearance might have been inherited from a Dutch mother, even though her father had been English. Howard M. Jenkins in "The Family of William Penn" (Penna. Mag., vol. xx) remarks, "By one authority he is named a burgomaster, and the editor of Lord Braybrooke's edition of Pepys calls him Sir John." It has also been said that his name was Petre, translated Jasper in Dutch.

William and Anne (Jasper) Crispin had issue:

Silas, d. May 31, 1711; m. (first) 1683, Esther Holme; m. (second) Mary (Stockton) Shinn; see below;

Rebecca, m. (first) Aug. 24, 1688, at Ifield Friends' Meeting, in Sussex, Edward Blackfan, son of John Blackfan, of Stenning, co. of Sussex, England. (John Blackfan, of Stenning, father of Edward, appears to have been a man of some position in his locality. He early joined the Society of Friends and suffered much persecution for his religion. Besse, in his "Sufferings," reports several instances. In 1659 John Blackfan was persecuted in the Exchequer for twenty pounds for tithes of eight and a half acres, when all the corn that grew on his land was scarce worth half that amount. In 1662 he was committed to Horsham Gaol on a writ de excommunicato capiendo, after prosecution in the Ecclesiastical Court for refusing to pay towards the repairs to the Steeple House. In 1663 he and the others were persecuted in the Ecclesiastical Court for being absent from public worship, and he was excommunicated and some of the others imprisoned). Her cousin, William Penn, Proprietary of Pennsylvania, and some of his family attended the wedding. Edward Blackfan was a member of the Society of Friends, and came in for a share of the ill treatment afforded that Society. In 1681 he was indicted, with others, at Horsham Assizes, for absence from the national worship, and in 1684 for being present at some Quaker meetings at Stenning, and according to Besse, he "was fined £7, 18s, which, at the Persuasion of some Justices and others, he paid in order to Appeal, but when the Sessions came on, he found so little Encouragement in prosecuting the same, that he chose rather to lose his Money, than to be put to farther Charge."

Edward Blackfan intended to go to Pennsylvania, but was prevented by death. He is spoken of in Penn's letters in 1689 as being about to take official documents to the Council, and was on the point of sailing when he died in 1690.

His widow, with their son William, afterwards went to Pennsylvania, in the same ship with Thomas Chalkley and other Friends, about 1700. She was a member of the Free Society of Traders in Pennsylvania. On her arrival, her relatives, the Penns, sent her to take charge of their manor of Pennsbury, in Bucks co., where she lived a number of years.

Edward and Rebecca (Crispin) Blackfan had one child:

William Blackfan, m. at Friends' Meeting, 2d mo. 20, 1721, Eleanor Wood, of Phila. From them descend the Blackfan family of Bucks co., Pa.

Rebecca (Crispin) Blackfan m. (second) in 1725, Nehemiah Allen, of Phila., son of Nathaniel Allen, one of the Proprietary's Commissioners for Settling the Colony in 1681 (of whom her father, Capt. William Crispin, had been one). She is not known to have had any issue by Allen;

Ralph, remained in Ireland, and may have continued to live at Kinsale, for in the assignment of his land in Pennsylvania, dated 1690, he is styled "Ralph Crispin of Cork in the Kingdom of Ireland, gentleman," which probably meant the county of Cork and not the city. By patent of July 25, 1688, William Penn, granted of his "free gift" to his "loving cousin Ralph Crispin," son of Capt. William Crispin, late of the Kingdom of Ireland, deceased, five hundred acres of land in Pa. This was his share of his father's five thousand acres. Ralph Crispin assigned this patent to Ebenezer Pike, May 24, 1690, the land not having then been laid out. Nothing further is known of his life at present;

Rachel, m. Thomas Armstrong. William Penn granted her one thousand acres of land in Pennsylvania; he re-granted this to her husband, by a deed dated 11th mo. 2, 1694, in which he acknowledged having some years before granted the same to Rachel Armstrong, by the name of Rachel Crispin "(which grant is mentioned to be lost in the Wars of Ireland)," and therefore repeated it to Thomas Armstrong; five hundred acres to be disposed of for the support of him, his wife Rachel, and their child born, or children to be born, and the other five hundred acres to Silas Crispin, Samuel Carpenter, and Lasse Cock, in trust for Rachel Armstrong, her child, etc. At the meeting of the Board of Property held 6th mo. 1, 1733, Samuel Mickle, of Philadelphia, requested a warrant for this one thousand acres, which was granted him, as it was shown that Rachel and her heirs had sold to Henricus Chapman, of London, who sold to Mickle. (Thomas Armstrong and Rachel his wife, Robert Swiney and Jane his wife (one of the daughters of said Thomas and Rachel), by deed dated May 15, 1724, for forty pounds granted the said one thousand acres to Henricus Chapman, of London, who, together with George Armstrong, son and heir of Thomas and Rachel Armstrong, by deeds of lease and release dated July 6 and 7, 1731, granted the said one thousand acres to Samuel Mickle, of Philadelphia. At the meeting of the Board of Property held 4th mo. 15, 1736, a patent was signed to Samuel Mickle for two hundred and fifty acres on a branch of the "Parkeawining," in right of Rachel Armstrong, formerly Crispin. On 8th mo. 2, 1731, James Buckley requested a grant of about two hundred acres on the branches of the Ocoraro, to build a mill. This was afterwards confirmed to him in right of Samuel Mickle's purchase, "made of the children of Capt. Crispin," the minutes of the Board have it, but Mickle's purchase was from only one child of Crispin's).

Thomas and Rebecca (Crispin) Armstrong had issue:

Jane Armstrong, m. Robert Swiney (probably Sweeney);

George Armstrong, "son and heir;"

Another child, or children (at least one daughter), name or names unknown.

Capt. William Crispin married (second) Jane ——. Nothing is known of her family. For at least seventeen years after Capt. Crispin's death, however, his widow and younger children lived at Kinsale. William Penn granted of his "free gift" to James, Joseph, Benjamin, Jane, Eleanor, Elizabeth, and Amy Crispin, children of William Crispin by his second marriage, three thousand acres of land in Pennsylvania; as they were all minors at the date of this grant, August 8, 1687, he named Thomas Chudleigh, Martin Perse, and John Watts, of Kinsale, as trustees. One thousand five hundred acres of this were to be sold by the trustees for the children's education, support, and settlement in life; of the one thousand five hundred acres the portion of any child dying under seventeen years of age was to return to the Proprietary. As no return of the laying out of this land was sent to the trustees, they did not sell any of it; and William Penn, by deed of November 22, 1698, in consideration of Jane Crispin, though left in poor circumstances by her husband, having paid for the education and support of her children (and, as stated in the deed, Eleanor and Joseph having died after reaching seventeen years, Jane, Elizabeth and James having married very well, and Benjamin and Amy being capable of supporting themselves), granted to her, "Jane Crispin, of Kinsale, widow," half of the three thousand acres. This was afterwards inherited by her surviving children.

William and Jane Crispin had issue:

James, m. (between 1687 and 1698) ————. He removed from Kinsale to the island of St. Christopher in the West Indies. He appears to have eventually obtained the whole of the three thousand acres mentioned above; by the law of Pa. he was entitled as eldest brother to two shares of it, each of his brothers and sisters having one share. In an account of the disposition of this land among the Penn Papers in the possession of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania it is stated that his surviving brother and sisters, Benjamin, Jane, Elizabeth and Amy, by deed of May 10, 1702, sold their rights to James, who died intestate, seized of the three thousand acres, leaving issue. James Crispin's children were clearly considered the heirs of the whole three thousand acres, for about 1731 they all sold their shares, aggregating this amount, to persons living in Pennsylvania, and their right was unquestioned until 1752, when a controversy arose about one of these sales, during which Thomas Penn wrote that he had in his possession the deed of 1698, which had on the back a conveyance, dated July 30, 1702, from Benjamin, Jane, Elizabeth, and Amy to Captain Arthur Smith, and that this appeared to be the original conveyance, and they therefore had not conveyed to their brother James. But if, as is surmised, James Crispin had married a daughter (and possibly heiress) of Captain Arthur Smith, his possession of his brother's and sisters' rights would thus be explained. (The deed of November 22, 1698, with the conveyance of 1702 on the back, is now in possession of Mr. Daniel Sutter, of Mount Holly, New Jersey. A number of papers relating to this matter are in the Penn mss., volume of land grants (1681-1806), pages 217, 218, 219, 221, 223, 227, and 231, in possession of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania).

James Crispin had issue:

Arthur Smith;

Prudence, m. ——— Smith; living in St. Christopher in 1752;

James, drowned off St. Christopher in a hurricane, 1731; died intestate, under twenty-one years, probably unm.;

Richard, living in 1733;

Elizabeth, m. ——— Harris; living in St. Christopher in 1752;

Joseph, lived in St. Christopher; was in Phila. in 1752;

Michael, living in Kingston, Jamaica, in 1751.

Joseph, d. unm. between 1687 and 1698, between the ages of seventeen and twenty-one years;

Benjamin, m. (between 1698 and 1702) Alice ———;

Jane, m. (between 1687 and 1698) Greenslaid Lucomb;

Eleanor, d. unm. between 1687 and 1698, aged between seventeen and twenty-one years;

Elizabeth, m. (between 1687 and 1698) ——— Milliard; he died before 1702;

Amy, m. (between 1698 and 1702) Daniel Johnson.

Silas, son of Capt. William and Anne (Jasper) Crispin, probably accompanied his father in the unfortunate voyage which ended at Barbadoes. He first arrived in Pennsylvania with Capt. Thomas Holme, Surveyor-General, in the ship "Amity," of London. On his arrival, he no doubt lived with Capt. Holme's family at Shackamaxon; within a year he married the latter's daughter, Esther, and in 1684 they went to live on his plantation on Pennepack creek, upper part of Dublin township. There is a tradition that their first child was born here in the wigwam of an Indian chief. He soon had a house built on the plantation, and lived there the remainder of his life. In deeds, etc., he is styled "Silas Crispin of Dublin Township, gentleman." He was a member of the Free Society of Traders in Pennsylvania. He was executor of the will of his father-in-law, Capt. Thomas Holme, and spent a great deal of time in caring for the large interest in lands left by the latter; obtaining warrants for laying out lands not taken up at Holme's death, selling some of the tracts, etc.

Silas Crispin died May 31, 1711. By his will, dated May 5, 1711, he made his wife Mary executrix, left her his negroes, household goods, etc., and directed her to sell one hundred acres which he bought from Robert Griswall, adjoining the north end of his plantation, to pay debts and legacies. To his son Thomas he left a mare and colt and some small articles. To his granddaughter, Sarah Loftus, and his sister, Rebecca Blackfan, he left sums of money. [The witnesses were Margaret Ashton, William Blackfan, and Robert Ashton. Mary Crispin renounced her executorship, July 5, 1711, and letters of administration cum testamento annexo were granted Thomas Crispin, April 19, 1714.] His landed estate is not mentioned in his will, his own plantation going by the law of the time to his son Thomas, while the other children by his first wife were heirs, through their mother, to Capt. Thomas Holme's large domains. His children by his second wife were quite young, and he probably expected them to be provided for by their mother, whose family was wealthy. After her husband's death Mary Crispin, with her children, returned to Burlington, New Jersey, where she had lived before her marriage.

In the list of "First Purchasers" the names of William Crispin and Silas Crispin are bracketed as purchasers of five thousand acres; William was doubtless the purchaser of the whole, Silas being his heir in Pennsylvania after his death; but Silas did not inherit all of this, as it reverted to the Proprietary, who then gave to the children of William Crispin lands equalling the same amount. Silas was given five thousand acres in Hilltown township, Philadelphia county, forty acres in the "liberties of Philadelphia," and three lots in the city. The liberty land was just half, and the area of the city lands approximately half, of what was due under a purchase of five thousand acres, yet Silas appears to have been the only one of the children who had either, as the others all sold their rights before any land was actually laid out to them. The patents to all these are made out to "Silas Crispin, Purchaser," which would seem to be an error, as they were given him as part of his father's purchase. He had in addition a plantation of five hundred acres, on which he resided, no patent for which has been found on record. It is said to have been given him by Penn; if so, it was in excess of his father's purchase.

The five hundred acres in his father's right were in Hilltown township, Philadelphia county (now Abington township, Montgomery county), about eight miles back from the Delaware river in a straight line along the hypothetical Susquehanna road; the tract was rectangular, bounded northeast by Moreland, southeast by Ph. Th. Lehmann's land, southwest by the Susquehanna road, and northwest by land Capt. Thomas Holme had taken up in right of Samuel Clarridge. It is shown on Holme's map. Between 1686 and 1698 Silas Crispin sold this, in separate portions, to Cornelius Sturgis, John Meredith and Thomas Hood.

The forty acres of liberty land was a rectangular tract a short distance northeast of Germantown road, beyond Isaac Norris's "Fairhill" plantation. He sold this to Nicholas Rideout in 1695, who sold it to Nicholas Waln. Silas Crispin's city lots, as already mentioned, were not the same as those allotted to his father on the original city plan; a number of alterations had been made in the plan before the lots were surveyed. One was on the west side of Delaware Front street, one hundred and sixty-two feet south of Walnut street; it was forty-two feet on Front street, running back one hundred and fifty-five feet on the north line and two hundred and one feet on the south line, bounded on the west by a marsh. In 1684 he sold this to William Frampton. Another of his lots was on the southwest corner of High street and Strawberry alley, forty feet (afterwards found to be forty-one) on High street and eighty feet on the alley; he sold this about 1692 to Joseph Farrington. The other of Silas Crispin's lots was on the southeast corner of Sixth and High streets, sixty-six feet on High and three hundred and six feet on Sixth street; this was patented to him in 1688, and the same year he sold it to Patrick Robinson. [Patrick Robinson exchanged thirty-nine and a half feet in breadth of this with Robert Greenway for the same amount adjoining the lot he (Patrick Robinson) had purchased from Crispin, as Holme's executor, farther east in the same square, the latter being twenty-six and a half feet (originally intended for twenty-six); these combined lots, sixty-six feet front, he sold to Lionel Britain. This exchange has made a good deal of confusion in the attempt to locate the lots from the records, some giving it as "Robert Greenway's exchange with Silas Crispin," while the deed shows Crispin to have sold the corner lot intact to Robinson, and the minutes of the Board of Property say that Robinson made the exchange with Greenway.]

Silas Crispin's plantation on which he went to live shortly after his marriage, remaining there the remainder of his life, was about five hundred acres in the upper part of Dublin (afterwards Lower Dublin) township, Philadelphia county, on the line of the present Abington township, Montgomery county, now in the thirty-fifth ward of the city; it was rectangular, bounded northeast by Moreland, southeast by John Mason's land, southwest by the line of the Susquehanna road, and northwest (across the present Abington line) by William Stanley's land; it is shown on Holme's map. This is the plantation mentioned in his will, though not devised by that instrument. His son Thomas inherited it by the laws of primogeniture, then in force.

On August 28, 1689, the Council appointed Robert Turner, Benjamin Chambers, Joseph Fisher, Silas Crispin, Thomas Fairman and Robert Adams, with a surveyor, to lay out a cart road according to statute, they having petitioned to have a road laid out from Philadelphia to Bucks county. This was the present Bristol pike, and they probably followed to a great extent the rather indefinite trail previously known as the "King's Path."

Silas Crispin married (first) in 1683, Esther Holme, who died April 17, 1696, daughter of Capt. Thomas Holme, Provincial Councillor and Surveyor-General of Pennsylvania, an account of whom, follows this sketch.

Silas Crispin married (second) 1697, Mary, daughter of Richard and Abigail Stockton, of Springfield township, Burlington county, West New Jersey, and widow of Thomas Shinn, of the same county and province. Her father, Richard Stockton, was an Englishman of good birth and some fortune who settled in Flushing, Long Island, where he was lieutenant of a troop of horse in 1665, and afterwards joined the Society of Friends and removed to Burlington county, New Jersey; he was the ancestor of the Stockton family of New Jersey. Her first husband, Thomas Shinn, belonged to a well-known West Jersey family; she had two sons by him, Thomas and Samuel, who both settled near Mount Holly and left descendants. [Thomas Shinn and Mary Stockton were married 1st mo. 6, 1693; he died 9th mo. 15, 1695.]

Silas and Mary (Stockton) Crispin had issue:

Joseph, b. Oct. 7, 1698; m. Elizabeth Barratt; removed to Del.;

BENJAMIN, b. Sept. 1, 1699; m. Aug. 21, 1722, at Springfield Meeting, Margaret, dau. of Joshua and Martha Owen, of Springfield twp.; of whom later;

Abigail, b. Jan. 20, 1701; m. John Wright, of Springfield twp.;

SILAS, b. March 19, 1702; d. Nov., 1749; m. Nov. 9, 1724, Mary, dau. of Thomas and Ann (Fearon) Wetherill, of Burlington, and granddaughter of Christopher Wetherill, ancestor of the Wetherill family of N. J. and Phila.; of whom later;

John, b. Dec. 11, 1707.

After Silas Crispin's death, his widow, Mary (Stockton) Crispin, married (third) September 11, 1714, at Springfield Meeting House, Richard Ridgway Jr., of Springfield township; she had no issue by him. Richard Ridgway Jr., had married (first) Mary Willet; he was son of Richard Ridgway Sr., of Bucks county, Pennsylvania, who removed to Burlington county, West Jersey, and married (second) Abigail Stockton, sister to Mary Stockton, Richard Ridgway Jr.'s second wife.

THOMAS CRISPIN, eldest surviving son of Silas and Esther (Holme) Crispin, was born June 22, 1694, on his father's plantation in Lower Dublin township, Philadelphia county, which he afterwards inherited, and made his home the remainder of his life. He and his sisters (of the full blood) inherited through their mother, their grandfather, Capt. Thomas Holme, Well Spring plantation and the smaller tract adjoining it, amounting in all to over 2100 acres, which in 1723 was divided among the then living heirs the one acre laid out by Capt. Holme for a family graveyard being reserved for their use in common.

As the daughters, or their descendants, (except the children of Esther Rush), all removed from the immediate vicinity, the descendants of Thomas Crispin and Esther Rush only continued to use it, and it has long been known as the "Old Crispin Burying-Ground." It is now under the care of a board of trustees in which other branches of the descendants of Capt. Holme are represented.

This graveyard, one acre in extent, is located about a mile northwest of the main street of Holmesburg, and a short distance from Rowland station on the Bustleton branch of the Pennsylvania railroad. It was laid out by Capt. Thomas Holme, in 1694, for the use of himself and his descendants. In an article in the Frankford Herald, of 1895, Oliver Hough tells us that:

"On Wednesday afternoon, November 20, 1895, the two surviving trustees of the Crispin Cemetery Corporation, Mr. B. F. Crispin, of West Philadelphia, and Mr. Charles Green, of Sandiford, Philadelphia, met at the home of George S. Clark, Esq., in Holmesburg, for the purpose of filling the three vacancies in the Board of Trustees and to reorganize the corporation, which for thirty-two years has been dormant, the last meeting having been held in April, 1863. Messrs. Crispin and Green first held a preliminary meeting and filled two of the vacancies, by electing as Trustees, Mr. James Watts Mercur, of Wallingford, Delaware county, Pa., and Mr. Oliver Hough, of Philadelphia. These two gentlemen being in waiting, a meeting of the Board was then held, and an organization was effected, Mr. Crispin, being made President, Mr. Green, Treasurer, and Mr. Hough, Secretary. The last vacancy in the board was then filled by the election of General William Watts Hart Davis, of Doylestown, Bucks county, Pa., as the fifth trustee.

"This corporation is not a public cemetery company, nor in any sense a financial institution but was chartered to protect the interests of the heirs in a private family burying-ground, laid out by Captain Thomas Holme in the year 1694, for the use of himself and his descendants.

"Besides his daughter Hester, wife of Silas Crispin, he had two sons, who died without issue before their father, a daughter Sarah, who married and had children, but appears not to have come to America, and a daughter Eleanor, who was married twice, but whose descendants died out in the second generation. The children of Hester Crispin thus inherited all of Captain Holme's land, including the graveyard. In 1723 they divided the estate and gave each other deeds of release of the various shares reserving the burying-ground for the use of all and their descendants.

"There were six interests represented in this division, four being children of Hester Crispin, and the other two the interests of deceased children, represented by their children; these were: 1, Sarah (Crispin) Loftus, represented by her daughter Sarah, wife of Andrew Hannis; 2, Eleanor (Crispin) Hart, wife of John Hart of Bucks county; 3, Thomas Crispin; 4, Mary (Crispin) Collet, wife of John Collet; 5, Hester (Crispin) Rush, wife of Thomas Rush; 6, Rebecca (Crispin) Finney, represented by her daughters, Mary Bell, and Elizabeth Finney.

"Thomas Crispin's share of the land surrounded three sides of the burying-ground, and his descendants continued to reside in this vicinity for many years and were mostly buried there, while the descendants of the other heirs nearly all removed to a distance, and no doubt soon forgot that they had an interest in the lot. In 1748, Thomas Crispin sold the land adjoining the burying-ground to John Paul, but reserved the burying-ground itself.

"This land was the estate afterwards known as 'Longford.' The fourth side of the graveyard was the line of Susquehanna Road, originally laid out by Thomas Holme, on a middle line of Lower Dublin township, and intended to run from the Delaware to the Susquehanna River, but never opened up at this point. The land on this side had been sold by the Crispin heirs at an earlier date.

"In an account of the burying-ground, written by Silas Crispin, son of Thomas in 1794, he says that only about a quarter of an acre was then in use; this was in the northern corner of the lot. On April 1st, 1825, the descendants of Thomas Crispin, met at the house of Benjamin Crispin in Holmesburg, when Paul Crispin and Robert C. Green were appointed a committee to visit George Henry Walker, who then owned the estate of 'Longford.' Mr. Walker agreed to preserve the plot and keep it in good order. He kept his agreement, but as the ground was unenclosed, it was found that cattle sometimes wandered in and trampled down the mounds and broke some of the tombstones. Therefore, on January 22, 1831, the descendants again met at Benjamin Crispin's and formed a society called the 'Crispin Burial-Ground Community' to take charge of the property. The members of this society then present or afterwards admitted were: Benjamin Crispin, Paul Crispin, George Crispin, John Creighton, Thomas Creighton, James A. Creighton, George C. Creighton, Robert C. Green, James D. McKean and Paul K. Hubbs. The 'Community' had the ground surveyed the same year and fenced in the part then in use. They afterwards held annual meetings until 1840. In the latter year Benjamin Crispin introduced a bill in the State Legislature, of which he was a member, which passed both houses and was approved by the Governor in the session of 1840, incorporating Benjamin Crispin, Paul Crispin, Robert C. Green, Thomas Creighton, and James A. Creighton, and their successors, under the title of the 'Crispin Cemetery,' to take charge of the burial-ground. These incorporators, or trustees, as they afterwards called themselves, divided the ground into twenty-four lots part of which they assigned to the different branches of the family, two lots being reserved for the church, and one for strangers or persons not connected with the Crispin family. They planted a cedar hedge around the whole acre and cedar trees to mark the boundaries of lots. Very few persons not connections were ever buried there. In 1847 or 1848 Robert C. Green, of Sandy Hill, took charge of the cemetery under a lease, he keeping it in order in consideration of the profits from hay, etc., grown on the unused portion. He renovated about twenty-five or thirty of the graves, but when he gave up the superintendence of the ground in 1860, it became neglected.

"The last annual meeting of the Trustees was held in 1863, in which year the last burial (Mrs. Rachel Polk) was made there. Before the reorganization in the present year, thirty-two years after the last meeting, it was brought to the attention of the surviving Trustees that the 'Community' and the corporation succeeding it had been composed entirely of the descendants of Thomas Crispin, one of the parties to the division in 1723; while the descendants of the latter's sisters (co-heirs with him in the ground), having mostly removed from the neighborhood, had made no effort to join these organizations until recently, when some of them awakened to the knowledge of their interest in the ground which contained the remains of their forefathers and desired to participate in the care of it. The Trustees expressed their willingness to associate some of the representatives of the other branches of the family with themselves in the management of the corporation and elected Gen. Davis, Mr. Mercur, and Mr. Hough, who are all descendants of Thomas Crispin's sister Eleanor, wife of John Hart, Gen. Davis and Mr. Mercur, being also descendants of another sister, Mary Collett.

"At the present time the traces of about one hundred graves can be found, only half of which have stones, and of these only a dozen have legible inscriptions."

Capt. Thomas Holme's own grave was marked only by a smooth round stone until 1863, when a small monument was erected over it by the Trustees of the Lower Dublin Academy, whose foundation was due to him.

In the division of 1723, the heirs had set aside a lot for a school site in lieu of the four pounds for school purposes bequeathed by Capt. Holme, in his will. Shortly after this date a log school house was erected and used until 1794, when the present structure, built of stone, colored yellow, was completed; the log portion is still standing and is used as a part of the janitor's residence. On January 23, 1794, a charter was granted to the Trustees of the Lower Dublin Academy, who continued to conduct the school as a private institution until the inauguration of the public school system, when it was rented to the public school authorities and used as a public school; in 1901 it was bought by the city of Philadelphia and continued in the same use.

From the Frankford Herald, of May 11, 1901, we glean the following facts in reference to the old Academy:

"THE LAST MEETING AT THE OLD ACADEMY."

"One day in every May, for seven years more than a century, the Trustees of the ancient corporation known as the 'Trustees of the Lower Dublin Academy' have held their annual meetings at the old Academy, where a school has been in continuous existence for one hundred and seventy-three years.

"On Tuesday last the present Board, consisting of Andreas Hartel, President, George S. Clark, Joseph H. Brown, William Rowland, Jonathan Rowland, Jr., Henry V. Massey, Edwin M. Thomas, and John S. Clark, held its last meeting on the property which the city authorities have recently purchased, and already are in possession of, and have been for many years as tenants, conducting the Thomas Holme Public School. It is a beautiful property, comprising about three acres of land, a stone school house and a stone tenant house, a part of the latter being the original school house where children were taught when all the people of the neighborhood were loyal subjects of George II., of Great Britain, and the United States of America had not as yet been dreamed of by the wildest fancy.

"The property is situated at the junction of Willit's Road and Academy Lane, and nearby are the handsome country places of the late Alexander Brown, and others. It is an ideal spot for a school, the ground having a sunny exposure and a gentle slope in several directions. It is also beautifully shaded with forest trees, some of which are supposed to be nearly two hundred years old. The roads in the neighborhood are finely Telfordized, and the trolley cars run along the Bristol Turnpike, within three minutes walk of the school. Looking to the west one can see, about a half mile away, the grove that marks the location of the 'Old Crispin Cemetery' where the remains of Captain Thomas Holme, founder of the trust, repose under a monument erected to his memory many years ago by the then existent board of trustees, all of whom have long since departed this life. The thriving and growing village of Collegeville is near at hand. The country round about is gently undulating, highly cultivated and well wooded. Hereafter the trustees instead of assembling amidst these pleasant surroundings, fragrant with the odor of Spring blossoms and melodious with the love songs of the mating birds, will hold their meetings in a stuffy city office. The ancestors of some of the trustees sat in the original board in 1794. Others are successors of their fathers and grandfathers. One trustee is a lineal descendant of the founder of the trust, and for all, the place is full of pleasant memories of the meeting of friends, many of whom are now no more.

"The meeting on Tuesday confirmed the sale of the property to the city of Philadelphia, and the Trustees parted with the melancholy reminders that this was their last assemblage at the old Academy. The city authorities showed their excellent judgment in purchasing the property before it had so increased in value as to command a much higher price. This country is ripe for improvement and there will no doubt be a great advance in that direction in the near future. The money derived from the sale will form a part of the endowment fund, the income from which is used, by decree of the Common Pleas Court, given on petition of the Trustees, to aid in the support and maintenance of the 'Thomas Holme Free Library,' situated in the Athenæum Building, Holmesburg."

The Holmesburg Library was founded February 13, 1867. In 1880 Dr. J. Burd Peale succeeded in obtaining a decree of court, making the funds which the Trustees of The Lower Dublin Academy obtained from the rent of the ancient school house available for the support of this library, whose name was thereupon changed to "The Thomas Holme Library." In 1897 the Trustees found that their small endowment was insufficient to meet the growing needs of the library and an appeal was made to the management of the Free Library of Philadelphia to take charge of the local institution as a branch, which it did. In 1906 it became one of the Carnegie chain of free libraries, in a new building, though under the same management.

HON. BENJAMIN CRISPIN, son of Silas and Esther (Dougherty) Crispin, born in 1792, on his father's estate known as "Bellevue" on the Welsh road, above Holmesburg, part of the Well Spring plantation, that had come down in the family from their distinguished ancestor, Capt. Thomas Holme, was educated at the Lower Dublin Academy, with which his family was so closely identified. In 1822 he was commissioned a Lieutenant of Pennsylvania Militia. In 1823 he was appointed by the Governor of Pennsylvania as Justice of the Peace for townships of Byberry, Lower Dublin, and Oxford, Philadelphia county, and held that office until 1837. In 1828 he was appointed by the Court of Quarter Sessions of Philadelphia, Director of the Public Schools in his district. In 1837 he was elected a member of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, and re-elected in 1838-39. In 1840 he was elected to the State Senate, and in 1843 was made Speaker of the Senate, as the presiding officer of that body was then designated. When the whole of Philadelphia county was incorporated with the city, in 1854, Mr. Crispin was elected as the first Common Councilman from the Twenty-third Ward, then comprising the present Twenty-third, Twenty-fifth, Thirty-fifth and Forty-second Wards, and a part of the present Nineteenth Ward. He continued to manifest a deep interest in the schools, and on leaving council was again elected to the local school board. A new public school in Holmesburg has recently been named for him.

Benjamin Crispin was a founder of Emmanuel Protestant Episcopal Church, at Holmesburg, and served for twenty years as one of its vestrymen, and eight years as accounting warden. He also represented the parish in the Diocesan Convention in 1854-56-58-60. He was one of the originators of, and President of the Board of Trustees of the Holmesburg Athenaeum Association, and chairman of its building committee, which in 1850 built the town hall, called the Athenaeum, in which until 1906 was housed the Thomas Holme Library. In May, 1837, he was elected one of the Trustees of the Lower Dublin Academy, and in 1838 its President, an office he held until his death twenty-six years later. He was the founder of the "Crispin Burial-Ground Community," and principally instrumental in obtaining a charter for the Crispin Cemetery Corporation, from the Legislature, while he was a State Senator, in 1840, thus perpetuating the title to the heirs of Thomas Holme, under the care of a Board of Trustees, of which he was President.

Benjamin Crispin married, October 17, 1816, Maria, daughter of Amos and Elinor (Thomas) Foster, of Collegeville, (so named for the Lower Dublin Academy, located there), near Holmesburg. The Fosters came from New England, and the Thomas family from Wales.

Benjamin and Maria Crispin began their married life at "Bellevue," the old Crispin homestead on the Welsh road, but subsequently removed to a house on Main street, now Frankford avenue, corner of Mill street, Holmesburg, where they continued to reside the remainder of their lives; Benjamin Crispin dying there July 4, 1864, aged seventy-two years, and his widow, May 13, 1882, aged eighty-two years. Both were buried in the yard of Emmanuel Church, Holmesburg.

The two wives of Charles H. Crispin were from Bucks co., Pa.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN CRISPIN, third son of Benjamin and Maria (Foster) Crispin, was born in Holmesburg, Philadelphia, August 2, 1821, died at his residence, 3258 Chestnut street, West Philadelphia, July 19, 1898. He was educated at the Lower Dublin Academy and other educational institutions, and became a member of the firm of Collins & Crispin, weighmasters, and later becoming the head of the firm, the name was changed to B. F. Crispin & Company, and he remained at its head the remainder of his life. The firm was the leading one of weighmasters in the city of Philadelphia, and Mr. Crispin was favorably known in commercial circles, as an able, energetic and upright business man. He continued to reside in Holmesburg until 1873, when, having lost his first wife and a daughter, he removed to Camden, New Jersey, and resided there for a number of years, finally removing to West Philadelphia, where he died. While a resident of Holmesburg, he took an active interest in local affairs. He was for a number of years Secretary of the Frankford and Holmesburg Railroad Company; was one of the founders of the Holmesburg Public Library and served as its President for a number of years. In 1871 he was elected a Trustee of the Lower Dublin Academy, and in 1891 was made President of the Board, a position previously held by his father, and held that position to the time of his death, presiding at a banquet given in January, 1894, at the Green Tree Hotel, Holmesburg, to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the incorporation of the Board. He was elected in 1872 a vestryman of Emmanuel Protestant Episcopal Church, an office also held by his father, whom he also succeeded as President of the Board of Trustees of the Crispin Cemetery Corporation, an account of which is given above, and served in that position until his death.

Benjamin Franklin Crispin married (first) June 29, 1845, Elizabeth R., daughter of Robert and Sarah Glenn, of Holmesburg. She died March 31, 1873, and he married (second) Catharine Roe. His children were, however, all by first wife.

Sarah Frances Crispin, daughter of B. Franklin and Elizabeth R. (Glenn) Crispin, married, June 4, 1874, Hon. George S. Clark, of Holmesburg, Philadelphia, and resides there. She was much interested in the preservation of the Crispin Burying-Ground, and at one time raised a fund, among her relatives, for fencing the ground. Her husband, George S. Clark, was a grandson of George Clark, the first of the family to settle at Holmesburg. George Clark, grandfather, was born in county Donegal, Ireland, 1797; married there, 1821, Anne Kearney, and in 1822 they came to America; settling first in Philadelphia, but soon afterward removing to Oxford, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where Mr. Clark began his active career as a constructor of public works; being one of the first to engage in railroad contracting in Pennsylvania, an occupation he pursued with much energy and success for many years.

In 1840 Mr. Clark returned with his family to Philadelphia, and in that year purchased of Joseph Gillingham the old Crispin homestead on the Welsh road, known as "Bellevue," about one mile above Holmesburg. This old homestead was part of the original tract taken up by Thomas Holme, from whom it had descended through six generations to Hon. Benjamin Crispin, who sold it to Joseph Gillingham, who erected the present mansion thereon in 1828. Here George Clark resided until his death, which occurred in January, 1875. The homestead "Bellevue" was purchased from the other heirs, in 1879, by his grandson, George S. Clark, who had married Sarah Frances Crispin, whose ancestors had owned and occupied it for nearly a century and a half. George Clark, Sr., was one of the constructors of the Welland Canal, Canada; the Boston Water Works; the Croton Water Works (New York); the Pennsylvania Railroad; the Chestnut Street Bridge, Philadelphia; the Pennsylvania & Delaware Railroad; the Peach Bottom Railroad; the Frankford & Holmesburg Railroad, and many other important works.

He belonged to the Presbyterian church, and was a liberal contributor toward the erection of the Presbyterian church at Holmesburg, where he was a communicant and regular attendant. He was buried at Cedar Hill Cemetery, near Frankford. He had five sons in the Union Army during the Civil War, one of whom, George Clark, Jr., of the Thirteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry, was killed in action in Virginia, in 1862. Another son, William Clark, married Catharine M., daughter of William Crispin, of Holmesburg, as before stated, a granddaughter of Hon. Benjamin Crispin.

Lieut.-Col. John Clark, eldest son of George and Anne (Kearney) Clark, born in Philadelphia, in 1822, was the father of George S. Clark, first above mentioned. Col. Clark, when he had completed his education, engaged with his father in the construction of public works, the first being the Welland Canal. He was a contractor on some of the largest public works in the country, notably the Pennsylvania Railroad, Hudson River Railroad, North Pennsylvania Railroad, Croton Water Works, of New York City, Boston Water Works, etc. After locating in Philadelphia, he served one term in the Common Council of that city from the old Twenty-third Ward. He was also a member of the Philadelphia Stock Exchange.

When the Civil War broke out in 1861, John Clark was unanimously elected captain of the company of volunteers raised in and around Holmesburg, which company was incorporated in the Third Regiment, Pennsylvania Reserves (Thirty-second Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry), and went with that regiment to the front. He was in service for three years, taking part in the battles of Mechanicsville, Gaines' Mills, Glendale, Malvern Hill, Manassas, South Mountain, Antietam, and other engagements. Having been promoted to lieutenant-colonel, he commanded his regiment at Antietam, and received at Manassas a slight wound, which was further aggravated by a severe fall from his horse, but he continued at the head of his regiment during the entire battle. In 1862 he was detached from his regiment and detailed by the War Department for service in the construction department of the United States military railroads, and given charge of the Acquia & Fredericksburg railroad. He was later sent to Nashville, Tennessee, on similar service, and remained in the west until his three years term of service had expired. In 1866 he built the Warren & Franklin railroad, in the oil region of Pennsylvania. He was also engaged on the Lehigh & Susquehanna railroad, the Union railroad of Baltimore, etc. He was a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature in 1868-69, and was Speaker of the House in the latter year. Mr. Clark was a man of handsome appearance and commanding presence, genial in manner and generous in disposition. His war record was given in Major E. M. Woodward's "History of the 3d. Penna. Reserves," which contains a portrait of him, as does also, "The Bristol Pike," by Rev. S. F. Hotchkiss. He was one of the original members of the Pennsylvania Commandery, Military Order of the Loyal Legion.

He was a trustee of Lower Dublin Academy, and a regular attendant at Emmanuel Church, Holmesburg. While engaged in the construction of the Welland Canal, Mr. Clark married Elizabeth M., only daughter of E. W. Stephenson, a prominent citizen of St. Catharine's, Ontario, Canada. They resided for a short period in Boston, and West Needham, Massachusetts, Tarrytown, New York, and several years at West Chester, Pennsylvania. In 1858 they removed to Holmesburg, where he purchased the house at Main street, now Frankford avenue, and Mill street, now known as the Dr. Peale house, diagonally opposite Hon. Benjamin Crispin's residence. Here Col. Clark died May 30, 1872. He is buried in Emmanuel Churchyard, Holmesburg.

GEORGE STEPHENSON CLARK, son of Col. John and Elizabeth M. (Stephenson) Clark, born January 3, 1850, at St. Catharine's, Canada, was but eight years of age when his parents took up their residence in Holmesburg. He was educated at Prof. Wall's Classical School, Holmesburg, at Rev. Dr. T. H. Wells's Boarding School, Andalusia, Bucks county, the Episcopal Academy, Philadelphia, and at the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania. His legal preceptor was David W. Sellers, Esq., and he was admitted to the Philadelphia Bar, in 1871. Mr. Clark represented the Twenty-third Legislature District, Pennsylvania Legislature, in 1881-83. He has been a vestryman of Emmanuel Church, a trustee of the Lower Dublin Academy, a trustee of the Holmesburg Athenæum Association, all of which offices might almost be said to be hereditary in his own and his wife's families. He is also a member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion. As before stated George S. Clark married, June 4, 1874, Sarah Frances Crispin, and as shown in the preceding pages took an active part in the preservation of the old Crispin Burial-Ground. In 1879 he purchased of the heirs of his grandfather, "Bellevue," the old Crispin homestead on the Welsh road, so long the residence of his wife's ancestors, and retained it until 1884. He afterwards purchased the handsome residence surrounded by extensive grounds at Decatur street and Delaware avenue, Holmesburg, built by Andreas Hartel. The house originally faced Delaware avenue, but was moved to face Decatur street.

Issue of Hon. George S. and Sarah Frances (Crispin) Clark:

ELEANOR CRISPIN, daughter of Silas and Esther (Holme) Crispin, and granddaughter of both Capt. William Crispin and of Capt. Thomas Holme, born September 11, 1687, married, November 25, 1708, John Hart, Jr., of Warminster township, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, son of John Hart, who came from Witney, Oxfordshire, England, in 1682, and grandson of Christopher Hart.

Christopher and Mary Hart were members of Society of Friends, living at Witney, Oxfordshire, which town is described in Playfair's Geography, published in 1809, as "a long town, consisting of two streets, of which the principal one is spacious, with a church at the upper end. It is eight miles West-north-west from Oxford, and five miles from Bampton. It is situated on the Windrush that runs southeast to the Issis." In that neighborhood was Wichwood Forest, once of great extent.

Christopher and Mary Hart had issue:

JOHN, b. Nov. 16, 1651, of whom presently;

Sir Robert Hart, b. Aug. 1, 1655; lived in London, where he m. and had children;

Mary, b. April 1, 1658; accompanied her brother John to Pa., where she d. unm.;

Joseph, b. Oct. 24, 1661; went to the island of Jamaica, where he acquired great wealth, d. unm.

JOHN HART, eldest son of Christopher and Mary Hart, born at Witney, Oxfordshire, England, November 16, 1651, came to Pennsylvania, when about thirty years of age. By deeds of lease and release dated October 11 and 12, 1681, he purchased of William Penn, of Worminghurst, county Surrey, England, Proprietary of Pennsylvania, 1000 acres of land to be laid out in the Province of Pennsylvania. He came to Pennsylvania in the summer of 1682, possibly in the same ship with Capt. Thomas Holme, stopping for a while at Upland, or Chester, where he was a member of the Grand Jury, September 12, 1682. He soon after this date removed to Byberry township, Philadelphia county, where 484 acres of his purchase were laid out as early as 1683. In 1684, 485 acres more of his 1000 acres were laid out in Warminster township, Bucks county. The Byberry tract is now owned by Gen. Edward de V. Morrell, and the Drexel family, but the so-called "hipped-roof Hart House," near Morrell's entrance, is not the house built by John Hart, but the one erected by Thomas Rush, husband of Esther Crispin, sister to Eleanor, wife of John Hart, Jr., in 1731, on seventy-two acres sold by John Hart to James Rush, father of Thomas, August 8, 1697. John Hart sold the remainder of his Byberry land at about the same date, reserving his private burial ground, which, however, he later made over to Abington Monthly Meeting, for public use; his great-grandson, John Hart, released it to the Overseers of the Poor for Byberry township, May 30, 1786. In the year 1697, or perhaps a little earlier, John Hart removed to his plantation in Warminster township, Bucks county, where his descendants remained for many generations and were one of the most distinguished families of the county.

John Hart was a member of Colonial Assembly from Philadelphia county, 1683-84, and signed the first "Form of Government" 2mo. 2, 1683. At the time of coming to the Province of Pennsylvania he was of such standing in the Society of Friends as to become a minister of ability and influence; he at once took a leading position among Friends in the Province, and was probably their leading minister. The meetings of the Society, including the monthly meetings, were held at his house until 1686, when the Meeting House was erected, and he filled the position of clerk of the Monthly Meeting, and was trustee of the lands held by the meeting and served on many of its important committees. In 1691 he joined George Keith's schism, and carried with him the greater part of his family connection, including the Rush and Collett families. Next to Keith himself, John Hart was the most important member of their organization. But at about the time John Hart removed to Warminster the Keithians had disintegrated and he and many others became Baptists. In 1702 he joined Pennypack Baptist Church, in Lower Dublin township, and was made assistant minister, and became as satisfactory a preacher among the Baptists as he had among the Quakers. He died in Warminster township, Bucks county, in September, 1714, and was buried in the Pennypack graveyard. Robert Proud, in his "History of Pennsylvania" describes John Hart, as a "man of rank, character, and reputation." In collaboration with Thomas Budd he wrote a small book on religious matters, one of the earliest books published in the Province of Pennsylvania.

John Hart married, in 1683, Susanna, daughter of Capt. John and Susanna (Lucas) Rush, of Byberry. During the Civil War in England, her father, John Rush, commanded a troop of horse in the Parliamentary Army. On June 8, 1648, he married Susanna Lucas, at Harton, Oxfordshire. About 1660 they embraced the principles of Friends, and in 1682 emigrated to Pennsylvania, where Capt.

Rush took up a tract of land, laid out for 500 acres, in Byberry township, Philadelphia county, adjoining that of his future son-in-law, John Hart. They were the ancestors of the well-known Rush family of Philadelphia, including the celebrated Dr. Benjamin Rush; Dr. James Rush, who founded the Ridgway Library, and to whom descended Capt. John Rush's sword and watch; Col. Richard Rush, of "Rush's Lancers," and many others prominent in affairs and in Philadelphia Society. The earlier generations of the Rush family were largely intermarried with the Harts, Crispins and Colletts, and continued to live many generations on the original tract taken up by Capt. John Rush in Byberry and some of them on the original Hart tract in that township. Many of them were buried in the Hart burial-ground above mentioned. In his later years Dr. Benjamin Rush visited this graveyard, and his own birthplace nearby, and embraced a large tree which had been planted by his father; the incidents of which trip he described in a letter quoted by Watson, in his "Annals of Philadelphia," and others; which letter is of much local historical value, except that Dr. Rush woefully misinterpreted his grandfather's social position, because he had heard him called a "gunsmith." Susanna (Rush) Hart died February 27, 1725.

John and Susanna (Rush) Hart had issue:

JOHN HART, JR., b. July 16, 1684; m. Eleanor Crispin, of whom presently;

Thomas Hart, m. Esther ———; inherited 200 acres of his father's Warminster plantation, but sold it to James Rush, Dec. 11, 1719;

Joseph Hart, m. April 2, 1713, Sarah Stout; d. 1714, probably without issue;

Josiah Hart, was granted a letter of dismission from Pennepack Baptist Church, Aug. 12, 1715, to "Cokehansey" probably Cohansey, Cumberland county, New Jersey, where there was a Baptist Church established as early as 1683;

Mary Hart, d. 1721, probably unm.

JOHN HART, JR., born on his father's plantation in Byberry, Philadelphia county, Pennsylvania, July 16, 1684, died on his own plantation in Warminster township, Bucks county, March 22, 1763. He was a Justice of Bucks County Courts, as early as 1726, and still in commission as late as 1757. In the meantime, however, he was High Sheriff of Bucks county, 1738-39-43-44-45-48-49; and Coroner, 1741-42. He inherited 200 acres of his father's Warminster plantation, and lived there all his life, being a man of wealth for the times. He was among the founders of the Southampton Baptist Church, an offspring from Pennypack, April 8, 1746, and was elected the first deacon on May 8, of the same year. He was a pillar of this church to the day of his death and its clerk from the organization until 1762; also trustee of the church's real estate. He built the family mansion on the Warminster plantation (though his father no doubt had a house there previously) the date stone of which has his own and his wife's initials, "Hart, John and Eleanor," and the date 1750. He was buried in the graveyard of Southampton Baptist Church, beside his wife, Eleanor Crispin, who died October 29, 1754.

Issue of John and Eleanor (Crispin) Hart:

C. He was a minister of the Southampton Baptist Church, and with his father one of its founders. In 1749 he became pastor of the First Baptist Church of Charleston, S. C., and the College of Rhode Island made him Master of Arts at its first commencement, in 1769. "The breaking out of the Revolutionary War found Mr. Hart laboring in his church; but when the tocsin of war was sounded it filled him with the same patriotic ardor that burned in the bosoms of other members of his family." He served on important commissions for the Provincial Congress of S. C., and received the thanks of that body. When the British captured Charleston, he returned to Warminster, Bucks county, and never went back to S. C.; but his descendants to-day include many of the most distinguished families of that state, and of Georgia, and neighboring states, bearing the names of Lee, Coxe, Screven, etc., as well as Hart. He died at Hopewell, N. J., while pastor of the Baptist church there, but was buried in his ancestral churchyard at Southampton, Bucks co., Pa.;

COL. JOSEPH HART, son of John Jr. and Eleanor (Crispin) Hart, and one of the most conspicuous patriots in Bucks county during the Revolution, was born in the old family mansion in Warminster township, September 1, 1715, died there February 25, 1788. He inherited, as eldest son, 200 acres of his father's plantation on which was located the family mansion, and added to it by purchase, during his father's lifetime, the 200 acres which had been his Uncle Thomas's portion of his grandfather's land, sold by Thomas to James Rush, in 1719. He thus became seized of 400 acres of the 484 acres taken up by his grandfather, John Hart, Sr., in 1684. With his father and brother, Oliver, as well as his wife, Elizabeth Collett, he was among the founders of Southampton Baptist Church in 1746, and succeeded his father as clerk in 1762; was trustee in 1763, as well as deacon and treasurer. He was Sheriff of Bucks county, 1749-50-51; Justice of the County Courts, 1747, and when the various courts were separated was Justice of the Court of Quarter Sessions and Common Pleas, in 1764.

In 1747 he was ensign of the regiment of "Bucks County Associators" commanded by Col. Alexander Graydon, and was promoted to captain after Braddock's defeat in 1755. As the Revolution developed he early prepared to support it. "He was among the first to gather up the strength of the Colony before the contest broke out." "His standing gave him great influence, and he was probably the foremost man in the county of Bucks in moulding public opinion." He was one of his county's representatives in the Provincial Convention, held in Carpenter's Hall, Philadelphia, July, 1774; a member of the Bucks County Committee of Safety, and chosen its chairman, when it organized January 16, 1775; vice-president of the Provincial Conference held at Carpenter's Hall, Philadelphia, June, 1776.

Joseph Hart was elected July 20, 1775, colonel of the second battalion, Bucks County Associators, and had his command in the field with the "Flying Camp" in the summer of 1776. In the summer of 1777, Col. Hart was elected a member of the Supreme Executive Council of Pennsylvania, and took his seat, July 2, serving until October, 1779. In 1780 he was appointed County Lieutenant for Bucks. At the same time he also held leading civil offices in the county, having been commissioned Register of Wills for Bucks county, under the new government, March 21, 1777, and the county courts being reorganized he was commissioned Judge of the Courts of Common Pleas and Quarter Sessions, June 7, 1784. The battle of Crooked Billet, now Hatboro, was fought partly on his homestead plantation.

Col. Joseph Hart married, October 9, 1740, his cousin, Elizabeth, born in Byberry, May 14, 1714, daughter of John and Mary (Crispin) Collett, of Philadelphia county. She was both his first and second cousin, her mother being a sister of his mother, Eleanor Crispin, and her father a first cousin to his father, she, like him, being descended from the Crispins and Rushs; an account of her mother, Mary (Crispin) Collett (in earlier life called Marie or Maria) is given above in the list of the children of Silas and Esther (Holme) Crispin. Elizabeth (Collett) Hart died in Warminster, February 19, 1788, less than a week prior to her husband, and both are buried in Southampton Baptist Churchyard.

Issue of Col. Joseph and Elizabeth (Collett) Hart:

William, b. Dec. 4, 1741, d. unm. Oct. 15, 1760;

John, b. Nov. 29, 1743, d. June 5, 1786; m. In 1781 he was the victim of the celebrated robbery, by the notorious outlaws known as the "Doan Boys," their leader being Moses Doan, and lost £735 of the public money; the legislature passing a bill for its repayment after his death. He died at Newtown, and was buried beside his ancestors in the Southampton Churchyard;

Silas, b. Oct. 4, 1747; m. Jan. 29, 1770, Mary Daniel, the date and place of his death is unknown;

JOSIAH, b. July 17, 1749, d. Oct. 25, 1800; m. Ann Watts; of whom presently;

Joseph, b. Nov. 21, 1751, d. Jan. 30, 1752;

Joseph, b. Dec. 7, 1758, d. April 15, 1811; m. Dec. 25, 1783, Ann, or Nancy, dau. of William and Elizabeth Folwell, and a sister to William Watts Folwell, a distinguished scholar, and a graduate of the Univ. Pa.; she was also a descendant of Dr. Isaac Watts. Joseph Hart, Jr., succeeded to the ancestral homestead in Warminster, d. in the old family mansion and was buried at Southampton. During the Whiskey Insurrection of 1794, he was paymaster of Col. Hanna's brigade. He was a member of the State Senate in 1804 and for several years thereafter, and in the session of 1808 introduced the bill for removing the county seat of Bucks from Newtown to Doylestown. His son, John Hart, who with his brothers, Thomas and Lewis, was a member of Capt. William Purdy's, Bucks co. company in the second war with Great Britain, a member of the State Legislature and the incumbent of a number of local offices, was the father of B. Frank Hart, of Phila., many years a prominent manufacturer and business man of that city.

JOSIAH HART, second son of Col. Joseph Hart, born in the family mansion in Warminster, Bucks county, July 17, 1748, married, January 11, 1776, Ann (Nancy) Watts, born in Southampton, Bucks county, October 5, 1759, daughter of Arthur and Sarah Watts, of Southampton, and a sister to Hon. William Watts, many years Prothonotary and Associate Justice of Bucks County Court of Common Pleas. She as well as the wife of her husband's brother Joseph, Nancy Folwell, was a descendant of Dr. Isaac Watts.

The first of the Watts family in Pennsylvania was Rev. John Watts, born in Leeds, England, November 3, 1661, who settled in Lower Dublin township, Philadelphia county, in 1686, and married, February 23, 1687, Sarah Eaton. He became pastor of Pennypack Baptist Church, to which the early Harts belonged, died there August 27, 1702, and was buried at Cold Spring Baptist Church, Bristol township, Bucks county, the parents of Pennypack.

Either he or his son Stephen, grandfather of Mrs. Hart, purchased 200 acres of land in Southampton, on the Warminster line, near the estate of the Hart family, and the family has been a prominent one in Bucks county and elsewhere.

Josiah Hart purchased of his father, Col. Joseph Hart, April 9, 1777, a grist and sawmill and a tract of land on Pennypack creek in Moreland township, Philadelphia, now Montgomery county, and lived there nearly twenty years, or until April, 1795, when he sold his Moreland property and removed to the old Watts plantation in Southampton, at what is now Davisville, a portion of which, with fifteen acres adjoining in Warminster, his wife later inherited under the will of her father, Arthur Watts, dated October 16, 1809. Here Josiah Hart spent the remainder of his days, and was buried with his ancestors at Southampton Churchyard. He died October 25, 1800, and his widow, March 2, 1815. He was a prominent and active man in the community, and during the Revolution was captain of the Moreland Company of Philadelphia County Associators.

Issue of Josiah and Ann (Folwell) Hart:

Sarah, b. Nov. 6, 1776, d. May 3, 1838; m. Dec. 7, 1797, William Shelmire;

Elizabeth, b. Dec. 13, 1779, d. Oct. 23, 1834; m. March 30, 1797, Arthur Yerkes;

Rebecca, b. Jan. 14, 1782, d. March 4, 1815; m. Sept. 24, 1805, William Miles;

Amy, b. June 30, 1784, d. Aug. 17, 1847; m. John Davis; of whom presently;

William Watts, b. June 2, 1790, d. Feb. 24, 1815; admitted to Bucks co. bar, June 3, 1813; Deputy Register of Wills, under his cousin, Dr. William Hart, 1810; Deputy Register and Recorder of Deeds under John Pugh, 1813; Deputy Prothonotary, under his uncle, William Watts, March, 1811; commissioned Clerk of Orphans' Court, Feb. 28, 1814, but resigned that position to join the army when news was received at the county seat of the burning of Washington by the British, and was commissioned Lieutenant of the company then organized, becoming later Adjutant of Col. Thomas Humphries' regiment at Marcus Hook. Returned to Doylestown at close of war, was taken with typhus fever and died at the house of his uncle, Hon. William Watts, Feb. 24, 1815.

AMY HART, fourth daughter of Josiah and Ann (Watts) Hart, born in Moreland township, Philadelphia county, June 20, 1784, was reared from her eleventh year on the old homestead of her maternal ancestors at Davisville, Bucks county, and married there, March 23, 1813, General John Davis, born August 7, 1788, son of John and Ann (Simpson) Davis, of Solebury, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, later of Maryland.

William Davis, grandfather of Gen. John Davis, became a resident of Solebury township, in his youth, and while tradition relates that he was of Welsh ancestry, his environment and associations strongly indicate that either he or his father was a native of the north of Ireland, others of the name having emigrated from Ulster and settled on the Delaware in that vicinity shortly prior to the earliest record we have of him. He married, about 1756, Sarah Burleigh, or Burley, daughter of John Burley, of Upper Makefield township, Bucks county, who had settled there about 1735, and lived the life of a farmer in that vicinity, dying in the latter part of the century. William and Sarah (Burley) Davis had issue:

Jemima Davis, b. Dec. 25, 1758; m. John Pitner, and removed with him, first to Md., later to New Castle, Del., where the family were prominent in affairs;
 JOHN DAVIS, b. Sept. 6, 1760, of whom presently;
 Sarah, b. Oct. 1, 1763; m. Lott Search, of Southampton, Bucks co.;
 William Davis, b. Sept. 9, 1766; became a sea captain and died at sea;
 Joshua Davis, b. July 6, 1769; removed to Maryland about 1800, and later to Ohio;
 Mary, b. Oct. 3, 1771;
 Joseph, b. March 1, 1774, of whom we have no further record.

JOHN DAVIS, eldest son of William and Sarah (Burley) Davis, and the father of Gen. John Davis, was born in Solebury or Upper Makefield, Bucks county, September 6, 1760, and at the age of sixteen years became a member of Capt. Samuel Smith's company in Col. Joseph Hart's battalion of the "Flying Camp," and took part in the Jersey campaign of 1776; the following spring he enlisted in Capt. Butler's company, Col. Butler's regiment, Continental Line, but was later transferred to the light infantry, under Gen. the Marquis de Lafayette, Capt. Joseph McClelland's company, serving in all five years, participating in the battles of Brandywine, Germantown, Monmouth, and the storming of Stony Point. At Brandywine, he assisted in carrying the wounded Lafayette to a place of safety.

Returning to Bucks county at the close of the war, he married, June 26, 1783, Ann Simpson, of Buckingham, Bucks county, where her father was a landholder and is supposed to have been of the same lineage as the maternal ancestors of Gen. U. S. Grant, though of this there is no proof, and the relationship, if existing, is somewhat remote.

John and Ann (Simpson) Davis resided for a time on a farm in Solebury, and in 1795 removed to Ellicott's Mills, Maryland, and in 1816 removed to Franklin county, Ohio, where he died January 25, 1832, and his widow, June 6, 1851. They had issue, as follows:

Sarah, b. Oct. 12, 1784;
 William, b. Aug. 22, 1786;
 GEN. JOHN, b. Aug. 7, 1788, of whom presently;
 Ann, b. Nov. 6, 1790;
 Samuel, b. 1792, d. inf.;
 Joshua, b. in Md., June 27, 1796;
 Samuel S., b. Sept., 1798;
 Joseph, b. Jan. 23, 1803;
 Elizabeth, b. Nov. 18, 1805.

Most of these children removed with their parents to the banks of the Scioto, and became active and useful members of the community.

GEN. JOHN DAVIS, second son of John and Ann (Simpson) Davis, born in Solebury township, August 7, 1788, removed with his parents to Maryland, but on his marriage to Amy Hart, settled on his mother-in-law's property, the old Watts estate above mentioned, in Southampton, and at the latter's death in 1815 became its owner, and resided in that neighborhood the remainder of his life; the present village of Davisville taking its name from him. He early became active in public affairs. On the news of the burning of Washington reaching Bucks county, a meeting was called at Hart's tavern at the Cross roads, now Hartsville, September 1, 1814, to raise volunteers to take the field, and the name of John Davis heads the list of the men then enrolled. He became ensign of the company, and after two months drill, at Bush Hill, Philadelphia, the company joined Col. Humphries command at Marcus Hook, where they were stationed for three months to guard the approach to Philadelphia.

Ensign Davis at the close of the war joined the volunteer militia, and became active therein, holding commission constantly for thirty-four years, first as Captain, later Brigade Inspector, Major, Lieutenant-Colonel, Colonel, and was three times elected Major General of the division composed of Bucks and Montgomery counties. Gen. Davis was a natural politician, a Democrat from conviction, and was for many years a leader of that party in Bucks county. Sturdy in the advocacy of what he conceived to be the best interests of the country, and an orator of considerable ability, he was for many years one of the strong local orators of his party. He was appointed by Gov. Wolf, in 1833, one of the appraisers of public works, his first public office, which he held for three years. In 1838 he was elected to House of Representatives of the United States and made a splendid record as a Congressman; his speech in favor of the passage of the Independent Treasury Bill, June 27, 1840, being commented on throughout the country as a masterly and able one. He also served on many important committees, and was fearless in his expression of his views on questions before the national law-making body. On March 4, 1845, he was appointed Surveyor of the Port of Philadelphia and filled that position for four years. He was constantly active in political matters up to the time of the election of James Buchanan to the presidency, of whom he was a personal friend and an ardent advocate of his election. He, however, disapproved of the president's attitude on the Kansas question, and other national policies, and withdrew from active participation in political affairs for a time. He was, however, active in raising troops and funds for the putting down of the rebellion, and had his age permitted would have gone to the front in defense of the constitution.

In 1829 John Davis built a store building at Davisville, and followed the mercantile business there, for many years filling the position of postmaster. He was an excellent business man, frank and straightforward in his dealings and of unswerving public and private integrity. He and his family were members of the Baptist church, and took a deep interest in religious and educational matters. He died at Davisville, April 8, 1876. His wife, Amy (Hart) Davis, had died nearly thirty years earlier, August 17, 1847.

Major General John and his wife Amy (Hart) Davis had issue:

- William Hart Davis, b. May 3, 1814, d. July 8, 1815;

In the same year he was appointed instructor of mathematics and commandant of cadets at Portsmouth Military Academy, Va., where he remained for three years. He studied law in the office of Judge John Fox, at Doylestown, and was admitted to the Bucks co. bar, 1846. In the same year he entered Harvard Law School, Cambridge, Mass., and while there enlisted in the First Mass. Infantry, for the Mexican war, and was commissioned First Lieutenant Dec. 31, 1846, of Capt. Crowningshield's company, in Col. Caleb Cushing's regiment; became Adjutant, Jan. 16, 1847, Aide-de-camp, June 1, 1847; acting Asst. Adjutant General, July 18, 1847; acting Quartermaster and Inspector, Oct. 29, 1848; Captain Co. I, March 16, 1848, and served throughout the war. Attorney for New Mexico, and spent nearly four years in that territory, during which time he filled the offices of Attorney-General, Secretary of the Territory, Acting Governor, and Superintendent of Indian Affairs. Returned to Doylestown in 1857, and purchased the Doylestown Democrat, the official organ of his party, which he ably edited and published until 1890. Regiment*, of which he was commissioned Captain, April 16, 1861, and served with it in the campaign in the Shenandoah Valley; returned to Doylestown and recruited the 104th Regiment, Penna. SARAH SIMPSON DAVIS, b. Nov. 10, 1822, d. April 20, 1896; m. Ulysses Mercur, Chief Justice of Pa.; of whom presently;

Amy Hart Davis, b. June 24, 1827; m. June 12, 1850, Dr. Holmes Sells, of Dublin, O., later physician at Atlanta, Ga., 1859, to his death in 1888. Mrs. Sells is now a resident of Hatboro, Montgomery co., Pa.;

Elizabeth Neeley Davis, b. Feb. 20, 1825; residing at the old homestead, Davisville, Southampton twp., Bucks co.

SARAH SIMPSON DAVIS, born at Davisville, Pennsylvania, November 10, 1822, married there, June 12, 1850, Ulysses Mercur, afterwards Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, son of Henry and Mary (Watts) Mercur, of Towanda, Pennsylvania.

Hugh Mercur, grandfather of Judge Mercur, was a native of Austria, and came to Pennsylvania, about the close of the Revolutionary war, and settled in Strasburg township, Lancaster county, where his only surviving child, Henry Mercur, was born September 20, 1786. In 1799 this son was sent by his parents to Vienna, Austria, to be educated at the University, and remained there eight years, a portion of the time being probably spent with a brother of his father, for whom he was named. Both his parents died in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, before his return in 1807, and after settling up their small estate, he went on a prospecting tour to the frontiers of the United States, and in 1809 located at what later became Towanda, Bradford county, Pennsylvania, where he took up lands and followed the business of a hatter until 1845, when he sold his landed and other interests there and went to Illinois, where he took up large tracts of land, and remained in that state until 1865, when he returned to Towanda, and resided there until his death, September 10, 1868.

Henry Mercur had received while abroad a fine scientific and classical education.

and was one of the best educated men of his time. He married (first) September 10, 1810, Mary, born near Towanda, Bradford county, Pennsylvania, 1790, daughter of Francis Watts (of no known relation to the Watts family previously mentioned in this narrative, but of a family that had been early settlers in central Pennsylvania) by his wife, Jane Means. Francis Watts was a private in the Fourth Regiment of Light Dragoons, Colonel Stephen Moylan, in the Continental Army, and second lieutenant in Colonel Arthur Buchanan's battalion, of Cumberland County Militia, in 1777. He was captured by the Indians in their attack on Fort Freeland, July 28, 1779, but escaped the same day; his father, James Watts, who was a sergeant in Captain Arthur Taggart's company, Second Battalion, Cumberland County Militia, was killed by the Indians in the same attack. His mother was Ann Walker, of a family prominent among the early settlers of Cumberland county, where James Watts resided prior to his removal to Northumberland county, during the Revolution. He is said to have been a brother of Gen. Frederick Watts, of Cumberland county, a prominent officer, of the Continental Army, who was colonel of a battalion of the "Flying Camp" in the Jersey and Long Island campaign of 1776.

Jane Means, wife of Francis Watts, was daughter of Samuel Means, Jr., and a granddaughter of Samuel Means, Sr., an Ulster Scot, who settled in Paxtang, Lancaster county, about 1720, and died there, February, 1746-7, by his wife, Grizzel, daughter of Andrew Stephen, who died in November of the same year.

Samuel Means, Jr., was a soldier in the Revolution and is supposed to have been killed at the Wyoming Massacre. His wife was a descendant of William Clark, "of Lewes, in the County of Sussex, upon Delaware Bay, Gent," Chief Justice of the Provincial (Supreme) Court of Pennsylvania and a member of Provincial Council from Sussex county, 1683-1705. He was a Justice of Deal county, as Sussex county was known under the jurisdiction of the Duke of York, as early as June 7, 1680, and the "Three Lower Counties" of New Castle, Kent and Sussex, becoming territories of the Province of Pennsylvania, November 25, 1682, and part of William Penn's Proprietary Government, at which time the name of Deal county was changed to Sussex, and Jones county to Kent; William Clark was commissioned a Justice of Sussex county, May 1, 1683, and was regularly recommissioned until his death in 1705. He was also a Justice of the Provincial (Supreme) Court of Pennsylvania, July, 1684 to 1693, and was appointed Chief Justice of that tribunal, April 10, 1703, and served until his death. He was also Speaker of the Pennsylvania Assembly in 1692. His will dated at Lewes, 2mo. 24, 1705, proved July 24, 1705, directs his property at Lewes to be sold, and mentions his son, William Clarke, Jr., and the latter's espoused wife, Rebecca Curtis; his granddaughter Elizabeth, wife of Daniel Brown; his granddaughter Mary Pemberton, his daughter Honour, wife of Thomas Pemberton, whom he makes sole executrix, and his brother-in-law, Walton Hulings, and his friend Thomas Fisher, whom he names as overseers of his will.

William Clarke in 1692 was made Collector of Customs for the Territories, a crown office, not under the jurisdiction of Penn's government. Although he continued to describe himself as a resident of Lewes until his death, he had nevertheless one of the finest mansions in the city of Philadelphia. It was located at the southwest corner of Third and Chestnut streets, the present (1907) site of the Merchants' and Mariners' Building, of the Girard Estate. Third and Chestnut was at that time not very far from the centre of the city, which was principally clustered about Front street. Still it was on the outskirts of the town, and Mr. Clarke had room, not only for a grand house according to the ideas of the period, but for a fine garden. The lot was ninety-nine feet front on Chestnut street and about two hundred and fifty-five feet deep. Clarke had bought it from Thomas Rouse, June 12, 1694. The house known as "Clarke Hall," was described as being built of brick, with a double front, two stories in height with a hipped roof. It had many parlors and chambers and, in size, was considered the largest house in town.

By deed of March 14, or April 22, 1704, William Clarke, Sr., conveyed this property to his son, William Clarke, Jr., and Rebecca Curtis, of Barbadoes, reciting in the deed that a marriage was soon to take place between the said William and Rebecca, "with whom he is likely to have a considerable estate." The father also declared in the deed that he was pleased at the prospect of his son's marriage to such "a worthy and virtuous person as the said Rebecca, and in consideration thereof, and from motives of affection" to his son, made the gift, the same to be void if the marriage was not solemnized in six months. The deed further recited that the property was then in the tenancy of Lieut. Gov. John Evans, who was living there with William Penn, Jr., Sec. James Logan, and Judge Roger Mompesson. William Clarke, Jr., and Rebecca Curtis were married, but the match could not have been a happy one, judging from subsequent events. In fact, William Clarke, the younger, in less than fourteen years ran through his property and does not seem to have been in a condition to make arrangements with his creditors. The Assembly of Pennsylvania, May 3, 1718, passed an act in which it was directed that the house and lot at Third and Chestnut streets should be vested in Charles Read and others as trustees, to be sold for the payment of the debts of William Clarke, Sr., and William Clarke, Jr. These trustees, by deed of December 8, 1718, sold the property to Anthony Houston, and nine days afterwards Houston conveyed it to Andrew Hamilton, in fee. By virtue of this conveyance Hamilton occupied the house as his city residence during the remainder of his lifetime, but for a considerable period after the purchase he must have felt that he was residing in a house to which he had no legal title, although he paid a full and adequate price for it, for the reason that all laws passed by the Assembly of Pennsylvania were required to be submitted for the approval of the Privy Council of England, and it frequently happened that laws passed by the Assembly were repealed by the Privy Council, sometimes to the injury of the community and private individuals, as in this case. The Act of Assembly providing for the sale of the Clarke property was repealed by the Privy Council, and Mr. Hamilton was laid under the disadvantage of occupying premises from which there was a possibility he would be dispossessed. In fact, suit was commenced in the High Court of Chancery in England by some of the representatives of William Clarke, Jr., which, after the usual delay, was brought to a decree which set forth that the defendant, Andrew Hamilton, had no title to the premises. Andrew Hamilton was deceased at the time the decree was given, but his son, James Hamilton, entered into a compromise with the claimants, and February 8, 1743, Rebecca Richardson, then widow of Zacharias Richardson, but formerly widow of William Clarke, Jr., and her surviving children by Clarke, viz., Rebecca, wife of Edward Evans, and Elizabeth Clarke, who afterwards married Samuel Means, Jr., of Paxtang, conveyed their rights in "Clarke Hall," to James Hamilton; Mary and Ann Clarke, two other daughters of William and Rebecca (Curtis) Clarke, having died in their minority, unmarried and without issue. It is said that it was part of the bargain that one of the heirs, a daughter of William Clarke, the second, should be maintained for life on the premises, and it is tolerably well established that one of the Clarkes did live in the house until her death, both under the Hamiltons and their successors in title, the Pembertons, James Hamilton having sold "Clarke Hall" on February 5, 1745, to Israel Pemberton, the elder.

Mary (Watts) Mercur, first wife of Henry Mercur, died at Towanda, December 14, 1830, and he married (second) July 25, 1844, Harriet Byron, daughter of William and Maria Briggs, of Towanda. She was born May 4, 1821, died February 19, 1890.

HON. ULYSSES MERCUR, fourth son of Henry and Mary (Watts) Mercur, was born at Towanda, Pennsylvania, August 18, 1818, and graduated with high honors at Jefferson College in 1848. He studied law and being admitted to the bar, practiced his profession at Towanda, until 1861, when he was appointed President Judge of the Thirteenth Judicial District of Pennsylvania, to succeed Judge David Wilmot, of "Wilmot Proviso" fame. Judge Mercur presided over the courts of that district until 1864, when he resigned and accepted the unanimous nomination of the Republican party to represent his district in the National House of Representatives, and was elected. He served four terms in Congress with marked ability, and in 1872 was elected to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, to succeed Chief Justice Thompson, and December 26, 1882, became Chief Justice, by seniority of commission, and continued to serve as such until his death, June 6, 1887. His career on the bench, and his decisions as a Justice, were typical of the man, pure, just, straightforward, logical, and consistent, without unnecessary ornamentation. At a Bar Meeting held at Pittsburg, in his honor and memory, one of the speakers said of him: "In connection with this office, nothing can be said of him that is not to his honor. There is no taint on the purity of his ermine, the hot breath of calumny has never touched him, and no question was ever made of the integrity of his life. His daily walk and conversation were pure and without reproach. He was distinguished by a saving common sense. His opinions have been accepted by the judgment of the profession as sound. They are clearly expressed, without ornament or affectation. They are consistent with the character of the man, showing his industry, his uprightness, his straightforwardness, his ambition to do right, and are expressed in clear, simple, pure English. They will remain while the Commonwealth lasts, an enduring monument to his honor."

Before his elevation to the bench, Judge Mercur took an active interest in the success of the Republican party, with whose policies and principles he was in entire accord; he was a member of the first Republican Convention, held at Pittsburgh, in 1856, at the birth of the party to which he gave his unswerving allegiance thereafter. During his eight years in Congress, 1864-72, a critical period in the nation's history, he was universally recognized as a useful and influential member of that body, who had the best interests of his country at heart. Religiously he was a member of the Protestant Episcopal church, and a regular attendant of its services.

Chief Justice Mercur married, as before stated, at her father's residence, Davisville, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, June 12, 1850, Sarah Simpson Davis. She died at Towanda, Bradford county, Pennsylvania, April 20, 1896, having survived her distinguished husband nearly nine years; his death having occurred at the residence of his son, James Watts Mercur, Wallingford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, June 6, 1887.

He immediately entered the law office of his brother, Rodney A. Mercur, Esq., at Towanda, as a student at law, and was admitted to the Bradford county bar, December 2, 1879, and in the same month was admitted to the bar, of Philadelphia county, and began the practice of law in this city. ety Sons of the Revolution, Society of Colonial Wars in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Genealogical Society of Pennsylvania, and the Society of the War of 1812, of which latter society he is one of the executive committee. Politically Mr. Mercur is a Republican, and has represented his district in state and county conventions of that party. He is a member of the Protestant Episcopal church and was a vestryman of Christ Church, Media, Pennsylvania, for ten years. He and his family have resided for several years past at Wallingford, Delaware county. He is vice-president of Spring Haven Country Club, at Wallingford.

James Watts Mercur married, March 1, 1881, Marietta Elizabeth Honore Denis at Holy Trinity Church, Philadelphia, the ceremony being performed by Right Rev. William Bacon Stevens, Bishop of Pennsylvania; the Rev. Nelson McVicar, Bishop of Rhode Island, assisting.

Mrs. Mercur was a daughter of Narcisse Francois Honore Denis, born at Guiprez, France, February 9, 1799, by his wife, Marietta Randolph, born November 24, 1818, died July 2, 1901, daughter of William Randolph, a veteran of the war of 1812 born July 3, 1794, died in 1861. Samuel F. Randolph, great-grandfather of Mrs. Mercur, born May 2, 1762, died about 1800, was a minute-man of the New Jersey Militia, during the Revolutionary War, and her other maternal great-grandfather, Peter Tharp, enlisted June 20, 1777, in Captain William Gordon's company in the Third New Jersey Regiment, Colonel Elias Dayton, and was later transferred to Captain William Mitchell's company in the same regiment. Through her mother, Mrs. Mercur is also descended from Edward Fitz Randolph, and Elizabeth Blossom, of Barnstable, Massachusetts, who were married May 10, 1637, and from Adam Berkhoven, who came from Cologne to New Amsterdam, now New York, 1642, and married there, March 19, 1645, Magdalena Jacobse Verdan. The will of Adam Berkhoven was dated January 22, 1691-2, and probated, March 21, 1691-2.

Her father was a son of Pierre Geoffrey Denis, born 1757, died April 4, 1829, by his wife, Henriette Jeanne Georgine Maubec, and grandson of Geoffrey and Anne (Guichard) Denis, his maternal grandmother being an Honore. He was educated as a surgeon, but being unable to stand the sight of blood, took up the study of Chemistry and became expert in that science, being associated with the firm of Duval & Robiquet, one of the most prominent chemical establishments in Paris. He came to Philadelphia in 1832, and was engaged in the manufacture of chemicals and drugs in that city until 1856, when he retired from business, having accumulated a competence. Mrs. Mercur was born in Philadelphia, August 6, 1858, and was educated at the Moravian Seminary, Bethlehem, Pennsylvania; Brooke Hall, Media; and at Miss Anna Mary Longstreth's school in Philadelphia. She is a Daughter of the American Revolution, and was the founder and first regent of the Delaware County Chapter of that Society. She is also a member of the New Century Club.

BENJAMIN CRISPIN, son of Silas and Mary (Stockton-Shinn) Crispin, born September 1, 1699, died December 6, 1753; he was born in Lower Dublin, Philadelphia county, but was taken to Burlington county, New Jersey, by his mother, after his father's death, and resided the greater part of his life in Northampton township, Burlington county, where he died. He married, August 21, 1722, at Springfield Meeting, Burlington county, New Jersey, Margaret, who died May 4, 1753, daughter of Joshua and Martha (Shinn) Owen, of Burlington county. Her father, Joshua Owen, was born in Wales, and removed to the Welsh Tract in Pennsylvania in 1683, bringing with him a certificate of removal from a Friends Meeting held at Tyddyn y Garreg, describing him as "late of Llwyn-du." He later removed to Burlington county, New Jersey, and married there, Martha Shinn.

Lieut.-Col. Thomas Allen Glenn in his Merion in the Welsh Tract, gives a long line of descent of Joshua Owen, from Welsh princes, which may be condensed as follows.

Einion, born probably about 1450, descended in the male line from Callwyn ap Tagno, Lord of Llyn, who bore arms, a chevron inter three fleur-de-llys, had:

Gronwy ap Einion, born about 1480, who had:

Howell ap Gronwy, who had:

David ap Howell, of the township of Llwyngwrill, Comôt of Talybont, Merionethshire, Wales, whose "ancient capital message" in that township, called Llwyn-du, was derived through a female line from Ednowen ap Bradwen, who flourished about 1137, and bore arms, gules, three snakes, nowed; and who was lord of nearly all the Comôt of Talybont. Though the extant pedigrees do not show just where the marriage in the line of Callwyn ap Tagno, Lord of Llyn, with the heiress of the line of Ednowen ap Bradwen, came in, yet Llwyn-du was "an indefeasible estate of inheritance" therefore David ap Howell could only have obtained it as a descendant of Ednowen ap Bradwen. David was born about 1540, and married Mary, daughter of Hugh ap John, of Taly Llyn, a parish (now) in the union of Dôl-gelly, in the Comôt of Estimaner, Merionethshire, eight miles southwest of Dôl-gelly town.

Hugh ap John was the son of John ap Merdith ap David, ap Ievan ap Llewelyn ap Einion (of Llwdiarth in Montgomeryshire, mentioned in grant of 7 Henry V) ap Celynin ap Ririd ap Cynddelw ap Ierworth ap Gwrgeney ap Uchdryd ap Aleth, Prince of Dyfed. Mary, the wife of David ap Howell, was also descended through various alliances of the above line, from Meuric ap Ynyr Vychan, Lord of Nannau, living 21 Edward III. (A. D. 1347-8), who in turn was descended from Bleddyn ap Cynfyn, Prince of Powys (murdered in 1072), by his second wife, Isabel, daughter of Picot de Say, a Norman Baron; as well as from other noble families of Wales.

Hugh ap David, of Llwyngwrill, son of David ap Howell and Mary his wife, married Catharine, daughter of John ap Rhydderch, of Abergynolwyn, whose family appears to be traceable to 1400 or earlier. Hugh and Catharine had issue, Humphrey ap Hugh (their eldest son), of Llwyngwrill, who signed the marriage settlement of his daughter Anne, January 1, 1649, she marrying Ellis Price, and they were the parents of Rowland Ellis, of Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania, born 1650, a noted settler in the Welsh Tract, some account of whom and his descendants is given elsewhere in these volumes.

Humphrey ap Hugh was living at Llwyndu in 1662, and died there about 1664, having married, about 1625, Elizabeth, daughter of John ap Howell Goch, of Gadfa, in Llanwddyn, Montgomeryshire, who was buried in Llanwddyn Church, July 24, 1636. Elizabeth's mother was Sybill, daughter of Hugh Gwynn, of Penarth, High Sheriff of Caernorvonshire, descended from Sir William Griffith, of Penrhyn; the Herberts of Raglan, and from King Edward I, of England. The wife of Hugh Gwynn was Jane, daughter of Owen ap Hugh of Bodeon in Anglesey, High Sheriff of Anglesey, 1579-80, who died in 1613; descended from Meuric ap Llewelyn ap Halkin of Bodeon, 8th in descent from Hava, son of Kundhelw, Lord of Cwmwd Lhivon, living 1150. Humphrey ap Hugh and his wife Elizabeth had among other issue:

Owen Humphrey, eldest son and heir, born about 1625, died prior to 1699. He is said to have been an officer under Cromwell and he certainly served as a Justice for Merionethshire under the Protectorate. He was among the first in Wales to join the Society of Friends, and his name frequently occurs in Besse's Sufferings of Friends. In 1662, having with his brother Samuel, "refused to pay a demand for tithes" he was prosecuted in the Sheriff's Court and execution was awarded against him by which his cattle were seized. After his father's decease in 1664 or 1665, he became seized of the "ancient demesne lands of Liwyn-du" and deeded therefrom a lot of ground for a burial place for Friends. Owen Humphrey, having been heavily fined, it is believed that he left little personal estate, in fact what little money he had remaining he lent freely to Friends going to Pennsylvania. He is believed to have been twice married but all of his seven children were by his first wife, name unknown, among whom were, Rebecca, wife of Robert Owen, of Merion, Philadelphia county, Pennsylvania, the progenitor of the Owen family of Philadelphia, an account of which is given elsewhere in these pages; and Joshua Owen, before mentioned, of Burlington county, New Jersey, who married Martha Shinn.

As before stated Benjamin Crispin and Margaret Owen were married at Springfield Meeting; in this connection attention is called here to a rather ridiculous mistake that occurs in a book on The Crispin Family, published at Akron, Ohio, in 1901, by Rev. W. F. Crispin, so that Benjamin Crispin's descendants may not remain in error. The author of the book referred to states that Benjamin Crispin and Margaret Owen were married "in the old Quaker Meeting-House in Burlington, N. J." of which he then gives a description at length, following with a full page picture of Burlington Meeting House; but exactly opposite this illustration he gives a fac-simile of their marriage certificate whereon is plainly to be seen the statement that the marriage took place in Springfield Meeting House.

Benjamin Crispin died intestate and letters of administration on his estate were granted to his eldest son, Silas Crispin, January 1, 1754, by Jonathan Belcher, Esq., Governor of the Province of New Jersey, Charles Read being Register. The births of the children of Benjamin and Margaret (Owen) Crispin are from a private family record in possession of their granddaughter, Ann Crispin Lippincott.

Issue of Benjamin and Margaret (Owen) Crispin:

Silas Crispin, b. May 5, 1723; m. March 3, 1745, Patience, dau. of Caleb Haines; nine children;

Rebecca Crispin, b. May 25, 1725;

Joseph Crispin, b. July 17, 1737; m. 1762, his first cousin, Elizabeth Owen, for which both were dealt with by Evesham Monthly Meeting, 2mo. 10, 1763; they had eight children. After their marriage they removed to Salem co., where he purchased 1000 acres of land near Sharptown;

Benjamin Crispin, b. Nov. 27, 1739, d. 1785; lived and died near Mt. Holly; m. Rachel, dau. of Simeon Braddock, and they had one son, Silas, and five daughters; letters of administration were granted on his estate to his widow Rachel and son Silas, Dec. 9, 1785; and letters on Rachel's estate were granted to Jonathan Crispin, no doubt her husband's brother, March 15, 1793.

Ann Crispin, dau. of Benjamin and Rachel (Braddock) Crispin, m. Joshua Lippincott, and among her descendants may be mentioned, Rev. Benjamin Crispin Lippincott, D. D., of Penn's Grove, N. J.; and Rev. Joshua Allan Lippincott, D. D., LL. D., of Phila.;

Hannah Crispin, b. Aug. 12, 1741; m. April 28, 1768, her second cousin, Richard Stockton; seven children; among their descendants is Miss Harriet Stockton Antrim, of Burlington, N. J., the well-known compiler of "The Antrim Family," genealogy published in 1899; also Thomas Logan Gaskill, Esq., a prominent attorney at law of Newark, N. J., a graduate of Princeton University, class of '96, and of the Law Department of the Univ. Pa.;

PAUL CRISPIN, b. July 18, 1743; of whom presently;

Jonathan Crispin, b. April 15, 1746; m. by license dated May 14, 1770, Mary Hewlings.

PAUL CRISPIN, son of Benjamin and Margaret (Owen) Crispin, born in Burlington county, New Jersey, July 18, 1743, died in 1816. He married, September 27, 1764, Rebecca Hewlings, of a good old Burlington county family, probably a sister to Mary Hewlings, his brother Jonathan's wife. They took up their residence in Moorestown, in the same county, where Paul Crispin was the proprietor of a ferry; in connection therewith he kept a house of entertainment. He and his wife lived at Moorestown all their lives. Paul died intestate, and letters of administration were granted on his estate to his widow, Rebecca Crispin, in 1816. Though both Paul and Rebecca were of Quaker parentage they do not seem to have held membership in the Society. The dates of birth of their children as hereafter given are from Paul Crispin's Bible now in the possession of his granddaughter, Frances Hubbs, of Frankford, Philadelphia.

Issue of Paul and Rebecca (Hewlings) Crispin:

Abigail Crispin, b. Oct. 22, 1770; m. by license dated Oct. 31, 1787, Capt. William Leconey, of Burlington co.; had two daughters;

REBECCA CRISPIN, b. Dec. 3, 1772; m. Charles Hubbs; of whom presently;

DOROTHY CRISPIN, b. Dec. 30, 1774; m. Feb. 3, 1796, Wills Burdsall; of whom presently;

Hannah Crispin, b. March 19, 1777; m. ——— Chambers, but had no issue;

Margaret Crispin, b. April 21, 1779; m. (first) ——— Chambers, (second) ——— Battel; no issue by either.

REBECCA CRISPIN, second daughter of Paul and Rebecca (Hewlings) Crispin, born at Moorestown, New Jersey, December 3, 1772, though not a birthright member of the Society of Friends, joined that sect and became an acknowledged minister of the Society. Some time after her death there was published in Philadelphia, "A Memoir of Rebecca Hubbs, A Minister of the Gospel of the Society of Friends, late of Woodstown, New Jersey," composed largely from her own memoranda and journals of her religious journeys.

Rebecca Crispin married Charles Hubbs, of Burlington, and they went to live at Pilesgrove township, Salem county, where both she and her husband applied for membership in the Society of Friends and were admitted to the Monthly Meeting there. Her first appearance in the ministry was about 1803-04, in the thirty-second year of her age. In 1806 they removed within the limits of Haddonfield Meeting, by which she was acknowledged as a minister in Fourth Month, 1807. She returned with her husband and children to Woodstown in 1811. In 1813 she obtained a certificate to perform a religious visit to some of the meetings within Baltimore and Virginia Yearly Meetings, and in the State of Ohio. After visiting some of the Meetings in Virginia, way was made, through the kindness of Micajah Crew, of Cedar Creek Meeting, in that State, to visit in person James Madison, then President of the United States. It will be remembered that President Madison's wife, Dolly Payne, had been brought up a Quaker. The President and his wife received them very kindly and they had a satisfactory opportunity with them, and parted with many tokens of affectionate regard. The President insisted on serving them with some refreshments, and following them to the carriage, placed in it some articles which he thought would be useful to them in their journey, and after a renewed expression of the satisfaction the visit had given him, took leave of them again, desiring a blessing might attend them.

In 1814 she made a religious visit to some of the Meetings in the State of Ohio, particularly within Miami and Salem Quarters. When the Separation of the Society of Friends occurred in 1827, Rebecca (Crispin) Hubbs remained with the older or Orthodox branch. From this time on she made many journeys and visits in the cause of the Gospel. After the last (1844), advancing age and bodily infirmity prevented such active service, and about two years before her death she had an attack of paralysis, but meanwhile performed much acceptable service within her own Quarterly Meeting. She died at Woodstown, New Jersey, October 29, 1852.

Issue of Charles and Rebecca (Crispin) Hubbs:

Simeon Hubbs, eldest child, went to Indiana, and no more is known of him by his Eastern relatives;

PAUL KRISPIN HUBB, insisted that Crispin should be spelled with a "K" and always affected that style. He was said to have been at one time connected with the United States Embassy to France, after which he settled down as a manufacturer of prints at Holmesburg, Phila., a staple industry in that locality. While in Lower Dublin township, in which Holmesburg is located, the whole of this region being filled with associations of his Crispin ancestry, and largely peopled with the descendants of Silas Crispin, by his first wife, Paul K. Hubbs applied for membership in the Crispin Burial Ground Community, which had charge of the old graveyard laid out by their ancestor, Capt. Thomas Holme, nearby, on the ground that he was a descendant of Silas Crispin, although his branch of the family had long been strangers to the locality. Although not a descendant of Capt. Thomas Holme, being descended from Silas Crispin's second wife, his claim as a Crispin was allowed and he was admitted a member. He afterwards removed to San Francisco, Cal., of which city it is said he was some time Mayor. He died there, leaving one son, Paul K. Hubbs, an attorney at law in that city, and one daughter;

Charles Ellis Hubbs, m. Sarah Le Campion, and they had issue:

Samuel Hubbs, while a young man and unm., went to the West Indies in charge of a valuable consignment of goods, and was robbed and killed by revolutionists;

John Hubbs, went to Cal., and nothing is known of him by his Eastern relatives;

Beulah Hubbs, d. unm.;

Rebecca Hubbs, m. ——— Miller; d. s. p.;

Margaret Hubbs, d. unm.

DOROTHY CRISPIN, third daughter of Paul and Rebecca (Hewlings) Crispin, born at Moorestown, New Jersey, December 30, 1774, married, February 3, 1796, Wills Burdsall, of an old and prominent Burlington county Quaker Family, who have a royal descent from King Edward IV of England, through Anne Mauleverer, (daughter of Edward and Anne (Pearson) Mauleverer) who married John Abbott and settled in Burlington, New Jersey. Wills Burdsall was also descended from Dr. Daniel Wills, of Northamptonshire, before referred to, as one of the Proprietaries and high officials of West Jersey.

DOROTHY BURDSALL, eldest daughter of Wills and Dorothy (Crispin) Burdsall, born February 26, 1799; married Hon. Isaac Newton, United States Commissioner of Agriculture, who it is claimed was a descendant of Sir Isaac Newton, (1642-1727) the celebrated natural philosopher. He was born in Burlington county, New Jersey, March 31, 1800, died at Washington, D. C., June 19, 1867. After his marriage he moved to Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he made a purchase of land, and soon became noted for the neatness, order and productiveness of his land, and was recognized as one of the foremost agriculturists in Pennsylvania. He early became a member of the State Agricultural Association, and was frequently sent as its representative to the meetings of the United States Agricultural Society. He also was active in local organizations of a similar character. To the State Association he presented a resolution urging Congress to establish a National Department of Agriculture, and brought his plan for this purpose to the attention of each recurring presidential administration, from that of Harrison, in 1841, to that of Lincoln in 1861. To the last named, whose personal acquaintance he enjoyed, he was indebted for the final adoption of his scheme. After Congress had authorized the formation of the agricultural bureau in 1862, President Lincoln appointed Isaac Newton its head as United States Commissioner of Agriculture. He organized the department on such lines that its efficiency even now is largely due to him. It is now a full fledged Department of Government, whose head, as Secretary of Agriculture, has a seat in the president's cabinet.

Issue of Isaac and Dorothy (Burdsall) Newton:

Bolton Newton, m. a Miss Malone;
 Anna Newton, m. G. Bakewell Earp;
 Isaac Newton, m. his cousin, Amanda Hubbs, above mentioned;
 Eleanor Newton, m. a Mr. Hupfeld.

IRA BURDSALL, son of Wills and Dorothy (Crispin) Burdsall, born November 14, 1804, was appointed United States Mail Agent between New York and San Francisco, by President Franklin Pierce, a very important position in those days, when the mail had to go by sea around Cape Horn. He died in this service, at sea, of cholera, which broke out on board a vessel on which he was making the voyage. He helped the captain nurse the stricken ones, contracted the disease himself, died of it, and was buried at sea off Havana, Cuba.

Ira Burdsall married (first) Rebecca, daughter of Samuel and Abigail (Elwell) Sariah, and granddaughter of Stephen Sariah, of Philadelphia, whose name was originally Sayres, but who changed the spelling to Sariah in order to have it different from that of his relatives with whom he had a disagreement, particularly a brother who lived in Germantown. Her mother was a daughter of Sortel Elwell, a soldier of the Revolution, serving seven years under Gen. Nathaniel Greene. An account of Mrs. Burdsall's ancestry is given in these volumes under the title of the Richards Family.

Issue of Ira and Rebecca (Sariah) Burdsall:

SILAS CRISPIN (II), son of Silas and Mary (Stockton-Shinn) Crispin, born in Lower Dublin township, Philadelphia county, March 19, 1702, was but nine years of age at the death of his father, and was probably taken by his mother to Burlington county, New Jersey, soon after the death of his father, and died in the town of Burlington, November, 1749. He was one of the influential men of the town, and was a slave owner, besides having indentured servants, who carried on for him a tailoring business. One of his servants ran away from him in January, 1734-5, and the advertisement of Silas Crispin, of Burlington, for his capture appeared in the American Daily Mercury, of Philadelphia, for January 21, and 28, a fac-simile of which advertisement was produced in McMaster's (School) History of the United States. By his will dated August 2, 1749, probated November 17, 1749, Silas Crispin bequeathed his house and lot to his wife, Mary Crispin, for life, and after her decease, the brick part thereof to his son, Thomas Crispin, and the wooden part to his son, William Crispin. His negro girl, Dinah, he gave to his wife until the girl was twenty-four years of age, when she was to go to his daughter Sarah. His wife, Mary Crispin, and Thomas Wetherill were named as executors.

Silas Crispin married, November 9, 1724, Mary, born August 2, 1704, died August 22, 1789, daughter of Thomas and Anne (Fearon) Wetherill, and granddaughter of Christopher Wetherill, one of the Lords Proprietary of the Province of West Jersey, and ancestor of the Wetherill family of New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Issue of Silas and Mary (Wetherill) Crispin:

Samuel Crispin, d. 1791; m. Sarah ——— and had two daughters and a son who died young and a daughter who lived to mature age and married;

WILLIAM CRISPIN, b. 1742; of whom presently;

Mary Crispin, m. Aaron Smith, son of Francis and Rachel (Zelley) Smith;

Sarah Crispin, m. Abraham Jones, no issue;

Anne Crispin, m. a Mr. Smith, no issue;

Elizabeth Crispin, d. unm.;

Thomas Crispin, b. 1744, d. June 11, 1784; m. Nov. 9, 1762, in Phila., Susannah, dau. of Solomon Fussell, of that city; had two sons, who d. inf., and possibly others;

Abigail Crispin, m. Samuel Swift, and had issue.

WILLIAM CRISPIN, son of Silas and Mary (Wetherill) Crispin, born, according to his own account, in the year 1742, though the meeting record of his death in 1797, gives his age as sixty years, which would fix his natal year as 1737. The latter record gives the date of his death as April 24, 1797. He was born in Burlington, New Jersey, but removed to Philadelphia, as did both of his brothers.

William Crispin was one of those authorized to sign paper currency of the Province of Pennsylvania, issued under an act of the General Assembly, passed October 15, 1773, and he was appointed by Congress, December 11, 1775, one of thirty-six signers of $3,600,000, continental currency of The United Colonies, or Bills of Credit, which that body ordered emitted, in six installments during 1775-76.

During the Revolution William Crispin was Commissary General of the Pennsylvania Militia and also of the Pennsylvania Navy. A letter from him to Gen. John Lacey, headed, "Newtown, Bucks Co. Oct. 17, 1781" and signed "Wm. Crispin, C. G. S. P. M." has been published in "Pennsylvania Archives," vol. ix, p. 437. On November 23, 1780, he was appointed Collector of Excise for the city and county of Philadelphia.

In 1792 he wrote an account of the Crispin Family, which he dated September 20, of that year, stating that he then lived at No. 16 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. In this history he states that he was fifty years old in the 7th month last, which as remarked above does not agree with the record in Race Street Monthly Meeting register which called him sixty years old at his death in 1797, but perhaps the Meeting entry meant only to give his approximate age; his own account should be the more authentic. His sketch of the family, however, which speaks of Crispins at the Norman Conquest of England as well as those in the early settlement of Pennsylvania is literally bristling with errors; even as near relatives as his uncles and aunts are much mixed in his account, and while he says his father was the son of Silas Crispin's second wife he speaks of the first wife as his grandmother, and called her by the second wife's name, Mary. In fact, the account is only wholly correct in the last paragraph, which relates to himself, his wife and children, and is as follows: "I now live in Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, No. 16, and have had, by Rachel, my wife, five sons and five daughters, five of whom now live with me, to wit, Mary, my eldest, Sarah, Hester and Rachel, and my only son William. I am now aged 50, in the 7th Month last, and have seen great changes in this life, and one solemn change will fix me unalterably—but I have a well grounded hope it will be for the better. WILLIAM CRISPIN."

William Crispin married, December 10, 1762, Rachel, daughter of John and Mary (Dobbins) Wharton, and granddaughter of Thomas and Rachel (Thomas) Wharton, ancestors of the celebrated Wharton family of Philadelphia, of whom some account is given in these volumes.

Issue of William and Rachel (Wharton) Crispin:

Mary Crispin, eldest child, d. unm.;

Hester Crispin, b. 1764, d. unm., Dec. 26, 1849; will probated Jan. 7, 1850; called Hetty in all documents extant except the narrative of her father, above quoted; probably named for her great-grandfather Silas Crispin's first wife, Esther Holme;

Rachel Crispin, d. unm.; letters of administration granted to her sister, Hetty Crispin, July 15, 1822;

William Crispin, b. 1773, d. unm., Aug. 27, 1808; was living with his father at No. 16 Chestnut street in 1797, and until the latter's death, and probably resided there until his own death;

Three sons and a daughter, died young;

Thomas Crispin, b. 1778, d. Sept. 23, 1781;

SARAH CRISPIN, m. Sept. 12, 1801, William Levis; of whom presently.

WILLIAM LEVIS, who married Sarah Crispin, was a son of Samuel Levis (III), of Springfield township, Delaware county, by his wife, Mary, daughter of Joshua and Margaret Thompson, of Ridley township, Delaware county; grandson of Samuel Levis (II), born at Harby, Leicestershire, February 8, 1680-1, member of Provincial Assembly from Chester county, Pennsylvania, 1739-47, by his wife, Hannah Stretch, of Philadelphia; and great-grandson of Samuel Levis (I), (son of Christopher and Mary Levis, of Harby, Leicestershire), born September 30, 1649, died in Springfield, Chester (now Delaware) county, 1734, by his wife, Elizabeth Clator, of Nottinghamshire, England, whom he married May 4, 1680.

(July) 20, 1684.

Samuel Levis (I) settled in Springfield township, on land taken up under the deeds above quoted. He was a member of the Provincial Council, 1692-93; Member of Assembly, 1689-94-98-1700-06-07-08-09; and was commissioned a Justice for Chester County Court in 1686 and again in 1689.

TYSON FAMILY.

Among the later arrivals at Germantown from the little town of Crefeld on the Rhine, the place of nativity of most of the founders of that first German settlement on Pennsylvania soil, was Cornelius Tyson, born in Crefeld in the year 1652. The exact date of his arrival in Pennsylvania is not known, but he was a resident of Germantown in 1703. He was possibly brother of Reynier and Herman Tyson, the former of whom at least, was among the original thirteen families who crossed the Atlantic in the Concord in 1683, and founded Germantown; and the latter, Herman, is mentioned in connection with Reynier in the Strepper correspondence as brother of the wife of Jan Streppers, of Kaldkirchen, near Crefeld, who purchased 5000 acres of land of William Penn on March 10, 1682. An account of Reynier Tyson and his descendants is given in these volumes. The similarity of the names of the sons and other descendants of Reynier and Cornelius Tyson would seem to indicate that they had a common parentage. Renier Tiesen, as the names of both he and Cornelius were originally spelled, was a convert to Quakerism before coming to Pennsylvania, while Cornelius held fast to the faith of his fathers and was a consistent disciple of Menno Simon, and lies buried among the early brethren of that faith, in Axe's Burying-Ground, Germantown, where his tombstone, probably the oldest in existence erected over a German in Pennsylvania, records the fact that "Cornelis Tiesen" died May 9, 1716, at the age of 63 years. His will dated April 6, 1716, and probated July 27, 1716, mentions his wife Margaret, eldest son Matthias, youngest son Peter, daughters, Barbara, wife of Matthias Cunrads; Aeltje, wife of John Cunrads; Williamptje, wife of Paul Engle, and Yanicken, wife of Laurentz Hendricks. The witnesses were Willm. Striepers, Herman Groethausen and Francis Daniel Pastorius. The names of the children of Cornelius Tyson show that he was of Holland and not German origin, though born outside the limits of modern Netherlands. Of the sons-in-law of Cornelius Tyson, the Cunrads, Matthias, who married Barbara in 1705, and John, who married Alice Tyson, were sons of Thones Cunders or Kunders, one of the original settlers of Germantown, and natives of Crefeld. They settled in Horsesham township, where Matthias died in 1726, and John later, and both have left numerous descendants.

Paul Engle and Laurentz Hendricks, the other two sons-in-law of Cornelius Tyson, were both early purchasers of land in Bebbler's township, as were their brothers-in-law Matthias and Peter Tyson, though the Engles were later residents of Bristol township, Philadelphia county, where the old homestead was occupied by three or four generations of the name. Lorentz Hendricks settled later in Towamencin township, where he died in 1753, his wife Yanicken (Jane), and eight sons and two daughters surviving him. One of the latter, Margaret, was the wife of Peter Tyson, Jr. Of Peter Tyson, younger son of Cornelius, we have little record, except that he married Catharine ——— and had a son Peter, and other children.

MATTHIAS TYSON, eldest son of Cornelius and Margaret, was born in Crefeld and accompanied his parents to Pennsylvania. He married Barbara Sellen, daughter of Hendrick Sellen, another native of Crefeld, and original settler of Germantown, and one of the first trustees of the First Mennonite church of Germantown. Some years after his arrival in Pennsylvania, he made a trip back to Crefeld, and returned to Pennsylvania, thus crossing the ocean three times. A paper dated 1706, containing his signature, is in possession of Hon. Samuel W. Pennypacker, who is a descendant, through Matthias Tyson's daughter Margaret, who married Jacob Pannebecker. Hendrick Sellen left four children, Jacob, a "shopkeeper" of Worcester township, who died without issue in 1759, leaving a legacy to the poor of the Mennonite congregation at "Perkyomie & Skepack;" John; Barbara, the wife of Matthias Tyson, and Elizabeth, the wife of Arnold Van Fossen.

Matthias Tyson was the owner of 280 acres of land in Perkiomen township, which descended to his children and grandchildren. He died there in 1766, his wife Barbara surviving him.

Issue of Matthias and Barbara (Sellen) Tyson:

CORNELIUS TYSON, eldest son of Matthias and Barbara (Sellen) Tyson, inherited the homestead of his father in Perkiomen township, and resided there all his life. He married March 30, 1738, Barbara Pannebecker or Pennypacker, daughter of Hendrick Pannebecker, the founder of the Pennypacker family in Pennsylvania; an account of which is given elsewhere in these volumes. DR. HENRY TYSON, born in Montgomery county, May 21, 1815, spent his early life on his father's farm in Worcester township, and received a good common school education. He learned the trade of a stone mason, but being very fond of books soon abandoned his trade for the more congenial vocation of a school teacher. While conducting a school in Philadelphia, he took up the study of medicine at the Pennsylvania Medical College, among the instructors of which were the distinguished physicians and scientists: Dr. Samuel George Morton, Dr. George McClellan, and Dr. William Rush. He received his degree of M. D. in 1843. His younger brother, Cornelius Tyson, graduated in the same class.

Dr. Henry Tyson began the practice of his profession at Friedensburg, Berks county, Pennsylvania, in 1843, but soon after removed to Reading, where he practiced until the death of his brother, Cornelius, in 1846, when he succeeded to his practice in his native township of Worcester, Montgomery county, where he remained until 1850, and then returned to Reading. In 1854 he was elected Warden of the Berks County Prison, and filled that position in addition to attending to his practice as a physician for twelve years. Resigning from the prison he practiced medicine in Reading a few years longer, but his health failing, he removed to a farm in Exeter township, a few miles below Reading in 1868, and spent the remainder of his days there, dying April 29, 1872.

Dr. Henry Tyson married in 1839, Gertrude (Haviland), daughter of Caleb Haviland, born April 18, 1774, by his wife Mary Coxe. She was born in New Brunswick, New Jersey, May 7, 1803, and married (first) May 1, 1823, John Caswell. She died in Exeter township, Berks county, December 18, 1870.

JAMES TYSON, M. D., eldest son of Dr. Henry and Gertrude (Haviland) Tyson, was born in the city of Philadelphia, October 26, 1841. His parents removing to Reading, Pennsylvania, when he was a small child, he received his preliminary education in public and private schools there, later attending the Friends Central School, Philadelphia, where he prepared for college and entered Haverford College, from which he graduated with the degree of A. B. in 1860, and received the degree of A. M. in 1864. He studied medicine under the direction of his father, and of Dr. John B. Brooke, of Reading, and Dr. John Neill, of Philadelphia, and entering the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, received his medical degree from that institution in 1863. During the last year of his student life he was acting medical cadet in the Military Hospitals at Philadelphia, and shortly after his graduation was appointed Acting Assistant Surgeon in the United States Army, and served during the summer of 1863 in Philadelphia and Harrisburg. In July, 1863, he was elected resident physician in the Pennsylvania Hospital and served until the following April, when he again entered the service of the United States Government as a surgeon, and served until the close of the War of the Rebellion in the Philadelphia Military Hospitals and for a time at Winchester, Virginia. In 1864 he began the practice of medicine in Philadelphia, and has continued to reside there until the present time (1909). He was appointed consulting physician to the Kensington Hospital for Women in 1891, consulting physician to St. Mary's Hospital in 1897, and one of the visiting physicians of the Pennsylvania Hospital in December, 1902.

In 1871 and 1872 Dr. Tyson assisted in editing the Philadelphia Medical Times, and he also edited four volumes of the Transactions of the Pathological Society of Philadelphia (1871-77). YEATES FAMILY.

JASPER YEATES, native of Yorkshire, who had been some years engaged in mercantile ventures in West Indies, came to Pennsylvania the latter part of the seventeenth century, and located at Upland, now Chester. It is said that he married in the West Indies and that his wife died there without issue. He married at Upland about 1690, Catharine, daughter of James Sandelands, said to have been a native of Scotland, who settled at Upland about 1675, by his wife Anika, daughter of Joran Keen, born at Upland, January 26, 1670-1. Joran Keen, or Kyn, was born in Sweden in the year 1620, and came to the South River with Gov. Printz, in the "Fama," sailing from Stockholm August 16, 1642, and arriving at Fort Christina, near New Castle, February 15, 1643. James Sandelands, who married Anika, or Anne, Keen, was a captain of militia at Upland, 1675, and a considerable landowner under the jurisdiction of the Upland Court, his name frequently appearing on the ancient records of that court. He was one of the nine members of Gov. Markham's Council, 1681, and the first Assembly of the Province of Pennsylvania is said to have met in his "double house" at Upland. He was commissioned a Justice at Upland, 1681, and served until his death, April 12, 1692, at the age of fifty-seven years. The arms of the Sandelands family, "Ar. a bend az," with various emblems of mortality, are well carved on a mural tablet erected to his memory by his son in St. Paul's Church at Chester. Catharine Sandelands, daughter of James and Anne, married (first) Alexander Creker, who died soon after the marriage, and (second) Jasper Yeates, above mentioned.

Jasper Yeates purchased in 1697, a tract of land at the mouth of Naaman's Creek, in New Castle county, on which were erected flour and bolting mills, and in the following year additional land in Chester, and erected extensive granaries on the bank of the creek. He also established a bakery, and erected for himself the "venerable Mansion" still standing on the west side of Second street near Edgmont avenue, overlooking the Delaware, where he resided many years, removing towards the close of his life to New Castle. He is said to have been educated for the law; at least he seems to have had the reputation of a good knowledge of law, which gave him considerable prominence in the community. In 1694 he was appointed a Justice of the Chester county courts, and he was an associate Justice of Supreme Court of Province of Pennsylvania, 1691-1711. He was also a justice of the Lower Counties on the Delaware, 1717-1720. On December 25, 1696, he was admitted to Provincial Council, and remained a member of that body until his death, 1720, though probably during the time when there was contention and division between the Assemblies and representatives of the Province and those of the territories on the Delaware, he took little part in sessions of Council. In October, 1699, he was elected a representative in the General Assembly of the Province of Pennsylvania, from New Castle, and was the leader of the representatives from the Lower Counties in the controversies in the Assembly over the organization of a military force and the fortification of the ports on the Delaware for defense against invasion, which resulted in the withdrawal of the representatives of New Castle, Kent and Sussex, from the Provincial body, and eventually in 1703, to the establishment of entirely independent Assemblies. Yeates continued to represent New Castle in that of the territories, in which he exercised a potent influence. He was the spokesman of the delegation of representatives of the Lower counties, who after their withdrawal from the General Assembly called upon William Penn and his Council and remonstrated against the measures of the Assembly. He is referred to in letters of James Logan to Penn, as one of the leaders of the party, who, as Logan asserted, were seeking to have the Crown make New Castle the seat of government. He was one of those who prepared an address to the Lords of Trade in England, complaining bitterly against Penn and the Quakers, on the ground of their refusal to make any provision for the defense of the coast and frontiers. He was a strong adherent of the Church of England, and was one of the earliest vestrymen of Christ Church, Philadelphia, as well as of St. Paul's Church at Chester, with his brother-in-law, James Sandelands, exhibiting great zeal in the founding of the latter church, 1703. Though he was representative and champion of the rights of New Castle county, he resided during the most active years of his life at Chester. When William Penn established the town of Chester into a borough, 1701, Jasper Yeates was named in the charter as one of the first four burgesses, and he became Chief Burgess in 1703. At a meeting of Provincial Council, March 19, 1704-5, he was named with others to survey and lay out a road, "the Queen's Road," from Chester to Darby, connecting Chester more directly with Philadelphia and the settlements adjacent. Notwithstanding his opposition to the "Quaker Party" and the closer adherents of William Penn, he was the recipient of a number of honorable and responsible commissions from the Proprietor and the Crown. In 1698, he was, with five others, given a dedimusde postatem, under the great Seal of England, to administer the oaths to Colonial Governors and such as should receive Royal commissions, and did so in the case of Governors Andrew Hamilton, John Evans and Charles Gookin. In 1717, he received a similar writ from William Penn to administer the oath to Sir William Keith. He died at New Castle, on his plantation near the town, May 2, 1720, leaving a will dated February 6, 1718-19. His wife Catharine and six children survived him.

JOHN YEATES, third son of Jasper, the Judge and Councillor, born at Upland, March 1, 1701, accompanied his parents in their removal to New Castle county, when but a child. Under his father's will he inherited the mansion, mills, wharfs, etc., at Chester, and he became a shipping merchant, doing a large business with the West Indies. He later removed to the Island of Barbadoes, where he was living in 1741. About ten years later he removed to Philadelphia and purchased of his nephew Joshua Carpenter wharves and other property on Water street, and also land in Wicacoa, where he was a resident, 1757. He was some years very prosperous, and 1748 executed a will disposing of such large sums as to indicate that he was then possessed of a considerable estate. He, however, met with heavy losses, and in 1762, when making an application to the English government for a position as Comptroller of Customs for the Colony was very much reduced in circumstances. Chief Justice William Allen made a personal appeal to the Honorable Thomas and John Penn, in which he states that John Yeates is "a very honest man, an old School Fellow of mine, who has been much reduced by misfortunes of Trade." July 24, 1764, he was commissioned Comptroller of Customs at Poconoke, at the head of Wicomico River, Maryland. He died at Vienna, Dorset county, Maryland, October 9, 1765. JASPER YEATES, son of John and Elizabeth (Sidebotham) Yeates, born in Philadelphia, April 9, 1745, entered the College of Philadelphia, 1758, and graduated there with degree of Bachelor of Arts, 1761; later received degree of Master of Arts, studied law and was admitted to Bar of Philadelphia county 1765. He located at Lancaster and became the most prominent member of that bar, enjoying the largest practice of any lawyer in the interior of the Province at that date. At the first protest against the oppressive measures of the mother country in 1775, he became one of the foremost patriots of Lancaster county; was made Chairman of Committee of Correspondence, and was active in organizing and equipping the militia of the county throughout the war. He was a delegate from Lancaster county to the convention that ratified the Constitution of the United States, 1787, and with Chief Justice McKean and James Wilson, was one of the committee who reported to the convention the form of ratification adopted by the convention. He was commissioned Justice of Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, March 21, 1791, and served until his death with much honor and ability. With James Ross and William Bradford, was one of the three commissioners appointed by President Washington, August 9, 1794, to confer with the inhabitants of Western Pennsylvania with regard to the Whiskey Insurrection, and discharged that duty in a manner very satisfactory to the administration. In 1776 he visited the scene of Braddock's defeat of twenty years previous, and wrote an interesting account of the field, afterwards published in Harvard's Register of Pennsylvania (vol. vi., pp. 104-5).

He prepared notes of the cases heard before him, which were published after his death and are known as "Yeates Notes of Cases, in the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania." He died at Lancaster March 14, 1817, and was buried at St. James' Protestant Episcopal Church there, under a pyramidal tombstone, upon which is inscribed the following epitaph:

"He fulfilled the various duties of life with fidelity. His integrity was inflexible. As a Judge he was most learned and eminent and in the exercise of his publick functions, he deservedly obtained the confidence of his fellow citizens and left behind him a name which will only perish with the judicial records of the country." An excellent portrait of Judge Yeates is in possession of the family.

He married at Lancaster, December 30, 1767, Sarah Burd, eldest daughter of Col. James Burd, by his wife Sarah, daughter of Edward and Sarah (Plumley) Shippen, and sister to Chief Justice Edward Shippen. She survived him and died at Lancaster, October 25, 1829, and is buried by his side in the churchyard of St. James.

He was elected member of American Philosophical Society, 1805, and took active part in their proceedings for many years. The University of Pennsylvania conferred upon him the honorary degree of LL. D. in 1819, and March 27 of that year he was appointed President Judge of the Ninth Judicial District, comprising the counties of Cumberland, Franklin and Adams; April 28, 1820, he was commissioned President Judge of the District Courts of the City and County of Lancaster, where he presided for a number of years, residing at "Hardwicke," near Lancaster, erected by him. McCALL FAMILY.

GEORGE McCALL, one of Philadelphia's early Colonial merchants, was a son of Samuel McCall, a wealthy merchant of Glasgow, Scotland, by a daughter of Robert Dundas, of Arniston, county Midlothian, an eminent lawyer, and Judge of Court Sessions, who was grandfather of Henry Dundas, first Viscount Melville. At the time of his marriage, 1716, George McCall was a prosperous merchant in Philadelphia, having a store and wharf at Union and Plum streets. He was elected to Common Council of Philadelphia, October 3, 1722, and, October 16, 1724, was appointed by Provincial Council, with other "persons, of Credit and Reputation, Skilled in Maritime and Mercantile affairs" to settle the accounts of shipwrecked mariners with the owners of goods imported by them. In 1727, he was one of "divers merchants of Philadelphia," who petitioned Gov. Gordon, in reference to the evils likely to result from the passage by the Assembly of an Act in reference to importing and packing, etc. About 1725, in connection with Anthony Morris, he erected a forge on Manatawny Creek, in Berks county, known for many years as "McCall's Forge" which was supplied with pig iron from the Colebrookdale furnace, in which he likewise had an interest, then managed by Thomas Potts, Jr. May 28, 1733, he purchased of the heirs of Henry and Richard Scoble, 102 acres in Paasyunk township, Philadelphia, including a strip of meadow on Hollander's Creek, which tract was called "Chevy Chase." June 20, 1735, he purchased of John Penn, the Proprietaries Manor of Gilberts, comprising 14,960 acres, lying on the Schuylkill, in what is now Montgomery county, which he named Douglass Manor. It included Douglass township, part of Pottsgrove township, and about one-third of the present borough of Pottstown. He afterwards reconveyed to Hon. John Penn, three-fourths interest in a copper mine discovered on the tract. On February 24, 1736, he obtained a warrant for 500 acres of the Lottery Lands in Bucks county, and at about the same date purchased 300 acres near Crosswicks, New Jersey. He was a tenant of the parsonage House of Christ Church, 1718, and was a member of the Vestry, 1721-4; was a liberal contributor to rebuilding the church, 1739. He died in Philadelphia, October 13, 1640, and was buried at Christ Church.

George McCall married August 9, 1716, Ann, born in Pennsylvania, December 27, 1697, daughter of Provincial Councillor Jasper Yeates, of New Castle, by his wife Catharine, daughter of James Sandelands, a Scotchman, who settled at Upland (now Chester), 1665; was Captain of a company of Militia at Upland, 1675, and was one of the nine members of Council appointed by Gov. Markham, August 3, 1681. His name frequently appears on the ancient records of Upland Court, and the first Assembly of the Province of Pennsylvania is said to have met in his "Double House." He was commissioned a Justice, 1681, and served as such until his death, April 12, 1692, at the age of fifty-seven years. A beautiful carved mural tablet of massive gray sandstone erected to his memory in St. Paul's Church, Chester, contains on its upper half, the arms of the Sandelands family, at a bend az., and the words Vive MEMOR. LETHI FFUGIT HORA; the lower half contains many emblems of mortality, excellently carved, the whole being an excellent specimen of early art. Anne, wife of James Sandelands, was a daughter of Joran Keen, who was born in Sweden about 1620, and came to the Delaware with Gov. Printz, in the "Fama," sailing from Stockholm, August 16, 1642, and arriving at Fort Christina, February 15, 1643. Catharine, daughter of James and Anika (Kyn, or Keen) Sandelands, was born at Upland, January 26, 1670-1. She married (first) Alexander Creker, who died soon after, without issue; (second) Jasper Yeates, a native of Yorkshire, who emigrated to West Indies, and about 1690, located at Chester, where he was a merchant, removing later to New Castle where he died in 1720. He was a member of Provincial Council, 1696-1720, and grandfather of Judge Jasper Yeates of the Supreme Court. An account of the Yeates family appears before in this volume. Ann (Yeates) McCall survived her husband, and was buried at Christ Church, January 16, 1744-5.

Taking his younger brother Archibald into partnership, he engaged extensively in the mercantile and manufacturing business, carrying on the shipping and importing business in Philadelphia, and operating the old forge and a grist and sawmill, and other manufacturing interests in Douglass Manor at McCall's Forge. She died April 7, 1757, and he married (second) January 31, 1759, Mary Coxe, who survived him. His eight children were, however, all by his first wife. ARCHIBALD McCALL, son of Archibald and Judith (Kemble) McCall, born in Philadelphia, October 11, 1767, engaged in mercantile pursuits in Philadelphia, and like all his race, occupied a prominent place in the business interests of the city. He was a founder of Chamber of Commerce and served on its first Monthly Committee, February, 1801. He became a member of the First Troop, Philadelphia Light Horse, May 12, 1798, but resigned from the organization ten years later, June 29, 1808. He died in Philadelphia, April 13, 1843, and was buried at Christ Church. He married, May 3, 1792, Elizabeth Cadwalader, daughter of Brigadier General John Cadwalader, the distinguished officer of the Revolutionary Army, who commanded the Pennsylvania troops at the battle of Princeton, and served in many important battles of the war for independence. His wife, mother of Mrs. McCall, was Elizabeth Lloyd, daughter of Col. Edward Lloyd, of Wye House, Talbot county, Maryland. Mrs. McCall was born 1773, and died October, 1824. She was niece of Lambert Cadwalader, who married her husband's sister, Mary McCall, and her sister was the wife of General Gage, who commanded the British troops at Boston, at the outbreak of the Revolution.

GEORGE ARCHIBALD McCALL, son of Archibald and Elizabeth (Cadwalader) McCall, born in Philadelphia, March 16, 1802, was educated at West Point Military Academy, graduated July 1, 1822, and was appointed Second Lieutenant in First United States Infantry, was transferred to Fourth United States Infantry, December 23, 1822, and joined that regiment at Pensacola, Florida. In February, 1823, he was ordered to Tampa Bay, Florida, to establish a military post, and was stationed there for five years. August 20, 1826, he witnessed the inauguration of Tucosemathla, the principal chief of the Seminole Indians. In January, 1828, he was placed in charge of the opening of a military road from Hillsborough to Alachua, a distance of 150 miles. Promoted to First Lieutenant January 25, 1829, and April, 1831, was appointed Aide-de-Camp to Brigadier General Edmund P. Gaines, then stationed in Missouri, and was acting Assistant Adjutant General at the negotiation of the treaty with the Sac and Fox Indians. He was stationed in Tennessee, June, 1831, to January, 1836, and 1837 returning to Philadelphia, filled the position of recruiting officer there for the regular service until December, 1837, when he was ordered to Arkansas, having been commissioned Captain, December 21, 1836. At the outbreak of the trouble with the Seminoles in 1841, he was again ordered to Florida, and at the close of the "Seminole War" in 1843, was ordered to Fort Scott, Osage Indian Nation, where he was in command until 1845, when he was ordered to join Gen. Zachary Taylor at Corpus Christi. He participated in the battle of Palo Alto, May, 1846, and was made Major and Lieutenant Colonel, by brevet, for gallant and meritorious services there and at the battle of Resaca de la Palma, respectively, and was appointed Assistant Adjutant General, July 7, 1846. He was regularly commissioned Major of the Third United States Infantry, December 26, 1847, for conspicuous bravery at the battle of Buena Vista. At the close of Mexican War he was stationed at Santa Fe, and was commissioned Inspector General of the Army, June 30, 1850. Failing health induced him to resign from the Army, August 22, 1853, when he retired to his estate near West Chester, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he resided until the outbreak of the Civil War, when he offered his services to Gov. Curtin and was commissioned by him May 15, 1861, Major General of Pennsylvania Volunteers, and reorganized the Pennsylvania Reserve Corps of 15,000 men. On July 23 he was commissioned by President Lincoln Brigadier General of Volunteers, and in command of the Reserves, took command of all the Union troops at the battle of Mechanicsville. He joined the Army of the Potomac under McClelland, near Richmond, was taken prisoner at the battle of New Market Cross Roads, and suffered seven weeks the horrors of Libby Prison. On his exchange he was a physical wreck, returned home on sick leave, and resigned March 31, 1863. The remainder of his life was spent at "Belair," near West Chester, where he died February 26, 1868. His experiences and observations while stationed at the various military posts on our western frontiers, as well as his political views, are told in his "Letters from the Frontier." He was the Democratic candidate for Congress from his district, 1862, but was defeated at the polls.

General McCall married 1853, Elizabeth, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Coxe) McMurtrie.

PLUMSTEAD FAMILY.

The name Plumstead is derived from Plomb, a commune in Normandy, near the ancient town and cathedral of Avranches, and the Saxon word Staede, signifying house or residence, farm house; hence Plombstede signified a householder in the commune of Plomb. The family was of Norman origin and the name was de Plomstede and de Plumstede for many generations. The de Plumstedes came to England with William the Conqueror and settled in Norfolk and Kent, where three parishes yet bear their name. Plumstede parish in Norfolk, one hundred and fifty miles north of London, was part of the Lordship of William Earl of Warren, on whom it was conferred by William, Turolde the Saxon proprietor being despoiled of it; and William de Plumstede and Pleasure, his wife, were residents there in 1293. In 1308 William, son of Bartholomew de Calthorpe, conveyed to Clement de Plumstede and Catharine, his wife, four messuages in the parishes of Plumstede, Baconsthorpe, Matlaske and Hemstede. Another Clement de Plumstede was living there as late as 1377, and married Alice, daughter of Sir John de Repps, who by will devised to his grandson, John de Plumstede, his tenements in Shipden and Cremer, with the mill, villians, etc. A John de Plumstede, Esq., Lord of the Nether Court in King's Waldon, Hertfordshire, was buried at Plumstede Church in 1561; his will dated September 22, 1560, mentions wife Frideswide, two sons, John and Thomas, and several daughters. The parish registers of the Church of St. Michael, at Plumstead in county Norfolk, dating back to 1551, show the name of Plumstede and Plumstead, at intervals, two to three centuries ago. In the chancel of the church were the arms of the Plumstede family, sable, three chevrons ermine, on the upper, three annulets of the first; and their crest, a Griffin's head erased on a coronet. Several authorities have given slightly different descriptions of the armorial bearings of the family. That given in Burke's "General Armory," page 809, as granted by Clarenceux, August 3, 1573, to Norfolk family of Plumstede, is "Ermine three chevrons sable—each charged with as many annulets argent" and the Crest, "Out of Coronet or, a Griffin's head argent." The seal used by Clement Plumstead, of Philadelphia, and attached to his will in 1745, is ermine three chevrons, with a faint indication of three annulets in the uppermost part; and the crest used by his son William and attached to his will, was the same as that described by Burke, and a letter written by William, December 25, 1740, contains a seal with the same crest and the above described arms in perfect condition. The seal on letters from Robert Plumstead, of London, son of Clement Plumstead, of London, the East Jersey Proprietor, contains practically the same seal. These facts seem to clearly indicate that the Plumstead family, of Philadelphia, descended from the ancient family of Plumstede Hall, and the parishes of Great and Little Plumstead in Norfolk, where William de Plumstede was granted land in 1189, and acquired other lands in 1190, and where the family were seated for many generations. Soon after the formation of the Society of Friends in England, some of the Norfolk family became converts to the faith as well as others residing in and near London. At least two distinct branches of the family became identified with the Colonies in America, at an early date. Francis Plumstead, ironmonger.

of the "Minories," London, signer of Penn's charter of 1683, acquired 2500 acres of land in Pennsylvania in 1683, and it was eventually laid out to him in the township, which still bears his name in Bucks county, though he never located in America. He sold his 2500 acres in Plumstead township, 1707, to Richard Hill.

Clement Plumstead, of London, draper and merchant, was a large purchaser of land in East Jersey and was one of the Proprietors there. His lands descended to his eldest son and heir, Robert Plumstead, a merchant of London, who conveyed a portion of them to his relative, Clement Plumstead, of Philadelphia. There was also a Thomas Plumstead, of Bartholomew's Lane, London, who married Anne Whitlock in 1672. Clement Plumstead, of Philadelphia, by his will in 1745, makes his cousin, Thomas Plumstead, of London, a trustee of his minor sons's estate, but his parentage or the exact connection with the Plumstead family of London has never been ascertained.

CLEMENT PLUMSTEAD, Provincial Councillor, of Philadelphia, makes his first appearance in that city in 1697, when he witnessed a deed made by Samuel Carpenter. On August 20, 1700, Clement Plumstead, of London, makes Samuel Carpenter and Clement Plumstead, of Philadelphia, his attorneys to collect moneys of George Wilcocks. From the declaration as to age made in the opening clause in his will, 1745, it is shown that he was born in the year 1680.

He was probably a clerk in the employ of Samuel Carpenter, then a leading merchant in Philadelphia, until attaining his majority, and entering the mercantile and shipping business, which he followed nearly his whole life, and became one of Philadelphia's most prominent and wealthy merchants, as well as one of her most prominent citizens and officials. He was elected to the Common Council of the city in 1712, and advanced by that body to the Board of Aldermen, October, 1720, and three years later was elected Mayor of the City. At the close of his term he made a trip to England, taking his son William with him, and remained there the greater part of the year. As a member of the Board of Aldermen, his forensic ability easily made him one of its prominent members, and he was frequently appointed to prepare petitions and other addresses to the Governor and Assembly. In 1730 the one thousand pounds appropriated by the Assembly to build Alms-houses in the city was placed in the hands of the Mayor, Aldermen Clement Plumstead, and James Steele, one third to be expended by each of them. In 1736 he was again elected Mayor, and again in 1741. It was customary for the retiring chief magistrate of the city, when about to relinquish the honorable position, to give a supper to his fellow officials and friends, and the American Weekly Mercury of Philadelphia of September 30, 1742, has the following report of that given by Mayor Plumstead: "This day Clement Plumstead Esqr. Mayor of the City, made the customary Feast at the expiration of the Mayoralty, when the Governor, Council, Corporation, and a great number of the inhabitants were entertained at the Andrew Hamilton House, near the Drawbridge, in the most handsome manner." He was commissioned a Justice of the Peace, September 2, 1717, and was re-commissioned fourteen times, the last time in April, 1743, and was likewise commissioned a Judge of the County Courts in 1717, and sat as President Judge thereof from 1720 until 1745. On July 23, 1730, he was appointed Master of the Court of Chancery, and was commissioned by the English Court of Chancery, to examine witnesses in the contest between Penn and Lord Baltimore, in relation to the Maryland line. Both he and his son William were witnesses to the deed from the Five Nation Indians to Thomas, Richard and John Penn, October 11, 1736, by which was conveyed to the Penns "All the River Susquehannah, with the Lands lying on both sides thereof to extend eastward as far as the heads of the branches or springs which run into the said Susquehannah, and all the Lands lying on the west side of the said River to the setting sun, and to extend from the mouth of the said River northward up the same to the Hills or Mountains called the Endless Hills."

Clement Plumstead was elected to the Colonial Assembly from Philadelphia in 1712, and at once assumed a prominent position in that body, serving on a number of important committees. He was again returned at a special election held 11mo. 17, 1714, and was chairman of the Committee on Public Accounts. In the quarrel between the Governor and Assembly in 1714-15, he was several times selected as one of the delegation to wait upon the Governor, and was also directed to prepare an address to the King and the Proprietaries on the enactment of measures for the suppression of vice. He was again returned to the Assembly in 1716-18-20; and in 1727 was called to the Governor's Council where, as in the Assembly, he was a staunch supporter of the Proprietary interests. He became a large landowner in various parts of Pennsylvania and New Jersey; was one of the founders of the Durham Iron Works, Bucks county, 1726, and owned large mining interests in the vicinity of Tulpehocken, now Berks county, as well as lands at Perth Amboy and Crosswicks, New Jersey, and much valuable property in Philadelphia. On May 26, 1745, he died in Philadelphia, and was buried in the Swedes' Church graveyard. He married (first) Sarah, widow of William Righton, and daughter of William Biddle, of Mount Hope, New Jersey, March 1, 1703-4, taking a certificate to Crosswicks Monthly Meeting, from Philadelphia Monthly Meeting of Friends, of which he was a member, dated 12mo. 25, 1703. In 1704 he obtained a certificate to Friends in Virginia, "intended to Virginia and that way, trading." His wife died 6mo. (August) 17, 1705. He married (second) 8mo. 15, 1707, Elizabeth Palmer, who had brought a certificate from Bridgetown, Barbadoes, 11mo., 1706. She was probably a sister of Anthony Palmer, who was a resident of Barbadoes in 1685, and in 1704 purchased land in Kensington, and became a prominent man in Philadelphia, filling the position of Judge, and was a member of Provincial Council from 1709 to his death in 1748, and its president in the latter year. The name of Clement Plumstead frequently appears on the records of the Philadelphia Monthly Meeting of which he seems to have been a consistent member. He was frequently appointed as an arbitrator of disputes and differences between members. On 4mo. 25, 1709, he is granted a certificate to visit Barbadoes, and on the occasion of his visit to England with his son William, at the close of his first term as Mayor, he took a certificate dated 8mo. 30, 1724, but he had made an earlier trip taking certificate 6mo. 25, 1715, and his return is noted on 9mo. 30, 1716. On 10mo. 30, 1720, his second wife Elizabeth was buried, and 9mo. 30, 1722, he is dealt with by the Meeting for having married "Out of Unity." His third wife, Mary, is thought to have been Mary Curry. She survived him and died February 6, 1755. The Rev. Richard Peters, many years pastor of St. Peter's Church and a Provincial Councillor lived for some years with Clement Plumstead. Richard Hockley, a protégé of Hon. John Penn, and later a large landholder in Pennsylvania, was a clerk in Plumstead's counting house.

William, only child of Clement and Sarah (Biddle-Righton) Plumstead, died in infancy, May 14, 1705.

Issue of Clement and Elizabeth (Palmer) Plumstead:

WILLIAM, b. Nov. 7, 1708, d. Aug. 10, 1765, m. (first) Rebecca Kearney, (second) Mary McCall; of whom presently;

Thomas, d. inf., Sept. 19, 1710;

Clement, d. inf., Nov. 27, 1715;

A daughter, d. inf., Aug. 20, 1716;

Charles, d. inf., July 10, 1719.

There was no issue by the third wife.

WILLIAM PLUMSTEAD, eldest and only surviving child of Clement and Elizabeth (Palmer) Plumstead, born in Philadelphia, November 7, 1708, was given the best educational advantages that the city afforded, and at the age of sixteen years was taken to England by his father and given every facility to gain an insight into his father's large shipping trade and mercantile ventures. He became a partner with his father in 1741, and continued the business with success after his father's death. Like his father, he became prominent in municipal and provincial affairs early in life. He was elected to the Common Council of the city, October 2, 1739, and June 19, 1745, appointed Register General of the Province and held that office until his death, August 10, 1765. Three times he was elected Mayor of Philadelphia; October 2, 1750, again December 4, 1754, to fill the unexpired term of Charles Willing, deceased, and October 2, 1755. He was elected a Justice of the Peace, May 25, 1752, and was regularly recommissioned successively until his death, and served as a Justice of the County Courts for many years, and was one of the first two Justices, specially commissioned for the trial of negroes, October 28, 1762. He was a member of the Association Battery of Philadelphia, 1756, and was active in most of the social institutions of the day, being one of the original members of the Colony in Schuylkill, in 1732, and a contributor to the Dancing Assembly in 1748, having renounced his membership in the Society of Friends, and become a member of Christ Church. Being one of the largest contributors towards the building of St. Peter's Church in 1754, he was made trustee of the land on which it was erected and a member of the building committee, and became a vestryman in 1761, and the first-accounting warden. He was one of twenty-four original Trustees of the Academy and College of Philadelphia, which ultimately became the University of Pennsylvania. On October 30, 1756, he was returned as a member of the Provincial Assembly from Northampton county, but the contest over his right to the seat, consumed the term for which he was elected, however, he was re-elected in 1757, and took his seat without opposition. A prominent Free Mason of his time, and member of St. John's Lodge since 1731, he was elected Provincial Grand Master for the term of 1737-38, and was the first Grand Treasurer of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania in 1749. Interested in real estate in Philadelphia, Bucks, Northampton and Berks counties and in New Jersey, he left a large estate.

William Plumstead married (first) April 19, 1733, at Friends' Meeting, Rebecca, daughter of Philip and Rebecca (Britton) Kearney, of Philadelphia. Her father, Philip Kearney, was a native of Ireland and a representative of one of the oldest families in the Emerald Isle. He came to Philadelphia about 1700, with his brother Michael, and both married daughters of Lionel and Rebecca Britton, who came from Alny, county of Bucks, and arrived in the river Delaware, in the "Owners' Advice," 4mo., 1680; their daughter Elizabeth died on board the ship as they were coming up the bay and was buried at Burlington. They settled near the Falls, Bucks county, where Rebecca, who became the wife of Philip Kearney, was born 11mo. 19, 1683. Gen. Philip Kearney was a descendant of Michael and Elizabeth (Britton) Kearney, who settled in New Jersey. Lionel Britton and his family removed to Philadelphia in 1708, and he is said to have been the first American convert to Catholicism. Rebecca (Kearney) Plumstead died January 20, 1740-1, and William married (second) September 27, 1753, at Christ Church, Mary, daughter of George and Ann (Yeates) McCall, her father being one of the prominent merchants of Philadelphia, and member of the Council from October 3, 1722, to his death in 1740. Jasper Yeates, maternal grandfather of Mary (McCall) Plumstead, was a member of Provincial Council from New Castle, 1696, to his death in 1720. Mrs. Plumstead survived her husband many years, dying September 13, 1799.

He married at the church of St. Michael's and Zion, Philadelphia, August 16, 1762, Mary, only child of Warwick and Mary

Her grandfather, John Coates, was a native of Gloucester or Lincolnshire, England, born in 1684, died Philadelphia, March 16, 1760. With his brothers, William, Thomas and George, he was sent for to England by their maternal uncle, Thomas Sisom, then of Philadelphia, later of Bristol, Bucks county, soon after the marriage of Sisom to Priscilla Smith in 1693. They were the sons of his sister, Jeane Coates, and were members of the Society of Friends. John settled in the Northern Liberties of Philadelphia, where a street was named for him, and married at Christ Church, June 16, 1711, Mary, daughter of Warwick and Dorothy Hale (who had settled in the "Lower Counties"), and became a member of the Episcopal church. He set apart a lot for the erection of St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church. His son Warwick, born November 3, 1715, died February 12, 1782; married (first) Mary ———, who died October 1, 1744, leaving an only child, Mary, above mentioned, who married Thomas Plumstead.

Issue of Thomas and Mary (Coates) Plumstead:

Clement, b. Sept. 4, 1763, d. unm. in the East Indies, 1798; was adopted by his uncle and aunt, Andrew and Elizabeth (Plumstead) Elliot, and lived for several years in N. Y.; received appointment as midshipman in British Navy, 1783, and later joined the merchant service, following the sea until his death;

REBECCA, b. March 8, 1765, m. July 27, 1780, of whom presently;

REBECCA PLUMSTEAD, only daughter of Thomas and Mary (Coates) Plumstead, like her mother, was one of the most beautiful women of her day. At the age of eleven years she lost her father, and prior to the death of her surviving parent, four years later, she became betrothed to Benjamin Hutton, and her devoted mother, stricken with an incurable disease of which she was about to die, and desiring to leave her daughter with a lawful protector, hastened the wedding, and she was married July 27, 1780, when only a few months past her fifteenth year. Her gifted and beautiful mother died two weeks later, August 10, 1780.

Benjamin Hutton was born in Philadelphia, May 4, 1752, and was a son of John Strangeways Hutton, who died at the residence of his son in Southwark, 1792, at the reputed age of one hundred and eight years and four months. Later investigations, however, indicate that this was a mistake of some twelve years as his parents, John Hutton and Katharine "Stranguish," obtained their license to marry in New York, October 28, 1695. John Hutton, the elder, was born at Bouresdours, Scotland, and the maternal grandfather, Arthur Strangeways, died in Boston at the age of one hundred and one years. The latter was a landowner in New York in 1674. John Strangeways Hutton was born in New York, and was educated for the sea, and was for some years Lieutenant on a private armed vessel. He married (first) Catharine Cheeseman, by whom he had eight children. Locating in Philadelphia, he married (second) 1735, Anne, daughter of John Van Laer, Jr., by his wife, Priscilla, daughter of William and Ann Preston, of Frankford, and a sister to Amos Preston, an early settler in Buckingham, Bucks county, and the ancestor of the Preston family of Bucks county. John Van Laer, the elder, emigrated from the Duchy of Cleves, Westphalia, about 1685, and located in the Northern Liberties soon after 1700. He was made a member of Common Council, October 6, 1713, and sat in that body until his death in 1722. John S. Hutton had by his second wife, Ann Van Laer, twelve children, making him the father of twenty children in all. Benjamin Hutton and his family resided in Southwark, where he died August 20, 1809. His widow, Rebecca Plumstead Hutton, removed later to Burlington, New Jersey, died there July 5, 1841, and was buried at St. Peters, Philadelphia. She was a strikingly handsome woman, tall, slender and dignified, and of a very kindly and benevolent disposition. During the yellow fever scourge of 1798, when nearly all those who could afford a refuge elsewhere fled in terror from the city, she remained to care for the deserted sick, and many a fever-stricken victim had reason to bless as an angel of mercy the stately lady in her spotless white cap and lace neckerchief, who brought hope and cheer to their deserted bedsides.

GILPIN FAMILY.

Few American families possess a pedigree of such length and so fully and well authenticated as the Gilpin family. This is largely due to the interest and care taken by the early as well as the later members of the family to preserve its records. In the latter part of the sixteenth century George Gilpin, of Kentmere Hall, the ancient seat of one branch of the family, compiled a pedigree, a copy of which he sent to his uncle, George Gilpin, then Queen Elizabeth's Minister at The Hague. About the middle of the seventeenth century this pedigree was the subject of careful research by Sir Daniel Fleming, of Rydal Hall, noted for his genealogical researches in Westmoreland. His Gilpin manuscripts are still in possession of the Fleming family at Rydal Hall, and a copy is in the Bodleim Library at Oxford. In 1713 William Gilpin (1657-1724), of Scaleby Castle, Recorder of Carlisle, with the aid of his kinsman, Alan Chambre, of Hall Head, Recorder of Kendal, made a pedigree of the family. His grandson, Rev. William Gilpin (1724-1804), of Boldre, wrote a "Life of Bernard Gilpin" in 1753, and was interested in the family genealogy.

Thomas Gilpin, of Philadelphia (1729-78), grandson of Joseph Gilpin, the American emigrant (1663-1739), made a trip to England in 1753, visiting his Gilpin relatives and noting genealogical memoranda in his diary. His son, Joshua Gilpin, of Philadelphia (1765-1841), visited Rev. William Gilpin, of Boldre, 1796, and made copies of the early Gilpin records. He and his brother, Thomas Gilpin, of Philadelphia (1776-1853), prepared the work "Memoirs of the Gilpin Family of Philadelphia." Their large collection of family manuscripts, including those of Henry D. Gilpin, son of Joshua, are preserved in the Gilpin Library of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

Several charts and sketches of various American branches of the family have appeared in recent years. Probably the best account of the early English Gilpins is embodied in the elaborate pedigree made by the learned antiquary, the late Wilhelm Jackson, F. S. A., of Whitehaven, England, and inserted in his volume, "Memoirs of Dr. Richard Gilpin, of Scaleby Castle, in Cumberland," published in 1879, by the Cumberland and Westmoreland Antiquarian and Archæological Society. He made use of Sir Daniel Fleming's manuscripts; those of Mrs. Fawcett, of Scaleby Castle, a descendant of the Gilpins; and of manuscripts and records from various other sources. From these various sources have been gathered the data contained in these pages.

The name and family of Gilpin is doubtless of Norman origin, as the name, traced from authentic English records, for eight generations, was spelled "de Gylpyn."

The earliest ancestor of the Pennsylvania Quaker family of Gilpin, of which any record is known, was,

RICHARD DE GYLPYN, to whom the Baron of Kendal granted the estate of Kentmere, county of Westmoreland, in or about 1206, in the reign of King John. This grant is said to have been made as a recompense for the slaying, by de Gylpyn, of a fierce wild boar, which had done great damage in the valleys of Westmoreland and

GILPIN ARMS.

Cumberland. From the same feat originated the arms ever since borne by his descendants, viz., "Or, a boar statant, sable, langued and tusked gules," with a Crest, A dexter arm embowed, in armour proper, the naked hand grasping a pine branch fesswise vert, with the Motto. Dictis factisque simplex.

Kentmere Hall, still standing at the foot of the fantastic rocky heights of Rangmoor, and the estate surrounding it in the rich valley of Kent, was held by the elder male branch of the family until the time of Cromwell, when George Gilpin, who then held it, became a Captain in the army of Charles I, and, on the Parliamentary forces gaining the ascendancy, made a deed to his brother-in-law, Sir Christopher Philipson, of the Parliamentary party, to save the estate from sequestration, which his heirs failed to have set aside at the Restoration, and Kentmere was lost to the family.

A Pennsylvania descendant of the family recently visited Kentmere Hall and found the ancient structure, dating back probably to the fourteenth century, occupied by a farmer. It is surmounted at the west end by a peel tower, and the "mere" from which it took its name had been drained something over a century ago.

— GYLPYN, son of Richard de Gylpyn, to whom Kentmere passed at the death of his father, whose name has not been preserved, had a son,

RICHARD DE GYLPYN, who flourished in the reign of Henry III., 1216 to 1272. To him Peter de Bruys, who had married the daughter and heiress of William de Lancaster, the last Baron of Kendal, granted the Manor and lands of Ulwithwaite. The original deed of grant, in Latin, dated 1268, A. D., neatly engrossed in characters of that time, with seals in perfect condition, is still in possession of the descendants of Rev. William Gilpin, Vicar of Boldre, near Lymington, a lineal descendant of the grantee.

— DE GYLPYN (first name unknown), who succeeded his father, had,

RICHARD DE GYLPYN, who possessed the estates of Kentmere and Ulwithwaite: witnessing a deed executed in the year 1333, A. D., had a son,

RICHARD DE GYLPYN, who possessed both estates, and was succeeded by,

WILLIAM DE GYLPYN, his son, who married a daughter of Thomas Airey, Bailiff of Kentmere, and was succeeded by his son, RICHARD DE GYLPYN, who married a daughter of Fleming of Coniston Hall, Westmoreland, and had five children. The Fleming family derived its descent from Sir Michael le Fleming, who accompanied his kinsman, Baldwin, Earl of Flanders, and brother-in-law, William of Normandy, to assist in the conquest of England in 1066 A. D. Sir Michael le Fleming's second son, Sir Richard le Fleming, was the grandfather of Richard le Fleming, who by marriage with Elizabeth Urswick, became possessed of Coniston Hall, and was the ancestor of Sir Daniel Fleming, of Coniston Hall and Rydal, who in the latter part of the seventeenth century made a pedigree of the Gilpin family, before referred to, the manuscript of which yet remains among the collections of S. H. Fleming, Esq., at Rydal Hall, in the English Lake District.

WILLIAM GILPIN, one of the five children of the last named Richard de Gylpyn, married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Lancaster, of Sockbridge Hall, a descendant of Roger de Lancaster, of the Lancasters who were Barons of Kendal, Westmoreland, by his wife Philippa, daughter of Hugh de Bolbec, of Northumberland. This William Gilpin, "was an eminent man and of great dealings in the Barony of Kendal." He lived, as Sir Daniel Fleming's ms. has it, in the time of Edward IV., about 1472, and had seven children. His son,

RICHARD GILPIN, of the tenth generation from Richard de Gylpyn, the grantee of Kentmere, married Dorothy, daughter of Sir Rowland Thornborough, of Hamsfel, in the reign of Richard II., and had eleven children, of whom William, the eldest son and heir, a captain in the King's Army, was killed at the battle of Bosworth Field, August 22, 1485, leaving no issue; and the estates and title descended to the second son, EDWIN GILPIN, who married Margaret, daughter of Thomas Layton, of Dalemain, county Cumberland, descended from Sir William de Laton, of the Latons of county Durham. Margaret Layton's brothers, Sir William, Sir Brian, Sir Cuthbert, Sir Richard, Anthony and Thomas Layton, were "All famous men of great renown, some for their learning, and others in war, of which three were Knights of the Rhodes. Her sisters married Redman of Harwood; P. Redman of Ireby; Carleton; Clybburn; and Vaux, all worshipful Families." Her mother was a daughter of Thomas Tunstall, Lord of Thurland Castle and Tunstall, Lancashire; a grandson of Sir Richard, and a great-grandson of Sir Thomas Tunstall, of Thurland Castle, Man-at-arms at the battle of Agincourt, 1415. Her mother's brother, Sir Brian Tunstall, Lord of Thurland Castle, was killed at Flodden Field, 1513, A. D., and another brother, Cuthbert Tunstall (1474-1559), was Bishop of Durham.

George Gilpin, son of Edwin and Margaret (Layton) Gilpin, was a distinguished man of letters and became Queen Elizabeth's Minister at The Hague.

"Bernard Gilpin," another son of Edwin, writes his biographer in 1628, "was Born at Kentmere in the County of Westmoreland, in the Year of Our Lord, 1517, of an Ancient and Honorable Family, Being the Son of Edwin Gilpin, the elder Brother of which Edwin was Slain in the Battle of Bosworth, being Heir in the fifth Descent to Richard Gilpin, who in the Reign of King John was enfeoffed in the Lordship of Kentmere Hall, by the Baron of Kendal, for his singular Deserts, both in Peace and War. This was that Richard Gilpin, who Slew the Wild Boar, that raging in the Mountains adjoining had much indamaged the Country People; whence it is, that the Gilpins in their Coat of Arms give the Boar. The mother of Bernard Gilpin, was Margaret, the daughter of William Laton, of Dolemaine in Cumberland, a man of an Ancient House, and a Family Famous in that Warlike Age, as from whence had Sprung many Right Valiant Gentlemen."

This Bernard Gilpin was educated at Queen's College Oxford, and was made a Fellow of the College. On taking orders as a Priest, he was made one of the head masters by Cardinal Wolsey. In the divisions arising at the University at this time, on the doctrines of the Reformation, he at first took sides against them, but after diligent study of the Scriptures, took ground in favor of the Reformation. In 1552 he became Vicar of Norton, Diocese of Durham, of which his mother's uncle, Cuthbert Tunstall, was Bishop, and after preaching a sermon before Edward VI., was licensed as a general preacher of the Gospel throughout the Kingdom.

Troubled with doubts, however, he resigned his vicarage and went to London, Paris and Antwerp to pursue his theological studies. Returning to England, towards the close of Queen Mary's reign, he was invested by his great-uncle, Bishop of Durham, with the Archdeaconry of Durham and became Rector of Essington. He attacked the vices and ignorance of the clergy with such vigor that he incurred the enmity of the priests and was brought before the Bishop for heresy. The Bishop not only discharged him but conferred upon him the rectorship of Houghton-le-Spring, Diocese of Durham, he having resigned the Archdeaconry. His enemies, however, carried his case before the Bishop of London, Dr. Bonner, and Gilpin, hearing that a warrant for his arrest had been issued, started to London, prepared to suffer martyrdom. But breaking his leg on the journey, "Bloody Mary" had died before he recovered sufficiently to resume his journey and Catholic supremacy being at an end with the accession of "Good Queen Bess" to the throne, he returned to Durham and resumed his charge of Houghton-le-Spring. He was offered the Bishopric of Carlisle, when the Roman Catholic Bishop was deposed, but declined it, preferring to retain the rectorship of Houghton-le-Spring, where he continued to preach until his death, March 4, 1583.

His parish, including fourteen villages, was then, as now, one of the richest benefices of the North and yielded an ample income, the whole of which he spent in charity and beneficence. His rectory was always open to travellers and strangers, and he kept a table for his parishioners every Sunday from Michaelmas to Easter, and every fortnight provided forty bushels of corn, twenty bushels of malt, and a whole ox, with which to feed the poor of his parish. He founded a grammar school at Houghton-le-Spring, and assisted many of the more promising youths there, educated to enter universities to prepare themselves for the Church; always maintaining at least six at the different universities, and after their graduation, charging himself with their settlement. George Carleton, afterwards Bishop of Chichester, who wrote a life of Bernard Gilpin, was one of his beneficiaries. (Bishop Carleton in his "Vita B. Gilpini," was printed by William James, "dwelling in Red-Crosse Street," London, 1628, and an English translation of the Latin was published in 1629).

Disgusted with the ignorance and inefficiency of the clergy, Bernard Gilpin, every year, visited the neglected parts of Northumberland and other northern shires, particularly the lawless region of Redesdale and Tynedale, holding forth the commands and sanctions of Christianity, and did much to change the character of the denizens of that lawless region, where he became known as the "Apostle of the North," as he was known in his own parish as the "Father of the Poor." He was never married.

In the ancient church of Houghton-le-Spring, where he so long ministered, is the tomb of Bernard Gilpin. It is a massive table or altar monument of free-stone, at the upper end of the south transept. At the west end of the monument, cut in raised characters, divided by an escutcheon on which is relieved a boar resting against a tree, with a crescent cut in the side of the boar, is the following inscription:

"BERNERDS GILPIN

H V I V S

"OBIIT IVA

In Durham Cathedral, on the left-hand as you enter the nave by the north door, is a window, erected in modern times to Bernard Gilpin. It contains three pictures arranged above each other representing, first, Gilpin giving away his horse; second, quelling the feud in Rothbury Church; third, founding Houghton Grammar School. In 1884 there was at Wallington Hall, Northumberland, the seat of Sir G. Trevelyan, Baronet, a painting by William Bell, Esq., representing Gilpin in Rothbury Church. A portrait of him is in collection of Gilpin portraits and family papers at Scaleby Castle, Cumberland. Among the books bequeathed by him to his alma mater, Queen's College, is a folio, "Opera A Politani," edited by Aldo Pio Manzio, Venice, 1498, containing the autographs of him and his uncle, William Laton, and inscribed, "Erat hic Willus Layton de Dalemane in Comtatu Cumbriae ad Emontis fluentia, unde et Bernardus Gilpin (qui librum hunc bibliothecae 'd) genus maternum duxit."

WILLIAM GILPIN, eldest brother of Bernard Gilpin, the "Apostle of the North," married Elizabeth, daughter and co-heir of Thomas Washington, of Hall Head, Westmoreland, great-grandson of Robert Washington, Lord of Milburne, Westmoreland, ancestor of President George Washington. William and Elizabeth (Washington) Gilpin had twelve children. He was buried, according to the Kendal parish records, January 23, 1577.

The Kentmere estate descended to the eldest son, George Gilpin, who collected a pedigree of the family to his own time and sent a copy to his uncle, George Gilpin, before referred to as Queen Elizabeth's Minister at The Hague. George Gilpin was succeeded in the tenure of Kentmere by his son, William Gilpin, who married Dorothy, daughter of Sir Richard Sanford, of Howgill, and was succeeded by his son, George Gilpin, who married Catharine, daughter of Robert Philipson, of Holling Hall, Westmoreland. This latter George Gilpin lost the estate of Kentmere to the Gilpin name in the time of the Civil War. He was a Captain in the army of Charles I., and made a conveyance in trust to one Philipson, and afterwards to Capt. Nicolson, of Hawkeshead, of the Parliamentarians, to save the estate from sequestration. Upon prosecution by the Parliamentarians, Capt. Gilpin fled beyond the sea and died abroad without issue. Capt. Nicolson held the estate until the Restoration, when he was ousted in a suit-at-law under the first conveyance by Sir Christopher Philipson.

MARTIN GILPIN, a younger son of William, was an Attorney-at-law of Leathes House, Cumberland, and of Kendal, Westmoreland. He married, 1580 A. D., Catharine Newby (died 1634), and died at Kendal, December 18, 1629, leaving eight children.

His son, Isaac Gilpin, of Gilthroton, Westmoreland, was the father of Richard Gilpin, D. D., born October 5, 1625, at Kendal, who was eminent for his piety and learning. Dr. Richard Gilpin studied medicine and later divinity, and became rector of Greystock, in Cumberland, developing into a staunch Presbyterian divine. He was called by the dissenters to Newcastle-on-Tyne, but returning to Cumberland, purchased Scaleby Castle, a fortress of consequence erected on the confines of England to repel the inroads of the Scots. There he died in 1699.

He was succeeded by his son, William Gilpin (1657-1724), in the ownership of Scaleby Castle. This William Gilpin, a Barrister-at-law, Deputy Vice-Admiral of Cumberland, and Recorder of Carlisle, in 1713, compiled a pedigree of the Gilpin family. His son, Capt. John Bernard Gilpin (1701-1801), was the father of William Gilpin (1724-1804), rector of Boldre, Hampshire, before referred to as holding the old deed of Ulwithwaite. He was a prolific writer on Scottish and English scenery and country life and published in 1753 a life of Bernard Gilpin, the "Apostle of the North."

Sawry Gilpin, R. A. (1733-1807), a brother of Rev. William Gilpin, of Boldre, was a celebrated painter of animals. John Bernard Gilpin (1754-1851), son of Rev. William Gilpin, of Boldre, came to Philadelphia in 1783, and was British Consul to the Eastern States in 1803, dying at Annapolis Royal, Nova Scotia, aged ninety-seven years.

BERNARD GILPIN, eldest son and heir of Martin Gilpin, married Dorothy Ayrey and had eleven children. He died April 21, 1636. His sons of whom we have record were: William, Martin, Samuel, Arthur, Ranulph, Alan and Thomas.

THOMAS GILPIN, one of the younger sons of Bernard Gilpin, resided at Mill Hill, parish of Caton, Westmoreland, on the borders of Lancashire. He had five sons and five daughters of whom we have the name of but one, Thomas, the youngest son. "They were People of Good Repute in the Country, and were Religious, being called Puritans, who Educated their Children very Strictly." After their father's death the mother removed with her children to Kendal, five of her children being dead.

THOMAS GILPIN, Quaker minister, of Warborough, Oxfordshire, youngest son of Thomas of Mill Hill, was born in 1622, died 12mo. 3, 1702. According to a sketch of his life published in 1706, in "Piety Promoted," part iii., from which the above reference to his parents is quoted, Thomas Gilpin went as a young man from Kendal to London as an "Apprentice to a Tallow Chandler, and after went into the Wars." In the "Memoirs of the Gilpin Family of Philadelphia," it is stated that he was an officer and fought at the battle of Worcester, 1651, but the statement is based entirely on tradition and lacks proof.

On leaving the "Wars" Thomas Gilpin settled in Oxfordshire and was married prior to 1651 to Joan, daughter of Thomas Bartholomew alias Martin, husbandman, of Shillingsford, a small village in the parish of Warborough, on river Thames, midway between Oxford and Reading. Joan Bartholomew was baptized in the church at Warborough, August 28, 1625, died March 21, 1700-1. Thomas Gilpin, her husband, lived a short time with his father-in-law at Shillingford and then took a house for his little family in the nearby village of Warborough, where he lived the remainder of his life. About 1654, while on a trip to London, he became a convert to the new doctrines and faith of the Society of Friends, and on his return established a meeting at his house in Warborough, which was held there for many years. About 1662 he entered the Ministry of the Society, and made frequent visits to the neighboring counties, to London and to Wales. At times he was severely persecuted for his Quaker testimonies, being twice a prisoner in Oxford Castle, and once in Newgate, London. In May, 1670, he was fined £20 for having a meeting in his house, and a month later, says a quaint old chronicle, "Was another Meeting att the said Thomas Gilpin's," when the officers of the law, "broke open his Door, and took away his Household Goods, leaveing him not a Bed to lie on, nor a Pot to boil his Food in. He had a Family of five small Children which suffered much through this Seizure. Some Time after, as soon as he had got his Corn in, being about three Acres, the Officers came and took that alsoe, with two Pigs, in all the value of £11."

Issue of Thomas and Joan (Bartholomew) Gilpin:

Mary, b. 7mo. 10, 1651;

Thomas, b. 9mo. 13, 1653;

Isaac, b. 1mo. 9, 1656;

RACHEL, b. 2mo. 14, 1660, m. Thomas West, at Friends' Meeting in county Bucks, England, 1682; of them presently;

JOSEPH, b. 4mo. 8, 1663, m. Hannah Glover, and came to Pa.; of whom presently;

Richard, b. 1mo. 2, 1666.

RACHEL GILPIN, fifth child of Thomas and Joan (Bartholomew) Gilpin, born at Warborough, Oxfordshire, 2mo. (April) 14, 1660, was brought up as a Friend and married in Friends' Meeting in county Bucks, 1682, Thomas West, husbandman and grazier, of Long Crandon, Bucks, son of William West, of Long Crandon, yeoman, by his wife, Elizabeth (died 8mo. 6, 1684).

Issue of Thomas and Rachel (Gilpin) West:

William West, b. 5mo. 19, 1686, settled in Chester, now Delaware co., Pa., locating first in Concord, but moving about 1709 to Springfield township, where he m. Deborah, dau. of Bartholomew Coppock; he died in 1720, without issue;

Joseph West, b. 3mo. 7, 1688, no further record;

Thomas West, a cooper, settled in Concord twp., now Delaware co., Pa., as early as 1712; wife Mary; children, Thomas, Rachel, William, Ellen, Mary, Elizabeth, Joseph;

John West, b. 10mo. (Dec.) 28, 1690, at Long Crandon, county Bucks, England, did not affiliate with Friends; m. in England and had one child, Thomas, a watchmaker at Reading, Berkshire; about 1714 joined his brothers, William and Thomas, in Pa.; his wife, unable to make the voyage at the time, died soon after, and he m. (second) in Pa., Sarah (b. 2mo. 8, 1697, d. 1756), dau. of Thomas and Margery (Smith) Pearson, of Marple twp., now Delaware co., emigrants from Pownall Fee, Cheshire; from 1721 to 1732, John West was a resident of Upper Providence, now Delaware co., where he owned 21 acres of land on Ridley creek; in 1733 he was an innkeeper in Chester; by 1737 he was in Springfield twp., where he also kept a tavern; in 1744 he took charge of the inn at Newtown Square; he was restored to membership with Friends at Newtown Meeting in 1759; in 1764 he returned to England and died at the house of his sister, in Marlborough, Oxfordshire, Oct. 5, 1776; his portrait appears in his son's painting, "Penn's Treaty with the Indians," and also in the "West Family."

His son, Benjamin West, artist, President of the Royal Academy of the Fine Arts, was the youngest son, and was b. in Springfield twp., now Delaware co., Pa., 1738, d. in London, March 11, 1820, and was buried in the painter's corner in the crypt of St. Paul's; though sometimes referred to as "the Quaker artist" he was not a member of the Society, his parents not being members at the time of his birth, and he never united with the Society.

JOSEPH GILPIN, third son and sixth child of Thomas and Joan (Bartholomew) Gilpin, born in Warborough, Oxfordshire, England, 4mo. (June) 8, 1663, was reared in the Society of Friends, of which his father was a minister, and held to that faith throughout his life. At the time of his marriage he was a weaver by trade, living in Dorchester, Oxfordshire, an ancient town on the river Thames about two miles from his native town of Warborough. He married, 12mo. 23, 1691, in a Quaker Meeting at Baghurst, Hampshire, Hannah Glover, of Ichingswell, Parish of Kingsclerc, Hampshire, daughter of George Glover, deceased, by his wife, Alice Lamboll, later of Dorchester. The marriage certificate is entered on the records of Concord Monthly Meeting of Friends, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

Alice (Lamboll) Glover and her brother, William Lamboll, were probably children of George Lamboll (1634-1720), of Reading, a Quaker, in whose orchard

George Fox held a great meeting in 1655. William Lamboll was a "mealman," of Reading, Berkshire. Hannah (Glover) Gilpin's sister Alice married (first) John Brunsden, of Bucklebury, Berkshire, yeoman, at a Quaker Meeting at Brumpton, Berkshire, 10mo. 19, 1680, coming with him to Pennsylvania; after his death, which occurred prior to 1692, married (second) William Vestal. She had by Brunsden three children, John, Alice, Hannah, who married John Buckingham, and by Vestal had, William, George and Mary.

By deeds dated June 29 and 30, 1683, William Penn conveyed to William Lamboll, above mentioned, 625 acres of land to be laid out in Pennsylvania. Lamboll by deed dated August 2, 1684, conveyed 100 acres of this purchase to John Brunsden, husband of his niece. Brunsden came to Pennsylvania about that time and by warrant dated November 11, 1684, had the whole 625 acres located and surveyed on the eastern hills of Brandywine creek in what became Birmingham township, Chester, now Delaware county, apparently making a settlement on his own 100 acres. The tract joined the present Chester county line about one mile south of Dilworthtown, and less than two miles northeast of Chadd's Ford. Nearby is Birmingham Meeting House and the battlefield of Brandywine in the Revolution.

On October 11 and 12, 1694, William Lamboll conveyed 200 acres of the same tract to his sister, Alice Glover, of Dorchester, widow, for her use for life, then to vest in her daughter Hannah, wife of Joseph Gilpin, of Dorchester. The consideration mentioned is ten shillings and "the natural love and affection he hath and beareth to his sister Alice Glover and to his niece, Hannah, as also for the making some provision for their future maintenance and Support, and for the settling of said Lands." Additional grants of land by the uncle, William Lamboll, of seventy-five acres, December 8 and 9, 1704, and 250 acres on May 17 and 18, 1713, increased the Gilpin plantation to 425 acres; the remaining 100 acres of the purchase of Lamboll being granted to Jonathan Thatcher.

In 1695 Joseph Gilpin with his wife and two children crossed the sea to join their relatives and to take possession of the land given to them by Hannah's uncle, Mr. Lamboll. Their certificate of removal, certifying to their membership with Friends in England, was presented to Concord Meeting, 12mo. 10, 1695. They landed at New Castle, according to the written account of Isaac Glover Gilpin, grandson, and set out on foot through the wilderness for their Birmingham plantation, eighteen miles to the northward on the frontier of settlement. At about ten or twelve miles distant from New Castle night overtook them. In this situation they applied at the habitation of an earlier settler for shelter, which was refused them * * * fortunately some of the natives lived near, into whose wigwams they were received, and treated kindly; and they lodged there for the first night on shore, in America. * * * Next morning being refreshed they went on and arrived in Birmingham township, Chester county, where Joseph Gilpin had previously a large tract of land to the west of Brunsden's land.

They had at first to dig a cave in the earth and went into it, in which they lived four or five years and where two children were born. * * * After Joseph Gilpin had resided in the cave for four or five years, he built a frame house and barn near the Cave, but this was burnt, and then he built a frame house a few hundred yards to the westward (about 1720), sixteen feet by eighteen feet, two stories high, where he resided the remainder of his life. It is now in good preservation and comfortable, and forms part of the present house. A brick addition, made in 1754, was occupied by Gen. Howe as his headquarters after the battle of Brandywine in 1777. A large barn was also built and covered with weather-boards. This building is still standing in 1909.

Joseph Gilpin became popular among the emigrants, who were frequently Friends, and he was so well known there that great numbers of families on coming over came to his house, where they were kindly received and entertained. Hannah Gilpin was the best of housewives, superior to most in intellect and friendly conduct.

In 1740 Thomas Chalkley (1675-1741), eminent travelling Quaker Preacher, notes the following in his Journal, while on a visit to Concord: "The night before this meeting I lodged at the widow Gilpin's, whose husband, Joseph Gilpin, was lately deceased; there was true Christian love and friendship between us for above fifty years. When first I saw Joseph in Pennsylvania, he lived in a cave in the earth, where we enjoyed each other's company in the love and fear of God. This Friend had fifteen children, whom he lived to see brought up to the states of men and women, all but two married well, and to his mind." (Moses and Esther, two of the younger children, were married after the date of the entry in the Journal).

But one of the fifteen children of Joseph and Hannah Gilpin died under the age of sixty years, and at his death, November 9, 1739, he had forty-five living grandchildren. At the death of Hannah, January 12, 1757, all fifteen of her children had married, twelve of them were living, and there were sixty-two grandchildren and nearly as many great-grandchildren, one hundred and thirty-three living descendants in all.

SAMUEL GILPIN, eldest son of Joseph and Hannah (Glover) Gilpin, born at Dorchester, Oxfordshire, England, June 7, 1694, came with his parents to the banks of the Brandywine, in Chester, now Delaware county, Pennsylvania, when a little more than a year old, and was reared in the cave and primitive house of his parents there. On January 25, 1722-3, he married Jane, daughter of John and Mary (Doe) Parker, of Philadelphia, and they settled on a farm in Concord township, Chester county, where they lived for ten years, and then removed to Cecil county, Province of Maryland, where he resided until his death, December 6, 1767. His wife Jane survived him until August 9, 1775. She was born March 24, 1701-2. Both are buried in a private burying-ground in what was the farm of their son Joseph Gilpin, near the head of Elk river.

Issue of Samuel and Jane (Parker) Gilpin:

Mary, of whom we have no further record;

Joseph, resided near the "Head of the Elk" in Cecil co., Md.; though a Quaker and not willing to accept military office, he was a strong supporter of the cause of independence and filled a number of civil offices, and was a prominent man in the community;

Hannah;

Rachel;

George, removed to Fairfax co., Va., was a Colonel of Militia there during the Revolution; he was a close personal friend of George Washington, and was one of his pallbearers.

THOMAS GILPIN, second son of Samuel and Jane (Parker) Gilpin, born in Concord township, Chester county, March 18, 1727-8, removed with his parents to Cecil county, Maryland, when a child and was reared to agricultural pursuits, and on coming of age settled on a farm of eighty acres on the banks of the Susquehanna, but was soon after adopted by his uncle, Thomas Gilpin, and had charge of a valuable property belonging to his uncle on the Brandywine, near Wilmington, containing valuable mill sites and water power, which he later inherited. In 1752 he made a voyage to England with a view of obtaining information in regard to its trade relations with the Colonies that might be useful to him in entering into a commercial business which he had begun to contemplate in connection with the development of the property on the Brandywine. Landing at Dublin, he spent some time in Ireland, and then crossed over to Whitehaven and visited relatives in that and other parts of England. He visited and inspected coal and iron mines, potteries, and various kinds of manufacturing plants, and made a careful study of the state and mode of trade at the chief ports of export and import. After having visited all the localities connected with his ancestors he returned to America, reaching Chesapeake bay, October 3, 1753. Shortly after his return he established himself in business near the head of tide water on the Chester river, eastern shore of Maryland, where the present town of Millington was begun by him, and where he carried on a large and successful business as a wholesale factor and shipper.

In 1764 Thomas Gilpin married Lydia, born May 4, 1736, daughter of Joshua Fisher, then carrying on a large shipping business at Philadelphia, and transferring the active management of his Maryland establishment to his brother, and brother-in-law, Miers Fisher, settled permanently in Philadelphia, and became a member of the firm of Joshua Fisher & Sons Company, the leading member of which was his wife's eldest brother, Thomas Fisher. Having prospered in his business undertakings, and being possessed of ample means through his own efforts and by a considerable inheritance from his uncle, he, soon after locating in Philadelphia, began to take an active interest in scientific pursuits and the development of the industrial interests of his native country. He was one of the original members of the American Philosophical Society, and took an active interest in their proceedings. Long impressed with the utility of a canal connecting the Delaware and Chesapeake bays, he devoted himself to the task of inducing the merchants and capitalists of Philadelphia to undertake its accomplishment. In 1768 he made thorough and careful surveys and levels of different routes, and prepared estimates of probable expense, and plans of construction, sufficient to show a general comparison of the advantages and expediency of each route, which he laid before the Philosophical Society in May, 1769, at the instance of a meeting of merchants and traders of Philadelphia, to which they had been first submitted. The Philosophical Society appointed a committee of eight of its members to verify his plans, estimates and suggestions, who made their report thereon February 16, 1770, the original of which is still in existence. This was the first real system of internal improvement to be originated and carried out for the purposes of trade by the resources of the Colonists themselves, and though Thomas Gilpin did not live to see it completed, the project originated by him was carried to a successful issue, largely through the instrumentality of his eldest son.

When the protest of the Colonies against the unjust measures of the mother country reached the point of armed resistance, Thomas Gilpin, with many other influential business men of Philadelphia, who were members of the Society of Friends, withdrew themselves entirely from the contest, refusing to take any part in the struggle. Their wealth and influence made them objects of suspicion to the more ardent Patriots, and under the sanction of Congress, the Supreme Executive Council of Pennsylvania had a number of them arrested when Philadelphia was threatened by the British forces in 1778, and transported to the neighborhood of Winchester, Virginia, where Thomas Gilpin died March 2, 1778, and was buried in the Friends' burying-ground at Winchester. His wife, Lydia Fisher, survived him twenty-nine years, dying March 14, 1807.

Issue of Thomas and Lydia (Fisher) Gilpin:

Sept. 10, 1776, d. in Phila., March 3, 1853, educated at Friends' schools of Phila., and showed marked ability in mathematics, science, and penmanship; he was left in charge of the commercial establishment in Phila., and the Brandywine mills, at the age of nineteen years, while his elder brother was in Europe, and became his partner on his return; introduced improved process for making of paper at the Brandywine mills as well as cotton and wool manufacturing; devoted much time in later years to scientific research, and literary pursuits; collected papers and data in reference to the banishment of the Philadelphia Friends to Virginia, which was published in 1850; he was a member of a number of scientific institutions; d. unm. in his seventy-seventh year; author of "Genealogy of the Fisher Family" and the "Exiles in Virginia."

JOSHUA GILPIN, eldest son of Thomas and Lydia (Fisher) Gilpin, born in Philadelphia, November 8, 1765, received the best education the city could afford. He was particularly fond of Latin classics, and wrote a number of poems and essays before the age of eighteen years. The death of his father placed the care of his mother and infant brother, together with the administration of a large estate, upon his shoulders at an early age. From 1784 to 1795 he was busily engaged in the care of the commercial business establishment in Philadelphia by his father and the Brandywine mills, now a very valuable property. He associated his younger brother with him at a very early age, and leaving the large business interests in his charge in 1795, made an extended trip to Europe, travelling extensively in England, Scotland and Ireland, and spending one year upon the Continent. He examined into the manufacture, trade and industries of Europe, and collected a valuable cabinet of specimens of mineralogy. Much of his time was, however, spent in the society of his relatives, and friends of congenial tastes, Benjamin West, Rev. William Gilpin, Bishop Wilberforce, Lord Stanhope, and many others of high social and literary standing. He married, August 5, 1800, Mary, daughter of John Dilworth, a banker of Lancaster, England, and Sarah his wife, born in Lancashire, April 22, 1777, and with her returned to Philadelphia, early in 1801. He took an active part in all that pertained to the best interest of the city of his birth and was connected with all the more important scientific, literary and social institutions of Philadelphia. Almost immediately after his return from Europe, he took up the canal scheme originated by his father, for connecting the Delaware and Chesapeake bays, but the commercial interests of Philadelphia being somewhat depressed for a number of years, its construction was delayed; renewing the agitation in 1817, after many delays, the canal was finally opened, mainly through his exertions and influence. Joshua Gilpin died August 22, 1841, in his seventy-fifth year, survived by his wife and seven children. His wife died April 21, 1864.

VINCENT GILPIN, eldest son of Joseph and Mary (Caldwell) Gilpin, born in East Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, December 8, 1732, married, December 6, 1758, Abigail, born August 20, 1738, daughter of Edward and Sarah (Sharpless) Woodward, of Middletown, Chester county, and settled soon after on the Brandywine, above Wilmington, Delaware, on land now a part of the Dupont estate, where he built a large flour mill, and operated it for many years, shipping large quantities of flour to the West Indies. He was at different times part owner of several vessels plying between the Delaware ports and the West Indies, one of them the brig "Nancy," named for his daughter Ann, is said to have been the first vessel to hoist the American flag in the West Indies. She was eventually chased ashore by British cruisers and blown up. Vincent Gilpin was in the habit of exchanging a portion of his flour in the West Indies for products of those islands, which he disposed of in this country. When the British forces were on their march from the Chesapeake to Philadelphia, 1778, he had a large amount of molasses and rum stored at Wilmington, and fearing it would be seized or destroyed by the British, he sent it up to the old Gilpin homestead in Birmingham, then occupied by his brother Israel, and thereby, to use the old and homely phrase, transferred it "from the frying pan into the fire," as the old homestead became the headquarters of Gen. Howe, after the battle of Brandywine. He died at Wilmington, August 5, 1810, and his wife Abigail, five years later, November 10, 1815. Abigail Woodward, wife of Vincent Gilpin, was the granddaughter of James Sharpless, born at Hatherton, Cheshire, England, March 5, 1670-1, who came to Pennsylvania with his parents, John and Jane (Moor) Sharpless, landing at Chester, August 14, 1682. Her mother, Sarah Sharpless, born March 27, 1710, married (first) Edward Woodward, Jr., father of Mrs. Gilpin, and (second) George Gilpin, uncle to Vincent, of Birmingham township. The mother of Sarah (Sharpless) Woodward was the second wife of James Sharpless, Mary, born in Glamorganshire, Wales, July 10, 1674, daughter of Ralph and Mary Lewis, who came to Pennsylvania with John Bevan, 1683, and located first in Haverford, removing soon after to Upper Darby. Edward Woodward, Jr., father of Abigail (Woodward) Gilpin, born December 27, 1707, died 1746, was a son of Edward and Abigail (Edge) Woodward, and grandson of Richard and Jane Woodward, who settled in Thornbury, Chester county, 1687.

SHOEMAKER FAMILY.

The Pennsylvania family of Shoemaker is of pure German origin, the name being anglicised from Schumacker and Schoonmacker. The earliest record we have of the family begins at about the middle of the seventeenth century, when several of the name were residents of the little rural village of Kriegsheim, Upper Rhine, some thirty miles from Worms in the midst of the fertile valley of the Palatinate. They were among the early disciples of Menno Simon until about 1659, when William Ames and George Rolfe went to Kriegsheim to preach the doctrines of George Fox, after visiting a few small meetings of Friends in Holland, established some years previously by a colony of English Friends, whom the chances of misfortune had planted on the soil of the Low Countries. Arrested in their native country for holding non-conformist meetings, they were sentenced to exile in the English Colonies of the West Indies, and placed upon an English vessel to be transported thither, but their ship being captured by a Dutch privateer, they were landed in Holland, where they soon after established meetings, which were visited by George Fox, and new converts added to their flock. Among the converts of Ames and Rolfe at Kriegsheim were Peter and George Schumacker, both of whom suffered persecution for "Truth's sake" as recorded in "Besse's Sufferings of Quakers." Peter Schumacker had two cows distrained in 1663 for the payment of fines imposed for non-support of the established church, and in the same year his brother George also had goods distrained to a considerable amount.

William Penn visited Kriegsheim early in 1682, and induced a number of Palatinates, both Mennonists and Friends, to found a colony in his new Province of Pennsylvania. As a result of this visit, three of the family of Schumacker, Jacob, Peter and George, emigrated to Pennsylvania at different periods. The first Jacob, supposed to be a brother to Peter and George, sailed from Gravesend, June 6, 1682, and arrived in Philadelphia, August 16, following. He eventually settled in Germantown, where he was Sheriff in 1690. He had children, George, Thomas, Susanna and Jacob, whose descendants are now widely scattered over the United States and Canada. Peter Schumacker sailed for Pennsylvania in the "Francis and Dorothy," from London, October 16, 1685, with his son Peter and daughters, Mary, Frances and Gertrude, and his niece ("Cousin") Sarah, daughter of his brother George. Both he and his son Peter Jr. were prominent in the affairs of Germantown, and the latter has many descendants in Bucks and Montgomery counties and elsewhere.

GEORGE SHOEMAKER, third of the Kriegsheim family to emigrate, was married at Heidelberg, Germany, 1662, and lived at Kriegsheim until 1686, where nine children were born to him. He was a member of the Society of Friends and suffered persecution for his religious convictions at various periods between 1663 and 1686 as before recited. With his wife Sarah and children, George, Abraham, Barbara, Isaac, Susanna, Elizabeth and Benjamin, he sailed on the ship "Jeffries" for Philadelphia, but died on the passage, his family arriving in Philadelphia, March 20, 1685-6. His widow Sarah purchased, February 29, 1686-7, two hundred acres in Cheltenham township, near the present town of Ogontz, long known as Shoemakertown, Philadelphia, (now Montgomery) county. The time intervening between her arrival and the date of the purchase being probably spent with relatives in or near Germantown, where her third son Isaac remained, on her removal with the remainder of the family to Cheltenham. On September 28, 1708, she conveyed to her eldest son, George Shoemaker, one hundred and sixty acres of the homestead, and a few years later conveyed the balance, forty acres, to her daughter Sarah, who had married Edward Eaton, of Abington. The family were members of the meeting known for a time as Cheltenham Meeting, held some time in the house of Richard Wall, at Shoemakertown, which became the home of the Shoemaker family in 1700 and was occupied by them for many generations. The meeting was later removed to Abington township, and is known as Abington Meeting.

GEORGE SHOEMAKER, eldest son of George and Sarah Shoemaker, born at Kriegsheim, according to the record of the arrival of the family in Philadelphia, March 20, 1686, was then twenty-three years of age. He probably resided with his mother and her other children on the plantation purchased by her in Cheltenham until after the death of his wife's grandfather, Richard Wall, 1698. He became the owner of one hundred and sixty acres of the home plantation in 1708, and greatly improved it. He had also previously purchased one hundred acres of land of Toby Leech. He married, February 14, 1694-5, Sarah, daughter of Richard Wall Jr., by his wife Rachel, and granddaughter of Richard and Joane (Wheel) Wall, who had come from Gloucestershire, England, 1682, bringing a certificate from the Meeting of Friends held at the house of Edward Edwards, at Stokes Orchard, county Gloucester, dated 4mo. 26, 1682, which was accepted by Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, 10mo., 1682. Richard Wall purchased six hundred acres of land in Cheltenham township, extending across the township, from Abington township on the east to Bristol township on the west, and including the site of Shoemakertown; the house erected by him is said to form a portion of the present house of Joseph Bosler in Ogontz. The earliest Friends Meeting in that section was held there. His son, Richard Wall, Jr., purchased one hundred acres of the homestead, but died April 8, 1689, leaving an only child Sarah, who became wife of George Shoemaker. Richard Wall Sr. died March 26, 1698, and by will dated March 15, 1697-8, devised his whole estate, except six acres of land devised to Cheltenham Meeting for a burying-ground, to his granddaughter, Sarah Shoemaker, subject to a life estate to his wife Joane. The latter died February 2, 1701-2, and the whole estate vested in the Shoemaker family. George Shoemaker was one of the commissioners appointed by the Pennsylvania Assembly to lay out the York road, from Philadelphia to Howell's and Reading's ferry on the Delaware in 1711. He erected and operated a tannery at Shoemakertown, and was one of the largest landowners in Cheltenham township. Some of his children were educated at Francis Daniel Pastorius' famous school at Germantown. His wife Sarah died, and he married, about 1711, Christiana Brown, who survived him. George Shoemaker died intestate and letters of administration were granted on his estate, July 7, 1740.

ROBERT SHOEMAKER, eldest surviving son of Benjamin and Mary (Comly) Shoemaker, born in Cheltenham township, December 29, 1754, died in Philadelphia, October 8, 1796, and is buried in the Friends' burying-ground at Fourth and Arch streets. He took a certificate from Abington Meeting to the Southern District Meeting of Philadelphia, March 22, 1773; engaged in business in Philadelphia, and died there aged forty-two years. He married at Trinity Church, Oxford, Philadelphia county, 1781, Martha, born October 8, 1760, daughter of Isaac Leech Jr. by his wife, Martha Thomas. After her husband's estate was settled, Martha, the widow, moved back to her native township of Cheltenham, with her children and lived there until her death, December 23, 1849. Though reared in the faith of the Episcopal church, she, after her marriage, joined the Friends and was many years a member of Abington Monthly Meeting.

TOBY or TOBIAS LEECH, great-grandfather of Martha Shoemaker, and the first of the name to settle in Pennsylvania, was a son of Toby Leech, of Cheltenham, Gloucester county, England, and was baptized at the Parish Church there, January 1, 1652-3. The family of Leech was an ancient and honorable one and many of its members bore for arms, "Ermine, on Chief indented gules, three crowns or." and Crest, "Out of ducal coronet on an arm erect ppr. grasping a snake environed around the arm." Burke notes that it is recorded in an old pedigree that "One of this ancient family, living in Berkshire, near Windsor, in ye time of King Edward the Third, entertained and feasted three Kings in his house, one ye King of England, ye King of France and ye King of Scots; which two kings were at that time prisoners to King Edward; which King Edward to requite his good entertainment and other favoures, gave him three crowns on his chief indented gules, ye field Ermine, which coat is borne by the name and family, dispersed into many countays."

Toby Leech, baptized and reared in the faith of the Church of England, retained membership in that church throughout his life, was married December 26, 1679, at Gloucester Friends' Meeting, to Esther Ashmead, a member of that Meeting. He came to Pennsylvania early in 1682, with his wife Esther and at least one child and accompanied by his mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary Ashmead. In conjunction with John Ashmead, Richard Wall and Everard Bolton, he purchased 1,000 acres of land in Cheltenham township, Philadelphia county, which township was named for his native town in England. His share of the 1,000 acres was three hundred acres, the surveys to the several purchasers with him being made under warrants dated November 10, 1682. He erected a corn and fulling mill and became one of the substantial business men of that section, and also became a large landed proprietor, owning at the time of his death 2,700 acres of land, his home plantation of 600 acres, two other plantations of 500 acres each in Philadelphia, 500 acres in Chester county, and 600 acres in New Castle county. He maintained large hunting grounds, kept up by his sons and grandsons, which was said to have given the name to Fox Chase, located on one of his plantations in Philadelphia county. He does not seem to have taken any active interest in public affairs until 1713, when he was elected to the Provincial Assembly and became one of its prominent members, being regularly re-elected until 1720. He died at his seat in Cheltenham township, November 13, 1726, and is buried at Trinity Church, Oxford, of which church he was a member. His wife Esther died August 11, 1726, and is buried at his side.

THOMAS RUTTER, native of England, came to Pennsylvania with William Penn as a "Smith" and received a grant of two hundred acres of land for personal services to Penn as a smith. He was a man of marked intelligence and energy, and was exceedingly prominent among the public-spirited men of his time in the development of the material interests of the infant Colony, being the first manufacturer of iron in Pennsylvania. As early as January, 1702, "Thomas Rutter and Company" were possessed of 762 acres of land, as shown by the records of the Commissioners of Property. He was a persistent prospector for iron and other minerals and his efforts were at last crowned with success, as shown by a letter written to Jonathan Dickinson, 1717, which stated, "The last Summer one Thomas Rutter, a Smith, who lived not far from Germantown, hath removed farther up the country, and of his own strength has set up making iron. Such it proves to be, as it is highly esteemed by all smiths here who say that the best Sweed's iron doth not exceed it." The point "farther up the country" was on Manatawny creek, present limits of Berks, then Philadelphia county, where he had erected a smelting furnace, later known as the Colebrookedale Furnace, and operated for many years by Philadelphia capitalists among whom were Anthony Morris and George McCall. Rutter also built the Pool Forge, sometimes referred to as "Rutter's Forge" in which he retained an interest. He resided on his plantation in Bristol township, Philadelphia county, 1693, but subsequently removed to Germantown, where he was a bailiff in 1706. He was a member of Provincial Assembly, 1713-14, and 1727-28. He was identified with a number of Indian treaties and enjoyed the respect and esteem of the more prominent Chiefs of the Delawares. He was a member of Philadelphia Meeting, but became a follower of George Keith in his schism of 1692 and lost membership. He died in Philadelphia, March, 1730. ISAAC SHOEMAKER, son of George and Sarah (Wall) Shoemaker, born at Shoemakertown, Cheltenham township, Philadelphia county, Pennsylvania, October 23, 1700, inherited from his father that part of the old homestead at Shoemakertown, containing the old house erected by his grandfather, Richard Wall, in which the first Friends Meetings were held, located on the west side of York road, at northern end of the present town. A part of the old house occupied by him, if not by Richard Wall, is still standing and forms the rear portion of the house now occupied by Joseph Bosler, present owner of the lands and mills so long known as Shoemaker's Mills. Isaac Shoemaker married Dorothy, daughter of Bartholomew Penrose, of Philadelphia, shipwright, by his wife, Esther, daughter of Toby and Esther (Ashmead) Leech, before mentioned. Isaac Shoemaker died October 23, 1741, leaving his widow Dorothy, the sole custodian of his estate for the benefit of their seven children, all of whom were minors, the youngest but six years of age.

Dorothy Shoemaker, widow, January 6, 1746, entered into an agreement with Richard Mather, who had married her sister, Sarah Penrose, and John Tyson, of Abington, son of Rynier, "to build on the land now in the tenure or possession of the said Dorothy Shoemaker, in the said township of Cheltenham, a corn-grist Water-mill, to be built and owned jointly and in partnership, between the said parties," Dorothy to retain a one-half interest and Mather and Tyson each a one-fourth interest therein. It was to be built "opposite ye said Dorothy's garden at ye place of ye crick, commonly called and known by ye name of ye Sheep Washing Place."

The mill erected under this agreement is still in successful operation and was owned and operated by the descendants of Dorothy Shoemaker for just a century, being sold in 1846 to Charles Bosler, father of the present proprietor.

Dorothy Shoemaker died August 11, 1764, and by will dated three days before her death, devised her estate equally between her six surviving children; her son George having died six months before her, unmarried. Her two eldest sons, John and Isaac, were named as executors, and a small legacy was given to her son-in-law, Nathan Sheppard.

JOHN SHOEMAKER, eldest son of Isaac and Dorothy (Penrose) Shoemaker, born at the old homestead in Shoemakertown, April 1, 1726, purchased of John Tyson, June 14, 1752, his one-fourth interest in the mill erected in conjunction with his mother and uncle, and later acquired the entire interest therein, and continued to operate the mill for over half a century, residing all his life in the old homestead. He was a member of Abington Friends Meeting, and a prominent business man in that section. A diary kept by John Morton, during the Revolution, states that John Shoemaker was "very much abused" by a marauding party of Hessians in the winter of 1777, when the British occupied Philadelphia.

John Shoemaker married (first) at Abington Meeting, May 25, 1752, Elizabeth, born June 5, 1725, died May 29, 1795, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Heath) Livezey, of Lower Dublin; (second) May 2, 1800, Martha Parry, widow of David Parry and daughter of Robert and Jane (Cadwalader) Comly, of Byberry. His children were all by his first wife. He and his first wife Elizabeth are buried side by side in the old Shoemaker Burying-Ground.

Thomas Livezey, great-grandfather of Elizabeth (Livezey) Shoemaker, a native of Norton, Cheshire, England, by lease and release from William Penn dated March 2 and 3, 1681, acquired five hundred acres of land, "to be laid out in the Province of Pennsylvania," and the following year came to Pennsylvania and located in Philadelphia county. He was a member of Grand Jury, January 11, 1682-3, and his will is dated June 12, 1692.

Thomas and Elizabeth (Heath) Livezey located in Lower Dublin township, Philadelphia county, where their daughter Elizabeth, who in 1752 became the wife of John Shoemaker, was born June 5, 1725.

The mother of Lowry was Mali (Mary), daughter of Ievan ap Einion, of Corsy Gedol, Merionethshire, descended from Osborne Fitz Gerald, of the Norman Geraldines of Ireland. His descent being as follows:

Gerald Fitz Walter, De Windsor, Constable of Pembroke, living 1108, married Nesta, daughter of Rhys ap Tudour, Prince of South Wales, and had a second son Maurice Fitz Gerald, died 1177; buried in Gray Friars, Wexford; went with Strongbow, to Ireland, 1168; married Alice, daughter of Arnulph de Montgomerie, and their second son, Thomas Fitz Maurice, was a grantee from King John, of

Thomas Morris, of Caernarvonshire, born about 1560, fourth son of Morris Griffith, had a younger son, Robert Thomas Morris, of Cowyn, parish of Llanengan, Caernarvonshire, born, circa, 1588, who was the father of,

Richard Roberts, of Llyn, Caernarvonshire, born probably 1615-20, married Margaret, daughter of Richard Evans, of the parish of Llangian, Caernarvonshire, and had issue:

JOHN ROBERTS, of Pencoed, b. 1648-9; came to Pa., 1683; of whom presently;

Richard Roberts, probably came to Pa; he and his children being mentioned in the will of his brother, John, in 1722;

Anne Roberts, m. and had children mentioned in will of her brother, John, in 1722.

It was customary for the Welsh Friends to produce to the meeting at which they deposited their certificate from Wales, a circumstantial account of their family in Wales and of their life there and their coming to America. Such an account was furnished by John Roberts, of Pencoed, and it is entered on the records of Merion Preparative Meeting of Friends in Pennsylvania. Either this same account or a somewhat similar one in his own handwriting has been preserved by his descendants and bears this endorsement:

"The following account was found in manuscript in the handwriting of John Roberts, my progenitor, who on the 16th of November, 1683, arrived in Pennsylvania, from the municipality of Wales, and settled on the farm I now dwell upon, and built upon the identical spot I now inhabit, and which has passed in regular succession without intervention of a deed, from my great-grandfather to his great-grandchild.

(Signed) Algernon Roberts,
Sept. 16, 1813."

"A short account of John Roberts, formerly of Llyn, being a son of Richard Roberts, and grandson of Robert Thomas Morris, who lived at Cowyn, in the Parish of Llanengan, and County of Caernarvon; my mother being Margaret Evans, daughter of Richard Evans, of the Parish of Llangian, and County aforesaid. Being convinced of God's Everlasting Truth about the year 1677, not by man, nor through man, but by the Revelation of Jesus Christ, in my own heart—being about 30 Miles from any Friends or Meeting in that time when I was convinced, but coming into acquaintance with Friends near Dolgelly, and near Bala, in Merionethshire, I frequented their Meetings while I abode in those parts, but by the Providence of God in the year 1683, I transported myself with many of my friends for Pennsylvania, where I and they arrived the Sixteenth day of the 9th Month, one thousand six hundred and 83, being then thirty-five years old, and settled myself on the place which I afterwards called Pencoid, in the Township of Merion, which was afterwards called so by them, being the first settlers of it. Having brought with me one servant man from my native land and fixed my settling here, I took to wife Gaynor Roberts, daughter of Robert Pugh, from Llwyndedwydd, near Bala, in Merionethshire; her mother being Elizabeth Williams Owen, one of the first that was convinced of the Truth in that neighborhood. So leaving this account for our offspring and others that desire to know, whence we came and who we descended from, and when we came to settle unto this place where we now abide, being then a wilderness, but now by God's blessing upon our endeavors, is become a fruitful field; So to God's name be the Praise, Honor & Glory, who is worthy it for ever & ever more."

The parish of Llangian, where Richard Evans, the maternal grandfather of John Roberts, of Pencoed, resided, and that of Llanengan, or Llanergan as it is sometimes spelled, where was situated Cowyn, the home of Robert Thomas Morris, his paternal grandfather, are adjoining, and their principal towns are only one mile apart. Both parishes are on the promontory of Llyn, and like the whole of the county of Caernarvon, at the northwestern corner of Wales, are the most mountainous part of that most mountainous country. Caernarvon was the refuge and stronghold of the Britons, when they retired from their Saxon invaders, and here they long preserved their independence, and transmitted from generation to generation a sturdy and resolute love of liberty. The Parish Church of Llanengan is dedicated to St. Einion, who was King of Llyn in the sixth century, and is said to have founded the church, some parts of which are very ancient.

John Roberts, of Pencoed, has been sometimes confounded with John Roberts, of "Pen y Chwd," Denbigshire, who settled in Merion prior to 1690; a man of sixty years when he married Elizabeth Owen, aged seventeen, daughter of Owen Humphries, and sister to Rebecca, wife of Robert Owen, of Merion, whom, and her brothers, Joshua and John Owen, she accompanied to Pennsylvania from Llwyn Ddu, in Merionethshire. This John Roberts was the grandfather of the John Roberts hanged as a Tory in the early part of the Revolution. Two or three other John Roberts emigrated from Wales at approximately the same date and located in or near the Welsh Tract.

John Roberts was one of the purchasers of the 40,000 acres which comprised the Welsh tract in Merion and Haverford township, purchased by the prospective settlers before leaving Wales, as was also his father-in-law, Robert Pugh, his wife Gaynor becoming entitled to a portion of the latter. As stated in his account of himself and his family, Roberts called his farm in Merion, Pencoid, and on it he built a fine old mansion which still comprises a part of the late residence of his descendant, George Brooke Roberts, deceased, at Bala, late president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. He married Gainor Roberts Pugh, at Merion Friends Meeting, where their certificate from Wales had been deposited, March 20, 1684. He became the owner of nearly 1,000 acres of land and was a prominent man in the community, serving continuously in the Provincial Assembly from 1704 to 1718. His wife Gainor died February 20, 1722, and he on June 6, 1724.

she at the age of sixty-nine years and he at seventy-six. Both were buried at Merion Meeting burying-ground.

Issue of John and Gainor (Pugh) Roberts:

ROBERT ROBERTS, only surviving son of John Roberts, of Pencoid, born in Merion, Philadelphia county, February 16, 1685, inherited his father's plantation of "Pencoid" and other lands, and lived there all his life, dying May 17, 1768. He like his parents was an earnest member of Merion Meeting of Friends, and was married there to Sidney Rees, June 17, 1709. She was born at Pemaen, parish of Llanwawr, Merionethshire, 1680, daughter of Rees Evan, by his wife Elizabeth, daughter of John ap Thomas, of Daehgwynn, Merionethshire, "Gentleman," who was a son of Thomas ap Hugh, ap Evan, ap Rhys Goch, ap Tyder, ap Rhys, ap Ievan Goch, of Bryammer, parish of Cerrig-y-Druidion, Denbighshire, ap Ievan Ddu, ap David, ap Einion, ap Kynrig, ap Llowarch, ap Heilin, ap Tyffid, ap Tangno, ap Ys-Druyth, ap Marchwyst, ap Marchweithiam, Lord of Issalet, in Merionethshire.

Evan Rees, father of Rees Evan and grandfather of Sidney, wife of Robert Roberts, was prominent in Friends Meetings in Wales, and suffered considerable persecution, "for Truth's sake." As early as 1668 he had oxen distrained from him in payment of a fine imposed for attending non-conformist meetings, and in 1676, he with Cadwalader ap Thomas, Rowland Ellis, (later of the Welsh Tract in Pennsylvania), Lewis Robert, Hugh Robert, Edward Rees, Griffith John, Gainor David and Elizabeth Williams, were imprisoned for refusing to take an oath.

Rees Evan purchased, March 18, 1682, 312½ acres of land in Pennsylvania, and prepared to emigrate there, but never accomplished it. His son, Rees Evan, came over soon after 1682, as did also his mother-in-law, Katharine Robert, a kinswoman of many of the more prominent Welsh settlers. She settled on a plantation between the present Narbeth and Bala.

Sidney, wife of Robert Roberts, was thrown from her horse, April 30, 1764, and died from the effects of the injuries then received, June 29, 1764, aged seventy-four years and two months. She and her husband were both buried at Merion Meeting burying-ground.

ALGERNON ROBERTS, sixth son and tenth child of John and Rebecca (Jones) Roberts, of Pencoed, was born there January 24, 1751, and inherited the homestead at his father's death, as shown by his endorsement on the old paper written by his great-grandfather, and quoted in the early part of this narrative. This endorsement bears date September 16, 1813, at which time he is living "on the identical spot," built on by his progenitor.

Algernon Roberts joined the Associated Company of Philadelphia County of which John Young was Captain, being the Fifth Company, Third Battalion of Philadelphia County Militia, Col. James Barry. This company with the Sixth Company in the same battalion, Capt. Peter Holstein, were ordered to Paulus Hook in 1776. Algernon Roberts kept a journal of this campaign, covering the period from August 16, 1776, to September 17, 1776, giving in detail the movements of the command to which he was attached, during the important "Campaign in the Jerseys." In 1777 he was made Lieutenant-Colonel of the Seventh Battalion, Philadelphia Militia, of which his father-in-law, Isaac Warner, was Colonel. In June, 1780, he was appointed Commissioner to procure supplies for the army in the field. He was a member of General Assembly in 1778, and was commissioned a Justice of the Peace for Montgomery county, after its organization in 1784, when Pencoed became part of that county. He was treasurer of the Blockley and Merion Society for Promotion of Agriculture for over twenty-eight years, just preceding his death, December 21, 1815, when the Society adopted resolutions commemorative of his worth as a member and a citizen.

Col. Algernon Roberts married at Old Swedes Church, Southwark, January 18, 1781, Tacy, daughter of his old comrade-in-arms, and superior officer, Col. Isaac Warner, of Blockley, by his wife, Lydia Coulton, and a descendant of William Warner, the first settler of Blockley, an account of whom, his ancestry and descendants is given in this work under the title of the "Warner Family of Blockley."

PHINEAS ROBERTS, fourth son of Robert and Sidney (Rees) Roberts, born on the family plantation of "Pencoel" in Merion township, Philadelphia county, May 13, 1722. On May 16, 1746, his father conveyed to him thirty-eight acres of land on the west side of Schuylkill, part of the tract taken up by John Roberts, and just prior to his death conveyed to him other lands, but inherited under his father's will a tract purchased by his father of Andrew Wheeler. Phineas Roberts in these earlier deeds is mentioned as a "cooper" and probably followed that vocation in Merion, where he seems to have lived all his life, dying there March 11, 1801.

Phineas Roberts married at the First Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, June 27, 1743, Ann, eldest daughter of Thomas Wynne, of Blockley, by his wife, Mary, daughter of Isaac and Anne (Craven) Warner, of Blockley, and granddaughter of William Warner, the first English settler in Blockley. Her grandfather, Jonathan Wynne, was only son of Dr. Thomas Wynne, Speaker of the first Provincial Assembly of Pennsylvania, 1682, who came to Pennsylvania with William Penn in the "Welcome," and was one of his closest friends during life. An account of Thomas Wynne, his Welsh ancestry, his distinguished career, and some account of his descendants is given in our article on "The Wynne Family."

Ann Wynne, wife of Phineas Roberts, was born February 2, 1724-5, died July 5, 1807, and was buried at Friends' Ground, Lower Merion.

The will of Phineas Roberts, of Blockley, "being antient and infirm of Body" is dated December 24, 1798, proven March 28, 1801. It devises all his estate to his wife Ann for life; then to his daughters, Esther Palmer and Sidney Jones £50 each; to his four grandchildren, children of his son Isaac, deceased, £25 each; to five grandchildren, children of deceased daughter Hannah Streater, viz, Mary, William, Isaac, Richard and George, £50; residue to son Titus. His nephew, John Roberts, is named as executor and his nephew, Algernon Roberts, as trustee.

Both Phineas Roberts and his wife, Ann Wynne, were members of Merion Friends Meeting, and were dealt with for their marriage, "out of Unity," but making suitable acknowledgments were retained in membership.

Phineas Roberts was a member of the Fishing Club of St. David's, 1763.

CUTHBERT FAMILY.

The following is a copy of the "Contracts and Testimonials, under the hand and seal of Lord Lyon, King of Arms in Scotland, of the illustrious Extraction and Descent of the Honorable family of Castlehill," made for "James Cuthbert, of Berly, great-grandchild of the last John Cuthbert, of Castlehill except one."

"A Chronological Account of the Origin, Settlement, Armorial Bearing, and Surname, of the Illustrious family of Cuthbert, of Castlehill, in the County of Inverness, Scotland. The aforesaid name vulgarly called Cubbert and Colbert, and in the Erse Language, Quibert.

"This Illustrious family came originally to Scotland from the country of the Northumbrians in the north of England, where it was, about the year of Christ 700. Alfred Reigned then in that Country which made one of the Kingdoms of the Heptarchy and had lately embraced Christianity by the Bishop of Lindisfarn (afterward called Holy Land); he was of the same stock and family from which is descended the family of Castlehill as is sufficiently proved from the antient protection granted on that account by the Kings of Scotland to that Illustrious family; from the surname and Armorial Bearing, and has been acknowledged by an Act of Parliament of Scotland in the year 1087. The Picts, a nation in the neighborhood of the Northumbrians, and who inhabited the South of Scotland, were as yet, at that period (670), for the most part Pagans and always at war with the Albanicks who inhabited the West hills of Scotland, the latter had then embraced Christianity for some time.

"Alfred, a man of Letters, as well as zealous for the propagation of the belief and law wherein he had been newly instructed and truly animated with the spirit of Charity, laid himself out ardently in procuring and cementing peace between these two nations, his neighbors, and the more that he had conceived a particular esteem for the King of the Albanicks, Eugene the Fifth, his contemporary, who was likewise a man of letters and a Christian.

"Alfred gave commission to the Bishop of Lindisfarn, his subject and Instructor in Christianity, to negotiate this peace betwixt them; he hoped thereby to see the religion which he had newly embraced himself more easily established among the Picts as appears from the History of Scotland by Buchanan and others.

The Holy Bishop laid himself out with the greatest wisdom and impartiality to bring this about and succeeded; he brought both nations to agree that they should never thereafter attack each other with their whole forces, and that the King of the Picts should give his daughter in marriage to the King of Albanick's eldest son; which was accordingly executed. By this alliance it happened that soon thereafter the rights to the Crown of the Albanicks and the Picts were united together in the person of Eugene, the Eleventh and King of the Albanicks, descended from this marriage; although these rights were not made effectual until King Kenneth's time in the year 854, however, the Albanicks and the Picts became afterwards one and the same nation and were known by the name of Scots as appears from all Scottish Historians. But Alfred, while he charitably procured peace between the nations, his neighbors, he could not cover himself from those Revolutions to which all Crowns were more particularly subjected in those times of ignorance and confusion, he was chased out of his Kingdom and obliged to take refuge with the King of the Picts, who endeavored in vain to restore him to his Throne; by this revolution, this unsuccessful assistance of the King of the Picts and by the death of the Bishop of Lindisfarn, the kindred of this worthy prelate were obliged to quit his native country and to seek refuge abroad.

"Abercromby, a modern Scottish Historian says this Bishop in after times was honoured, as a Saint. He left his family to go and preach the Gospel to the Northumbrians. Bede, a contemporary with the Bishop, imagines him to be of the Country of the Northumbrians, the Bishop's kindred who were distinguished in those antient times by no other name but that of George, which one of the family had received in baptism or on his embracing Christianity; they came to ask protection and refuge from the King of the Albanicks, whose residence was frequently at Inverness; who full of gratitude for the peace which the Bishop of Lindisfarn had negotiated with so much dexterity and uprightiness betwixt his Grandfather and the King of the Picts, received them with kindness until such time as he could give them employment in his service or otherwise provide for them. These marks of his royal goodness, though not yet accompanied with a solid establishment, having acquired to them the highest consideration in the Town of Inverness, they did from that time fix their abode there in order to be near to offer their service and show their attachment to the King. They had the good fortune to distinguish themselves in those early times in the troops which the town of Inverness was bound to send to the field for the King's service; as a recompense for their valor and signalized exploits in that station he obtained them, together with the freedom of being Burgesses, the rights of the Lands of Droogie or Drakies in vassalage, or fee holding thereof which they still possess, their influence in the King's Court and in the town of Inverness engaged thereafter the Baron of Dacier in the neighborhood to give them in vassalage the Lands of Muckovy to be held of him which they likewise still possess.

"It was not till long thereafter that they obtained from the King in recompense of their constant and distinguished services, the lauds that compose the Barony of Castlehill, which they got as a Royal Holding or fee with a fortified Castle under the burthen of, or subject to Military service. These events which regard their first settlement at Inverness are presumed, from the proofs of the high antiquity of this family, to have happened about the year 950 A. D., a short time after King Kenneth by his birthright as well as by conquest had united the Kingdom of the Picts to that of the Albanicks, such is the tradition in the family of Castlehill about the origin of its first illustration, and its settlement in Scotland, the principal facts of which are set down by the best historians such as Bede, Fordun, Boce, Buchanan, &c. The dates of the first concession of the Lands of Drakies and Muckovy as well as of the Lands of Castlehill are now unknown, the primitive titles having been destroyed during the invasion of Scotland by King Edward the First of England, and in the wars of the great families in the Country amongst themselves. The use of the publick register in order to supply copies of this kind was introduced in very late ages. This Royal fee in all the charters both antient and modern is designed auld, otherwise Old Castlehill, the Castle upon it was most probably the antient habitation of the King of the Albanicks at Inverness, but since the union of the Kingdom of the Albanicks and Picts, King Duncan as it is sayed caused to be built a new Castle on a rising ground in the middle of the Town; which commands it and is likewise called Castlehill but is now in ruins, it had been repaired and fortified about the year 1730, but Prince Charles Edward (the Pretender's son) in the year 1746 blew up the Castle with the fortifications. This illustrious family in possession through a great many ages of the Lands of Castlehill, as likewise of that of Muckovy, holding of the Barony of Dacies and of the Lands of Drakies, holding of the town of Inverness, near which is their residence, was known and distinguished in those antient times and in the newest or earliest of Christianity in that country, only by the usual name of Baptism of the head of the family, which was George upon that account the head of this family like the chieftans of the other illustrious families in the Highlands of Scotland, who have their particular patronymic baptismal names continues always to be known and distinguished in the Highland Scottish language which is still at this day vulgar in all the Country of Inverness, where the Barony of Castlehill is situated, by the patronymic surname of M'George without any other denomination, such surnames being the only ones used in the Highlands till the Eleventh Century.

"Patronymic surnames as they were the first given so they were commonly the most durable in the great Highland families, others given on account of some quality of the mind, of the heart or body, as well as those drawn from the place of their residence, they were more subject to being altered as being personal.

"The family of Castlehill has surnames of all these different kinds, excepting from the qualities of the body and it is the antient possession and transmission of the different surnames according to the different ages wherein they shone and distinguished themselves, wherein the national customs likewise underwent changes, and it was usual to get surnames of these different kinds that constitute the surest proof of their illustrious existence having been destroyed by the invasion of Edward the first and in the intestine wars of the Kingdom which it may be said is the case with most other illustrious Highland families; it was relatively to the primitive illustration of this family that at the same time of the introduction of Armorial Bearings amongst the gentry of Europe, they took for theirs a quevee in pale azure, armed Gules in a field or, as being the most expressive symbol of their wisdom and uprightness in the negotiation of the peace which acquired to them, this their first and great illustration, they took for crest a Naked Hand holding a branch of Olive, and for the Motto, Perit et Veste.

"In consequence of this same Illustration and of the above Armorial Bearing; when surnames other than patronymic were introduced and became fixed in the Twelfth Century, this family got in the Highland Scottish Language the vulgar name about Inverness where they had long before settled, the surname of Quivert or Quibert, besides that of M'George, which the Chief carried ever since the family became Christians, in so much that at this very day all the descendants of this family is not called otherwise than Quivert in the Highland or Erse Language, either from the corruption of the word Quevre, which in Heraldry signifies Serpent, which they had taken for their arms or from the word Cou which in the Erse signifies word, wisdom which signifies holy, virtues, and Bart or Vart which signifies rich, that is to say rich or holy wisdom to perpetuate the remembrance and tradition of their origin and settlement. It was after the union of the Highland and Albanicks and the Picts under the same King and under the common name of Scots, and after the Picts language had prevailed over the Albanicks and become the language of the Court and the Assembly of the States and of the Parliament, that this family got in the Picts language the surname of Cuthbert or Cudbert, which as Camden explains it in his work called "Brittanious or the Antiquities of Britain" (wrote about the year 1600 under Queen Elizabeth), signifies Illustrious for Skill, which happens equally as Quivert in the Erse Language to be relative to the primitive of Castlehill, and to the Armorial Bearing was granted to them to perpetuate the erudition therefrom.

"The word Cuth signifies skill, and Bert illustrious, which name the Bishop of Lindisfarne got in the same language probably on that account. In those distant times, it was very common to translate surnames from one language into another and even more recently, especially when they were significant, and the language original, otherwise when no surname had any signification, or when it was not attended to by the vulgar as is often the case. People did commonly add or cut off a letter at the end of a name, transfer or substitute one letter for another in the middle, as in Stuart, Douglass, Sinclair, etc., without going further; in Cuthbert itself given to this family in the Pictish Language, for although it was their insignificant or relative to the first illustration and written according to the etymology, yet it ever was in speaking the public language pronounced at Inverness Cobbert, because of the difficulty or harshness which the natives of that town find in the articulating the different consonants that compose it, and the natives of Edinburgh for the like reason as likewise the French who anciently resorted thither, softened it yet more and pronounced it as if written Colbert or Cubbert, which the Armorial Bearing of the family (in Latin Coluber) led them yet more easily to do especially about the beginning of the Thirteenth Century, when arms had become fixed, and the Latin was universally familiar over Europe, hence it happened that the descendants of this family that are antiently settled about Edinburgh and Traut as well as those who went over to France have allowed their names to be written according to this last pronunciation and continue still to do so, which the ancestors of their respective branches were at first in all probability led to do, from their not knowing in these times either to read or write though of Illustrious extraction.

"From these various circumstances, it has happened that the stock itself of the family though constantly designed in all their charters by the Pictish denomination of Cuthbert only, has ever continued to be known and called in the vulgar pronunciation by several different surnames above mentioned which do always vary to this day, the language and idiom which at the same time these different denominations have never ceased to be looked on as synonymous, and the same as equally and only belonging to this family and have been acknowledged and declared as such by an Act of Parliament of Scotland in the year 1687, asserting the descent of John Baptist Colbert, Marquis of Decinely, from this illustrious family by Edward Colbert son thereof, who went over to France with Mary Lindsay of Edget, his spouse about the year 1280, accompanying Christiana as Baliol, niece of King Alexander the Third, when this Princess went there to marry Eugert de Guines, Lord of Coney, where having lived some time and left issue the said Edward died at Rheims and was buried there. This identity of the various surnames has been likewise certified at that time by the testimonial of the Magistrates of Inverness and has again been certified by the present Magistrates 4th of November 1769 in favour of Lacklan Alexander and Deicinely Colbert called in the Erse or Albanick language Quivert, and in the Pictish language Cuthbert.

"All the younger children of this illustrious family immediately descended from the same Baron of Castlehill, and now settled these several years past in France. The Barony of Castlehill is contiguous to the town of Inverness insomuch that some houses built upon the Demesnes do form a suburb of the town, where the Baron of Castlehill had his Bailiwick to administer justice. This Barony is bounded on the North by the town of Inverness and the sea, and extends with Drakies and Muckovy, the other lands of the family, to the East and South as far as the lands of the Earl of Murray on the river Naium and to the Estate of Culloden, famous for the battle fought there in the year 1746.

"The family of Cuthbert while possessed from male to male of the land of Drakies, Muckovy and Castlehill from remote ages, did at the time fill the most distinguished offices in the state, much as that of High Sheriff of the Counties of Inverness and Ross, whereof they did always acquit themselves with honour and the strictest faithfulness, as likewise of the Trust of Knight of the shire, they had likewise been founders of a Chapel in Inverness which they dedicated to Saint Cuthbert but was destroyed at the introduction of Calvinism, the family has always preserved its right of burying on the ground whereon the Chapel was built.

"The foundation of this Church appears by the family from Doctor George M'Kenzie on the life of Saint Cuthbert, Vol. 1st, page 367. It was in consideration of the great valour and high exploits which the head of this family showed at the Battle of Harlaw in the year 1411 in support of James the second against M'Donald, Lord of the Isles, whose standard he took at this battle, when as Chief Vassal of the Town of Inverness, by his Lands of Draky, he led into the field the Troops of that Town, the King then granted to George Cuthbert, Chief of the name, as a recompense for his signalized services and a particular mark of distinction, a Fess Gules in a Field or additional to the quivre Azure, the former Armorial Bearing of the family which they afterwards bore in chief and that this Prince ordered him to take for a Crest, a hand in gauntlet holding an arrow, and for Motto, "Nee ininus fortitur."

"There is likewise added to the above achievement two wild horses for supporters, whereof the Vouchers are in the Archives of the College of Heralds in Scotland. The family of Cuthberts after the destruction of their more ancient charters by the English under Edward the First, and afterwards by other accidents was in the habit, as other families in that Country, of making a resignation of their fees into the hands of the King and of their other superiors in order to obtain new charters, confirmative of their possessions; but their ancient charters even of this kind, particularly of their lands of Drakies and Muckovy whereof no public records were made as holding only of particular superiors, more lately taken from them or destroyed during the hostilities betwixt the great families of the Country, but, chiefly by the McDonalds when the Lord of the Isles rose in arms to maintain the right to the County of Ross. This Lord treated in the same manner the Town of Inverness and the most of the great families about it, by destroying their charters, registers, writings, and by laying waste all the country.

"The reformers of religion sometime thereafter destroyed with the Churches all the Church writings that could any ways have supplied losses so that the most antient Charters that the family now possesses are that of the lands of Auld Castlehill granted to William Cuthbert by King James 3d. in the year 1478 and that of Queen Mary for the same lands in the year 1548, granted to George Cuthbert nephew and heir apparent of John Cuthbert of auld Castlehill, and to his heirs male. They have likewise other titles at different periods after these Charters and since the erection of the Barony of King James 6th which consists chiefly in a Charter of confirmation from King Charles 1st, dated August 1st. 1625, and in the consecutive enfeifments of the said lands.

"The head of the family of Castlehill so antiently proprietor of this estate, of that of Drakies or Draggie, and of that of Muccovy, though by nature of his fee of Castlehill he held immediately of the Crown was nevertheless not created Baron of the State of the Kingdom till James 6th conferred that honor on him, and his heirs male are assignees bearing the name and arms of Cuthbert as appears from the Charter of creation, which was dated on the 19th of August, 1592, vesting him with that quality, and with all sorts of Jurisdiction thereto belonging with the right, likewise of sitting in the Assembly of the States of the Kingdom, wherein as well as in the Parliament the destination of the House of Lords and House of Commons never existed as in the Parliament of England and now in that of Great Britain, and things always remained on that footing in Scotland until the union of the Parliament of England of both Kingdoms in the year 1707 under the reign of Queen Anne of which late Charters and Seizins that have escaped destruction, beginning of that granted in the year 1478 to William (Cuthbert) son of John and grandson of George who distinguished himself at the Battle of Harlaw. Alexander Cuthbert hereafter mentioned has presented with the preceding memorial in an interrupted series authenticated copies to the Lord Lyon in order to prove as far back as evidence of this kind (on account of the above unfortunate circumstances) can be traced, the antient illustrious existence of the family of Castlehill and to obtain from his lordship a certificate thereof in the legal and due form, also a testimonial of the destruction of the more antient writings of the family from the above mentioned circumstances and likewise a certificate of the Armorial Bearing of the said family as is recorded in the Lyon Office and of the synonymous appellations of the surname thereof in the Kingdom so as to ascertain and make known beyond all doubt, the illustrious extraction and descent of the male children and grandchildren of the late John Cuthbert, Baron of Castlehill, and of the late Jane Hay, heiress of Dalkethy, his spouse, of the late George their eldest son Baron of Castlehill who espoused Mary M'Intosh of Holm and left by her besides his other son another male George four sons, viz: James settled in Georgia in North America, Senely in France, Lewis and George in Jamaica. Lachlan their second son who espoused Mary Margaret Harford of Sufton, and died lately in France where he was a Major General having by his said spouse a son named Alexander Roger, and a daughter; their third son Alexander, who is naturalized in France and commonly lived there, their fourth son James married and settled in Carolina, there was presented with the preceding memorial the above mentioned Alexander third lawful son of the said Lachlan, who was a son of the said Jane Hay his wife, a copy duly authentick of the charter granted by King James the third dated 23d of July, 1478, of the Lands of auld Castlehill to William Cuthbert son of John, and grandson of George who distinguished himself at the battle of Harlaw against the King's enemies and obtained at that time as a perpetual monumental thereof a Fess Gules addition to the Quiver in Pale, the antient arms of his family, a copy likewise authentic of the charter upon resignation of the said man or of Auld Castlehill granted by Queen Mary on the 24th of July, 1548, to George Cuthbert, nephew and apparent heir of John Cuthbert of Auld Castlehill, the grandson of the above William and in favour of his heirs male, a copy also duly authentic of a Charter under the Grand seal of the Kingdom writing and erecting all the lands belonging to the family of Castlehill that were held of the King into a free Barony in favor of John Cuthbert son and heir of the last mentioned George and to his heirs male or assignees they bearing the names and arms of Cuthbert.

"This Charter bears date the 19th of August, 1592, service and retour William Cuthbert Baron of Castlehill as Heir to his father the last mentioned John dated 13th of July, 1624, an authentick copy of the Charter of Confirmation under the great seal of Charles 1st dated the first day of August, 1625, in favor of

"John Cuthbert Baron of Castlehill (this John was the father of David Cuthbert of America, the said David Cuthbert is grandfather to the Honorable James Cuthbert, of Banty, in the Province of Canada, North America) in consequence of a Charter of resignation from his father, the last mentioned William, dated the 3d of November, 1624, service and George Cuthbert Baron of Castlehill as heir to his father the last mentioned John dated the 1st of April, 1677, authentick extract of the seizins of John Cuthbert Baron of Castlehill of Barony granted to him by his father the last mentioned George, dated the 20th of April, 1699, authentick extract of the seizins of the Life Rent provision of Jane Hay of Dalkethy spouse of the last mentioned John dated 11th of May, 1700, disposition and trust by John Cuthbert Baron of Castlehill to Jane Hay his spouse in favour of his younger children therein named for securing their patrimonies dated the 6th of November, 1731. Authentick extract of the seizins of George Cuthbert Baron of Castlehill son of the last mentioned John and Jane Hay his spouse of the Barony of Castlehill dated the 22nd of December, 1725, upon a precept contained in his contract of marriage with Mary his spouse daughter of James M'Intosh of Holm Esq. and lastly certificates of the baptism of the children of the last mentioned John and George Barons of Castlehill with many other rights produced in process all which prove the state and existence of their children and grandchildren as above set forth.

"We John Campbell Hooks of Bankeston Esq. Lord Lyon King of Arms do hereby certify and make known the facts mentioned in the above memorial presented to us relating to the antient illustrious Armorial Bearing and surname of the said illustrious family of Castlehill, conformable to the general History of this Kingdom to vouchers lodged in the Lyon Office, to public notes writ that the illustrious extraction and descent of the Honorable John Cuthbert late Baron of Castlehill and of the Honorable Jane Hay of Dalkethy his spouse and their descendants as above, vouchers and writs to us presented that illustrious existence of the said family of Castlehill any higher than the above battle proceeding truly as is the case of many other antient and illustrious families of this Kingdom from the general destruction of antient monuments and writings at the time of invasion of this Kingdom by King Edward the first of England from the devastations afterwards in the County of Inverness by McDonald Lord of the Isles from the late destruction of the antient monuments at the time of the Reformation and from the long want of public registers for Charters and seizins in this Kingdom, that the Armorial Bearing as above described and supported on account of the erection of Castlehill into a Barony and long usage as are allowed and recorded in the publick register of the Lyon Office that the variation of the surname of the said family according to the variations of the language and idiom as above set down is no less public by known Kingdoms than already solemnly acknowledged, and certified by an Act of the second session of the first Parliament of the late King James the 11th and that George Cuthbert of Castlehill son of John Browne of Castlehill and his spouse a daughter of John Cuthbert of Drakies, the last mentioned John's father was married to Magdalen, daughter of Sir James Frazer of Brea (third son of Simon the seventh Lord Lovat) and Barbara his spouse daughter of David Wymys Fingask a younger son of the family of the Earl of Wymys and that William Hay of Dalkethy Bishop of Murray the above Jane Hay lawfully descended in the direct male line from the family of the Earl of Errol, who are hereditary Lord Constables of Scotland and by his mother Dorothea Bruce of Pitbarly from the antient Islands of Annunadel and Carrick was married to Mary daughter of Robert Wymys Baron of Castlehill a lad of the family of Wymys and of his spouse Mary Sharpe a daughter of the Baron of Houston all of them antient and illustrious families of this Kingdom.

"In Testimony Whereof these presents are subscribed by Robert Roswell our Deputy and our seal of Office is appended hereunto at Edinburgh the first day of August, 1771."

CARPENTER AND PRESTON FAMILIES.

SAMUEL CARPENTER, said to have been the first merchant of Philadelphia, and who was at least the first to engage in foreign trade at that port, and at his death in 1714, the wealthiest man in the Province of Pennsylvania, came of "an ancient and noble family of great antiquity" in England. He came to Philadelphia from Barbadoes, bringing a certificate from the Friends Meeting at Bridgetown, dated 6mo. 23, 1683. That he was of English parentage and nativity seems to be proven by the will of his brother Abraham, who died in Trenton, New Jersey, which mentions a sister Mary, a widow, in Lambeth, England; a sister Demaris, wife of David Hunt, of Southwark, England; children of a brother, John Carpenter, "late of Horsham, Essex;" and a sister Dorothy Jupp, also of England. Nothing has, however, been discovered in reference to his parents, or whether they accompanied him to Barbadoes or not. According to Besse, Samuel Carpenter, was among those who suffered persecution for their religious faith in Barbadoes in 1673, but as he was born in the year 1650, he may have gone to Barbadoes to engage in trade about the time of attaining his majority, as he was possessed of ample wealth on his arrival in Pennsylvania. According to Burke's "General Armory" the arms of the Carpenter family of Barbadoes, granted in Ireland, June 11, 1647, were as follows: "Paly of six ar. and gu. on a chevron Sa. three plates each charged with a cross pattee gu." Crest,—A Demi-lion rampant, gu. Ducally crowned or. collared Sa. with the motto, Audaces Fortuna Juvat. The crest above described was invariably used by Samuel Carpenter, of Philadelphia, on his seal. His two brothers, Joshua and Abraham Carpenter, were also merchants in Philadelphia for a time, and owned several tracts of land jointly in West Jersey. Joshua was a member of Provincial Assembly of Pennsylvania, 1702-07, and was one of Penn's Commissioners of Property, 1708. Abraham, the other brother, removed to Trenton, New Jersey, and died there unmarried as before recited.

Samuel Carpenter engaged early in foreign trade and had a warehouse and residence on the river front, with a bakery and the Globe Tavern, one of the earliest hostelries of Philadelphia. He lived for many years in the "Slate-roof House" on Second street, site of the Commercial Exchange, where Gov. Penn resided in 1700, and afterwards; John Penn, eldest son of the "Founder," being born there and where the Provincial Assembly met in 1696.

He also owned lots on the north side of Market street from the Delaware, extending back half way to Arch; and on Walnut street extending from the river to Second street and back to Norris alley. He had a half interest with Penn, in a mill on the site of Chester, the third mill to be erected in the Province. In 1692 he acquired by articles of agreement with Francis Rossel, a half interest in a mill erected by Rossel in Bristol, Bucks county, 1683, and a large amount of valuable property there, to which he added by purchase after the death of Rossel, and under the will of the latter became sole owner of the mill property. He also owned over 5,000 acres of land in Warrington and Warminster, Bucks county; an island in the Delaware, opposite Bristol; a half-interest in a mill at Darby; several thousand acres in Elsenborough, Salem county, New Jersey; and six hundred acres on the Delaware river "over against Philadelphia." He was from his arrival in Pennsylvania a close friend and adviser of Penn, later becoming one of the trustees under his will, and was almost constantly employed on Provincial affairs. He was one of Penn's Commissioners in 1683, and probably for many years thereafter, and was a member of Governor's Council, 1687-89; 1694-5; and 1697 to 1713; and with John Goodson, another Philadelphia merchant, was Deputy Governor of the Province from November 24, 1694, to September 3, 1698. He was a member of Provincial Assembly, 1693-95, and was Provincial Treasurer from 1685 to his death. As the pioneer merchant of Philadelphia, he was largely instrumental in establishing its early commercial prestige, and was also one of the pioneers in the improvement and development of the city, as well as in the establishment of manufacturing industries there and in the surrounding country. Watson says of him, "he was the Stephen Girard of his day in Wealth, and the William Sansom, in the improvements he suggested and the edifices which he built." He was one of the first trustees of the public school, and founded the business of ship building at Philadelphia. He lost heavily in the war of 1703, and closing out his shipping business gave almost his entire attention to Provincial affairs and the development of his properties. He died in his mansion house on King, now Water street, April 10, 1714. A memorial of the Society of Friends, of which he was a consistent and earnest member says of him: "He was a pattern of humility, patience and self denial; a man fearing God and hating covetousness; much given to hospitality and good works. He was a loving, affectionate husband, tender father, and faithful friend and brother. * * *, ever ready to help the poor and such as were in distress. His name shall be revered among the faithful for generations to come."

Samuel Carpenter married at Friends Meeting in Philadelphia, October 12, 1684, Hannah Hardiman, native of Haverford West, South Wales, who brought a certificate from the Friends Meeting there, dated August 2, 1683, which was received at Philadelphia, November 4, 1684. RICHARD PRESTON, grandfather of Samuel Preston, Provincial Councillor, came from England about the year 1635, and settled in Nansemond county, Virginia, and was granted a tract of land there by Governor John West, December 22, 1636. He later received two other grants of 500 acres each of Sir William Berkely, in Upper Norfolk. He was a Justice of the Courts of Nansemond county in 1646, and held a high social and political position there. He was however, a Puritan, and in 1649, with a view of founding a colony of his own faith, removed with his family and seventy-three other persons to Patuxent river, Maryland, where several large tracts were surveyed to him in 1650-51. On a tract of 400 acres on the north side of Patuxent, augmented by later grants to 1,000 acres, he erected a brick dwelling still standing, and known as "Preston on Patuxent," the oldest building extant in the state of Maryland. "Preston" was the seat of the government of Maryland, under the "Commonwealth" 1654 to 1658, the House of Burgesses, or Provincial Assembly under the Cromwellian authority, meeting there during that period. Richard Preston was made a member of Provincial Council, 1652, and "Commander on the North side of Patuxent," and in 1654 was one of the prominent leaders of the "roundhead" party that deposed Gov. William Stone, and removed the seat of government from St. Maries, the Catholic stronghold of Lord Baltimore, to "Preston," where the first Puritan Assembly met in 1654. When Lord Baltimore regained control of the government in 1658, Richard Preston retained his seat in the Assembly, and continued a representative of his county until the last session of 1666, and was Speaker in 1661. He became a Quaker late in life, and achieved as much prominence as a peaceful Quaker as he had as a fighting Puritan, under Claiborne; Gov. Charles Calvert alluding to him in 1663 as "The Great Quaker." He died at "Preston," 1669. He brought with him from Virginia, his wife Margaret and five children, Richard, who settled in Dorchester county, which he represented in the Assembly at the time of his death in 1669; James, of whom little is known; Samuel, who probably died young, not being mentioned in his father's will; Naomi, married William Berry; member of Assembly and Justice of Kent county, Delaware, 1684-89; Margaret, who also is supposed to have died young. Two other daughters, Rebecca and Sarah, were born in Maryland. The former married Lovelace Gorusch, and the latter married (first) William Ford and (second) Edwin Pindar.

RICHARD PRESTON JR. was the father of Samuel Preston, Provincial Councillor. Margaret, widow of Richard Jr., married (second) William Berry, who had previously married Naomi Preston, eldest daughter of Richard Sr., by whom he had a son, William Berry, who married Naomi, daughter of Shadrach Walley, of Newtown, Bucks county; another son James who was twice married, and a daughter Rebecca, who married James Ridley and settled in Salem county, New Jersey.

SAMUEL PRESTON was born in Maryland, probably at "Preston" on the Patuxent, 1665, and was reared a Quaker. He married at the house of Francis Cornwall, county of Sussex on Delaware, (now Delaware) July 6, 1688, Rachel, daughter of Thomas Lloyd, President of the Governor's Council, and Deputy Governor of Pennsylvania, and settled in Sussex county; became a Justice of that county, January 2, 1689; was Sheriff from May 30, 1690, to April 28, 1693; and a member of Provincial Assembly from there in 1693-1701. In 1699 he accompanied Thomas Story on an extensive religious visit, and in 1703 removed to Philadelphia and engaged in the mercantile business. He was elected to the Common Council of the city soon after locating there, and was elected by Council a member of Board of Alderman, October 5, 1708, and three years later was elected Mayor of the city. James Logan in a letter to Penn, dated January 17, 1708, recommending an increase in representation in the Provincial Council, says, "Samuel Preston, is also a very good man, and now makes quite a figure, and indeed Rachel's husband ought particularly to be taken notice of, for it has been too long neglected even for thy own interest." Thus potential was a good family connection in the good old Colonial days. Samuel Preston and Isaac Norris, both sons-in-law of Thomas Lloyd, were called to the Governor's Council, February 9, 1708-9, and both remained prominent members of that body for the next twenty-five years. Samuel Preston succeeded Samuel Carpenter as Provincial Treasurer in 1714, and held that office until his death, September 10, 1743.

Rachel (Lloyd) Preston, wife of Samuel, having died, he married (second) Margaret, widow of Josiah Langdale, who had accompanied her husband to Philadelphia on a religious visit in 1723, the latter dying on the voyage. She died August 23, 1742, in her fifty-eighth year. Her daughter, Mary Langdale, married Samuel Coates in 1734, and is the ancestress of the Coates family of Philadelphia.

Joshua Ladd Howell, of "Fancy Hill," Gloucester county, by his wife, Anna Blackwood; grandson of John Ladd Howell, of Woodbury, New Jersey, and great-grandson of John Howell, sometime of Philadelphia, and his wife, Katharine, daughter of John Ladd, one of the Proprietors of West Jersey, who emigrated from Swingfield, county Kent, England, with his wife Sarah, prior to 1685, and according to the historian of the family, in 1678. According to the same authority, John Ladd came of a distinguished Kentish family that traced their descent from a Norman follower of William I, who came from Normandy and settled at Deal, county of Kent, England, in the eleventh century.

His lineage as definitely traced is as follows:

JOHN LADD, of Eleham, county Kent, died 1476, leaving a son,

John Ladd, of Eleham, who died 1527, and by wife Alice had three sons:

Stephen Ladd, father of Thomas Ladd, of Otling.

John Ladd, father of Nicholas Ladd, of Wooten.

Thomas Ladd, of Barham, ancestor of the Lades of "Boughton House," county Kent.

Nicholas Ladd, of Wooten, Kent, whose eldest son was,

Nicholas Ladd, of Swingfield, county Kent, Gent., died 1669, whose son, Nicholas Ladd, became a convert to Friends, and was buried in the Friends' Burying Ground at Hythe, Kent, in 1699; father of,

JOHN LADD, who came to New Jersey, 1678, and was known as John Ladd, of Gloucester river. He purchased a share of West Jersey of Maurice Trent, and later purchased 4000 acres of the heirs of William Welch, much of which he conveyed during his lifetime, but at his death in 1740 was a very large landholder. Among the numerous tracts surveyed to him was a large tract on the Delaware, Deptford township, at what became known as Ladd's Cove, on which he erected a dwelling and resided there until his death. A large portion of the land becoming later vested in his descendants, John Ladd Howell and Joshua Ladd Howell.

John Ladd was a juror at the first Court held in Gloucester county, September, 1686. He was a practical surveyor, and tradition relates, was employed by William Penn to assist in laying out the city of Philadelphia, and was offered a lot of land there in lieu of the thirty pounds which he was to receive for his services, but not being favorably impressed with the prospects of Philadelphia becoming a town of any magnitude, declined.

John Ladd died 1740, leaving a will dated 1731, and a codicil added a short time before his death, by which he devised the homestead of 560 acres to his son John, and his other property to his daughter, Katharine Howell, and granddaughter, Mary Parker, (who became the wife of Charles Norris, of Philadelphia, in 1759). His sons, Samuel and Jonathan, had been previously provided for. Sarah, wife of John Ladd, died in 1733.

His son Jacob settled in Chester county, where he was a member of Colonial Assembly and prominent in local and Colonial affairs. He married Sarah, daughter of Francis Vernon, who with his brothers, Thomas and Robert, emigrated from Sandway, Cheshire, England, and settled in Chester, now Delaware county. He was a very prominent member of the Society of Friends, and served in the Colonial Assembly from Chester county in 1687. He was a son of James Vernon, at one time Secretary of State of Great Britain, and a brother to Sir Edward Vernon, Rear Admiral of the Blue, and a descendant of William, Lord de Vernon, Norman Baron, who accompanied William the Conqueror to England in 1066. Mt. Vernon, the Washington homestead, was so named by Lawrence Washington, in honor of Admiral Vernon, under whom he had served.

THOMAS WOODNUT, of whom presently.

THOMAS WOODNUT, son of Jonathan and Mary (Goodwin) Woodnut, was born in Salem county, New Jersey, December 1, 1816. He joined his uncle in Cincinnati, Ohio, and about 1840, in partnership with his cousin, Clement Acton, succeeded to the mercantile business established there by his uncle when Cincinnati was but a village. Thomas Woodnut retired from business in 1864, and removed to Richmond, Indiana, where he was identified with manufacturing and banking enterprises. Mr. Woodnut was born a member of the Society of Friends, of whose religious meetings he was a regular attendant. As in business life his keen foresight, sound business judgment, and staunch integrity, made him esteemed and respected by all with whom he came in close contact, so in Richmond, Indiana, he held a prominent place in the philanthropic and religious interests of the city. His wise judgment and untiring zeal, fostered by his generous impulses, were always at command for furthering any laudable enterprise for the good of his fellow citizens.

Though not a college graduate, he was a man of keen intelligence and broad culture, and his appreciation of the importance of proper training of youth, prompted him to associate himself with several other men of means—members of the Society of Friends—in providing a building and establishing a school to be conducted in accordance with the principles of the Society. To this work Mr. Woodnut devoted his time, his wise counsel and an open purse, during the remainder of his residence in Richmond, Indiana.

In 1880 Mr. Woodnut removed to Philadelphia, where he also became identified with philanthropic, educational and charitable enterprises. No enterprise for the uplifting and enlightenment of his fellowman that the needs of the great city presented to his attention was passed heedlessly by, and many were the quiet, unostentatious and generous gifts that the seekers for aid along these lines received from him. He was a man of determined will, clothed with an air of quiet dignity and repose under every provocation, and his spirit of fairness developed in him a character in sympathy with all who were oppressed or unjustly treated, and when the occasion demanded, no one could be more insistent and vigorous in the demand for absolute integrity and justice on the part of every interest in which he was engaged, financial or otherwise. Beloved and respected by all who knew him, he died in the midst of a useful and earnest life, August 9, 1889.

Thomas Woodnut married, January 5, 1858, Hannah Hooloway, daughter of Nathan and Margaret (Hooloway) Morgan, of Richmond, Indiana, and of distinguished Welsh ancestry. She still survives him, residing in Philadelphia.

Issue of Thomas and Hannah Hooloway (Morgan) Woodnut:

hospitals, went abroad to take a three years course in medicine at London, Vienna and Berlin; while at the latter place he was associated with Dr. Koch in his experiments on bacteria, when his health failed him, and developed lung trouble; he sought to stay the ravages of the disease by travel in Africa and Spain, and at last returned to America, and took up his residence in Colorado, where he died of consumption, Oct. 17, 1888, closing a life of great promise at the early age of twenty-four years.

PENNYPACKER FAMILY.

HENDRICK PANNEBECKER, a Dutch Patroon, was ancestor of American family, now generally bearing the name Pennypacker, which has furnished a United States Senator to Virginia; a Major-General from Pennsylvania to the United States Army; a State Treasurer to Tennessee; a State Agent to Kentucky; a Canal Commissioner and a Governor to Pennsylvania, and which sent into the War of the Rebellion two generals, four colonels, twenty-two other commissioned officers, in all one hundred and forty-eight men, the largest ascertained contribution of any single family in that war.

Hendrick Pannebecker was born in the little rural village of Flomborn, on the Rhine, not far from city of Worms, March 21, 1674. He was, however, of Dutch lineage, his immediate ancestors having removed from Holland to the locality of his birth. A large proportion of the inhabitants of the present village of Flomborn, comprising five hundred souls, bear the name of Pannebecker. The name Pannebakker is of Holland origin, meaning in the Dutch language a maker of tiles.

Hendrick Pannebecker was one of those who sought an asylum from religious persecution, and a new field for advancement, in Penn's Colony in Pennsylvania, soon after the first thirteen families of Dutch and Germans had formed their settlement at Germantown. The exact date of his arrival is not known, the earliest record we have of him being his marriage at Germantown, 1699, to Eve Umstat, who had come with her parents, Hans Peter and Barabara Umstat, in the "Francis and Dorothy" from Crefeld, 1685. On February 28, 1702, a patent was granted to Matthias Van Bebber for 6166 acres of land on the Skippack and Perkiomen creeks, comprising the present townships of Skippack and Perkiomen, thereafter for many years known as "Bebber's Township." This patent was made by virtue of the purchase of 5000 acres by Dirck Sipman and 1000 acres by Govert Remke, which Van Bebber had acquired after about 750 acres had been laid out in Germantown. Immediately on the location of this tract a number of the Germantown residents settled upon it, among whom were Hendrick Pannebecker, and his brother-in-law, Johannes Umstat.

The first purchase by Pannebecker was 200 acres by deed dated December 25, 1702, and six years later he added 204 acres. Van Bebber never settled in the township, and removing to Bohemia Manor, Maryland, 1704, did not return to Pennsylvania. The management of his township and the affairs of the growing settlement therein devolved upon others, the leading spirit of whom was Hendrick Pannebecker, who possessed many qualifications that fitted him for a useful man of business in this growing community.

He spoke fluently the three languages common to the community in which he lived, Dutch, German and English; was a competent surveyor and wrote deeds and other legal papers in both German and English. For the Penns he surveyed the manors of Manatawny, Gilberts, and other of the Proprietaries' manors, and he laid out most of the roads in that part of Philadelphia county, now constituting the county of Montgomery. He held a power of attorney from Van Bebber to make conveyances of land and deliver seizin thereof, and was his principal representative in all matters pertaining to the Colony on the Skippack. In 1727 his interest was transferred from that of attorney to that of proprietor, he in conjunction with Lodowick Christian Sprogell, purchasing of Van Bebber the unsold portion of Bebber's township; Sprogell dying in 1729, his widow and children conveyed to Pannebecker the decedent's undivided interest therein. Thirty-three hundred and three acres had already been sold but no quit rent had been paid on any of the original purchases, and on June 20, 1735, Hendrick Pannebecker paid the arrearages on 6166 acres for the period of thirty-three years. He owned at least 4772 acres of land, and was one of the prominent figures in the section in which he lived, and principal spokesman in matters between the German and Dutch population and the Proprietary and Provincial government. He was on terms of intimacy with Edward Shippen, Israel Pemberton, Richard Hill, James Logan, Isaac Norris, and others prominent in the Colonial government of Pennsylvania; is referred to in a number of recorded instruments as "Gentleman," and was possessed of a library of books, one of which was recently secured by Rev. A. Stapleton, in which was written by some theologian of the time, "Henrich Pannebecker, habet virtuosem uxorem."

Hendrick Pannebecker died April 4, 1754, and his large landed estate was divided among his children. The old homestead at Pennypacker's Mills, Washington's headquarters during the Revolution from September 26, to October 8, 1777, is now owned and occupied by his great-great-grandson, Hon. Samuel Whitaker Pennypacker.

Hendrick Pannebecker married, at Germantown, 1699, Eve, daughter of Hans Peter and Barbara Umstat, granddaughter of Nicholas Umstat, who died at Crefeld, on the Rhine, October 4, 1682. The son, Hans Peter Umstat, with his wife Barbara, and their three children, Johannes, Eve and Margaret, came to Pennsylvania in the "Francis and Dorothy" and located in Germantown, where the wife Barbara died August 12, 1702. Johannes Umstat, son, joined his brother-in-law, Hendrick Pannebecker, on the Skippack, 1702, and has left numerous descendants, the name being later modified into Umstead. The Umstats brought with them from Crefeld a German Bible published at Heidelberg, 1568, which has been in the family since 1652. Eve (Umstat) Pannebecker died some years prior to the date of death of her husband.

Issue of Hendrick and Eve (Umstat) Pannebecker:

MARtha Pannebecker, b. June 15, 1700; d. Sept., 1761; m. Anthony Van der Sluys (Vanderslice), and their son, Henry Vanderslice, later Sheriff of Berks co., succeeded his grandfather, Hendrick Pannebecker, as surveyor and conveyancer in the neighborhood of the Perkiomen and Skippack;

ADOLPH Pannebecker, b. 1708; d. May, 1789; like his four brothers, he was a miller; he inherited a portion of his father's lands and lived and died in Limerick twp.;

PETER PANNEBECKER, b. March 8, 1710; d. June 28, 1770; he was also a miller; m. Elizabeth Keyser, of a prominent Germantown family of that name, and is the ancestor of many of the name of Pennypacker, residing in later years in the counties of Chester, Lancaster, and Juniata; among his more distinguished descendants being Hon. Elijah F. Pennypacker (1804-88), many years a member of Pennsylvania Legislature, Canal Commissioner, &c., a sketch of whose life and services is given later;

JOHN PANNEBECKER, b. Aug. 27, 1713; d. June 14, 1784; m. Annetje Keyser, and resided in Providence twp., now Montgomery co., from whence his descendants have migrated to various parts of the Union; among his notable descendants was Hon. Isaac S. Pennypacker, United States Senator from Virginia, a sketch of whom is given later;

JACOB PANNEBECKER, b. 1715; d. May 27, 1752; m. Margaret Tyson; of whom presently; Henry Pannebecker, b. 1717; d. May 31, 1792; m. Rebecca Kuster, of another prominent Germantown family, later settlers on the Skippack and elsewhere;
 Barbara Pannebecker, b. 1720; m. Cornelius Tyson, and an account of her descendants is given elsewhere in these volumes;
 Susanna Pannebecker, m. Peter Keyser; they resided in Worcester twp., now Montgomery co., Pa.

JACOB PANNEBECKER, fourth son of Hendrick and Eve (Umstat) Pannebecker, born in Bebbers township, 1715, inherited a portion of the lands of his father on the Skippack, and for the comparatively brief period of his mature life, was engaged in the manufacture of flour, which he and his brothers marketed in Philadelphia in large quantities. He died May 27, 1752. He married Margaret, daughter of Matthias and Barbara (Sellen) Tyson, and granddaughter of Cornelius Tyson, who was born at Crefeld, on the Rhine, in 1652; came to Germantown with wife Margaret, who survived him, and several children, and died there May 9, 1716.

MATTHIAS PANNEBECKER, son of Jacob and Margaret (Tyson) Pannebecker, born on the Skippack, October 14, 1742, died February 12, 1808. He married (first) Mary, born October 9, 1751, died November 30, 1794, daughter of John Kuster, granddaughter of Hermanus Kuster, of Germantown, by his wife, Isabel Conrad, and great-granddaughter of Paulus Kuster and his wife, Gertrude Streepers, who came to Pennsylvania from Crefeld, county of Cologne, on borders of Holland, 1699, and settled in Germantown, where a portion of the large purchase of land by Jan Streepers, a brother of Gertrude, had been located.

Matthias Pannebecker purchased, in 1774, a mill and tract of land on Pickering creek, Schuylkill township, Chester county, and settled there. He became a Bishop of the Mennonite Church, and preached at Phoenixville, Skippack and Germantown. His first wife, Mary Kuster, having died in 1794, he married (second) Margaret (Longaker) Maris, widow of Christian Maris, and daughter of Daniel Longaker, by whom he had one daughter Sarah, who became the wife of William Walker, of Pickering Valley, and mother of Mary Pennypacker Walker, who married Tristram Coffin Colket.

MATTHIAS PENNYPACKER, as the name now came to be spelled, son of Matthias and Mary (Kuster) Pannebecker, born in Schuylkill township, Chester county, August 15, 1786, died there April 4, 1852, after a life of more than ordinary public activity. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1837; for some years a member of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania; and President of the organization which led to the construction of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, and one of the incorporators of the company. He married Sarah, born February 9, 1784, died September 13, 1853, daughter of Hon. Isaac Anderson, a Lieutenant of Militia during the Revolutionary War, and member of House of Representatives of the United States, 1803-07, by his wife, Mary Lane, of whom hereafter, and granddaughter of Major Patrick Anderson, a distinguished officer of the Revolution, who was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, July 24, 1719. Major Anderson was a son of James Anderson, a native of Scotland, by his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Jerman, a noted preacher among Friends in the Chester Valley.

Major Anderson was educated in Philadelphia, and taught school for some years, but subsequently located on his father's farm two miles from Valley Forge. He was a Captain during the French and Indian War, and at the first meeting of the Committee of Safety of Chester county, December 20, 1774, was named as one of Committee of Observation for that county in State organization, and continued to serve with the State Committee of Safety until March 15, 1776, when he was commissioned Captain in Col. Samuel J. Atlee's Musketry battalion, which was later consolidated into the State Regiment of Foot, and November 12, 1777, into the Thirteenth Regiment, Continental Line. He was also a Major in Anthony Wayne's regiment of Chester county minute-men in 1775. Major Anderson was in the battles of Long Island, Brandywine, Germantown, and many other engagements. At the termination of his term of enlistment, January 1, 1778, he retired from military service and was elected to General Assembly from Chester county, serving in that body until 1780. In 1781 he was appointed one of the commissioners in charge of the navigation of the Schuylkill, and filled other important positions. Hon. Isaac Anderson was a Lieutenant of Militia during the Revolution; member of General Assembly, represented his State in the National House of Representatives in the Eighth and Ninth congresses and was a Presidential elector for Monroe in 1816. He died October 27, 1838.

Mary Lane Anderson, wife of Hon. Isaac Anderson and mother of Sarah (Anderson) Pennypacker, was born in Providence township, Philadelphia, (now Montgomery) county, May 22, 1762, and was a daughter of Edward Lane, by his wife, Sarah Richardson; granddaughter of Samuel Lane, of Providence, great-granddaughter of Edward Lane, a son of William Lane and his wife, Cecile Love, of Bristol, England, a pioneer of Plymouth township, and the founder of St. James Episcopal Church, (of whom further hereafter) by his wife, Anne, daughter of Samuel Richardson, Provincial Councillor, etc., of whom later.

Edward Lane, first mentioned, father of Mary (Lane) Anderson, was born in Plymouth township, Philadelphia, now Montgomery county, removed to Charlestown township, Chester county, shortly before the Revolution; died there July 8, 1818, and is buried in the Anderson burial lot in Schuylkill township. He married at Christ Church, Philadelphia, October 14, 1754, his cousin, Sarah, born at Oletigo, Providence township, January 14, 1732, daughter of Edward Richardson, of Oletigo, by his wife, Ann Jones, and granddaughter of Joseph Richardson, of Oletigo, by his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of John and Barbara (Aubrey) Bevan, of Treverigg, Glamorganshire, Wales, whose ancestry is traced back to the tenth century, both being descended from Edward III., of England, and his wife Philippa, daughter of William III, Count of Hainault and Holland, by his wife Joanna, daughter of Charles of Valois, son of King Philip of France. The ancestry of John Bevan has been traced back twelve generations further to Dierck, Count of Holland, Zealand, and Friesland, A. D. 863, (a descendant of the Dukes of Aquitaine), who married Gena, daughter of the King of Italy; his son, Dierck II, who married Hildegarde, daughter of King Louis of France, and died May 6, 988; his son Arnulph, who married Luitgarde, daughter of Theophanus, King of Greece, and sister of Theophana, wife of Otho II, Emperor of Germany, killed at battle of Wentzel, 993; his son, Dierck III, who married Othilda, daughter of the Duke of Saxony, and was one of the early crusaders, died 1039; his son, Floris I, who became Count of Holland, etc., in 1048, married Gertrude, daughter of Herman, Duke of Saxony; his son, Dierck V, who became Count in 1075, married Othilda, daughter of Frederick, Duke of Saxony; his son, Dierck VI, who married Sophia, daughter of the Count Palatine, a crusader of 1139, died 1163; his son, Floris III, a crusader in 1187, with 9000 men, and performed many feats of arms, died at Antioch, 1191, and was buried at St. Peter's Church there; married Ada, daughter of King Henry, and granddaughter of David VIII, of Scotland; their son, William I, who accompanied his father to the Holy Land, and remained three years after the death of his father and captured Damiaten, in Egypt, for which he was knighted by Frederick Barbarossa; was again a crusader in 1217, died February 4, 1224; he married Adelheit, daughter of the Count of Gelderland, and their son was Floris IV, slain in battle, 1235, married Matilda, daughter of Henry, Duke of Brabant, and their daughter Alice, married, in 1241, John of Avenes, Earl of Hainault, whose son William III, of the Netherlands, married Joanna, of Valois, and was the father of Philippa, wife of Edward III, of England.

Sarah (Richardson) Lane died July 8, 1818, and her daughter, Mary (Lane) Anderson, died August 27, 1847. Both are buried in the Anderson burying-ground in Schuylkill township, Chester county. Edward Richardson was a pupil of Francis Daniel Pastorius, founder of Germantown, 1712. He married Ann Jones, December 15, 1731, and took up his residence on 248 acres in Providence township, part of the Oletigo plantation, conveyed to him by his father, December 15, 1730, and died there about 1750. He is referred to as a man of great muscular strength, being able to hold a fifty-six pound weight at arm's length, while writing his name with chalk on the wall.

Samuel Richardson, father of Joseph, before mentioned, and grandfather of Edward, came to Philadelphia from Jamaica, 1687, with his wife Eleanor and their children, bringing a certificate from the Monthly Meeting at Spanish Town, Island of Jamaica, which he produced at Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, "ye 10th. of ye 3d. Mo. 1687."

It is probable that Samuel Richardson had resided but a short time on the island and since he was living in London in 1673, he is believed to have been the Samuel Richardson mentioned in Besse's "Sufferings of the Quakers," as having been arrested at the Peel Meeting, in London, 1670, and fined for attending non-conformist meetings. He was a man of strong personality and more than ordinary executive ability, and became at once prominent in the affairs of Penn's infant colony. He was appointed a Judge of the Courts of Philadelphia, January 12, 1688, and filled that position for sixteen years. He was elected to the Governor's Council, 1688, and being an ardent champion of the people, as opposed to the dictatorial attitude of Dep. Gov. Blackwell, expressed himself rather warmly in criticism of some of the acts of the Governor, by reason of which an effort was made to prevent him from taking his seat in the Council, and a writ was issued for the election of a successor. This resulted, however, in his return by a vote of the people, February 8, 1688-9, and though some opposition was offered to his taking the oath, he and his friends overcame the opposition and he took his seat in the Council. He was again returned to Council, 1695, and was one of the active and influential members of that body. He served as one of the committee of twelve to whom was referred the demand of Col. Fletcher, Governor of New York, that Pennsylvania furnish her quota of men and means to defend the common frontier against the Indians of the northwest, and made the report of that committee to Council. He was a member of Colonial Assembly from Philadelphia for the years 1691-94-97-1703-06-07-09.

He has the distinction of being "The first alderman of Philadelphia," having been appointed to that office by Penn at the head of a list of six when the city was first chartered in 1691.

Samuel Richardson lived until about 1705 on a tract of 500 acres of land lying along the line of Germantown, in what was then known as Bristol township, Philadelphia county, which he later conveyed in trust, for the use of his grandson, John Richardson.

Eleanor, wife of Samuel Richardson, died April 19, 1703, and on July 20, 1704, he married Elizabeth Webb, and removed to the city of Philadelphia. He was elected an Alderman in 1705, and served until his death, June 10, 1719.

The children of Samuel and Eleanor Richardson were: Joseph, married Elizabeth Bevan, June 20, 1696; Mary, married William Hudson, Mayor of Philadelphia; Elizabeth, married Abraham Bickley; Anne, married Edward Lane, from Bristol, England, before mentioned, owner of a large tract of land lying along the southwestern boundary of Beber's township, before referred to, in Providence township, and lying between it and the Manor of Gilbert's, where he died in 1710. His widow, Anne (Richardson) Lane, married Edmund Cartledge, of Conestoga, Lancaster county. Samuel Lane, eldest son of Edward and Anne (Richardson) Lane, born April 17, 1699, died December 17, 1771, inherited a large part of his father's land in Providence township, and was a lifelong resident there; was Warden of St. James Protestant Episcopal Church of Perkiomen. He was father of Edward Lane, who married Sarah Richardson, and became the father of Mary (Lane) Anderson, mother of Sarah (Anderson) Pennypacker.

Joseph Richardson, only son of Samuel Richardson, Provincial Councillor, and paternal grandfather of Sarah (Richardson) Lane, purchased, in 1710, of his brother-in-law, Abraham Bickley, 1000 acres, known as "Olethgo" in Providence township, on which he settled. He died there in December, 1751, surviving his wife, Elizabeth Bevan, who died February 27, 1740. They had six sons: John, Samuel, Aubrey, Edward, before mentioned, Richard and William; three daughters, Eleanor, married William Harmer, and was the grandmother of Col. Josiah Harmer, distinguished officer of the Revolution, and first Commander-in-Chief of the Army of the United States after Washington; Barbara, married Benjamin Davies, of Lower Merion, and Elizabeth, married Samuel Stalford, of Providence.

ISAAC ANDERSON PENNYPACKER, son of Matthias and Sarah (Anderson) Pennypacker, was born at Pickering, Schuylkill township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, July 9, 1812, died in Philadelphia, February 13, 1856. He studied medicine and graduated from the Medical Department of University of Pennsylvania in 1833. Locating at Phoenixville, Chester county, he became an eminent and successful physician. He was the first chief burgess of Phoenixville on its organization as a borough in 1849.

In 1854 Dr. Pennypacker was appointed Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine at the Philadelphia College of Medicine, and removed to that city, residing on Chestnut street, west of Eighteenth street, where he died in 1856. He was one of the founders and the first president of the Philadelphia City Institute, and, together with the late Dr. James L. Tyson, organized the Howard Hospital.

Dr. Pennypacker married, May 9, 1839, Anna Maria, daughter of Joseph

Whitaker, a wealthy ironmaster of Phoenixville, one of the firm of Reeves & Whitaker, and one time owner and proprietor of the Durham Iron Works, at Durham, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, as well as of extensive iron works in Maryland and elsewhere, and a member of the Pennsylvania Assembly in 1843.

JOSEPH WHITAKER was a grandson of James Whitaker, of Leeds, England, who married a daughter of Joseph Musgrave. Their son, Joseph Whitaker Sr., born August 25, 1755, died 1837, married Sarah, of Coventry, Chester county, Pennsylvania, daughter of Jacob and Sarah (Butler) Op den Graeff, granddaughter of Isaac Op den Graeff, and great-granddaughter of Abraham Op den Graeff, of Crefeld, county Cologne, on borders of Holland, who with his two brothers, Herman and Dirck, formed part of the little colony of thirteen families that founded Germantown in 1683. Abraham Op den Graeff was one of the signers of the famous protest against slavery in 1688; was one of the first Burgesses of Germantown, and a member of the Colonial Assembly, 1689-92. He purchased a tract of land in "Bebbers Township," before referred to, 1709, and he and his wife Trintje are believed to have been buried in the old Mennonite burying-ground at Skippack.

JOSEPH WHITAKER, son of Joseph and Sarah (Op den Graeff) Whitaker, and father of Anna Maria (Whitaker) Pennypacker, was born March 29, 1789, died November 30, 1870. He married Grace Adams, of Swedesboro, New Jersey, born March 7, 1789, died February 16, 1870.

Issue of Dr. Isaac A. and Anna Maria (Whitaker) Pennypacker:

HON. SAMUEL WHITAKER PENNYPACKER, b. April 9, 1843; of whom presently;

HENRY CLAY PENNYPACKER, b. June 20, 1847; of whom presently;

ISAAC RUSLING PENNYPACKER, b. Dec. 11, 1852; of whom presently;

JAMES LANE PENNYPACKER, b. Dec. 11, 1855; of whom later.

HON. SAMUEL WHITAKER PENNYPACKER, LL. D., Governor of Pennsylvania, 1903-07, was born at Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, April 9, 1843. His parents removing to Philadelphia when he was a child, he attended the Northwest Grammar School in that city, and later obtained a scholarship at the Saunders' Institute, West Philadelphia. On the death of his father in 1856, he returned with his mother to Phoenixville and there attended the Grovemont Seminary. In 1862 he taught school at Mont Clare, Montgomery county. In 1863 he enlisted in Company F, Twenty-sixth (Emergency) Regiment, the first force to encounter the Confederate Army at Gettysburg. When Lee's invading army had been turned back, and his brief term of service had expired, Mr. Pennypacker took up the study of law in the office of Hon. Peter McCall, of Philadelphia, and entered the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania, receiving his degree of Bachelor of Laws, 1866, and in the same year was admitted to practice at the Philadelphia bar, and began practice in that city. In 1868 he was elected President of the Law Academy of Philadelphia, and in 1887 was admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of the United States.

In 1889 he was appointed to fill a vacancy on the bench of Common Pleas Court, No. 2, of Philadelphia, and in November of the same year was elected to the same position for the full term of ten years. In 1899 he was unanimously re-elected for another term of ten years, being then the President Judge of the Court. He resigned his judicial position in 1902 to accept the nomination of the Republican party to the office of Governor, to which he was elected in November by a majority of over 156,000 votes over ex-Governor Robert E. Pattison, the popular standard bearer of the Democratic party, who had been twice elected to that position.

During Gov. Pennypacker's administration the Commonwealth made great progress in all directions. The practical movement for good roads was begun, the Health Department was established, the State Constabulary created, a great coal miners strike was averted, the Forestry Reserve was doubled, Valley Forge made, in fact, a State Park, Greater Pittsburg incorporated, a new Capitol completed and dedicated, the State apportioned into Senatorial and Representative Districts for the first time in thirty years; the volume of new laws was cut down one-third; the power of the corporations to seize the streams and sources of water supply of the State taken away, and legislation enacted which President Roosevelt described as marking "an epoch in the practical betterment of political conditions" for all the States; $375,000 was appropriated for the deepening of the channel of the Delaware river and over $13,000,000 left in the treasury.

As a jurist Judge Pennypacker stood exceedingly high in the estimation of the people. His opinions were characterized by good sense, sound reasoning, and an enlightened knowledge of and practical application of the law to the case in hand, and he was seldom reversed by the higher Courts. Gov. Pennypacker has taken a lively interest in the affairs of Philadelphia. In 1886 he was appointed a member of the Board of Education, and he has always been an ardent friend of popular education. He has for many years taken a very active interest in historical subjects and has written and published a number of books, papers, pamphlets, etc., of high merit from a historical point of view. A careful and conscientious student, his historical publications are models of accuracy and authenticity. Intensely proud of his native State and her institutions, his ability to ferret out obscure and interesting facts in reference to their history is unexcelled among contemporary historians. Among the more prominent of his publications are: "The Settlement of Germantown," "Hendrick Pannebecker," "Historical and Biographical Sketches," "Bebber's Township," "The Annals of Phoenixville" and "Congress Hall." In addition to the above he has published some fifty other books, pamphlets and papers of more or less historical interest. He is also the author of a number of legal text books of merit, among them being "Pennsylvania Colonial Cases," "Digest of Common Law Reports," and "Pennypacker's Supreme Court Reports;" and he also aided in the preparation of forty-five volumes of the "Weekly Notes of Cases."

Gov. Pennypacker has long been one of the most active members of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, and done much to place it on the high plane of usefulness as an institution. He served it many years as Vice-President, and since 1900 has been its President. He was largely instrumental in securing the State appropriation which enabled the Society to erect its large and commodious building at Thirteenth and Locust streets in 1906-07. He was one of the founders and is now Vice-President of the Pennsylvania Society Sons of the Revolution; fills the same official position in the Colonial Society; has been President of the Netherlands Society, and of the Pennsylvania German Society, is a member of the Society of Colonial Wars, the Society of the War of 1812, and of the Pennsylvania History Club. He is President of the Philobiblon Club, and connected PENNYPACKER, second son of Dr. Isaac Anderson and Anna Maria (Whitaker) Pennypacker, born at Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, June 20, 1847, was for a number of years engaged in the printing business in Philadelphia, retiring from business to accept a position in the Prothonotary's office, Philadelphia, which he still holds. He is the owner of over two hundred acres of land in Chester county, comprising "Moore Hall," the historic Colonial residence of the Moore family, where he now resides.

Mr. Pennypacker married, April 17, 1883, Clara, daughter of Joshua and Sarah Elizabeth (Jenkins) Kames, born in Philadelphia, September 30, 1855. They have one son, Joseph Rusling Whitaker Pennypacker, born in Philadelphia, November 10, 1887, who is now a student at Wenonah Military Academy, Wenonah, New Jersey.

ISAAC RUSLING PENNYPACKER, third son of Dr. Isaac Anderson and Anna Maria (Whitaker) Pennypacker, born at Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, December 11, 1852, was educated at Bond's School, Phoenixville, and "The Hill" School, Pottstown. He was one of the proprietors and editor of the Wilmington (Delaware) Morning News from 1880 to 1883; on the editorial staff of the Philadelphia Press and Philadelphia Inquirer, 1883 to 1899; author of "Gettysburg and Other Poems," several of which were included in Stedman's "Library of American Literature," Longfellow's "Poems of Places" and other Anthologies. The poem "Gettysburg" was read at the dedication of the Pennsylvania monuments erected upon the battlefield. George Morgan, writing in the "Book News" for July, 1904, of the poetry relating to the battlefield said, after referring to poems of Bayard Taylor, Whittier, J. W. DeForrest, Bret Harte, and Will H. Thompson, "Something nobler and greater than these is Isaac R. Pennypacker's 'Gettysburg.' Edmund Clarence Stedman, who was generous enough to place it higher than his own Gettysburg effort, designates it as a noble free-hand epic."

Mr. Pennypacker wrote the article "Philadelphia" in "Johnson's Cyclopaedia," and for Appleton's well-known "Great Commanders Series," the "Life of General Meade," an authentic narrative of the movement of the Army of the Potomac. He has been for some years a contributor of reviews to the Chicago Dial and the New York Nation.

Since 1898 Mr. Pennypacker has resided at Haddonfield, New Jersey. He was elected a member of the town council there in 1902; was Chairman of the Street, Lighting, and Water Committees, and originated the movement which resulted in extending the town limits. Nathaniel Ramsay, of the Maryland Line, who was conspicuous for his bravery at the battles of Long Island, Brandywine, and Germantown, and whose regiment with that of Col. Stewart, checked the British pursuit at Monmouth, until Washington could rally the retreating American troops. Col. Ramsay was a member of the "Old" Congress. A street in Baltimore is named for him, and his is the central figure of one of the bronze groups on the Monmouth battle-field monument. Col. Ramsay's portrait and that of his brother, Dr. David Ramsay, the eminent historian, of Charleston, South Carolina, both painted by Charles Willson Peale, hang in Independence Hall. Dr. David Ramsay was elected President of the Continental Congress. Col. Ramsay's wife, the great-grandmother of Mrs. Pennypacker, was Charlotte, daughter of Col. Aquilla Hall, by his wife, Sophia White, (sister to Bishop William White, first Bishop of Protestant Episcopal Church in Pennsylvania) and great-granddaughter of Capt. John Hall, of the long established Hall family of Harford county, Maryland, members of which intermarried with the Heaths, Keys, Pacas, Howards, McHenry's, and other leading families of Maryland. Among the descendants of Hendrick Pannebacker, who have rendered distinguished service to their native state of Pennsylvania, other than those in direct line of descent of the branch of the family treated of in this sketch, are Major General Galusha Pennypacker, of Philadelphia, and Hon. Elijah F. Pennypacker, many years Canal Commissioner of Pennsylvania, when that office was a very important one, for the reason that most of these artificial waterways were owned by the Commonwealth; sketches of both of whom follow.

MAJOR GENERAL GALUSHA PENNYPACKER, of Philadelphia, another distinguished descendant of Hendrick Pannebecker, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, June 1, 1844, only child of Joseph J. and Tamson Amelia (Workiser) Pennypacker, and great-grandson of Matthias and Mary (Kuster) Pennypacker, before mentioned. He was educated at the Classical Institute at Phoenixville, Pennsylvania.

Entering the Union Army as a non-commissioned staff officer in April, 1861, in the Ninth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, he served his term of three months enlistment with Gen. Robert Patterson in the Shenandoah Campaign. On August 22, 1861, he re-entered the army as Captain of Company A, Ninety-seventh Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was promoted to Major, October 7, 1861; serving in the Tenth Corps, Department of the South, during 1862 and 1863. Was in the engagements at Forts Wagner and Gregg, James Island, Siege of Charleston, capture of Fort Pulaski, and of Fernandina and Jacksonville, Florida. He joined the Army of the James, in Virginia, in April, 1864, and was promoted Lieutenant-Colonel of his regiment, April 3, 1864, and Colonel, June 23, 1864, commanding at Swift Creek, May 9, at Drury's Bluff, May 16, Chester Station, May 18, and Green Plains, May 20, 1864. He was in numerous battles, and was assigned to the command of the Second Brigade, Second Division, Tenth Corps, September, 1864; was in the successful assault on Fort Fisher, North Carolina, January 15, 1865, and received the Congressional Medal of Honor for bravery in battle, and a brevet as Brigadier-General United States Volunteers, January 15, 1865.

He was promoted to Brigadier-General of United States Volunteers, February 18, 1865, and was made Major-General United States Veterans by brevet, March 13, 1865. He was several times severely wounded and was the youngest general officer in the War of the Rebellion. After the War he entered the regular service and was commissioned Colonel of the Thirty-fourth Regiment Infantry, United States Army, July 28, 1866, his regiment afterwards changed to the Sixteenth Infantry, United States Army. He served as commander of different posts and was a department commander at various times until his retirement on account of wounds in 1883. He became Brevet Brigadier-General of the United States Army, March 2, 1867, and Brevet Major-General on the same date, and was commissioned Brigadier-General, United States Army, retired, April 23, 1904. Is a member of Society of Cincinnati, Loyal Legion, Historical Society, of Pennsylvania, etc., and resides at 300 South Tenth street, Philadelphia. He is unmarried.

Hon. ELIJAH F. PENNYPACKER, son of Joseph and Elizabeth (Funk) Pennypacker, and great-great-grandson of Hendrick Pannebecker, "Dutch Patroon," was born in Schuylkill township, Chester county, November 29, 1804, died January 4, 1888. He completed his education at John Gummere's Boarding School, Burlington, New Jersey, after which he taught in a private school in Philadelphia, and later in the neighborhood of his nativity, being engaged there in teaching, surveying and farming for several years. He was elected to the State Legislature for the terms of 1831-2, 1832-3, 1834-5, 1835-6. He presented in the Lower House the bill by which the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company was incorporated, and had charge of it as Chairman of the committee to which it was referred, until signed by the Governor. His correspondence shows the interest he manifested in the establishment of the public school system, he being associated with Thaddeus Stevens in its adoption. He was also active in the establishment of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and was chairman of the Committee on Banks and Banking.

In 1836 he was made Secretary of the Board of Canal Commissioners, and served in that capacity until he was made a member of the Board, in 1838, Thaddeus Stevens and John Dickey being his associates. From the fact the greater part of the general improvements in the canal system of the State were owned by the Commonwealth and controlled through this board of commissioners, made it the most responsible political position in the State with the exception of the governorship.

All the public positions held by Mr. Pennypacker were voluntary offerings, the gift of the people who acknowledged his intelligence, sincerity and marked probity in the transaction of public business. Other and more flattering prospects of political preferment were relinquished, and he retired from public life in 1839, being unwilling to hold office under a government that sanctioned human slavery. Soon after his retirement, he united himself with the Society of Friends, but he was much too radical to be an acceptable addition in this conservative body, and it was only when the anti-slavery feeling became generally diffused throughout the Society, several years later, that he found the unity with his views therein he had expected on becoming a member. In the great struggle between freedom and slavery he entered heart and soul. In the local anti-slavery society of his neighborhood he was for many years chosen president, and he filled the same position in the Chester County and the Pennsylvania State Anti-Slavery societies. His home became a station on the Underground Railroad, three lines from the South meeting at that point, and hundreds of fugitives found there rest and help on their way to Canada and freedom. After the slave system became a thing of the past, Mr. Pennypacker spoke of the unique organization known as the "Underground Railroad," as follows, "The stock was never reported in money circles, nor dividends declared, but means were ready as long as necessity required. The Emancipation Proclamation of Abraham Lincoln dissolved the corporation."

Elijah F. Pennypacker married (first) in 1831, Sarah W. Coates, of the Quaker family of that name who settled in Chester county in 1731. She died childless in 1841, and in 1843 he married (second) Hannah, daughter of Charles and Mary (Corson) Adamson, descended from John Adamson, an English Quaker, who came to Pennsylvania in the latter part of the seventeenth century. Her mother, Mary Corson, was daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Dickinson) Corson, whose ancestor, Cornelius Corssen, said to have been a French Huguenot refugee, landed at Staten Island, about 1685.

Of the nine children of Elijah F. and Hannah (Adamson) Pennypacker three: Gertrude, Charles and Mary, died in childhood, and a son Elijah J. died in 1895 at the age of thirty-five years. Five are still living: Sarah C., Caroline B., Elizabeth, Margaret and Sumner.

ISAAC SAMUELS PENNYPACKER, United States Senator from Virginia, Congressman, and Judge of the United States District Court, was another great-great-grandson of Hendrick Pannebecker. His grandfather, Dirck Pennypacker, son of John and Annetje (Keyser) Pannebecker, and grandson of Hendrick Pannebecker, removed from the Perkiomen region of Pennsylvania to Sharpsburg, Maryland, established an iron working establishment there, which in the spring of 1781 was almost entirely swept away by a freshet. Instead of rebuilding at that site he removed with his family over the mountains to Woodstock, Shenandoah county, Virginia. He first erected Redwill Furnace on Hawkesbill creek in what is now Page county, and later erected another furnace a few miles below New Market, now called Pine Forge, Frederick county, West Virginia. He was a pioneer iron master in that region, and the business established by him was continued by his son Benjamin, and grandsons, George M. and Joel Pennypacker, sons of the latter, and brothers to the jurist and statesman, Isaac S. Pennypacker. Benjamin, father of the senator, in 1810 built for his home the spacious "White House," still standing at Pine Forge. His sons, George M. and Joel, bought large tracts of mountain land in Western Shenandoah county and in Rockingham county; built Liberty Furnace, a few miles from Woodstock, which for many years supplied Pine Forge with iron; they also built a furnace at Brock's Gap in Rockingham county, but the ore there proving practically worthless it was later abandoned.

Hon. Isaac Samuels Pennypacker, son of Benjamin, above mentioned, was born in Shenandoah county, Virginia, September 12, 1807, died while serving as United States Senator, at Washington, D. C., January 12, 1847. He was educated at Washington College, Virginia, and on his graduation entered himself as a student-at-law in the office of St. George Tucker, in Winchester, Virginia, with his cousin, Green B. Samuels, whose mother was his father's sister, who by the way was another prominent descendant of the Pennypacker clan, filling with great distinction the office of Judge of the Court of Appeals for many years. Isaac S. Pennypacker also attended Winchester Law School, and on his admission to the bar, located at Harrisonburg, and there attained eminence in his profession. In 1836 he was elected to Congress on the Democratic ticket and served one term; declining re-election to accept the position of United States District Judge, to which he was elevated in 1839, and filled until 1845, when he was elected to the United States Senate, but died before the expiration of his term. He was offered by President Van Buren the office of Attorney-General in his cabinet, but he declined, as he did the proffer of the position of Justice of the Supreme Court of Virginia, and the nomination of his party for Governor of the State, when his election was an assured result. He was one of the organizers and first regents of the Smithsonian Institution, at Washington, D. C., and was one of the most popular and influential men of his day in Virginia.

ROBERT LLOYD, born in Merionethshire, Wales, 1669, came to the Welsh Tract in Philadelphia and Chester counties when a youth, and resided for a time with Robert Owen, in Merion township, Philadelphia county, little being known of him prior to his marriage and purchase of a home, 1698. He was either accompanied or followed to America by a brother Thomas Lloyd, who married, 1698, Elizabeth, daughter of William ap Edward, and settled in Haverford. His eldest son Thomas removed to Bucks county and is ancestor of the Lloyds of Warminster and Moreland.

Robert Lloyd purchased September 5, 1698, 409 acres northward of Rowland Ellis's plantation of "Bryn Mawr" on the "Old Gulf Road" one-half mile from Gladwyne P. O. in Lower Merion Township, and lived thereon until his death. He took a very prominent part in township affairs and was a consistent member of the Society of Friends. In the deed dated April 1, 1682, Rees is named as "Rees John Williams, of Llanlynin," the home of his father. RICHARD LLOYD, youngest child of Robert and Lowry (Jones) Lloyd, married at Darby Meeting, November 24, 1736, Hannah Sellers, born February 10, 1717, daughter of Samuel Sellers Jr., of Darby, by his wife Sarah Smith, both ministers of Society of Friends.

Samuel Sellers Jr. was born in Darby township, May 12, 1690, and was the eldest son of Samuel Sellers, who came from Belper, Derbyshire, England, and settled in Darby, 1682. He belonged to an old and well connected family of Derbyshire and was the son of Thomas and Elizabeth Sellers of Belper, the record of the baptism of whose six children, appears on the parish register of Duffield church in Derbyshire as follows:

Jno. bap. 20 Aug. 1648; bur. 28 Apr. 1664;

Elizabeth, bap. 13 Jan. 1649;

Mary, bap. 7 Sept. 1651;

George, bap. 13 Feb. 1652;

Samuel, bap. 3 Feb. 1655;

Sarah, bap. 20 June 1663.

George Sellers, eldest surviving son, and Samuel, the youngest son, came together to Darby, but George died without issue, 1686, and his estate including fifty acres of land, reverted to his surviving brother. Samuel Sellers erected a home at Darby, which constituted the kitchen part of the later "Sellers Hall," the home of several generations of the family. He was one of the original members of Darby Meeting, and the record of the declarations of his intentions of marriage to Anna Gibbons, on "5mo. 2, 1684" was the first entry on the minutes of that Meeting. Anna Gibbons was the daughter of Henry and Eleanor Gibbons, and her name appears in the certificate that her parents brought from Parwich, Derbyshire, 1682.

Samuel Sellers Sr. was a weaver by trade and carried on that business at Darby. He purchased 175 acres on Cobb's Creek, and lived thereon until his death November 22, 1732. His wife survived him and died January 19, 1742. They were the parents of six children, of whom four lived to maturity, three daughters, Sarah, who married John Ashmead; Mary, who married (first) William Marshall, (second) Isaac Vernon; and Anna, who married a Pritchard; and one son, Samuel Sellers Jr. above mentioned, who succeeded his father in the weaving business, which he greatly improved by the introduction of devices of his own invention, and laid the foundation of the important industry conducted for several generations of his family on a much larger and improved scale, his son John introducing also the industry of weaving wire. Samuel Sellers Jr. married at Darby Meeting October 28, 1712, Sarah, born at Darby, May 30, 1689, daughter of John Smith of Croxton, Leicestershire, England, by his wife Eleanor Dolby, of Harborough, the same county, whom he married May 4, 1669, and with her came to Darby in 1684, where both were ministers of the Society of Friends. Eleanor died September 10, 1708, and her husband, January 12, 1714.

Samuel Sellers, Jr., died June 3, 1773, and his widow, Sarah (Smith) Sellers, May 24, 1778. They were parents of seven children, four sons, three of whom lived to maturity, and three daughters. The youngest son John Sellers, who inherited Sellers Hall, with the mill property on Cobb's Creek, later known as "Millbourne Mills," was very prominent in local, Provincial and State affairs; member of Assembly under both Province and State, and later a member of State Senate from Delaware county. He filled many positions of honor and trust, as did his sons and grandsons. Hannah Sellers, who became the wife of Richard Lloyd, was the second child and eldest daughter of Samuel, Jr., and Sarah (Smith) Sellers, and was born in Darby, February 10, 1717. She survived her husband, Richard Lloyd, and married (second) November 30, 1757, Lewis Davis, of Haverford, and died April 12, 1819, over ninety-three years of age.

Richard Lloyd left Lower Merion 1742, and removed to Darby township, where he had purchased the Darby Water, Corn Grist and Boulting Mills, of Joseph Bonsal, and which he continued to operate until his death, August 9, 1755. He had been in very delicate health for several years prior to his death.

Issue of Richard and Hannah (Sellers) Lloyd:

Samuel, d. inf.;

ISAAC, b. Dec. 27, 1739; d. of yellow fever in Phila., Aug. 10, 1798; m. Ann Gibbons; of whom presently;

ISAAC LLOYD, eldest surviving son of Richard and Hannah (Sellers) Lloyd, was born at the old homestead in Lower Merion, December 27, 1739, and was therefore but a little over two years of age, when his parents brought him to their new home at Darby, where he spent the greater part of his life. He was in his sixteenth year at the death of his father, and having learned the milling business in his father's Darby Mills, purchased the interest of his brother Hugh therein, in 1766, and continued to operate them some years, removing later to Philadelphia, where he died August 10, 1798.

Isaac Lloyd married, October 23, 1765, Ann Gibbons, born in Westtown, Chester county, April 21, 1744, daughter of Joseph Gibbons, of Westtown, born October 24, 1712, one of the most prominent men of Chester county, and member of Colonial Assembly, 1748-63; by his wife Hannah, born November 7, 1715, daughter of Abraham Marshall, who was born in Gratton, Derbyshire, about 1669, came to Pennsylvania, in 1700, and settled first near Darby, and after his marriage settled in West Bradford township, on Brandywine Creek. He was convinced of the principles of Friends when a lad, and entered the ministry, before coming to Pennsylvania with a certificate from Monyash Meeting dated gmo. 2, 1700. He travelled extensively in the ministry "into ye Jerseys and Southern Provinces, where his Service in ye Ministry was acceptable."

Abraham Marshall married March 16, 1702-3, Mary Hunt, daughter of James Hunt, of Kingsessing, Philadelphia, who had come from Kent, England, 1684, by his first wife Eliza Chambers. Abraham and Mary (Hunt) Marshall were parents of nine children, of whom Hannah, wife of Joseph Gibbons, was fifth. The eighth was Humphrey Marshall, the eminent botanist.

John and Margery Gibbons, grandparents of Joseph Gibbons, above mentioned, came from Warminster, Wiltshire, England, and settled in Bethel township, Chester county, 1681. They were among the best educated members of the Society of Friends in Chester county, and were persons of wealth, refinement and culture. Margery was ten years a minister among Friends, but becoming a supporter of George Keith in his schism of 1692, was disowned. John Gibbons was one of the jury empanelled to try Margaret Mattson for witchcraft before William Penn and his council, 1682-3. Both John and Margery died on their Bethel plantation about 1721.

James Gibbons, son of John and Margery and father of Joseph first above mentioned, married, 1708, Ann, daughter of George Peirce, of Thornbury, who had come from the parish of Winscome, county of Somerset, England, 1684, by his wife Ann Gainor, of Thornbury, county of Gloucester, England, whom he had married February 1, 1679. George Peirce was a large land owner in Chester county and one of its most prominent citizens; was a member of Colonial Assembly, 1706.

James Gibbons received by deed of gift from his father a plantation of 600 acres in Westtown and settled thereon on his marriage. He became, like all his family, prominent in the affairs of his county and Province and represented Chester county in the Provincial Assembly for the years 1717-18-19. He died 1732. His widow, Ann, who was a minister among Friends, married William Pym, of East Caln, and died there, 1753.

Isaac Lloyd, died August 10, 1798, in Philadelphia of yellow fever; his widow, Ann (Gibbons) Lloyd, surviving him over thirty years, dying January 26, 1831, at the age of eighty-seven years.

HUGH LLOYD, youngest son of Richard and Hannah (Sellers) Lloyd, of Darby, was born in Lower Merion, January 22, 1741-2, and was about a year old when his parents removed to Darby, where his early years were spent. In 1752, when but eleven years old, he went with his father to New York; the latter being in ill health was recommended the trip by his physicians. His father dying, 1755, he continued with his brother Isaac to operate the Darby Mills until 1766, when he sold his interest to Isaac.

Hugh Lloyd married at Darby Meeting House, June 4, 1767, Susannah Pearson, born in Darby, September 22, 1746. She was a daughter of Thomas Pearson by his wife Hannah Blunston, daughter of John Blunston, one of the earliest settlers in Darby and a prominent member of Assembly; and a granddaughter of Thomas and Susannah (Burbeck) Pearson, who also came from Darby. John Blunston had purchased 1500 acres of William Penn prior to coming to America and he became a member of Council and was a prominent man in the community, a member of Provincial Council and Speaker of Colonial Assembly, 1698.

About 1768, we find Hugh Lloyd operating a mill on Crum Creek in Ridley township. This was the place now known as Lapidea. Here he carried on the milling business as best he could during the disturbed condition of the country. A letter of his dated November 8, 1776, offering to sell bran and shorts to Thomas Wharton, Jr., President of Supreme Executive Council, State of Pennsylvania, no doubt for use by the American Army, is now in the possession of John Coats Browne, of Philadelphia, whose grandmother, Hannah Browne, was a daughter of Hugh Lloyd. When the British were in the neighborhood of Philadelphia, Hugh Lloyd secreted the mill stones so that they could not fall into their possession. In a letter dated October 31, 1777, from Gen. Washington to Gen. Potter, requiring the mill stones to be taken from several mills to prevent the British from using the same, he particularly mentions Lloyd's, about two miles on this side of Chester.

We now come to his services in the Revolution. While carrying on the milling business in Ridley, the troubles in the mother country coming on, Hugh Lloyd enlisted his sympathies with the Colonists and entered actively into their proceedings. By the passage of the Boston Port Bill, the people became aroused to the necessity of adopting active means of defence of their liberties. From meetings held in Philadelphia, circulars were sent to the people of the various counties of the Province. As a result of this a meeting of citizens of Chester county was held at Chester, July 13, 1774, at which Hugh Lloyd was one of a committee of thirteen appointed for this county to consider the matter, and, July 15, he, with his associates met similar committees from the other counties of Philadelphia, in whose action the Continental Congress, which met in the same city, September 5 following, had its origin.

He was one of the committee of which Anthony Wayne was chairman, appointed at the County Convention, December 20, 1774, "to carry into execution the association of the late Continental Congress," also one of the twelve members selected from this committee to attend the Provincial Convention which assembled at Philadelphia January 23, 1775, and one of the number present. At a meeting of the county committee, March 20, 1775, he was one of the seven members ordered "to assay a draught of a petition to present to the General Assembly of this Province with regard to the manumission of slaves, etc." At their meeting held October 23, 1775, he was one of seven members appointed as a committee to correspond for this county. In this year he was appointed Colonel of the Third Battalion of Chester County Associators, his command being frequently called into service in that and following years.

Just previous to the Independence, he was one of the thirteen delegates from this county to the Provincial Conference held in Carpenter's Hall, Philadelphia, June 18, 1776, which meeting resolved: "that a Convention should be called for the purpose of forming a new Government for this Province on the authority of the people above."

Strange as it now seems, he was one of the Judges of election in the Borough of Chester, July 8, when delegates to that Convention, he being a candidate, were voted for. On June 25, the meeting adjourned after each delegate had signed a declaration which stated their willingness to concur in a vote of the Congress declaring the United Colonies free and independent states.

About this time we find him living in Darby township on the Great Road, near the Blue Bell Inn. Of this house in which Hugh Lloyd lived until 1816, Townsend Ward in the Pennsylvania Magazine, for 1879, speaks as follows: "On the south side of the Kakarikonk or Cobb's Creek we are now in Delaware County, and to the East of the Darby Road (formerly called the Great Road) is the picturesque manion house of the Smiths of Tinicum, bought by them of the Lloyds in 1816. An ancient house, a part of it dating from 1785, embowered among aged trees, no destroying hand has yet touched the antique double doors, now so rarely seen, and which in this place yet retains, what perhaps can nowhere else be seen, variable 'bulls eyes.' There are round pieces of glass, very thick in the middle, and inserted two of them in the upper part of the door to afford some light in the hall. The northern door, the eastern door and the inside door opening into the dining room each contains two of these now almost unknown adornments. A wooden lock yet in good serviceable condition is in use on one of the doors of this house. While living here his family having a large circle of acquaintances, were accustomed to entertain very hospitably." This old house, most unfortunately, was burned down within a few years.

After peace was declared, Hugh Lloyd pursued the even tenor of his ways, but when Delaware county was erected, 1789, he was a representative in General Assembly, and was re-elected to the same office, 1791. On April 24, 1792, Gov. Mifflin commissioned him one of the Associate Judges of the Courts of Delaware county, and he continued on the bench a third of a century, serving faithfully, until, finding the weight of years pressing upon him, he tendered his resignation to Gov. Schultz.

In the spring of 1816 he moved to Darby with his family. His wife dying 1825, the following year he went to live with his daughter Hannah Browne, of Kensington. Here he lived until his death caused by paralysis, March 20, 1832, at the advanced age of ninety-one years. He was buried from the house of his son, Charles Lloyd, opposite the Blue Bell Inn, Kingsessing or Paschallville.

Since the removal of Richard Lloyd and his wife from Merion, 1742, the Lloyd family have always taken an active interest in all movements in Darby. In 1743, the Darby Library was organized, the same year in which was founded the American Philosophical Society. Richard Lloyd Hugh's father, and Thomas Pearson, whose daughter Susannah afterwards became Hugh's wife, were two of the twenty-nine founders. This Library claims distinction on account of its foundation at such an early date, amidst great difficulties, when the population was small, money scarce and nearly everyone poor. When we remember that it was thirty-three years before we were a nation and that Washington, "the Father of his Country," was but eleven years old, it is remarkable that so many were found willing to pay down their twenty shillings and devote some of their time to the formation of a library. The first purchase of books was made through the kind offices of John Bartram, whom Linnaeus called the "greatest natural botanist of the world," and his friend Peter Collinson, of London, another eminent botanist, and consisted of forty-three volumes, thirty-nine of which are still on the shelves of the library. This library has been perpetuated until this time without the omission on the part of its managers of a single stated meeting, and the interest of the Lloyd family has continued to the present time; the original share allotted to Richard Lloyd being now in possession of a lineal descendant, Charles Lloyd Serrill, of Darby, great-great-grandson of Hugh Lloyd.

Hugh Lloyd himself always took an active part in the Library Company, being at one time its secretary, and, 1795, one of a committee to ascertain and report upon the feasibility of procuring a lot and erecting a suitable building, but the project was then abandoned on account of the insufficiency of funds. But in 1872, a lot was bought and a building erected at a cost of over $10,000. Of the building committee of seven members, two were Paschall and Charles Lloyd, grandsons of Hugh Lloyd, and one a great-grandson, J. Charles Andrews, the latter being untiring in his efforts in behalf of its welfare.

One of the founders of the Philadelphia Library, of which Benjamin Franklin was a member, was Rees Lloyd, an educated and literary man, a brother of Richard Lloyd, father of Hugh.

Hugh Lloyd was also a member of the Library Company of Chester founded 1769. In 1770, we find him one of a committee instructed to buy books "with what money is in bank." Hugh Lloyd was also a member of the Darby Fire Company, founded 1775, being twice its secretary, once in 1793, again in 1816, and in 1817 was elected its permanent President.

CHARLES LLOYD, fifth son of Hugh and Susannah (Pearson) Lloyd, was born in Chester, now Delaware county, June 29, 1776, while the bells were calling together the delegates to the Provincial conference at Philadelphia at which his father, Col. Hugh Lloyd, was a delegate from Chester county. As this convention, before its final adjournment, decided to declare the independence of the Colonies, it was likewise the natal day of the Republic. Charles Lloyd was reared in Ridley township, Delaware county, and resided there until after his marriage at Darby Meeting, March 8, 1798, to Frances Paschall, when they took up their residence at Paschallville, Philadelphia county, and spent the remainder of their lives there.

Frances Paschall, wife of Charles Lloyd, was born February 24, 1771, a daughter of Dr. Henry Paschall, of Paschallville, by his wife Ann Garret, born November 24, 1752, died December 1, 1820, daughter of Nathan and Ann (Knowles) Garret, of Darby, granddaughter of Samuel and Jane (Pennell) Garrett, and great-granddaughter of William and Ann (Kirke) Garratt, of Harby, county Leicester, England, who came to Pennsylvania and settled in Upper Darby, Chester county, bringing certificate from Friends at Harby dated July 20, 1684. William was a son of John and Mary Garrat, and was born in Leicestershire, August 21, 1643.

Dr. Henry Paschall, father of Frances (Paschall) Lloyd, was a great-grandson of Thomas Paschall, of Bristol, England, who purchased land of William Penn by lease and release bearing date respectively, September 26 and 27, 1681, and with wife Joane (Sloper) Paschall and their three children, Thomas, William and Mary, arrived in Philadelphia in February following, and settled in Philadelphia county, where Thomas died September 15, 1718, aged eighty-three years and four months, his wife having died September 2, 1707, aged seventy-two years and nine months.

Thomas Paschall, Jr., of Philadelphia county, born in England, married at Haverford Meeting of Friends, Margaret, eldest child of William and Elizabeth (Griffith) Jenkins, who had come from Tenby, Pembrokeshire, Wales (where Margaret was born May 23, 1674), about 1682, and settled first at Haverford, and later at Abington, Philadelphia county. Thomas Paschall, Jr., died about 1743, and his wife Margaret in 1736. They were the parents of eleven children, of whom the seventh, Dr. John Paschall, father of Dr. Henry Paschall before mentioned, was born November 5, 1706, and died 1779. He married, April 25, 1728, Frances, born June 15, 1710, died January 29, 1781, daughter of Henry and Hannah (Knight) Hodge, and granddaughter of Christopher Knight who came from the Island of Antigua. Dr. Paschall settled in Darby township, where he owned considerable real estate and was a successful practicing physician, as was also his son Dr. Henry Paschall, the youngest child, born in Darby, October 28, 1746; he died at Paschallville, May 13, 1835. He practiced medicine in Wilmington, Delaware, from his marriage, 1770, until 1790, when he returned to Philadelphia county. He married (second) Catharine Lincoln, and was father of thirteen children, eleven by his first wife, Ann Garrett before mentioned, and two by the second marriage; Frances (Paschall) Lloyd being the eldest child of Ann Garrett. Charles Lloyd died at Paschallville, Philadelphia, January 26, 1860. His wife Frances (Paschall) Lloyd had died there August 27, 1837.

Issue of Charles and Frances (Paschall) Lloyd:

WILLIAM SUPPLEE LLOYD, eldest son of William Jones and Anna E. (Custer) Lloyd, born at La Crosse, Wisconsin, February 12, 1860, is a manufacturer of knit goods in Philadelphia. He married, April 27, 1893, Ida (Croskey), widow of Thomas Jones Mustin, and daughter of Henry Croskey, by his wife Anne, daughter of Matthew and Anne (Robinson) Dunnaheew; and granddaughter of George Duncan Croskey and his wife Eliza Ashmead, of the prominent Philadelphia family of Ashmead.

JOHN ASHMEAD, founder of the Ashmead family in Pennsylvania, was born in Cheltenham, county of Gloucester, England, October 14, 1648, and married there, October 14, 1677, Mary, daughter of William Conner, of Cheltenham. Having, in connection with his brother-in-law Toby Leech, purchased a large tract of land of William Penn, both he and Leech and their respective families came to Pennsylvania, 1682. The land was laid out in what became Cheltenham township, Philadelphia, now Montgomery county, named for the English home of the Ashmeads, and there John Ashmead took up his residence. He died there December 21, 1688.

as the result of an accident, and his wife Mary, survived the shock of his death but one day.

JOHN ASHMEAD (2), son of John and Mary (Currier) Ashmead, was born in Cheltenham, England, July 12, 1679, and accompanied his parents to Pennsylvania at the age of three years. He married at Darby Friends' Meeting, October 12, 1703, Sarah, born at Darby, July 13, 1685, daughter of Samuel and Ann (Gibbons) Sellers, from Derbyshire, founders of the well-known and prominent family of Sellers of Darby Mills, an account of which is given elsewhere in these volumes. John Ashmead (2) died at Germantown, Philadelphia, October 7, 1742.

JOHN ASHMEAD (3), son of John and Sarah (Sellers) Ashmead, born in Germantown May 12, 1706, married, August 27, 1734, Ann, born October 25, 1716, daughter of James Rush, great-granddaughter of Capt. John Rush, an officer of Cromwell's army, and sister to the father of the celebrated Dr. Benjamin Rush, the distinguished Revolutionary surgeon and statesman, and a signer of the Declaration of Independence. This John Ashmead died at Germantown July 30, 1750, and his widow, Ann (Rush) Ashmead, died July 16, 1760.

CAPT. JOHN ASHMEAD, son of John and Ann (Rush) Ashmead, born in Germantown, Philadelphia, September 29, 1738, became identified with the sea-going trade from the port of his native city at an early age, and before attaining his majority went as super-cargo of a merchant vessel to St. Croix, West Indies, and from that time followed the sea until incapacitated for its hardships by old age. He became a captain before the breaking out of the Revolution, during that struggle, was Captain of the brigs "Mars" and "Eagle" of Pennsylvania, and was also appointed naval constructor by the Continental Congress, 1776. He was a skillful and daring mariner and a tactful disciplinarian, and became famous as a naval commander. After the close of the Revolutionary War, he was captain of the "India" and other famous Indian merchantmen, and made many voyages to European and Asiatic ports. During the last years of his life he was senior warden of the port of Philadelphia. He died in Philadelphia June 6, 1818, having lived and served his country through two Colonial Wars, and through both wars for independence.

Capt. John Ashmead married, 1760, Mary, born 1743, died May 18, 1814, daughter of Benjamin Mifflin, and niece of Gen. and Gov. Thomas Mifflin. In the commonplace book of his first cousin Dr. Benjamin Rush, it is stated that in 1800, Capt. Ashmead stated to his cousin that over thirty of the forty years of his married life had been spent upon the sea, some of his trips consuming seven and eight months. In this book is also found Capt. Ashmead's epitaph, written by himself many years before his death, which, as revised shortly before his death, is as follows:

"In Life's hard bustle on the troubled seas,
Thro' many storms and many a prosperous breeze,
Thro' winter's blasts and summer's sultry sun,
From frigid to the torrid zone I've run,
In ninety voyages thro' unnumbered toils,
I've sailed above five hundred thousand miles,
Being taken, foundered, and oft cast away,
Yet weathered all,—in this close port to lay,
Where a dead calm my weary bark doth find,
Obliged to anchor for the want of wind."

A later revision cut off the last two lines, and added in their place:

“Where undisturbed my dust it shall remain,
Till the last trump calls up all hands again.
And what new perils I may then go through
No human reason ever yet could show,
But the same power which led through earth and sea,
Will doubtless lead me through eternity.”

Through his son William Ashmead, who married Margaret McKinley, Capt. John Ashmead was grandfather of John W. Ashmead, one of the most distinguished lawyers of the Philadelphia and New York Bars. Through his son John Ashmead (5) and grandson John Ashmead (6), who married Ann Lehman, he was great-grandfather of Sophie Ashmead, who married Ellis Bartlett, of an old New England family, and after his death took her two sons, Ellis and William Ashmead-Bartlett, to England, where the elder married the Baroness Nudett-Couts.

ELIZA ASHMEAD, daughter of Capt. and Mary (Mifflin) Ashmead, born in Philadelphia, 1788, married, December 14, George Duncan Croskey, born in England December 14, 1778, died in Philadelphia, August 18, 1829. She died in Philadelphia, April 26, 1852.

HENRY CROSKEY, son of George Duncan and Eliza (Ashmead) Croskey, born in Philadelphia, November 15, 1815, was a prominent merchant of that city, and died there October 1, 1899. He married, August 25, 1837, Anne Dunnaheew, daughter of Matthew Dunnaheew, of Philadelphia, and his wife Anne Robinson, of the Robinson family of Virginia, prominent in the War of the Revolution in that section. Her brother John Robinson Dunnaheew served in Mexican and Civil Wars. Mrs. Croskey was born August 7, 1819, and died January 11, 1892.

IDA CROSKEY, daughter of Henry and Anne (Dunnaheew) Croskey, born May 23, 1854, married, January 29, 1873, Thomas Jones Mustin, and had two sons, Henry Croskey Mustin of U. S. N., and John Barton Mustin.

Mrs. Mustin married (second) April 27, 1893, William Supplee Lloyd.

CHEW FAMILY.

JOHN CHEW, whose descendants became prominently identified with the affairs of Philadelphia and the Province of Pennsylvania, was an early settler of Jamestown, Virginia. He came over in the ship, "Charitie," with three servants, and was followed by his wife Sarah, in the "Sea Flower." He probably settled at James City, when it was made the seat of government in 1621, as he was already there and occupying a house, in 1624, when a deed was granted for "One Rood and Nine Perches of Land lying about said Chew's House."

John Chew subsequently became a member of House of Assembly, but the meagre records of that early date give us no account of his family, though he was certainly the father of at least one son, viz:

SAMUEL CHEW, who removed to the Province of Maryland prior to 1648. There was probably other children, as a son of Larkin Chew, and a near relative of Samuel, married a great-grandaunt of President James Madison, and was ancestor of President Zachary Taylor.

Samuel Chew became Judge of High Court of Chancery, Province of Maryland, and for seven years prior to his death, which occurred May 15, 1676, was member of Upper House of Provincial Legislature, and in May, 1676, is referred to as "Colonel Samuel Chew, Chancellor and Secretary." His will mentions a brother, Joseph, to whom he devises a "Gold Seale Ring." He married Anne, daughter and only child of William Ayres, and was the father of seven sons and two daughters.

BENJAMIN CHEW, fifth son of Samuel and Anne (Ayres) Chew, born April 13, 1671, died in Maryland, March 3, 1699-1700. He married, December 8, 1692, Elizabeth Benson, by whom he had one son Samuel, of whom presently, and three daughters; Elizabeth, Ann and Mary.

SAMUEL CHEW, only son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Benson) Chew, born in Maryland, October 30, 1693, resided at an estate called "Maidstone," near Annapolis, and was a physician. He removed to Kent county, on the Delaware, now state of Delaware, probably several years prior to 1741, as in that year Gov. Thomas in a letter to John Penn, requesting that Dr. Chew be made Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the three Lower Counties, says, "Dr. Chew has been long settled in Kent County, as Prothonotary, and he and a new sett of Magistrates, have done good service." Although a convert to principles of Friends, and member of the Society until his death, unlike his contemporary Quakers in the Province of Pennsylvania, proper, he had no scruples against "lawful war," and gave the governor all the assistance in his power toward fitting out troops for the defense of the frontier and coast. In his charge to the Grand Jury at New Castle, on assuming the duties of Chief Justice in 1741, he set forth clearly that it was the duty of every citizen to give substance and even life itself, if need be, in support of the government. His charge was printed in the Philadelphia papers and caused considerable excitement amongst the Quakers of that city.

Samuel Chew resided in Dover, Delaware, where his ancient residence is still standing, and owned a plantation three miles distant. He died at Dover, June 16, 1742, and was succeeded as Chief Justice by John Curtis. He married (first) October 22, 1715, Mary, daughter of Samuel and Anne Galloway, of Maryland, and aunt to Joseph Galloway, later a distinguished attorney of the Philadelphia and Bucks county courts. She died May 26, 1734, and he married (second) September 18, 1736, Mary (Paca) Galloway, widow of his first wife's brother, Richard Galloway, Esq., of Cumberstone, Maryland, and daughter of Aquilla Paca. By first marriage he was father of nine children, and by second of five children, all of the latter dying without issue. Samuel Chew, eldest son of second wife, was Attorney-General of Province of Maryland, and was Third Justice of Supreme Court of Lower Counties from October 23, 1773, to the Revolution.

BENJAMIN CHEW, Provincial Councillor of Pennsylvania, and ancestor of the Philadelphia family of the name, was one of nine children of first marriage of Dr. Samuel Chew, by his first wife, Mary Galloway, and was born at his father's country seat on West river, Maryland, November 29, 1722, and removed with the family to Kent county, on Delaware, when a boy. He was probably reared as a Quaker, and retained his association with the Society until his second marriage in 1757. His four children by his first marriage were baptized with his eldest child by second marriage, Benjamin Chew, 1758. Of the earlier education of the distinguished Jurist and Councillor, little is known. He was not a college graduate, but at an early age was student in law office of Tench Francis, whom he later succeeded as Attorney-General of Province of Pennsylvania, where he was messenger boy, student and clerk; drawing at the age of fifteen years all the papers in a case of Common Recovery. His legal training was, however, principally entrusted to Andrew Hamilton, distinguished attorney for the Penn family, and member of Governor's Council, 1720-41. At the death of Hamilton in 1741, Benjamin Chew, then in his nineteenth year, went abroad and entered the Middle Temple in the same year as Sir William Blackstone, the noted jurist and commentator. The death of his father in 1743 hastened his return to America, without having entirely completed his legal studies. He was admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of Province of Pennsylvania, at September term, 1746, but the dockets of that court do not show that he had charge of any cases until nine years later. He was probably employed in the practice of law at the courts of Dover and New Castle in the interval. In 1751 he was one of the Boundary Commission from Kent county, and in 1752 was appointed Trustee by the Assembly of the Lower Counties to sell certain lands.

Benjamin Chew removed to Philadelphia, 1754, and took up his residence on Front street above Dock, where he resided until May, 1771, when he purchased a house on Third street, built by Charles Willing for his son-in-law, Col. James Burd, of Virginia, and then just vacated by the Hon. John Penn. In 1761 he built on the outskirts of Germantown his country seat, "Cliveden," which figured so conspicuously in the battle of Germantown as the "Chew House," and is still owned by the family. He succeeded Tench Francis, his old preceptor, as Attorney-General of Province of Pennsylvania, January 14, 1755, and filled that position until November 4, 1769. On August 29, 1755, he was appointed Recorder of Philadelphia, also succeeding Francis in that office, and continued to fill the position until October 3, 1767, when he resigned. He was also member of Assembly for Lower Counties for some years, and officiated as Speaker of that body in 1756.

Benjamin Chew was called to the Governor's Council, November 2, 1755, at a time when able men who were willing to countenance the arming of troops for the defence of the Colonies, were badly needed in that body. It was a critical period in the history of the Province, when Braddock's defeat at Fort DuQuesne had let loose upon the western and northern frontiers of the Province hordes of savages and their hardly less savage allies, the French, and the Colonial Assembly having failed to make adequate provision for the raising of troops, the people had, as in 1747-8, raised associated companies, the officers of which were commissioned by the Governor's Council, and at the request of the authorities of the Crown, most of the Quakers retired from the Assembly. Benjamin Chew was an ardent partisan of the Proprietary party, and was attorney of the Penn family for some years. He continued to serve in the Provincial Council until its authority was overturned by the Committee of Safety in 1775. He was appointed Register-General of Province of Pennsylvania, August 23, 1765, and also held that position until the inception of the Revolution, being the last to hold the position, the constitution of 1776, and subsequent constitutions giving to each county independent authority in the probate of wills and granting letters of administration. In connection with the office of Register-General, Mr. Chew acted personally as Register of the city and county of Philadelphia, then a very lucrative office, Philadelphia having become the wealthiest and largest city on the Continent. In 1761 Benjamin Chew was appointed by Council, with others, to expend the money appropriated by Assembly for the defense of the city of Philadelphia, and he was also one of the Commission who finally settled the boundary line question between Pennsylvania and Maryland, so long in dispute.

Mr. Chew was in sympathy with the resistance of the oppressive acts of Parliament, and signed the famous Non-importation agreement in 1765, but holding a number of commissions under the Crown would not go to the length of counselling or aiding in armed resistance to the Crown. On the resignation of William Allen, Mr. Chew was commissioned, April 29, 1774, Chief Justice of Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Though all commissions were abrogated by the constitution of 1776, no provision was made by the constituted authorities to fill the offices for Philadelphia city and county, and Mr. Chew continued to act as Register until March 14, 1777. He remained entirely passive in reference to the National struggle, and was on the best of terms with the leading actors; Washington and members of the Continental Congress, when that body was in session in Philadelphia, were frequently entertained at his house. However, the Congress, when the crisis came, and Philadelphia was threatened by the British army, acting on the principle, that "all are against us that are not for us" recommended the Supreme Executive Council of Pennsylvania to secure all those who were "disaffected to the cause of the Colonies" against giving aid and counsel to their enemies, and a large number of the wealthiest and most prominent men of Philadelphia were arrested and confined in the Masonic Lodge Room, August 6, 1777; and on their refusal to take the "Test Oath" of allegiance to the Colonies were transported to near Winchester, Virginia, where they were kept under guard until after the evacuation of Philadelphia by the British in 1778. Mr. Chew was arrested, but allowed to proceed to his home, under guard, and being given the choice of his place of exile, outside the zone of action, was taken with John Penn to the Union Iron Works in New Jersey, owned and operated by his wife's uncle, where he remained for ten months in the closest seclusion. On May 15, 1778, Congress ordered his release, and Major Stout, under appointment of Governor Livingston, of New Jersey, June 29, 1778, conveyed him from the Union Iron Works to the Pennsylvania shore of the Delaware, leaving him at the house of Henry Lott in Bucks county, from whence he made his way to Philadelphia, and he again took up his residence in his Third street house, where he continued to reside until his death, January 20, 1810. His Germantown house was never occupied by him after the battle of Germantown, and he sold it in 1779 to Blair McClenachan. After John Penn had departed for England Mr. Chew was Attorney for the Penn Family in America.

On the return of peace the ability of Mr. Chew as a jurist was again recognized and he was appointed President Judge of the High Court of Errors and Appeals, his commission as Judge of that Court being dated October 3, 1791, and that of President Judge, October 4. He continued to fill this position with eminent ability until the abolition of the Court in 1808, and he lived a retired life at the Third street home until his death two years later.

Chief Justice Chew married (first) June 13, 1747, Mary, daughter of John and Mary (Thomas) Galloway, of Maryland. She died November 9, 1755, aged twenty-six years, and is buried at Christ Church. He married (second) September 12, 1757, Elizabeth, born May, 1735, daughter of James and Mary (Turner) Oswald, and niece of Joseph Turner, member of Provincial Council, 1747-76. She survived him and died in May, 1810.

Edward Tilghman, of Wye, by his second wife, Elizabeth Chew, sister of Chief Justice Benjamin Chew, and a descendant of Richard Tilghman, of county Kent, England, who settled in Maryland in 1663.

RICHARD TILGHMAN, of Holoway Court, county Kent, was seated there in the reign of Edward II, and by wife Dionyse had a son,

THOMAS TILGHMAN, of Holoway Court, who by wife Joan had a son,

WILLIAM TILGHMAN, who died August 27, 1541; married (first) Isabel Avery, and had a son, Richard Tilghman, of Holoway Court; by second marriage with Joan Amherst had other children, among whom were,

RICHARD TILGHMAN, born in county Kent, England, September 3, 1626, became a surgeon in English Navy, and becoming interested in English Colonies in America purchased Canterbury Manor, Choptank river, Maryland, his patent bearing date January 17, 1659. He came to America in 1661, and in 1663 established his seat on Chester river, which he called the "Hermitage," still in possession of his descendants. Richard Tilghman died there January 7, 1675. He married, in England, Mary Foxley, who accompanied him to Maryland, in the "Elizabeth and Mary," 1661, and survived him more than twenty years, acting as executrix of his will in 1675.

On September 20, 1699, his mother conveyed to him at least a portion of the "Hermitage" tract, charging him with the payment of certain monies, at her decease, for the benefit of other children and grandchildren. Richard Tilghman took a prominent part in the affairs of the Province of Maryland and was a member of Provincial Council. He died January 23, 1738. He married Anna Maria, daughter of Philemon Lloyd.

He was especially noted for helping younger members of the bar in their early struggles with knotty questions of the law. HAMILTON FAMILY.

ANDREW HAMILTON, the earliest and most conspicuous champion of the liberty of speech and of the press in America, as well as one of the ablest lawyers and statesmen the colonies produced, was over twenty-five years a resident of Philadelphia. A Scotchman by birth, his migration to America, and its cause, is somewhat shrouded in mystery. The family tradition is that he was obliged to flee from his native country in consequence of the killing of a person of some importance in a duel. Always the champion of right and justice, even when opposed to conventional customs or laws, he was doubtless involved in some of the political difficulties of Great Britain during the reign of King William.

He was born about 1676, and seems to have come to America during the first decade of the following century. On March 26, 1708, he purchased of John Toads 600 acres on the north side of Chester River in Kent county, Maryland, present site of the town of Millington, the plantation being then known by the name of "Henberry." In the deed for this property he is described as of Northampton county, Virginia. During his residence in Virginia, he seems to have concealed his real name and have taken the name of Trent. The fact that, after the accession of Queen Anne, he resumed his real name, may be taken to indicate that his flight and temporary obscure life in Virginia was caused by some political trouble. As he eventually returned to England and obtained admission to Gray's Inn and the English Bar, it is very evident that he did not emigrate to America under any disgraceful charge.

While a resident of Virginia, he is said to have had charge of an estate and to have conducted a classical school. After his removal to Kent county, Maryland, he practiced law not only in Kent, but in adjoining counties, and as far north as Philadelphia, making "Henberry" his residence several years. By 1712 he was established in Chestertown with a large practice and a great reputation as a lawyer. In that year he was retained as attorney for William Penn in a suit against Berkley Codd, Esq., of Sussex county, on the Delaware, whose step great-granddaughter Andrew Hamilton, son of the distinguished attorney, later married, obtaining through her the handsome estate of "Woodlands," near Philadelphia, the home of the family several generations. The suit of Penn vs. Codd had to do with a dispute over the rights of Penn under the grant from the Duke of York.

It is supposed that the legal studies of Andrew Hamilton, commenced in Great Britain, must have been completed in Maryland, where there were, among the officials of the government, several men of considerable legal attainments, and among the gentry of the Eastern shore, some highly educated men. He, however, felt the need of the additional standing which membership in the English Bar gave to those practicing before the early Colonial Justices, and late in 1712 sailed for England, on January 27, 1712-13, was admitted a member of Gray's Inn, as Mr. Andrew Hamilton of Maryland, and on the tenth of February following, was called to the Bar.

Returning to Maryland, he resumed his extensive practice at Chestertown. He was selected as one of the Assembly summoned by Gov. John Hart, to meet on April 26, 1715, for the purpose of codifying the laws of the Province of Maryland, being one of the four deputies from Kent county. Not being present when the Assembly met, he was summoned by the serjeant-at-arms, and on his appearance excused himself on the ground that he was engaged as counsel in an important case before the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. The delegates fined him forty-five shillings for non-attendance, but they placed him at once on the Committee of Laws, and the forty-six chapters of the Acts of 1715, codified by that committee, formed the basis of the statute law of the Province down to the Revolution, and long afterwards. Some time during the next two years, Andrew Hamilton gave up his Maryland residence and made his home in Philadelphia. He had subsequently added to his purchase of "Henberry" a neighboring plantation called "Partnership," and after removing to Philadelphia, sold both estates, by deed dated September 16, 1717, to Gilbert Falconer.

Andrew Hamilton was appointed Attorney-General of Pennsylvania, September 24, 1717, and held that office until his resignation in 1726, his successor, Joseph Growdon, Junr., of Bucks county, being commissioned September 26, 1726. In 1720 he was called to the Provincial Council of Pennsylvania, and only consented to serve on condition that his attendance should not be allowed to interfere with the practice of his profession; and though he retained membership in the Council until his death in 1741, he seems rarely if ever to have taken a seat in that body.

On his resignation of Attorney General's office, he made an extended visit to England, and on his return, June 5, 1727, was appointed by Gov. Patrick Gordon, Prothonotary of the Court of Philadelphia. He had previously, July 30, 1723, been made a Master of the High Court of Chancery. In 1727 he was elected a member of the Colonial Assembly from Bucks county, and continued to represent that county in the House until the close of the session in 1739, filling the position of speaker from 1729 until his voluntary retirement, excepting the session of 1733-4; receiving at one time the unanimous vote of the members for that office. He took a leading part in the business of the House from the first, being chairman of its most important committees, and the author of most of the addresses to the Governor and Proprietors, as well as to the English Government, and also draughtsman of the important Acts. He was a trustee of the Loan Office, and had charge of the building of the new historic State House at Philadelphia, for which he furnished the designs.

The address of Andrew Hamilton to the Assembly at the close of the session of 1739, when he announced his retirement from that body, so well illustrates the high character and noble resolves of the man, as well as his appreciation of the benefits of the form of government enacted by William Penn, that we insert it here almost in its entirety.

Gentlemen:

As the service of the Country should be the only Motive to induce any man to take upon him the Country's Trust, which none ought to assume who find themselves incapable of giving such a constant Attendance as the nature of so great Trust requires; and as you are witnesses of the frequent Indispositions of Body I have so long laboured under, particularly during the winter Season (the usual Time of doing Business here), and being apprehensive that, by Reason of my Age and Infirmities, which daily increase, I may be unable to discharge the Duty expected from a Member of Assembly; I therefore hope that these Considerations alone, were there no others, will appear to you sufficient to justify the Determination I am come to, of declining the farther Service of the Province in a Representative Capacity.

As to my Conduct, it is not for me to condemn or commend it. Those who have sat here from time to time during my Standing, and particularly these several Gentlemen present, who were Members when I first came into the House (whom I now see with Pleasure), have the Right to judge of my Behavior, and will censure or approve it as it has deserved. But whatever that may have been, I know my own Intentions, and that I ever had at Heart the Preservation of Liberty, the Love of which, as it first drew me to, so it constantly prevailed upon me to reside in, this Province, tho' to the manifest Prejudice of my Fortune.

But (waiving all Remarks of a private Nature, which Reflections of this kind might naturally, and justly lead me into) I would beg Leave to observe you, That it is not to the Fertility of our Soil, and the Commodiousness of our Rivers, that we ought chiefly to attribute the great Progress this Province has made, within so small a Compass of Years, in Improvements, Wealth, Trade, and Navigation, and the extraordinary Increase of People, who have been drawn thither from almost every Country in Europe; a Progress which much more ancient Settlements on the Main of America cannot at present boast of. No, it is principally and almost wholly owing to the Excellency of our Constitution, under which we enjoy a greater Share both of civil and religious Liberty than any of our Neighbours.

It is our great Happiness that instead of triennial Assemblies, a Privilege which several other Colonies have long endeavored to obtain, but in vain, ours are annual, and for that Reason, as well as others, less liable to be practiced upon, or corrupted, either, with Money or Presents. We sit upon our own Adjournments, when we please, and as long as we think necessary, and are not to be sent a Packing, in the Middle of a Debate, and disabled from representing our just Grievances to our Gracious Sovereign, if there should be Occasion, which has often been the hard fate of Assemblies in other Places.

We have no Officers but what are necessary; none but what earn their Salaries, and those generally are either elected by the People or appointed by their Representatives.

Other Provinces swarm with unnecessary Officers, nominated by the Governors, who often make it a main Part of their Care to Support these Officers (notwithstanding their Oppressions). At all events, I hope it will ever be the Wisdom of our Assemblies to create no great Offices or Officers, nor indeed any Officer at all, but what is really necessary for the Service of the Country, and to be sure to let the People, or their Representatives, have at least, a Share in their Nomination or Appointment. This will always be a good Security against the mischievous Influence of Men holding Places at the Pleasure of the Governor.

Our foreign Trade and Shipping are free from all Imposts, except the small Duties payable to his Majesty by the Statute Laws of Great Britain. The Taxes which we pay for carrying on the Publick Service is inconsiderable; for the sole Power of raising and disposing of the Publick Money for the support of Government is lodged in the Assembly, who appoint their own Treasurer, and to them alone he is accountable. Other incidental Taxes are assessed, collected and applied by Persons annually chosen by the People themselves. Such is our happy State as to Civil Rights. Nor are we less happy in the enjoyment of a perfect Freedom as to Religion. By many years Experience, we find that an Equality among Religious Societies, without distinguishing any one Sect with greater Privileges than another, is the most effectual Method to discourage Hypocrisy, promote the Practice of moral Virtues, and prevent the Plagues and Mischiefs that always attend religious Squabbling.

This is our Constitution, and this Constitution was framed by the wisdom of Mr. Penn, the first Proprietor and Founder of the Province, whose Charter of Privileges to the Inhabitants of Pennsylvania will ever remain a Monument of his Benevolence to Mankind and reflect more lasting Honour on his Descendants than the largest Possessions. In the Framing of this Government, he reserved no Powers to himself or his Heirs to oppress the People; no Authority but what is necessary for our Protection, and to hinder us from falling into Anarchy; and therefore (supposing we could persuade ourselves that all our Obligations to our great Law-giver, and his honourable Descendants, were entirely cancelled, yet), our own Interests should oblige us carefully to support the Government on its present Foundation, as the only Means to secure to ourselves and our Posterity the enjoyment of those Privileges, and the Blessings flowing from such a Constitution, under which we cannot fail of being happy if the Fault be not our own. * * *

As this, Gentlemen, is likely to be the last Time I may trouble you with anything in this Place, I hope you will the more easily pardon the Liberties I have taken; and that you will farther permit me here to acknowledge my Obligations to that County, which has so often elected me for one of their Representatives; and at the same time to assure you, that I shall always retain a grateful Sense of the great Confidence so long reposed in me, and the Honour so frequently conferred upon me by many successive Assemblies, in calling me to the Chair of this honourable House.

Strange though it may appear, it would seem that Andrew Hamilton, during a portion of the time that he was serving as Speaker of the House of Assembly of Pennsylvania, was also filling a like position in the Assembly of the Three Lower counties, now the State of Delaware. The Laws of Delaware, printed by Franklin, 1741, show that a number of the more elaborate statutes bear the signature of Andrew Hamilton, as Speaker. Among them are the Acts for Regulating Elections; for securing the Administration of Estates; for the confirmation of titles to lands; and for establishing Courts of Law and Equity. These were all, without doubt, like the important statutes on these lines in Pennsylvania, drawn by Andrew Hamilton, and have been cited as evidence of his great ability by eminent lawyers. A letter from John French, Speaker of the House of the Lower Counties, dated March 15, 1726, tenders to Andrew Hamilton the thanks of "The Representatives of this Government in Assembly" for services "you have this session done."

It is mainly through the laws that bear impress of his professional ability, that we gain an accurate knowledge of Mr. Hamilton's eminent ability as a lawyer, as only fragmentary and traditional evidences of his professional attainments have come down to us, with the exception of his celebrated argument in the Zenger Libel Case, in New York, which, says truly one of his biographers, "has procured for him a place, in the History Of Liberty, and has been called by Gouverneur Morris, the 'Day Star of the Revolution,' as it unquestionably awakened the public mind throughout the Colonies, to a conception of the most sacred rights as Citizens and as subjects of a Free Country."

John Peter Zenger, whom, it is said, Andrew Hamilton knew, when a resident of Kent county, Maryland, had gone to New York, where he learned the printer's trade with William Bradford. November 5, 1733, Zenger started the publication of The New York Weekly Journal. It at once marked a new era in American journalism, as up to that time political discussion was unknown in American newspapers, and almost as much so in England. Zenger's Journal from the first was filled with a series of articles able, witty, sarcastic, and severely personal, criticising the acts of officers of the government of New York and New Jersey, and harped incessantly on the "Liberty of the Press." The cry was readily taken up by the people of both states as well as in other localities, even as far south as Charleston, where a paper of like calibre was soon started. The columns of the Journal were open to all, and the leading articles were doubtless written by Lewis Morris, James Alexander and William Smith, the leaders of the popular party, as opposed to the "Court Party" composed of the adherents of Gov. Cosby of New York, between which two factions an extraordinarily bitter contest was being waged, at the polls, in the forum of public opinion and in the halls of legislation and government. On the election of Morris as a member of the New York Assembly from Westchester county, Zenger's paper was filled with songs, squibs and articles exulting over the victory and severely scoring the other party. When a year later, 1734, a like rejoicing over the success of the popular party, had further incensed the Court Party, Chief Justice DeLancey charged the Grand Jury that Zenger's paper was inculcating treason and defamation, and insisted on his indictment, but they contented themselves with presenting the songs and copies of the papers to be burned by the common hangman. A year later, however, August 4, 1735, Zenger was brought to trial. Alexander and Smith, who appeared as Zenger's counsel, were disbarred by Chief Justice DeLancey. The friends of Zenger then secured the services of Andrew Hamilton, who undertook the case without fee or reward. Hamilton admitted the publication of the articles by his client and laid the whole stress of his argument on their non-libelous character. The Chief Justice refusing to listen, Hamilton turned to the jury and declared that, as the court would not hear him, the jury alone must be judge of the law, as well as of the facts. And then for hours the great advocate held the packed courtroom spell-bound, as he made the first plea ever heard in America for the freedom of the citizen and of the press, from the tyranny of the rulers, and in their criticism of their public acts. Despite the extremely bitter charge of the Chief Justice, the verdict of the jury was "not guilty," and Zenger was borne away in triumph on the shoulders of his friends. It was the most memorable trial ever held in America, and established the principle that in such cases the jury must be judges of the law and the evidence, and was therefore a grand victory for the people. The next day, when Hamilton was about to take the boat for his home in Philadelphia, he was followed to the water's side by nearly the whole populace, who hailed him as the champion of popular liberty, and the corporation of New York presented him with the "freedom of the City" and a gold box for the seal. This speech of Andrew Hamilton was repeatedly printed in England and America, and justly "established its author's fame as the first lawyer of his time in the British Provinces." "It may be commended more for its bold enunciation of a principle, than for the accumulation of learned citations and for its argument from precedents; but it uses its authorities with masterly skill, and deals crushing blows to the prosecution and the Court." The masterly effort in the interest of personal liberty is more to be commended from the fact that it was made entirely without remuneration or the hope thereof, and when the author was suffering from ill health.

Mr. Hamilton was in the employ of the Proprietary family, from his removal to Philadelphia until his death. In the difficulties with Lord Baltimore, he was particularly useful, and served in various commissions, to meet the Maryland authorities in framing the Terms of Agreement in 1732, upon which the case was brought before the Privy Council, and prepared the materials for the brief upon which it was finally submitted to the Court of Chancery, after his death. Chief Justice Langhorne, of Bucks county, in a letter to John Penn, dated May 20, 1737, says, "I am very sorry the dispute you have with Lord Baltimore, is not likely to be brought to an issue. * * * Had Mr. Hamilton's advice been strictly pursued relating to the disputes with the province of Maryland, I am of opinion our province would have come off with more credit and reputation." Andrew Hamilton was held in high consideration by his professional brethren in the neighboring provinces, where his opinion was constantly sought for. He was also consulted by different Provincial Governors, and was employed in the courts of several colonies.

The first Philadelphia home of Andrew Hamilton, was the mansion on Chestnut street near Third, where it is said his son Gov. James Hamilton was born, later owned and occupied by Israel Pemberton, and during Washington's administration occupied by Alexander Hamilton, as the Treasury Department of the United States. The "Bush Hill" estate, where his later days were spent and where he died, was granted to him by William Penn, from a part of the Manor of Springettsbury. It comprised that part of the present city of Philadelphia, extending from Vine street to Fairmount avenue and from Twelfth to Nineteenth. Here he erected a spacious and stately mansion in which he died, and where his son, the Governor, long exercised a magnificent and generous hospitality; during Washington's administration it was the residence of John Adams, Vice-president of the United States.

He also owned a great amount of valuable real estate in the city, on Walnut and Chestnut streets and elsewhere; considerable land in New Jersey and the lower counties, and in Bucks county. He acquired a large estate in Lancaster county, on which the town plot of the city of Lancaster was laid out, 1728.

Andrew Hamilton died at Bush Hill, August 4, 1741, and was buried in the family burial-ground on that estate, but upon its sale his remains, with those of other members of the family, were removed to a spacious mausoleum in Christ Churchyard, which was closed upon the interment of the last of his name, about 1851.

Andrew Hamilton married, March 6, 1706, in Northampton county, Virginia, Anne, widow of Joseph Preeson, and daughter of Thomas and Susanna (Denwood) Brown. She was a lady of some fortune, and was connected with many of the best families in Maryland. She died about 1736.

Issue of Andrew and Anne (Brown-Preeson) Hamilton:

James Hamilton, Lieut.-Gov. of Pa., b. about 1710; d. unm., Aug. 14, 1783; "a gentleman of great dignity and private worth—distinguished for liberality and independence; the only native Governor of Pennsylvania before the Revolution; and probably the most esteemed of his countrymen, as well as the Proprietary Family." J.; to his nephew, William Hamilton, he devised the "Gold Box, which was presented to my Honoured Father with the Freedom of the Corporation of the City of New York;"

ANDREW HAMILTON, second son of Andrew and Anne (Brown) Hamilton, born in Philadelphia; died there in September, 1747; took up a much less prominent part in public affairs than his father and brother. He was a member of Common Council of the city from October 6, 1741, to his death, and filled the position of Clerk of the City Court of Quarter Sessions, and Town Clerk, and was a charter member of Library Company of Philadelphia. Turning his attention to mercantile pursuits, his father erected for him a wharf and storehouses, and he carried on an extensive shipping and commission business, in partnership with William Coleman, up to the time of his death. He lived at Third and Walnut streets, where he owned considerable property, part of which he devised to his son, William; the mansion house being devised to his wife. He had received by bequest from his father, a plantation on the west side of the Schuylkill, which became a part of "The Woodlands," later the elegant home of his son, William, and also had received five hundred acres of land in Hilltown township, Bucks county, by the will of Justice Jeremiah Langhorne, which, with his wharves and storehouses on Front street, he devised to his son, Andrew.

Andrew Hamilton married, December 24, 1741, Mary Till, born in Sussex county, on Delaware, 1722; died October 18, 1803, at "The Woodlands." She was the daughter of William Till, who removed from Sussex county to Philadelphia prior to 1736, by his wife Mary Lillingston, daughter of George Lillingston, of Sussex county, by his wife Elizabeth Watson, daughter of Luke Watson, of Sussex county, and stepdaughter of Berkly Codd, Esq., before referred to. John Till, the father of William, was a druggist of Watling street, London, who married, 1693, Cassandra, daughter of Thomas and Cassandra Newton, of the city of Norwich.

William Till, son of John and Cassandra, born in England about 1697, came to America when a young man, and married at Christ Church, January 7, 1720, Mary Lillingston, of Sussex county, to whom Berkly Codd, Esq. (who had married her grandmother, the widow of Luke Watson, Jr.), conveyed a tract of land in Sussex county, February 3, 1718. It is presumed that William Till and his wife settled on this land after their marriage. They later acquired other large tracts of land there. William Till engaged extensively in shipping business in Sussex county and later at Philadelphia. He was commissioned a Justice of Sussex county, July 25, 1726; was trustee of Loan Office there, 1723-32; commissioned Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the counties of New Castle, Kent and Sussex, on the Delaware, October 23, 1736, having been an Associate Justice of that court sometime previous to that date. Made a Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania in 1743, and was still filling that position in 1756, when, with others, he was given a Dedimus Potestatum to administer oaths to officials, April 10, 1756. He was called to Provincial Council of Pennsylvania in 1741, and sat in that body until his death, 1766. Entered Common Council of Philadelphia, October 2, 1739; elected by that body an Alderman, October 6, 1741, and in 1742 became Mayor of the city. On May 9, 1747, he was appointed Collector of the Port of New Castle, and doubtless at that date took up his residence there, as December 8, 1748, he was appointed Prothonotary of the Courts of New Castle county, holding the former position and probably the latter until his death. His will, as William Till, of the town and county of New Castle, is dated July 16, 1761, and was proved May 8, 1766; it devised his house, stores, lot of ground and wharf on Water street, Philadelphia, then in the tenure of Samuel Smith, to his wife, and after her decease to his daughter, Mary Hamilton, until his grandson, William Hamilton, should attain his majority, when the title was to vest in him. It confirmed to his daughter, the houses and buildings erected by him on the lot in Philadelphia, where Mrs. Hamilton was then residing, devised to her by her husband. He left various legacies to other grandchildren, making his wife, Mary Till, his daughter, Mary Hamilton, and his grandson, Andrew Hamilton, executors. His only other child was Thomas Till, who married Gertrude Ross, of New Castle county, 1752; resided at Prime Hook, Sussex county, and was a Justice, and a Captain in the Provincial service; left issue.

Issue of Andrew and Mary (Till) Hamilton:

ANDREW HAMILTON, b. Jan. 12, 1742-3; d. Nov. 22, 1784; m. Jan. 6, 1768, Abigail Franks; of whom presently;

William Hamilton, b. April 29, 1745; d. June 5, 1813; unm.; inherited from his father a large plantation on west side the Schuylkill, where he built his home, "The Woodlands," among finest and most noted seats in the Province; the grounds and gardens, planted with foreign and rare trees collected from all parts of the globe, were entered by a gateway flanked by imposing lodges; the luscious fruits and exquisite flowers, selected with the greatest care and taste, attracted the attention of the cultivated people of the whole country, many of whom were entertained there; he was a noted collector of pictures, in which he was assisted by Benjamin West, and many rare, valuable and tasteful works of art found a place on the walls of "The Woodlands;" here William Hamilton many years led the life of a country gentleman; at the close of the Revolutionary War he made a tour of Europe, and in England his full length portrait and that of his niece Anne Hamilton (later Mrs. James Lyle), was painted by Benjamin West, and is one of the best productions of that artist; in 1797 he was elected member of American Philosophical Society; in 1805 he laid out the northern portion of his land in streets and building lots, giving to the streets many of the old family names, none of which they now bear; Till street is now Fortieth; James, now Chestnut; Andrew, now Walnut; Moore, now Thirty-fourth; Margaret, now Thirty-sixth, and Mary, now Thirty-eighth; he gave the land on which St. Mary's Church was built; by his will "The Woodlands" was devised to his nephew, James Hamilton, who did not long survive him; it was many years the home of the sisters of the latter, Margaret and Mary Hamilton, and their nieces; it is now Woodland Cemetery, and says Joshua Francis Fisher, in his sketch of Andrew Hamilton, Sr., (published in the Pennsylvania Magazine, written in 1868) "the present gloomy appearance makes a sad contrast to the hospilities and gaieties of which it was the scene, within the recollection of the writer."

ANDREW HAMILTON, eldest son of Andrew and Mary (Till) Hamilton, born January 12, 1742-3, died November 22, 1784. He married, January 6, 1768, Abigail Franks, born January 6, 1744-5, died September 11, 1798; daughter of David and Margaret (Evans) Franks, and granddaughter of Jacob Franks, a merchant of New York, born in Germany in 1688, came to New York from London about 1705, in company with Moses Levy, whose daughter, Bilhah Abigail Levy, he married in 1719. Jacob Franks had the degree of Doctor of Divinity and was a Rabbi of the Jewish Congregation in New York. His son David Franks, born in New York, September 23, 1720, married, December 17, 1743, Margaret Evans, born August 2, 1720, died September 28, 1780, daughter of Peter Evans, "of the Inner Temple, London, Gentleman," Sheriff of Philadelphia, 1707-09; Register-General of Pennsylvania, etc., by his wife Mary, daughter of John and Rebecca (Axtell) Moore, and sister of William Moore of "Moore Hall," of whom an account is given in these volumes.

Andrew Hamilton inherited from his father, the wharves, storehouses and business properties, as well as the old family mansion, but having ample wealth, he probably did not engage in trade. In his will, dated November 21, 1784, and proved January 1, 1785, he was styled "Andrew Hamilton of Philadelphia, Gentleman." The will devised the house where he lived and the houses, stores, wharf and lots of ground on Front street, to his wife for life, with his plate, household goods and furniture, and mentioned his children, Ann, Mary, Andrew, Franks and Rebecca as legatees. His son James having inherited amply under the will of his uncle William Hamilton, was left but a hundred guineas.

Abigail Hamilton, the widow, continued to reside in the old mansion at Third and Walnut, but her death, which occurred at "The Woodlands," September 11, 1798, is thus noted in the Pennsylvania Gazette of September 12, 1798: "Died in the township of Blockley, yesterday, after a lingering indisposition, Mrs. Hamilton, relict of the late Andrew Hamilton, Esq., of Third street."

Issue of Andrew and Abigail (Franks) Hamilton:—

He was a son of Hugh Lyle of Coleraine, Ireland, by his wife Eleanor, daughter of Samuel and Mary (Aderne) Hyde of Belfast, and grandson of Capt. Hugh Lyle of Coleraine, an officer of Dragocns, and his wife, Eleanor Bankhead. James Lyle came to Philadelphia when a young man, and, in partnership with John Beauclerc Newman, under firm name of Lyle & Newman, carried on a large and successful mercantile business and amassed a fortune. After the death of his wife, Mr. Lyle and his two daughters resided at "The Woodlands" with the Misses Margaret and Mary Hamilton. He was a member of Corporation of Contributors to Pennsylvania Hospital. His will, dated July 24, 1826, proved August 15, 1826, devised his entire estate, in trust, for the use of his daughters and their issue.

Ellen Lyle, b. Oct. 21, 1797; d. Feb. 8, 1852; m. Dec. 15, 1818, Hartman Kuhn, of Phila. (see Kuhn).

GEORGE MARTIN KUHN, ancestor of Philadelphia family of that name which was prominent in business and professional life of the city in Colonial days, was a son of John Kuhn, magistrate of Berwangen, Württemberg, Germany, who died before November 30, 1676. George Martin Kuhn was Assistant Jurat of the Court at Fürfeld, a village on the Neckar, in Province of Württemberg. He married at Fürfeld, November 30, 1676, Barbara, daughter of Frederick Ponnes, a Justice of the Peace, at Fürfeld. A son, John Christopher, was born to them at Fürfeld, December 16, 1684.

JOHN CHRISTOPHER KUHN, born at Fürfeld, Württemberg, December 16, 1684; married there, January 31, 1713, Margaret, daughter of Marx Reichss, deceased, late "a Citizen of Sernum, in Piertrigan, in Grannbeinden," as recited in the marriage record, on the Register at Fürfeld. After 1716 John Christopher Kuhn and his family removed from Fürfeld, and in 1719 he became a citizen of Hütten, under the jurisdiction of Strasburg, where he continued to reside until 1732. He received, April 25, 1732, from the Governor and Council of Strasburg, permission "to leave his place and vassalage and go to Pennsylvania, in America." He with his family, consisting of his wife Margaret, son Adam Simon, aged nineteen, and daughters, Eva Barbara, aged thirteen, and Anna Maria, aged nine years, embarked from Rotterdam in the ship, "Hope," and arriving in Philadelphia, were qualified August 28, 1733. Among the papers in the possession of the present generation of the family is a receipt for the passage money on the "Hope," paid in Holland before their embarkation. The family seem to have located for a time in Germantown, where the eldest son, Adam Simon, remained until after his marriage, but the father became a resident of Maiden Creek township, Philadelphia, (now Berks) county, Pennsylvania, where he died in 1754. He was naturalized March 28, 1747, and probably took up land in Maiden Creek at that time, as "Kuhn's Estate" is taxed for land there some years later.

Issue of John Christopher and Margaret (Reichss) Kuhn:

- ADAM SIMON, b. Dec. 26, 1713, at Fürfeld, Germany; d. at Lancaster, Pa., Jan. 23, 1780; m. Dec. 11, 1740, Anna Maria Sabina Schrack; of whom presently;
- Anna Rosina, b. Aug. 2, 1716, at Fürfeld, Germany;

- Maria Magdalena, b. Dec. 29, 1731, at Hütten.

DR. ADAM SIMON KUHN was a resident of Germantown, 1741, when his son Adam was born, and had probably resided there from the time of his arrival in America, 1733. He removed to Lancaster, Pennsylvania, and was naturalized there, April 8, 1744. He was a physician, described as "a man of bright natural parts, improved by the benefits of a liberal education, and was considered a very skillful, attentive and successful practitioner of Medicine." He was evidently connected in some manner with the military operations on the frontier in the Indian war of 1754-6, as he writes to Edward Shippen, Esq., under date of November 26, 1755, in reference to powder and lead, "as our company is in need of it at Adam Reed's." Adam Reed was then Captain of a Lancaster Company of Associators and located "on the Susquehannah." No roll of this company or of the regiment is in existence. Dr. Kuhn was probably Surgeon. He was Chief Burgess of Lancaster, 1749-53; was commissioned a Justice of Lancaster County Courts, 1752-61-64-70. Named as one of the first Committee of Observation and Correspondence of Lancaster County, December 15, 1774, and a delegate to the Provincial Convention at Philadelphia, January 23, 1775. He was an elder of Trinity Lutheran Church, Lancaster, where there is a tablet to his memory. He was interested in the cause of education, and was the principal person, actively concerned in the promotion of classical learning in his county at that period. He procured the erection of a school house, in which Greek and Latin were taught by the best qualified masters. He died January 23, 1780.

Dr. Adam Simon Kuhn married, December 11, 1740, Anna Maria Sabina Schrack, who was born on the high seas, October 26, 1717, while her parents were on their way to Pennsylvania, and was baptized at Gloria Dei (Old Swedes) Church, Philadelphia, January 12, 1718.

John Jacob and Eva Rosina Schrack, parents of Mrs. Kuhn, came from Germany, 1717, and soon after settled in Providence township, on the Perkiomen, in what is now Montgomery county. Mrs. Kuhn died at Lancaster, 1799.

Issue of Dr. Adam Simon and Anna Maria Sabina (Schrack) Kuhn:

DR. ADAM KUHN, born at Germantown, November 17, 1741, was reared at Lancaster. He studied medicine under his father until 1761, when he sailed for Europe, to take a course at the famous old University of Upsala, Sweden, where he arrived in January, 1762. He studied medicine and botany, under Linnaeus, and other professors, until July or August, 1764, when he proceeded to Edinburgh, taking his degree of Doctor of Medicine at the University of Edinburgh, June 12, 1767. He visited France, Holland and Germany, and in January, 1768, returned to Pennsylvania, and took up the practice of medicine in Philadelphia. He was in correspondence with Linnaeus, with whom he appears to have been a favorite pupil, during the remainder of the life of that famous naturalist and botanist, many of whose letters are still in possession of the family.

Dr. Kuhn soon rose to a position of distinction among the medical fraternity, and acquired a large and lucrative practice. He was appointed Professor of Materia Medica and Botany in the College of Philadelphia, January, 1768, and in May, 1775, elected one of the physicians of the Pennsylvania Hospital, a position he continued to fill for a period of twenty-three years. He was appointed physician at the Philadelphia Dispensary, at its institution in 1786, was one of the active members of the Philadelphia College of Physicians, and succeeding Dr. William Shippen as its president at the latter's death in July, 1808, held the position until he died. He married on the Island of St. Croix, May 14, 1781, Elizabeth (Hartman) Markoe, born August 20, 1755, died February 25, 1791, widow of Francis Markoe, and daughter of Isaac and Margaret Carrell (Nanton) Hartman, of that island. Returning to Philadelphia, Dr. Kuhn continued in his profession until 1815, when he retired from active practice, and died July 5, 1817. Dr. Kuhn was appointed Professor of Theory and Practice of Medicine in the University of Pennsylvania, November, 1789. He was a member of the American Philosophical Society.

WHARTON FAMILY.

The Wharton Family is an ancient and honorable one tracing back to the time of Edward I, when one of the family, then known as de Wherton, married a daughter of Philip Hastings, of Croglin in Cumberland. As showing the association of these two ancient families, the arms of the Wharton family of Wharton Hall, Westmoreland, are very similar to those of the Hastings family.

Thomas Wharton held the manor of Wharton in the reign of Henry IV. and the succeeding Lords of Wharton Hall held the manor of Ravenstonedale for one hundred and eighty-seven years. Thomas, second Lord Wharton, died in the fourteenth year of Queen Elizabeth's reign and was succeeded by Philip, third Lord Wharton, who was a partisan of Cromwell. He had a younger son, Henry, who was a favorite pupil of Isaac Newton. Philip, fourth Lord Wharton, who died 1695-6, was made Viscount Winchenden and Earl of Wharton and finally Marquis of Wharton.

The descent of the Pennsylvania Whartons from the Whartons of Wharton Hall has never been traced, but Richard Wharton, whose son Thomas came to Pennsylvania in 1683, was doubtless descended from one of the younger sons of one of the Lords of Wharton.

THOMAS WHARTON, son of Richard Wharton, of Kellorth, Parish of Orton or Overton, Westmoreland, was baptized at All Saints Church, Orton, October 16, 1664. He probably retained his association with the Established Church until coming to America, but united himself with the Society of Friends sometime prior to his marriage at Bank Meeting, Philadelphia, 11mo (January) 20, 1688-9, to Rachel Thomas, born in Monmouthshire, England, September 1, 1664. Thomas Wharton engaged in mercantile business in Philadelphia, and became prominently identified with the business interests of the city. As a member of Common Council, October 6, 1713, he gave an active attendance and interest in the work of that body until his death, July 3, 1718. He was a successful business man and left a considerable estate. He and his wife were regular attendants at the Friends Meeting.

THOMAS WHARTON JR., first Governor of Pennsylvania, under the constitution of 1776, was second son of John and Mary (Dobbins) Wharton, and was born in Chester, 1735. He was probably educated in the city of Philadelphia, where he served his apprenticeship to mercantile business with Reese Meredith, a colonial merchant and importer. Soon after arriving at his majority, he engaged in business for himself, and by 1762 had become one of the largest importers of foreign goods in the city, as evidenced by the Custom House bonds. Sometime after this date he became associated in business with Anthony Stocker, who died in 1777, under the firm name of Stocker & Wharton. He prospered in his business undertakings, and became a prominent figure in the business and social circles of the city in the prosperous times prior to the Revolution. He became a member of the "Colony in Schuylkill" in 1760. This unique social organization was organized in 1732 by a company composed of the ardent disciples of the piscatorial art, who erected their "castle" on the banks of the Schuylkill near the falls, where they resorted to fish and entertain their friends. It became known as the "State in Schuylkill" in 1781, and was later incorporated under the title of "The Schuylkill Fishing Company of the State in Schuylkill." On the passage of the Stamp Act in 1765, Thomas Wharton Jr. with his uncle, Thomas Wharton Sr., and a number of other members of the family, were among the earliest signers of the Non-Importation Agreement, and from that date he was foremost in the protest against the oppressive measures of the mother country. When the news of the closing of the port of Boston by the British reached Philadelphia, he was one of those who hastily gathered in the long room of the City Tavern, May 20, 1774, to confer as to measures of relief for their brethren of New England, and to devise means of uniting the Colonies in a common cause against the oppressive measures of the British Parliament, by the formation of an organization composed of delegates from each Colony. This historic meeting, after hearing the Boston letter read, agreed "that a committee be appointed to correspond with the representatives of our sister Colonies" thereafter known as the "Committee of Correspondence," who drafted a letter to the Boston Committee, which letter says Bancroft, the historian, "for the coming year was to control the councils of America." Thomas Wharton Jr., June 22, 1774, with Joseph Reed and John Nixon of the committee, called upon the Governor to convene the Assembly, and on his expected refusal, called on the Speaker of the Assembly to request him to summon the members to meet, August 1, to consult upon public affairs. These measures were the preliminary steps taken by the direct representatives of the patriotic element of the community towards taking into their own hands the control of affairs of state, on failure of the constituted authority to respond to their call. Thomas Wharton Sr. and Thomas Wharton Jr. represented Philadelphia in the Provincial Conference of the representatives of the different counties that met in Philadelphia, July 15, 1774, and Thomas Wharton Jr. was one of the Committee of Safety of State of Pennsylvania, named by resolve of the Assembly, October, 1775, which was the governing body of the State until the constitution was framed by the convention of August and September, 1776. He was also one of the Delegates to this convention. He was also named as one of the Council of Safety, of which he was first president and for five months that intervened before the election of members of Assembly and Supreme Executive Council, under the constitution, was acting chief executive of the State and as such did all in his power to aid in organization and equipment of the militia that was to aid Washington in the Jersey campaign of 1776-7, and the preparation for the defense of the City and State. In February, 1777, he was elected a member of the Supreme Executive Council, and at its organization, March 4, 1777, was elected its president by the Council and Assembly, George Bryan being elected its Secretary. On March 5, he was installed into office with impressive ceremonies, as "His Excellency, Thomas Wharton Junr. Esquire, President of Supreme Executive Council of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Captain General and Commander-in-Chief in and over the same."

That Gov. Wharton fully realized the responsibilities he assumed as Chief Executive of the State at this critical time, is evidenced by a letter written by him to Gen. Arthur St. Clair, in reference to the widespread and threatening dissatisfaction with the provisions of the new constitution among the people of the Province, in which he says: "True it is, there are many faults which I hope one day to see remedied; but it is also true, that if the Government should at this time be overset, it would be attended with the worst consequences, not only to this state, but to the whole continent in the opposition we are making to Great Britain. If a better frame of Government should be adopted, such an one as would please a much greater majority than the present one, I should be very happy in seeing it brought about; and any gentleman that should be thought by the public qualified to take my seat, should have my hearty voice for it. My ardent ambition never led me to expect or ask for it, and if I have any it is to be thought and to merit the character of an honest man. I feel myself very inadequate to the station I am in, but some that were fit for it have either withdrawn themselves entirely, or are opposing the Government. However as it is in the power of every man to act with integrity and uprightness, he that does that will at least have the approbation of his own conscience and merit that of the public."

The lofty sentiments modestly yet firmly expressed in this letter, marked his administration of the high office he held through the most trying period of the nation's existence, and while mistakes were no doubt made in piloting the newly launched and unwieldy ship of State, the verdict of posterity has been, that Gov. Wharton administered with honor and integrity the high position of trust to which the voice of the people of Pennsylvania had called him. He was re-elected by the Assembly and Council, in their exile at Lancaster, November 20, 1777, and continued to fill the office of Chief Executive of the State until his sudden death in the following May.

Never in the history of Pennsylvania has its Chief Executive been surrounded with greater difficulties than he encountered during the winter of 1777-8. The reverses met with by the armed forces of the nation at Brandywine, Germantown and Paoli; the occupation of the capital of the State by the British forces; the petty jealousies, growing out of class distinctions, and the difference of views as to the administration of affairs, and the stagnation of business interests, dampened the enthusiasm of the nation's defenders to an alarming extent. During this period the theatre of the nation's heroic struggle for liberty was largely on Pennsylvania soil, and there was an increasing demand for more troops, and with only paper money of doubtful value with which to pay for their service, equipment and support, the Government was met at times with wholesale defection of large bodies of local militia, disheartened and discouraged by the rigors of unaccustomed service, and the dim hopes of ultimate success of our arms. During these trying times Gov. Wharton labored incessantly for the cause of the Colonies to which he had dedicated his best energies, always urging the Militia in defense of their homes and liberties and hotly expressing his disgust and humiliation at any show of cowardice on their part. Just as his beloved state was about to be to some extent relieved of the thralldom of a large armed force of her enemies within her borders by the evacuation of Philadelphia by the British army, Pres. Wharton was unexpectedly stricken with death, and was buried with civil and military honors in front of the altar of Evangelical Trinity Church, Lancaster.

Gov. Wharton, as before stated, had been a successful business man and had acquired a considerable fortune, which was to some extent dissipated by the ravages of the war and his neglect of business affairs while occupied with affairs of State. He maintained, prior to the Revolution, a city house and a beautiful country seat known as "Twickenham," Cheltenham township, now Montgomery county, where he and his accomplished wife entertained lavishly. He was twice married, in both instances into families of high standing that had been identified with the affairs of Pennsylvania, from the first founding of the Colony. His first marriage on November 4, 1762, was to Susannah, daughter of Thomas and Susanna (Kearney) Lloyd, and great-granddaughter of Thomas Lloyd, who came from Westmoreland to Philadelphia in 1683, and was the first Keeper of the Great Seal, Master of Rolls, and President of the Governor's Council, 1684-8 and 1690-3, and therefore acting Governor of the Colony in the protracted absence of Penn. Susannah (Lloyd) Wharton died on the tenth anniversary of her marriage, November 4, 1772, and he married (second) December 7, 1774, Elizabeth, born in Philadelphia, 1752, daughter of William and Mary (Tallman) Fishbourne, and granddaughter of William Fishbourne, Provincial Councillor, 1723-31, and City-Treasurer 1725-6. William Fishbourne Sr. was born in Talbot county, Maryland, being a son of Ralph and Sarah (Lewis) Fishbourne, and settled in Philadelphia prior to 1700, where he married, in 1702, Hannah, daughter of Samuel Carpenter, Provincial Councillor and recipient of many well merited honors from his city and Province.

KEARNEY WHARTON, second son of Gov. Thomas and Susannah (Lloyd) Wharton, born in Philadelphia, 1766, studied law and was admitted to the Philadelphia bar, but followed chiefly the business of a merchant. He was for many years a member of Common Council of Philadelphia and was elected its president, October 16, 1798. He was one of those who in 1799 presented an address to Common and Select Council on the subject of supplying the city with wholesome water, and as President signed the ordinance providing for the raising of funds to accomplish this purpose. He died January 4, 1848, aged eighty-two years. He married at "Magnolia Grove," her father's house on the banks of the Delaware near Tacony, November 11, 1795, Maria, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Gordon) Saltar, who survived him many years. He was prominently associated with the Philadelphia Bank for over forty years. He died July 27, 1869. His wife, whom he married June 30, 1840, was Sarah Ann Howell, daughter of Richard Rodman and Sarah (Howell) Smith, born October 11, 1800, died March 17, 1846.

LUCY WHARTON, eldest daughter of Thomas Lloyd and Sarah Ann Howell (Smith) Wharton, born May 13, 1841, married, April 18, 1865, Joseph W. Drexel, of the well known firm of Drexel & Company, bankers, New York. He was a son of Francis M. Drexel, a native of Austria, who in early life was an artist and portrait painter. He located for a time in South America, where he attracted the attention of Gen. Simon Bolivar, the distinguished hero and patriot of South American independence, whose portrait he painted. The firm as first established consisted of Francis M. Drexel and his son Francis, but soon after its establishment two other sons, Anthony and Joseph W., were admitted to the firm. In 1871 Joseph W. Drexel was placed in charge of a branch banking house in New York City, with which he was associated actively for five years, when he retired from its active management and thereafter devoted his attention to various philanthropic schemes for the betterment of the condition of the poorer classes. One of his successful projects was the incorporation of Klej Grange, upon a large tract of land in Maryland, where he induced poor families to settle by keeping them without charge for one year, and then selling them the land on easy payments. He also owned a large plantation in New Jersey, known as Cedar Hill Farm, where hordes of unemployed poor were fed and clothed until remunerative employment could be found for them elsewhere. Many other projects for the employment and alleviation of the wants and sufferings of the poor were carried into effect by him in Philadelphia, New York and elsewhere. Mr. Drexel was a musician of talent and a patron of the higher arts. He was a member of the Philharmonic Society and its president at the time of his death and member of a number of other musical organizations, and a life member of the Metropolitan Art Museum. For many years prior to his death a musical quartette was entertained at his house on Thursday of each week. He died March 25, 1888.

Mrs. Drexel has for several years made her home at Penn Rhyn, on the Delaware river, part of a plantation of two hundred and fifty acres known as "Belle Voir," purchased by Abraham Bickley, a native of Sussex county, England, 1804, and named by him Penn Rhyn after the home of his ancestors in Wales. The old mansion house located on the historic Bristol pike, occupied by the Bickley family for nearly a century, descended to Lloyd Wharton, an uncle of Mrs. Drexel, who thereupon took the name of Lloyd Wharton Bickley. After his death, it was occupied for some years by his widow, at whose death it passed to her son, Dr. Lloyd Wharton Bickley, who in 1899 conveyed it to Mrs. Drexel. It commands a fine view of the Delaware river and the surrounding country, and is now, as it has been for centuries, the scene of a generous hospitality. Mrs. Drexel has enlarged the house and made extensive improvements in the grounds. She lives here all the year, making occasional visits to her Philadelphia house.

He was one of the early members of the "Colony In Schuylkill," and its Sheriff in 1760. During the Revolutionary War, he was proprietor of a rope walk, and furnished most of the cordage for the vessels of our infant navy equipped at Philadelphia. He was buried in the Friends Burying Ground, May 4, 1785. He married (first) November 2, 1754, Mary, daughter of Peregrine Hogg, who lived for a time in Philadelphia, but later was a merchant of London, England, by his wife, Mary, daughter of George Fitzwater, who came to Philadelphia in 1682 from Handworth, Middlesex, England, with his parents, Thomas and Mary Fitzwater, and became a prominent merchant and magistrate. James Wharton married (second) September 14, 1773, Christiana Redd; his first wife, Mary Hogg, died April 13, 1772, aged thirty-five years. He also survived his second wife, and left seven children, all except one by the first wife.

Joseph Wharton, father of above named children, was one of original members of Colony in Schuylkill, 1732, and of the Fishing Company of Fort St. Davids, 1763 (consolidated with the Fishing Company of the State in Schuylkill, later.) He was one of the first contributors to the Pennsylvania Hospital, 1751, and was one of the signers of Provincial paper money, 1755-6-7-8.

THOMAS WHARTON, eldest son of Joseph and Hannah (Carpenter) Wharton, born in Philadelphia, January 15, 1730-1, became a merchant of great wealth, and exercised a large influence among the prominent, wealthy members of the Society of Friends. He was a partner with Galloway and Goddard in establishing the Chronicle, and a man of high intellectual ability and unswerving devotion to the principles of the Society of Friends. He was one of the first signers of the Non-importation Agreement, but persistently refused to sanction a resort to arms in defence of the rights of the Colonies, and thus became one of the first to be placed under suspicion, as entertaining opinions "inimical to the cause of the Colonies," and with many others was exiled to Virginia in 1777. Unbending in his opposition to war, he was prosecuted as an enemy to his country and his large estate was confiscated. Prior to the war he had been a man of large influence, and took an active part in the affairs of the city. He was a manager of the Pennsylvania Hospital, 1762-69; and again, 1772-79, and its treasurer, 1769-72. He died in the winter of 1782.

Thomas Wharton married Rachel, born February 21, 1729-30, daughter of Jacob and Susanna (Hudson) Medcalf, and had issue:

SAMUEL WHARTON, second son of Joseph and Hannah (Carpenter) Wharton, born in Philadelphia, May 3, 1732, was also a prominent and influential merchant of Philadelphia. He was a member of the firm of Baynton, Wharton & Morgan, one of the largest commercial houses of Colonial times. Mr. Wharton was a highly cultured scholar and polished gentleman. He was one of the prominent members of the Ohio Company who planned to settle the Northwestern Territory in 1767, in which connection he was closely associated with Dr. Franklin and Sir William Johnson. He was one of the signers of the Non-importation Agreement in 1765, and was always in entire accord with the leading spirits in the prosecution of the war for independence. He was deputed by the Ohio Company to go to England and solicit the confirmation of the grant of the Ohio country, and succeeded in obtaining the grant, but during his stay in England his correspondence with Franklin, then in France, in reference to the Revolution, was discovered and he was forced to flee to France, where he joined Franklin and remained for some time. He returned to Philadelphia in 1780, and February 9, 1781, took the oath of allegiance to the State of Pennsylvania. He was a member of Continental Congress, 1782-3, and a Justice of the Peace from May 10, 1784, to his resignation, May 13, 1791. He died in March, 1800. His wife was Sarah, daughter of Stephen and Rebecca (Hussey) Lewis, and they had issue:

JOSEPH WHARTON, JR., third son of Joseph and Hannah (Carpenter) Wharton, born in Philadelphia, March 21, 1733-4, was also an active and successful merchant in the days of Philadelphia's commercial pre-eminence prior to the war for independence. He devoted much time to literary pursuits and was a fine classical scholar and linguist, one of the most accomplished Greek scholars of his day. The obituary notice of him in the Advertiser, says: "Few men possessed such intimate acquaintance with the language and literature of Greece and Rome." In the years immediately preceding the Revolution he spent some time in England, and while there was a correspondent to the Pennsylvania Journal, over the signature "Wigwam." He wrote such strong letters in the interest of the Colonies, which being reproduced in the English Journals, were widely commented upon, and attracted the attention of the authorities, who discovering their authorship, the King's Messengers were sent to arrest him, but through timely warning he escaped to France, where he spent some time in the Society of Benjamin West, with whom he enjoyed an intimate acquaintance. It was through his solicitation that the eminent artist presented to the Pennsylvania Hospital his famous picture of "Christ Healing the Sick." He met with heavy financial losses during the Revolution, and after its close was compelled to close out his business, and lived a retired life until his death, December 25, 1816. He married, June 18, 1760, Sarah, born August 25, 1740, daughter of Job and Sarah Tallman, and they had issue:

CHARLES WHARTON, eighth child of Joseph and Hannah (Carpenter) Wharton, born in Philadelphia, January 11, 1743-4, though a birthright member of the Society of Friends, and a regular attendant of their meetings, early identified himself with the cause of the Colonies. On November 11, 1775, he presented a petition to Congress to be appointed Commissary of the Pennsylvania Battalion, then being raised for the campaign in New Jersey, and though taking no active part in the military operations, gave his moral and financial support to the cause throughout the struggle, taking the Oath of Allegiance, July 3, 1778. He was a successful merchant and extensive importer. He died at his home, 136 South Second street, March 15, 1836. He was three times married, but his children were all by his third wife, Hannah Redwood. He married (first) at Christ Church, March 12, 1772, Jemima Edwards, who was buried November 13, of the same year, aged twenty-one years. He married (second) at Friends' Meeting, October 22, 1778, Elizabeth Richardson. She died May 23, 1782, aged thirty years. Abraham Redwood, grandfather of Mrs. Wharton, was born at Bristol, England, 1665. In 1687 he went to the island of Antigua, British West Indies, where he was engaged in trade until 1715, when he removed to Salem, Massachusetts. He died January 17, 1728-9. He married on the island of Antigua, Mehitabel Langford, who died there, leaving several children, among them Abraham Redwood, born 1709, founder in 1747 of Redwood Library at Newport, Rhode Island, of which he was President until his death, March 6, 1788. her mother being a daughter of John Rodman, and had married (first) Jonathan Dickinson.

KIRKBRIDE FAMILY.

JOSEPH KIRKBRIDE, founder of the family in America, was a son of Matthew and Magdalene Kirkbride, of parish of Kirkbride, twelve miles west of Carlisle, county of Cumberland, England.

Rev. W. R. Hopper, B. A., Rector of Kirkbride in 1898, gives us the following account of the ancient parish and family:

"The Church of Kirkbride was founded before the Conquest and dedicated to St. Brydoch, or 'Bride,' one of the earliest Christian missionaries, who came over from Ireland to convert the inhabitants of the wild regions bordering on the Solway Firth.

"The village of Kirkbride, after being in the possession of various Norman Barons, descended to Odard, III Baron of Wilton, and his posterity, as was customary in those times, henceforward took their name from that of their estate and were known as de Kirkbride. Their descent was as follows: Adam de Kirkbride; Adam de Kirkbride; Richard de Kirkbride; Richard de Kirkbride, Robert de Kirkbride, 1295 A. D.; Walter de Kirkbride, (Knight of the Shire, A. D. 1316); Richard de Kirkbride; Richard de Kirkbride, Richard de Kirkbride; George Kirkbride (last of the direct succession, sold the manor) temp 1540.

It is probable that the ancient registers of Kirkbride Church were destroyed during the tumult of the Commonwealth, when church property suffered in all parts of England, for the present registers do not date further back than the Restoration, 1660. Consequently it is impossible to trace any of the records of the Kirkbrides or Kirkbride during the years between 1540 and 1660. The first entry in the Register is 'Nov. 14, 1664 Buried John Kirkbride.'

"The various entries in the parish registers are necessarily incomplete, as during the latter half of the 17th Century and the first half of the 18th Century, many of this family appear to have been Quakers and to have been married and buried according to their own rites, of which events there is no record in the Registers of the Church. Some appear to have been baptized late in life, preparatory to the administration of the Sacraments before death, and Thomas Kirkbride ('ye Quaker') was baptized just before his second marriage, according to the rite of the Church.

"The Quaker meetinghouse still exists, a deserted little building, and in its now ruinous graveyard there are a few nameless mounds. * * * It may be mentioned that there appears to have been during the latter half of the last century, a considerable emigration of individuals from these parts to America, and more particularly to the West Indies. There are few gravestones in the ancient graveyard of Kirkbride that are more than one hundred years old, owing to the previous overcrowding and illusage, and none of these bear the name of Kirkbride, but some old inhabitants remember to have seen such. * * * The original family of Kirkbride, the first to take their name from the village and church of St. Bride, had their manor house here for many generations, but its site is lost in the mists of antiquity; probably it stood on the site of the present Rectory, which is a very old building, rebuilt and added to in 1790."

The loss of the records above mentioned has made it impossible to trace the ancestry of Joseph Kirkbride or to connect it with the original family. Joseph Kirkbride was born 7mo. 29, 1662, at Oulton. His birth is recorded in Holme monthly meeting. His parents, Matthew and Magdalene Kirkbride, had joined the Society of Friends soon after its rise in 1652, and therefore were among the earliest Friends in England, and he and his brothers and sister were born members of meeting.

The children of Matthew and Magdalene Kirkbride were:

John Kirkbride, b. 12mo. 26, 1656;
 Matthew Kirkbride, b. 3mo. 14, 1659; d. 2mo. 22, 1705;
 Joseph Kirkbride, b. 7mo. 29, 1662; d. 1mo. 1, 1737-8;
 Sarra Kirkbride, b. 4mo. 2, 1665;
 Thomas Kirkbride, b. 6mo. 24, 1668.

Joseph Kirkbride, like many Friends of his time, was attracted to the new Colony then being founded by William Penn. At the age of nineteen, he left the service of the master to whom he was apprenticed, and carrying with him a flail as his only stock in trade, took passage on the vessel, "Bristol Factor," which arrived in the Delaware river, December 11, 1681. It is worthy of note that during a religious visit to England eighteen years later, he gave full satisfaction to his old master for the time of which he had been unjustly deprived.

Soon after landing, Joseph Kirkbride was heard of in the Proprietor's employ at Pennsbury, and a little later he moved to New Jersey. In 1687 he returned to Pennsylvania, and the records of Falls Monthly Meeting show that on 10mo. 7, 1687, Joseph Kirkbride and Phebe, daughter of Randolph Blackshaw, declared their intentions of marriage the first time. Next month, the committee reported him clear of other engagements during his abode here, but as he had mostly resided in Jersey he had better forbear further proceedings until he produced a certificate from Friends in Jersey where he had resided. On 8th. mo. 7th, 1688, Joseph brought a certificate from Friends in Jersey concerning his clearness. They then declared their intentions the second time and were allowed to accomplish the same. They were married 1st Mo. 13, 1688-9, the record of the marriage appearing on the registry of Middletown or "Beshaminy" Meeting, and not on that of Falls, where the consent of Friends was obtained.

Phebe Blackshaw had accompanied her parents, Randolph and Alice (Burgis) Blackshaw, in 1682, from Hollingee, Cheshire, on the ship, "Submission," from Liverpool, which by the dishonesty of the master landed its passengers at Chop-tank, Maryland, November 2, 1682; from whence Randolph Blackshaw and his daughter Phebe at once made their way to Bucks county to be followed later by the remainder of the family. Phebe died in 1701, and Joseph Kirkbride married (second) December 17, 1702, Sarah, born at Dore-House, Handworth, Yorkshire, England, June 7, 1675, daughter of Mahlon Stacy, of Dore-House, and his wife, Rebecca Ely, of Mansfield, whom he married July 29, 1668. Mahlon Stacy belonged to an ancient family of Yorkshire. He was baptized July 1, 1638, and became a convert of George Fox prior to his marriage.

He was with William Penn, one of the creditors of Edward Byllinge, who had purchased of Lord Berkley the right which Berkley held to the lands of the Western Division of the Province of New Jersey, and Byllinge conveyed to these creditors nine-tenths of the Province in satisfaction of their claims. To Mahlon Stacy and four others was assigned one-tenth, and by agreement dated May 3, 1678, they were granted the liberty to choose any one-tenth. They chose the land "from the ffals of Dellaware downward." In October, 1678, Mahlon Stacy, with his wife, one son, several daughters, and men and women servants, sailed from Hull, England, in the ship, "Shield," Captain Daniel Towers, the earliest English vessel to ascend the river Delaware as far north as Burlington, where she anchored in December, 1678.

Mahlon Stacy chose the upper part of "Yorkshire Tenth" for his share and made his home on the present site of Trenton, where he took up 800 acres of land on the Assanpink creek, and built a log house for his family. In 1680 he built a mill on the Assanpink, the second in the Province, which supplied the early settlers on the Pennsylvania side of the Delaware for some years. This mill and plantation of 400 acres descended to his son, Mahlon Stacy Jr. (Mahlon Sr. having conveyed 400 acres to his brother-in-law, Joshua Ely, in 1685). In 1714 Mahlon Stacy Jr. sold his father's mill and plantation to William Trent, later Chief Justice of New Jersey, then a resident of Philadelphia, and Trent erected a new stone mill which stood until 1822, and also erected a fine mansion on the site of Mahlon Stacy's log cabin, and for him the town of "Trentown" later Trenton was named. Mahlon Stacy owned many large tracts of land in other parts of West Jersey, and was one of the most prominent men of the Province, filling the positions of King's Councillor, Assemblyman, Justice, Commissioner for settling and regulating lands, etc. He was likewise a Minister among Friends in America. He frequently attended Friends' Meeting at Falls, in Pennsylvania, and four of his five daughters married members of that meeting. He died April 3, 1704; his wife, Rebecca Ely, surviving him until 1711.

Sarah (Stacy) Kirkbride died soon after the birth of her only child, Mahlon Kirkbride, which occurred November 18, 1705, and Joseph Kirkbride married (third) January 17, 1704-5, Mary (Fletcher) Yardley, daughter of Robert Fletcher, of Abington, Philadelphia (now Montgomery) county, Pennsylvania, and widow of Enoch Yardley, of Yardley, Bucks county. She survived him.

Joseph Kirkbride had meanwhile become a power in the community. He was early a minister in the Society of Friends and is frequently mentioned in the records of Falls Meeting. "2mo. 5, 1699, Joseph Kirkbride opened a concern to pay a religious visit to Friends in England." Phineas Pemberton next month reported "his affairs would be left in a good posture, and his wife consents to the same." A certificate was granted. He returned to Pennsylvania in 1700 on the ship "Welcome." "10mo. 4, 1700, Joseph Kirkbride returned his certificate with endorsements of satisfaction with his religious services from Friends in England." The diary which he kept during the journey is still preserved.

"After his return he continued diligent in the prosecution of his religious engagements, though they were sometimes inconveniently and unprofitably interfered with by his many public civil appointments; he was often employed in important services in the Yearly Meeting, and frequently wrote the epistles issued by that body, particularly those addressed to the Yearly Meeting in London. Proud says, 'he is said to have been an exemplary and zealous promoter of the religion of his profession, and a very serviceable person in divers respects and capacities.' Smith says, 'he finished his course in the unity of his brethren, in which he lived nearly fifty years.'"

Joseph Kirkbride was a member of the Assembly from Bucks county, at intervals during a period of forty years; 1698-1712-13-14-16-18-20-26-27-28-30-37-38. He was Justice of the Peace, 1708-09-10-15-17-18-22-23-26; and one of the commissioners to survey the line between New Jersey and New York, 1719.

"Joseph Kirkbride was an active land surveyor, whose operations were extended far and wide, affording him facilities for business observations on the value of different sections of the country, and opportunities for purchasing lands that met his views as they came into the market, until he became the owner of 13,439 acres, which he held at the time of his decease. These lands were scattered here and there from Suckasunning in Morris county, to Woodbridge on Staten Island sound; and to Salem and the head of the Morris River in New Jersey; from New Britain and Plumstead to the town of Bristol, in Bucks county and on the river Schuylkill, in Philadelphia, which he distributed by his will among his family, besides a farm to each of his sons, Joseph, Mahlon and John."

When the Free Society of Traders closed out their affairs in 1720, and their large tracts of land in Bucks county were sold by trustees named in an Act of Parliament, the tract of about 5500 acres lying west of Buckingham township, and including a large part of the present county seat, was purchased by Jeremiah Langhorne, who in 1729 conveyed to Joseph Kirkbride three tracts aggregating 2579 acres, and it was out of this land that Joseph Kirkbride sold to the Doyles, father and son, the land upon which the founders of Doylestown settled. Joseph Kirkbride sold the greater part of his Society lands in his lifetime, but about 500 acres of it was devised by him to his daughter Jane, wife of Samuel Smith, and later became the property of her brother, Mahlon Kirkbride, from whom it descended to his son Robert, who settled thereon, and was occupied by that branch of the family for many years.

Joseph Kirkbride was executor of Thomas Stevenson's will, in 1720, and in the sale of the large holdings of real estate in Bucks county, a tract of 850 acres adjoining the Society Tract on the northwest, and lying partly in Hilltown and New Britain townships respectively, was purchased by Joseph Kirkbride, the conveyance being made through John Sotcher, as "straw man." This land he owned at his death and devised to his son, John Kirkbride.

Joseph Kirkbride died "in the beginning of the first month" March, 1737-8. Thomas Chalkley in his Journal after recording in his attendance at the funeral of Hannah, wife of John Mickle, at Newtown, in West Jersey, "the beginning of the first month (being the fifth of the weekk)" continues, "As soon as I returned to Philadelphia, on the sixth day of the week, I heard of the death of Joseph Kirkbride, at Isreal Pemberton's, who told me I was desired to be at his burial. He, his son, and William Logan, accompanied me as far as Samuel Bunting's that afternoon, with which journey I was exceedingly tired, * * *, but being refreshed with a good night's rest I went in the morning to the house of my deceased friend. There was a multitude of people at the burial, among whom we had a good opportunity to invite them to lay hold on truth and prepare for another world. * * * Robert Jordan was at this meeting and had good service therein; it concluded in supplication for the widow and fatherless, and for mankind in general."

The will of Joseph Kirkbride, dated June 5, 1736, was probated April 18, 1738. It devises to his son Joseph 535 acres on the "River Scoolkill, in the county of Philadelphia," and 1666 acres in Hunterdon county, New Jersey; to his three sons, Joseph, Mahlon, and John, 6052 acres in Hunterdon county, "situate at a place called Suckasning," and also his rights and reversions in the unlocated land in the Eastern Division of New Jersey; to his son Mahlon, 650 acres at Great Bay Meadow, in the county of Hunterdon, "which I surveyed in company with Thomas Lambert and John Reading;" to his son John the plantation "upon which I now dwelt" subject to a life interest therein to his wife Mary, in one-half thereof, also 528 acres bought of James Sutton, Thomas Pugh and Ruth Holm, (Hulme), 900 acres in New Britain, bought of John Sotcher, 340 acres in Makefield township, in tenure of John and James Siddal, lot and storehouse in Bristol, and negro boys, Isaac, Cuffe and Ishmall; to his son-in-law, Thomas Marriott, 1250 acres of land in Hunterdon County, upon the Delaware river, "neare the Sinneston ffals," and 500 acres at Minnisinks in said county of Hunterdon; to his daughter Martha Marriott, 330 pounds money of New Jersey; to his daughter Sarah Kirkbride 325 acres "on the south side of the roade that leads to ffalss Meeting," and 500 pounds in money, etc., to his daughter Jane Kirkbride, 442 acres of land in Bucks county, adjoining Edward Doyle, and 500 pounds: to his granddaughter Hannah Murphy 250 acres in Plumstead (what was later Bedminster) township to the children of his daughter Phebe, (wife of John Hutchinson), said Hannah Murphy, excepted each 20 pounds; to Cousin Joseph Kirkbride, 10 pounds; to cousin Thomas Kirkbride, 40 pounds; to son Joseph, "my part of Tract of Land at Morris River in County of Salem, and Province of New Jersey, which I hold in partnership with the heirs of Thomas Lambert and William Biles * * * "my will is that my said son Joseph shall sell the said Tract of Land as soon as he can after my deceas and that he put a hundred pounds to Interest toward reasing a fund toward maintaining a ffree School to be erected at or neare the ffalss Meeting House, the rest of the money is at his own disposal as hee shall think fi;" to his wife Mary all the remainder of a tract of land in Hunterdon county, New Jersey, on the south branch of the Raritan river bought of John Budd, and William Budd, and also all other lands and tenements whatsoever and all the residue of his estate; she with sons Joseph and John are named as executors.

COLONEL JOSEPH KIRKBRIDE, only son of Joseph Kirkbride Jr., born in Bucks county, August 13, 1731, was one of the most prominent figures in his native county in the early days of the Revolutionary struggle. He was one of the Deputies to the Provincial Convention held at Philadelphia, July 15, 1774, was one of the most active in the formation of the Bucks County Committee of Safety, by which he was named on May 9, 1775, as one of the Delegates "to meet in Provincial Convention, if any should be found necessary," and he served in the General Assembly from Bucks county from 1776 to 1778. Born and reared in the faith of the Society of Friends, his ardent patriotism carried him beyond the pale of that sect, and its non-combatant principles, when it became evident that force must be resorted to for the preservation of the liberties of the Colonies. When, in May, 1775, the Committee of Safety recommended the people of the county to form themselves into military associations, Joseph Kirkbride was elected Colonel of the First Battalion of Bucks County Associators, and on May 9, 1777, he was appointed Lieutenant of the county, in which position he was active in collecting recruits, arms, and supplies for the use of the army; and in the repression of the Tory element in the county. On February 14, 1778, he wrote to President Wharton, as follows: "I propose (if possible) to keep up a compeyent number of Horses, as the General finds them very useful * * * I have agreed to raise a small party of Foot Volunteers to check the Influence of the Torys below Bristol and in the neighborhood near Neshaminy, which will be some security to the people of that quarter." The next day he again wrote to the Chief Executive of the State, "I am doing everything in my power to spirit up a small party to keep down the Torys until we can get some better defence."

In May, 1778, the British soldiers made an expedition out of Philadelphia, and among other damage done they burned the residence of Col. Kirkbride, who thus speaks of the event in a letter to President Wharton: "The enemy have lately Burnt two Valuable Dwelling Houses, with all my out Houses of Every kind and sort, a great deal of Furniture, Utensils, Corn, Hay, etc. and Intirely Dislodging my Family, is the only apology I can offer your Excellency for my unpunctuality. Notwithstanding, I can say with sincerity, I had rather lose ten such Estates than to be suspected to be unfriendly to my Country."

While in public life Col. Kirkbride made the acquaintance of Thomas Paine and a friendship sprung up between them that lasted many years. In 1802, after Paine had rendered himself obnoxious to many by the publication of his "Age of Reason," he called on Col. Kirkbride, then residing at Bordentown, New Jersey. The Colonel, remembering the eminent service Paine had rendered the Patriot cause, and their former friendship, gave him a kindly greeting, although he was far from approving the views expressed in the work that had aroused such indignation among church people. Upon Paine's departure Col. Kirkbride took him in his own carriage to Trenton, and was subjected, to some extent, to the indignities heaped upon Paine by the mob. Col. Kirkbride was one of the early members of the American Philosophical Society, and a man of much culture and intellectual ability. He died at Bordentown, October 26, 1803, at the age of seventy-two years, and is buried in the Borden lot in that town. He married Mary Rogers and left issue.

MAHLON KIRKBRIDE, only child of Joseph Kirkbride Sr., by his second wife, Sarah Stacy, born November 18, 1703, married at Falls Meeting, November 12, 1724, Mary, daughter of Penn's faithful stewards at Pennsbury, John and Mary (Loftus) Sotcher, and settled on a plantation in Lower Makefield township, Bucks county, erecting thereon a stone house in 1750, which remained standing and in good order until torn down by his great-grandson in 1853, to make way for a more modern structure. It was for more than a century a favorite and welcome sojourning place for Friends travelling in the ministry.

Like his father, Mahlon Kirkbride was active in public affairs. He was a member of Colonial Assembly for fourteen years between 1740 and 1756, when he resigned upon the request of the home government that Friends, not in accord with the policy of arming troops for defence of the frontiers, should not seek to serve in the Assembly. He was also a Justice of the Peace and of the County Courts. He was a consistent member of the Society of Friends, and an Elder of Falls Monthly Meeting from early life until his death. He was one of the committee appointed by Pennsylvania Assembly in 1754 to visit the Pennsylvania Hospital, to which he had been one of the early contributors. He died at his home in Lower Makefield, Bucks county, November 17, 1776.

Mary Sotcher, wife of Mahlon Kirkbride, born in Falls township, Bucks county, September 15, 1704, was the second daughter of John and Mary (Loftus) Sotcher, William Penn's steward and stewardess at Pennsbury, his Bucks county home, he having brought them, then single, from England, with him on his second visit to his colony in 1699 to fill those positions. John Sotcher and Mary Loftus were already betrothed when Penn was preparing to leave and return to England in 1701. The Proprietor wished the marriage to take place before his departure and at his request, the Monthly Meeting at which they had declared their intentions adjourned that day week, instead of to the next month as usual, so that the committee appointed could report on their "clearness," and their second declaration of intentions could be received. On the day following this adjourned meeting, October 16, 1701, a public meeting was held at which they were married, William Penn being one of the witnesses and signed the certificate, the original of which now hangs in Washington's Headquarters at Morristown, New Jersey. William Penn never returned to Pennsylvania, and his home at Pennsbury and its furniture remained in the custody of the Sotcher family. A chest and cradle which came from Pennsbury and are said to have been brought over from England in 1682, by William Penn, belonged to Mary Sotcher, and were preserved in the Kirkbride family for generations. They are now among the collections of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia.

John Sotcher became prominent in public affairs. He served in the Colonial Assembly for the session of 1712-13, and again returned in 1715, was regularly re-elected and served in every session to and including that of 1722-23; he took a more or less conspicuous part in the proceedings of the House and served on many of its more important committees. He died January 19, 1729-30. His will made in December preceding his death mentions his daughter Mary Kirkbride, his son-in-law, Mahlon Kirkbride, his son-in-law, Joseph Kirkbride, Jr.; daughter, Anne, wife of Mark Watson, and their son, Joseph Watson; granddaughter, Mary Kirkbride; and his son, Robert Sotcher, to whom he devises the bulk of his estate, and whom he names as executor. A legacy of five pounds is given to Falls Monthly Meeting for maintenance and repairs of the graveyard. Mary (Loftus) Sotcher died before her husband. They had four children, viz.:

Hannah Sotcher, b. Jan. 25, 1702-3; m. Joseph Kirkbride, Jr.; d. s. p. soon after marriage;

Mary Sotcher, b. Sept. 15, 1704; m. Mahlon Kirkbride;

Robert Sotcher, b. Nov. 3, 1706; m. Mercy Brown, and left issue;

Anne Sotcher, b. March 27, 1709-10; m. Mark Watson, and left issue

Mahlon Kirkbride retained much of the real estate he had inherited from his father and acquired large holdings in other localities. His will dated Fifth Month (May) 18, 1774, and proven November 30, 1776, devises to his wife Mary, various articles of personal property, among them his "riding Chair and harnis thereunto belonging, also three Books, to wit, My Great Bible, Thomas Chalkley's Journal and Piety Promoted," also 1000 pounds current money of the Province, and certain quaintly described rights in the house and farm during her widowhood; to his son Stacy he devises one-third interest in a tract of land in Morris county (N. J.), "called and known by the Name of the Mine Tract; together with one equal and undivided third part of the mine;" also a plantation of 400 acres in the same county in the tenure of Thomas Logan, during life, then to his son, Joseph Kirkbride, and in case of death of Joseph in his minority to his three sisters, Mary, Prudence and Sarah; to his son Mahlon, 200 acres in Morris county in tenure of Daniel Kelsey, and a lot of half an acre near Falls Ferry, and 600 pounds in money; to his son Robert 250 acres in Morris county, in tenure of David Logan, 200 acres in tenure of Felix Doran, a lot of half an acre near the Falls Ferry, and 400 pounds in money; to his son Jonathan the "Messuage Plantation & Tract of Land Whereon I now live together with the Tenement now in tenure of Joseph Hutchinson," together with all the stock, cattle, sheep, horses, swine, husbandry utensils and farming instruments thereon, subject to the privileges, etc., granted to his mother; also 200 acres in Morris county, in tenure of Samuel Hillock, and a lot near Falls Ferry; also one-quarter of a Property in West Jersey; to his daughter Mary Taylor 418 acres in Morris county in tenure of Phebe Riggs, and a lot at Falls Ferry, and 600 pounds in money; to his daughter Sarah Yeardley, 355 acres in Morris county in tenure of James Curdie and his son John, a lot at Falls Ferry and 300 pounds in money; to grandson, Joseph Taylor, a plantation of 420 acres at a place called Black Oak Thicket in Loudon county, Virginia, and "my rifel Gun;" to grandsons, Stacy Taylor and Mahlon Taylor, sons of his daughter, Letitia Taylor, a plantation of 450 acres in Loudon county, Virginia, conveyed to him by Mahlon Janney; to grandsons, Timothy, David and Jonathan Taylor, sons of Letitia, a plantation of 570 acres near a branch of Goose creek in Loudon county, Virginia, bought of John Hough and Edward Harden; grandson, Bernard Taylor, two lots at Falls Ferry, if he died in his minority, to his father, Timothy Taylor; to granddaughters, Hannah and Letitia Taylor, each 100 pounds; to each of daughter Mary Taylor's three children five pounds each; to grandson, Mahlon Taylor, son of Mary, a lot near Falls Ferry; 60 pounds is devised for the use of the school to be kept near Falls Meeting House, to be put to interest for the education of poor children at the said school; his Library of Books, except the three given to his wife to be divided between his three sons, Mahlon, Robert and Jonathan. These three sons with their mother are named as executors, and residuary legatees. Mary (Sotcher) Kirkbride died September 22, 1778.

JONATHAN KIRKBRIDE, fourth son and tenth child of Mahlon and Mary (Sotcher) Kirkbride, born on the old Kirkbride homestead in Lower Makefield, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, August 10, 1739, inherited the homestead at his father's death. He is described in Domestic Portraiture, as "about five feet, nine inches in height, square shouldered, light complexion, with flaxen hair, prominent nose and chin, small eyes set near together which twinkled from beneath prominent brows, bearing evidence in their expression of the nervous temperament that lurked within the man; his step was quick, and his words (though obstructed with a slight impediment of speech) came forth sharp and to the point. Of an independent spirit from the beginning, it did not wholly leave him during the 84 years to which his life was prolonged. * * * His gift in the ministry was early recognized," and for many years he sat at the head of Falls Meeting. On religious missions, "he travelled frequently to distant places. On these occasions he went out mounted on a pacing horse, a pair of leather saddle bags containing his wardrobe, hung behind the saddle; a silk oil-cloth cover for his hat and an oil-cloth cape over his shoulders which came down nearly to the saddle, as a protection from storms. Stout corduroy overalls, with rows of buttons on the outside to close them on, protected the breeches and stockings. A light walking stick did double duty, as a cane when on foot, and riding whip when mounted."

His home, as had been that of his father, was ever open to all. Unlike his cousin, Col. Joseph Kirkbride, he held to the strict tenets of the Society of Friends in which he had been reared. "During the war of the Revolution, Jonathan Kirkbride was brought into much exercise of mind, not on account of actual sufferings from the deprivations of the army (for he and his property were treated with greatest respect), but because of the multiplied horrors of war, * * * At one time, his house was daily surrounded with armed men from the camp on his own farm, and when he saw his children amusing themselves by throwing his apples from the garret windows among their war-worn visitors, he enjoyed equally with the children, seeing their guests scrambling for the much coveted fruit.

Jonathan Kirkbride married, at Chesterfield Monthly Meeting, Burlington county, New Jersey, November 18, 1767, Elizabeth, born October 16, 1744, daughter of Joseph Curtis, of Chesterfield, and his wife, Ann, daughter of Marmaduke Watson (born October 13, 1685, died 1749), and his wife, Elizabeth Pancoast, whom he married at Burlington Meeting, March 27, 1718. Marmaduke Watson was a son of Matthew and Anne (Manleverer) Watson, who emigrated from Scarborough, Yorkshire, prior to 1682, and settled in Chesterfield.

Elizabeth Pancoast, wife of Marmaduke Watson, was a daughter of William Pancoast and his wife, Hannah, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Jarvis) Scattergood, who were among the earliest settlers on the site of Philadelphia, living there in a cave on the banks of the Delaware until they could build a house. Joseph Curtis, father of Elizabeth (Curtis) Kirkbride, was a son of Thomas Curtis, of Ogston, Burlington county, and his wife, Elizabeth Ellis, married at Chesterfield, November 21, 1694; grandson of John Curtis, one of the earliest English settlers in West Jersey, owning one-fifteenth of a Proprietary right in the Province, and serving as a member of Assembly in 1682-83-84-85, and holding commission as a Justice in 1690, and until his death in 1695.

Elizabeth (Curtis) Kirkbride was highly esteemed in the community to which her marriage with Jonathan Kirkbride brought her. "The confidence of Friends was in a great degree reposed in her, from the time of her first coming among them in Pennsylvania to the day of her death. She filled the important station of an Elder in the church, and that of Overseer of the flock for many years, and for more than twenty years that of Clerk of the Women's Monthly Meeting." She died June 4, 1817. Her husband survived until November 4, 1824, in his eighty-sixth year.

Issue of Jonathan and Elizabeth (Curtis) Kirkbride:

JOHN KIRKBRIDE, b. Oct. 5, 1777; d. Jan. 14, 1864; m. Elizabeth Story; of whom presently; Anna Kirkbride, b. Feb. 19, 1780; d. Nov. 1, 1863; m. Nov. 17, 1802, William Taylor.

JOHN KIRKBRIDE, youngest son of Jonathan and Elizabeth (Curtis) Kirkbride, born on the old homestead in Lower Makefield, Bucks county, October 5, 1777, received a good education in Friends Schools, and as a young man was for a short time a teacher. He always manifested a keen and active interest in the cause of education, and was one of the founders of Falls Library Company in 1800. He was a man of great energy and enterprise and a person of weight and influence in the community. He received from his father the lower part of the homestead tract, along the river, and before his marriage in 1808, erected there a substantial stone house which is still standing (1908).

John Kirkbride married at Wrightstown Monthly Meeting, October 12, 1808, Elizabeth, born November 18, 1787, daughter of Thomas Story, of near Newtown, Bucks county, by his wife, Rachel Jenks; granddaughter of John and Elizabeth (Cutler) Story, and great-granddaughter of Thomas Story, born in Northumberland, England, in 1671, who came to Pennsylvania in 1699 in the "Canterbury," with William Penn on his second visit. He was a first cousin to Thomas Story (born 1670), the well-known Quaker preacher, the friend and adviser of Penn. Provincial Councillor, etc., who married Anne Shippen. Thomas Story, the emigrant of 1699, settled near Newtown, Bucks county, and in March, 1718, married Elizabeth, widow of William Buckman, and daughter of Thomas and Agnes Wilson. She was the second wife of William Buckman, the pioneer ancestor of that Bucks county family who had come in the "Welcome" with William Penn, accompanied by his wife Mary and daughters, Sarah and Mary. Thomas Story died September 10, 1753, at the age of eighty-two years.

John Story, son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Wilson) Story, born January 26, 1718-19, died November 10, 1804; married, in 1747, Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Cutler, of Bucks county, by his wife, Eleanor, daughter of Bernard Lane, of Burlington, New Jersey, and his wife, Janet Cowgill, who accompanied her mother, Ellen Cowgill, widow, to America in the "Welcome" in 1682. Ellen Cowgill brought a certificate from Settle Monthly Meeting. John Story lived and died in the neighborhood of Newtown, Bucks county.

Thomas Story, son of John and Elizabeth (Cutler) Story, married Rachel, born May 23, 1763, died February 12, 1830, daughter of Thomas and Rebecca (Richardson) Jenks, granddaughter of Thomas and Mercy (Wildman) Jenks, and great-granddaughter of Thomas and Susan Jenks from Wales.

Elizabeth Cutler, wife of John Story, was a daughter of Thomas Cutler, born November 16, 1681, son of Edmund Cutler, "webster," of "Slateburn in Rowland in Yorkshire," who "came in ye ship the Rebecka, of Liverpoole, the Mr. James Skinner, arrived (with his wife Isabel Cuttler) in the Delaware River, the 31st Day of the 8th Month, 1685." They were accompanied by their children: Elizabeth, born September 14, 1680; Thomas, born November 16, 1681; and William, born December 16, 1682; and also by John Cutler, brother of Edmund, and the following servants, Cornelius Nettlewood, Richard Mather, Ellin Wingreen, William Wardle and James Molinex.

Edmund Cutler settled on a farm in Southampton township, Bucks county, on the banks of the Neshaminy, where he died.

The Widow Isabel was still living at the date of the will of her son William in 1714, and is mentioned therein as were her daughters, Ellin and Jane Cutler, and Margaret Briggs, and her son Thomas.

John Cutler, brother of Edmund, was County Surveyor and made a resurvey of the county in 1703. He married Margery Haygurst, and had children: Benjamin, Elizabeth and Mary; he died in 1719. Thomas Cutler died March 9, 1759.

Rebecca (Richardson) Jenks, wife of Thomas Jenks, Jr., mother of Rachel (Jenks) Story, and grandmother of Elizabeth (Story) Kirkbride, wife of John Kirkbride, was a daughter of Joseph and Mary (Paxson) Richardson, of Attleboro, now Langhorne, Middletown township, Bucks county. Joseph Richardson, her father, was born at Healaugh, Yorkshire, England, March 4, 1695-6, and was a son of William Richardson, by his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Geoffrey and Ann Lonsdale.

On the 7th of 12th month, 1723-4, Richmond Monthly Meeting of Friends held at Chantry, county of York, England, granted the following certifiacte: "To Friends at Philadelphia or elsewhere: Whereas our Friends Joseph Richardson, Joshua Richardson, and their Sisters Ann and Rachel Richardson have signified to us their intention of removing themselves from us to Pensilvaney and desire a Certificate from us to you:

These are therefore to Certify whom it may concern that they are Children borne of believing Parents. And have frequently attended our Meetings, being regular and orderly in their Walking and conversation amongst us, hoping that as they grow in Years they may grow in Grace and favour with God. And as touching an Account of their being concerned with any respecting Marriage. Enquiry has been made, And there appears nothing but clearness from all hands on their account; So leave them to the Lord and your Christian Care; with the Salutation of Love in oure Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ; bids you and them Farewell in the Lord.

Signed at and in the behalfe of the said Meeting, by Jno. Ogden" and others.

The Richardsons settled in Middletown township, and by virtue of the above quoted certificate became members of Middletown Meeting. Joseph Richardson settled at "Four-Lanes-End," later Attleboro, now the borough of Langhorne, where about 1730, he opened a store which commanded a large trade. In 1738 he built there a stone dwelling house, still standing, in which he died April 15, 1772. He purchased at different periods farms in Middletown, Northampton and Southampton, and at his death was a large landed proprietor. Joseph Richardson married, December 21, 1732, Mary, daughter of William Paxson, Jr., and his wife, Mary Watson, and granddaughter of William Paxson, who came from Buckinghamshire, England, in 1682, with his wife, Mary Packingham, and settled in Middletown township. He was a member of Colonial Assembly from Bucks county for eight years, between 1692 and 1708. His son, William Paxson, born in Middletown in 1685, was also a member of Colonial Assembly, 1714, 1717 to 1720, 1722, 1726 to 1733; and a Colonial Justice, 1723, 1725 to 1727. William Paxson married (second) in 1711, Mary, daughter of Thomas Watson (also a member of Assembly and Colonial Justice) and his wife, Rebekah, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Bewley) Mark. Thomas Watson was a son of Thomas and Jannet (Feddell) Watson, of Cumberland county, England. The marriage certificate of Thomas and Rebecca, begins "Whereas Thomas Watson of Strawberryhow, in the Parish of Cockermouth, and Rebecka Mark, daughter of Thomas Mark, of Blockalhall, near Carlisle, both in the County of Cumberland," etc.

Thomas and Rebecka (Mark) Watson came to Bucks county bringing a certificate from Friends in England, which was read and accepted at Falls Meeting, Bucks county, May 6, 1702. They settled near the village of Oxford Valley in Bucks county, on a plantation of 365 acres which they called "Strawberryhow," after the Watson home in England, and Thomas Watson was frequently designated in official records as of "Strawberryhow," to distinguish him from Thomas Watson, of Buckingham, who was prominent at the same date. Mary Bewley, who married Thomas Mark, April 8, 1658, belonged to the ancient family of Bewley, in Cumberland, England, who trace back eleven generations to Thomas de Beaulieu, named in the subsidy Rolls in 1332-40. This family took an active part in the public life of their time and records are preserved showing numerous public positions which they held. In 1653 George Fox visited Cumberland, and Thomas Bewley, of Haltcliffe and Woodhall, father of Mary (Bewley) Mark, was deeply impressed with his teachings and became at once one of his most enthusiastic followers. The following references to him are taken from George Fox's Journal.

"From the aforesaid village we came up to Thomas Bewley's near Coldbeck, and from thence, having had some service for the Lord there, I passed to a market town, where I had a meeting at the Cross." In the same year George Fox was imprisoned at Carlisle, and after his release says:

"Now after I was set at liberty I went to Thomas Bewley's where there came a Baptist to oppose me, and he was convinced." Ten years later, in 1663, he narates in his Journal: "When I had visited Friends in those parts, * * * I passed through Northumberland and came into Cumberland to old Thomas Bewley's. And Friends came about me and said 'Would I come there to go into prison?' For there was great persecution in that country at that time: yet I had a general meeting at Thomas Bewley's which was large and precious." He is alluded to in this last extract as "old" Thomas Bewley to distinguish him from his son Thomas who was then married and living at Woodhall. Tradition represents Fox as spending some time at Woodhall and the room there occupied by him is still pointed out.

Thomas Bewley and his sons, George and Thomas, refused to pay tithes, and in addition to having their goods distrained, were with many others of the Society prosecuted and imprisoned, as shown by several references to them in Joseph Besse's Sufferings of the People called Quakers, (London, 1753). Under date of 1663, it is stated: "Thomas Bewley, after frequent seizures of his goods for tithes, was this year, on an exchequer process, committed to prison at Carlisle, where he lay near three years. In this year also seizures were made * * * on Thomas Bewley the younger to the value of £11, for a claim of £2 18s. for tithes." "Anno 1673. Thomas Bewley of Hatcliff-Hall, aged about 78, was prosecuted by Arthur Savage, priest, for 3 pounds prescription money, and had taken from him his feather-bed, bed-clothes, and a cupboard worth 5 pounds. The hardship of the poor old man's case so affected the neighborhood with compassion, that when the bayliff exposed those goods for sale, nobody would buy them at any rate; whereupon the priest sued the bayliff and made him pay both his demand and his costs."

This priest, Arthur Savage, then incumbent of the parish of Caldbeck, again prosecuted Thomas Bewley on November 1, 1674, for "tithe of wool, lambs, etc., and notwithstanding his very great age, sent him to prison."

This same priest had Thomas Bewley and George Bewley put in prison, where they remained for more than five years.

Thomas Bewley, Sr., of Hatcliff Hall, died in 1680, and was buried in the Friends burying-ground at Whelpo, near Caldbeck, 10mo. 11, 1680. His widow Dorothy was buried May 21, 1682, in the parish churchyard of Caldbeck. Thomas Mark, of Mosedale, in the parish of Caldbeck, Cumberland, father of Thomas Mark, who married Mary Bewley, was also a member of the Society of Friends, and suffered fines and imprisonment for conscience sake.

THOMAS STORY KIRKBRIDE, M. D., LL. D., eldest son of John and Elizabeth (Story) Kirkbride, was born near Morrisville, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, at the paternal home on the banks of the Delaware, July 31, 1809. After attending schools in the neighborhood of his home, he spent four years at a noted classical school in Trenton, New Jersey, and afterwards devoted one year to the special study of higher mathematics at Burlington, New Jersey. The following year he spent on his father's farm in practical pursuits, which in later years he felt to have been of permanent advantage to his health.

At the close of the year he read medicine with Dr. Nicholas Belleville, a distinguished physician and surgeon at Trenton, New Jersey, who had come from France with the forces under Marquis de Lafayette, during the American Revolution. Dr. Kirkbride graduated from the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania in 1832, and was immediately appointed Resident Physician at the Friends Asylum for the Insane, at Frankford, Philadelphia, remaining there one year. Dr. Kirkbride was noted from the first for his active interest in everything relating to the care of the patients and the management of the institution. On leaving the Friends' Asylum he received a flattering testimonial from the Board of Managers, and also from individual members of the Board a confidential request to return and take charge of the Asylum.

In 1833 he was elected Resident Physician at the Pennsylvania Hospital, where he remained two years. During his second year, his colleague was Dr. William W. Gerhard, and both were diligent in the careful examination and noting of all cases under treatment; their observations, published separately, were among the early Hospital clinical reports issued in this country.

In 1835 Dr. Kirkbride began general practice in Philadelphia and looked forward to devoting himself to surgery. He was a constant visitor at the Pennsylvania Hospital, keeping up his intimacy with the Medical Staff there engaged. The resignation of his friend, Dr. John Rhea Barton, led him to anticipate an appointment as his successor as Surgeon to the Hospital in the autumn of 1840. One summer morning, when walking in Race street, he met his friend, John Paul, an active member of the Board of Managers, who, to his entire surprise, asked him what would induce him to relinquish his long cherished plans and accept instead the office of Physician-in-Chief and Superintendent of the new Department for the Insane. It was a matter for serious consideration; his professional friends regarded the change as ill-advised, indeed as almost without justification. On the other hand, in the opportunity of starting a new institution, of developing new forms of management, and, in fact, of giving a new character to the care for the insane, Dr. Kirkbride finally saw inducements to forego his prospects of distinction as a surgeon. Without any solicitation, or even application, on his part, he was elected on October 12, 1840, to the post which he occupied until his death. After visiting institutions for the insane to the north and east of Philadelphia, he moved the following December, with his family, to the old mansion house within the Hospital grounds.

From this time Dr. Kirkbride's ability and varied gifts were consecrated to the insane. His energy and enthusiasm never flagged and his duties kept him always at his post. His forty-two Annual Reports give the record of his life. They are at once the history of the institution over which he presided and the story of his untiring service. So completely indeed is his career identified with the medical care and cure of the insane in hospital, that some knowledge of this subject is necessary for any true conception of his character and work. He represented a great idea which he found worthy of life-long devotion. Eyes trained by knowledge to see his own ideal and to descry the hospital of the future as it stood before his vision, can alone perceive the value or the meaning of his labors. His earliest reports are peculiarly interesting as character studies. Written shortly after he entered the specialty, they reveal marvellous maturity of thought and firm grasp of the latest principals in the care of the insane, while the entire series of Reports form a valuable treatise on insanity and the relations of the community to the insane.

Dr. Kirkbride was a pioneer in the movement for new and humane methods of treating the insane. In his early reports he insists that insanity should be considered a disease like other serious diseases, with equal hope of recovery. To emphasize this idea he urged the use of the name Hospital instead of Asylum. Bleeding and other debilitating treatment was given up entirely, restraint was seldom resorted to, comfortable and attractive rooms and wards took the place of the cells of an earlier day; the care-takers of the insane, instead of being "keepers" were attendants and nurses, and unvarying kindness and sympathy were made the rule of the Hospital. The beautiful grounds of the Hospital, in whose improvement Dr. Kirkbride took so keen an interest, were also felt to have their place in the moral treatment of the insane, together with the occupations and amusements which were provided for all those able to take part in them. The regular evening amusements, such as gymnastic drills, lectures, readings, magic-lantern exhibitions, (introduced as early as 1844) Dr. Kirkbride himself never failed to attend.

Within the wards of the Hospital he found delight in the exercise of that benign power over the insane in which he was unrivalled. To know him thoroughly one needed to see him surrounded by those to whom his life was devoted. Dignity, tempered by gentleness, invariable courtesy, tenderest sympathy and tact, marked all his intercourse with his patients. His "tranquil grace of tone and look" and manner, his wonderful patience and his genial disposition brought healing influences, which were strengthened by the resolute firmness, the unyielding perseverance and the fortitude of his character. The sane and the insane recognized within him a rare spiritual force.

In 1854 the wards were so overcrowded that further admissions were necessarily refused. He then suggested the erection of a separate building for men only, and published an "Appeal for the Insane," besides writing many articles for newspapers on the subject. He imparted his own enthusiasm to others, and many citizens, including the whole Board of Managers, threw themselves most heartily into the work.

For thirty years, although not always prominently before the public, his counsel was constantly sought by the medical societies and successive Legislatures of Pennsylvania, in every movement relating to the care of the insane. His yearly Reports and his work on the Construction of Hospitals for the Insane, are his principal writings, but he contributed essays, reviews and notices to the medical journals and wrote frequently for newspapers, especially the old United States Gazette, and North American. Memoirs of his valued friends, Dr. William Pepper Sr., Professor of Theory and Practice in the University of Pennsylvania, and Dr. Isaac Ray, the author of the "Medical Jurisprudence of Insanity" were written by request of the College of Physicians.

Dr. Kirkbride was one of the "original thirteen" physicians who, in 1844, founded the Association of Medical Superintendents, now the American Medico-Psychological Association. He was its first secretary, serving seven years; its vice-president for seven years, and its president from 1862 to 1870; he took the greatest interest in its proceedings, and was rarely absent from its meetings. He was a Fellow of the College of Physicians of Philadelphia; a member of the Philadelphia County Medical Society; Franklin Institute; Historical Society of Pennsylvania; American Philosophical Society; and an honorary member of the British Medico-Psychological Association, etc. He was for ten years a trustee of the State Lunatic Asylum at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and for more than forty years a manager of the Pennsylvania Institution for the Instruction of the Blind. In 1880 Lafayette College, Pennsylvania, conferred upon him the degree of LL. D.

In 1880, after recovering from a severe illness of several months, he returned, with renewed ardor, to his accustomed work. In March, 1883, he was prostrated by typhoid-pneumonia; his illness lasted nine months, and he died peacefully, December 16, 1883, in the seventy-fifth year of his age. The late Professor S. D. Gross, in his Autobiography, thus described Dr. Kirkbride's appearance: "In personal appearance Dr. Kirkbride was eminently attractive. He was of medium height, with a fine physique, a well-shaped head, and a countenance highly expressive of benevolence and warmth of heart. His voice was sweet and gentle, and his presence and demeanor were such as to win at once the affection and confidence of his most wayward patients." One of his oldest assistants, Dr. John Curwen, wrote of him as follows: "Laboring with a single aim for the relief and welfare of those to whose care he had devoted more than forty years of his life, he has left behind him in what he has written and in what he has done, a monument which will stand so long as the care of the insane will require the aid of those institutions with which his name and his fame have been so closely connected."

By resolution of the Board of Managers, an extended Memorial of Dr. Kirkbride's life was published with the annual report of the Hospital, to the contributors for the year 1883.

At a special meeting of the board of managers of the Hospital, held December 17, 1883, a minute was adopted and resolutions expressive of their sense of the great loss they had sustained and of their estimation of the value of his services; they also directed that a tablet be placed in the Centre Hall of the Department for Women, bearing the following inscription:

Dr. Thomas S. Kirkbride married (first) June 4, 1839, his cousin, Ann West, born March 14, 1814, died September 19, 1862, daughter of Joseph Richardson Jenks, of Philadelphia, (born in Bucks county, September 16, 1767, died June 26, 1858), many years a prosperous merchant of Philadelphia, and his wife, Ann, daughter of Charles and Hannah (Cooper) West, of Philadelphia. Joseph Richardson Jenks was a son of Thomas and Rebecca (Richardson) Jenks, of Bucks county, and a brother to Rachel (Jenks) Story, the maternal grandmother of Dr. Kirkbride.

James and Prudence West, paternal great-great-grandparents of Ann (West) Kirkbride, came from Bristol, England, and settled in Philadelphia in 1688. James

West purchased of William Penn a lot fronting 100 feet on Front street and extending from the river back along Vine street, with the right to extend wharves sixty feet into the river. Here he erected a shipyard and is said to have paid for the lot by erecting for Penn the first ocean sailing vessel constructed on the banks of the Delaware. The lot was subject to the rental of ten English silver shillings per year, or the value thereof; and was to be revalued at the end of fifty-one years. James West died in 1701, and letters of administration were granted on his estate to his widow, Prudence, October 1, 1701. Prudence West's will is dated 6mo. 5, 1702, and was proven August 14, 1702. It makes bequests to her sons, James, Jonathan and Charles, and a daughter Mary; devises three pounds to the Overseer of the Free School, and mentions "kinsman Roger Harrow."

Charles West, son of James and Prudence, born in the year 1690, succeeded to his father's lands and ship building plant. He died August 10, 1761, leaving sons, James, Thomas and Charles. His wife was Sarah Parsons, born 1692, died February 16, 1772. She was a daughter of Thomas and Joane Parsons, who, according to a narrative written by their grandson, James Parsons, in 1791, "were of the people called Quakers, of good repute among Friends and others, and of Comfortable circumstances in life; they were descended from ancient families on both sides as appears from the arms granted by Government to their ancestors. The general stir made by William Penn in encouraging Friends to remove to his favorite Colony of Pennsylvania, induced them with many others to go thither between the years 1685 and 1690, out of Somersetshire, in Old England. The first spot that grandfather and grandmother fixed on after their arrival was in a hut under a bank near the place now called Arch Street in Philadelphia. From thence they removed on a farm in Bucks county where grandmother Joane died, after which grandfather married again and then removed to Frankford, about five miles from Philadelphia. Thomas and Joane Parsons had three children, who grew up to men's and woman's estate, Thomas, Sarah and James. * * * Aunt Sarah, who lived to about eighty years of age, married Charles West of Philadelphia;" etc.

Charles West, father of Ann (West) Jenks, and son of Charles and Sarah (Parsons) West, was born in 1725, died April 15, 1795. He married, April 4, 1752, Hannah, born November 10, 1733, died November 26, 1813, daughter of Isaac Cooper and his wife, Hannah, daughter of Marmaduke Coate and Ann Pole, who came from Somersetshire and settled in Burlington, New Jersey, where he died in March, 1728-9. Isaac Cooper was a son of Joseph Cooper, of New Jersey, and his wife, Lydia, daughter of George Riggs, one of the early settlers of West Jersey; and a grandson of William Cooper, of Pine Point, near Camden, New Jersey, founder of the Cooper family of New Jersey, many members of which were closely associated with and residents of Philadelphia in Colonial times.

Ann West, youngest of the ten children of Charles and Hannah (Cooper) West, born May 25, 1774, died January 17, 1842; married, June 6, 1809, Joseph Richardson Jenks, before mentioned, and was the mother of Ann West Jenks, born March 14, 1814, who was married to Dr. Thomas Story Kirkbride, June 4, 1839, at the Friends Meeting House, at the corner of Sixth and Noble streets, Philadelphia.

Issue of Dr. Thomas S. and Ann W. (Jenks) Kirkbride:

Ann Jenks Kirkbride, b. June 29, 1840; d. March 30, 1907; m. Dr. Thomas George Morton, the distinguished physician and surgeon of Phila.;

JOSEPH JOHN KIRKBRIDE, b. Aug. 4, 1842; d. May 4, 1899; studied medicine, and graduated from the Medical Department of the Univ. of Pa. in 1872, having previously graduated from the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy; was Attending Physician of the Out-Patient Department of the Pennsylvania Hospital for more than twenty years; later gave up professional work and spent much time in travel, making one trip around the world and other extended journeys; was an enthusiastic woodsman, and published a small pamphlet on the "A. B. C. of Camping." He was one of the first amateur photographers, having taken it up in the earliest days of the cumbersome wet plate process, and his interest in the progress of the art never flagged; he was a Fellow of the Philadelphia College of Physicians; member of Philadelphia County Medical Society; Academy of Natural Sciences; Historical Society of Pennsylvania; and of the Union League and Rittenhouse clubs.

Dr. Thomas Story Kirkbride married (second) May 17, 1866, Eliza Ogden, daughter of Hon. Benjamin Franklin Butler, of New York, and his wife, Harriet Allen.

Benjamin Franklin Butler was born December 14, 1795, at Kinderhook Landing, in Columbia county, New York, and was a son of Medad Butler and his wife, Hannah Tyler, of Stuyvesant, New York. Medad Butler born at Branford, Connecticut, in 1765, migrated at the age of twenty-two years from Branford to Kinderhook Landing, now Stuyvesant, on the banks of the Hudson, and was a member of the New York legislature and for many years County Judge of Columbia county.

Jonathan Butler, grandfather of Medad Butler, was born in New London, Connecticut, and was a son of John Butler, of that town. He married Temperance, daughter of Daniel Buckingham, many years a Justice of the Peace in Saybrook, Connecticut, and the incumbent of a number of other important offices there; and granddaughter of Rev. Thomas Buckingham, a native of Milford, Connecticut, who was educated at the Hopkins School in New Haven, and was "long recognized as one of the most able men in the Colony." He was one of the trustees of what later became Yale College, organized on November 11, 1701, and until 1707 the Commencements were held each year at his house in Saybrook. He was also one of the "Moderators of that famous Synod that convened at Saybrook and formed the platform for the government of the Churches in 1708."

Ezekiel Butler, son of Jonathan and Temperance (Buckingham) Butler, was a salt-refiner, and during the Revolutionary War was ordered by the British to stop supplying the "Rebels" with salt; he paid no attention to the order, and his salt-works were twice destroyed, and he finally set his plant in a cave near Branford, Connecticut, where he continued to manufacture the much needed salt in secret. He died during the war and his wife buried his body in a field, as she did not dare to hold a public funeral, by reason of his disobedience of the orders of the British. His wife was Mabel, daughter of Ensign Isaac Jones, by his wife, Deborah, daughter of John Parker, Jr., by his wife, Mary, daughter of Lieut. Samuel Jones, who was "appointed or confirmed by the Court as Lieutenant of Saybrook Train Band," as shown by the Colonial Records of Connecticut. Ensign Isaac Jones was a son of Isaac Jones, and grandson of William Jones, Magistrate, 1662-4; Commissioner, 1664, and Deputy Governor of Connecticut, 1664, and 1691 to 1697; by his wife, Hannah, daughter of Theophilus Eaton, first Governor of Connecticut, 1639-57, by his wife, Ann (Lloyd) Yale, daughter of Bishop George Lloyd, of Chester, and widow of Thomas Yale. Gov. Eaton was also "Freeman of the Court of New Haven, chosen for the foundation work of the Church, 1639;" was Magistrate, 1639-42, and Commissioner, 1643-6 and 1654-7.

Benjamin Franklin Butler, son of Medad and Hannah (Tylee) Butler, was born at Kinderhook Landing, Columbia county, New York, December 14, 1795. He early showed great desire for reading and study and his teachers, young men from New England, who established a school at Kinderhook Landing, inspired him with an intelligent and enthusiastic love for the classics which he never lost.

Leaving school in 1811, he went to Hudson, New York, and entered the law office of Martin Van Buren, a personal friend of his father. Until his marriage in 1818 he was a member of Mr. Van Buren's family, and upon his admission to the bar in 1817 he became Mr. Van Buren's law partner in Albany. In 1821 he was appointed District Attorney of Albany county, and was the incumbent of that office, when, most unexpectedly to himself, he was appointed one of the Revisers of the Statutes of the State of New York, November 27, 1824, when he was seventeen days less than twenty-nine years of age.

In 1833 he became Attorney General of the United States under President Andrew Jackson, acting besides for five months, before the close of Jackson's term, as Secretary of War. He was also Attorney General under his old preceptor and law partner, Martin Van Buren, during his presidential term, retiring in 1838, at his own request, to enter upon the practice of law in New York City, but the appointment, by the president, to the office of United States District Attorney for the Southern District of New York, speedily followed. In 1848 Mr. Butler, severing his hitherto close association with the Democratic party, took an active part in the Free-Soil movement in New York State, and until his death in November, 1858, he continued firm in his assertion of the necessity for the absolute exclusion of slavery from the Territories and the new States of the Union.

Mr. Butler's last years of professional life were given to a litigation of great magnitude, to one of the cases involved in it, the Court of Appeals gave the hearing of an entire term. He was deeply and sincerely religious, and as catholic in his faith as he was humane in his sympathies. One of the sons of Benjamin Franklin Butler, and brother to Mrs. Thomas S. Kirkbride, William Allen Butler, was like his father a distinguished lawyer. He was also the author of the poem "Nothing to Wear."

Harriet Allen, wife of Hon. Benjamin F. Butler, was a daughter of Howard Allen and his wife, Lydia Hussey. Howard Allen enlisted, as a Continental soldier in Windham, Connecticut, in 1778, but later removed to Hudson, New York. Lydia (Hussey) Allen was the daughter of Paul and Margaret (Barker) Hussey, granddaughter of George and Elizabeth (Starbuck) Hussey; great-granddaughter of Stephen and Martha (Bunker) Hussey, and great-great-granddaughter of Christopher Hussey by his wife, Theodate, daughter of Rev. Stephen Bachilor. Stephen Hussey was the first child born at Lynn, Massachusetts, 1632. He went to Nantucket, and married Martha Bunker in 1676. He was a member of the Society of Friends before a meeting was organized on Nantucket Island, had lived for a time in Barbadoes and was possessed of considerable property. He was at one time a representative to the General Court, and died in 1718. Christopher Hussey, father of Stephen, was born in Dorking, Surrey, England, in 1599, and was a son of John Hussey and Mary Wood. According to the old records: "Of Mr. Christopher Hussey it may be said, he bore the character of a gentleman equal to any man who lived in his day." He was an early settler at Newbury, Massachusetts, and in 1636 was chosen one of the seven "Select Men" of that town. In 1638, with his father-in-law, Rev. Stephen Bachilor, and others, he settled the town of Hampton, New Hampshire; was a Justice there from 1639 for several years, also Town Clerk, and one of the first Deacons of the church. He became one of the Proprietors of Nantucket in 1659, and subsequently a sea captain. He was appointed by Charles II., one of the first Councillors of the Province of New Hampshire in 1679, and was buried in Hampton, 1686. His wife, Theodate Bachilor, whom he met in Holland, was a daughter of Rev. Stephen Bachilor, who was born in 1561, matriculated at St. John's College, Oxford, 1581, and was one of the first dissenting ministers in England. He fled from England to Holland to escape persecution, and with his daughter and son-in-law, Christopher Hussey, arrived in Boston, Massachusetts, in 1632. Prince says; "He was a man of fame in his days, a gentleman of learning and integrity and wrote a fine and curious hand." He was still more persecuted and slandered in America than he had been in England, having incurred the enmity of Governor Winthrop for opposing the union of church and state. He finally returned to England when over ninety years of age and died there in his one hundredth year.

Martha Bunker, wife of Stephen Hussey, was a daughter of George Bunker and Jane Godfrey, and granddaughter of William Bunker, a French Huguenot, who fled to England from Nantes. The name was undoubtedly originally spelled Bon Coeur.

Elizabeth Starbuck, wife of George Hussey, was a daughter of Nathaniel Starbuck, by his wife, Dionis, daughter of Hon. James Coffin, one of the Associate Proprietors of Nantucket, and the first Judge of Probate on the island in 1680; and granddaughter of Tristram Coffin, long Chief Magistrate of Nantucket, and one of the most distinguished men of his time, an account of whom is given elsewhere in these volumes. Nathaniel Starbuck, above mentioned, was a son of Nathaniel Starbuck by his wife, Mary, daughter of Tristram Coffin, Chief Magistrate of Nantucket, by his wife, Dionis Stevens; and a grandson of Edward Starbuck, born in England, 1604, who came to New Hampshire about 1636; Edward Starbuck was Representative to the General Court, 1643-46; was an Elder of the Church, but became a Baptist, and fled from Dover to Nantucket in an open boat with Thomas Macey, and lived there through the winter with the Indians. The following spring he brought his family to the island. He later became a prominent man on Nantucket and one of its Magistrates.

Mary Coffin, wife of Nathaniel Starbuck, Sr., was a woman of extraordinary power. John Richardson, Quaker Missionary from Pennsylvania, gives a graphic account of his first meeting with her and of her subsequent joining the Society of Friends. He says of her: "Mary Starbuck the Islanders esteemed as a Judge among them, for little of moment was done without her." She took an active part in town debates, usually opening her remarks with, "My husband and I having considered the subject, think," etc. She was as distinguished in her domestic economy as she was celebrated as a preacher. Thomas Story, Friend, (before alluded to in this narrative as a cousin to Thomas Story, ancestor of Elizabeth Story Kirkbride) refers to Mary Starbuck, as "in great reputation throughout the Island for her Knowledge in Matters of Religion, and an Oracle among them on that account, insomuch that they would not do anything without her Advice or Content therein."

Margaret Barker, wife of Paul Hussey, was a daughter of Robert Barker, by his wife, Jededah Chase; granddaughter of Samuel Barker, by his wife, Bethiah, daughter of John and Mary (Barnard) Folger, and great-granddaughter of Isaac Barker by his wife, Judith, daughter of Governor Thomas Prence and his wife, Mary Collier.

Thomas Prence, Governor of Plymouth Colony for eighteen years. Assistant thirteen years, Treasurer one year, member of Council of War five years, and Commissioner and alternate Commissioner many years, was born in Gloucestershire, England, 1600. "He was a worthy gentleman and very able for his office and faithful in the discharge thereof; studious of peace; a well-wisher to all that feared God and a terror to the wicked." But he was a zealot in his own belief and intolerant of all whose views did not accord with his. His prejudice against the Quakers was so strong that Arthur Howland, Jr., was fined five dollars for presuming to pay attention to his daughter Elizabeth (whom he afterwards married), and forbidden to see her. To his credit be it said, however, he used his influence to free his people from the superstition of witchcraft, and that he promoted public education. His wife, Mary, was a daughter of William Collier, a wealthy merchant, who came early to Plymouth, but soon removed to Duxbury; was Assistant Governor twenty-eight years, member of Council of War four years, member of Provincial Congress, 1643, and one of the Committee of Two, appointed by Congress to sign the Articles of Confederation. He died in Duxbury, 1671. "Four daughters of excellent character came with him," from England.

Peter Folger, grandfather of Bethiah Folger, wife of Samuel Barker, was a son of John Folger, and was born 1617. He came from Norwich, England, 1638, and went with his father to Martha's Vineyard, where he taught school and surveyed land. He also assisted Thomas Mayhew, Jr., in his labors as a missionary among the Indians. He removed to Nantucket Island in 1663, having been, July 4th, of that year, granted half as much land as one of twenty purchasers, on condition that "he come to inhabit on Island aforesaid." "Likewise that the said Peter Folger shall attend the English in the way of an Interpreter between the Indians and them upon all necessary occasions." He became a Magistrate soon after his settlement on the Island. Cotton Mather describes him as "An able, Godley Englishman who was employed in teaching the youth in Reading, Writing and the Principles of Religion by Catechism, being well learned likewise in the Scriptures and Capable of Help in religious matters." At Nantucket he was chosen Clerk of the Court and Recorder, July 21, 1673. He also surveyed lands for the settlers and was regarded as the scholar of the community. His daughter Abia was the mother of Dr. Benjamin Franklin, and his son John, who married Mary Barnard, was the father of Bethiah (Folger) Barker.

This Mary Barnard was a daughter of Nathaniel by his wife, Mary, daughter of Robert and Joanna (Harvey) Barnard. Thomas Barnard, father of Nathaniel, came to New England, about 1650, was one of the purchasers of Nantucket in 1659, and transferred one-half his interest to his brother Robert, above-named, who was of Salisbury and Andover prior to his removal to Nantucket in 1663, where he died in 1682. Thomas Barnard was killed by the Indians about 1677.

Jededah, wife of Robert Barker before mentioned, was a daughter of James Chase, by his wife, Rachel, daughter of John Brown, of Salem, by his wife, Rachel Gardner, granddaughter of Elder John Brown and Hannah Hobart, and great-granddaughter of Rev. Peter Hobart. Peter Hobart was born in Hingham, county Norfolk, England, 1604; was educated at Cambridge, England, came to New England in 1635, settled at Hingham, and died there in 1679. His father, Edmund Hobart, came from England with his wife and children in 1635, and was a member of the General Court, 1639, 1640-42. Rachel, wife of John Brown, above mentioned, was a daughter of Captain John Gardner and Priscilla Grafton.

Captain John Gardner was a magistrate at Nantucket in 1680, and Judge of Probate there from 1699 to his death in 1706. He is referred to by Cotton Mather, as "well acquainted with the Indians, having divers years assisted them in their government by instructing them in the laws of England and deciding difficult cases among them." In 1673 he was appointed Captain and Chief Military Officer of the Company of Foot, being commissioned by Francis Lovelace, Governor of New York.

Thomas Gardner, father of Captain John Gardner, probably came from Sherborne, Dorsetshire, England. He was first at Cape Ann, where he was employed by the projectors of the settlement to oversee fisheries.

He removed to Salem in 1624-25 with Roger Conant, was made Freeman in 1637, and was Representative the same year. He was also member of town council of Salem for several years. The weight of authority indicates that Thomas Gardner and John Tilley were the chief rulers of the Cape Ann Colony before Roger Conant was appointed Governor, and Gardner is therefore frequently referred to as the first governor.

James Chase, father of Jededah (Chase) Barker, was a son of Lieutenant Isaac Chase and Mary Tilton, grandson of Thomas Chase and Elizabeth Philbrick.

To return to the paternal ancestry of Harriet (Allen) Butler (the mother of Eliza Ogden (Butler) Kirkbride), her father, Howard Allen, was son of Ebenezer Allen and his wife, Mary Howard, grandson of Timothy Allen and his wife, Rachel Bushnell. Mary Howard, Howyard, or Hayward, as the names was also spelled, was a daughter of Nathaniel Howyard, and his wife, Martha Wood, granddaughter of Stephen Howyard or Hayward, Captain of the Train Band of Windham, Connecticut, in 1724.

Rachel Bushnell, wife of Timothy Allen, was daughter of Joseph Bushnell and his wife, Mary, daughter of Thomas Leffingwell, a soldier in the Pequot War, mentioned in the Colonial Records of Connecticut.

Children of Dr. Thomas Story and Eliza Ogden (Butler) Kirkbride were: Franklin Butler Kirkbride, Thomas Story Kirkbride, Jr., Elizabeth Butler Kirkbride and Mary Butler Kirkbride, all of whom survive except Dr. Thomas S. Kirkbride, Jr.

DR. THOMAS STORY KIRKBRIDE JR., born August 25, 1869, graduated at Haverford College in 1890, and from the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, 1893. He did special work at the Johns Hopkins Hospital for nearly a year, after receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine, and in 1894 became resident physician at Pennsylvania Hospital, the same position filled by his father fifty years previously. In the spring of 1896 he went to Europe where he spent two years and a half studying under the most distinguished doctors and investigators at Gottingen and Vienna. He returned to Philadelphia in 1898, and in December of that year was appointed Director of the Polyclinic Laboratories, and Pathologist to the Polyclinic Hospital, which positions he filled until his death, July 19, 1900. During his short term of office he organized the laboratories, and by his scientific work gave promise of the brilliant career for which his training and natural gifts fitted him.

He was a Fellow of the College of Physicians, and member of the Philadelphia County Medical Society and the Pathological Society and other scientific organizations.

Dr. Kirkbride married, December 18, 1899, Mabel Chauvenet, daughter of Edward Singleton Holden and his wife, Mary Chauvenet, granddaughter of Edward and Charlotte (Singleton) Holden, and through them descended from a distinguished line of New England ancestry, including Humphrey Atherton, of Rhode Island, Thomas Royal, of Medford, Massachusetts. Thomas Royal was a Tory, and during the Revolutionary War fled to England, and his property was confiscated. On his return, after the war, it was given back to him on account of his former benefactions and charities in the town of Medford. His home is now preserved as a Colonial museum.

Mary (Chauvenet) Holden was the daughter of William Chauvenet, mathematician, professor at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, and later Chancellor of Washington University at St. Louis, and his wife, Katharine, daughter of Samuel Hemple, of Philadelphia. William Chauvenet, was a son of William Marc Chauvenet, born at Narbonne, France, and his wife, Mary Korr, of Boston, Massachusetts.

Dr. Thomas Story and Mabel (Chauvenet) Kirkbride had one child, Mabel Story Kirkbride.

PENINGTON FAMILY.

The Pennington family of Henham, county of Essex, and Amersham, county of Bucks, England, and afterwards of Philadelphia, had its origin with one Pennington, who was buried at Henham, prior to 1557. He was a cadet of the ancient family of Pennington, Lancashire, and of Muncaster, county of Cumberland, which had held those manors since the time of Gamel de Penitone, of Pennington and Muncaster, who flourished in the reign of King Henry II. and who were created baronets in 1676, and Barons of Muncaster in 1683. The connection with the main stem of the Muncaster family is alluded to in the will of Admiral Sir John Pennington who was a great-grandson of the Pennington, of Henham, before referred to. The Will mentions "cousin William Pennington of Muncaster," and the testator was buried at Muncaster as a relative of that family. The first Pennington, of Henham, had among other children, Thomas Pennington, of Tottenham High Cross, county of Middlesex, gentleman; William Pennington, citizen of London (ancestor of the Philadelphia Penningtons); Robert Pennington, of Plegeden, parish of Henham, county of Essex. The latter, whose will was dated August 20, 1557, and who was buried at Henham, August 28, same year, was the grandfather of Admiral Sir John Pennington, whose father was also named Robert, purchased land in Henham and Elsenham in 1557, and was buried at Henham, November 22, 1612. The Admiral's mother was Margaret Barfoot, whose family held Lambourne Hall, Essex. She was buried at Henham, September 22, 1579.

Robert and Margaret Pennington's eldest son was another Robert, who married a kinswoman of Dean Nowell; the Admiral was the second son, and there was a third son Josias and daughters. After the death of Margaret (Barfoot) Pennington, Robert married again and had other children, one of whom, very singularly, was named John, the same as his elder and half-brother, still living. Admiral Sir John Pennington, of King Charles I, fleet, was also Treasurer of his Majesty's Navy, and one of the Gentlemen of his Majesty's Privy Chamber in Ordinary; Captain of Sandown Castle, and was knighted on board H. M. S., "Unicorn," April 14, 1634. He was baptized at Henham, January 30, 1568, died September, 1646, and his will, before referred to, dated March 29, 1645, proved 1648, mentions many relatives, he being unmarried. (Later spelled "Penington").

WILLIAM PENNINGTON, elder brother of the grandfather of Admiral Pennington, was born at Henham, county Essex, was a citizen of London, 1557, and was buried at St. Benet's, Grace-Church street, London, November 11, 1592. His wife's name was Alice. She was buried at St. Benet's, October 9, 1607, as "Widow Pennington, an ancient householder."

Issue of William and Alice Pennington:

ROBERT PENNINGTON, second son of William and Alice, was a citizen of London; died there April 18, 1628, 3rd Charles I. His will, dated December 24, 1622, 20th James I., and codicil dated March 17, 1624-5, proven 1628, by his son, Isaac, sole executor, directed that he should be buried in the church of St. Andrew, under a Shaft; bequeathed one hundred pounds to the Company of Fishmongers, of which he was a member, for the increase of the building of their almshouses at Newington, county Surrey, and desired his executors to provide a dinner at his funeral for the Master of Christ's Hospital; and devised his house in West Cheap to his son Daniel. He married Judith, daughter of Isaac Shetterden, of London. She was living in 1592-1605-22; was mentioned as "daughter" in the will of her mother-in-law, Alice Pennington.

Issue of Robert and Judith (Shetterden) Pennington:

SIR ISAAC PENNINGTON, eldest son of Robert and Judith (Shetterden) Pennington, succeeded to his father's lands and tenements in the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk. He was forty years of age at his father's death in 1628, and succeeded him as a London merchant, but having a handsome inheritance from the father, devoted much time to civic affairs and became very active as a politician and alderman. He was High Sheriff of London, 1638, and 1640 was elected to Parliament from the city, and became very conspicuous in the House of Commons, of that date. He was Lord Mayor of London, 1643, and afterwards was appointed Lieutenant of the Tower, and was knighted by the Speaker of the House of Commons, 1649, and made a member of the Council of State. He was one of the Commissioners of the High Court of Justice for the trial of Charles I, but did not sign the warrant for the King's execution. After the Restoration he was committed to the Tower in 1660, and his estates confiscated. He was sentenced to death, but before the sentence was carried out died in the Tower from ill usage, December 17, 1661. He married (first) February 7, 1614-5, Abigail, daughter of John Allen, of London, merchant. It is said of her that her desire was "for the religious welfare, and the establishment of the Christian character of her children; and these feelings met a cordial response in the mind of her eldest son." Sir Isaac married (second) Mary, daughter of Mathew Young, but had no children by her.

Issue of Sir Isaac and Abigail (Allen) Pennington:

ISAAC PENNINGTON, of whom presently;

Arthur Pennington, a Roman Catholic Priest in 1676;

William Pennington, merchant of London; a Friend; d. 2mo. 3, 1689, aged 67;

Abigail, Bridget, Judith, all living 1634;

Anne, m. before 1659, Richard More, Esq., of More and Larden co., Salop, M. P.

ISAAC PENNINGTON, called "the younger," son of Sir Isaac, was born about 1616, being twenty-two years old when his father was Sheriff of London. Though he had great opportunities for worldly aggrandizement during his father's political career, he followed more his mother's ideas, and devoted himself to religious pursuits; though he did not altogether ignore political questions, as some of his earliest writings were on political subjects. As a young man he lived in London, but after his marriage moved to the country, in Berkshire or some neighboring county. Thomas Ellwood wrote of visiting Isaac and his wife at Datchet and at Causham Lodge, near Reading. In 1658 they took up their residence at the Grange, parish of Chalfont, St. Peter, Buckinghamshire, a property of his father's, which the latter gave him on his marriage, but unfortunately did not convey to him, and so it was confiscated, with the remainder of Sir Isaac's property, after the Restoration. About this time Isaac Pennington and his wife joined the Society of Friends, whose views they found to agree best with those ideas on religion they had both formulated after many years of earnest meditation. He became very eminent among the Quakers, and was a most prolific writer in explanation and defense of their tenets; the list of his works takes up twenty-six pages in Joseph Smith's "Catalogue of Friends Books." During the persecutions of Non-conformists he was several times imprisoned for his religious belief, being in Aylesbury gaol in 1660, and in Reading gaol in 1672. The Grange became a favorite visiting place with the leaders of the Friends, and many interesting reminiscences of it are given in Maria Webb's "Penns and Peningtons of the 17th Century," and in Mr. Summer's later book, "Jordans and the Chalfonts." In 1658 Isaac Pennington wrote a number of letters to his father concerning his religion; from their tenor it is evident that the Lord Mayor did not become a Quaker, as has been stated on doubtful authority. The collected works of Isaac Pennington, the younger, were first published in London, 1681, and have passed through a number of editions; the fourth, published in Philadelphia in 1863, containing his correspondence. He seems to have definitely adopted the spelling "Penington" for his name, which previous generations had spelled "Pennington," and the form he used has been retained by his descendants to the present time; indeed it is the older form, and was used by the earlier generations of the Muncaster family back to Gamel de "Penington."

Isaac Pennington married, in 1654, Mary, daughter of Sir John Proude, Knight, of Goodneston Court, county Kent, and widow of Sir William Springett, Knight, of Ringmer, county Sussex. She was born about 1624. Her father, Sir John Proude, had been a Colonel under the Prince of Orange, in the service of the United Netherlands, and was one of the officers killed at the siege of Groll, in Guelderland; her mother was Anne, daughter and co-heiress of Edward Fagge, Esq., of Ewell, near Feversham, county Kent, and a relative (probably an aunt) of Sir John Fagge, who gave the name to Fagg's Manor, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Lady Proude died about the same time that her husband was killed, when their daughter and only child, Mary, was three years old. Mary then became the ward of Sir Edward Partridge, and at the age of nine years was taken to live at his residence in the vicinity of Ringmer, Sussex. At this time Sir Edward Partridge had also living with him his widowed sister, Madam Springett, and her three young children—Katharine, William and Herbert. This William, afterwards Sir William Springett, became the first husband of Mary Proude. The family estate of the Springett's was Broyle Place, near the village of Ringmer, county Sussex. In the early part of the seventeenth century, the head of the family was Sir Thomas Springett, who lived at Broyle Place; his younger brother, Herbert Springett, barrister-at-law, living nearby in the village of Ringmer. This Herbert Springett married Katharine, sister of Sir Edward Partridge, of the same locality, and they were the parents of Sir William Springett. Herbert Springett died in 1621, and a mural monument to his memory was erected in Ringmer Church. His widow and three children then went to live with her brother, Sir Edward Partridge, as before stated.

Sir Thomas Springett was guardian of his nephew, William, and it was probably through his influence that William was knighted when quite a young man. Sir Thomas was a strong loyalist, but died in 1639, before the civil war broke out, between King Charles I. and his Parliament; his three sons all espoused the Royal cause; Herbert, eldest, who inherited Broyle Place, being later made a Baronet by Charles II. Sir William and his brother, Herbert, unlike their cousins, became adherents of the Parliament. Their mother, Madam Springett, had Puritan leanings and had sent William to Cambridge, placing him in St. Catherine's Hall, a Puritan College. He afterward studied law in the Inns of Court; it was while a law student that he married Mary Proude. She was then a beautiful young heiress and had many eligible suitors, but her mind was devoted to religion, and she looked coldly on a worldly match. William Springett, who was also deeply religious, and had he lived until the rise of the Friends would no doubt have joined them, as Mary afterwards did, hearing how it stood with her, came home from London, and they were shortly afterwards married, Mary being about eighteen and he not yet twenty-one. In 1641 Sir William was commissioned a colonel in the service of the Parliament, and afterwards made a deputy-lieutenant of the county of Kent. He raised a regiment and was in various engagements in Kent and Sussex. He helped take the castle of Arundel, in the latter county, and, with Colonel Morley, was made joint governor of it. But he was wounded here and fever set in, from which he died February 3, 1643-4. He was buried in Ringmer Church, where there is a mural tablet to him. His younger brother, Herbert, also espoused the Parliament side; after the restoration of Charles II. he found himself in a bad case, but later was provided for by his kinsman, William Penn, who erected for him the Manor of Springettsburg, in Pennsylvania. Mary Proude had by her first husband two children—John, who died young, and Gulielma Maria Springett, born 1644, who, in 1672, became the first wife of William Penn, afterwards Proprietary of Pennsylvania, son of Admiral Sir William Penn. When William Penn first met "Guli" Springett, she was living with her stepfather, Isaac Penington, at Bury House, near Amersham, Buckinghamshire. When the property of the ex-Lord Mayor, Sir Isaac Penington, was confiscated in 1660, the Grange, at Chalfont, was included, but his son continued to live there with his wife and children and his wife's daughter until 1666. At the time of her daughter's marriage, 1672, Mary Penington was engaged in building the house at Woodside, parish of Amersham, county Bucks, and the family were living in the vicinity. Woodside then became the seat of the Penington family. After the settlement at Woodside, Isaac Penington suffered no further religious persecution, and passed the remainder of his life peacefully with his wife and children, the latter growing up with such indications of piety as made their parents thankful, but Isaac's constitution had been much impaired by the previous trials and sufferings he had been subjected to for his religious belief, and he did not survive many years. Mary Penington still possessed Goodneston Court, which she had inherited from her father, Sir John Proude, but for some reason they never lived there, even after the Grange was confiscated. Isaac died there, while on a visit, in 1679. The following account of his death and burial was appended to John Penington's "Testimony," concerning his father, printed in the latter's collected works:

"It pleased the Lord to remove him from us and take him to Himself, on the 8th. day of the 8th. month, 1679, between 3 and 4 in the morning, at one of my deare mother's farms in Kent, in the Parish of Goodnestone, called Goodnestone Court. They had been among their tenants in that county and in their return home spent some time here; but the day appointed for my dear father to return, he was visited with this sickness, whereof he died having lain just a week. His body was conveyed thence, (some of his relations and London Friends accompanying it) to London, thence into Buckinghamshire to his own house, and so to the burying place of Friends, belonging to Chalfont Meeting, (called Jordan's), where he was honourably buried; being accompanied of some hundreds of Friends and neighbors."

His grave is now marked with a small white headstone, with name and date, "Isaac Penington, 1679." His age was sixty-three years.

Mary Penington died 7mo. 18, 1682, while on a visit to her daughter, "Guli" Penn, at Worminghurst, county Sussex, an estate William Penn had inherited from his mother, Margaret Jasper. She was buried at Jordan's, beside her husband; her will was made 4mo. 1680.

Issue of Isaac and Mary (Proude-Springett) Penington:

He was author of several pamphlets on the doctrines of Friends, two of them, relating to George Keith's schism, were published in London in 1695. His "Testimony" concerning his father, above quoted, was published in his father's collected works. He was unmarried;

Another son, name unknown, d. y.;

William Penington, fourth son, b. 6mo. 3, 1665; placed at school at Edmonton by his mother, 1680, afterwards of London; m. Elizabeth ———, and had four children, the only son, Isaac, dying in infancy. William died 3mo. 5, 1703, aged 38 years; he was then of Cripplegate. Elizabeth Penington, widow of William, late Citizen and Glover of London, married, 12mo. 1, 1704, Robert Plumstead, Citizen and Draper of London; EDWARD PENINGTON, b. 7mo. 3, 1667; of whom presently.

EDWARD PENINGTON, fifth son and youngest child of Isaac and Mary (Proude) Penington, was born in the parish of Amersham, Buckingham, England, 7mo. 3, 1667; he was placed at school at Edmonton, by his mother, in 1680. Like his father he was an earnest member of the Society of Friends, and was author of at least one religious pamphlet, "Some Brief Observations upon George Keith's Earnest Expostulation," published in London in 1696. On April 26, 1698, his kinsman, William Penn, appointed him Surveyor-General of Pennsylvania, and he set out for that province, arriving in Philadelphia, November 30, 1698. He was the second incumbent of the office of Surveyor-General, under Penn, which had been vacant for some years, Captain Thomas Holme, first incumbent, having died in 1695. Penington also held the office until his death, in 1701, when it was again vacant until 1706, Jacob Taylor then succeeding.

Surveyor-General Penington, on official as well as private documents, used an armorial seal, the arms being identical with those given by Burke for the Penningtons of Pennington, county Lancaster, 1664: Or, five fusils conjoined in fess azure; with a mullet in chief, indicating that he was a younger son. These arms are the same as those of the Barons Muncaster and several other Pennington families in Burke's "General Armory," no doubt all branches of the same main stock.

Edward Penington married, November 16, 1699, at Burlington Friends' Meeting, New Jersey, Sarah, daughter of Samuel Jenings, first Deputy-Governor of West Jersey; his distinguished kinsman, William Penn, being present at the wedding. Samuel Jenings was a member of the Society of Friends, and "a man of Education, standing, influence and prominence."

He was an acknowledged minister of his sect in the London Monthly Meeting in 1677, and was author of a number of papers mentioned in Joseph Smith's "Catalogue of Friends' Books." He was originally of Aylesbury, Buckinghamshire, very near the Penington home, but came to New Jersey from the town of Colehill, which is partly in Bucks and partly in Hertfordshire. He was sent to West Jersey as its Deputy-Governor by Edward Byllinge, nominal Proprietor in 1680, although by then Byllinge had sold a great portion of the soil to others; but as these were mostly Friends they accepted Jenings without dispute; he arrived at Burlington in October, 1680. He served until 1684, having, in 1682, been elected as Governor by the Proprietors, who had bought from Byllinge, and now claimed that authority. In 1684 he went to England with Thomas Budd to try to have the office made elective, but not succeeding returned to West Jersey, and in 1685 was elected a member of the Assembly. When the Council of Proprietors was organized, in 1687, Samuel Jenings' name headed the list of the eleven members; this association is still in existence. In 1689 he removed to Philadelphia, and July 15, 1690, was made Receiver-General of Pennsylvania, in which office he was succeeded by Robert Turner, June 1, 1693. While here he was sent, with Thomas Duckett, by the Yearly Meeting, to London in 1694, in the matter of a schism.

On his return to America, in 1697-8, he once more took up his residence in Burlington. His house was "Green Hill," a short distance from the town. The provinces of West and East Jersey were united into one in 1702, with Lord Cornbury as Governor, who appointed Samuel Jenings as one of his Council. While a member of Council he was also sometime Speaker of Assembly, and in the latter body opposed many of Lord Cornbury's measures. He died in 1708, and his will was dated July 24, of that year. He married at Aylesbury, Buckinghamshire, 11mo. 7, 1674, Sarah, daughter of Richard Olive, a relative (probably a brother) of Thomas Olive, a very prominent man in early West Jersey affairs. Samuel and Sarah (Olive) Jenings had six children, three dying young, and the three surviving daughters marrying three brothers—William, Thomas and John Stevenson—one of them, Sarah, having, however, married (first) Edward Penington. Edward Penington died in Philadelphia, November 11, 1701. In 1704 his widow, Sarah Penington, married Thomas Stevenson, Jr., of Bucks county, Pennsylvania, son of Thomas Stevenson, Sr., of Newtown, Long Island, and grandson of Thomas Stevenson (born 1615), from London, England, who settled in the New Haven Colony, later Connecticut, about 1643, and was a soldier in Captain John Underhill's company, which in that year went to the assistance of the Dutch, at New Amsterdam, then besieged by the Indians. This first Thomas Stevenson, with others of Underhill's company, settled at Southhold, Long Island. On August 15, 1648, he married Mary (Bullock), a widow of William Barnard; he later obtained a plantation at Newtown, Long Island, and removed there in 1654. His second son, Thomas, was a large landholder on Long Island, and bought large tracts of land in Burlington county, New Jersey; he married, February, 1672, Elizabeth, only daughter of Captain William Lawrence, one of the patentees of Flushing, Long Island, and three of their sons married daughters of Governor Samuel Jenings. Thomas, who married the Widow Penington, was a great landed proprietor in Burlington county, New Jersey, Maryland, and in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, where he made his home. He was a Justice of Bucks County Courts, and represented that county in the Pennsylvania Assembly, from 1710 until his death, 1719. He was also one of the Council of the Proprietaries of West Jersey in 1712. This Stevenson family, beside the marriage with the widow of Edward Penington, were connected with the Biles and other families, who were related to the Peningtons by blood and marriage. The Stevensons were greatly distinguished in the localities above mentioned, and have prominent descendants in Philadelphia. The arms used by the first Thomas Stevenson, and on early plate still in the family, were: Gules, on a bend argent, three leopards faces vert. Crest: A garb or.

ISAAC PENINGTON, only child of Edward and Sarah (Jenings) Penington, born in Philadelphia, November 22, 1700, was less than a year old at the death of his father, and was taken by his mother when yet an infant to live on the plantation of his step-father, Thomas Stevenson, in Bucks county. The prominence of the latter, both socially and politically, gave Isaac a good start in the county, and he became an eminent office holder there. He was made one of the Justices of the Bucks County Courts, September 13, 1726, and recommissioned September 12, 1727, December 1, 1733, November 22, 1738, and April 4, 1741, and was serving on the local bench at his death in 1742. He was commissioned Sheriff of Bucks County, October 4, 1731, and re-commissioned the following year, serving until October 4, 1733, when he was succeeded by John Hall. He inherited from his father a tract of 500 acres of land in Buckingham township, his mother releasing to him her right therein, but he did not take up his residence there, but resided in Northampton township, where and elsewhere in Bucks county, he became a large landed proprietor. He married, November 5, 1725, Ann, born 12mo. 4, 1702-3, buried 12mo. 22, 1748-9, daughter of William and Sarah (Langhorne) Biles, and granddaughter of William Biles Sr., of Bucks county, one of the most noted men in the Province of Pennsylvania, who with wife Joanna had come from Dorchester, England, to Bucks county in 1679, and in the same year became an officer of the court at Upland, and on the grant of the province to Penn in 1681, was named as one of Governor Markham's council. He was a minister of the Society of Friends, and served in the Provincial Council and Colonial Assembly, and as a Justice of the Bucks County Courts for many years. He died in 1710, his first wife and mother of his children having died in 1688. His children intermarried with the Beakes, Langhorne, Hughes, Blackshaw, Yardley, Janney, and others of the most prominent families in Bucks county, and the distinguished Lambert family of New Jersey, and his descendants, with their connections, constituted the greater part of the old Colonial office-holding aristocracy of Bucks county. His eldest son, William, father of Mrs. Penington, born at Dorchester, England, 11mo. 12, 1671-2, was Sheriff of Bucks county, 1704 to 1707; Coroner, 1717; Justice of the County Courts, September 6, 1718, and recommissioned many times; member of Colonial Assembly, 1710-11-18-19-20-21-23-24-25-32-34-35-36-37; Speaker of that body, 1724-25. He was the largest landed proprietor in Bucks county, owning forty thousand acres and also large tracts of land in West Jersey. His wife was a daughter of Thomas Langhorne, also founder of a prominent Bucks county family, and a sister to Jeremiah Langhorne, Chief Justice of Pennsylvania, Speaker of Assembly, etc. Ann (Biles) Penington's brother, William Biles, third, married Ann, daughter of Thomas and Sarah (Jenings-Penington) Stevenson, and half-sister to Isaac Penington; other brothers and sisters intermarried with the Lambert, Baker, Kirkbride, Growdon and Janney families, all closely related by many intermarriages and dividing amongst them most of the important county offices; a nephew, Colonel Thomas Langhorne Biles, was a distinguished officer in the Revolutionary army. Isaac Pennington died July 5, 1742, and administration on his estate was granted the same year.

EDWARD PENINGTON, only surviving son of Isaac and Ann (Biles) Penington, born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, December 24, 1726, became a merchant in Philadelphia. He was a member of the Provincial Convention of 1774, but after the Declaration of Independence was one of the "disaffested," that is he did not believe in extreme measures in defending the rights of the Colonists, and as a Quaker was opposed to warlike measures and armed resistance. On the approach of the British forces, in 1777, he was among the prominent Philadelphians who were arrested by order of the Revolutionary Committee, and confined for a time in the Free Masons' Lodge Room, and afterwards exiled to Winchester, Virginia. These men, generally known as the "Exiles in Virginia," from the title of a work written by Thomas Gilpin, whose father was one of the number and died there while in exile, were nearly all Friends and men of the highest standing and wealth, who beside their religious objection to war, had too many solid interests in the city to wish for a change in the government, and had a natural aversion to placing it in the hands of the "rabble," who constituted a large portion of the active Revolutionists of that period. Neither were they in sympathy with the British invasion, and the action taken against them was, to a large extent, fostered by these ardent "patriots," with the idea of getting possession of their property through confiscation, and supplanting them as the office-holding element of the community. The "Journal of the Exiles," published after their return to Philadelphia, gives an interesting account of their experiences. Edward Penington had been a member of Colonial Assembly in 1761, and a Justice of the Philadelphia County Court. He married, November 26, 1754, at Bank Meeting House, Sarah, born April 3, 1729, died November 3, 1797, daughter of Benjamin Shoemaker, of Germantown, Provincial Councillor, by his first wife, Sarah, daughter of Thomas and Beulah (Jacques) Coates, of Philadelphia. JENKS FAMILY.

On the records of the College of Arms, London, England, is a record of the confirmation, in 1582, during the reign of "Good Queen Bess," of "The Coate of Arms of the Anciente Family of Jenks, long in the possession of the same, at Wolverton Manor, Wales," to the then representative of that ancient family, Sir George Jenks, of Salop, Gentleman, duly certified by Robert Cooke, otherwise Clarancieux, King-of-Arms for all of England, south of the Trent.

This ancient family, said to have been of the race of the ancient Britons, antedates the Norman Conquest nearly two centuries, and can be clearly traced in Montgomeryshire, Wales, and the neighboring county of Salop, or Shropshire, in England, from A. D. 900 down to the middle of the seventeenth century.

THOMAS JENKS, of Shropshire, the direct ancestor of the Pennsylvania family of the name, was one of the earliest converts to the faith and teachings of George Fox, and thus lost his identity with the armorial and titled family of that shire. Besse, in his "Sufferings of the Quakers," gives an account of his arrest in 1656, as one of a party attending a meeting of the people of his faith, and he was again arrested in 1660. He died 10mo. 19, 1680, after having been despoiled by fines and confiscations of the greater part of a once ample estate.

THOMAS JENKS, son of the above Thomas, born in Shropshire, is mentioned in the will of John Penn, of Montgomeryshire, in 1660, then a minor and possibly little more than an infant. He married there Susan ———, and with her and their infant son, Thomas, born in January, 1699-1700, is said to have embarked for America, and died on the passage. All that is definitely known, however, is that his widow, Susan Jenks, and her infant son arrived in Bucks county in or about the year 1700, and located in Wrightstown, where John Chapman had made a home in the wilderness farther north than any other English Quaker of Penn's little Quaker Colony on the Delaware. Susan Jenks married (second) Bezeleel Wiggins in 1708, and their son, Benjamin, born in 1709, was the ancestor of the family of that name later prominent in Wrightstown, Makefield and Buckingham. The mother did not long survive her second marriage.

THOMAS JENKS, third of the name, born in England or Wales in January, 1699-1700, was reared in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, in the neighborhood of Wrightstown, possibly in the home of John Chapman, whose granddaughter he later married. There is, however, no record of him until 1mo. (March) 1, 1725-6, when he applied for membership in Wrightstown Meeting of Friends. He was doubtless a birthright member of the Society, as his parents certainly were, but the death of his father on the voyage to America, or just previous to sailing, may account for the loss of such proof of membership as seemed consistent to the early Friends.

On 3mo. (May) 19, 1731, Thomas Jenks married Mercy, daughter of John Wildman, of Middletown, by his wife, Marah (Chapman) Croasdale, and granddaughter of John Chapman, before referred to. John Chapman was born at Stanehaugh, in the county of Durham, England, about the year 1635, and was a son of John Chapman, of Froslerly, Durham, where the parish records show that the family had been resident for several generations, and where some of the name still reside. Like the grandsire of Thomas Jenks, he, too, was an early convert to the principles and faith of Friends, and suffered persecution for Truth's sake in 1656, and in 1660 was confined for eight weeks in York Castle for refusing to take a prescribed oath. He also suffered fines and confiscations of goods at different periods. He was twice married, his first wife dying 8mo. 2, 1668, and her only child, a little more than a month later. John Chapman married (second) 4mo. 12, 1670, Jane Sadler, of Landenby, Durham, and on June 21, 1684, with her and their then five children, set out from Stanehaugh for Newcastle-on-Tyne, and engaged passage on the "Shield" for Penn's Colony in America, where he had previously purchased five hundred acres of land of William Penn. On September 12, 1684, they encountered a severe storm off the capes of Virginia, and their dismantled ship effected a landing, three days later, on the eastern shore of Maryland, from whence, after a few weeks delay, they made their way up the Delaware and arrived at the house of Phineas Pemberton, near the Falls of the Delaware, in the latter part of October. The five hundred acres of land, purchased before leaving England, was laid out to him back in the woods, covering the present site of Wrightstown village and Friends' Meeting House, the latter erected largely through the efforts of John Chapman, after a meeting had been held for some years in his dwelling-house, by permission of Falls Monthly Meeting, where the certificate he brought from Friends in England had been deposited. John Chapman died 5mo. (July), 1694, and his widow, Jane, 9mo. (November), 1699. Sarah, the eldest of their seven children, was born at Stanehaugh, Durham, 2mo. (April) 12, 1671, and married (first), on 2mo. (April) 28, 1697, John Croasdale, who had accompanied his parents, Thomas and Agnes Croasdale, to Pennsylvania in the "Welcome," and died 19mo. 14, 1706; (second) John Wildman, by whom she had two daughters—Mercy, above mentioned, and Elizabeth. John Wildman was born in Yorkshire, England, 2mo. 2, 1681, and died in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, 3mo. (May) 25, 1739. He was the second son of Martin and Ann Wildman, who, bringing a certificate from Settle Monthly Meeting, in the county of York, dated 2mo. 2, 1690, settled in Middletown township, Bucks county, Pennsylvania.

In 1734 Thomas Jenks purchased a tract of land on Core Creek, in Middletown township, a portion of which is still held by his lineal descendants, and in 1740 erected a fulling mill, one of the first in Bucks county. It was operated by him and his family for many years, doing a large business in dyeing, fulling and finishing the homespun goods of the housewives of lower and middle Bucks county, which constituted the main clothing worn by the early settlers of that date. His ledger, excellently written and in a good state of preservation, covering the years 1743-56, is still in the possession of his great-grandson, William H. Jenks, of Philadelphia. The mansion house, known as "Jenks Hall," erected by him in 1734, was the home of his descendants for many generations. Thomas Jenks was an active and energetic business man, and retained his mental faculties and physical vigor to extreme old age. He died at "Jenks Hall," 5mo. (May) 4, 1797, in his ninety-eighth year, from the effects of a fall from his wagon. His wife, Mercy, died 7mo. 26, 1787, aged seventy-seven years, after a married life of over fifty-six years. Arriving in Bucks county, when far the greater part of it was a primitive wilderness, Thomas Jenks lived to see it a highly developed and prosperous community; during his active business career the city of Philadelphia, with which he was closely associated as the chief market of the product of his mill and plantation, had grown to be the metropolis of the American Colonies.

Issue of Thomas and Mercy (Wildman) Jenks:

He married, 6mo. 22, 1763, Elizabeth, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Duer) Pearson, of Buckingham, Bucks county (and granddaughter of Enoch Pearson, a native of Cheshire, England, who came to Pennsylvania with his parents, Edward and Sarah (Burgess) Pearson, in 1687), by his wife, Margaret, born 8mo. 20, 1691, daughter of William Smith, of Wrightstown, Bucks county, who came to Pennsylvania in the "Friends Adventure" (which arrived in the Delaware River, 7mo. 28, 1682), by his wife, Mary, daughter of Thomas and Agnes Croasdale, who came over in the "Welcome" with William Penn, on his first visit to his Province of Pennsylvania, in 1682.

WILLIAM JENKS, only son of Joseph and Elizabeth (Pearson) Jenks, born in Middletown, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, August 12, 1766, was a farmer and miller on the old plantation in Middletown, dying there at the early age of forty-two years, leaving a widow and ten children, six of whom were still in their minority at the time of his decease. He married, 10mo. 28, 1790, Mary, daughter of Michael Hutchinson, of Makefield, Bucks county, many years a merchant of Makefield, and one of the prominent men of the county in his day, holding many positions of trust and honor. Her mother, Margery Palmer, was a great-granddaughter of John Palmer, of Cleiveland, Yorkshire, who, with Christian, his wife, arrived in the Delaware River in the ship "Providence," of Scarborough, 9mo. 19, 1683, and settled in Falls township, Bucks county, where a number of his descendants of the name still reside. Her paternal grandfather, John Hutchinson, for many years an Overseer of Falls Monthly Meeting and prominent in the affairs of that section of the county, married Phebe Kirkbride, daughter of Joseph Kirkbride, by his first wife, Phebe Blackshaw, daughter of Randal Blackshaw, of Hollingee, in the county of Chester, England, who, with Alice, his wife, and children, Phebe, Sarah, Jacob, Mary, Nehemiah and Martha, came over in the "Submission," arriving in Maryland, 9mo. 2, 1682, and made their way overland to Bucks county.

Dr. James Hutchinson, born in Bucks county in 1752, the distinguished physician of Philadelphia, Surgeon-General of the Continental Army during the Revolution, who died of yellow fever in Philadelphia, September, 1793, was a first cousin of Mary (Hutchinson) Jenks, being a son of Randal Hutchinson, brother of Michael, by his first wife, Elizabeth Harvey.

Joseph Kirkbride, the paternal great-grandfather of Mary Hutchinson Jenks, was a son of Mahlon and Magdalen Kirkbride, of Kirkbride, Cumberland. He came to Pennsylvania with Penn, in the "Welcome," and became one of the most prominent men of the province, serving many years as a Justice of Bucks county courts and in the Colonial Assembly, and was the largest landowner in Bucks county in his time, as well as owning large tracts of land in New Jersey and elsewhere. After the death of his first wife, Phebe Blackshaw, he married Sarah, daughter of Mahlon Stacy, the founder of Trenton, New Jersey, by his wife, Rebecca Ely, and left many descendants, who have been prominent in the affairs of Bucks county and of Philadelphia.

WILLIAM PEARSON JENKS, son of William and Mary (Hutchinson) Jenks, was born and reared at the old Jenks' homestead, near Langhorne, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, December 17, 1807. At the close of his school days he entered a manufacturing establishment at Paterson, New Jersey, and learned the trade of a machinist. The specialty of the firm, with which he engaged, was the manufacture of machinery for the spinning and weaving of cotton goods, and in 1838 he became interested in the mills for the manufacture of cotton yarns, established at New Hope, Bucks county, by William Maris, for which his firm had furnished the machinery, and was employed there until 1832. The following year he was sent, by the Paterson firm, to Madison, Indiana, to establish a factory there, for the manufacture of cotton goods. In 1835 he was appointed manager of the Union Factories, near Ellicott's Mills, now Ellicott City, Maryland, then the largest plant for the manufacture of cotton goods south of New England, and continued to fill that position until late in 1846, when failing health compelled his resignation, and he took a trip to Brazil, South America, occupying several months, which resulted in his complete restoration. Returning north in the summer of 1847, he joined his wife and children in Philadelphia, and a few months later formed a partnership there with Evan Randolph, under the firm name of Randolph & Jenks, where they did a large and prosperous business as cotton merchants. Mr. Jenks retired from the firm in 1860, which was continued by his sons, John Story and William H. Jenks and Evan Randolph, until the death of the latter in 1887. The firm still continues under the original name. William Pearson Jenks was a man of marked business ability, and his indomitable energy and activity brought success to his business enterprises. After his removal to Philadelphia he became identified with a number of the financial institutions of that city.

William Pearson Jenks married, 5mo. 16, 1837, Elizabeth, born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, 3mo. 6, 1807, daughter of David Story, by his wife Rachel, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Jenks) Richardson, above mentioned. Her great grandfather, Thomas Story, was born in Northumberland, England, in the year 1671, and came to Pennsylvania with William Penn, in the "Canterbury," on the Founder's second visit to Pennsylvania, arriving at Chester, 10mo. 1, 1699. Thomas Story settled near Newtown, Bucks county, and in March, 1718, married Elizabeth (Wilson), widow of William Buckman, the pioneer ancestor of that family. Thomas Story died 9mo. 19, 1753, at the age of eighty-two years, leaving a son, John Story, born 11mo. 26, 1718-19, who married, 5mo. 1747, Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas and Eleanor (Lane) Cutler, and lived all his life in the neighborhood of Newtown, Bucks county, dying 11mo. 10, 1804, and is buried at Wrightstown Friends' burying-ground. David, son of John and Elizabeth (Cutler) Story, was the father of Mrs. Jenks. He was born 4mo. 20, 1760, and died 2mo. 23, 1833. He married, as before stated, Rachel Richardson, on 4mo. 19, 1792, and they were the parents of six children, of whom Elizabeth (Story) Jenks was the youngest. She died 1mo. 11, 1878, and her husband, William Pearson Jenks, died 9mo. 17, 1886.

WOOD FAMILY.

The Wood families of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, from whom most of those of the name, now resident in Philadelphia, descend, were founded in America by several different English immigrants, mostly members of the Society of Friends, who emigrated to either New Jersey or Pennsylvania soon after the founding of the Province of Pennsylvania by William Penn, and were doubtless more or less related.

On 2mo. 3, 1683, Edward Byllinge, of Westminster, county Middlesex, England, conveyed to Henry Wood and John Wood, both of Bury, county of Lancaster, each one hundred acres, to be surveyed to them in the Province of West Jersey; on the same date Byllinge also conveyed to Henry Wood, Jr., Constantine and Jeremiah Wood, all of Bury, Lancaster, one hundred acres jointly. Henry Wood, Jr., and Constantine were probably sons of John, above named, and all of these purchasers, with the possible exception of Jeremiah, came to New Jersey and settled in Gloucester county, where Henry died in 1691, and John in 1707. The former was also a land owner in Philadelphia, having purchased of William Penn a bank-lot on the Delaware front, which was surveyed to him by warrant, and the patent therefore was dated 12mo. 26, 1684, which by his will he devised to his younger son, Richard Wood, who, as shown by a deed of confirmation from his mother, Hannah Wood, and his elder brother, James, was "arrived at the age of twenty years and about three months," at the date of the latter deed, viz.: February 17, 1699-1700, and was of full age November 1, 1700, when he conveyed the same to Thomas Lambert. Henry Wood, Sr., of New Jersey, also owned land in the "Narragansett country," Rhode Island, and, by deed dated 9mo. 20, 1686, Ruth Wood, widow and administratrix of Richard Wood, of Philadelphia, merchant, (with whose descendants this narrative is concerned), conveyed to this Henry Wood all the lands and tenements of her late husband, in trust for specified purposes; but on 11mo. 12, 1686, Ruth Wood executed an instrument of writing, duly recorded at Philadelphia, in which she revoked and annulled the former conveyance. This circumstance, as well as the similarity of the names, indicate a relationship between the two families, though they came, as hereafter shown, from widely different parts of England. James Wood, son of Henry, became a boat builder in Philadelphia, and died in 1748, leaving sons, James, Richard and Isaac. He purchased a lot on the Delaware front in 1698, and married, at Philadelphia Meeting, 1715, Mary Peller.

RICHARD WOOD, of the City of Bristol, wine cooper, emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1682 or 1683, and located in Philadelphia, where he engaged in mercantile pursuits. He was a member of the first grand jury drawn in Philadelphia, 3mo. 2, 1683 (o. s.), for the trial of Charles Pickering for counterfeiting, and in the same month, May 29, 1683 (o. s.), purchased of Richard Collins, of Bath, England, twelve hundred and fifty acres of land to be laid out in Pennsylvania, which Collins had purchased of William Penn, September 26, 1681. Part of this land was laid out in Bucks county, "and was accordingly surveyed unto the said Richard Wood by virtue of a Warrant dated 9mo. 26, 1682," and four hundred and nine acres thereof were conveyed by his eldest son and heir, James Wood, to Joseph Kirle, of Philadelphia, merchant, August 4, 1686. (See Bucks County Deeds, Book 2, p. 165).

In Administration Book "A," page 10, in the Register of Wills' Office of Philadelphia, is a record of the grant of letters of administration to "Ruth Wood of Scuykill, in the Province of Pennsylvania, Widdow and Relict of Richard Wood, Merchant, her late husband, deceased" in the year 1685, the date, however, being omitted, and the original papers have evidently disappeared. On 9mo. 26, 1686, Ruth Wood made a conveyance of "all the lands and tenements of her late husband" to Henry Wood, of New Jersey, but on 11mo. 12, following revoked this deed, the latter instrument but not the first appearing of record. On January 28, 1686-7, Ruth Wood, widow of Richard, married Thomas Ducket, of "Scoolkill," who had come from "East parish, county of Wilts," England, bringing a certificate for himself and wife to Radnor Monthly Meeting, Pennsylvania, 4mo. 4, 1683. He died in 1700. The will of Thomas Ducket, of Philadelphia, "Maelster," dated 3mo. 20, 1699, and proven June 24, 1700, makes wife, Ruth, executrix, and gives legacies to daughter, Jane Ducket, daughter-in-law, Ruth Wood, sons-in-law (stepsons), James and John Wood, and to Philadelphia Monthly Meeting of Friends for the use of a Free School.

JAMES WOOD, eldest son of Richard and Ruth Wood, was born in Bristol, England, 12mo. 15, 1671-2, accompanied his parents to Philadelphia in 1682, and continued to reside in Philadelphia. He married Jane ——, born in London, England, 9mo. (November) 24, 1671, and they were the parents of nine children, seven of whom died in infancy, those who survived being,

*RICHARD WOOD, the eldest son, born November, 1694, of whom presently;
Walter Wood, the youngest child, born 1712, settled at Stow Creek, N. J.*

RICHARD WOOD, eldest son of James and Jane Wood, born in Philadelphia, November, 1694, removed when a young man to Greenwich, now Cumberland county, New Jersey, then Salem county, on the Cohansey Creek, about four miles from its mouth on Delaware Bay, a place of considerable commercial activity in Colonial times. Richard Wood was a man of considerable prominence. He was commissioned one of the justices of the "Pleas and Peace" for Salem county, December, 1739, and seems to have filled that position until the erection of Cumberland county, January 19, 1747, when he was named as one of the three judges of the courts of the new county, and continued as such until his death in 1759. In 1755, when the Governor and Council of New Jersey directed that a registry be made of the Indians residing in the province, and named one or more justices from each county to keep the registry and issue certificates to the Indians, Richard Wood, Esq., was named as the justice for that purpose for Cumberland county. He was elected to the Assembly of New Jersey, prior to 1751, and probably represented his county in that body until his death. His name appears as one of a committee to report certain measures adopted by the Assembly to the Provincial Council, in the years 1751, 1753 and 1754. At a meeting of the Freeholders of Cumberland county, held May, 1750, it was decided "that there shall be a deed drawn and delivered to Justices Richard Wood and Ebenezer Miller (his son-in-law) to peruse and, upon their approbation, that they or more of the Justices are to summon ye Magistrates and Freeholders to proceed upon raising of money to build a Court House and Gaol."

Richard Wood's first Commission as Justice of Cumberland County Courts, in 1747, engrossed on parchment, is still in possession of his descendants. He died August 3, 1759, and was buried in a family burying-ground on his own land at Stow Creek.

Richard Wood married, 1716, Priscilla Bacon, born at Bacon's Neck, Salem county, New Jersey, January 6, 1699 ("6 day of 11mo. 1699"), daughter of Benjamin Bacon, born at Woodbridge, Middlesex county, New Jersey, December 22, 1670, died on the Cohansey, in Salem county, New Jersey, letters of Administration being granted on his estate April 29, 1714. He was a son of Samuel Bacon, who took the oath of allegiance at Barnstable, Massachusetts, 1657, and May 9, 1659, married Martha Foxwell, probably daughter of Richard Foxwell, on whose estate he was directed to administer by the Court, July 7, 1668.

The ancestry of Samuel Bacon, of Barnstable, has been traced back to RANULPH, the son of Grimaldus, whose son Roger Bacon, was the first to assume that surname. Robert Bacon, son of Roger, was the father of John Bacon, who was followed successively by four other John Bacons, the last of whom had a son Edward Bacon, whose son, John, was the father of Robert Bacon, who had sons, Thomas, James and Sir Nicholas Bacon. The latter was the father of Lord Francis Bacon by a second marriage, was born at Chiselhurst, in Kent, in 1510, was a graduate of the University of Cambridge and of Grays Inn, was very eminent as a lawyer, and from 1558 to his death, in 1579, was Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England.

JAMES BACON, brother of Sir Nicholas, and uncle of the distinguished philosopher, Lord Francis Bacon, was the ancestor of the American branch of the family, through his son, William, his grandson, Samuel, and great-grandson, William, the latter being the father of Samuel Bacon, of Barnstable.

On December 11, 1666, Daniel Pierce, of Newbury, Massachusetts, and several associates, entered into an agreement with the Proprietors of East Jersey to purchase twenty-three thousand acres and settle a colony thereon. Among these associates was John Smith, of Barnstable, through whom it is supposed Samuel Bacon was induced to become one of the Puritan Colony, in New Jersey, and he was one of the original patentees, taking up a tract of land near Woodbridge, Middlesex county, for which patents were issued on October 18, 1669, and March 18, 1669-70. He was one of the original incorporators of the township of Woodbridge, June 1, 1669. He was chosen constable in 1678, and December 8, 1681, was elected one of the four Assistant Magistrates, who, with a president, constituted the township court, and was duly commissioned on the 10th day of January following.

The Town Records of Woodbridge show the birth of his son, Benjamin, December 22, 1670, of his son, Joseph, February 7, 1672, and of his daughter, Ann, April 9, 1677. His elder children, John, Daniel, Samuel, Nathaniel, William and Jeremiah, were doubtless born at Barnstable.

Samuel Bacon continued to reside at Woodbridge until 1683, as on March 25, 1683, he conveyed a portion of his land there to Thomas Rudyard, and the deed of record in the office of the Secretary of State at Trenton gives his residence as Woodbridge. However, on November 22, 1682, John Adams, of Hedgefield,

Salem county, conveyed to Samuel Bacon "of Woodbridge, East Jersey, Seaman," two hundred and sixty acres on Cohansey River, part of Jacob Young's Neck, hereafter known as "Bacon's Adventure" or Bacon's Neck. Here Samuel Bacon evidently took up his residence in the Spring following his purchase, and later acquired considerable other land, a deed dated April 25, 1683, the same date as his conveyance of the Woodbridge land, conveys to him four hundred acres on the Cohansey from "Shaykanum and Ethoe, Indyan Proprietors."

Samuel Bacon was a member of Provincial Assembly of West Jersey, in 1685, and was one of the Justices of the Court for Salem county, held February, 1688. His will is dated September 16, 1695, and letters thereon were granted to his widow, Martha, November 27, following. Martha survived him four years; her will dated May 5, 1697, was proven April 3, 1700, and letters granted to her son, Jeremiah, but the inventory of her personal estate bears date April 22, 1699, probably approximately the date of her death.

JOHN BACON, son of Samuel and Martha (Foxwell) Bacon, born at Barnstable, Massachusetts, accompanied his parents to New Jersey, and on August 19, 1690, his father, by deed of gift, conveyed to him sixty-five acres out of the two hundred and sixty bought of John Adams in 1682, and in 1695 and 1696 he purchased two hundred and ninety acres of John Davis and Henry Jenings respectively. On October 17, 1688, John Bacon married Elizabeth, daughter of John Smith, of Amwellbury, Salem county, who was the mother of his children, though he married (second) Grace Test, a widow, April 6, 1708. His will, dated December 8, 1715, was proven nine days later, and names his wife, Grace, and children, John, Edmond, Job and Lucy.

JOHN BACON, son of John and Elizabeth (Smith) Bacon, born in 1698, inherited under his father's will the "Home Farm, bought of John Davis." He married at Salem Friends' Meeting, about October 1, 1718, Elizabeth Sayre, their first proposal of intentions being made at the Monthly Meeting held 6mo. (August) 25, and the second on 7mo. (September) 29, and at the meeting in 8mo. the marriage is reported "orderly accomplished."

JOHN BACON, son of John and Elizabeth (Sayre) Bacon, born 1725, married October 30, 1765, Mary Stewart, and their daughter, Elizabeth Bacon, born January 6, 1776, became the wife of Richard Wood, grandson of Richard and Priscilla (Bacon) Wood, as hereafter shown, and Mary (Stewart) Bacon, her mother, became the second wife of Richard Wood, son of Richard and Priscilla.

The record of the births of the children of Richard and Priscilla (Bacon) Wood, as given below, is taken from a memorandum on the fly leaf of the old family Bible, in the possession of Richard Wood, of 1620 Locust Street, Philadelphia.

- One of these younger daughters, presumably Elizabeth, married Francis Test, of Salem, 1765, "out of meeting;" the other two and the son, Benjamin, are said to have died in infancy.

RICHARD WOOD, only surviving son of Richard and Priscilla (Bacon) Wood, born in Cumberland county, New Jersey (then Salem county), March 18, 1727-8, resided during the active years of his life in Cumberland county. Like his father, he became prominent in the affairs of Cumberland county and the State of New Jersey, serving at least two terms in the General Assembly, the last in 1790. He was a member of the Board of Freeholders in 1773-4-5 and 1787; Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, 1786, and one of the first Committee of Observation of Cumberland county, appointed December 22, 1774, in response to the resolve of Continental Congress of September 5, 1774, at Philadelphia. This committee, as soon as appointed, took up the question of the disposition of a quantity of tea which had been secretly landed at Greenwich, and by reason of the absence of the importer, deferred their consideration of its disposition until the following day at ten o'clock, but during the night the tea was seized and burned by parties unknown.

Richard Wood was in early life a cooper and farmer in Cumberland county, an elder of the Society of Friends, and much esteemed in that county as a man of talent and worth. He married (first) Hannah Davis, of Piles Grove, Salem county, New Jersey, of Welsh ancestry, born August 23, 1728, who was the mother of his children, and (second) Mary, widow of John Bacon (3) and daughter of John and Mary Stewart, whose daughter, Elizabeth, became the wife of his eldest son, Richard, and whose ancestry is given above.

Richard and Hannah (Davis) Wood had surviving issue:

Two daughters of Richard and Hannah, both named Priscilla, and a son, Benjamin, died in infancy.

RICHARD WOOD, eldest son of Richard and Hannah (Davis) Wood, born at Greenwich, Cumberland county, New Jersey, July 2, 1755, was educated under the care of Friends and in the country schools of Cumberland county. Until coming of age he remained with his father and aided him in his business. After a short experience as a teacher of country schools in his native county he began his mercantile career at Greenwich. His energy and business ability enabled him to acquire a competence and he became one of the wealthiest and most influential men of his district. He was elected to the State Legislature in 1800, and served two terms in that body, representing the third generation of the same name to render service in the law-making body of his native state and province. As his wealth accumulated he gradually relinquished the mercantile business to his younger partners, devoted his attention chiefly to agriculture, and was the owner of a large amount of real estate. In the period of depression following the second war with Great Britain he lost heavily by the depreciation of values and also by the failure of a man for whom he had indorsed, but he retained a moderate competence. He died at Greenwich, October 21, 1817. He was a member of the Society of Friends, a great reader, and took a lively interest in public affairs, giving his allegiance to the Federalist party. He married (first) November 24, 1780, Anna, daughter of David Cooper, of Gloucester county. She died, 1783, at the age of twenty-eight years, leaving an only son:

David C. Wood, died suddenly in Phila., Oct. 6, 1859, unm., aged 78 years; buried from the house of his half-brother, Richard D. Wood, with whom he was for some years associated in business.

Richard Wood married (second) 1793, Elizabeth, daughter of John and Mary (Stewart) Bacon, before mentioned, whose mother had become the second wife of his father. She was born June 1, 1776, and was therefore but seventeen years of age at her marriage. After his second marriage, Richard Wood erected the large brick house in Greenwich, since known as the "Homestead," where he thereafter lived until his death. All his children were born there except the eldest daughter, Mary S. It is still owned by his grandchildren in Philadelphia.

RICHARD D. WOOD, second son of Richard and Elizabeth (Bacon) Wood, born at Greenwich, Cumberland county, New Jersey, March 29, 1799, received a good academic education, and, on leaving school, assisted his father in the store at Greenwich until 1820, when he engaged in the mercantile business on his own account at Salem, New Jersey, where he remained two years. In 1823 he came to Philadelphia and organized the firm of Wood, Abbott & Wood, composed of himself, his cousin, Samuel C. Wood, and William L. Abbott, and opened a store at the north side of Market Street, between Second and Third streets. Samuel C. Wood retired from the firm eighteen months later, and the name became Wood & Abbott, of which firm his youngest brother, Horatio Curtis Wood, later became a member. They later purchased the store at No. 127, now 309 Market Street, which was destroyed by fire and the present store erected, later occupied by the firm of R. Wood, Marsh, Hayward & Co., of which his son, Richard, was senior member.

The wholesale dry-goods firm of Wood & Abbott, and its successor Abbot, Wood & Co., did a large and prosperous business, and was widely and favorably known in mercantile circles.

Richard D. Wood was elected a director of the Girard Bank in 1831, and served until 1835, when he became identified with The Philadelphia Bank, of which he served as a director until shortly before his death, being succeeded by his eldest son, Richard Wood, who after many years service in that capacity was succeeded by his brother, George, who still fills the position. Richard D. Wood also became interested in a great number of manufacturing, industrial and other enterprises. He was one of the original promoters and founders of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and for many years a member of its board of directors. He was a director of the Schuylkill Navigation Company, a leading spirit in its management and equipment, and the moving spirit in its enlargement and improvement in 1845. He was one of the founders and a member of the board of managers of the Philadelphia Board of Trade; a contributor to the Pennsylvania Hospital; a director and large stockholder in the Cambria Iron Works at Johnstown, Pennsylvania, and held a like position in the Allentown Iron Works at Allentown, Pennsylvania. He was for several years one of the managers of the Insurance Company of North America, and was connected with a number of other financial and business enterprises. His diary, faithfully kept during the active years of his life, shows that much of his time was given to a conscientious performance of his duty as an official of the various companies with which he was connected. He also took a deep interest in benevolent and charitable enterprises, and was one of the founders, and many years vice-president of the Union Benevolent Association.

In 1842 he purchased a farm in Chester county, where he and his family spent their summers for ten years, selling it in 1853.

Because of financial aid he had given to his half-brother, David C. Wood, who had for many years operated an iron furnace at Millville, New Jersey, Richard D. Wood, in 1850, became the owner of the water-power of Maurice River, and of the old charcoal iron furnace and pipe foundries at Millville, Cumberland county, New Jersey. Here began the development of what has become the extensive operations of the firm of R. D. Wood & Co. at Camden and Florence, New Jersey, in the manufacture of iron pipes and heavy iron machinery. Constructing at huge expense a canal two miles long by which his water-power was transmitted to its site, he in 1853 began the erection of extensive cotton mills at Millville, which later operated thirty thousand spindles. He later erected an extensive bleachery, grist and sawmills, glass works, and a gas manufacturing plant, and continued to carry on a large manufacturing business there until his death. The business in its main branches being continued by his sons, under the old firm name of R. D. Wood & Co., at Camden and Florence, as before stated, with offices at Fourth and Chestnut streets, Philadelphia.

Richard D. Wood married, October 16, 1832, Julianna F., born October 20, 1810, eldest daughter of Edward Randolph, Jr., of Philadelphia, by his wife Mary, daughter of Samuel and Mary (Richardson) Taylor, of Philadelphia, an account of whose ancestors follows.

Julianna F. (Randolph) Wood survived her husband and died March 30, 1885. In 1870, she published a memorial volume, entitled "Family Sketches," of which but one hundred copies were printed for private circulation only. It contains much valuable family history and from it the greater part of the data, herein given, was gleaned.

The Randolph family of Philadelphia, originally Fitz Randolph, was founded in America by Edward Fitz Randolph, who was born in Nottinghamshire, England in 1615, and who came to Scituate, Massachusetts, about 1634, and in 1676 removed with his family to Piscataway, New Jersey.

The Nottingham Fitz Randolphs claimed descent from Robert Fitz Randolph of Yorkshire, who in 1190 built upon the manor of Middleham, which he had inherited from his grandsire, Ribald, a nephew of William the Conqueror, Middleham Castle, which with the manor passed in regular succession to his male heirs, until 1265, when it came into possession of Robert Neville, Lord of Raby, by his marriage with Lady Mary, daughter of Ralph Fitz Randolph, third Lord of Middleham, who died without male issue, and it suffered forfeiture to Henry VI. on the defection of Neville.

Descendants of the younger branch of the family, however, continued to reside in the same locality for several centuries, Sir Ralph Fitz Randolph having his seat at Spennythron Hall, one mile from Middleham as late as 1557. The Nottingham family of Fitz Randolph, bearing the same arms as the Lords of Middleham, descend from John Fitz Randolph, who in 1575 purchased of Cuthbert de Langton the manor of Langton Hall, or Westwood in Nottinghamshire. His son Christopher Fitz Randolph married Joan, daughter and heiress of Cuthbert de Langton, and had two sons, Edward and James. The latter, born in 1589, was a Colonel in the Royal Army of Henry VIII., and was authorized by that monarch to raise military forces for his service. He lived in Kirkly, Ashfield, Nottinghamshire in 1612, and is thought to have been the father of Edward Fitz Randolph, the American immigrant of 1634.

"Young Master Edward Fitz Randolph" is spoken of as owning a house in Scituate, Massachusetts, in 1634, and on May 10, 1637, married there Elizabeth, born at Leyden, Holland, in 1620, daughter of Thomas Blossom and Ann his wife, who came to Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1629, and resided at Barnstable, where Thomas died in 1633, and his widow later married Henry Rowley. Thomas Blossom was a deacon of Plymouth Church, and a man highly esteemed in the Puritan Colony.

Edward Fitz Randolph joined the church of Barnstable in 1639, and removed to that town, where his ten children were born. In or prior to 1676, he removed with his family to Piscataway, New Jersey, where he died shortly afterwards. His widow took up land in right of her husband's purchase, three hundred acres being patented to her on March 21, 1676, which on June 26, 1685, she conveyed to her sons, Joseph, John, Thomas and Benjamin, and four days later became the wife of Captain John Pike of Woodbridge, ancestor of General Zebulon Pike. She died 1712, in her ninety-third year.

Nathaniel, eldest son of Edward and Elizabeth (Blossom) Fitz Randolph, baptized at Barnstable, May 15, 1642, married there, November, 1662, Mary, daughter of John Holly, and in 1677 bought land in Woodbridge, Middlesex county, New Jersey, where he died November 21, 1713. He was a representative in Colonial Assembly in 1693. In 1704 he and his family were members of the Society of Friends, and the early meetings of Woodbridge Monthly Meeting were held at his house. He married (second) in 1706, Jane Hampton, of Shrewsbury, and had by her one son, Benjamin, born December 27, 1707. His sons by the first marriage were, John, Isaac, Nathaniel, Samuel, Joseph and Edward, the record of the birth of the two eldest appearing at Barnstable in 1663 and 1664, respectively.

Edward Fitz Randolph, the youngest son of Nathaniel by his first wife, Mary Holly, was probably born at Woodbridge, New Jersey. He married, in 1704, Catharine, daughter of Richard Hartshorne, who was a son of William Hartshorne, of Heathhearne, Leicestershire, who came to New Jersey in 1669. His wife, Margaret, born in Rhode Island, was a daughter of Robert Carr, born in England in 1614.

Richard, the eldest son of Edward and Catharine (Hartshorne) Fitz Randolph, was born June 16, 1705. His youngest brother, Nathaniel, born in 1714, married Mary Shotwell and was the father of Captain Nathaniel Fitz Randolph, who was killed in the Revolutionary War, dying July 23, 1780, from wounds received in a skirmish at Elizabethtown.

Richard Fitz Randolph married at Shrewsbury, Monmouth county, New Jersey, in 1735, Elizabeth Corlies, and had eight children, the youngest of whom,

Edward Fitz Randolph, born February 20, 1754, the same year of his father's death, was sent at an early age to New York and apprenticed to the printing business with a man by the name of Parker, an intimate friend and partner of Dr. Benjamin Franklin, and eventually located in Philadelphia. He was appointed an Ensign in the Fourth Pennsylvania Battalion, in 1776, under Colonel Anthony Wayne, and was at the battles of Trenton and Princeton; was promoted to First Lieutenant, January 3, 1777, in the new Fourth Pennsylvania Regiment, under Colonel Butler, and was at the battles of Brandywine, Germantown and Monmouth. At the engagement at Paoli, September 20, 1777, he was wounded and escaped by feigning death. He resigned from the army May 10, 1779, after having attained the rank of Captain. Soon after leaving the army, Captain Randolph, as he at about this time began writing his name, engaged in the mercantile business at Second and Market streets, in partnership with Josiah Langdale Coates, under the firm name of Coates & Randolph. This firm did an extensive business as shipping merchants, owning their own vessels and carrying on a large East Indian trade. Edward Randolph married at Philadelphia, March 16, 1779, Anna Julianna, born at Germantown, May 14, 1761, daughter of Henry Steel, a native of Germany, by his wife, Anna Margaret, born February 22, 1731, daughter of Rudolph and Anna Ebright, natives of Zurich, Switzerland, who had removed to Berne, Switzerland, and from there to America in 1740, and settled in Germantown, where their daughter, Ann Margaret, married, in 1754, Henry Steel. After the death of Steel she married Edward Oxley, to whom Captain Randolph indited a number of letters while serving in the army, giving instructions as to the location of his property and its disposition in case of his death on the field.

Notwithstanding his service in the army, Edward Randolph retained his membership in the Society of Friends, and his wife, Anna Julianna, became a member soon after her marriage. She died suddenly of apoplexy, February 11, 1810. Her husband survived her many years, dying March 12, 1837, at the age of eighty-three years and was buried in the Friends burying-ground at Sixteenth and Race streets.

EDWARD RANDOLPH JR., second surviving son of Edward and Anna Julianna (Steel) Randolph, born August 20, 1784, was for many years one of the prominent merchants of Philadelphia. His first venture was as a dry-goods merchant on Second Street; he was later senior member of the wholesale dry-goods firm of Randolph & Madeira on Market Street, near Seventh. He subsequently, with his elder brother, George F., was a member of the firm of Gillingham & Randolph, later G. F. & E. Randolph; and, in 1832, engaged in the lumber business. He died after a lingering illness, December 11, 1834. His business was continued by his widow and two elder sons until the third son, Nathaniel, came of age, when the latter formed a partnership with his uncle, Oliver Parry, and took over the business.

Edward Randolph, Jr., married, November 14, 1809, Mary, daughter of Samuel and Mary (Richardson) Taylor. Samuel, born at Chester, in 1752, was a son of John and Abigail (Bell) Taylor. He came to Philadelphia when a young man and was a brush-maker, having his place of business on the west side of Second Street, above Arch. He died September 19, 1793. John Drinker's Memorial of him is as follows: "After a very short illness, on the 19th day of 9th Mo. 1793, of the malignant or yellow fever, died our justly esteemed friend and brother, Samuel Taylor, who, from an early stage of his minority to the time of his putting off the mortal veil, by an innocent, circumspect life, conversation and deportment offered to the world an example of virtue and piety worthy the imitation of the wisest among men,—being through his simplicity a child yet in the best sense a man of understanding." He was an Elder of Philadelphia Monthly Meeting of Friends. He married, October 18, 1781, Mary Richardson, who survived him and lived to an advanced age, dying June 21, 1835, aged eighty-four years.

Francis Richardson, the great-grandfather of Mary (Richardson) Taylor, was a son of Thomas Richardson, of South Shields, county of Durham, England, and married, January 27, 1680, at the Friends Meeting in Devonshire House, London, Rebecca Howard, daughter of John Howard, of Uxbridge, Middlesex. They came to New York, where Francis Richardson engaged in business as a merchant in 1681. He was a purchaser of large tracts of land in Pennsylvania, which were laid out to him in Bucks and Philadelphia counties, but continued to reside in New York until his early death on July 15, 1688. Mary Howard, a sister to Rebecca (Howard) Richardson, had married Thomas Coddington, son of William Coddington, Governor of Rhode Island, and on the death of her husband, Mrs. Richardson took up her residence with her sister at Newport, Rhode Island, where she married (second) September 4, 1689, Edward Shippen, then of Boston, later of Philadelphia, member of Provincial Assembly and Council, Chief Justice of Pennsylvania, etc., and the ancestor of the distinguished family of Shippen, an account of which is given in these pages. The sister, Mary (Howard) Coddington, later became the third wife of Anthony Morris, the pioneer merchant of Philadelphia, an account of whom and some of his descendants is also given in this work. Rebecca (Howard-Richardson) Shippen died in Philadelphia, February 26, 1704-5.

Francis Richardson (2), son of Francis and Rebecca (Howard) Richardson, was born in New York in 1681, and came to Philadelphia with his mother soon after her marriage to Edward Shippen, about 1694, and became a goldsmith in that city. He married, April 18, 1705, Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph Growdon, of Trevoise, Bucks county, one of the largest landholders and most prominent men of that county; many years Speaker of Provincial Assembly, member of Provincial Council, 1687-98, and Judge of Provincial Court. He was a son of Lawrence Growdon, of Cornwall, England. He and his family belonged to the aristocratic class of large landed proprietors, who held a monopoly of the offices in Colonial days. His son, Joseph, was Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and Lawrence was a member of Provincial Council and many years a prominent office holder in Bucks county. His daughter, Grace, was the wife of David Lloyd, the prominent leader of the anti-proprietary party in Colonial affairs for many years.

Francis Richardson (2) died in Philadelphia in 1729, and his widow less than a year later. They had issue:

Francis Richardson (3), b. 1708, a prominent merchant and shipper of Phila.; m. November 26, 1742, Mary, dau. of George Fitzwater; eight children;

BRADFORD FAMILY.

WILLIAM BRADFORD, the first printer in the Province of Pennsylvania, was the son of William and Anne Bradford, of Leicestershire, England, where he was baptized, at Burwell Church, May 20, 1663. He served an apprenticeship with Andrew Sowle, a printer and publisher of Friends' books, in Grace-Church street, London, and learned the art and trade of a printer and publisher.

He came to Pennsylvania, supposedly with Penn, in the "Welcome," in 1682; was at least living in the neighborhood of Philadelphia, September 12, 1683. How long he remained in the Quaker Colony before his return to England does not appear, but he was in London in August, 1685, when he received a letter from George Fox, recommending him to prominent Friends in America, as "A sober Young Man who comes to Pennsylvania to set up the trade of printing Friends' Books." During this visit to London, he married Elizabeth Sowle, daughter of his master and preceptor, and she accompanied him to Pennsylvania, where they were received into Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, January 4, 1685-6, on a certificate from the Meeting at Devonshire House, London. They settled in Oxford township, Philadelphia county, and were members of the old Oxford Meeting, which merged into a Baptist Meeting in 1693, practically all of its members being followers of George Keith in his schism of 1692.

Just where William Bradford set up his printing press does not seem to have been definitely determined, but that it was not in the city of Philadelphia seems clear. When he published Bunyeat's Epistle, in 1686, it bore on its title page, this inscription, "Printed and Sold by William Bradford, near Philadelphia." Becoming involved in the Keithian controversy, through publishing some of Keith's virulent papers and pamphlets against the Quakers, he became obnoxious to some of the leading people of the Colony and was arrested and tried for publishing seditious writings, but was not convicted. His usefulness and prosperity in the Quaker Colony, was, however, at an end for a time, and in 1693 he removed to New York City, where he was made Royal Printer, April 10, 1693; the first product of his press in that city being a circular letter from Governor Benjamin Fletcher, dated June, 1693, and printed in Dutch and English. He continued as public printer for the Province of New York for over half a century, but did not abandon the same field in Philadelphia; as in 1712 he sent his son, Andrew, to that city to establish the printing business there.

William Bradford started the New York Gazette, the first newspaper to be published in that city, October 16, 1725, nearly six years after his son, Andrew, had started the American Weekly Mercury, in Philadelphia; and continued to edit it until 1743. His first wife, Elizabeth Sowle, born in 1663, died in New York City, July 8, 1731, and he married (second) Widow Smith, who survived him, but by whom he had no children. He died May 23, 1752, and was buried in Trinity Churchyard, where his ancient tombstone bears this inscription:

"Here lies the Body of MR. WILLIAM BRADFORD, Printer: who departed this life May 23, 1752, Aged 92 Yeares: He was born in Leicestershire, in Old England, in 1663, and came over to America in 1682, before the City of Philadelphia was laid out. He was Printer to this Government for upwards of 50 Yeares, and being quite worn out with Old Age and Honour, he left this Mortal State in lively hopes of a blessed immortality.

"Reader reflect how too you'll quit this stage,
You'll find but few attain to such an age,
Life's full of Pain: Lo: there's a Place of Rest,
Prepare to meet your GOD, then you are blest."

Near by is also the tombstone of his wife, Elizabeth, who died June 8. 1731, at the age of sixty-eight years. Her father, Andrew Sowle, with whom William Bradford learned his trade, was a printer and publisher in the time of Cromwell, and was later an intimate friend and a first purchaser of William Penn, and witnessed the Charter of Liberties for Pennsylvania, signed April 15, 1682. He was succeeded in his printing and publishing business in London by a younger daughter, Tacie Sowle, who greatly befriended William Bradford, the third, in establishing himself in the printing and publishing business in Philadelphia in 1741.

William and Elizabeth (Sowle) Bradford had issue:

Andrew, b. in Phila., 1686; reared in N. Y., and learned the printer's trade with his father, and entered into partnership with him, in 1711. In 1712 he returned to Phila. and engaged in the printing and publishing business there, and Dec. 21, 1719, issued the first number of The American Weekly Mercury, which was the second newspaper founded and published in the Colonies, and continued to publish it until his death, Nov. 24, 1742. He was prominently identified with many of the institutions of the Province of Pennsylvania; was one of the owners of the Durham Iron Company, at his death. He m. twice, his first wife, Dorcas ———, d. Dec., 1739; m. (second), 1740, Cornelia Smith, who d. in 1755; he left no issue;

WILLIAM BRADFORD, JR., second son of William and Elizabeth (Sowle) Bradford, born in Philadelphia, 1688; removed with his parents to New York, 1693, and was reared in that city. He learned the printing business with his father, but owing to poor health later adopted the life of a seaman, and devoted himself to mercantile business; residing, for some years, in Hanover square, New York City. In his will, dated August 31, 1742, and proven January 24, 1759, he is styled a "pewterer." He married, November 25, 1716, Sytje Santvoort (Sandford), baptized April 14, 1695; died after June 5, 1760; daughter of Abraham Santvoort (baptized at New York, January 11, 1667; will proved there, May 15, 1745), by his wife, Vroutje (baptized at New York, July 25, 1666; married, February 27, 1689), daughter of Cornelius Janse Van Hooren, a landowner in New Amsterdam, 1656, will dated October 11, 1689, by his wife (married October 4, 1659), Anna Maria Janse.

Jacob Abrahamsen Santvoort, grandfather of Sytje (Santvoort) Bradford, came from Vianen, Holland, in May, 1661, in the good ship, "St. Jean Baptist," and settled in New Amsterdam, where he married, January 24, 1666, Sytje, baptized at New Amsterdam, April 17, 1645, daughter of Adrien Pieterzen Van Alcmaer, a landowner in New York as early as 1630, by his wife, Elsjje Janse, whom he married May 17, 1643, daughter of Jan Jansen Van Breestude and Engeltje, his wife, who came from Breeste to New Amsterdam, prior to 1640.

WILLIAM BRADFORD, third, eldest son of William Bradford, Jr., of New York, by his wife, Sytje Santvoort, born in New York City, January 19, 1721-22, after a preliminary education in New York City was sent by his parents to Philadelphia to learn the printing business with his uncle, Andrew Bradford, and at the close of his apprenticeship, 1739, though still a minor, was admitted to a partnership with his uncle in the printing and publishing business. During the years 1739-40 the new firm published a number of books and pamphlets, some of which are still in existence, bearing on their title page the inscription, "Printed and sold by Andrew and William Bradford, at the Sign of the Bible, in Second Street, Philadelphia."

The partnership, however, lasted but little over a year, and at its dissolution William Bradford went to England to visit influential and prosperous relatives there, with whom his family had been in constant and cordial correspondence since the coming of his grandparents to Philadelphia in 1685; and to select materials and outfit for establishing himself in the printing and publishing business in Philadelphia.

Andrew Sowle, great-grandfather, who had been one of the "First Purchasers" of land in Pennsylvania, and an intimate friend of the "great founder," had besides his daughter, Elizabeth, who married William Bradford, the first, a daughter, Tace, who married a man by name of Raylton, and Andrew Sowle, by will dated December 6, 1695, had bequeathed to her and his widow, Jane, the one thousand acres of land in Pennsylvania, which Tace Raylton, of London, widow, by deed dated March 20, 1730, conveyed to Andrew Bradford, of Philadelphia, printer, and William Bradford, of New York, pewterer, the sons of her sister, Elizabeth (Sowle) Bradford; William Bradford, December 7, 1732, conveyed his interest to his brother, Andrew. The land being laid out in Upper Dublin township, Philadelphia county, was doubtless the residence and site of the pioneer printing establishment of William Bradford, in Pennsylvania, from 1685 to 1693. In addition to his Philadelphia land, Tace Raylton inherited from her father the printing and publishing establishment, on Grace-Church street, London, and continued to carry on the bookselling business there, at the time of the visit of William Bradford to London in 1740-1. To her, his maternal great-aunt, the young printer was indebted, not only for introductions to influential and prominent people, but for advice and material assistance in his preparations for launching himself in business in Philadelphia. He contemplated, in addition to the publishing and selling of books, to establish a newspaper on his return to Philadelphia, and through his aunt's influence acquired the acquaintance and friendship, as well as the promised assistance and coöperation of publishers and of prominent men, who were later of the greatest assistance to him in the conduct of his business. He was able to secure correspondents for his prospective newspaper, who were in a position to furnish him with the latest news in reference to trade, and on the all absorbing topic of the latest acts of Parliament in relation to the Colonies, and the attitude of public men on the proposed legislation in reference to them. His wisdom and foresight in this particular were destined to make his newspaper much more popular to the public than Dr. Franklin's Pennsylvania Gazette, and its founding marked a new era in newspaper publication in the new world.

He returned to Philadelphia in 1742 with a supply of books, probably the largest of any bookseller in the middle colonies, and requisites for a well-equipped printing office. In the Pennsylvania Gazette, of July 8, 1742, he announced that he had "set up his new printing office in the house in which Andrew Bradford formerly lived on Second Street, where printing was to be done at reasonable rates; and that he purposed to publish, shortly, a Weekly Newspaper, entitled the Weekly Advertiser, or Pennsylvania Journal, that may contain the most material as well as authentic news foreign and domestic; correspondences being provided to carry on the same. In which paper gentlemen may have extracts of their letters published, containing matter to be communicated to the public. He further proposes a more exact way for country subscribers to have their papers than has hitherto been put in practice." The house above alluded to was on the west side of Second street, between Chestnut and Market. It bore the hereditary sign of "The Bible," as did his second location in 1743, in the same block, at the corner of Black Horse ailey, where was located his bookstore and printing office and where the Pennsylvania Journal was issued for eleven years.

His catalogue of books for the year 1742, "Sold by William Bradford at the Sign of The Bible on Second Street," was quite extensive, and consisted principally of books of a religious nature, that being an epoch of religious awakenings, the day of the Wesleys, Whitefield and Zinzendorf, all of whom had been in this country shortly before that time.

He published several books during the years 1742-43, also of a religious nature, two of them by eminent Pennsylvania divines, Reverends Samuel Finley and Samuel Blair, respectively.

William Bradford married, August 15, 1742, Rachel, daughter of Thomas Budd, and granddaughter of William Budd, both of Northampton township, Burlington county, New Jersey, through which alliance he became connected with persons of wealth and influence, as well as of considerable prominence in the business and politics of the provinces of Pennsylvania and New Jersey of that day, whose patronage and influence were of considerable advantage to the ambitious young journalist and publisher.

The first number of William Bradford's newspaper, The Pennsylvania Journal, and Weekly Advertiser, was issued December 2, 1742, and though the Pennsylvania Gazette had been published by Dr. Franklin for thirteen years, the Journal marked a new era in American journalism, by widening the scope, beyond the mere publication of the news, to at least a mild discussion of questions of the day, in the form of correspondence, which was soon followed by a wider and freer discussion of questions of politics, religion and science. It has been said of the Pennsylvania Journal that "it was one of the best printed, best edited, and most widely circulated papers of the century, in this country."

In the year 1744 Mr. Bradford published a book which established his reputation as one of the best printers in the American Colonies; it was entitled:

TWENTY-THREE SERMONS
 UPON THE CHIEF END OF MAN
 The
 DIVINE AUTHORITY OF THE SACRED SCRIPTURES,
 THE BEING AND ATTRIBUTES OF GOD AND THE DOCTRINES OF THE DIVINITY
 Preached at Philadelphia Ann. Dom. 1743
 By Gilbert Tennent, A. M.

Early in the same year he was appointed "Printer to the King's Most Excellent Majesty, for the Province of New Jersey;" the first charge made in his book for work for that province bearing date, June 22, 1744. In that and the succeeding years he did a large amount of profitable work, under this appointment, in the printing of the proceedings of the Assembly, Governor's Proclamations, Treaties with the Indians, etc., and it incidentally brought him a large number of orders from the officers of the province and others for books and stationery. In 1754 his establishment was again moved, this time to the southwest corner of Front and Market streets.

With the outbreak of Indian hostilities on the frontiers of Pennsylvania, in the year 1747, and the neglect and refusal of the predominating Quaker element in the Provincial Assembly to make any provision for arming for the defence of the frontier settlements or for the defense of the coast and harbors from the frequent ravages of piratical adventurers, the people of the different counties formed themselves into Associated Companies, and chose officers who were duly commissioned by the Provincial Council. On January 5, 1747-8, the Association Battery was formed in Philadelphia, consisting of several companies, and William Bradford was selected and commissioned as Lieutenant of the Fourth Company. The Pennsylvania Journal took up the cause of the Associators, and its columns were always open to the friends of defensive warfare. This marked the beginning of the downfall of the non-resisting Quaker element as the dominant party in Pennsylvania politics, and the succeeding French and Indian War of 1756-63, practically drove them out of the governing body, at least as a dominant party. With the change in governmental policies came a change in social life; military dress, military music, parades, etc., marked the social functions of the Quaker City; the Dancing Assembly was instituted, and play acting became popular. There was also a revival of interest in the arts, sciences and literature; Franklin made his discoveries in electricity in 1752; the Logan Library was instituted in 1751, and an increased number of gentlemen published in the Journal, "such portions of their letters as were of interest to the public." Under these circumstances the Journal became popular and profitable and Bradford's book press enjoyed increased activity. In 1754 Mr. Bradford established his "London Coffee House," near his printing establishment, on Front street, and it at once became one of the most popular institutions of the city; a place of resort for the people of the city desiring to meet each other and inform themselves upon public events either at home or abroad, and to discuss questions of the day. Rooms on the second floor were set apart for public meetings and committees, and of it Westcott says, "All Philadelphia ranged round this old building for a quarter of a century; and the London Coffee House became a historic spot in the annals of the Province in Colonial times, and of the state in those of the Revolution. It was the headquarters of life and action, the pulsating heart of excitement, enterprise and patriotism, as the exigencies of the times might demand—the centre of great events and interests—of the ruling fashions—of the metropolis." Merchants, provincial dignitaries under the Crown, army and navy officers, and all sorts of people of activity in business and politics made it their rendezvous. All manner of sales were consummated there; newspapers of London and other cities, as well as the few journals of our country, before the Revolution, were first seen there. It was in this London Coffee House that the opposition to the Stamp Act, as to Philadelphia, was unified, and the non-importation resolutions drawn and largely signed, through the personal efforts of William Bradford.

The original manuscript of these historic resolutions is now in possession of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, having been presented on May 16, 1834, by a great-grandson of Colonel William Bradford, who at that time made the following statement in reference to them:

"The paper was a gift to me by my late grandfather Thomas Bradford; at the time of the gift he made substantially the following statement, * * * that when a young man he went from house to house and store to store in the city of Philadelphia, and obtained the majority of signatures thereon, * * * that his father William Bradford, being a member of the committee appointed at a public meeting held by the citizens, for the purpose of procuring the signatures, gave the paper to him and that after he had procured many of the signatures in the manner before stated, the document was placed in his father's office at the Coffee House, for public inspection, at which place the remaining names were added. That it had been preserved by his father Colonel William Bradford from its execution in 1765 to his death in 1791, when it came into the hands of his son Thomas Bradford, the grandfather of the donor." In the old Coffee House likewise met the committee appointed to wait on Mr. Hughes, the royal distributor of the hated stamps, and secure his promise not to enforce the provisions of the Act until it was accepted by the other provinces; and from its steps Captain Wise, in May, 1766, announced to the assembled patriots, amid huzzas and flying colors, the repeal of the Stamp Act. Here in 1771 the first piece of broadcloth made in America was exhibited; here also the letter from the Boston Committee announcing the closing of that port was read and the answer drawn by the Committee of Correspondence, and in the early days of the Revolution it was the meeting place of the Committee of Safety and its adjuncts, as it was the centre of military enthusiasm when the time came for the arming for the conflict. Here was brought from the bloody field of Princeton the lifeless body of General Hugh Mercer, Colonel Bradford's companion-in-arms, and here Lord Cornwallis first recorded his occupancy of the "Rebel Capital." Colonel Bradford retained control of the Coffee House until 1780, when he relinquished it for a more quiet residence in his closing days. With the retirement of Colonel Bradford the days of glory for the Coffee House practically closed. Colonel Eleazer Oswald some years later made an effort to restore it to its one time popularity as a gathering place of the community, but was unsuccessful.

Colonel Bradford, as before stated, first bore arms as Lieutenant in the Philadelphia Associators in the Indian War of 1747-48; at the outbreak of the French and Indian War, he was promoted to Captain. He was one of the most active in his opposition to the Stamp Act; The Pennsylvania Journal and Weekly Advertiser vigorously opposed it from first to last; it appeared with the skull and cross bones, the size of the stamp, with the inscription around the edge, "this is the place for the stamp." Bradford was a member of the "Sons of Liberty," organized to resist by all the force requisite the enforcement of the Act, and was the one most relied on of the Philadelphia branch for zeal, discretion and efficiency in the opposition. His eldest son led the drummers who preceded the procession of citizens that marched to the Courthouse to demand of John Hughes that he refuse to execute the provisions of the Act. "To no man in the Colonies was America more indebted for the repeal of the Stamp Act, than to Colonel William Bradford—The influence of his Pennsylvania Journal, throughout the colonies at that day was great, and in Philadelphia his ardor, perseverance and efficiency inspired and supported opposition in every rank."

In the events leading up to the Revolutionary struggle, Colonel Bradford held a like prominent place. Hon. Elias Boudinot, President of Congress in 1782, said it was chiefly owing to Mr. Bradford that no tea was landed in Philadelphia. The Philadelphia Tea Party was a much more dignified affair than its counterpart at Boston. On October 8, 1773, a meeting of the citizens of Philadelphia adopted resolutions that no tea would be allowed to be landed at that port and called upon the consignees of the East India Tea Company's tea ships that they should decline their offices, which they did. When on Christmas morning, 1773, the tea ship, "Polly," Captain Ayres, was reported to be coming up the Delaware, a committee of citizens met the vessel at Gloucester Point, three miles below the city and directed the Captain not to bring her any nearer the city. The vessel halted and Captain Ayres landed and was escorted to Philadelphia by a number of the citizens; a town meeting was called at the State House, at ten o'clock, on the 27th of December, which resolved that the vessel should not be received at the Custom House, nor be unloaded; Captain Ayres was given permission to remain until the next day, in order to provide necessaries for his return voyage, but must then proceed with his vessel and cargo out of the river and bay. On Wednesday, December 28, the "Polly" weighed anchor and proceeded on her way back to the docks of the East India Company, at Leadenhall street, London.

Colonel Bradford was an early advocate of the union of the Colonies, placing at the head of the Journal the figure of the snake, cut into thirteen pieces and labeled with the initials of the Colonies, and underneath the inscription, "Unite or Die." He was a member of the Convention of the Province, held January 23, 1775, when it was decided that "if the humble and loyal petition of the said Convention, to his most Gracious Majesty, should be disregarded * * * we hold it our indispensable duty to resort to such force at every hazard to defend the Rights and Liberties of America." He is said to have been the author of a large part of the resolutions then adopted. Having been Captain of a Company of Associators, May 26, 1775, to June 25, 1775, he paid out £107 of his own money in repairing its arms and providing requisites for a campaign in the field, and went with it into New Jersey, at Gloucester, where they secured His Majesty's officers, Major Christopher French, of the Twenty-second Regiment of Foot; Ensign John Robson, of the Forty-ninth Regiment of Foot, and Terrence McDermott, a volunteer in His Majesty's Army, and brought them to Philadelphia, and presented them before the Council, where they gave their parole not to bear arms against the United American Colonies, nor give intelligence to their enemies or the British Ministry. On June 7, 1776, Colonel Bradford was sent by the President of Congress with six boxes of money, for the use of the army in Canada, which he delivered to General Washington in New York. The Journal constantly printed strong appeals to the people to support Congress, and the patriot cause. Though of an age that exempted him from military duty, Colonel Bradford joined the army at Amboy in July, 1776, as Major of the Second Battalion, Pennsylvania Militia, and remained in active service through the campaign of 1776-77; in December, 1776, was stationed on the west bank of the Delaware, assisting in the defense of the river, and participated in the battles of Trenton and Princeton; was severely wounded at the latter engagement, and returned from it with the commission of Colonel of his regiment. He then retired from active service in the field and devoted himself to the service of his country through the columns of the Pennsylvania Journal, continually hurling out apothegms, questions, and counsels, ridiculing the Ministry, and encouraging the patriots. On February 19, 1777, he was made Chairman of the Navy Board, and as Westcott truly says, "served on this important board with constant attention, intelligence and patriotism, as long as it remained in existence." His activity in the organization and support of the little Pennsylvania Navy and in the fortification of the Delaware is clearly shown in the records; on January 24, 1778, he reports, "I am here alone, none of the Board with me, I am also tired of being here, would much rather be in action with the Militia." When the British were moving upon Philadelphia, he went to the relief of Billingsport, and then proceeded to Fort Mifflin. When the British finally occupied Philadelphia, he located near Trenton, but soon retired from active service. He was appointed, May 12, 1779, President of the Board of Inquiry, respecting Militia Officers, the last office he held under military authority.

He returned to Philadelphia on its evacuation by the British and resumed the publication of the Journal on December 23, 1778. His wife died June 25, 1780, and soon after that date he relinquished the management of the Journal and bookstore to his sons and removed to Somerset county, New Jersey, making his residence with his son-in-law, Joshua Maddox Wallace, at "Ellerslie." He, however, removed to Moreland, Philadelphia, now Montgomery county, where he spent his remaining years with his unmarried daughter, Rachel, later the wife of Hon. Elias Boudinot. He died September 25, 1791, and was interred beside his wife at Second Presbyterian Churchyard, on Arch street.

The inscription on his tombstone is as follows :

IN MEMORY OF
COLONEL WILLIAM BRADFORD
Who died September 25, 1791,
Aged 72 years.
He was born in New York,
And came to this city at an early age
Where he established a press
And published a newspaper as early as 1742
He was among the first
To oppose the British Stamp Act in this City,
And though,
At an age which exempted him from Military service
He endured a Winter's Campaign
And was at the Battles of Trenton and Princeton,
In the last of which he was Colonel of his Regiment
He was at Fort Mifflin
When it was attacked by the British And throughout the whole war maintained the Character of a Brave man and Firm Patriot.

In addition to conducting the Pennsylvania Journal, his bookstore and printing and publishing business, Colonel Bradford, in 1757, began the publication of a monthly magazine, under the title of The American Magazine and Monthly Chronicle, for the British Colonies, one of the earliest literary and philosophical journals of the country. The first number was issued in October, 1757, and it received excellent support from the best people of the country. George Washington was a subscriber for four copies. Its editor is supposed to have been Dr. William Smith, Provost of the College of Philadelphia, though his name did not appear as such; and Dr. Smith, getting into trouble with the Pennsylvania Assembly in 1758, is ascribed as the reason for the suspension of the publication of the magazine after it had completed one volume in September, 1758, though it proved both popular and profitable.

Colonel Bradford's name stands at the head of the list of sixty-four persons, members of the Colony in Schuylkill, who in 1760 formed the Schuylkill Fishing Company of the Colony in Schuylkill, and he continued a member until 1781. He was also a member of the Fishing Company of Fort St. David's, 1763-68. On April 10, 1762, William Bradford and John Inskip organized "The Philadelphia Insurance Company," one of the earliest Colonial marine insurance companies, with which the most prominent men in the city were associated, among them, Thomas Willing and his partner, Robert Morris, the financier of the Revolution; Archibald McCall, John Morton, Anthony Stocker, and others.

Colonel William Bradford married, August 15, 1742, Rachel Budd, "a pious and amiable woman, exemplary in her discharge of every social and relative duty, beloved by her acquaintances and blessed by the poor. Whose Soul was all uprightness, whose mind was all nobleness and whose conduct was all generosity." She died at Philadelphia, June 25, 1780, aged sixty years. She came of a family of much respectability in England and of considerable prominence in this country. Her great-grandfather was Rev. Thomas Budd, rector of Martosh parish, Somersetshire, who about the year 1657 renounced his benefice and became a minister of the Society of Friends. He had sons: Thomas, William, John and James, all of whom came to the Province of New Jersey. Thomas, the eldest, who had purchased a share in the Proprietary of West Jersey, is said to have come out in 1668, and remained a few years before returning for his family, and with his brothers and their families arrived a second time at Burlington, in 1678. Thomas was the owner of several thousand acres of land in West Jersey; was a merchant, removed to Philadelphia about 1690 and died there, 1697. John, third of the brothers, was also a merchant in Philadelphia; James, youngest brother, died unmarried.

William Budd, grandfather of Rachel Bradford, was born in Somersetshire, England, 1649; died in Burlington, New Jersey, March 20, 1721-22, at the age of seventy-three years. He became an extensive landowner, and acquired a handsome estate, but took a less important and prominent part in public affairs than his elder brother, Thomas. Though his father became a minister among Friends, and he was reared in that faith, after settling in New Jersey, he joined the Church of England, and became a member of St. Mary's Church, at Burlington, where he was buried. Ann, his wife, died September 30, 1722, at the age of sixty-seven years. They had sons: William, Thomas, John and James; of whom Thomas, who married Deborah, daughter of John Langstaffe, from Whaledale, Yorkshire, and died in 1759, was the father of Rachel, wife of Colonel Bradford. She was born January 7, 1720-21.

THOMAS BRADFORD, eldest son of Colonel William and Rachel (Budd) Bradford, born in Philadelphia, May 4, 1745, attended the College of Philadelphia, now the University of Pennsylvania, until seventeen years of age, when he took a position in the printing office of his father, where he served an apprenticeship in the various branches of the business, and on coming of age, in 1766, was taken into partnership by his father. Like his father, he was an ardent patriot, and his enthusiasm was fired by daily contact with the leading spirits in opposition to the unjust measures of the British Ministry, who were close associates of his distinguished father. As heretofore stated, he circulated the Non-Importation Resolutions of 1765 to obtain signatures, and he was one of the drummers who led the procession of citizens in their demonstration against the enforcement of the odious Stamp Act. At the outbreak of the Revolution he became Captain of a company of Philadelphia Militia, with whom he participated on the New Jersey and Long Island campaign of 1776-77; was at the battles of Brandywine, Princeton, Germantown, and elsewhere, serving throughout the war; a portion of the time being Deputy Commissioner General of Prisoners, with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. At the close of the war he resumed the publication of the Pennsylvania Journal and Weekly Advertiser, together with the printing and bookselling business at the old "Sign of the Bible," on Second street, taking his sons into the business with him at an early age; the eldest, Samuel Fisher Bradford, becoming a partner on his arrival at his majority in 1797. Thomas Bradford retired from the business in 1819, relinquishing its control to his sons, Samuel F. and William, and lived a retired life until his death, May 7, 1838, at the advanced age of ninety-three years; his funeral being held from the house of his son, Thomas, on the north side of Sanson street, west of Seventh. He was interred at North Laurel Hill Cemetery. He married, November 23, 1768, at Christ Church, Mary, daughter of Samuel Fisher, of Philadelphia, by his wife, Elizabeth (born 1723, died 1801), daughter of Joseph Coleman (son of Henry Coleman, of Coleman street, London), by his wife, Mary Pidgeon; granddaughter of Samuel Fisher, of Philadelphia, by his wife, Sarah, daughter of Bernard Lane, of Burlington, New Jersey, by his wife, ——— Cougill, who came to Pennsylvania in 1682, with her widowed mother, Ellen Cougill, bringing a certificate from Settle Monthly Meeting. Samuel Fisher, last mentioned, was a son of William and Mary Fisher, of Ross, Hertfordshire, England. Mary (Fisher) Bradford died November 18, 1805, at the age of fifty-five years.

SAMUEL FISHER BRADFORD, eldest son of Lieutenant-Colonel Thomas Bradford, by his wife, Mary Fisher, born in Philadelphia, in 1776, became associated with his father's printing establishment at an early age, and became a full partner with his father in 1797, and assuming entire control thereof in 1819, kept it up to the high standard of excellence that had characterized it during the administration of his father and grandfather. He took a lively interest in the institutions of his native city and filled a number of positions of trust and honor. He was during nearly his whole life prominent in the order of Free and Accepted Masons, and was Worshipful Grand Master of that order in Pennsylvania, in 1814. He was also a member of the Friendly Society of Sons of St. Patrick and the Hibernian Society. He and his family were members of Christ Church, where all of his children were baptized.

In addition to carrying on the publishing and bookselling business, at Third street, below Market, he also had a branch establishment in New York, and continued to successfully conduct his large and successful business until his death, April 3, 1837. On his accession to a share in the management of the business, July 2, 1798, he changed the name of the newspaper, established by his grandfather in 1748, to The True American. Soon afterwards he sold an interest in the business to his father-in-law, John Inskeep, for the use of John Inskeep, Jr., who was associated with the business until 1816. Their bookselling and publishing establishment was located on Third street, below Market, from which they issued, from time to time, more or less important publications, in addition to the weekly newspaper.

Samuel Fisher Bradford married, 1797, Abigail, daughter of John Inskeep, an officer of the Revolutionary Army and twice Mayor of Philadelphia, by his wife, Sarah Hulings (Hewlings).

John Inskeep was descended from an ancient family of Staffordshire, England, from whence his grandfather, John Inskeep, emigrated in 1698, with his wife, Mary, his sister, Ann, and children, John, James, Joseph and Mary, and settled in Gloucester county, New Jersey, near the village of Marlton. He was a man of means and education, and in 1713 was commissioned a Justice of the Peace, and in 1724 a Justice of the Courts of Gloucester County, holding the latter position until his death, in 1729.

Abraham Inskeep, youngest son of John and Mary, of Waterford township, Gloucester county, New Jersey, was born there, soon after the arrival of his parents in New Jersey. He inherited the homestead at Marlton on the death of his elder brother, Joseph, and continued to reside there until his death in 1780, carrying on the business of a blacksmith and wheelwright, accumulating a fair estate for that time, the inventory of his estate, at his death, amounted to about the sum of £16,000, New Jersey currency. He married, December 10, 1740, Sarah Ward, of Gloucester county, and had several children, among them John Inskeep, first above mentioned. The family belonged to the established Church of England and took an active part in the establishment of Protestant Episcopal churches in Gloucester county, and elsewhere, some of the family settling in Burlington and others in Salem county.

John Inskeep, son of Abraham and Sarah (Ward) Inskeep, was born at Marlton, January 29, 1757, on the original homestead taken up by his grandfather in 1708. He was probably educated at a school conducted at Marlton, at that period, by John Campbell, at least receiving a fair education for that time, as evidenced by his after life. His brother, Abraham, was later a Judge of the Courts of Gloucester county, and a sister, Priscilla, married Benjamin Pine, in 1773.

John Inskeep was an ardent patriot from the inception of the Revolutionary struggle; at the age of nineteen years, he was commissioned Lieutenant in the Second Battalion of Gloucester County Militia, under Captain Joseph Matlack; the battalion being organized by authority of an Act of Provincial Congress, in the summer of 1776, for the protection of Burlington and Gloucester counties, his military service therewith, covering a period of five months and twelve days, was necessarily local. He enlisted (second), in December, 1776, as a private in the command of Colonel Benjamin Randolph, and served with it for two months; his executive and business ability, however, called him to a position where these qualities were essential to the success of the patriot cause and he was made Commissary and Quartermaster of Colonel Hilman's regiment, with the rank of Captain, serving several terms of service in 1777-78-79; his final enlistment and commission as Commissary dating in January, 1780. He took part in the battle of Princeton and other engagements in his native state. He married, during his service at Gloucester, Sarah Hulings, and at the close of the war removed to Philadelphia and engaged for a time in the mercantile business. In 1785 he was proprietor of the George Tavern, at the southwest corner of Second and Mulberry (Arch) streets, the starting point of the New York stage, which was announced to "set off precisely at half-past 8 o'clock in the morning, and on Saturdays at 6 o'clock, and arrives at New York the succeeding day by 1 o'clock," such were the magnificent travelling accommodations between the two cities in the days succeeding the Revolution. In 1794 John Inskeep became a glassware and china merchant, at No. 31 South Second street and continued to carry on that business there until about 1805.

In 1799 John Inskeep was elected one of the Board of Alderman of the city of Philadelphia, and as such became a member of the Mayor's Court, under the constitution of 1789, abolished by Act of Assembly in 1838. On October 21, 1800, he was elected, by the City Council, Mayor of the city, Robert Wharton, who had been reelected to that office, declining to accept. He came to the chief magistracy of the city at a time when Philadelphia was making great strides in progress and improvements; almost his first official act was the laying of the foundation stone of the first permanent bridge over the Schuylkill, at Market street, October 23, 1800; in January, 1801, was organized the Chamber of Commerce, of which the Mayor was a member, its earlier meetings being held at the old George Tavern. During his term of office he was elected one of the trustees of the "Mutual Assurance Company for Insurance of Houses from Loss by Fire," and thus early became interested actively in a business that later engrossed the greater part of his time. His term of office, as Mayor, expired October 20, 1801, and he returned to the active management of his business, glassware and china. In 1802 he was elected a director of the Insurance Company of North America, of which company he became president on the death of Charles Pettit in 1806, and from his retirement from his second term in the office of Mayor, in October, 1806, devoted almost his entire time to the insurance business; his conduct of the affairs of the company being so efficient and successful that at a meeting of the Board of Directors, in July of 1824, a set of resolutions was adopted, commending his zeal and worth in their cause, and he was presented with a silver tea set, and in 1831, when failing health compelled him to relinquish his activity in behalf of the company, they voted him an annuity, which was regularly paid him until his death, December 18, 1834.

John Inskeep was again elected Mayor, October 15, 1805, and his second term expired October 21, 1806. His will dated December 16, 1833, bequeathed the income of his estate to his wife, Sarah, for life, then to be divided equally among his surviving children, Abraham H., Abigail Bradford, Eliza Brooks and Ann Inskeep. He was buried at Christ Churchyard, from the residence of his son-in-law, Samuel Brooks.

John and Sarah (Hewlings) Inskeep had issue:

Abraham Hewlings Inskeep;

Abigail Inskeep, m. Samuel Fisher Bradford, as before stated;

He received a liberal classical education, entered the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, and received his degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1822. Almost immediately on his graduation, he made two trips to China, as Surgeon, on a vessel plying between Philadelphia and the Asiatic ports, and on his second voyage remained in Canton, having been chosen by the American residents there as their resident physician; all foreign residents, whether permanent or transient, being entitled to his services without additional compensation. He labored assiduously in the practice of his chosen profession and acquired considerable prominence as a skillful physician and surgeon. During his residence in Macoa, a hospital was instituted and he took charge of the medical and surgical departments thereof. In 1835 he returned to Philadelphia and practiced his profession until 1850, when he removed to West Chester, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he resided until about the time of his decease. Of him it has been said, "his agreeable manners, kindness and benevolence, his consistent and exemplary deportment, all endeared him to the community in which he spent the later years of his life."

Dr. Bradford died at St. Augustine, Florida, whither he had gone with a member of the family whose state of health required a change of climate, April 19, 1859, in the fifty-seventh year of his age.

Dr. James H. Bradford married, June 19, 1838, Mary Hewson, daughter of David Caldwell, for many years Clerk of the United States District Court, at Philadelphia, by his wife, Elizabeth Hewson. Mrs. Bradford was born in Philadelphia, October 1, 1811; died November 25, 1895. Her paternal ancestor was of Scotch-Irish descent, and had been prominent in the affairs of Pennsylvania for several generations. Her grandfather, Samuel Caldwell, was a member of the First City Troop of Philadelphia Cavalry, organized in 1774, and participated with it, under its gallant commander, Captain Samuel Morris, in the Jersey campaign of 1776-77, for which it received the public thanks and commendation of General Washington; he was later a paymaster of the Continental Army. Her maternal grandfather was William Hewson, F. R. S., an English surgeon, anatomist and physiologist, one of the most distinguished medical men of his time. He was associated with John and William Hunter.

Soon after his graduation he was appointed Resident Physician of the Pennsylvania Hospital, Philadelphia, and filled that position until October, 1876. He has since filled a number of important medical positions in his native city, among them, serving for three years as District Physician of the Philadelphia Dispensary; Physician to the Department of Diseases of Women, at Howard Hospital; Physician of the Gynecological Out-Patient Department of the Pennsylvania Hospital, and of the Dispensary Staff, Children's Hospital, of Philadelphia. He is a Fellow of the College of Physicians of Philadelphia; late member of Obstetrical Society of Philadelphia; of Philadelphia County Medical Society; Medical Society of State of Pennsylvania, and American Medical Association.

Dr. Bradford is also a member of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, Genealogical Society of Pennsylvania, Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia, and the Pennsylvania Society, Sons of the Revolution; Registrar Society of Colonial Wars; late surgeon of Third Regiment, National Guard Pennsylvania; citizen state in Schuylkill, 1888 to 1902, elected honorary member, 1902.

He married, September 30, 1885, Katharine A., daughter of J. Willis Nevins, of Philadelphia, by his wife, Adeline Tichenor.

WYNNE FAMILY.

DR. THOMAS WYNNE, one of the first English physicians in Pennsylvania, and Speaker of the first two Assemblies of the province, under William Penn, 1682-83, was born in the parish of Yskeiviog, near Caerways, Flintshire, Wales, 1627, and came of a distinguished ancestry. As recently traced from authentic records, his lineage is as follows: His earliest ancestor of whom we have any authentic record was, EDNOWAIN BENDEW, Lord of Tegaingl, a district in Flintshire, North Wales, 1079, and Chief of Fifteenth Noble Tribe of North Wales. He lived at Lleys-y-coed, parish of Bodfari, a short distance from the plantation on which Dr. Thomas Wynne was born; owning the parishes of Bodfari, Yskeiviog and Caerways, the lands whereof he and his descendants held per baroniam, but which were later divided amongst the different heirs, so that at the beginning of the seventeenth century, nearly all the landholders in that vicinage were descendants of Ednowain Bendew.

MADOG ap Ednowain Bendew, of the parish of Bodfari, and Lord of Tegaingl, married Arddun, or Arddyn, daughter of Bradwen, and sister of Ednowain ap Bradwen, of Merionethshire, the latter living in 1194. This Ednowain ap Bradwen was called Lord of Merionethshire, but was probably only a tenant, exercising functions and authority of a Lord. He and his issue possessed all of Talybont, save Nanney and Prince's Demesnes, and the most part of Estimainer, living in the time of Gruffydd ap Cynan. Remains of his house, "Llys Bradwyn," are yet to be seen in the township of Cregenau, in the hundred of Talynont, Iscregenau. William Llayn, a bard of the days of Edward I., gives the Bradwyn pedigree as follows: "Bradwen ap Mael, ap Bleddn, ap Morudd ap Cynddelwn ap Cyfnerth ap Cadifor ap Run ap Mergynawc ap Cynfawo ap Hefau ap Cadifor ap Mael-daf hynaf ap Unwch Unarchen ap Ysbwys ap Ysbwch, which Ysbwys and Ysbwch, father and son, came into this Island out of Spain, with Aurelius Ambrosius, and Uther, A. D. 466, and first inhabited Moelysbidion Viyo, the Stangers' Mount, and when Aurelius had recovered his crown from Vortigern the Usurper, he rewarded these men, being his retinue, with the whole of Talybont and part of Estimainer, in Merionethshire, where their posterity flourish to this day." Madog, Lord of Tegaingl, by his wife, Arddyn, daughter of this ancient house of Bradwen, had issue; among others, IORWERTH ap Madog, of Bodfari and Yskeiviog, in the Lordship of Tegaingl, who married Arddyn, daughter of Llewellyn ap Owain ap Edwin. Owain obtained the unenviable title of "Vradwr" (traitor), having joined Hugh, Earl of Chester, against his son-in-law, Gruffydd ap Cynan, the last called King of Wales. Edwon, of Tegaingl, founder of one of the Noble Tribes of North Wales, was slain in 1075, and buried at Northrop, Flintshire. Iorwerth ap Madog was succeeded by his son, RIRID ap Iorwerth, of Bodfari and Yskeiviog, who married Tibot, daughter of Robert de Pulford, of the family of Pulford, which was seated several generations at Pulford, Cheshire, England. Robert de Pulford was enfeoffed in the Castle and demesne of Pulford by Ralph, son of Simon de Ormsby, or de Pulford, 1240; his daughter, Tibot, and her husband, Ririd, of Bodfari, are supposed to have been married in that year. They had issue:

IORWERTH ap Ririd, of Bodfari and Yskeiviog, who died prior to 1339. He married Nest, daughter of and heiress of Iorwerth ap Grono ap Einion ap Seissylit. Her grandfather Grono married Middyfis, daughter of Owain Cyfeilioc, Lord of Powys. Iorwerth and Nest had issue:

ROTPERT ap Iorwerth, of Bodfari and Yskeiviog, who married Adles, daughter of Ithel Tychan, of Mostyn, who died in 1300, son of Ithel Lloyd ap Ithel Gam ap Meredith ap Uchtred ap Edwin, of Tegaingl. The mother of Adles was Adles, sole heiress of Richard ap Cadwalader, Lord of Ceredygon, who died 1172. Rotpert ap Iorwerth was living in 1339, and a brother, Gwynn, was living in 1315. Rotpert and Adles had issue:

Ithel Vychan, Archdeacon of Tegaingl; living 1393;
 CYNRIC, of whom presently;
 Llewellyn ap Robert.

CYNRIC ap Rotpert, of Bodfari and Yskeiviog, held land in both of these parishes, and was at least twice married. His first wife was Angharad, daughter of Madoc Lloyd, of Byrne-cunalt, son of Iorwerth Voel, and descended from Tudor Trevor. His second wife was Angharad, daughter of Gruffyd Vychan, by whom he had a daughter, Gwerfl, who married (first) Thomas ap Madoc, of Eynton, (second) Iorwerth ap Simon. Cynric, after his marriage, went to live at Caerways. By his first wife, a descendant of Prince Dafydd, so cruelly murdered by the English, he had issue:

ITHEL VYCHAN, of whom presently;
 David, m. Nest, dau. of Meucic, Lord of Nannau; Rhys.

ITHEL VYCHAN, of Holy, Denbighshire and Northrop, in right of his wife, a daughter and heiress of Robin, a brother of Robert, ancestor of Gwyder family, and descendant of Owen Gwynedd, Prince of North Wales; also succeeded to the estates of his father in Bodfari and Yskeiviog, Flintshire, but after his marriage lived on his wife's estate at Holt, Denbighshire. His grandson, Richard, was living there in 1488, and his son, William, succeeded his uncle, John, at Chilton, in Shropshire, an estate granted to the family by Henry VII., for services at Bosworth Field, together with a new coat-of-arms of the tincture borne by Henry himself in that battle, viz.: Argent and vert. Robert Gwydr was living in 1304-9, of Henry IV. In his "History of the Gwyder Family," Sir John Wynne says, "John Tudor, one of the Welsh Heralds, sayeth that there was a third brother Robin, whose daughter and heiress Ithel Vaughan married, and therefore those descended from him doe quarter Owen Gwynedd's Egllets." John Tudor died in 1602, and was a very noted and skillful herald. Ithel Vychan, had issue:

CYNRIC, of whom presently;
 David.

CYNRIC ap Ithel Vychan, of Bodfari and Yskeiviog, living after 1420, married

Tanglwystl, daughter and heiress of Gruffydd Lloyd ap Meredith ap Gruffydd, and had issue:

Gohn ap Cynric;
Rhys ap Cynric;
HARRI, of whom presently.

HARRI ap Cynric, born about 1485, was of considerable standing in his county. Bronvedog, in Yskeiviog, the birthplace and home of Dr. Thomas Wynne, was part of his possessions. He married Alice, daughter of Simon Thelwal, Esq., of Plas-y-Ward, by his wife, Janet, daughter of Edward Langford, Esq., of Ruthin, county Denbigh. Simon Thelwal was a son of David Thelwal, of Plas-y-Ward, by his wife, Tabitha, daughter of Jenkin de Weild.

The Langford family was of Aglinton and Ruthin, Denbighshire. John Langford was constable of the Castle of Ruthin and Steward of Dyffryn Clivd, his son, Richard, was likewise Constable of the Castle, and died July 12, 1466. He was succeeded by his son, Edward, who died 16 of Henry VII., had by his wife, Eleanor, daughter of John Dutton, of Dutton, Janet, who married Simon Thelwal. Harri ap Cynric and Alice Thelwal had issue:

JOHN WYNNE ap (Harri) Harry, of whom presently;
Thomas ap Harry, of Yskeiviog, who had a son, Thomas Wynne, bap. in 1581.

JOHN WYNNE ap Harry, born at Yskeiviog, died there probably prior to 1572, certainly prior to 1582. He married Katharine, daughter and heiress of Ithel ap Jenkin ap David ap Howell, and had issue:

John Wynne, called John ap John, Vicar of Cærways; Ellis Wynne;
Griffith Wynne;
Howell ap John Wynne;
Ithel ap John Wynne;
REES ap John Wynne, of whom presently;
Margaret Wynne, m. Thomas Ellis;
Alice Wynne, m. John Benet;
Tabitha Wynne, m. Ievan ap Richard;
Gwen Wynne, m. Howel ap David;
Jane Wynne, m. Robert ap Griffith Lloyd;
Elizabeth, d. unm.;
Gwensi Wynne, d. unm.

REES ap John Wynne, born at Yskeiviog, circa 1538, was assessed as a freeholder there, 1592. His wife's name has not been ascertained. He had issue:

JOHN ap Rees ap John Wynne, of whom presently;
Edward, bap. July 2, 1572;
Harry, bap. March 6, 1574;
Catharine, bap. March 1, 1577;
Janet, bap. Nov. 2, 1579;
Jane, bap. June 10, 1581;
Hugh, bap. Feb. 19, 1583.

JOHN ap Rees Wynne, born circa 1570, married, at Bodfari Church, October 29, 1588, Grace Morgan. He was a wealthy and influential man and took a prominent part in the affairs of the country. The date of his death is unknown, but it was prior to 1640. He and Grace had issue:

THOMAS, bap. Dec. 20, 1589; of whom presently;

Mary, bap. March 10, 1590;

Jane, bap. June 9, 1595.

THOMAS ap John Wynne, born in Yskeiviog parish, 1589, and baptized at parish church there, December 20, of that year, lived on the estate of Brovedog, part of the ancestral estate in that parish, and died there during the years 1638-39. During the years just preceding the civil wars he suffered severely from the heavy taxes and fines then imposed. The name of his wife is unknown. He had issue:

Harry, bap. Nov. 6, 1619;

Edward, bap. April 9, 1622;

John Wynne, bap. April 13, 1625; removed to Pa. with younger brother, Dr. Thomas Wynne, 1682, and for some years practiced law in Sussex co., on the Delaware, now State of Delaware;

DR. THOMAS WYNNE, bap. July 20, 1627; of whom presently;

Peter Wynne, bap. Jan. 30, 1630.

DR. THOMAS WYNNE lost his father at the age of eleven years, and the estate was greatly impoverished by the ruinous taxes imposed just preceding the civil war in England. He says of himself that as a lad he took the deepest interest in chirurgery, frequently absenting himself from his home to witness and assist at surgical operations, much to the annoyance and anxiety of his parents. Seeking such employment as his limited education fitted him to follow, he took every opportunity to perfect himself in a knowledge of chirurgery. He finally became acquainted with a friend, whose name was Richard Moore, of Salop, a chirurgeon, who, recognizing his aptitude for medical science, gave him considerable assistance and procured him attendance at dissections in Salop, "the anatomists being men of well-known worth in that practice, whose names are Dr. Neddham and Dr. Hollins, who were of deserved repute in their professions and I being then Expert in Drills and Handy in Knife & Lancet & other instruments, for that purpose, I sett at making a Skelleton of a man's Bones, which I only with the assistance of Richard Moore, performed to their content, at which time they thought me fit to be Licensed to the Practice of Chyrurgery, and this is neare 20 yeares agoe (1679), and soon after being taken prisoner to Denbigh, where I remained a prisoner near six yeares, for ye Testomony of Jesus, I then betook myself wholly to the practice of Chyrurgery."

Dr. Wynne had from his early youth taken great interest in the Society of Friends, of which he was an early member, and later an able minister. In 1677 he wrote a pamphlet on "The antiquity of the Quakers, Proved out of the Scriptures of Truth. Published in Love, to The Papists, Protestants, Presbyterians, Independents and Anabaptists. With a Salutation of Pure Love to all the Tender-hearted Welshmen. But more especially to Flintshire, Denbighshire, Caernarvonshire and Anglesea. By their Countryman and Friend, Thomas Wynne." This pamphlet was printed in 1677; in its frontispiece is a curious faintly etched portrait of Thomas Wynne, representing him as being tempted by the Devil. In 1679 he published another pamphlet entitled, "An Anti-Christian Conspiracy Detected and Satan's Champion Defeated. Also a Vindication of my book "The Antiquity of the Quakers" from the Base Insinuations, False Doctrines and False Charge therein Contained Against Me, My Books, and against God's People Called Quakers, in General. By me, Thomas Wynne."

Dr. Thomas Wynne and John ap John, for themselves as well as for others, as Trustees, purchased one thousand acres of land to be laid out in the Welsh Tract, in Pennsylvania. With his wife and family he left England in the "Welcome," with William Penn, in 6mo., 1682, and in due time landed in Pennsylvania. Dr. Wynne was especially urged by Penn to accompany him to his new colony, that he might have the use of his eminent professional skill for his colonists, as well as for his well-known ability and influence among his country men, whose coöperation in the formation of his government was especially essential. The preliminary Assembly held at Chester was presided over by Nicholas Moore and Thomas Holme, William Clark and Edward Southbrin were appointed a committee to desire the Governor to transmit his constitution and instructions to the Assembly to be held at Philadelphia. When the Assembly convened at Philadelphia after Penn's arrival, Dr. Thomas Wynne was selected first Speaker, presided during the sessions of 1682 and 1683, and was again a member in 1687-88.

Dr. Wynne located in Philadelphia, his house on Front street, west side, above Chestnut, being one of the first brick houses built in the city. Chestnut street was originally named Wynne street, in his honor. He had practiced his profession in London for some time prior to his coming to Pennsylvania, and had the reputation of being a physician of eminent skill, and, says Proud, was "a person of note and character." He continued to reside in Philadelphia until 1684; on 5mo. 1, 1684, he laid before the Friends' Meeting the prospect of him and his wife making a visit to England, and asked for a certificate. He probably accompanied his friend and patron, William Penn, on his return to England, in the "Endeavor," which sailed from Philadelphia, 6mo. 12, 1684. He remained in Great Britain for some time, and on his return in 1688, settled on his plantation at or near Lewes, in Sussex county, on the Delaware, and represented Sussex in the Assembly for the session of 1688. January 2, 1689, he was commissioned a Justice of Sussex county. He was present at the marriage of Samuel Preston to Rachel Lloyd, at the house of Frances Cornwall, in Sussex county, 5mo. 6, 1688.

The last record of him we have, prior to his death, was on 11mo. 10, 1691, when he, his wife and children attended the Monthly Meeting of Friends at Philadelphia. He was buried, 1mo. 17, 1692. He had evidently again taken up his residence in Philadelphia, as his will names him as "Thomas Wynne, of Philadelphia, Province of Pennsylvania, practitioner in Physick."

This will, proved at Philadelphia, 2mo. 20, 1692, devises his plantation at Lewes to his wife for life, then to his only son, Jonathan, to whom he also devised two hundred acres at Cedar Creek, in Sussex. One-half of his personal estate was devised to his wife, Elizabeth, and the other half to his children in America, viz.: Mary, Rebecca, Sidney, Hannah and Jonathan; giving to his daughter, Tabitha, in England, fifty shillings, as a "mark of Love,"—"She hath already partaken of my fatherly care and tenderness of her." His wife, Elizabeth, was made executor.

Dr. Thomas Wynne married three times; first about 1655-57, Martha, sister of Jonathan Buttall, of Battershea, Sussex, and of the family of Buttalls of Wrexam, who was the mother of his children. Martha died 1670, and Dr. Wynne married (second) Elizabeth Rowden, who died prior to 1676, and he married (third), 5mo. 20, 1676, Elizabeth (Parr), widow of Joshua Maude, of Wakefield, Yorkshire, and daughter of Rev. Thomas Parr, by his wife, a sister of John Bradshaw, President of the Parliament that tried and condemned Charles I., and cousin of the poet Milton, whose mother was also a Bradshaw. At the time of her marriage Elizabeth Maude was living at Rainhill, Lancashire. She had by her marriage, with Joshua Maude, two daughters, Jane and Margery Maude (sometimes spelled Mode), who followed her to America, in the ship "Submission," with Phineas Pemberton, James Harrison, and many others, who became prominent in the affairs of Province of Pennsylvania, sailing from Liverpool, September 5, 1682, and landing at Choptank, Maryland, November 2, 1682, from whence the Pennsylvania immigrants made their way overland to New Castle county. Margery Maude, second daughter of Joshua and Elizabeth, married at Lewes, 1692, Thomas Fisher, of Sussex county, and was mother of Joshua Fisher, who with his sons, became later prominent in affairs of Philadelphia, as narrated in these volumes.

Elizabeth,* the third wife of Dr. Wynne, accompanied him to Pennsylvania, in the "Welcome;" and in his return to England and subsequent settlement at Lewes, Sussex county, and survived him some years.

Issue of Dr. Thomas and Martha (Buttall) Wynne:

Mary Wynne, b. circa 1659; m. in Wales, Dr. Edward Jones, projector of Welsh settlement in Merion and Haverford, and accompanied him to Pa., arriving Aug. 13, 1682, with their two children—Martha and Jonathan;

Rebecca Wynne, b. 1662; m. (first), 3mo., 1685, at Thirdhaven Meeting of Friends, Talbot co., Md., Solomon Thomas (d. s. p.); (second), on 7mo. 23, 1692, at his house in Talbot co., John, son of Walter Dickinson, of Crossia Dore, and uncle of Samuel Dickinson, who later m. Mary, dau. of John Cadwalader, by his wife, Martha, eldest dau. of Dr. Edward and Martha (Wynne) Jones, of Merion;

Hannah Wynne, b. 1664; m. at Merion Meeting, 8mo. 25, 1695, Daniel, son of Samuel and Elizabeth Humphrey;

Sidney Wynne, b. 1666; m., 10mo. 20, 1690, William Chew, son of Samuel Chew, "Chancellor and Secretary of Province of Maryland," by his wife, Anne Ayers, and brother to Benjamin Chew, grandfather of Chief Justice Benjamin Chew, of Phila.;

JONATHAN WYNNE, only son, of whom presently.

JONATHAN WYNNE, born 1669, though he inherited his father's plantations in Sussex county, did not remain there. On October 9, 1701, he made application to Edward Shippen, Griffith Owen and James Logan, Penn's Commissioners of Property, for the grant of four hundred acres of land in the Welsh Tract, alleging that his father's purchase of five thousand acres had never been fully taken up. His petition was granted and an order issued to David Powell to survey for him the four hundred acres which were located at Great Valley, Chester county, two hundred and fifty acres of which Jonathan devised by will to his son, John Wynne, and the remainder to his son, Jonathan.

Jonathan Wynne married, about 1694, Sarah Greaves. They resided, during

*Authorities differ as to whether Elizabeth Wynne accompanied her husband in the "Welcome," or her daughters in the "Submission," the latter theory would seem best founded, as in the "Record of Arrivals in Bucks County," made and kept by Phineas Pemberton, who himself came on the "Submission," enters on the list of arrivals in the "Submission:" "Jane Mode and Margery Mode, daughters of the wife of Thomas Winn, (of Wales): his wife came and arrived at the time aforesaid." This list also gives the name of "Hareclif Hodges, servant to the said Thomas Winn."

the latter part of his life, at Blockley, where he owned a plantation of one hundred acres, laid out (by virtue of his petition above-recited), on October 9, 1701, as by his will, proved in Philadelphia, May 17, 1721, and bearing date January 29, 1721, he devises his home plantation to his eldest son, Thomas, at the death or marriage of his widow, Sarah, whom he makes executrix. His two eldest daughters, Hannah and Mary, are devised a lot on High street, Philadelphia, while his three younger daughters, Sidney, Martha and Elizabeth, are to share in the residue, and are also devised four hundred acres at Great Valley "or in the Great Meadows," with power to sell same at age or marriage.

Issue of Jonathan and Sarah (Greaves) Wynne:

- THOMAS WYNNE, b. Sussex co.; d. in Blockley twp., Philadelphia co., Dec., 1757; m. Mary Warner; of whom presently;
 Mary Wynne, m. Noah Abraham, of Nant Meal; had issue;
 Jonathan Wynne, Jr., m. Anna, dau. of Isaac and Anne (Craven) Warner, of Blockley, granddaughter of William and Ann (Dide) Warner, first settlers of Blockley, and sister to Mary Warner, who m. his elder brother, Thomas;
 Sidney Wynne, m., June 1, 1732, Samuel Greaves, and had issue;
 Martha Wynne, m., Oct. 30, 1741, James, son of Abraham Kite, of Blockley, by his wife, Mary Peters, and grandson of James Kite, by his wife, Mary Warner, dau. of William and Ann (Dide) Warner, of Blockley;
 Elizabeth Wynne, m., Sept. 22, 1737, Ralph Lewis; had issue;
 John Wynne, d. July, 1787; m. Ann Pastorius, b. 1729; d. 1790; and left issue;
 Hannah Wynne, probably d. s. p.

THOMAS WYNNE, eldest son of Jonathan and Sarah (Greaves) Wynne, inherited from his father the one hundred acres of land laid out to Jonathan by virtue of warrant, dated October 19, 1701, lying along the line of Merion township, in Blockley township, Philadelphia county, as well as fifty acres adjoining, lying on the Schuylkill. In a deed, dated May 1, 1754, by which Thomas Wynne and Mary, his wife, conveyed two acres of this tract, lying along the "Conestogoe Road," to Michael Bellinger, it is recited that it is part of the one hundred acres, "whereon said Jonathan Wynne seathed in Blockley." This two-acre tract, upon which was erected a "message tenement and rope-yard," was purchased, 1796, by Thomas Wynne, third, and again became a part of the family estate. In some of the deeds made by his descendants, Thomas Wynne is referred to as a "Joyner." He owned in addition to the Blockley homestead, later known as "wynne stay," a lot on the south side of Market street, between Fourth and Fifth, probably by inheritance from his grandfather, Dr. Thomas Wynne, the family interest in which is finally divested by deed of his grandson, Thomas Wynne, fourth, 1791.

Thomas Wynne died on his plantation in Blockley, leaving will, dated November 23, 1751, and proven December 24, 1757, by which he devised his homestead, "whereon I now live," to his son, Thomas, when he shall arrive at the age of twenty-one years. He also mentions his "cousin James Wynne," and names his wife, Mary, and brother-in-law, Richard George, as executors.

Thomas Wynne, married at Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, October 28, 1722, Mary Warner, born August 22, 1703, daughter of Isaac Warner of Blockley, by his wife, Ann Craven, and granddaughter of William Warner, the pioneer settler of Blockley. She survived him, and married, 1762, James Jones, of Blockley, a widower.

Issue of Thomas and Mary (Warner) Wynne:

Anne Wynne, b. Feb. 2, 1724-5; m., June 27, 1743, Phineas Roberts; left issue;
 Lydia Wynne, b. March 12, 1726-7; m. 1746, Jonathan Edwards;
 Sarah Wynne, b. Feb. 27, 1728-9; mentioned in father's will;
 Thomas Wynne, b. Nov. 13, 1730-1; d. inf.;
 THOMAS WYNNE, b. Jan. 21, 1733-4; d. Sept., 1782; m. 1-27, 1757, Margaret Coulton; of whom presently;
 Jonathan Wynne, probably d. inf.; not mentioned in father's will;
 Isaac Wynne, b. Jan. 22, 1736-7; not mentioned in father's will;
 Hannah Wynne, b. Sept. 2, 1739; not mentioned in father's will;
 Deborah Wynne, b. Dec. 18, 1741; not mentioned in father's will;
 Mary Wynne, b. Sept. 24, 1744; mentioned in father's will; probably the Mary Wynne who m. Samuel Pearson, April 2, 1764.

THOMAS WYNNE, evidently the only surviving son of Thomas and Mary (Warner) Wynne, born in Blockley, January 21, 1733-34, was devised the Blockley plantation by his father's will and resided thereon until his death, 1782. He had, however, conveyed to his son-in-law, John Adams, fifteen acres, on which the latter had erected a snuff factory; the remainder being adjudged by the Orphans' Court to his only son, Thomas, who conveyed twenty-two acres to his sister, Phœbe Adams, in satisfaction of her share of her father's estate.

Thomas Wynne entered the service of his country at the very outbreak of the Revolution, and was commissioned a Lieutenant in the Flying Camp, August 27, 1776. He was taken prisoner at the battle of Fort Washington, November 16, 1776, and was held as a prisoner of war in New York, until exchanged, January 2, 1781. To the hardships endured, during this imprisonment, is probably due his early death, which occurred some eighteen months later.

While he was a prisoner, his Blockley home, "Wynnestay," was attacked by a foraging party of British soldiers, December 11, 1777, but was bravely defended by his wife, assisted by her children and negro servants, until relieved by a detachment of Pennsylvania Militia, from General Potter's command. Thomas Wynne married, January 27, 1757, Margaret Coulton, who survived him and married (second) Samuel Claphamson. Letters of administration were granted on estate of Thomas Wynne, October 5, 1782, to his step-father, James Jones, and Isaac Warner.

Issue of Thomas and Margaret (Coulton) Wynne:

THOMAS WYNNE, b. 1762; d. Oct. 10, 1810; m. Elizabeth Reese; of whom presently. This Thomas also entered the service of his country at the age of 15 years;
 Phœbe Wynne, m., March 9, 1776, John Adams, a snuff manufacturer, to whom her father conveyed land on her marriage; they left issue.

THOMAS WYNNE, only son of Lieutenant Thomas and Margaret (Coulton) Wynne, born at "Wynnestay," Blockley township, Philadelphia county, 1762, was adjudged the homestead by the Orphans' Court, his father having died intestate, and after conveying twenty-two acres to his sister, Phœbe Adams, was seized of one hundred and nineteen acres of the old homestead laid out to his great-grandfather, Jonathan Wynne, in 1701. He also purchased the rope-walk tract on the Lancaster Road, alienated by his grandfather in 1754. He, however, conveyed the whole tract to his step-father, Samuel Claphamson, February 1, 1796, and a portion of it was reconveyed to him, June 15, 1796, the transfer being probably made to eliminate the dower of his mother therein. This Thomas Wynne married Elizabeth Reese, who survived him thirty years, dying November 1, 1840, at the age of seventy-eight years.

Issue of Thomas and Elisabeth (Reese) Wynne:

Margaret Wynne, m. John Dungan, and had issue;

Thomas Wynne, m. Hannah Sharp, to whom letters of administration on his father's estate were granted, March 23, 1811; was also owner of a portion of the Blockley estate in 1821, which he owned until his death, and is now owned and occupied by dau., Sarah S. Wynne;

Phœbe Wynne, b. 1793; d. Jan. 4, 1860; m., Dec. 3, 1818, Owen Jones, b. 1792; d. Jan. 16, 1856; had issue, two sons—Thomas and Evan Jones; two daus.—Harriet and Mary;

Ruth Wynne, m. Leonard Knight;

SAMUEL C. WYNNE, b. 1795; d. Jan. 7, 1856; m. Phœbe Sharp; of whom presently;

Elizabeth Wynne, m. William Rose;

Ann Wynne, m. William Davy;

Susanna Wynne, b. March 28, 1804; d. July 23, 1844; m., May 30, 1822, Jacob Duffield;

Polly Wynne, d. unm., aged 18.

SAMUEL C. WYNNE, second son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Reese) Wynne, of "Wynnestay," Blockley, born 1795, at the old family homestead, granted to his ancestor, Jonathan Wynne, by William Penn, 1701, and a portion of which is still held by the family.

Samuel C. Wynne married, April 8, 1816, Phœbe, born August 31, 1795, daughter of Delaney Sharp, of New Jersey, born February 16, 1769, by his first wife, Sally Gilman, born February 16, 1771, died February 26, 1798, whom he had married, October 13, 1789. He married (second) Lydia Stretch, who survived him and became the third wife of John Hires. Delaney Sharp was an apprentice on board the privateer "Speedwell," when she captured a British prize off the Capes of Delaware, 1780. The log-book of the "Speedwell," noting the capture of this prize, is in the possession of Thomas Wynne, of Philadelphia, a great-grandson of Delaney Sharp. Delaney Sharp also served in Captain Jones' company, First United States Artillery, during War of 1812; was wounded at Sacketts Harbor and died of wounds then received. He left a number of descendants, among whom is Major Moses Veale, of Philadelphia, who is a grandson.

DR. EDWARD JONES, native of Bala, Merionethshire, Wales, was with John ap Thomas, one of the organizers of the company of Welsh families who purchased the Welsh Tract, in Merion and Haverford townships, the purchase, five thousand acres, being made in their names, by deeds from William Penn, dated September 16 and 17, 1681. Dr. Jones was born in Merionethshire, about 1645, and came of an ancient and honorable family. He was educated as a physician and surgeon, and practiced at Bala some years prior to his removal to Pennsylvania to take up the land purchased for himself and his neighbors and relatives, many of whom did not remove to Pennsylvania for ten years or more after their purchase. Dr. Edward Jones married Mary, eldest daughter of Dr. Thomas Wynne, of Bron-Vadog, near Caerways, Flintshire, an account of whom and his distinguished ancestry follows this sketch, and with her and their two eldest children, came to Pennsylvania, arriving August 13, 1682. Some account of the voyage and his first impressions of his adopted home can be gathered from the following abstract of a letter written his relative and partner in the purchase, John ap Thomas, two weeks after his arrival. The quaint and interesting letter with its voluminous address is as follows:

"These for his much esteemed friend, John ap Thomas, of Llaithgrom, near Bala, in Merionethshire, North Wales, to be left with Jo. Boulten att the Boul and Tun, in Humber Street, London, and from thence to William Ske, Butcher, in Oswegtrie, to be sent as directed, via London with speed.

"My endear'd fr'd and brother:—

"My heart dearely salutes thee, in a measure of ye everlasting Truth. This shall let thee know that wee had been aboard eleven weekes before wee made the land (it was not for want of art, but ffor contrairie winds), and one week we were in coming to Upland (ye town is to be builded 15 miles up ye River) and all this time we wanted neither meate, drink, nor water. Butter and cheese eat well upon ye sea. We have oatmeale to spare, but it is well yt wee have it, ffor heare is little or no corne. Let no fr'ds that they are too old or too young, ffor the Lord is sufficient to preserve both. Here is an old Man 90 years of age; he is rather better yn when he sett out; likewise here are young babes doing well considering sea diet. * * * We had much adoe to get a grant, it cost us 4 or 5 days attendance, besides some score of miles we travelled before we brought it to pass. It hath most rare timber; I have not seen ye like in all these parts. The end of each lot will be on a river as large as the Dye at Bala; it is called Sjooll Kill River. * * * We are amongst the English, which sent us both venison and milk, & the Indians brot venison tou door for six pence ye quarter. * * * They plough but bunglingly. They use both hookes and sickles to reap with. * * * I send my deare Love & my wife's unto thyselfe and the rest of my deare friends.

"I remain thy lo'd friend & Bro. whl I am Edd. Jones.

"My wife desires thee to buy her one Iron Kettle: two pairs shoes ffor Martha, and one pair ffor Jonathan. Let them be strong and large. Tis is ye 2d letter, Skool Kill River, ye 26th of ye 6mo. 1682."

As one of the "chief first purchasers" of the five thousand acres, as before recited, Dr. Edward Jones had surveyed, for his own share, three hundred and six and one-quarter acres near the falls of Schuylkill, with the "ende of the lott on the Skool Kill," as stated in his letter to his partner and relative, John ap Thomas. This tract is now part of Philadelphia, north of present Montgomery avenue, and it descended to his son and namesake, Edward Jones, Jr., to whom it would seem another tract was also laid out many years later. Here he builded his home, first, it is said, a cave in the bank, and later a substantial house in which he and his family thereafter lived and exercised a liberal hospitality. As the pioneer of and trustee for the Welsh purchasers, his house was the favorite stopping place of later arrivals, as it was later of prominent Friends, visiting their brethren in the Welsh Tract, on "missions of Truth," where his neighbors and friends gathered to meet and greet them. John ap Thomas, Dr. Jones' co-partner in the purchase, never reached Pennsylvania, dying in Wales when about to embark, his three sons, Thomas, Robert and Cadwalader Jones, taking up the land to which their father was entitled. Dr. Edward Jones also received a "Liberty Lott," in accordance with the terms of the purchase, of six and a quarter acres, but it is not known where it was surveyed to him in the city proper, or that it was ever occupied by his family.

Dr. Jones and his estimable wife, Mary Wynne, earnest and consistent members of the Society of Friends, held membership in Merion Meeting; both lie buried in the burying-ground adjoining the Meeting House. Both lived to a good old age, Mary being first "called beyond," though there seems to be some dispute as to the date of her death; The Friend, in a Memorial of deceased Friends, gives the date of her death as 7mo. 29, 1726, but this is evidently a mistake of a decade, as Dr. Edward, in his will, dated 3mo. 27, 1732, appoints her one of his executors. Dr. Jones died 12mo. (February) 26, 1737-8, aged ninety-two years.

Dr. Edward Jones was prominent in the community, as he was an eminent and skillful physician, but seems to have taken little part in Provincial affairs, though he served one term in the Provincial Assembly in 1710.

Issue of Dr. Edward and Mary (Wynne) Jones:

Martha, b. in Wales, came with her parents to Pa.; m. 1699, John Cadwalader, also of Wales; was mother of Dr. Thomas Cadwalader, of Phila., and grandmother of Gen. John Cadwalader and Col. Lambert Cadwalader, of Revolution;

Mary Stephenson, of the prominent family of that name on Long Island, and (second) a dau. of Col. Mathews, Commandant at Fort Albany; settled finally at Highlands of the Hudson; there d. He enjoyed an extensive practice in N. Y. and vicinity. Had issue by both wives, and his descendants intermarried with the Clintons and other prominent families of N. Y. By the first marriage he had four sons—John, Thomas, Evan and James. His eldest son, Dr. John Jones, b. at Jamaica, L. I., 1729, studied medicine with his cousin, Dr. Thomas Cadwalader, completed his studies in Europe, and on his return settled in N. Y., where he had an extensive practice, being particularly eminent as a surgeon, serving his country in this capacity, both in French and Indian Wars and in Revolution. He was some years Professor of Surgery in N. Y. Medical College. In 1778 he removed to Phila., was appointed Physician of Pa. Hospital, and held that position until his death, June 23, 1791. He attended Dr. Benjamin Franklin in his last illness, and was the family physician of Pres. George Washington, during his residence in Phila.;

John, b. Merion;
Elizabeth, m. Rees Thomas;
Mary.

JONATHAN JONES, eldest son of Dr. Edward and Mary (Wynne) Jones, born at Bala, Merionethshire, Wales, 11mo. (January) 3, 1680-1, was less than two years of age when he accompanied his parents to Pennsylvania. He married, October 4, 1706, Gainor, daughter of Robert and Rebecca Owen, of Merion, and purchasing of his brother-in-law, Owen Owen, the plantation settled by Robert Owen, lived there the remainder of his life. The old plantation, known later as Wynnewood and St. Mary's, remained in the family many generations, some of it being still retained by his descendants. Jonathan Jones died July 30, 1770, and is buried at Merion Meetinghouse, having survived his wife nearly thirty years, and attained the age of nearly ninety years. He and his wife were religious people of estimable character, much beloved by their neighbors and friends in Lower Merion, and esteemed for their many acts of charity and benevolence.

Issue of Jonathan and Gainor (Owen) Jones:

Mary, b. July 14, 1707; m. Benjamin Hayes;

OWEN JONES, second son of Jonathan and Gainor (Owen) Jones, married, May 30, 1740, Susannah, daughter of Hugh Evans, of Lower Merion, by his third wife, Lowry (Jones), widow of Robert Lloyd, and daughter of Rees John William, by his wife, Hannah Price. Hugh Evans was a son of Thomas and Ann Evans, natives of Wales, and of an ancient and honorable family. They came to Pennsylvania and settled in Gwynedd township, Philadelphia, now Montgomery county, in the autumn of 1697. Thomas Evans became the third husband of Hannah, widow of Rees John William, and mother of Lowry, who married second son of Hugh Evans, and became mother of Susannah (Evans) Jones. Hugh Evans was a prominent man in the affairs of Philadelphia county, which he represented in the Provincial Assembly ten years, 1746-1755; he and his wife, Lowry, removed to Philadelphia city some years prior to their decease, and both are buried in the Friends' burying-ground there. Both exceeded the age of ninety years at their death, about 1763.

Owen and Susannah (Evans) Jones, on their marriage, settled on the Lower Merion plantation, where they resided two years, and then removed to Philadelphia, making the old homestead in Lower Merion their summer residence. He died Philadelphia, October 10, 1793, of yellow fever, and she at the Merion homestead, May 4, 1801.

Owen Jones took a very prominent part in Provincial affairs, filling the position of Treasurer of the Province from 1769 to 1776, when he resigned. He was a man of unimpeachable integrity and strong moral courage, never swerving from what he conceived to be his duty, through fear or favor.

Issue of Owen and Susannah (Evans) Jones:

Owen Jones was arrested in 1777, on a writ intended for his father, as one of the "disaffected to the cause of the Colonies," and to save his father, submitted to banishment to Virginia. He was twice married, first to Mary Wharton, second to Hannah Smith; no surviving issue;

POWELL FAMILY.

Of Cambrian families claiming remote origin, none ascend higher and few can show a greater array of distinguished houses, with which they were allied by marriage, than the Powells of Castle Madoc, county Brecon, South Wales.

The present representative of the family in Wales, Hugh Powel Price, of Castle Madoc, in 1875, by license, took the name of Powel. Deriving from Roger Price, of Maes-yr-on, and Penelope, his wife, eldest daughter of Hugh Powell, died 1749, whose grandson, "Hugh Price the younger," became eventual heir. By will of Catherine Powell (daughter and heiress of Charles Powell, of Castle Madoc, died 1796), dated March 28, 1799, Roger Price, husband of her aunt, Penelope, was bequeathed a life interest in the estates of Castle Madoc, with ultimate settlement upon his grandson, called "Hugh the younger" (son of Rev. Hugh Price, M. A.), and "his heirs in tail male severally and successively, and failing to the issue of the daughters of the said Hugh Price severally and successively."

The male line was continued by William Powell, second son of Charles Powell, died 1696, and brother to Hugh, died 1749, who emigrated to Pennsylvania, dying in Philadelphia, 1754.

The progenitor who first emerges from the mists enveloping the earliest period of Britain, to which the title of history can properly be applied, was Gorwst Ledlwn, a British chieftain or regulus in Cumbria, one of the defenders of the Northern Wall. From Merchion Gul, one of his sons, descended in the second generation Llyward Hên, a commanding figure, not only as chieftain in the wars with the Saxons, but as a poet and historian of the conflicts with those remorseless invaders, during the period of a long life. He was also the paternal ancestor of Rhodri Mawr, who became King of all Wales, 843. From Llyr Merini, another son, who in the chronicles is mentioned as Regulus of Claudii Castrum, now Gloucester, and in the poems of the period as "Llyr mighty in arms;" married to Gwin, daughter of Brychan Brecheiniog, Regulus of Garth Madrin, from him called Brecheiniawg or Brecknock, living 430-490, the Powells of Castle Madoc lineally descend. Brychan was son of Marchell, daughter of Tewdwr, Regulus of Garth Madrin, 365, whose husband was Amwlech, son of Cormac Mac Bruc, King of Leinster, son of Bruc Mac Cairbre, son of Cairbre Liffechair, Monarch of Ireland, slain near Tara, 284, buried at Brugh na Boinne. Of the sons of Llyr Merini, Llenawg was father of Gwallawg, Pendragon of the Britons in the north; and Caradawg, surnamed Vreich Vras, or the "strong arm," commemorated by Anewiwn as the "battle knight of Britain," was Regulus of Carawg in Cumbria, Brecknock and Fferrawg, in Wales, and slain in the great battle of Catraeth, Lothian, 586. Cawrdaf, son of Caradawg, identified with the same locality, later in life took the cowl and became numbered among the British Saints, churches being dedicated to him in Gallt and in Arvon. Caw, his successor, called "Caw Prydain," in the chronicles, was Regulus in Strathgryf, now Renfrewshire, but of him and the succeeding reguli, by name Gloyw, Hoyw, Cynfard and Cyndeg, no details have been vouchsafed to our time. Teithwalch, son of Cyndeg, as Regulus in Brecknock and Fferrawg, defeated Aethelbald, Earl of Mercia, at Carus, near Crickhowel, in Brecknockshire, 728; his immediate successors, Tegyd and Taugwydd, measured their strength with Earl Offa, the latter being severely worsted at Sutton Walls, in Fferrawg, now Herefordshire. Anharawd, son of Taugwydd, about 846 repulsed an invasion of Brecknock by Ithel, Regulus of Gwent. Gwendydd, his successor, 901-911, was father of Hwgan, called "Lord of West Wales," by the "Anglo-Saxon Chronicle," defeated by Aethelflaeda, "Lady of the Mercians," at Brecananmere, June 19, 916, and slain by her the following year at Derby, where he had sought refuge with the Danes. Dryffyn, his son, was spoiled of Fferrawg by Aethelstan Gloddrydd, and rendered tributary to Edgar, King of England, 972; by Chrusley, his wife, daughter of Idwal, King of North Wales, slain by Sweyn in Anglesea, 997, the two lines derived from Gorwst Ledlwn were united.

MAEUARD, son of Dryffyn, married Elinor, heiress of Einion, son of Selyff, Lord of Cautreff Selyff, whose grandfather granted the vielle of Llanfihangel-tref-Cerrian to the sea of Llaudaff, circa, 900.

In the person of Bleddyn, their son, the British dominion over Brecknock came to an end, through the prowess of the Normans under Bernard de Newmarch, who defeated and slew Bleddyn at Caerbannan, now the "Gaer," near Brecon, 1091. Bleddyn married Oten, daughter of Tewdwr, slain in a civil broil at Llangwn in Caerdiganshire, 1043, and sister of Rhys ap Tewdwr, King of South Wales, also slain at Caerbannan with two of his sons.

GURGAN, eldest son of Bleddyn, was granted, by the Conqueror, the manors of Aberllyfni, Blaenllyfni and part of Llanfihangel-tally-llyn. By marriage with Gwenllian, daughter of Sir Philip Gwys, knight, and eventual heiress of Wyston in Pembrokeshire, the line of the eldest son of this union, Walter, under the name of Wogan, became identified with that lordship, one of whom, John de Wogan, was Justiciar of Ireland, 23 Ed. I.

TRAHAREN, second son of Gurgan, succeeded to the estates in Brecknock and married Syon, daughter of Bleddri ap Cadifor, Lord of Kilsant and Manergam, appointed by Henry I., castellan of Abercaewg, 1116, and a witness to Berkerolle's grant of Basseleg to Glastonbury Abbey, 1146; they had, among other children, a daughter, Elliyw (or Elen), first wife to Rhys Gryg or Rhys the lame, Lord of Dynefor and Llandoverly, died 1233, son of Rhys ap Gryffydd, Lord of South Wales, died 1196, and a son, Howel, called "Hoeli ap Traeri," in the charter of Reginald de Breos to Brecon Priory (1212-21), to which he appeared as witness; married Gwenllian, daughter and heiress of Gryffydd ap Ifor, Lord of Lenghenydd (did homage to Henry II. at Gloucester, 1175; living 1210), by Elinor, daughter of Rhys ap Gryffydd, Lord of South Wales, died 1196, and was by her father of a daughter, Gwenllian, married to Gryffydd, son to Ednyfed Vychan, Baron of Brinfenigle, Chief Justice of North Wales, died 1241, and a son Rhys, Lord of Aberllyfni, living temporarily Henry III. (1216-72), married Katherin, daughter of Gryffydd, of Gower (ap Cadifor ap Gurgan ap Bleddyn, slain 1091), by Catharine, daughter of Sir Ellidyr Ddu, Knight of the Sepulchre, living in 1188.

HOWEL, third son of Rhys, living in Glamorgan, was father of Rhys ap Howel, granted manor of Talgarth 2 Ed. II.; Justiciar of South Wales, 3 Ed. II., in rebellion against his sovereign, attainted and mainly instrumental in the capture of Edward II., 1326. Inq. p. m. 1 Ed. III.

EINIION, eldest son of Rhys, of Aberllyfni, from the circumstance of his having served in the wars of Henry III. and Edward I., called "Sais," or Englishman, held lands in North Wales, as appears by the record of Caernarvon (a survey made in the reign of Edward I., though bearing evidences of having been written several reigns later), and in Shropshire previous to May 9, 1284, at which date he was in arms against the English King, a patent being then issued to Philip de Say, for lands forfeited by "Einion Sais * * * and other Welshmen and rebels and adherents of Llewellyn, late Prince of Wales, our enemy and which were our escheats through their forfeitures." A castle erected by him in the parish of Llanspithyd, county Brecon, and called "Castel Einion Sais," was in ruin in 1698, and noted by Hugh Thomas, the Herald Pursuivant, as being within a field called the "Castle Field," situated on the fall of a brook into the Wsk, near Bettess Chapel. Einion Sais married (first) Joan, daughter and coheirress of Howel ap Meredydd, Lord of Avan and Miskyn, county Glamorgan, summoned with other Welsh lords, January 6, 1245, by Henry III. to answer for breach of the King's peace; by Ann, daughter of Gwilym ap Llewellyn Hagar (the Stern), Lord of Senghenydd. Howel was son of Meredydd, Lord of Avan and Miskyn, by Joan, daughter of Sir Gilbert Turberville, knight of Coyty Castle; son of Caradoc, Lord of Avan and Miskyn, died 1131, by Gwladys, daughter of Gryffydd ap Rhys, Prince of South Wales, died 1137; son of Iestyn ap Gurgan, Lord of Glamorgan, conquered by Robert Fitzhamon 1089.

HOWEL ap Einion Sais, received pardon with Gilbert de Bohun and others for trespass and outlawry upon the lands of Roger de Mortimer, January 28, 1299; mentioned as father of Howel Vaughan in Pot. Pat. 20 Ed. II., m. 7. By Llelles, his wife, daughter and heiress of Cadwaladyr, Lord of Park in Monmouthshire (ap Gryffydd ap Gronw ap Seyssyllt, Lord of Upper Gwent, did homage to Henry III., at Gloucester, 1175, murdered by William De Breos, at Abergavenny Castle, 1176), he had among other issue,

HOWEL VYCHAN, of the "younger" Captain of retainers to Humphrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford, and Constable of England, 1292; as Sheriff of Abergavenny commissioned to raise troops for the suppression of the revolt in favor of Isabella and the Earl of March, 1326, receives pardon as an adherent of Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, 1327; receives general pardon for departing the realm in company with Sir Rees ap Griffith, Knight, and for adhering to the Scots, 1328. In Foedera, vol. ii. pt. ii. 997, he is mentioned as "Howel ap Howel, Chivaler," concerning the extension of a proclamation as to the raising of an array in South Wales; February 12, Edward III., 1338, he and others are commanded by the King to muster and bring to Ipswich the men furnished by the Lords (Marchers) of South Wales; granted lands, tenements and appurtenances in Penkelly, Llanvils Manor and Llandevailog, by Earl Humphrey, from lands forfeited by John de Mortimer, July 22, 1357. By Alice, his wife, daughter of Llewellyn ap Howel Hen ("the aged"), Lord of Cwmmwd Selyff ap Traharen ap Madowg ap Cyfoethog ap Maenarch, Regulus of Brecknock, he was father of David ap Howel, Sheriff of Brecknock, 47 Ed. III, and LLEWELLYN ap Howel, Chief Sergeant in Brecknock on the death of Humphrey de Bohun, 1372-3, Armiger to Henry, Duke of Lancaster, afterwards Henry IV., King of England; commissioned, June 14, 1412, under private seal at Westminster, to treat with Owen Glendower for the ransom of his son, David Gam.

Llewellyn died after 1412, ætat upwards of ninety years. It is evident by the King's commission that he was in years, as in addition to the Steward of Brecknock, Sir John Tiptoft, Knight, and the Receiver of the lordship, William Boteler, they together with others, "with the consent of the said Llewellyn," and "others which he may designate," are empowered to make the terms of David's release, even to the capture and release of Owen's partisans. Llewellyn was buried in Aber Honddu Collegiate Chapel, Brecon; his memorial slab still exists, bearing the inscription: "Hic jacet Llewelinus ap Howel, cujus animæ ppicietur Deus." Matilda, wife of Llewellyn ap Howel, daughter and heiress of Ievan, Lord of Eloet, county Caermarthen, by Gwladys, daughter of David ap Meuric, of Radyr, county Glamorgan; son of Rhys ap Ifor, Lord of Eloet, ap Gryffydd ap Rhys Gryg, Lord of Dynefor and Llandovery, died 1233, buried in St. David's Cathedral, by Joan, second wife, daughter of Richard de Clare, fourth Earl of Hertford, died 1218, one of the barons to force Magna Charta from King John, descended from Leofric, Earl of Mercia, died 1057, and Godiva, his wife, sister of Thorold de Bakenhalles, Sheriff of Lincolnshire. Matilda was buried in Aber Honddu Collegiate Chapel; her memorial slab still exists, though much worn and mutilated. Llewellyn and Matilda had among other issue, DAFYD, surnamed Gam, the inveterate foe of Owen Glendower. Granted lands in Dynas, county Caermarthen, having previously received an annuity of forty marks per annum (3 Henry IV.); held the manors of Peytins and Newton, county Brecon; Esquire to Henry IV. and Henry V.; slain at Agincourt, October 25, 1415; father of Gwladys, buried in Abergavenny Church, 1454, married (first) Sir Roger Vaughan, Knight of Tretower, slain at Agincourt, 1415; (second) Sir William ap Thomas, Knight of Raglan, county Monmouth, and by him, who died 1446, mother of William Herbut, first Earl of Pembroke, slain at Banbury, 1469. And HOWEL ap Llewellyn, or Howel Vaughan, of Castle Einion Sais, Bailiff of Radnor, mentioned in a letter preserved in the British Museum, and catalogued Cott. Cleop. F. iii. folio 122 b, from Sir Edmund Mortimer, dated at Mellenyth, December, 13, 1402, requesting his support in his alliance with Owen Glendower as against Henry IV. Married daughter (N. N.) of David ap Ievan Lloyd, of Cardiganshire (Harl. MS. 2239), son of Sir Ievan Lloyd, Knight, ætat 40, 1326-7, by Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Thomas Puleston, Knight; son of Sir Gryffydd Lloyd, Knight, knighted by Edward I. at Caernarvon Castle, April 25, 1284, Lord of Trefgarnedd, county Pembroke, of Llanfrdour, county Caermarthen, and of one-fifth part of one vestra in Landrustuth, county Caerdigan, by Gwenllian, daughter of Cynan ap Meredydd, Lord of Crewthyn, executed September (Dec.) 14, 1295; son of Sir Rhys ap Gryffydd, Knight, dead before April 20, 1284; by Margaret, daughter of John Le Strange; son of Gryffydd ap Ednyfed, held all of Henglawdd, county Denbigh, by Gwenllian, daughter of Howel ap Traharen, Lord of Aberllyfni, county Brecon, lived 1212-21; son of Ednyfed Vychan, Baron of Brinfenigle, county Denbigh, Chief Justice, Counsellor and General to Llew, ap Jorwerth, King of North Wales, died after 1241; by Gwenllian, daughter of Rhys ap Gryffydd, Prince of South Wales, died April 24, 1196 (1197).

GWILYM DDU, or "William the Swarthy," son of Howel ap Llewellyn, living in the reigns of Henry V. and VI., married Margaret, daughter of Jenkin ap Richard Jenkin, of Aberyscir, in Ystradvellte, county Brecon (descended from Maenarch), by Sybil, daughter of John Cynfyn, brother of Sytsyllt Cynfyn, standard bearer to Henry IV., their son, HOWEL DDU, married Maud, daughter of Roger ap Madoc of Sleoch, county Brecon, by a daughter (N. N.) of Phillpot Sollers, of Tredustan, who held one knight's fee in Ponteswall, county Brecon, of the Honor of Brecknock.

GWILYM ap Howel Ddu, of Argoed in Talachddu, county Brecon, married Katherin, daughter of Jenkin ap Rhys Tew ("the Fat"), of Glynnedd, county Glamorgan, son of Rhys ap Jenkin, tested a deed of Curt Sion Yonge from John Yonge to John and Alice Havard, 7 Henry V.; son of Jenkin ap Rhys, of Glynnedd, by Lucy, daughter of Thomas ap David ap Rhys ap Howel, of Glamorgan. Justiciar of South Wales, 3, 20 Ed. II.

HOWEL ap Gwilym, of Brecon, bailiff of the lordship of Huntingdon, county Hereford 1536; paid lay subsidy in 1543-5, in the latter year appointed sub-collector of the subsidy for the Hundred of Merthir. Margaret, his wife, daughter of William Havard, of Pontwilym, county Brecon, living July 11, 1492, at which date he is named in the Inq. p. m. on the estate of John Bassett, of Beaupré; by Joan, daughter of Lewis Lewis, of Rhun, in Merthir, and sister of Edward Lewis, of Van, Sheriff of Glamorganshire, 1548-55-59. Margaret Havard was widow in 1569-70, as in September of that year she and her son, Thomas ap Howell, were deforciant in a suit about lands in Merthir Cynog and affords an early instance of a custom peculiar to Breconshire, where a woman retained her maiden name after marriage and in widowhood. A later instance of the same thing occurs in the will of Walter Thomas, died 1703, father-in-law of Hugh Powell, of Castle Madoc, died 1749.

THOMAS ap Howell, known in the history of his county as Thomas Powell, the name "Powell" being generally regarded as having been taken by him as an anglicized form of the Welsh "ap Howell," was known in 1569-70, as "Thomas ap Howell ap Guillim," and in 1577 as witness to will of Watkin Vaughan, father of his second wife, he subscribes as "Thomas Howell Gllm." The patronymic Powell was doubtless a settlement, and if at all used by Thomas ap Howell it must have been after 1577. A date stone exists, recording the erection of Castle Madoc by Thomas and Margaret (second wife) Powell in 1580, a fact which would seem to indicate its employment before his death, prior to 1598, at which date his son "William Powell, Esq.," paid 20s. subsidy. Old Castle Madoc was remodeled in 1831, and again by the present proprietor. Castle Madoc was so called (Jones' Brecknock, i. 177) "either from Madoc, third brother of Bleddyn ap Maenarch, or from Madoc, third son of Dafyd ap Rhys-y-ddimau, and inclines to the belief that the latter is entitled to the distinction, as the former settled at or near Edwingsford, in Caermarthenshire. The issue of Madoc ap Rhys-y-ddimau failed in the main line in the third generation, when it went to one of the descendants of the elder branch of the family of Bleddyn, with whom it continued (i. e. the estates) until the marriage of Watkin Vaughan, grandson of Sir Roger Vaughan, Knight of Tretower, with Joan, daughter of Evan ap Gwilym Vychan. One of their daughters—Margaret—married Thomas Powell, of Castle Madoc, and built the same, 1580. Before this time it was a castellated mansion, with a keep for prisoners upon an artificial mound, the latter of which still remains adjoining the farm yard." Castle Madoc is situated in the northern extremity of Llandeivailog, on the boundary of Merthir Cynog, and part of the farm is in one parish and a part in another parish.

Thomas ap Howell or Powell married (first) Sybil, dead before September 12, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir William Vaughan, Knight of Porthaml, Sheriff of Brecknockshire, 1539; died 1564, by Catherine, daughter of Jenkin Havard, of Tredomen; son of Watkin Vaughan, of Talgarth, by Joan, heiress of Ievan ap Gwilym, of Peytin Gwyn, descended from Bleddyn ap Maenarch; son of Roger Vaughan, of Tretower, held the manor of Wilmeston, county Hereford (son of Sir Roger Vaughan, Knight, slain at Banbury, 1469; son of Sir Roger Vaughan, Knight, slain at Agincourt, 1415, by Gwladys, daughter of Sir David Gam, Knight, Banneret of Agincourt, slain there 1415, by Jane, daughter of Sir Robert Whitney, Knight of Whitney, county Hereford, living 38 Henry VI., by Constance, daughter of James Tucket, Lord Audley, slain at Bloreheath, 1459, by Eleanor, daughter of Edmund Holland, Earl of Kent, died 1407, by Constance, died 1416, daughter of Edmund, of Langley, Duke of York, K. G., died 1402; son of Edward III., King of England, died 1377. Their son,

WILLIAM POWELL, of Castle Madoc, paid subsidy, 40 Elizabeth (1598); party to a suit, August 6, 6 Jacob I. (1608-9). Mr. Owen (Cambrian Biography) states he was a poet, and flourished between 1580 and 1620; his writings, however, appear to be unknown. By his wife, Matilda, daughter of Griffith ap Jeffrey, alias Tompkins, of Glyntawey, by his wife, Elizabeth, ninth child of Lleisan Price, of Briton Ferry, county Glamorgan, barrister-at-law, M. P. for Cardiff, 1557, by Maud, his wife, daughter of David Evans, of Great House, Neath, Sheriff of Glamorgan, 1562, by Catherine, his wife, daughter of Sir William Vaughan, Knight of Porthaml, died 1564 (ante), he was father of HUGH POWELL, of Castle Madoc, and his wife, in 1617, made fine of lands in Llanfihangel, Llandeavillog and Merthir Cynog, which fine is referred to the Inq. p. m. of William Powell, their son, died 1637. He was defendant in a suit brought by William Prichard, July, 1624, which suit was continued until next sessions, but before court again convened he had died. Buried in the Church of Llandeavillog Vach. Elizabeth, his wife, granted administration of personal estate October 6, 1624; will dated May 19, 1637; died May 31, 1638, was daughter of Thomas Howell (Gwyn), of Treacastle, county Brecon, will proved November 17, 1584; by Margaret, daughter of Edward Games, of Newton, county Brecon, M. P. for Brecknockshire, 1547-48-52-53-54; Sheriff, 1558; buried in the Priory Church at Brecon, September 9, 1564 (descended from Sir David Gam, Knight, ante); by Elizabeth, daughter of Sir William Vaughan, Knight, by Porthaml, died 1564 (ante), and widow of John Havard, of Tredomen.

Of the once powerful and wide-spreading family of Games the poet Churchyard wrote:

"These are indeed the ancient race of Games,
A house and blood that long rich armes must give,
And now in Wales are many of their names,
That keep great trayne and doth full bravely live."

WILLIAM POWELL, son of Hugh Powell, of Castle Madoc, matriculated Jesus College, Oxford, April 26, 1616, aged nineteen. William, his wife, Anne, and his mother, Elizabeth Powell, were plaintiffs in an amicable suit, as to land in Talach-ddu, county Brecon; Jonett, his sister, and Thomas Powell, her husband, deforciant. William Powell died at Castle Madoc, March 21, 1637. Inq. p. m., September 19, 15 Car. I. (1639); buried under a monumental slab in the Church of Llande-vailog Vach. Anne, born circa 1600, wife of William Powell, when twenty-four years of age was presented for recusancy. August 22, 1637, renounced administration of husband's personal estate in favor of her brother, Sir Nicholas Kemeys, Knight (defender of Chepstow Castle for Charles I., slain there May 25, 1644). Anne, who was living May 20, 1644, as appears by the Brecon Pleas, was daughter of Rhys Kemeys, of Cefu Mably, county Glamorgan, and of Llanvair-ys-Coed Castle, county Monmouth (third son of David Kemeys, of Cefu Mably, by Catherine, daughter of Sir William Bawdrip, Knight, of Penmark Place), barrister of the Inner Temple, London, admitted student there November, 1573; died 1609; will proved May 22, 1634, having married Wilgefot (sic), dead before May 22, 1634, daughter of William Awbrey, D. C. L., of Abercynfrig, county Brecon, Master of Requests to Queen Elizabeth, died June 23, 1595; will proved July 29, 1595; buried in old St. Paul's, by Willigfort (sic), his wife, daughter of John Williams, of Eynton, county Oxon. William Powell was succeeded by HUGH POWELL, of Castle Madoc, aged four years, three months, and more, September 19, 1639 (Inq. p. m. 15 Charles I.); the inquisitione noted and the commission to Nicholas Kemeys gives the name of Hugh as Howell. The inq. p. m. was made on the representation of neighbors, not relatives, and the heir being an infant, a mistake in the name for want of personal knowledge might well occur. To prove the error the following facts are cited, viz.: Hugh Powell, deforciant, Walter Vaughan et al., plaintiffs in a suit as to lands in Llanvihangel Vechan and Merthir Cynog; and again Hugh Powell, plaintiff, Sir William Lewis, Knight, and Lewis Lewis, deforciant, as to lands in Llanvihangel Vechan, 1655. William, died unmarried, 1673, and George, d. s. p., 1703, are entered at the Oxford Colleges of Queens' and Christ Church, as "son of Hugh Powell." Hugh Powell was Sheriff of Brecknockshire in 1666. The tombstone of his father, William, gives the name as Hugh, and the will of Hugh Powell, proved June 24, 1686, shows no signs of his having obtained the property otherwise than directly. Hugh Thomas, Deputy Pursuivant, and author of Harl. MS. 2289, which deals with Brecknockshire families, was from that county, and Thomas gives the name of William's heir as Hugh. Hugh Powell, who was buried in the Church of Llandevailog Vach, married before 1653, when a minor, to Catherine, daughter of Roger Vaughan, of Merthir and Aberdihonw, will proved February 6, 1645-6, by his wife, Sybil (died September 29, 1681, will proved October 4, 1681), daughter and heiress of Roger ap William Parry, of Trebarried; buried with her husband in Church of Merthir Cynog, under a tombstone with traces of thirty-two quarterings. Catherine on both the paternal and maternal lines descended from Sir Roger Vaughan, Knight of Tretower and Gwladys Gam (ante, subnom. Thomas ap Howell).

CHARLES POWELL, third son, of Castle Madoc, marriage settlement made September 6, 1677, recited in copy of will of Charles Powell, on file in the Consistory Court of the Archdeaconry of Brecon and now in the Probate Registry at Hereford, dated March 23, 1690. To this will are appended certain provisions in the form of codicils under dates September 5, 1694, and January 12, 1696, in favor of his wife and younger children. The date of probate is not given, but the will is filed in the bundle for 1696. Charles Powell died between Jan. 12, 1696, and March 12, 1696, the latter date being noted on back of will as the day when original will was given to George Powell, trustee. Buried in Church of Llandevailog Vach. By his wife, Elizabeth, died April 14, 1729, æt. seventy-three mon. Hereford Cathedral, will dated February 13, 1728, proved July 8, 1731, daughter of George and sister to Sir Rowland Gwynne, Knight of Llanelwedd Hall, Radnor, M. P., for Radnor, 1678, 1688, and for Brecon 1690-98-1701. George Gwynne married Joan, daughter of George Morgan, of Pencoed, county Monmouth, died May 24, 1620, buried at Itton; son of Sir Thomas Morgan, Knight of Pencoed, Sheriff of Monmouthshire 1559, died June 5, 1565; by Cecilia, his wife, died February 27, 1599, æt eighty, daughter of Sir George Herbert, Knight of Swansea; by Elizabeth, his wife, coheir of her father, Sir Thomas Berkeley, Knight of Beverstones Castle, county Gloucester, d. v. p., 1500; by Elizabeth, his wife, daughter of Sir Edward de Nevill, K. G., Baron Nevill, of Abergavenny, died 1476; by Elizabeth, daughter and heiress of Richard de Beauchamp, Lord of Abergavenny and Earl of Worcester, died 10 Henry VI.; by Isabel, daughter and heiress of Thomas Despenser, Earl of Gloucester, beheaded at Bristol, 1399; by Constance, daughter of Edmund, of Langley, Duke of York, K. Hugh Powell, of Castle Madoc, b. 1683; m. prior to Feb. 22, 1703, Margaret, dau. and heiress of Walter Thomas, of Talurnfaur (Garthbrenny); bur. Sept. 23, 1746, in Church of Llandeavillog Vach. Hugh was Sheriff of Brecknockshire, 1712; d. Aug. 11, 1749; bur. in Church of Llandeavillog Vach; father of three sons and six daus., all of whom d. unm., except:

Hugh Penry Powel, b. 1853;

Annabeth Catherine Sophia, d. unm., 1874.

WILLIAM POWELL, of Pa., of whom presently;

Charles, devised sixty pounds by will, and by codicil a sum of twenty-five pounds, to be disposed of by the trustees for his son's benefit;

Sybil, devised seventy pounds by will and twenty-five additional by codicil; in trust until twenty years of age;

Catharine, devised sixty pounds by will and twenty-five additional by codicil; in trust until twenty years of age;

Anne, devised sixty pounds by will and twenty additional by codicil; in trust until twenty years of age. D. unm.; bur. in Church of Llandeavillog Vach, May 23, 1728;

Elizabeth, devised sixty pounds by will and twenty additional by codicil; in trust until twenty years of age. Sole legatee under her mother's will. Elizabeth m., before 1728, John Lloyd, of the city of Hereford, called "Rev. John Lloyd, of St. John the Baptist, Hereford," in the letters of administration granted the widow, Oct. 24, 1735.

Elizabeth Powell, mother of Elizabeth Lloyd, died April 14, 1729, aged seventy-three years, as per cenotaph to her memory in Hereford Cathedral. From her will in the Deanery Registry at Hereford, dated February 13, 1728-9, proved by Elizabeth Lloyd, daughter and sole legatee, July 8, 1731, which recites her as being "of the City of Hereford," it may fairly be inferred that in her widowhood she resided with her daughter in that city, and that the other children living at a distance, already provided for, or deceased, were for reasons then well known not mentioned. The will contemplates money settlements from "children who died intestate," and from other sources, which would satisfactorily account for proof being so long delayed. Though diligent search has been made of the records in the courts of Hereford and Brecon for evidences appertaining to this will, nothing thus far has been found.

WILLIAM POWELL, second son to Charles Powell, of Castle Madoc, died 1696, was born at Castle Madoc, 1684, mentioned in his father's will as "second son," and by will a legacy of ninety-five pounds, which would appear to have been his sole inheritance. His wife, Elizabeth ———, he married in Wales, but the registers of the parishes wherein he could have married begin too late (1715 and after), therefore it is not possible to give her family name. "In 1730 he was living in the Northern Liberties," he was a "yeoman and died in 1754." The date 1730, the year following the death of his mother, and is doubtless the year he emigrated to Pennsylvania. The above quotations from Mrs. Stoddart, the early historian of the family, may contain an error as to residence, as in 1756 his son, William, also described as "yeoman," was living, according to the tax list for that year, on west side of Seventh street, near Sassafras, now Race street, in Mulberry Ward (partly the southern boundary of the Northern Liberties), and the residence of his grandson, Samuel, as late as the year 1785. It may be that Mrs. Stoddart was confused as to the precise locality wherein they successively resided. Be that as it may, it is unlikely that he held property in fee, as his resources must have been limited; but if he did purchase land the deed of conveyance has never been placed upon record, as painstaking research has been made therefore.

William and his wife, Elizabeth, were buried in the yard adjoining the First Baptist Church in La Grange place, located west of Second street, south of Arch street, but later on the sale of the property removed to Mount Moriah Cemetery. Issue:

WILLIAM, of whom next;
Elizabeth;
Another child, d. inf.

WILLIAM POWELL, of Philadelphia, subsequently of Cumberland county, Pennsylvania, held lands in what are now the counties of Bedford and Fulton, and in the county of Frederick, but now in the modern county of Washington, Maryland. In the county of Cumberland no record has been found showing he held lands there, but the list of taxables for Hopewell township in the year 1762 contains his name. He died 1757, buried in Christ Churchyard, Philadelphia, and can only account for his name remaining on the list five years after his decease because of the circumstance of the lands not having been alienated.

In Frederick county, Maryland (Liber E, p. 320), he was deeded a tract called in the Indian dialect "Maronican," consisting of fifty acres, and in same book, p. 388, another tract called "Trywell," containing fifty-eight acres; the dates of conveyance are respectively October 1, and December 1, 1753.

In the Rent Roll of the Proprietors, Land-Office, Annapolis, Maryland, Maronican appears as "Mancan," and Trywell as "Frywell." These, together with an adjoining lot of land called "John and William," William Powell, son of William Powell, conveyed to Samuel Rorer, by deed, September 25, 1762, recorded 27th, same month, in Frederick, Maryland. No record of will or of administration can be found of William Powell, Pennsylvania, in the archives of Maryland or Pennsylvania, yet it would seem that some instrument in writing had been made, for in the conveyance to Rorer occurs this sentence, "the said William Bowers (sic) at the time of sealing this present Indenture of Land is seized in fee Simple of a good share inheritance of the said lands free and clear from all incumbrances," indicating either a disposition of his realty by will or an amicable division previous to leaving for Philadelphia.

William Powell married Sarah, born 1718, died June 19, 1795; widow 1757; married (second), 7 mo., 1759, Jacob Lewis; will proved July 6, 1795. Her will does not mention the children of her first marriage, they doubtless having been provided for. Sarah was daughter of George Mifflin, merchant of Philadelphia, b. 1688; member of Common Council 1730 to March, 1757; will proved May 16, 1758, son of John Mifflin and Elizabeth Hardy, his wife, will proved July 11, 1714, son of John Mifflin, of Warminster, emigrated to Pennsylvania about 1677-8, will proved September 22, 1716, by Jane; Whateley (or Whoteley), of Warminster, married, January 26, 1661, son of Edward Mifflin, of Warminster, county Wilts, by Jane, married, April 19, 1629, daughter of Robert Dredge, of Warminster, paid subsidy 1592 and 1593. Issue:

William, of Frederick co., Md., called "Bowers" and signed as "Bowel" to deed of conveyance to Samuel Rorer, above noted. Will dated May 1, 1812, proved Aug. 18, 1823, signing as "William Powell." First wife, Anna, living 1762; second wife, Barbara, named in will;

SAMUEL POWEL (sic), born 1739, of Philadelphia, later of Bedford county, Pennsylvania, died at "Deerfield," Bedford county, Pennsylvania, September 1814. Admitted member in Carpenters' Company of Philadelphia, 1763. In 1770 his name appears among others, to a subscription paper, dated January 30th of that year, for the erection of the now historic Carpenters' Hall, in amount of £4; in this building was held the First Continental Congress, assembled for the purpose of declaring against the aggressive measures of Great Britain, and patriotically offered the Congress when the City Hall, now State House, was closed by the Proprietary Government. In 1771 he was warden of the Company and corporate member under its reincorporation, 1792.

Early in 1776 Samuel Powel joined the associators of Philadelphia, but owing to the non-existence of the rolls of many of the companies, it is impossible to state details of service. That the families of the associators were subjected to hardship is made clear by the relief extended by the Committee of Safety, and among those who made application for relief were members of the companies of Captains Moulder and Powell. When the associated companies were relieved and disbanded in 1777, Samuel Powel enlisted in Captain Samuel Massey's company, in the Battalion of Colonel Jehu Eyre, of which company Isaac Ashton, his brother-in-law, was Second Lieutenant, and appointed Gunner, August 27, 1777. In the roster of Captain John McKinley's company, Colonel Eyre's battalion, his name appears as Second Lieutenant, and he served to the end of the war.

After the war he returned to his calling as carpenter, residing on west side of Seventh street, between Sassafras and Vine streets, the residence of his father at the time of his decease. Some time previous to 1791 he left Philadelphia for Bedford county, Pennsylvania, locating on four hundred and fifty acres of land in Bethel township, which he called "Deerfield," purchased by him, but patented in the name of his wife, and where, with several intervals spent in Philadelphia, he continued to reside until his death, in September, 1814.

Samuel Powel's first wife was Elizabeth (d. v. p.), married 1765; daughter of William Moulder and Hannah Smallwood (first wife); married at Christ Church, Philadelphia, August 3, 1745; buried 1769 in First Baptist Churchyard, Philadelphia.

CONCERNING THE ARMS AND CREST.

The Welsh heralds ascribe a remote antiquity for the charge, Sable, a chevron between three spearheads argent, points embued gules, claiming they formed the armorial ensign of Caradawg Vreich Vras, slain at the battle of Catraeth, 586. No valid authority can be shown to substantiate this claim, nor can documentary evidence be adduced for his descendant—Maenarch, living in the Eleventh century, having borne the same charge. This coat, as ancient as any among the Welsh of South Wales, was borne without difference by many families in Breconshire who traced their descent from Maenarch, and by others, similarly descending, who in addition to their chosen armorial, added the chevron and spearheads as quartering. Such additions began to appear about the time of Edward III., before whose reign no well defined rules were formulated for family cognizances nor penalties imposed for non-compliance therewith.

Vincent MS. 136, College of Arms, gives tinctures same as in arms of Maenarch, but to Thomas ap Howell or Powell, living in 1580, is ascribed the change from argent to or, an iron plate displaying the arms as now borne (?) and said to be contemporary with the building of Castle Madoc, is still preserved. On a baptismal cup given Washington Bleddyn Powell, a similar charge is engraved, which together with that on the iron plate must be regarded as a differencing of the ancient arms. That the metal or did not remain constant with succeeding members of the Castle Madoc family, is clear from the cenotaphs erected in the Priory Church of Brecon, in pursuance of the provisions of the will of Catherine Powell, died 1798, to the memory of her father, mother and sister, where in the first and fourth quarter of the shield of arms at the head of the memorials, the field is azure and not sable, the metal argent, evidencing a freedom in details (unless warranted by competent authority as yet unknown), not countenanced by the rigid rules of English heraldry.

In the matter of the Crest, viz.: A boar's head ppr. erased and lying fess-wise, though not mentioned by Vincent, is of great antiquity, perhaps coeval with Caradawg Vreich Vras, crests forming a prominent feature in the make-up of the Celtic warrior intended to mark identity, inspire terror, or typify some characteristic of the wearer. It would seem that its adoption may be due to an allusion in the poem of the Gododin by the bard Anewien (circa 586), wherein he is compared to a boar:

"When Caradaw rushed to battle
Like the woodland boar was the gash of the hewer."

Percy, in his "Reliques of British Poetry," gives at length the "Ballad of the Boy and Mantle," wherein the great strength of Caradawg is shown by his being able with the . "little knife of iron and of steele." to have "birtled the boares head wondrous welle."

Curiously, the tomb offers unimpeachable testimony to the use of crests at a very early period, for at Benty Grange in Derbyshire, upon opening a tumulus Mr. Bateman ("Vestiges") discovered the remains of a helmet formed of iron bars with bronze and silver ornaments, and surmounted by what Mr. Bateman affirmed to be the perfect representation of a hog, and quotes the line 4299 from Beowulf: "The boar an ornament to the head, the helmet lofty in wars." Mr. Bateman calls the helmet Saxon, but it is certainly British, as on one of the bars the latin cross is clearly represented, and it is well known that in the fifth and sixth centuries, Christianity had not been embraced by the Saxons, whereas for several centuries before, it had many converts and added saints to the Calendar.

Mr. W. Bleddyn Powell has in his possession three fob-seals, one a gold fob-seal with amethyst setting, having engraved thereon the crest as above described, formerly the property of Samuel Powel, died 1814.

The second fob-seal is of copper gilt, set with sard, and bearing the initials W. P., surmounted by three ostrich feathers (his silverware being similarly marked), and formerly the property of William Powell, died 1819. The boar's head and the ostrich feathers as double crests are combined in a third fob-seal of gold, set with sard and surmounting the initials W. B. P. in old English text, the whole combined within an oval around which is engraved an ancient motto: Hwy Pery Clod Nogolod, i e. "Fame continues longer than wealth."

COATES FAMILY.

The Coates family, for more than two centuries prominently identified with the commercial, professional and social life of Philadelphia, is descended from one of the oldest county families in England, Cotes, of Cotes, Staffordshire, and of Woodcote, in Salop, whose landed possessions there have come down from father to son in an unbroken line from the eleventh century to the present time. It is claimed that they held lands in Normandy before the time of William the Conqueror; but the earliest of the name recorded is a Norman knight, Richard de Cotes, of Cotes, county of Stafford. "The pedigree in the College of Arms and in the Harleian MSS. designates him as 'sans date;' but by computation he must have been born about 1100. Cotes is a hamlet, formerly a very considerable lordship and manor, in the parish of Eccleshall, North Division of the hundred of Pirehill, county of Stafford, and gave name to the family of de Cotes, who anciently were possessors of it and whose estates here, in the sixteenth century, consisted of Cotes Hall, about one thousand acres of land, tenements adjacent, and certain manorial rights. Richard de Cotes is named in a certain charter without date but cited when the Woodcote pedigree was compiled at the time of the Visitation of Salop, and the information there given was obtained from the Cotes Chartulary at Cotes." Harwood says: "Sow, being past Standon, leaveth on the north-east Cotes the ancient seat of Cotes, now of Woodcote in Shropshire. In the time of Henry III., Robert de Cotes, or Kothes (for both ways I have found it written in the same time), was Lord of Cotes."

In the early part of the fourteenth century occurred a union with the ancient family of de Knightley, through the marriage of Robert de Cotes to Alice, daughter of William de Knightley; and later, a union with the de Daventre family, of Daventre Priory, county of Northampton, by the marriage of "Humphrey Cotes, Armiger, Lord of the Manor of Cotes in Staffordshire and Woodcote in Salop," to Joanna, daughter and heiress of William de Daventre, descended from Sir Philip de Daventre, of Daventre Priory, High Sheriff of Cambridge and Hants in the twelfth century, reign of Henry II. Their son was John Cotes, "Lord of the Manor of Cotes in the county of Stafford and of Woodcote in Salop, and other places, eldest son and heir of Humphrey. He succeeded his father about 35 Henry VI. (1457), and was High Sheriff for county of Stafford." (Harleian MSS). His eldest son and heir, Humphrey, was slain at the battle of Bosworth Field, fighting for Henry VII. Harwood says of him: "Humphrey Cotes, Esquire, of Woodcote, fell on the Earl of Richmond's side at Bosworth; and in all probability repaired to him at a small village called Newport, whither he marched from Shrewsbury, and where Sir Gilbert Talbot joined him with two thousand tall men, vassals or dependents of the Earl of Shrewsbury." Humphrey Cotes had married Eleanor, daughter of Sir Humphrey Blunt, Knight, of Kinlett in Salop; and their eldest son, John Cotes, of Cotes and Woodcote, was Captain of a Company in the French wars, 1513-14. Among the banners of those who entered France, June 16, 1513, the Cotton MS. (Cleop. C. V.) mentions:

"Shropshire—John Cottes baryth silver a Coke goults his hakell and his tayll gold: and Ric. Cresset hys Pety Captayn" (lieutenant).

A branch of the Woodcote family, descended through John Cotes, a younger brother of the Humphrey who was killed at Bosworth Field, was afterwards settled in Leicestershire; and in the reign of Elizabeth, Thomas Cotes, of Sproxton, is recorded as "lord of the Manor of Bittesby" and in possession of considerable lands and tenements in the county of Leicester. He married the daughter of Lawrence Everard; and their son, Lawrence Coates, appears to be the first of his family to spell his name in that way, so far as the records show.

The great-grandson of Lawrence Coates, who appears in Colonial records as "Thomas Coates of Sproxton," in Leicestershire, emigrated to Pennsylvania, 1683, at the age of twenty-four, and took up lands there. He was the son of Henry and Elizabeth Coates, of Sproxton; and in a memorandum book still in the possession of his descendants, he states in his own handwriting that he was born 26 September, 1659. Henry Coates is recorded as having been buried in Sproxton Churchyard February 2, 1671-2; and letters of administration upon his estate were granted the following day and are still on file at Leicester. He owned land in Leicestershire, the extent of which is not ascertained, but which was probably inherited from his father. The name of Elizabeth Coates is found in local records at Sproxton as late as 1679; but she was not living in that year, probably, as in Thomas Coates's note-book, before cited, is this entry: "Memorandum. My mother died ye 26 day of ye 5 moneth (called July) on ye 6 day of ye weeke 1678."

Elizabeth, daughter of Henry and Elizabeth Coates, married George Palmer, of Nonesuch, in the county of Surrey, who in 1681 purchased from William Penn five thousand acres of land to be laid out in the Province of Pennsylvania; and some two years later sailed with his wife for Philadelphia in the ship, "Isabell Ann Katherren," Thomas Hutson, Master, but died at sea, his will being dated on the "Katherren," September 4, 1683, and proved at Philadelphia on the ship's arrival at that port. By it he bequeathed to his wife, Elizabeth, one thousand acres of his land, and made her his executor. Meantime, probably in Palmer's interest, his young brother-in-law, Thomas Coates, had gone to America; his memorandum book states that he "left home the 17th of the 12th Month, 1682" (February 17, 1682-3). In the interests of his widowed sister, no doubt; he returned to England soon after her arrival, for his entry states: "I left Philadelphia the 19th day of 10 month '83" (December, 1683), "and Darby the 20th of the same month. Choptanke the 3 day of the 11 month, the same day wee got on board the Lively in Herrin Bay, and on the 9 day of 11 month wee came to Pur-tuxon. And on the 21 wee came to James River in Virginia, and on the seventh day of the 12mo. wee wayed anchor and launched forth into the sea for Ould England. And on the 22 day of the first month wee see the land of England, and on ye 25 we came ashore at Dover, in Kent."

How long he stayed in England before returning to Pennsylvania and permanently settling there, is not known; but 7mo. 7, 1686, the deed records show, he purchased land from Thomas Smith in Darby township, then of Chester county, Pennsylvania. His name appears at intervals on the records of Darby Monthly Meeting, and in 1687 he was a jurymen of "the Court held att Chester for ye county of Chester, ye 3d day of ye 1st weeke of the 7th month."

In 1684 Elizabeth Palmer married (second) Thomas Fitzwater, of Philadelphia, an eminent minister of Society of Friends, and father of George Fitzwater who was a prominent merchant of Philadelphia, and with whom Thomas Coates was afterwards closely associated in mercantile affairs. There are subsequent records of considerable building operations undertaken by these two jointly; and George Fitzwater, with Israel Pemberton, is named a trustee in the will of Thomas Coates at his death, 1719.

Thomas Coates appears to have made one other return voyage to England, probably 1694, to arrange for the redemption of his nephew, George Palmer the younger, from captivity among the Algerine pirates, by whom he had been captured, 1691, and held for ransom at Mechinez, capital of Morocco, from whence a letter was received by his mother and sister asking for relief from bondage, as is noted in the minutes of Darby Meeting. George Palmer's release appears to have been effected some time prior to 1697, in which year he is writing from England relative to a sale of part of the Pennsylvania land inherited from his father; presumably to repay the money contributed by his friends for his ransom. He died at Peckham, Surrey, February 1729, leaving a good estate.

Prior to his last journey to England, Thomas Coates appears to have removed to the city of Philadelphia, as by deed dated 4mo. 8, 1692, William Markham, "of the Town and County of Philadelphia, in the Province of Pennsylvania, in the Parts of America," conveys to "Thomas Coates of the County of Chester in said Province" "a certain Lott of land in Philadelphia County, inbreadth fourtie nine foot, and in length three hundred and six foot; bounded Northward with back lotts, Eastward by the back of William Clarke's Lot, Lawrence Cook's Lott, and the Plimouth Friends, Southward by the high (Market) Street, and to the Westward with Lawrence Cook's Lott." Here he erected a house on the north side of Market street which was his home for the remainder of his life, going at his death, by devise, to his daughter, Mary.

In Philadelphia Thomas Coates engaged in mercantile affairs on a considerable scale, both as a shipping merchant to and from foreign ports and in supplying planters and smaller dealers in the outlying districts with the staple merchandise needed by the early settlers. He built up an extensive and profitable business and imported large quantities of goods from England, Barbadoes, and West Indies, frequently having a large interest in the cargoes of trading vessels, trading from these points, if not in the vessels themselves, as was common with early Colonial merchants of Philadelphia.

In 1696, at the age of thirty-seven, Thomas Coates married Beulah, daughter of Thomas Jacques, many years a resident of Philadelphia. The records say: "At a Monthly Meeting held at the house of Robert Ewer, the twenty-fifth day of the seventh month, 1696, Mary Sibthorpe and Joan Forrest, presented Thomas Coate and Beulah Jacoes, a second time to this meeting, and after inquiry concerning his clearness nothing appeareing to obstruct his proceeding they are left to consummate their marriage in the feare of God." The Jacques family were descendants of French Huguenots who had fled to England after the Massacre of St. Bartholomew, and belonged to the Society of Friends.

Thomas Coates was disowned by Philadelphia Meeting, 1702, for his severe criticism of Friends in general in some matter probably growing out of the Keithian trouble some years earlier, for which he persistently declined to apologize; but his wife remained active in the meeting and was for many years Treasurer and an Elder of the Women's Meeting, and the family continued their membership in the Society, as have some of his descendants to the present day. His burial is mentioned in the records of the Arch Street Meeting, as among those not members of the Society.

The property on the west side of Second street, north of Market, owned by the Coates family, was purchased by Thomas Coates of Joseph Taylor, August 16, 1705. Here his grandson, Josiah Langdale Coates, and later, his great-grandson, George Morrison Coates, each carried on a successful mercantile business.

Thomas Coates, according to the custom of the well-to-do residents of Colonial Philadelphia, in addition to his town residence, had his "country seat" at Frankford. March 11, 1714, he purchased several hundred acres, including fifty and a half acres of "Liberty Land," near Frankford, which he kept well stocked, and where he and his family spent a portion of the summer months. November 19, 1717, he purchased another property on the north side of Market street, that has also remained in the family, being still owned by his descendants.

Thomas Coates died at his residence on Market street, Philadelphia, 7mo. 22, 1719, within four days of his sixtieth birthday. Previous to his death, he gave to each of his children a gold coin, a "Jacobus," charging them never to part with it unless in need of bread. One of these, given to his daughter, Elizabeth Paschall, is now in the possession of his great-grandson, John T. Morris, the owner of "Cedar Grove," so long the home of Elizabeth and her family, and he has it mounted as a valued heirloom. Beulah (Jacques) Coates survived her husband twenty-one years, dying June 29, 1741.

By will of Thomas Coates, dated September 18, 1719, but four days before his death, two hundred acres of his Frankford plantation with a "brick messuage or tenement" thereon, and twenty-five feet front of his late purchase on Market street, was devised to his son, Enoch. To his infant son, Samuel, he devised the balance of the Frankford property and a lot on Second street, and the reversion of his other property on Second street at the death of the child's mother, his wife. Another lot on High street was devised to his daughter, Elizabeth, and the house in which he lived, to his daughter, Mary.

The Friend contains the following notice of Beulah Coates:

"She was one of the willing-hearted laborers in the Lord's cause, and was much employed in the discipline. Soon after it was concluded to set apart a few Friends in different Meetings as Elders to sit with the Ministers, Beulah Coates was appointed to that station. Her friends say 'she was careful to evidence by an upright life and conversation her regard for the promotion of the cause of Truth, being a diligent attender of our religious meetings both for worship and discipline, and was well loved and esteemed.' Departed this life the 29th of the fourth month, 1741, in good unity with Friends."

ELIZABETH COATES, eldest daughter of Thomas and Beulah (Jacques) Coates, born 8mo. 12, 1701-2, was a woman of much executive ability. Her father died when she was little over seventeen years of age, but even at that age, there is abundant evidence that she assisted him in keeping his accounts in the latter part of his life.

On February 28, 1721, when but nineteen years of age, she married Joseph, son of Thomas and Margaret (Jenkins) Paschall, and they took up their residence in the house devised to Elizabeth by her father.

Joseph Paschall belonged to one of the oldest Quaker families in Philadelphia county, both of his parents having come to Pennsylvania in their youth with their parents, early in 1682, his father from Bristol, England, and his mother from Tenby, Pembrokeshire, Wales. Joseph Paschall was a public-spirited citizen and took a prominent part in the affairs of the city during the comparatively brief career of his manhood. He was elected to Common Council of the city, October, 1732, and sat in that body until his death. He was founder of first Volunteer Fire Company in Philadelphia, his name heading the list of the twenty men who started the first Fire Engine Company, December 7, 1736, of whom Dr. Benjamin Franklin was one. Joseph Paschall died 12mo. 26, 1742; of his nine children but three survived him, and but one married and left issue.

After the death of her husband, Elizabeth Coates Paschall removed with her three children to a portion of the Frankford plantation acquired by her father in 1714. Purchasing thirteen acres of the tract devised to her brother, Samuel, she, in the autumn of 1748, built the present fine old Colonial home, known as "Cedar Grove," occupied for a century, and still owned by her lineal descendants. At her death, 1753, it passed to her unmarried daughter, Beulah, at her death, 1793, to Joseph Paschall, youngest son of Joseph and Elizabeth, and he dying 1795, devised it to his nieces, Sarah and Elizabeth Coates, daughters and only issue of his brother, Isaac, and Elizabeth, who married Thomas Greaves, dying without issue, the sole title passed to Sarah Paschall, the wife of Isaac Wistar Morris, who added to both the lands and mansion. It is now owned by John T. and Lydia Morris, grandchildren of Isaac W. and Sarah (Paschall) Morris, who as related in our annals of the Morris family, until recently occupied it as a country seat.

SAMUEL COATES, second surviving son of Thomas and Beulah, born 8mo. 7. 1711, became an enterprising merchant of Philadelphia, continuing to live on Market street, near the courthouse, though he had greatly improved the property at Frankford devised to him by his father. His journal tells of having heard George Whitefield preach to a vast audience from the top of the courthouse steps, 1737. He took a lively interest in literary and scientific pursuits, and was one of the original share holders of the Philadelphia Library, his share having been since his time a continuous possession of his descendants. He died when comparatively young, 10mo. 15, 1748. He married, 4mo. 13, 1734, Mary, only daughter of Josiah and Margaret (Burton) Langdale, of Nafferton, Yorkshire, England, both eminent ministers among Friends. Josiah Langdale was nearly related to King Charles's celebrated General, Sir Marmaduke Langdale, Marquis of Langdale and Baron Holme. His seal bearing the ancient Langdale coat of arms, has come down to his descendants of the Coates family, who still retain some of his furniture and effects. He was born near Nafferton, Yorkshire, 1673, was early convinced of the principles and faith of Friends and entered the ministry when a young man. He made two religious visits to America, one in 1700 and another in 1715. Having decided to settle permanently in Pennsylvania, he with his wife and family, embarked at Gravesend in the ship "London Hope," 2mo. 15, 1723, but died when about three days out. A tradition exists, that his coffin, being insufficiently weighted on his burial at sea, floated back to England near his old home, where his remains were recognized and he was buried from his own Meeting House. His widow, Margaret, became second wife of Samuel Preston, the Provincial Councillor, and his only son, John, married a daughter of

Issue of Samuel and Mary (Langdale) Coates:

Samuel, d. inf.;

Margaret, d. unm., 4mo. 22, 1772;

SAMUEL COATES, second son of Samuel and Mary (Langdale) Coates, born August 24, 1748, was but nine weeks old at the death of his father, and was adopted by his uncle and aunt, John and Mary (Coates) Reynell. He finally succeeded his uncle as shipping merchant, and was a well known and prominent business man of the city. John Reynell was a founder of Pennsylvania Hospital, and Samuel Coates early became interested in that institution and its aims and needs. He became one of the Board of Managers in 1785, and continued as such forty years, during which period he was Secretary of Board twenty-six years, and President thirteen years, the infirmities of age necessitating his retirement 1825. At a special meeting of the Board held June 7, 1830, two days after his death, resolutions were adopted, recording a tribute of respect and affection to his memory, and commemorating his services as "the long-devoted and faithful benefactor of the Pennsylvania Hospital." He was also prominent in other charitable and philanthropic institutions, and was Overseer of Public Schools of Philadelphia, 1786-1823.

Samuel Coates, after the Revolutionary War, took charge for the Penn family of their estate, as their agent, in Pennsylvania; being succeeded in that capacity by his son John Reynell Coates, who in turn was succeeded by General Thomas Cadwalader. Samuel Coates was on terms of personal friendship with John Penn, and sent to him a section of the trunk of the famous "Penn Treaty Elm at Shackamaxon," when the tree was uprooted by a storm. This log was kept carefully in the Penn House at Stoke until its destruction by fire a few years since. Under date of August 6th, 1811, John Penn writes:

"I have many thanks to return to you for the log of that interesting tree, the prints of which have been exhibited in the shop windows of this metropolis; & which, if it can attract the attention of its inhabitants, ought much more readily to gratify me from the possession of a part of it. I have to inform you also, that it is safely landed, since your son, Mr. Joseph Coates, wrote me word from the ship in which he sailed, how I could most easily procure the delivery of it from the Washington. I hope the sea voyage will be of service to his health, which seemed to require some change of air or exercise. * * * I have not yet determined on the best mode of giving a new shape to the valuable wood: when I have I shall be happy to communicate to you my intention."

By his first wife, Lydia Saunders, he had four children who survived infancy, viz.:

John Reynell, b. Nov. 22, 1777; d. Feb. 21, 1842; m., June 10, 1801, Sarah, dau. of John Morton, President of Bank of North America; studied law with his cousin, William Rawle; Attorney and Agent for Penn estate; issue: Morton, Henry, Saunders and Lydia;

Lydia, b. Aug. 24, 1786; d. Feb. 26, 1862; m. Nathaniel Minturn, of N. Y.

By his second wife, Amy Hornor, he had issue:

Samuel Hornor, b. Oct. 15, 1792; d. Nov. 18, 1811;

Benjamin Hornor, M. D., b. Nov. 13, 1797; d. Oct., 1881;

Reynell Coates, M. D., b. Dec. 10, 1802; d. April 27, 1886; m. Dec. 5, 1827, Margaret Abbott; no surviving issue.

JOSIAH LANGDALE COATES, born Philadelphia, November 10, 1747, on arriving at age of maturity, engaged in mercantile business, corner of Second and Market streets, the property purchased by his grandfather, Thomas Coates, August 16, 1705. He had at first, for a partner, his younger brother, Samuel, but the latter soon after engaging in business with his uncle, John Reynell (whom he succeeded 1781), Josiah L. took a partner, Edward Randolph, under firm name of Coates & Randolph. Between Josiah Langdale Coates and his partner, Edward Randolph, there existed the closest friendship and confidence, that held through life, and was transmitted through four generations of their respective descendants.

Coates & Randolph did an extensive business as shipping merchants, owning their own vessels and importing a large amount of foreign goods. Though heavy losers by loss of goods at sea during the latter part of the Revolutionary War, and by the shrinkage in Continental money, their business prospered, and Josiah retired from active business some years prior to his death, October 16, 1809. Many years after his death a package was found in the cellar of his house at 814 Arch street, containing Continental bills to the amount of fifteen hundred pounds, labelled, "£1500, being my share of Alice Langdale's Estate.—Josiah L. Coates." Alice Langdale was his sister.

Both Josiah L. and Samuel Coates were subscribers to the stock of Bank of North America 1782, and both were actively associated with various institutions of the city in their day. Josiah's family were early victims of the yellow fever, one child died 1793 (as noted in the Diary of Elizabeth Drinker, a cousin), but the rest recovered under the careful attention of Dr. Rush. For a number of years the family spent the summer months at Haddonfield, New Jersey, in the old Colonial house built by Elizabeth Haddon.

Josiah Langdale Coates married, July 16, 1772, Mary, only daughter of Captain George and Mary (Warner) Morrison. She was born November 13, 1753, and died December 12, 1842, over eighty-nine years of age, surviving her husband thirty-three years. They were said to have been the handsomest couple ever married in Market Street Meetinghouse.

Issue of Josiah L. and Mary (Morrison) Coates:

GEORGE MORRISON COATES, eldest son of Josiah Langdale and Mary (Morrison) Coates, was born in Philadelphia, December 10, 1779, and until his marriage, 1807, lived with his parents in the old home on Third street, above Arch, where his mother continued to reside until her death, 1842, with her unmarried daughters, Sidney and Sarah Coates, and her unmarried son, Josiah Coates. George M. was educated at the Friends' Grammar School on Fourth street, and at the conclusion of his school days entered the hardware store of Benjamin Hornor (whose daughter he later married), to learn the business. Prior to his marriage, his father established him in business at his old store, near the corner of Second and Market streets, where he carried on a successful business many years. On his marriage, May 19, 1807, he took up his residence on Market street, now number 133, his father-in-law, Benjamin Hornor, residing next door, in the house at one time the home of Dr. Benjamin Franklin. On the opposite side of the street was the Letitia Penn House, once the Philadelphia home of the great founder, which, largely through the efforts of Henry T. Coates, has been removed to Fairmount Park. George M. Coates also owned the property at 127 Market street, later occupied as a business place by his sons, Benjamin Coates and George Morrison Coates, Jr., wool merchants. George M. Coates, Sr., and his family were among the last to retain a residence in that part of Market street, rapidly being claimed for business purposes. They removed, 1833, to 814 Arch street, and when that locality became also crowded with stores they removed, 1863, to 1616 Arch street, where his daughters, Mary and Sarah Hornor Coates, still reside, and where their father died, June 16, 1868.

George M. Coates retired from business in 1842, and was succeeded by his youngest son, Joseph P. Hornor Coates, who also relinquished business on account of failing health, and died at the early age of twenty-nine years. His wife, Rebecca, died at 814 Arch street, July 17, 1853. He was blind a number of years prior to his death.

Issue of George Morrison and Rebecca (Hornor) Coates:

Benjamin, b. Feb. 16, 1808; d. March 7, 1887; lived until his death with his maiden sisters, Beulah, Mary and Sarah Hornor Coates, on Arch street; was much interested in benevolent and charitable enterprises, particularly in the Christianization and civilization of the Indian and Negro, and in establishment of Republic of Liberia. Some years associated in business with his brother, George M., under firm name of Coates Brothers, wool merchants;

Sarah Hornor Coates, unm., living at 1616 Arch street.

GEORGE MORRISON COATES, JR., son of George Morrison and Rebecca (Hornor) Coates, born August 20, 1817, was educated at private schools in Philadelphia, and as a youth was placed by his father in the mercantile establishment of James Fassett, a prominent merchant of Philadelphia. At the age of twenty-one, with the financial assistance of his father, he started in business for himself, as a dealer in cloths and cassimeres, at the old family store on Second street, above Market, part of the property purchased by his great-great-grandfather nearly a century and a half before, and many years occupied by the successful firm of Coates & Randolph. The venture proved a profitable one, and he removed to a larger establishment on Market street, above Third. During the panic of 1857, he lost heavily, 1859, closed out the business, and soon after, in partnership with his eldest brother, Benjamin, engaged in the wool business at 127 Market street, where the new firm met with rapid and substantial success.

In 1869 both brothers became interested in the now well-known publishing house long conducted under firm name of Porter & Coates, in which George M. later became an active partner. He was a man of great public spirit, and took an active interest in all that pertained to the best interests of the city; was many years an active member of Board of Trade, Board of Health; one of the earliest members of the Union League, and during the Civil War contributed liberally to the national cause and assisted in raising the regiments sent out by the Union League. He was an enthusiastic supporter of the Republican party, and was a presidential elector, 1864-68-72. He had no ambition, however, to hold public office, and uniformly declined to accept nomination for civil office. He was eleven years director of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and filled a number of other positions of trust. After the death of his wife, 1881, he retired almost entirely from public life. He died May 21, 1893, at the house where he had resided thirty-four years.

George M. Coates married, October 1, 1840, Anna, daughter of Henry Troth, native of Maryland, and descendant of one of the earliest settlers on the eastern shore, who had come to Philadelphia early in life, and was prominent in the affairs of that city; serving for a time as President of Common Council of the city. Mrs. Coates was interested in a number of benevolent and charitable institutions of the city, among others the Industrial Home for Blind Women, of which she was one of the board of managers from its inception, 1868, until her death, January 10, 1881.

HORNOR ANCESTORS OF COATES FAMILY.

BENJAMIN HORNOR, of Philadelphia, two of whose daughters and one son, intermarried with the Coates family, was the eighth child of Isaac and Eleanor (Bowne) Horner, of Mansfield, Burlington county, New Jersey.

The Horner family was an old one in Yorkshire, where members of it were quite numerous in the seventeenth century, a number of them converts of George Fox, who suffered persecution for their religious faith. In 1664 one Bartholomew Horner writes to friends "from my prison house in Wakefield." Francis Horner, a founder of the Edinburgh Review, was of Yorkshire stock.

In the ship "Providence," from New-Castle-on-Tyne, Captain Robert Hopper, when it cast anchor at Burlington, November 1, 1683, among other passengers were John Horner, of Tadcaster, Yorkshire, his wife, Mary, and their ten children, the youngest but five years of age.

July 16, 1684, William Black and Robert Murfin conveyed to "John Horner, late of Burlington, Yeoman, and Mary his wife," two plantations in Mansfield township, two hundred acres lying above Crosswicks Creek. A little over a year later, 11mo. 20, 1685, William Biddle, of Mount Hope, the ancestor of the distinguished family of the name in Philadelphia, conveyed to "Isaac Horner, late of Long Island," a large tract of land in Northampton township, Burlington county, New Jersey, and he later purchased other tracts there. This Isaac Horner was probably a brother of John Horner, of Tadcaster, as at the death of the latter, intestate, early in 1689, letters of administration were granted on his estate to Isaac Horner and John Horner, William Biddle and Francis Davenport, are appointed guardians of Joshua, Isaac and Mary Horner, minor children of John Horner. Isaac died, 1708, apparently without male issue, and his widow, Lydia, 1713. John Horner, eldest son of John and Mary, married Frances, widow of Daniel Brymson, and settled near Stony Brook, Middlesex county, where he died 1715, without issue, leaving his estate to his step-children and the children of his brothers, Isaac and Joshua, and his sister, Mary Kelley. Joshua died in Springfield, Burlington county, 1723, leaving a large family.

ISAAC HORNOR, youngest son of John and Mary Horner, was born at Tadcaster, Yorkshire, England, 2mo. 17, 1678, and came to Burlington county with his parents at the age of five years. He became an eminent member of the Society of Friends, and was many years an Elder of their Meeting. He married (first), at Chesterfield Meeting, 3mo. 19, 1709, Elizabeth Sykes, of Chesterfield, among the witnesses being his brother, John, and wife, Frances. He married (second), 1718, Eleanor, daughter of Samuel Bowne, of Flushing, Long Island, by his wife, Mary Becket, who had come from Lancashire, 1684, with the family of Henry Baker, in the "Vine" of Liverpool, and up to the time of her marriage to Samuel Bowne, at Falls Meeting, Bucks county, 8mo. 4, 1691, had been living with Phineas Pemberton, in Falls township. Samuel Bowne, born at Flushing, Long Island, 1667, was son of John Bowne, born at Mallich, Derbyshire, England, March 9, 1627, who in 1647 accompanied his father, Thomas Bowne, and his sister, Dorothy, to Boston, from whence John Bowne came to Flushing, Long Island, in 1656. In that year he married Hannah Feakes, descendant of the Winthrop family, of Groton Manor, and niece of Governor Winthrop, of Massachusetts. John Bowne owned at the time of his death, five hundred acres of land on the Neshaminy in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, which he had purchased of Penn 1688, and it descended to his son, Samuel, who conveyed it to his niece Hannah (Willits) Carr, 1696, but repurchased it, 1721, and owned it until 1731. Samuel was also a considerable landowner in Salem county, New Jersey, but continued to reside at Flushing, in the old house erected by his father, 1661, and in which his daughter was married to Isaac Hornor, 1718. Samuel Bowne was an eminent member of the Society of Friends and travelled extensively, with Thomas Chalkley and others "in the service of Truth." The Bowne House, at Flushing, was a noted gathering place of eminent ministers of the Society of Friends in the early days. It was still in a good state of preservation in 1878, though the venerable oak tree by its side, under which George Fox preached in 1672, was but a stump. Eleanor Bowne, third child of Samuel and Mary (Becket) Bowne, born there 1698, married there, 1718, Isaac Hornor, of Mansfield.

Isaac Hornor was a sturdy Quaker of the old school, and his home was a favorite stopping-place of the ministers of the Society, when travelling in the service of Truth. He is said to have been the first slave-holder in New Jersey to emancipate his slaves, 1745. He died 11mo. 24, 1760, in his eighty-third year, leaving eight children.

Issue of Isaac and Eleanor (Bowne) Hornor:

John Hornor, b. 1719; d. about 1759; a man of considerable literary culture; a founder of College of New Jersey, 1745; inherited large entailed estate from his uncle, John Hornor, and succeeding in breaking the entail, was possessed of ample means. He went to sea during French and Indian War, and captured by a French Man-of-War, was carried to Cape Breton, and confined in a dungeon there until released by the capture of that fortress by the English and Continental forces, 1758; returned to N. J. home broken in health and died soon after;

Samuel Horner, officer in British Army; m. Sarah Lybrand;

Joseph Horner, remained in Mansfield; like his father, was many years elder of Friends' Meeting; d. Springfield twp., Burlington co., at advanced age; m. Sarah Wright and had two children, neither of whom survived him;

Isaac Hornor, Jr., m. at Chesterfield Meeting, 11mo. 16, 1757, Mary, dau. of Thomas and Sarah (Beakes) Potts, of Trenton. He resided some years at Kingwood, N.J., but returned later to old homestead; d. there aged 90 years. A son, Col. Thomas Hornor, removed to Canada, and became member of Provincial Parliament, and an eminent man there. Another son, Isaac, remained in N. J., near Princeton;

Mary Hornor, m. John Field, of Princeton. Her son, John Field, became an eminent merchant in Phila.;

Elizabeth Hornor, m. Thomas Watson, of Bordentown. Her dau., Elizabeth, became wife of Effingham Lawrence, of Flushing, L. I.;

Amy Hornor, twin sister of Benjamin, m. Henry Clifton, and lived at Kingwood, N. J.;

BENJAMIN HORNOR, of Phila., of whom next.

BENJAMIN HORNOR, youngest son of Isaac and Eleanor (Bowne) Hornor, came to Philadelphia when a lad and learned the hatter's trade, but became later a hardware merchant. He was, at least as early as 1784, one of the managers of the first Abolition Society, entitled "The Pennsylvania Society for the Abolition of Slavery; the relief of Free Negroes, unlawfully held in Bondage; and for Improving the Condition of the African Race." Dr. Benjamin Rush and Dr.

Benjamin Franklin were at different periods president, and many eminent men of the city were enrolled as members. The late Benjamin Coates was its vice-president in 1843 and his name still appeared on the list of members over a century after his grandfather, Benjamin Hornor, had become a member of the Board of Managers. Benjamin Hornor was a man of fine intelligence, and a great reader. He was teacher in the earliest Sabbath School in Pennsylvania in 1793. His later days were spent with the Coates family, into which two of his daughters and one son had married. During his active years, he lived on Front street and later on Market street, near the Coates home, and had a country place at Kensington. He died in 1810. He married Sarah, daughter of Thomas Potts, third of the name (1706-1742), by his wife, Sarah Beakes, daughter of William and Ruth (Stacy) Beakes, and granddaughter of Mahlon Stacy, of Ballifield, Yorkshire, founder of Trenton, New Jersey; and great-granddaughter of Thomas Potts, of Hernsworth, Yorkshire, who came to Burlington in the ship "Shield," 1678, with Mahlon Stacy. Sarah (Potts) Hornor, wife of Benjamin Hornor, of Philadelphia, was born 1740, and died 1795.

Mahlon Stacy married, Yorkshire, 1668, Rebecca Ely, and on his arrival in New Jersey, settled with his family on a tract of land including a great part of the present city of Trenton, and erected there the first mill, in that or the adjoining parts of Pennsylvania, which with the extensive water power industries, his son later conveyed to William Trent, for whom the town was named. William Beakes, the maternal grandfather of Sarah (Potts) Hornor, was a son of William and Mary Wall Beakes, who were married at the North Somerset Monthly Meeting of Friends, in county Somerset, England, 3mo. 12, 1661, and with their children came to Pennsylvania, from the parish of Blackwell, Somerset, in the ship "Bristol Merchant," arriving in the Delaware River in 12mo., 1682, and settled in Bucks county; which county William Beakes represented in the Colonial Assembly of Pennsylvania, 1684. Mahlon Stacy was one of the Proprietors of West Jersey, and one of the most prominent men of that colony, serving as member of Provincial Assembly, and filling many other important positions. His name is found in the pedigree of the Stacy family, in Hunter's History of Hallamshire, with the note "emigrated to America." The same authority says that the family of Stacey, as it was originally spelled, and still is in England at the present time, was settled in the neighborhood of Hernsworth "since the Conquest."

Of the children of Benjamin and Sarah (Potts) Hornor, of Philadelphia, Benjamin Hornor, Jr., married, November 19, 1795, Mary Coates, eldest surviving daughter of Josiah Langdale and Mary (Morrison) Coates, and was an eminent business man of Philadelphia.

Joseph Potts Hornor, second son, was a ship owner of Philadelphia, and built at Philadelphia the first steamships, to run from Mobile to New Orleans. He was a man of fine intellectual ability, and something of a poet. He married Jane West.

Sarah Hornor, eldest daughter, lived to old age, unmarried.

Mary Hornor, another daughter, married Ellis Yarnall, many years an Elder of Twelfth Street Friends' Meeting, and prominent in affairs of Philadelphia.

Amy Hornor married Samuel, youngest son of Samuel and Mary (Langdale) Coates, being his second wife, and was mother of the late Dr. Benjamin H. Coates and Dr. Reynell Coates.

Rebecca Hornor married George M. Coates, and two of their grandsons married daughters of Joseph Collins Potts, an eminent lawyer of New Jersey, who was descended from Mahlon Stacy, as well as from Thomas Potts, Stacy's companion in the ship "Shield," 1778.

The pedigree of Thomas Potts is given in the Hunter MS. in the British Museum, the statement being added that he himself was then "living in New Jersey in good quality." He came from an old and highly connected county family in Derbyshire, and his wife, who emigrated to America with him, was on the same authority "Joan, daughter of Platt of the Peak" in Derbyshire. She was, therefore, descended from the family of "Peveril of the Peak," celebrated in Sir Walter Scott's novel of that name, the first of whom was Sir William Peveril, son of William the Conqueror, to whom a royal grant was made of the estate known as "the Peak" in Derbyshire.

FISHER FAMILY.

JOHN FISHER, pioneer ancestor of the Fisher family of Philadelphia, came from England with William Penn, in the ship, "Welcome," in 1682, bringing with him his wife, Margaret, and at least two of their six children, the other four children having died young and probably prior to the removal of the family to America.

The family resided for a time in a cave on the banks of the Delaware, probably only during the winter following their arrival, removing thence to Sussex county, Delaware, and locating near the present site of Lewes, where the family remained for two generations. John Fisher is named in deeds for property there and in Philadelphia as a glazier, and while in some deeds of a later date his residence is given as Philadelphia, it was probably an error of the scrivener as he seems to have remained at Lewes until his death, sometime between May 12, 1685, and April 14, 1686. John and Margaret Fisher, as before stated, were the parents of six children, whose names were, Thomas, John, James, Ann, Alice and Sarah, the four last named of whom died young. The two surviving sons were:

THOMAS, b., Eng., 1669; m. Margery Maud;
John, b., Eng., about 1671; m. Elizabeth Light.

THOMAS FISHER, born in England, 1669, came with his parents to Pennsylvania, in the ship, "Welcome," removed with them to the lower counties, and died there. His will, dated November 17, 1713, is recorded at Georgetown, Sussex county, now Delaware. He married at Lewes, 1692, Margery, born at Wakefield, Yorkshire, England, 1671, daughter of Joshua and Elizabeth (Parr) Maud. Her father, Joshua Maud, born at Wakefield, 1627, died there, 1675, was the third son of John and Sarah Maud, of Alverthorp and Wakefield. His wife, Elizabeth, was daughter of Rev. Thomas Parr, who married a sister of John Bradshaw, President of the Parliament that tried and condemned Charles I., and a cousin of the mother of John Milton, who was also a Bradshaw. After the death of Joshua Maud, his widow, Elizabeth (Parr) Maud, married Dr. Thomas Wynne, of Caerways, Flintshire, 5mo. 20, 1676, and came to Pennsylvania with him, in the "Welcome," and her two daughters, Jane and Margery Maud, followed in the "Submission," sailing from Liverpool, September 5, 1682, and landing at Choptank, Maryland, November 2, 1682, and made their way to Appoquinimink, New Castle county, by land. On this same vessel came Phineas Pemberton, "the father of Bucks county," his father and mother and his father-in-law, James Harrison, Commissioner Agent and friend of William Penn, and many others who became prominent in the province. Dr. Thomas Wynne, stepfather of Margery (Maud) Fisher, was Speaker of first Pennsylvania Assembly, an account of whom and some of his distinguished descendants is given in this volume.

Thomas Fisher was thirteen years of age on his arrival in America. Soon after his marriage, in February, 1693, his mother-in-law, Elizabeth Wynne, conveyed to him and his wife, Margery, the island Broadkill, and one hundred and seventy-four acres of fast land and considerable other property. He became a prominent man in the "lower counties," representing Sussex county in the Assembly, 1697-

1700. He was also a member of the Assembly that met in New Castle, 1704, and one of the representatives in the Pennsylvania Assembly, who resented the arbitrary ruling of Lieutenant-Governor Evans and withdrew from the Assembly. He was appointed, September 7, 1698, Overseer of Highways, and was a Justice of the Peace and of County Courts of Sussex county, 1706-8. He was also Agent of the Proprietary for the lower counties in 1712.

Issue of Thomas and Margery (Maud) Fisher:

Margaret, m. Joseph Booth, d. s. p.;

Elizabeth, m. Daniel Eyre, of Va.; d. s. p.;

Margery, m. James Miers, son of John and Mary (Haworth) Miers;

Esther, m. Abraham Wynkoop, of New York;

James;

Jabez Maud;

JOSHUA, of whom presently.

JOSHUA FISHER, born 1707, was in early life a hatter and followed that vocation at Lewes, obtaining the beaver and other furs for the manufacture of hats direct from the Indians and Indian traders. He was an enterprising business man and soon embarked into the business of purchasing a much larger quantity of pelts than he could use in the prosecution of his craft, shipping the surplus to Europe, thus establishing a business which soon overshadowed his original business, which he soon abandoned and devoted himself entirely to mercantile trade, and became a wealthy and influential shipper and merchant. In 1746 he removed with his family to Philadelphia, bringing a certificate from Duck Creek Monthly Meeting, dated 2mo. 22, 1746, and also a certificate from his neighbors and associates at Lewes, signed by Jacob Kollock, Richard Holt, Anderson Parker, David Smith, Jacob Phillips, Luke Watson and John Clowes, which gave him a flattering recommendation as a man of sterling worth and integrity. Enjoying only limited advantages in the way of education in his youth, the necessities of his growing business led him to make a study of engineering and navigation. In connection with his wife's brother, Samuel Rowland, he prepared a chart of the channel of the Delaware river and bay so complete in its details that the government, 1756, sought to control or suppress its publication lest it fall into the hands of a foreign enemy and aid them in an attack upon the colonial ports.

On his removal to Philadelphia he established a line of packet ships, sailing regularly between Philadelphia and London and other foreign ports, and organized the firm of Joshua Fisher & Sons, one of the largest and most successful shipping firms in Philadelphia in Colonial days. He purchased a house on Walnut street, above Front, where he resided until 1753, when he erected a fine mansion at 110 South Front street, his warehouses being erected on the rear of the same lot and opening on Dock street. The firm were fifth on the list of signers of the non-importation resolutions in 1765, and Joshua Fisher was one of a committee to represent and explain its objects and secure signatures.

Joshua Fisher married, July 27, 1733, Sarah, born at Lewes, 12mo. 6, 1716, daughter of Thomas and Sarah (Miers) Rowland, and granddaughter of Samuel Rowland, who emigrated from England in 1682, and settled in Sussex county. Her mother, Sarah Miers, was daughter of John Miers, who came from England in 1682, and married Married Haworth. Sarah (Rowland) Fisher died January 4, 1772.

While Joshua Fisher and his sons were foremost in the protest against the oppressive measures of the mother country, they were conscientiously opposed to taking up arms, and suffered from the suspicion of the more ardent spirits, and all the members of the firm, including the aged head, then seventy years of age, his sons, Thomas, Samuel R. and Miers, and his son-in-law, Thomas Gilpin, were arrested and all except the father exiled to Virginia, 1777, where Gilpin died during the exile. The warehouses of the firm were stored with valuable goods, much of which was taken possession of by order of Supreme Executive Council, and used in the equipment of ships of war and to supply the army in the field; though an inventory of these goods was taken, the firm never received any compensation therefor. Joshua Fisher died February 1, 1783.

Issue of Joshua and Sarah (Rowland) Fisher:

 SARAH, b. June 1, 1759; d. Jan. 17, 1789; m. Abijah Dawes.

THOMAS FISHER, eldest son of Joshua and Sarah (Rowland) Fisher, born at Lewes, Delaware, May 6, 1741, like all his brothers was sent to England on coming of age and travelled through England and on the continent. Starting on his tour in 1762, he was captured on the high seas and carried a prisoner to Spain, but escaped and made his way to England. On his return he became a member of the firm. He married, 3mo. 17, 1772, Sarah, daughter of Dr. William and Hannah (Emlen) Logan, of "Stenton," born 11mo. 6, 1751, died 1mo. 25, 1796.

When driven from the city by yellow fever in 1792, they resided at "Stenton," and he was so pleased with the locality that in 1795 he built a country seat on the northermost part of the "Stenton" estate, which he named "Wakefield," after the maternal home of his ancestors in England. It has since been occupied by his descendants, making eight generations that have dwelt on a part of the same land successively.

Thomas Fisher, like his father and brothers, was a strict Quaker, and with his brothers and brother-in-law, Thomas Gilpin, suffered arrest and exile to Virginia, because he refused to take the "test oath," or to sanction and support the cause of independence by force of arms. His brother, Samuel Rowland Fisher, was again arrested on his return from Virginia, in the winter of 1778, for writing a letter to his brother, Jabez Maud Fisher, then in New York, and was confined in prison two years longer, though his trial failed to show any treasonable action. He was one of the last of the Quakers to wear the old-fashioned small clothes and cocked hat of Colonial days. He lived in the old Front street mansion until his death, 1834, at the age of eighty-nine years.

Thomas Fisher was one of the founders of West Town Boarding School and its first treasurer, elected October 3, 1794. He was one of the managers of the Pennsylvania Hospital and a member of the American Philosophical Society. He was a man of high intellectual and business ability and was the head of the mercantile establishment, after the death of his father, until his death, September 16, 1810. His city residence was on Second street, below that of Chief Justice Shippen. His wife, Sarah Logan, was a woman of great culture, and had a cheerful and pleasing manner, thus making their home one of the most attractive in Philadelphia.

Issue of Thomas and Sarah (Logan) Fisher:

They resided for a time in New Bedford, where he was largely interested in the manufacturer of woolen goods. He later returned to Philadelphia and resided at "Wakefield." In 1836 he established the Duncannon Iron Works, on Shearman's creek, Duncannon, Pennsylvania, later was joined in its ownership by Charles W. Morgan, of New Bedford, Massachusetts, under the firm name of Fisher & Morgan. It was later owned and conducted by his sons, Lindley and Charles William Fisher, and still later his grandsons, William Logan Fisher, Jr., Harvey Fisher and John Wister, were connected with it, the latter filling the position of manager for many years. He studied law in the office of Joseph Ingersoll, Esq., and was admitted to the Philadelphia bar, February 19, 1831, and practiced for a number of years. He was a prolific writer on political topics. A great number of his articles, written originally for the North American, under the nom de plume of "Cecil," and later of "Kent," were largely copied by other newspapers, and a number of them were later published in pamphlet form, under various titles; among them, "Kansas and the Constitution," "The True Interest of the Border States," "Laws of Race in Relation to Slavery," and a number of others. He also wrote a pamphlet urging the re-election of President Abraham Lincoln, which was published by the Union League. He also published number of articles on agriculture and political economy as related to the tilling of the soil, and was a frequent speaker at agricultural meetings and fairs. He married, May 28, 1851, Elizabeth, daughter of Charles Jared Ingersoll, and had issue:

MIERS FISHER, son of Joshua and Sarah (Rowland) Fisher, born in Philadelphia, June 21, 1748, died there, March 12, 1819, was a noted Greek and Latin scholar at an early age. While yet in his teens, he engaged in mercantile pursuits with the firm of Gilpin & Fisher, large flour factors, on the eastern shore of Maryland, prior to 1766, their establishment being under the sole charge of Miers Fisher, for some years prior to his beginning the study of law at Philadelphia, under Benjamin Chew, Esq., then Attorney-General of Pennsylvania. He was admitted to the bar of the counties of New Castle, Kent and Sussex (now Delaware), at the February term of Court, 1769, and to that of Philadelphia county at the June term following. He suffered exile to Virginia with his brothers and brother-in-law, 1777, returned to Philadelphia after its evacuation by the British forces, and resumed the practice of his profession in which he was eminently successful. He was a member of Pennsylvania Assembly under the new constitution, 1791-92, and was the first Counsellor of the Society for the Abolition of Slavery of Philadelphia, organized in 1793, and spent many years in their service. He was again elected to the Legislature in 1800. He was a member of the City Council, 1789-91, and held other prominent municipal offices. He was a director of the Bank of North America, and of the Insurance Company of Pennsylvania. He was exceedingly prominent in the anti-slavery movement and aided materially in securing the passage of the act for the gradual abolition of slavery, in Pennsylvania Assembly of 1780-81. As a member of the Assembly, ten years later, he introduced a great number of important bills and was largely instrumental in securing their passage. Among the more important bills introduced by him were an "An Act for better preventing crimes, and fixing penalties therefor," which abolished the death penalty for a number of crimes; an act for building a house in Philadelphia, as the residence of President George Washington; an act to unite the Philadelphia and Logan Libraries; a bill for promoting agriculture and manufactures; a bill appropriating 15,000 pounds to the Pennsylvania Hospital; a bill making promissory notes negotiable, and a bill to prevent stock jobbing. He also served on many important committees during his term. He revised and published an entirely new set of forms for conveyancing. In 1795 Miers Fisher purchased a country seat near the Fox Chase in Philadelphia county, which he named "Ury," where he made his permanent home for many years, devoting his energies to its improvement. He was an exceedingly hospitable host and had a large circle of friends, among whom were many well-known and prominent people, who were frequently delightfully entertained at "Ury." While he withdrew from active practice on his removal to his country seat, he annually attended the meeting of the court and kept up his membership in the Philadelphia bar, where he had risen to a distinguished eminence in his profession, being ranked as one of its ablest and most learned members, whose advice and counsel was sought in many cases of great moment. He moved back to the city, in 1815, for the winter months, residing at No. 108 Mulberry (now Arch) street, between Fifth and Sixth streets, where he died March 12, 1819. He married, February 17, 1774, Sarah Redwood, born at Newport, Rhode Island, December 18, 1755, died August 14, 1847, in her ninety-second year. She was a sister to Mrs. Charles Wharton, of Philadelphia, and a daughter of William and Hannah (Holmes) Redwood, her father being a half-brother to Abraham Redwood, founder of Redwood Library, at Newport, and her mother a granddaughter of Dr. John Rodman, Sr.

D., distinguished physician, philanthropist, and strenuous worker in the anti-slavery cause, who married Hannah Fisher, daughter of Miers and Sarah (Redwood) Fisher, was born in West Nantmeal township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, September 17, 1788, and was a descendant of Philip Price, native of Wales, who was one of the earliest settlers on borders of Welsh tract in Haverford township, Chester county, where the Buck Tavern afterwards stood, about six miles from Philadelphia. Philip Price was born about 1623, and was accompanied to this country by his wife and at least three children—Frances, married Thomas Reese, of Haverford; Sarah, married ——— Lewis; Isaac. He married (second) at age of eighty-five years, Margaret Morgan, also of Welsh extraction, aged twenty-five years, who survived him over a half century, dying in 1774. As above stated he first settled in Haverford township, but was later a resident of Upper Merion, where he died between 12mo. (February) 11, 1719, and 11mo. 22, 1720-1, the dates respectively of the making and probate of his will.

ISAAC PRICE, son of Philip Price, married, 1mo. 4, 1696, Susanna Shoemaker, at the house of Richard Waln. She was born at Creisheim, Rhenish Palatinate, daughter of George and Sarah Shoemaker, and accompanied her widowed mother and brother and sisters to Pennsylvania at age of thirteen years, in ship, "Jeffries," from London, 8mo. 12, 1685. Philip Price had purchased, 8mo. 6, 1697, of Frances Rawle, one thousand acres of land in Plymouth township, Philadelphia (now Montgomery) county, on which he settled his son, Isaac, who died there in February, 1796-7, leaving a son, Isaac, and two daughters, Mary and Gwen, both of whom died in their minority. Susanna, the widow, married William Courten and survived her husband many years.

ISAAC PRICE, JR., son of Isaac and Susanna (Shoemaker) Price, born 1705, was apprenticed October 7, 1720, with the consent of his mother, Susanna Courten, with Griffith Jones and Elizabeth, his wife, of Germantown. Jones and his wife had come from Bryn Mawr, near Dolgelly, Merionethshire, Wales, and was a preacher among Friends. On December 14, 1723, Griffith Jones was appointed by the Orphans' Court of Philadelphia county, as assistant guardian to Isaac Price, then eighteen years of age. Rowland Ellis, who had been appointed by the will of the father, by reason of his great age, declining to have full charge of the minor and his estate. On 4mo. 10, 1729, Isaac Price, Jr., married Margaret, granddaughter of Henry and Margaret Lewis, who had come from Narbeth, Pembroke-shire, Wales, 1682, and settled in Philadelphia county, where Henry Lewis was a member of the first Grand Jury. He died in 1688, leaving three children—Henry, Samuel and Elizabeth, the former of whom married Mary, daughter of Robert Taylor, of Springfield, Chester county, who had come from Cheshire, England, in the "Endeavor," 7mo. 29, 1683. Henry Lewis and Mary Taylor were married at the house of Bartholomew Coppock, 10mo. 20, 1692, and had children—Isaac, John, Sarah Margaret, born 8mo. 17, 1700, Mary and Hannah. Henry Lewis (2) was a member of Assembly, 1715-18, and held a number of other positions of trust. Isaac Price acquired title to the Plymouth plantation through the death of his sisters in their minority, and lived thereon until his death, 4mo., 1738, of small-pox. His widow, Margaret, died a month later of consumption. They were the parents of three children—Philip, Isaac and a daughter, all of whom, except Philip, died in their minority.

PHILIP PRICE, only surviving child of Isaac and Margaret (Lewis) Price, was born in Plymouth township, 11mo. 5, 1730. He married, 5mo. 13, 1752, Martha, daughter of Benjamin and Martha (Fisher) Bonsal, of Kingsessing, Philadelphia county, and granddaughter of Richard and Mary Bonsal, who came from Derbyshire, England, 1682, and were among the first members of Darby Meeting. Their son, Benjamin, born at Darby, 11mo. 3, 1687, died 1mo. 6, 1752; married Martha Fisher, and their daughter, Hannah, who married Philip Price, was born 11mo. 10, 1730. Philip Price died at Darby, 10mo. 17, 1811. Both were prominent and valued members of Friends Meeting. Their house in Kingsessing was the headquarters of General Sir William Howe, from 12mo. 12, to 12mo. 28, 1777, and a memoranda left by him shows that property to the value of four hundred and fifty pounds, five shillings, including sheep, cattle, horses and fences, was taken or destroyed by the soldiers.

He removed to East Caln, Chester county, bringing a certificate, dated 5mo. 31, 1731, and died 3mo. 2, 1787. He studied medicine under Dr. Joseph Parrish, and entering the Medical Department of University of Pennsylvania, graduated in 1811. He was assistant physician at the Pennsylvania Hospital for the years 1811-12, and then went as Surgeon on the ship, "Lancaster," to China. After the close of the war with England, he made another voyage in the brig, "Trader." He next went to Paris, to perfect himself in his medical studies, and spent three years there, attending lectures and hospitals, and returning to Philadelphia took up the practice of his profession. He became one of the staff in the Surgical Department of Pennsylvania Hospital in 1821. He married Hannah Fisher, October 4, 1820, and with her and their infant child went to Europe in 1823, and remained for four years. Returning in 1827, they located in Cincinnati, Ohio, where he practiced his profession, and became interested in a number of charitable and philanthropic institutions. He was active in the founding of hospitals, a home for aged people, a home for women and children, and many other worthy institutions. His home was always a place of refuge for the runaway slaves from across the river in Kentucky, and many fugitives were fed and sheltered by him and his estimable wife, and assisted on their way to Canada and freedom. Mrs. Price was a fitting helpmate for the philanthropic doctor, and the poorer patients of her husband received her kindly ministrations as nurse. During the cholera epidemic of 1850, she displayed almost as much interest in the unfortunate sufferers as if they had been of her own family, and finally contracted the disease and died October 4, 1850. Her husband survived her nearly ten years, dying September 27, 1860. Dr. William Price was a highly cultured man of more than ordinary intellectual ability and attainments. He was an excellent Latin, Hebrew and Greek scholar, and spoke French, German, Spanish and Italian fluently. He was of a kind and social disposition, and always took a deep interest in all that pertained to the improvement and interest of the community in which he lived. He was unanimously elected to the City Council of Cincinnati, and took an active interest in the betterment of her public schools and other institutions. He was elected to the State Senate of Ohio in 1833, and was active in securing the passage of many acts for the benefit of the schools and other institutions of the state and city.

He later acquired an interest in merchant vessels carrying on a foreign trade and became one of the largest importers of the city, founding the firm which still bears his name, in which his sons became partners, and after his death, in 1858, continued the extensive business under the firm name of Peter Wright & Sons.

Frances (Palmer) Wright died in Philadelphia, 1891.

Issue of Peter T. and Frances (Palmer) Wright:

WILLIAM REDWOOD WRIGHT, eldest son of Robert K. and Henrietta H. (Price) Wright, born in Philadelphia, December 16, 1846, was educated at the Germantown Academy. At the age of sixteen years he enlisted in company of Marks John Biddle, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry; in 1863 he enlisted in Henry D. Landis's battery of artillery, and in 1864 was commissioned Lieutenant of Company L, Sixth Pennsylvania Cavalry. On March 27, 1865, he was promoted to the rank of First Lieutenant, and was made Adjutant of the Sixth Regiment, Pennsylvania Cavalry.

At the close of the Civil War, William Redwood Wright became associated with the firm of Peter Wright's Sons, founded by his grandfather, and from 1870 to 1873 resided in the city of New York, where he had charge of a branch of the business of that firm. Returning to Philadelphia in 1873, he has since resided in that city. On May 29, 1891, he was appointed by Governor Pattison to fill an unexpired term as Treasurer of the city and county of Philadelphia, and his appointment being confirmed by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, June 12, he took charge of that office, June 23, 1891, and served until the termination of the term, January 4, 1892. He has since that date followed the business of a broker. He was a Presidential Electer in 1888 and again in 1892.

William Redwood Wright married Letitia Ellicott, daughter of George W. Carpenter, Jr., of "Phil-Ellena," Germantown, by his wife, Mary Rodman, daughter of Thomas Fisher, of "Wakefield," by his wife, Letitia Harvey, daughter of Jonathan Ellicott, of Ellicott City, Maryland, and great-great-granddaughter of Andrew Ellicott, of Callempton, Devonshire, who came to Pennsylvania, 1730, and settled in Bucks county. The latter was the grandfather of Andrew Ellicott, famous surveyor and mathematician, who, as commissioner for the United States, 1796-1800, surveyed and located the boundary between the United States and "The Possessions of His Catholic Majesty in America;" and was Surveyor-General of the United States.

PETER T. WRIGHT, JR., youngest son of Peter T. Wright, by his wife, Frances Palmer, born in Philadelphia, January 4, 1867, is Assistant Actuary of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company of Philadelphia, and has always resided in that city. He married, October 28, 1897, Mary Seal, daughter of Edward Betts, of Wilmington, Delaware, by his wife, Mary Rodman Tatnall, a descendant of Robert Tatnall, of Leicestershire, whose widow and children came to Philadelphia in 1724.

Mrs. Mary Seal (Betts) Wright's paternal ancestry is as follows:

CAPTAIN RICHARD BETTS, who descended from a family of that name located at Wood-house, near Wetherden, county Suffolk, England, as early as the fifteenth century, came to Ipswich, Massachusetts, from Hempstead, Hertfordshire, with his wife Johanna, 1648, and 1652 was one of party of New England Colonists that migrated to Newtown, Long Island.

Munsell's "History of Queens County" (1882), says of him, "Captain Richard Betts, whose public services appear for fifty years on every page of Newtown's history, came in 1648, to New England, but soon after to Newtown, where he acquired great influence. In the revolution of 1663 (in which he doubtless acquired the title of Captain) he bore a zealous part, and after the conquest of the New Netherlands by the English, was a member from Newtown of the Provincial Assembly held at Hempstead in 1665. In 1678 he was commissioned High Sheriff of 'Yorkshire upon Long Island' and retained the position until 1681. The Dutch government at New Amsterdam looked with suspicion upon the English settlements on Long Island, and the New England Colonists were much annoyed by their persecutions. Richard Betts, nominal leader of the Colony, became a bitter opponent of Director Pieter Stuyvesant. The English had planted their colony by permission of the Dutch Governor, but were refused a patent for the land. In 1656 Captain Richard Betts administered a severe blow to Director Stuyvesant by purchasing, of the Indians, the land for himself and fifty-five associates, at the rate of one shilling per acre. Capt. Richard Betts was a magistrate for a long series of years, and 'was more than once a member of the high court of assize, the supreme power in the Province,' after the establishment of English supremacy. He became an extensive landholder at the English Kills. His residence was here, in what is still (1882) known as 'the Old Betts House.' It is further said that here within sight of his bedroom he dug his own grave, in his one hundredth year, and from the former to the latter was carried in 1713. No headstone marks the grave but its absence may be accounted for from the fact that his sons were Quakers and abjured tombstones. The old house which we may enter by lifting the wrought iron latch of heavy construction, worn by the hands of many generations * * * is but one of several most ancient farm houses still carefully preserved for their antiquity, on the old Newtown road between Calvary Cemetery and Maurice Avenue."

THOMAS BETTS, second son of Captain Richard and his wife, Johanna, is described in the ancient deeds as "Gentleman" i. e., entitled to a coat-of-arms, and we know that he used the arms of the Betts of Woodhouse, near Wetherden, county Suffolk, England. He married, 1683, Mercy, daughter of Major Daniel Whitehead, and lived on a portion of the old homestead, serving as a magistrate until his death, in 1709. His widow married, 1711, Captain Joseph Sackett, whose first wife was Thomas Betts' sister, Elizabeth.

THOMAS BETTS, son of Thomas and Mercy (Whitehead) Betts, born at Newtown, August 14, 1689; married (first) Susanna Stevenson, May 5, 1713. She died March 25, 1723, and October 10, 1727, Thomas Betts purchased, of John Stevenson, a farm in Chesterfield township, Burlington county, New Jersey, and removed thither. He married (second), about 1725, Susanna, daughter of Nathaniel and Patience (Bull) Field, and great-granddaughter of Robert and Elizabeth (Taylor) Field, who were married in England in 1630. Thomas Betts and Susanna Field were married "out of unity," and September 14, 1730, Susanna makes the following quaint acknowledgement, the original of which is pasted in the old record book of Chesterfield Meeting:

"To the Monthly Meeting of Women friends in Chesterfield:

"friends it hath been a Long time in my mind to acquaint you with my desire to be in Unity with you I being sensible that the way of my Marying was Contrary to the discipline established amongst you which has been a great Exercise to my mind Now desiring the Unity & fellowship of those that follow Christ I conclude with Love.

"Ye 14th of Ye 7mo. 1730.

"Susanna Betts."

The Field family in England is a well-known one, supposed to be descended from Hubertus de la Feld, who is said to have come over from Normandy with William the Conqueror.

Osgood Field, of London, traces the family to John Fielde, of Horton, who lived to 1577. He was known as an astronomer of note; wrote many books, showing him to be much in advance of his time.

Robert Field, first of the family to come to America, was descended from one of the children of this John Fielde. He was born in 1605, married as his second wife, 1630, Elizabeth Taylor, and they sailed for America with Winthrop and Saltonstall. Their son, Robert, born 1631, married Susanna ———. Robert Field and his son, Robert, signed a remonstrance against the persecution of Quakers in 1657. Robert, the son, died in 1701. Nathaniel Field, son of Robert and Susanna, married at Flushing, Long Island, Patience Bull, of Barbadoes. Susanna, mother of Nathaniel, died in Burlington county, New Jersey, and letters of administration were granted to her son-in-law, Isaac Marriott, July 4, 1705, but the inventory of her estate was dated "5mo. 1, 1702." Nathaniel was living in Chesterfield in 1722, when he conveyed land in Queens county, Long Island, and died prior to 1742.

Sometime between 1742 and 1746, Thomas Betts removed from Chesterfield, New Jersey, to Newtown, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, where he died of small-pox, May 31, 1747, leaving a will dated at Newtown, February 23, 1746-47.

ZACHARIAH BETTS, son of Thomas Betts, by his second wife, Susanna Field, was born October 17, 1736. He was a joiner or cabinet-maker and resided for a number of years in Solebury, Bucks county, removing in 1783 to Upper Makefield township, where he purchased a plantation of two hundred and seventeen acres, on the river road, about a mile above Washington's Crossing, where he died February 24, 1808. His earlier residence, during the Revolutionary War, while in Solebury, was near the line of Makefield township, and only a few miles from the scene of Washington's crossing of the Delaware on Christmas night, 1776. Just prior to this occurrence a number of Washington's officers were quartered at Zachariah Betts and Washington frequently met them there. Zachariah Betts was frequently called upon to guide Washington in his examination of the roads and their courses, bearing, etc.; in that way he became very well acquainted with the great man. He left this testimony that he had seen Washington frequently retire to a secluded spot in the orchard back of the house, and there kneeling in supplication silently implore the Most High for strength for his great undertakings, and on his return to the house his countenance was brightened and more hopeful, having evidently strength and support for his arduous duties.

Zachariah Betts married (first), June 7, 1764, Rachel Bye, of Buckingham; (second), in 1770, Bethula Carey, and (third), April 20, 1779, Mary Lacey, the record of the latter marriage at Wrightstown Meeting giving his residence as Solebury township. His will names his wife, Mary, and son, Thomas, as executors.

JESSE BETTS, eldest child of Zachariah and Rachel (Bye) Betts, married, 1787, Hannah, daughter of Benjamin and Deborah (Taylor) Paxson, and their children were: Rachel, Deborah (neither of whom married), Benjamin, Mahlon, Charles. In 1812 the whole family moved to Wilmington, Delaware. Jesse Betts started in business there as a carpenter and builder. He built the Meetinghouse at Fourth and West streets and many other of the larger buildings of that day.

MAHLON BETTS, second son of Jesse and Hannah (Paxson) Betts, learned the trade of a carpenter with his father, and later entered into partnership with his brother, Benjamin, and conducted that business for two or three years, when Mahlon purchased a small iron foundry and later, in partnership with Samuel Pusey, started into the business of car building. Later they undertook the building of iron steamboats, which was the first attempt of that kind in the United States. This venture was the foundation of the Harlan & Hollingsworth Company, known generally as a prominent ship-building firm.

Mahlon Betts married, 1818, Mary, daughter of Joshua and Lydia (Richards) Seal, and had children: Lydia, Emily, Edward, William, Thomas, Joshua, Alfred and Mary.

EDWARD BETTS, son of Mahlon and Mary (Seal) Betts, born May 27, 1825, married, September 25, 1851, Mary Rodman, born July 17, 1827, died July 1, 1897.

daughter of Edward and Margery (Paxson) Tatnall, an account of whose family is given elsewhere in these volumes. They were the parents of six children, of whom the youngest was Mary Seal Betts, born June 3, 1870, who married Peter T. Wright, Jr. Mr. and Mrs. Wright have no children. Through her great-grandmother, Hannah (Paxson) Betts, Mrs. Wright is a descendant of Thomas Canby, the eminent Bucks county Friend, through the marriage of Jane Canby, daughter of Thomas, to Thomas Paxson. An account of the Canby family and its English ancestry will be found elsewhere in these volumes.

OGDEN FAMILY.

The surname of Ogden is of Saxon origin, being derived from the Saxon words, Ock, an oak tree, and den, a local termination implying a covert or feeding place for animals, the word being synonymous with dean, a wooded valley; freely rendered, "an Oak Valley," "Oak dale," "Vale of Oaks" and "Leafy Dale." All of the escutcheons of arms borne by the Ogden families in England contained the oak branch or oak leaves and acorns.

The earliest discoverable ancestor of the Philadelphia family of Ogden, was Robert Ogden or Okeden, mentioned as a witness to grant of land in Nutley, Hampshire, in 1453. He is later mentioned in connection with a Joan Okeden, who it is presumed was his wife. They had sons, Richard and William Okeden.

Richard Okeden married, March 8, 1593, Mabel de Hoogan, daughter of Johannes de Hoogan, of the parish of Lyndhurst, Hampshire, and had sons, John, William, and Robert, the line of the latter becoming extinct in 1613. William, the second son of Richard, married, in 1539, Abigail Goodsall, and had children, Edward, Abigail and Charles; of these, Edward, born 1540, married, in 1563, Margaret Wilson, and through his son, Thomas, who married Elizabeth Sanford, was ancestor of the Ogden family of Rye, Westchester county, New York; and through his son, Richard, born 1568, married, 1592, Elizabeth Huntingdon, was grandfather of John Ogden, born 1609, died 1683, who married Jane Bond, in 1637, and emigrated to Southampton, Long Island, in 1640. He was ancestor of the Ogden family of Elizabethtown, New Jersey.

John Okeden, the other son of Richard and Mabel (de Hoogan) Okeden, born 1610, died 1687, married, 1639, Mary Hall, and is ancestor of the Ogden family of Fairfield, Connecticut, and the Southern New Jersey family.

WILLIAM OGDEN, son of Robert, first mentioned, born in Hampshire, married Agnes Hamlyn, daughter and heiress of John Hamlyn, and resided at Ellingham, Southampton county, England, where his will was dated September 8, 1517, and was proven during the same year. He had children, John, Richard, Jane, Elizabeth and Alice.

JOHN OGDEN, son of William and Agnes, of Ellingham, county of Southampton, married Jane Mollineux, daughter of Hugh Mollineux, and had children, William, Philip, Agnes.

PHILIP OGDEN, of Ellingham, county of Southampton, son of John and Jane (Mollineux) Ogden, married (first) Alice, daughter of William Sharye, of Sarum; and (second) Bridget, daughter of William Kelloway. By the first marriage he had issue, two daughters, Jane and Anne, and by the second two sons, William and John.

WILLIAM OGDEN, son of Philip and Bridget, of Ellingham, married, 1598, Elizabeth, daughter of George and Margarey (Miller) Uvedale, of Purbeck. She died in 1629, and he in 1664. Their only known child was,

EDMUND OGDEN, who succeeded to the estate of his grandfather, George Uvedale, in 1629. His son, William Ogden, of Crichel, was a member of Parliament for Corfe Castle, and died in 1694. Mary, wife of William, died ten years earlier than her husband.

JOHN OGDEN, the other son of Philip and Bridget (Kelloway) Ogden, was granted arms by Charles II. for services rendered to his father, Charles I., which are described as follows: "Girony of eight, argent and gules, in dexter chief an oak branch, fructed proper." Crest, "An Oak tree proper with lion rampant against it." Motto, "Et si ostendo non jacto."

JONATHAN OGDEN, son of John, above-named, had a son whose name was either Jonathan or David, who was father of the Pennsylvania emigrant, DAVID OGDEN, born near London, in the county of Surrey, who came to Pennsylvania in the "Welcome," with William Penn, arrived off the Capes of Delaware, October 24, 1682. He brought with him a certificate, dated 11mo. 21, 1681-2, from the Friends Meeting in London, which was deposited at Philadelphia Monthly Meeting in Pennsylvania. He later located in Middletown township, Chester county, where two hundred acres of land were surveyed to him June 27, 1684, by virtue of warrant, dated in 1683, and he later purchased two hundred acres adjoining. Two sisters accompanied or followed him to Pennsylvania, Hannah Ogden, who resided for a time at Merion, and married (first) Robert Barbour, who came over with his parents, John and Elizabeth (Songhurst) Barbour, in the "Welcome," and (second) William Hudson, a prominent business man of Philadelphia, and Sarah Ogden, who married Isaac Williams, of Chester county, Pennsylvania. The arms, above described, were used by David Ogden in Philadelphia.

On 11mo. 4, 1685, David Ogden declared intentions of marriage at Chester Meeting, with Martha, daughter of John and Ann Houlston, who had settled near Ogden, in Middletown. John Houlston is supposed to have been the same John Houlston, who with others, was arrested at a Friends Meeting in Wales, 12mo. 5, 1660, and was imprisoned for fifteen years for refusing to take required oath. David Ogden and Martha Houlston were married at Middletown, 2mo. 12, 1686. Both were active members of Friends Meeting and served as overseers and elders. He was one of the committee to collect funds to build the meetinghouse at Middletown, in 1690. He died 8mo. 27, 1705, and his widow, Martha, married (second) James Thomas, of Whiteland, Chester county, in 1710.

Issue of David and Martha (Houlston) Ogden:

JONATHAN OGDEN, b. 2mo. 19, 1687; d. 6mo., 1727; m. Ann Robertson; of whom presently;

Martha Ogden, b. 5mo. 23, 1689; living 1720;

Stephen Ogden, b. 11mo. 12, 1795; d. 9mo. 16, 1760; m. Hannah Surman.

JONATHAN OGDEN, eldest son of David and Martha, lived and died in the town of Chester. He was the owner and proprietor of the ancient hostelry, "Boar's Head," where the Delaware House now stands, and where William Penn passed the winter of 1682-3. He devised it to his sons, David and Joseph, and it remained in the family for several generations. It was burned on 3mo. 20, 1848. Jonathan Ogden, prior to his purchase of the "Boar's Head Inn," was a farmer in Middletown township, purchasing, 2mo. 3, 1710, one hundred and thirty-four acres of land adjoining the Ogden homestead. He married, in 1720, Ann, daughter of George and Catharine Robinson.

Issue of Jonathan and Catherine (Robinson) Ogden:

David Ogden, b. 1723; m. Zebiah Wollaston;

JOSEPH OGDEN, b. 1725; d. 1mo. 18, 1805; m., 9mo. 21, 1751, Jemima Hewes; of whom presently;

Catharine, b. at Chester, 1727.

JOSEPH OGDEN, second son of Jonathan and Ann (Robinson) Ogden, born at Chester in 1725, removed to Philadelphia on attaining manhood, and was for over half a century prominent in the affairs of that city. He brought a certificate from Chester Monthly Meeting, dated 11mo. 30, 1748, which he produced at Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, held 12mo. 24, 1748, and on 7mo. 29, 1749, obtained a certificate from the Philadelphia Meeting to London, England, and sailing from Philadelphia, 8mo. 6th, landed in London, 9mo. 19, 1749. While there he visited relatives of his grandfather, David Ogden, and brought back with him a copper plate of the Coat-of-Arms, granted to his great-great-great-grandfather, John Ogden, by Charles II., which he used on his books and papers in later years. His trip to England was, however, a business one, and while there he became the American representative of the large mercantile house of Neale and Neave, of London, with whom he was associated for many years. Returning he brought a certificate from the Friends' Meeting at London, dated 11mo. 24, 1756, which was recorded at Philadelphia Meeting 3mo. 31, 1757. He followed the mercantile trade for the next seventeen years and probably much longer, and some of the notions imported by him are still prized possessions of his great-granddaughter, Mary (Cuthbert) Gillespie, who also has one of his age-stained books, printed in 1729, which has the Ogden Arms stamped upon it. The curtailing of imports from Great Britain, resulting from the passage of the Stamp Act and consequent Non-importation Agreement of 1765, was the probable cause of Joseph Ogden seeking other employment. On 8mo. 10, 1767, he was licensed, by Lieutenant Governor John Penn, to keep a public house at the corner of Chestnut and Third streets, and three years later, on the death of John Humphrey, tenant of the Middle Ferry, over Schuylkill (Market street), he was granted the lease, continued as its proprietor during the trying times of the Revolutionary War, and probably until the erection of a permanent bridge there in 1801. He was imprisoned by the British in 1777, for placing impediments in their way at the ferry and aiding citizens on the west side of the river to escape their brutality. During the war he issued fractional currency in paper form that was readily received by storekeepers and teamsters as far west as Pittsburgh, and which was redeemed in cash at the close of the war.

Joseph Ogden suffered heavy losses of property from the flood in the Schuylkill in the spring of 1784, all his stables, fences, storehouse, boats and horses being washed away, and he and his family came near losing their lives. The sudden rising of the water and breaking up of the heavy ice in the river in the night leaving them stranded in the upper story of the house three hundred paces from any dry land, and the first story of the house entirely submerged in a rushing current, filled with floating ice. He and his family were, however, rowed safely ashore in the morning. A graphic account of their adventures and the disastrous flood appears in the Pennsylvania Packet and General Advertiser of 3mo. 14, 1784, and is also mentioned in Jacob Hiltzheimer's Diary. Joseph Ogden financially assisted John Fitch in his steamboat experiments on the Schuylkill, and granted him the use of his ferry, where the first steamboat to carry passengers was launched, 7mo. 26, 1786, twenty years before Fulton launched his first boat, which had its inception in the knowledge gained by young Fulton in assisting Fitch to operate a later boat on Collect Pond, New York. Joseph Ogden prospered in his business undertakings and became a large real estate owner in Philadelphia and elsewhere. He owned a great number of houses and lots on High (Market), Chestnut, Walnut, Arch, Filbert, Broad, Lombard and Pine streets, amounting to several blocks. With Peter Evans, he owned fifty acres of land on Alloways creek, in Salem county, New Jersey, and he and Josiah Hewes became seized of "sundry tracts of land in Hampshire county, Virginia, on the south branch of Potomack," received for a debt, probably the result of his mercantile dealings, which extended through the southern colonies and New England. He also owned a one-sixth part of Hog Island, bought of the Boon family. He was a member of the Philadelphia Society for Promoting Agriculture in 1788; a charter member of Diligent Fire Company, organized at the Spread Eagle Tavern on Market street, near Eighth, then kept by Frederick Hubley; was Clerk of Market and Regulator of Weights and Measures, 1791. He died on January 18, 1805, in his eighty-first year. His will, dated 1mo. 11, 1805, devises a farm in Chester township to Joseph, Sarah, Rebecca and Sabina Ogden, grandchildren of his brother, David Ogden. He was possessed of a large amount of silver plate, with the Ogden Arms engraved thereon, some of which is still in possession of his descendant, T. Guilford Smith, of Buffalo, New York. Joseph Ogden married, 9mo. 21, 1751, Jemima, born 1728, daughter of Moses and Sarah (Blythe) Hewes, who survived him, dying 6mo. 30, 1817, at the age of eighty-nine.

Issue of Joseph and Jemima (Hewes) Ogden:

He was a coach-maker, and was one of the original members of Reliance Fire Company, organized by Friends, mainly members of Bank Meeting. He died February 18, 1813. He was married at Gloria Dei (Old Swedes') Protestant Episcopal Church, Southwark, 10mo. 16, 1783, to Anna Dorothea, born 2mo. 8, 1754, died 8mo. 6, 1844, daughter of John Melchior and Mary (Colladay) Meng, and granddaughter of Christopher Meng, born in Manheim, Germany, 1697, married there, June 29, 1723, Anna Dorothea Bauman Von Elsten, and was one of the two hundred Palatines who landed at Philadelphia from the ship, "Mortonhouse," Captain John Coultas, August 24, 1728. He settled at Germantown, and he and his son, John Melchior Meng, were among the members and trustees of the Church of Market Square and trustees of the old Germantown Academy, where the children of the latter were educated. "Meng's Garden" with its rare old trees is now Vernon Park.

JOHN MELCHIOR OGDEN, second son of Hugh and Anna Dorothea (Meng) Ogden, born in Philadelphia, 1mo. 19, 1791, was well educated in the Friends' schools of his day and at an early age was apprenticed to the carpenter trade. He became one of the prominent architects and builders of Philadelphia, his knowledge of architecture placing him in the front rank, and he built or superintended the construction of many of the largest structures in the city. He cast his first presidential vote for James Madison, whose wife was a friend of his mother, and was one of the last survivors of the Washington Association of the Federal Party. He was very prominent in benevolent work and associations in the city; was for forty-one years one of the managers of the Northern Dispensary, and its president many years prior to his death; one of the incorporators of Grandon Institute in 1841, and its president for thirty-four years; manager of House of Refuge for forty years; founder and manager of Northern Home for Friendless Children; incorporator and president of Preston Retreat for thirty years; founder and president of Spring Garden Soup Society; member Washington Benevolent Society; one of the founders of the Apprentices' Library; member of board of managers of Pennsylvania Institute for Feeble-minded Children, and was connected with the Spring Garden Institute for twenty years. He joined the Carpenters' Company, 7mo. 24, 1816, and was Warden and Master of Trades. He was one of the commissioners in charge of the building of the Philadelphia Almshouse, at the cost of a million dollars, in 1828. Was one of the founders of United States Fire Engine Company, which required each member to own and produce two buckets at the scene of a fire. His son, Edward H. Ogden, now has two buckets carried by him. He also helped to found the Fire Association in 1817, and was its Building Surveyor. Was president of the board of commissioners of Spring Garden District, and was commissioned by the legislature, in 1836, to superintend the laying out of streets in Northern Liberties, Spring Garden and Kensington. Represented his district in the Legislature in 1832-3, and was tendered the nomination for Congress in 1848, but declined. He was one of the projectors of the Northern Liberties and Penn Township Railroad, connecting the Delaware and Schuylkill, via Willow street, the first passenger railroad in Philadelphia, and president of the company; was one of the incorporators and a director of the Bank of Penn Township, now Penn National Bank, and the founder of the Philadelphia Society for Organized Charity, and chairman of its Board of Commissioners. He died 10mo. 29, 1882. He married, 4mo. 4, 1818, Harriet, born 5mo. 3, 1797, died 3mo. 19, 1870, daughter of Gabriel and Elizabeth (Radford) Middleton. In the same year he engaged in the wholesale drug business with his brother-in-law, T. Morris Perot. In 1862 this firm invented an army hospital and medical wagon, which was adopted by the United States government, and used extensively during the Civil War. Edward H. Ogden was First Sergeant of Company C, Thirty-second Regiment, Pennsylvania Militia, and was at the shelling of Carlisle, July 1, 1863. TYSON FAMILY.

The former township and borough of Germantown, in the county of Philadelphia, now part of the city of Philadelphia, was founded and first settled by a number of persons, all or nearly all from Crefeld (or vicinity), a city situate in the lower Rhine provinces within a few miles of the Holland border. On March 10, 1682, William Penn, Proprietary of Pennsylvania, conveyed to Jacob Telner, a resident of Crefeld, also a merchant in Amsterdam; Jan Streypers, merchant, of Kaldkirchen, a village in the vicinity of Crefeld, even nearer Holland; and Dirck Sipman, of Crefeld, each five thousand acres of land to be laid out in Pennsylvania. On June 11, 1683, Penn conveyed to Govert Remke, Lenert Arets, and Jacob Isaacs Van Bebber, all of Crefeld, one thousand acres of land each; and they, with Telner, Streypers, and Sipman, constituted the six original Crefeld purchasers of the site of Germantown, who were pledged to Penn to send a certain number of colonists to that locality. Very soon thereafter, thirteen men, some with families, in all thirty-three persons, nearly all relatives, from Crefeld and vicinity, went from Rotterdam to London, whence, through James Claypoole, the Quaker merchant of the latter city, they obtained passage in the ship "Concord," which left England, July 24, 1683, and arrived in Philadelphia, October 6, 1683. These thirteen, heads of families or single men of full age, were: Lenert Arets, Abraham op den Graeff, Dirck op den Graeff, Herman op den Graeff, Willem Streypers (brother of Jan, the purchaser), Thones Kunders, Reynier Teisen, Jan Seimens, Peter Kuerlis, Johannes Bleikers, Jan Lucken and Abraham Tunes. These were practically all, as their names show, of the Holland-Dutch stock, and though living within the borders of the Palatinate, not Palatines such as constituted the bulk of the later German emigration to Pennsylvania. They were not of a peasant race, like those later Palatine immigrants, but a free burgher stock, akin to that which first settled New Netherland, and before this had held sway on the Delaware river. Neither were these men mere citizens, as some too hasty writers have averred, but, in the proportion of their times, manufacturers and employers of labor.

Certain record searchers, finding the style "Weaver" affixed to some of their names in deeds, wills, etc., and forgetting that such documents in those times drew no distinction between master and man, have represented them in the humblest capacity, but deeper study shows them to have been the true prototypes of the great textile manufacturers of to-day. Many of them have been proven descended from families high in church or state, or in that scholastic class held in high honor in Teutonic medieval Europe.

REYNIER TEISEN, as he wrote his own name, or Reynier Tyson, as it became to his English compatriots, was a young man, believed to have been unmarried, when he settled with the others in Germantown. His family connection with the other colonists was through his sister, the wife of Jan Streypers, one of the six original purchasers above mentioned. William Streypers, one of the thirteen colonists, was brother to Jan, and the wives of Thones Kunders, and Lenert Arets were sisters to Jan and William Streypers; the three Op den Graeffs were cousins to the Streypers, and Herman op den Graeff's wife was a daughter of Jacob Isaacs Van Bebbber, one of the purchasers. Thus the connection ran through nearly the whole company of Dutch pioneers.

Reynier Tyson was named in Penn's charter of August 12, 1689, as one of the original incorporators of the borough of Germantown. He served as a Burgess in 1692-93-94-96. He was a member of a coroner's jury summoned by Coroner James de la Plaine, 4mo. 24, 1701. On March 1, 1700-1, then a resident of Germantown, he bought of John Colley, of Philadelphia, two hundred and fifty acres of land in Abington township, Philadelphia (now Montgomery) county, soon after that date went there to live, continuing there the rest of his life.

Reynier Tyson is said to have been first a Mennonite, but seems to have become a member of the Society of Friends before leaving Germany, as a memorial of him in The Friend (Philadelphia 1857, vol. xxx, p. 229), says, "Reinier Tyson was born in Germany, in or about the year 1659. He was convinced of the Truth whilst living there, and for his faithfulness thereto suffered persecution. He removed to Pennsylvania a few years after William Penn first obtained the Province and he settled himself within the limits of Abington Monthly Meeting, then called Dublin. He continued faithful to the manifestations of Truth received, and grew in the esteem of his friends to a father in the church. In the year 1725, he was appointed an elder, and continued faithful in fulfilling the duties of the station until prevented by age, and indisposition. His friends say 'He was innocent and inoffensive in life and conversation, and diligent in attending his religious meetings.' He lived, beloved and honored, to good old age, dying on the 27th of the Seventh month, 1745; aged about 86 Years."

He was one of the signers of the address issued by the Quarterly Meeting of Philadelphia to London Yearly Meeting, which Samuel Jennings bore with him to London in 1693, concerning the Keith controversy. Germantown, where he first settled, as well as his later residence, Abington township, was within the compass of Abington Monthly Meeting, so that all his efforts in religious affairs were accomplished within the latter body; an account of some of these, extracted from the Monthly Meeting minutes, follows:

At the Monthly Meeting held 2mo. 29, 1695. "It is agreed upon at this Meeting that four Friends belonging to the Monthly Meeting, be appointed to take Care of ye Youth belonging to Each Meeting, as Concerneing their Orderly walking, as becomes ye Truth they make profession of; according to ye good advice of Friends in an Epistle from ye yearly Meeting at Burlington 1694; whereupon Richard Wall is appointed for Cheltenham, Richard Whitefield for Oxford, John Carver for ye uper township, and Ryner Tyson for Ger-Town."

12mo. 24, 1695. "Whereas this Meeting having taken into Consideration ye good advice of ffrriends from ye last Yearly Meeting, to put in practice their Counsel to admonish those yt profess Gods Truth, and do not walk answerable thereunto: This Meeting have chosen Richard Whitefield, & Edward Orphood, to inspect into Oxford Meeting, Ryner Tyson and Arnold Clinkin to Inspect into Germantown Meeting: &c."

12mo. 24, 1717: (he having long before this left Germantown for Abington) It was reported that Friends of Abington Meeting had chosen Reynier Tyson to visit families. 3mo. 27, 1723, he was appointed to assist Germantown Friends in visiting families; (probably because of his familiar knowledge of them). 5mo.

25, 1725: "Whereas It hath been Desired & thought Expedient that one more Elder belonging to Each Particular Meeting should Attend those Meetings when Friends of ye Ministry Do Meet: In order thereunto ye Meeting have made Choice of Rynier Tyson for Abington, Tho: Roberts for Germantown, John Duncan for Byberry." This is the appointment mentioned in The Friend's account of Reynier Tyson above quoted. 8mo. 30, and subsequent meetings in the year 1732: Mention is made of a difference between Rynier Tyson and John Streeper, about some land. This John Streeper was a son of William Streepers, and the land was a tract in Bucks county, belonging to the latter's brother Jan Streepers, then deceased. Reynier Tyson had no personal interest in the quarrel except as a relative of both parties, and represented Jan Streepers' children who lived in Holland, from whom he held a letter of attorney. The whole matter is threshed out at great length in numerous letters from both parties, preserved in a MS. volume in the Library of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, called "Streeper Papers." It came before the Meeting in later years. 8mo. 27, 1735, Reynier Tyson was again chosen by Germantown Particular Meeting to visit families; (perhaps he had returned to Germantown to live for a while, though he certainly went back to Abington again later).

In Reynier Tyson's day, Abington Monthly Meeting belonged to Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting. He was appointed by the former as a representative to the latter, on 6mo. 26, 1695; 3mo. 25, 1696; 12mo. 26, 1698; 12mo. 27, 1709; 6mo. 29; 8mo. 31, 1715; 11mo. 30, 1720; and 8mo. 28, 1728. He was appointed an overseer of Abington Particular Meeting, 1mo. 25, 1706, for "this next year;" and again 8mo. 30, 1709. On 11mo. 25, 1719, the minutes say, "Abington Friends have chosen Reice Peters Overseer in ye Room of Ryner Tyson." As overseers seem them to have been appointed annually he could hardly have been serving since the last mentioned appointment in 1709, so he was most likely appointed in 1718, though the minutes do not record it. He was again appointed an Overseer 11mo. 27, 1723-4 for the ensuing year.

By the will of Reynier Tyson, dated December 21, 1741, proved October 26, 1745, registered in Philadelphia county Wills (Will Book H, p. 63), he being then of Abington, he left to his grandson Matthew Tyson (son of his son Matthias) £6; this to bar all heirs of Matthias Tyson from further claim; said Matthias having received his full share in his life time; to his sons, John, Abraham, Derrick, and Peter, six pounds each; to son, Henry, eight pounds; to daughters, Elizabeth Lucken and Sarah Kirk, six pounds each; to daughter, Elizabeth Lucken, "all my Dutch Books;" certain goods to be equally divided between sons, John, Abraham, Derrick, Peter and Henry, and daughters, Elizabeth Lucken and Sarah Kirk; to granddaughter, Abigail Tyson, "My riding horse;" residue of estate to his executor for his personal use, said executor to be his son, Isaac Tyson; in receipt of their respective legacies all the other children to deliver to the executor any writings in their possession belonging to the testator or relating to his affairs. Reynier Tyson's wife's Christian name was Mary, but her surname and when and where they were married is unknown.

MATTHIAS TYSON, eldest son of Reynier and Mary Tyson, was born in Germantown, 6mo. 31, 1686. His name was, properly in Dutch, Mattis, but usually translated into English as Matthias, and in the next generation further anglicized to Matthew. He removed with his parents from Germantown to Abington township, Philadelphia (now Montgomery) county, where he continued to live, dying there in April or May, 1727. He married, in 1st month, 1708 (at Abington Monthly Meeting, held 1mo. 29, 1708, the marriage was reported as having taken place since last meeting, but no exact date is given) to Mary Potts, of Germantown, daughter of John Potts, of Llanidloss, Wales. By his will dated April 8, and proved May 12, 1727 (registered, Philadelphia County Will Book E, p. 46), he devised to his wife, Mary, for life or during widowhood, the use of all his estate, real and personal; if she married again (which she did) she was to have one-third of the estate, plus ten pounds; the remaining two-thirds, less the ten pounds, to be then equally divided between his eight children—Margaret, Mary, Reynear, John, Sarah, Isaac, Elizabeth, and Matthew; his wife was made executrix, and it was directed that the children be brought up under her care.

Mary (Potts) Tyson, widow of Matthias, married (second) 11mo., 1732, Thomas Fitzwater, permission granted by Abington Meeting, 10mo. 25, 1732, and the marriage reported at the next meeting, 11mo. 29, as having been accomplished meanwhile. The Fitzwater family was one of great prominence politically and socially in Abington township and vicinity, and also in the city of Philadelphia, where a principal street is named for it. The Fitzwaters intermarried a number of times with the Tyson family.

Issue of Matthias and Mary (Potts) Tyson:

- Margaret, b. 12mo. 7, 1708-9; m., 8mo. 23, 1729, William Hallowell;
 Mary, b. 3mo. 25, 1710; m., 10mo. 18, 1729, Ellis Lewis;
 Reynear, b. 6mo. 24, 1711; m., 3mo. 29, 1739, Grace Fletcher;
 John, b. 12mo. 20, 1712; d., unkm., 1742, as evidenced by his will, dated Feb. 28, proved April 10, 1742, by which he devised his whole estate, including real estate to be sold by his executors, to his mother, Mary Fitzwater, and brothers and sisters, viz.; Rynear (executor), Isaac, Matthew, Margaret Hallowell, Mary Lewis and Elizabeth Tyson. He lived in Upper Dublin twp., Philadelphia co.;

 Elizabeth, b. 9mo. 14, 1716; d. in childhood;

 Matthew, b. 7mo. 1720; d. in childhood;
 Martha, b. 3mo. 12, 1722; d. before 1727; as she is not mentioned in her father's will;
 Elizabeth, b. 10mo. 15, 1723; m., 4mo., 1742, John Fitzwater;
 Matthew, b. 1725; d. inf.;
 Matthew, b. 1mo. 14, 1727; m., 5mo. 1, 1755, Mary Fitzwater.

ISAAC TYSON, son of Reynier and Mary, was born in Germantown, November 7.

1688, and died in Abington, September 8, 1766. (Abington Monthly Meeting register of deaths, has under year 1766, "Isaac Tyson, Senr., of Abington interred 9mo. 11, aged 77 years, 1 month 22 days," which would make the day of his death the 9th). He removed with his parents from Germantown to Abington township, where he lived the remainder of his life. He married Sarah Jenkins; permission was granted by Abington Meeting, 2mo. 24, 1727, and at next meeting, 3mo. 29, the marriage was reported orderly accomplished. She was daughter of Stephen and Abigail (Pemberton) Jenkins, of Abington township, and granddaughter of Phineas Pemberton, of Bucks county, Provincial Councillor, etc. The children of Isaac Tyson as compiled from Abington Monthly Meeting marriage register are possibly incomplete, there being no list of his children on the birth registry:

- Abigail, m., 4mo. 7, 1763, Albrick Bird, his second wife, his first being her mother's first cousin, Rachel, daughter of Isaac and Priscilla (Pemberton) Waterman;
- Lydia, m., 5mo. 9, 1765, Jacob Coffin;
- Isaac, b. about 1733; d. 1811; m. (first), 12mo. 22, 1772, Sarah Cleaver; (second), 6mo. 20, 1782, Lydia Tompkins;
- Israel, d. 3mo. 16, 1769; probably unm.; he signed marriage certificates of his two sisters, and his death is recorded at Abington;
- Thomas, mentioned in will of his cousin, Thomas, son of Peter; m. Elizabeth ———, and moved to Cheltenham twp.

Isaac Tyson seems to have married a second time as, on his dying intestate, letters of administration on his estate were granted October 22, 1766, to "Lydia Tyson, widow of said Isaac Tyson, deceased" (Philadelphia County Administration Book H, p. 32), and perhaps his children with the exception of Abigail, were by the second wife.

JOHN TYSON, son of Reynier and Mary, was born in Germantown, 10mo. (December) 9, 1692, and removed with his parents to Abington township in his childhood, where he lived until his death 6mo. (June) 1, 1775. Abington Monthly Meeting Register has under the year 1775, "John Tyson, of Abington, died 6mo. 1, inter'd 3, Aged 82 yrs. 5mo. 2da." "A member of this Meeting." Like his father, he was active in the affairs of Abington Monthly Meeting, and was appointed a representative from it to Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting, 11mo. 27, 1734; 8mo. 31, 1737; 8mo. 30, 1738, and 11mo. 30, 1743. From 1740 to 1750 he served on about a dozen more or less important committees of the Monthly Meeting, but none sufficiently so as to need especial mention. When the Monthly Meeting's membership became so large that the particular Meetings sent regular representatives to it for transacting the business, though all members were privileged to attend, John Tyson was frequently, from 1747 to 1750, and almost continuously thereafter, chosen one of the two representatives from Abington Meeting, until 11mo. 25, 1754, the last date of his service. He was appointed an overseer of Abington Particular Meeting, 1mo. 30, 1735, and served until a successor was appointed, 3mo. 28, 1739; and again 10mo. 28, 1747, serving until 12mo. 30, 1754. About this time his differences with various members of the Meeting became so pronounced, that he either lost interest in its affairs, or it became inconsistent for him to longer hold official positions in it. His first difference, that with Benjamin Hallowell, will be more appropriately taken up later; the next was on 5mo. 27, 1754, when John Tyson complained to the Monthly Meeting against Anthony Williams, and at the Meeting held 6mo. 24, 1754. "The Frds. apptd. on the affair of Jno Tyson & Anty. Williams, Report they met thereon & heard the parties & are of opinion that the parties had best drop the same & carry it no further, to which this Mtg. agrees, & the parties being present are desired to take notice thereof." But the next was more serious; at the Monthly Meeting held 3mo. 26, 1756, William Hallowell complained of John Tyson for not paying a debt and for endeavoring to hurt his (Hallowell's) reputation; the meeting as usual appointed a committee to investigate, who at the next meeting, 5mo. 31, reported that John refused to meet them. From the minutes of the next meeting, 5mo. 28, "It appears that John Tyson hath complied with the minuit of Last Mo. Mtg. in choosing men in order to Settle a Difference between him and Willm Hallowell and yt it is accordingly Settled as with respect to Property But no further: it is therefore the judgment of this m:g, that the said John Tyson ought to make Satisfaction in writing," etc. But on 7mo. 26, "John Tyson being present and appearing in a Contentious Letegious Disposition instead of giving the Satisfaction required, it is therefore the Sence and judgment of this m:g that any further postponing of the affair will be to no good purpose, and therefore a Testification is ordered to be Prepared to disown him and produc'd to next m:o m:g." But the case was postponed, and finally at the meeting of 10mo. 25, 1756, "John Tyson produced a written acknowledgment for Committing Something to writing tending to Extenuate the Character of Willm Hallowell, which was read and Recd as satisfactory." (The word "extenuate" is here used in a sense unusual nowadays, but perfectly correctly, as Webster's Dictionary gives as some of its meanings, "to lessen; to diminish; to lower or degrade, as reputation or honor"). Of course, after the threatened disownment, any activity in the Meeting's affairs, on the part of John Tyson, could not be expected; and, in fact, he ceased any active part in them after 1754.

By deed dated 4mo. (June) 1, 1717, John Tyson bought of Benjamin Hallowell one hundred and fifty acres of land in Abington township, Philadelphia (now Montgomery) county; part of two hundred and five acres, which was Benjamin Hallowell's moiety or half part of four hundred and ten acres, which his father John Hallowell had put in trust for his two sons, Samuel and Benjamin, to be divided when they were both of the age of twenty-one years, and which in turn was part of six hundred and thirty acres which John Hallowell had purchased. Here John Tyson dwelt the remainder of his life. Many years after his purchase, John Tyson had a dispute with Benjamin Hallowell as to their boundary line, and at Abington Meeting, 11mo. 26, 1753, Benjamin Hallowell complained of John Tyson "in a case of property," but as John was not present it was not taken up until the next Monthly Meeting, held 12mo. 31, 1753, when the parties themselves chose referees to meet at John Tyson's the 14th of the next month, at 10 o'clock. A satisfactory conclusion was reached, as shown by a minute of the meeting of 2mo. 25, 1754: "The ffrds appointed to fix the Corner Stones between Benjamin Hallowell's and Jno Tyson's lands, report the same done."

John Tyson married (first), 9mo. (November), 1720, Priscilla Naylor; (Abington Monthly Meeting granting permission 8mo. 31, 1720). She was no doubt a daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Naylor, who in 1683 came from Monyash, county Derby, England, and took up a tract of land on the stream now called Naylor's Run, in that part of Darby township, Chester county, which afterwards became Upper Darby township, Delaware county. She was born 9mo. (November)

31, 1697, according to the Darby register, and died 5mo. (May) 18, 1760, according to the Abington Meeting register, which under date of 1760 has the following: "Priscilla, wife of John Tuson, Senr., of Abington, died 5mo. 18th Inter'd 19th." She was buried in the graveyard of Abington Meeting, of which she was an elder. The minutes of Abington Monthly Meeting, for 4mo. 24, 1758, have "Abington women frds with the approbation of this m:g Chooseth Sarah Paul an Elder of their Particular Meeting in the Room of Priscilla Tyson, who Through indisposition of body is become incapable of Performing the duty of that Station." And on 7mo. 28, 1760, in answer to the first annual query, is entered, "one Elder deceased since last account, to wit Priscilla Naylor."

John Tyson married (second) 3mo. 1, 1764, at Abington Meeting, Sarah Lewis, of Germantown township. The record of the marriage on the register of Abington Monthly Meeting mentions her as a widow and he as a widower, and in the minutes of their declaration of intentions it is stated that she had children by her former husband; it being the custom for the Meeting to see that the rights of minor children were secured before consenting to the marriage of their mother the second time. On the death register of Abington Monthly Meeting for 1768 appears the following: "Sarah, wife of John Tyson, Senr., died 7mo. 9, inter'd 11th." She was buried in the Abington meeting graveyard. She was a minister of the Society of Friends. John Tyson had no issue by her.

The will of John Tyson of Abington township, "well stricken in years," was dated 3mo. (March) 31, 1766, and proved June 13, 1775, and is registered at Philadelphia in Will Book Q, p. 117. To his wife, Sarah, "if she survive me," he bequeathed the use of certain rooms in the house, all household goods, his horse and riding chair and one cow; (said horse and cow to be stabled and pastured on the plantation by his son, Joseph); privilege of keeping poultry, etc., on the premises; supply of firewood and other things, and an annuity of twelve pounds, but if she should remarry she was to have four pounds per annum in lieu of all; "and I will that my wife be at full liberty to dispose of the Goods she brought with her at our Marriage." Of course none of these provisions took effect, as she died before him. To his eldest son, Rynear Tyson, he devised five acres more or less of meadow, part of the plantation "on which I now dwell," bought of Benjamin Hallowell, on the corner nearest to said Rynear's dwelling-house in Abington, and now enclosed within fence, to his youngest son, Joseph Tyson, the residue of said plantation, with the dwelling-house thereon; amounting to about one hundred and forty-five acres, in Abington township, reserving to sons, Rynear and John, the privileges for themselves and their workman to quarry limestone and burn the same on the premises; to Joseph, also ten out of fifty acres in Abington, bought of Nicholas Austin, "to be laid out on that part of the sd ffifty Acres which lies next to the plantation." Also to Joseph, "after my wife's decease or remarriage," all bequests to her, except the annuity; the executors were empowered to sell all other real estate, the proceeds to be added to the residuary estate, and the whole of which, after deducting sixteen pounds bequeathed in equal shares to his two daughters, Elizabeth and Margaret, to be divided into nine equal parts, of which two were bequeathed to Rynear; two to son John; and one each to the five daughters—Elizabeth, Margaret, Sarah, Mary and Susanna; the executors named were his sons Rynear, John and Joseph; and sons-in-law Thomas Hallowell and Jacob Lippincott, were named as trustees to see to the execution of the will. A codicil, dated 6mo. (June) 9, 1774, bequeathed one-half of the son John's two ninths of the residuary estate, he being deceased, to the testator's son Joseph, and the other half to John's children, John, Rebecca, and Isaac Tyson.

John and Priscilla (Naylor) Tyson, had issue (births from register of Abington Monthly Meeting, under heading, "Children of John Tyson, Sr. and Priscilla his wife"), as follows:

- Rynear, b. 7mo. 24, 1721; m., 3mo., 1745, Sarah Michener;
- Elizabeth, b. 3mo. 22, 1723; m. (first), 10mo., 1745, Thomas Roberts, of Abington twp.; (second), 4mo. 4, 1754, Jacob Lippincott, son of Jacob, of Northampton twp., Burlington co., N. J.;

- Mary, b. 2mo. 28, 1733;
- Susanna, b. 6mo. 13, 1734; m., 11mo. 18, 1760, Joseph Austin, son of Nicholas, of Abington twp.;
- JOSEPH, b. 3mo. 13, 1737; d. 2mo. 2, 1787; m. (first), 5mo. 13, 1766, Agnes Cleaver; m. (second) Agnes, dau. of Joseph and Sarah (Powell) Lukens; of whom presently.

ABRAHAM TYSON, son of Reynier and Mary, was born in Germantown, 8mo. (October) 10, 1694, and removed in childhood with his parents to Abington township, where he resided until his death, 3mo. 12, 1781; his death is recorded on the Abington Monthly Meeting death register of that date, as follows: "Abraham Tyson of Abington, Aged 86 yrs. 4mos. 18days." He married 9mo. (November), 1721, Mary Hallowell; they received permission of Abington Monthly Meeting to marry on 8mo. 30, 1721, and the marriage was reported accomplished at the meeting of 9mo. 27, 1721. She was born 9mo. 7, 1705, daughter of Thomas and Rosamond (Till) Hallowell, of Abington township, and granddaughter of John and Mary (Sharpe) Hallowell, the progenitors of the family, who in 1683 came from Hucknow, parish of Sutton, Nottinghamshire, England, to Darby township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, from whence they later removed to Abington township, Philadelphia county. She died 10mo. 17, 1791, aged 83 yrs. 10mos. 29 days; buried at Abington 10mo. 19th.

The will of Abraham Tyson, of Abington township, dated 4mo. 8, 1776, proved June 9, 1781, registered at Philadelphia, in Will Book R, p. 425, devised his plantation in Abington to son Samuel, allowing out of the same "a sufficient Maintenance to my well Beloved wife Mary," and on her death, Samuel to pay one hundred pounds to the testator's son Abraham, and three pounds annually to the testator's daughter Rosamond; if Rosamond become a widow, she was to have a certain room in the house on said plantation; all personal estate to Samuel; executors, sons Abraham and Samuel.

Abraham and Mary (Hallowell) Tyson had issue, as shown by above quoted will and the death and marriage records at Abington (no record of births appearing at Abington, and therefore there were possibly others who did not survive their parents), as follows:

- Samuel, buried at Abington, 2mo. 21, 1789; m. ——— ———;
- Rosamond, m., 10mo. 24, 1752, Richard Roberts, son of Thomas, of Rockhill twp., Bucks co.;
- Abraham, Jr.

DERRICK TYSON, son of Reynier and Mary, born in Germantown, 9mo. (November) 6, 1696, moved with his parents to Abington when a child; later in life he moved to Upper Dublin township, but died at Hatboro, in Moreland township, Philadelphia (now Montgomery) county, 1776. He was a resident of Moreland in 1771, at the time of the death of his second wife, and carried on the manufacture of whips there. He was an active member of Horsham Particular Meeting of Friends, was made an overseer of that meeting 5mo. 30, 1744, and was appointed by Abington Monthly Meeting as its representative to Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting, 11mo. 27, 1745. His will, dated 12mo., December, 9, 1775, proved March 8, 1776, registered at Philadelphia in Will Book Q, p. 263, directed his executors to sell all his real and personal estate whatsoever and divide the proceeds as follows: to his three daughters, Deborah, Mary, and Margaret, forty pounds each; one-sixth of the residuary estate to be invested for his daughter Hannah, and at her death to be equally divided among her children, but if her husband predecease her, the principal to be paid to her; the executors, his sons Jonathan and Daniel, and his son-in-law John Cleaver, to have five pounds each; the residue equally to his children, Jonathan, Daniel, Deborah, Mary and Margaret.

On 7mo. 25, 1727, Abington Meeting gave him a certificate to proceed to some other meeting, not named, to marry, but we know nothing of the residence or maiden name of his wife; the Abington birth register records the birth of the children of Derrick and Ann Tyson, and her death occurred 7mo. 1734.

Issue of Derrick and Ann Tyson:

Deborah, b. 7mo. 10, 1728; m., 9mo. 22, 1750, John Cleaver, of Upper Dublin twp., son of Peter, of same place;

Mary, b. 12mo. 1, 1729-30; m., 12mo. 25, 1753, Thomas Lloyd, of Moreland twp.;

Margaret, b. 2mo. 16, 1732-3; m., 9mo. 21, 1751, John Parry, of Moreland twp.;

Benjamin, b. 1733; lived to age of eight or nine months.

Derrick Tyson m. (second) 3mo., 1738, Susanna Thomas; granted permission to marry by Abington Monthly Meeting, 2mo. 24, and the marriage was reported accomplished at next Monthly Meeting, 3mo. 28. She was born 4mo. 11, 1716, and died 9mo. 27, 1771, daughter of Daniel Thomas, by his second wife, Catharine ———.

Issue of Derrick and Susanna (Thomas) Tyson:

Hannah, b. 7mo. 14, 1739; m. William Lukens;

Jonathan, b. 11mo. 22, 1740-1; m., 10mo. 12, 1762, Sarah Knight;

Daniel, b. 2mo. 14, 1750; d. 1mo. 11, 1795; unm.; letters of administration granted on his estate to his brother, Jonathan Tyson, Jan. 17, 1795 (Phila. Records, Admrn. Book H, p. 197).

PETER TYSON, son of Reynier and Mary Tyson, born in Germantown, 3mo. 6, 1700, went with his parents to Abington when an infant, and lived in that township all his life, dying there 3mo. 7, 1791, and was buried at Abington Meeting graveyard 3mo. 9, 1791. (Abington Register). He was an active member of Abington Monthly Meeting of the Society of Friends, though not so prominent in the affairs of the meeting as his brothers John and Derrick; he was appointed representative to the Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting from Abington, 2mo. 28, 1746, and probably later.

Peter Tyson married, 2mo., 1727, Mary Roberts, granted permission at Monthly Meeting at Abington, 1mo. 27, 1727, and the marriage was reported at the next Monthly Meeting, 2mo. 24, 1727; she was daughter of Thomas Roberts of Germantown, whose will, dated 5mo. 5, 1753, was proven August 24, 1756. (Philadelphia Wills Book K, p. 450). There is no list of the births of the children of Peter and Mary (Roberts) Tyson on the Abington birth register, and the list given below is taken from their father's will; there may have been others who died before him, without issue:

Eleanor, m., 4mo. 21, 1752, Benjamin Hallowell;
 Rynear, m., 10, 14, 1760, Mary Cleaver, dau. of Isaac;
 Margaret, m., 11mo. 16, 1762, Thomas Hallowell, Jr.;
 THOMAS, m., 6mo. 9, 1767, Sarah Kirk, dau. of Rynier; of whom further:
 Peter, Jr., signed marriage certificates of Rynear, Margaret and Thomas.

HENRY TYSON, youngest son of Reynier and Mary Tyson, born 3mo. 4, 1702, probably after the removal of his parents to Abington township, Philadelphia (now Montgomery) county, lived there until 1738, when Abington Monthly Meeting granted him a certificate of removal to Wrightstown, for himself and wife, she having previously lived there. They probably resided there but a short time, however, as in 1741, the birth of their daughter Margaret is recorded at Abington Monthly Meeting, and the death of his wife in 1747 is recorded at Abington. He married at Wrightstown, 5mo. 16, 1735, Ann Harker, taking a certificate for that purpose from Abington Meeting to Wrightstown Meeting, dated 4mo. 30, 1735. Their children as shown by the Abington register of births were:

Elizabeth, b. 4mo., 1736;
 James, b. 4mo. 4, 1738; m. (first), 5mo. 19, 1761, Mary (Walton) Jeanes; (second), 4mo. 12, 1764, Sarah Harper;
 Margaret, b. 7mo., 1741; m., 4mo. 6, 1763, Jeremiah Walton.

JOSEPH TYSON, son of John and Priscilla (Naylor) Tyson, born 3mo. (May) 13, 1737, in Abington township, died there 2mo. (February) 2, 1787, and was buried in the Abington Friends Graveyard. (Abington death register). He married (first) 5mo. (May) 13, 1766, at Abington Meeting, Agnes, daughter of Isaac Cleaver, of Cheltenham township, and granddaughter of Peter and Catharine Cleaver, early settlers at Germantown, and the progenitors of the Cleaver family in Pennsylvania. Isaac Cleaver married Rebecca, daughter of Thomas and Rebecca Iredell, and they had six daughters, four of whom married Tysons. These daughters, the record of whose births appear on the Abington Monthly Meeting register of births, were:

Hannah Cleaver, b. 1mo. 10, 1737-8; m. (first), 5mo. 8, 1759, John Tyson, son of John and Priscilla (Naylor) Tyson; (second), 3mo. 31, 1774, Thomas Leech;
 Mary Cleaver, b. 1mo. 1, 1739-40; m., 10mo. 14, 1760, Rynear Tyson, son of Peter;
 Rebecca, b. 3mo. 14, 1742; probably d. unm.;
 Rachel Cleaver, b. 1mo. 18, 1744-5; d. 2mo. 26 or 27, 1765; unm.; buried, Abington, 2mo. 28, 1765;
 AGNES CLEAVER, b. 12mo. 24, 1746-7; d. 1mo. 18, 1779; buried on the 21st, at Abington (Abington Register—"Aged 31 yrs. 10mos. 11 days"); m., as above, 5mo. 13, 1766, Joseph Tyson, son of John and Priscilla;
 Sarah Cleaver, b. 2mo. 18, 1751; m., 12mo. 22, 1772, Jesse Tyson, son of Isaac.

After the death of his first wife, Agnes Cleaver, in 1779, Joseph Tyson married another Agnes, daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Powell) Lukens, of Upper Dublin township. She was born 12mo. 7, 1756, and was, as well as her husband, a descendant of Reynier and Mary Tyson, her father, Joseph Lukens, being a son of William Lukens, by his wife Elizabeth Tyson, a daughter of Reynier and Mary, the original American ancestor of the Tysons of Pennsylvania.

By his will, dated November 17, 1785, proved February 28, 1787, and registered at Norristown, Montgomery county (Will Book I, p. 105), "Joseph Tyson, Senior, of Abington Township," devised to his wife, Agnes, all household goods and furniture that her father, Joseph Lukens, bought for her, "before, at and after our Marriage, to the amount of about one hundred pounds, hard money;" also two hundred pounds in cash and five pounds per annum during her widowhood; to daughter Rebecca Tyson, a house and ten acres of land in Abington township, "devised to me by my father, John Tyson" and fifty pounds hard money, also "all her mother's household goods I now have;" to daughter Sarah Tyson, twelve acres in Abington township, "heretofore conveyed to me by Joseph Tyson, Junior," in default of issue of said Sarah to go to her brother John Tyson; also to Sarah, fifty pounds, when she arrives at the age of eighteen years; to son John Tyson, the mansion house and plantation of one hundred and forty-five acres, more or less, "devised to me by my father John Tyson," also wearing apparel, silver watch "that was my father's," and a riding horse; residuary estate to be equally divided between wife and children, Rebecca, Sarah and John; executors, brother Rynear Tyson, brother-in-law, Thomas Hallowell, and Thomas Leech; in case none of his children left issue, the real estate to go to his brother Rynear Tyson's sons, Joseph, William, Rynear, Abraham and Thomas, and brother John Tyson's son Isaac.

The issue of Joseph and Agnes (Cleaver) Tyson, who survived their parents, were (no list of births appearing on Abington register):

Rebecca, m. (first), 6mo. 10, 1790, George, son of Barnet Craft, of Abington; (second), 10mo. 12, 1808, Edward Edwards, of Bustleton, son of Robert and Alice, of Horsham; JOHN, b. 8mo. 27, 1772; d. 8mo. 9, 1848; m., 11mo. 15, 1810, Sarah Paxson; of whom presently.

Joseph and Agnes (Lukens) Tyson had issue, one child, viz.:

Sarah, b. 1782.

Agnes (Lukens) Tyson married (second) 11mo. 22, 1804, at Abington Meeting, Thomas Fletcher, of Abington township, son of Thomas and Susannah, both then deceased.

JOHN TYSON, son of Joseph and Agnes (Cleaver) Tyson, born in Abington township, 8mo. 27, 1772, as shown by the age given in the record of his death from Abington Monthly Meeting death register, which occurred 8mo. 9, 1848, "Aged 75 yrs. 11mos. 13 days." He married 11mo. 15, 1810, at Abington Meeting, Sarah, born 11mo. 30, 1782, died 9mo. 30, 1854, daughter of Jacob Paxson, of Abington, by his second wife, Mary Shaw, and great-great-granddaughter of James Paxson and Jane, his wife, who came from Marsh Gibbon, county of Bucks, England, crossing the Atlantic, with his brothers Henry and William, in the ship "Samuel," which "arrived in the river Delaware in the middle of the Eleventh Month 1682," as shown by the "Record of Arrivals," kept by Phineas Pemberton, the original of which is still in the possession of the Bucks County Historical Society. The Paxson brothers were members of the Society of Friends and brought certificates from Bucks Monthly Meeting, which were deposited at Middletown Monthly Meeting in Bucks county, near where they first settled. William Paxson, eldest son of James and Jane Paxson, born in Bucks county, England, 10mo. 23, 1675, died 1719, married 11mo. 20, 1695-6, Abigail Pownall, born in Laycock, Chester county, England in 1678, died in Solebury township, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, 4mo. 17, 1749; daughter of George and Elinor Pownall, who with their five children came to Pennsylvania in the "Friends Adventure," arriving in the Delaware River, 8mo. (October) 11, 1682, and settled in Falls township, Bucks county. Abigail (Pownall) Paxson was for several years a recommended minister of the Society of Friends.

Thomas Paxson, the fourth of the seven children of William and Abigail (Pownall), born 9mo. 20, 1712, was a large land owner and prominent citizen of Solebury township, Bucks county, where he died in 1782; he married in 1732, Jane, daughter of Thomas Canby, of Abington, Philadelphia county, and Buckingham and Solebury, Bucks county, the progenitor of the Canby family, an account of which is given in these volumes. They were the parents of nine children, of whom the fifth was Jacob Paxson, first above mentioned. He was born in Solebury township, Bucks county, 11mo. 6, 1745-6, and married (first) 6mo. 19, 1769, Lydia Blakey, and purchasing a mill property on Tacony creek, in Abington township, removed there, and resided in that neighborhood until the time of his decease, in Buckingham, Bucks county, while on a visit to the son-in-law William H. Johnson, in 1832. His first wife dying, he married (second) in 1777, Mary Shaw, born in Plumstead township, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, 5mo. 28, 1759, daughter of Jonathan Shaw, born in Plumstead, June 15, 1730, died there May 24, 1790, by his wife Sarah Good; granddaughter of James Shaw, born near Abington, Philadelphia county, January 9, 1694, who married at Abington Meeting, 7mo. (September) 24, 1718, Mary, daughter of Thomas and Mary Brown, from Barking, county Essex, England, who, after residing for some years in Philadelphia county, located in Plumstead township in 1720, with his sons and son-in-law, James Shaw, and owned several large tracts of land in that township and Buckingham. John and Susanna Shaw, the parents of James Shaw, were early English settlers in Northampton township, Bucks county. Jacob and Mary (Shaw) Paxson were the parents of nine children, the sixth of whom, Thomas Paxson, was the father of the late Hon. Edward M. Paxson, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Sarah (Paxson) Tyson was the second child of Jacob Paxson by his second wife, Mary Shaw.

John Tyson, as shown by the abstract of the will of his father heretofore quoted, inherited the old homestead in Abington township, purchased by his grandfather, John Tyson in 1717, and it descended from father to son successively for five generations.

John Tyson of Abington township, Montgomery county, by his will, dated 7mo. 27, 1847, proved August 23, 1848, and registered at Norristown (Will Book 8, p. 621), made the following bequests: after making provision for his wife Sarah, he left legacies to his five daughters, Mary Ann, wife of John M. Comly; Agnes, wife of Charles Paxson; Rebecca, wife of Jervis J. Pickering; Sarah and Ruthanna Tyson; and his grandson John T. Comly. His three sons Joseph, Jacob and Ellwood were named as executors. The old homestead, found by a recent survey to contain one hundred and fifty-six acres, instead of one hundred and forty-five acres as formerly referred to in the several wills of his ancestors, he directed to be divided by a certain line, making seventy-two and a quarter acres in a tract where his son Jacob P. Tyson then resided, and ordered that the two tracts be valued as therein directed, and devised the tract occupied by Jacob to him, together with other property, at the said valuation, which Jacob accepted. To his son Joseph C. Tyson he devised the homestead end of the plantation containing eighty-four and one-quarter acres with the original buildings, at a valuation which he accepted. To his son Ellwood Tyson, he devised a tract of land located about one mile distant from the homestead, on the east side of Edge Hill. A codicil dated 7mo. 28, 1848, was attached to the will.

When the Society of Friends split in 1827, the majority of the members of Abington Monthly Meeting, followed the faction of Elias Hicks, and so that branch of the Society, called Hicksites, retained the old Abington Meeting House and the record books. The other branch, called Orthodox, though only a small minority at Abington, on the assumption that they were still the original and only legitimate body of the Society of Friends, proceeded to issue testimonies of disunion against all the other and former members of the Meeting who did not unite with them. John and Sarah Tyson and their children went with the majority, so that the parents were disowned by the Orthodox Friends in 1828, and the children at various dates thereafter, from 1833 to 1850, as they came of age or married members of the Hicksite branch.

John and Sarah (Paxson) Tyson had issue:

- Mary Ann, b. 8mo. 7, 1811; m. John M. Comly, and was disowned by the Orthodox Friends, 1mo., 1833;

ELLWOOD TYSON, son of John and Sarah (Paxson) Tyson, born in Abington township, Montgomery county, April 13, 1817, spent all his life there and died October 19, 1884, and was buried at Abington Friends graveyard. He married, May 20, 1847, Hannah Ann, born May 18, 1825, died October 6, 1885, daughter of Canby and Amelia (Pierson) Steel, who like her mother-in-law, Sarah Paxson, was a descendant of Thomas Canby, of Bucks county, Pennsylvania, as shown by an account of the Steel family in these volumes. Ellwood and Hannah Ann (Steel) Tyson had issue, one child, viz.:

CANBY STEELE TYSON, b. Feb. 25, 1848; m. Emma Claypoole Newport; of them presently.

CANBY STEEL TYSON, only son of Ellwood and Hannah Ann (Steel) Tyson, was born in Abington township, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, February 25, 1848. In 1868 he entered the Farmers and Mechanics Bank of Philadelphia, where he was employed for seventeen years, until 1885, when he was elected cashier of the National Bank of Germantown, with which institution he has since been prominently associated, having been elected its president in 1901, which position he still holds. On accepting the position of Cashier of the Germantown Bank, he removed to Germantown, and has since resided in the town his pioneer ancestor, Reynier Tyson, helped to found two centuries earlier.

Mr. Tyson is a member of the Union League, the Germantown Cricket Club, the Bachelor's Barge Club, and a number of other social, local and patriotic organizations.

Canby S. Tyson married, April 15, 1873, Emma Claypoole, daughter of David and Susan (Satterthwaite) Newport, of Willow Grove, Abington township, Montgomery county, the former a minister of the Society of Friends is a descendant of Thomas Newport, of London, England, who settled in New Jersey about 1698, and on maternal lines from the Rodmans, Barkers, Ellisons and other prominent families of the Colonial period, an account of a number of which is given in these volumes, and the former a descendant of William Satterthwaite, an early settler in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, and on maternal lines from Giles Knight of the "Welcome," the Claypooles, and others of like prominence. Canby S. and Emma Claypoole (Newport) Tyson, had one child, viz.:

Ellwood Tyson, b. Dec. 18, 1874; d. Aug. 14, 1881; buried Abington Friends' Burying-Ground.

THOMAS TYSON, son of Peter Tyson, by his wife, Mary Roberts, and grandson of Reynier Tyson, the early Germantown settler, was born in Abington township, Philadelphia (now Montgomery) county, Pennsylvania, about 1740; the exact date is not now known. He lived in Abington township all his life, died there January 8, 1821, and was buried in the graveyard of Abington Meeting. By deed of gift, dated December 3, 1766, his father Peter Tyson conveyed to Thomas forty acres and one hundred and twenty perches of land in Abington township, part of four hundred acres conveyed by Samuel Carpenter and wife to Peter Tyson, 11mo. 22, 1726.

The will of Thomas Tyson, of Abington, "being advanced in years," was dated 3mo. 7, 1815, and probated 2mo. 13, 1821, at Norristown, Montgomery county. By it he left to his wife, Sarah Tyson, a home and certain privileges, four hundred dollars, a horse, cow, etc., with all the household goods she brought him at their marriage, and the interest of one thousand pounds during her life, after which the principal was to go to his six daughters, Mary, Sarah, Eleanor, Elizabeth, Hannah and Susanna. To son Thomas, his clock after the wife's death, also the messuage and plantation, "whereon I now dwell, part whereof was given me by my father, Peter Tyson, and part I purchased from him," in all one hundred and twenty-three acres and one hundred and forty perches, subject to privileges to his wife; also a lot in Abington, purchased of Thomas Tyson (son of Isaac), containing thirteen acres and twenty perches; also another lot in Moreland township, purchased of the executors of David Cummings, twenty-six acres and twenty-six perches. The open stoves in the house were to be considered part of the house and not movable. To daughters, Mary Tyson and Sarah Pryor, a messuage and tract of land in Moreland township, purchased of the executors of Samuel Swift, one hundred and twenty-eight acres, they paying forty dollars per year to their mother, and in a year after their father's death $1200, to their sisters, Hannah Tyson and Susanna Butcher. To daughters, Eleanor Tyson and Elizabeth Mather, a messuage and tract of land in Moreland township, they to pay $40 per annum to their mother. To daughters, Hannah Tyson and Susanna Butcher, a messuage and tract of land in Abington township, ninety-four acres, they also to pay $40 per annum to their mother. To son Thomas his wearing apparel, best desk, etc., and many other bequests to his children of different pieces of property.

Thomas Tyson married, 6mo. 9, 1767, at Horsham Friends Meeting, Sarah Kirk, born 2mo. (April) 2, 1749, died 9mo. 8, 1818, buried at Abington Friend's graveyard; daughter of Rynier and Mary (Michener) Kirk, of Upper Dublin township, Philadelphia county. She as well as her husband was a descendant of Reynier Tyson, the emigrant.

John Kirk came from Allfreeton, Derbyshire, England, and settled in Darby township, Chester county, prior to 1686, and in 2mo. of that year married at Darby Meeting, Joan, daughter of Peter Elliott, a large landowner on both sides of Darby creek, that is in the two regions called by the Swedes Kalkon Hook and Karkoens Hook. The will of Peter "Ellett," of "Carcushooke," (it is difficult to determine which of the two above names he meant, but it matters little as he was of both) in the county of Philadelphia, dated September 9, 1687, was proved 10mo. 4, 1688, and registered in Philadelphia (Will Book A, p. 96). It devises his lands and houses to his three sons, not named, to be equally divided among them as they severally came of age; all household goods to his wife Lucy; some cattle and sheep to wife Lucy and daughters Anne and Joane; the balance of the estate to be equally divided between his wife Lucy and son John; John to have a horse and mare. The wife and son John are named as executors. The great majority of the settlers in this region were Swedes, as he settled there long before the Quakers came to Darby, but he is supposed to have been a Scotchman. He became the ancestor of many prominent people in eastern Pennsylvania.

John Kirk bought five hundred acres of land in that part of Darby which is now Upper Darby township, Delaware county, and he and his wife went to live on this land in 1687. They had eleven children, all mentioned in his will, which was dated 8mo. (October) 28, 1705, and proved November 17, 1705. These children were Godfrey, William, John, Samuel, Joseph, Isaac, Thomas, Anne, Mary, Elizabeth, and Sarah. To his six sons he left the five hundred acres in Moreland township, Philadelphia (now Montgomery) county, which he had purchased of John Wood. His wife Joane and brother-in-law John Elliott are also mentioned in the will, and John Marshall is named as executor and Adam Rhoads and Robert Smith as Overseers.

John Kirk, second son of John and Joane (Elliott) Kirk, purchased in 1712 of John and Sarah Ironmonger two hundred acres of land in the northeast corner of Abington township and later five hundred and fifty acres in Upper Dublin township, Philadelphia county. He married, 7mo. (September) 13, 1722, at Abington Meeting, Sarah, daughter of Reynier and Mary Tyson, the original ancestors of this Tyson family in Pennsylvania. His will, dated July 30, 1759, proved September 24, 1759, devised to each of his surviving sons two hundred acres of land, and the remainder to be equally divided between his daughters; part of this land covered the present site of Dreshertown, Montgomery county.

John Kirk built a large stone house on the part of his land which was afterwards occupied by his son Jacob, remodeled by his grandson, John Kirk, in 1832, and still in possession of the family.

John and Sarah (Tyson) Kirk had issue:

John Kirk, b. 7mo. 30, 1723; d. in childhood;

RYNIER KIRK, b. 4mo. 28, 1725; m., 3mo. 24, 1748; of whom presently;

Martha (Harker) Michener, mother of Mary (Michener) Kirk, was daughter of Adam and Grace Harker, two very prominent Friends, Grace being an accepted minister and her husband many years an elder of the Society. Adam Harker, wife and child, his wife having a public testimony, etc., had a certificate from Richmond General Monthly Meeting, held at Leburne, Yorkshire, dated 12mo. 10, 1698, which they presented at Middletown Meeting, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, about 1700.

In the Friend (Philadelphia, 1857, vol. 30, p. 268) appears the following account of Grace Harker:

"Grace Harker was born in England, about the year 1669. She was married to Adam Harker, of Middletown, Bucks county, of which Meeting they were both for a long time useful members. Grace received, whilst young, a gift in the Ministry, in which she labored to the close of her life, and Adam was appointed an Elder, in which station he was faithful and in good unity with Friends.

"She was," says her memorial, "a woman of an innocent, exemplary life and conversation, received a gift in the ministry in her young years, and was a careful attender of Meetings until old age." She died twelfth mo. 10th. 1747, aged seventy-eight years. Adam Harker, a few years after the decease of his wife, removed to Philadelphia. He had been very useful in religious society, but now in extreme old age, seeking another residence, no account of his death has been preserved. He was a considerable landowner in Bucks county, and was one of the original trustees to hold title of the land belonging to Buckingham, Wrightstown, and other Monthly Meetings. His certificate from Middletown Monthly Meeting to Philadelphia is dated 8mo. 4, 1750. His will, dated 10mo. 2, 1753, proved and registered at Philadelphia, December 5, 1754, describes him as "late of Middletown, Bucks county, now of the City of Philadelphia, being aged and infirm in body, etc." It devises to his daughter, Mary Lloyd, £60, and his large Bible; to daughter, Jane Collison, one of my Sewell's Histories, a lot of household utensils, etc., all now in her possession, also five shillings, and ratifies the deeds he had executed for her benefit; to daughter, Grace Fisher, £50, and "my large Concordance;" to daughter Rachel Parry, £70, Ellwood's Sacred History, and "all my household goods remaining in the house of my son-in-law, John Fisher." To grandson, John Harker, son of Samuel, deceased, £40, and the other Sewell's History, and best suit of clothes; to grandson, James Harker, son of Samuel, £30, "when he returns to Philadelphia;" in the meantime his brother John to have the interest, as also the principal if James never returns. To Adam Harker, son of my brother David; to grandson John Lloyd, £60, a cloth cloak and a clock; to grandchildren, Thomas, Samuel, and James Lloyd, Mary Kirk, Sarah Tyson, Grace Longstreth, Jane and Elizabeth Michener, £28 each; to sister Sarah Scott, £15; to son-in-law John Fisher, silver watch; to sons-in-law Thomas Lloyd and John Michener, £10 each; to friend Thomas Thackeray, £5; to Israel Pemberton, Jr., and John Smith, of Philadelphia, and Joseph Hampton and John Linton, of Wrightstown, Bucks county, £50, in trust for the use of brother James Harker and Amy, his wife, with remainder, if any, towards maintaining a free school in Wrightstown, under the care of the Monthly Meeting there; also £40 in trust for similar school in Buckingham, and £40 for one in Middletown; residue to grandsons, John Harker and John Lloyd; trustees, sons-in-law, Thomas Lloyd and John Michener, and friend James Thackeray; executors, grandson John Harker and John Lloyd. A codicil of same date gives wearing apparel not mentioned to brother James Harker and son-in-law Philip Parry. Codicil, dated 5mo. 17, 1754, having paid £5 this summer for support of brother James Harker, that amount to be deducted from the trust fund. Codicil, dated 11mo. 15, 1754, revokes legacy of £30 to Adam, son of David, and gives it to grandsons, John Harker and John Lloyd, equally.

Adam and Grace Harker had issue:

The ancestry of Amos W. Butcher is as follows:

Anne Butcher, widow, of Lillingstone Lovell, in Oxfordshire, England, and her unmarried daughter, Frances, had a certificate, dated 2mo. 19, 1680, from the Monthly Meeting of the Society of Friends at Biddleston, Buckinghamshire, to Friends in New Jersey, which she filed with Burlington Monthly Meeting, in that Province, within a year of its date. She may have been already in New Jersey, having come with her sons, John and William Butcher, in the ship "Shield," which arrived at Burlington, October, 1678. By deed of lease and release, dated May 2 and 3, 1681, she purchased of John Lambert one hundred acres of land, part of John Lambert's one-sixteenth share in the Proprietary lands of West Jersey. On 9mo. 5, 1682, with other Friends of Burlington Monthly Meeting, she signed a paper in reference to servants.

Her husband's name is unknown. She had the following children, and perhaps others who remained in England:

William Butcher, who brought certificate of same date and from same place as his mother and sister, but must have obtained it after settling in West Jersey, as he came on ship, "Shield," from Hull, arriving at Burlington, Oct., 1678. On 12mo. 7, 1680, he signed an address from Friends of Burlington Monthly Meeting to Friends in Eng., and this is about all that is known of him;

JOHN BUTCHER, of whom presently;

Thomas Butcher, with his brother, John, signed certificate of John Borton and family, of Aynoe, belonging to Aderbury Meeting, Oxfordshire, dated 3mo. 5, 1679; he also signed his mother's certificate from Biddleston Monthly Meeting, 2mo. 19, 1680, and that of Samuel Jennings (afterward Governor of N. J.), from same Meeting and of same date. He came to N. J. in ship, "Samuel," of London, the record of the birth of his son, Samuel, on Burlington Monthly Meeting records, stating that he was born on that ship, 5mo. 18, 1682. He subscribed 10 shillings towards building a Meetinghouse, 1mo. 2, 1684, no doubt that at Burlington, finished in 1691. He m., in Eng., Esther ———. The will of Thomas Butcher, of Springfield twp., Burlington co., West Jersey, dated Sept. 24, 1693, proved Nov. 18, 1693, gave to son, Samuel, the homestead, 192 acres; to son, John, a right to 170 acres, not yet taken up; to daughters, Ann and Mary, two-thirds of his personal estate. He appointed brother, John Butcher, and brother-in-law, John Antram, and friends, John Day and John Shinn, executors. The inventory of his estate was made, Oct. 30, 1693;

Frances Butcher, came to West Jersey with her mother, in 1680, or earlier, and is named in same certificate; m., at Burlington Meeting, 3mo. 15, 1682, John Antram, of town of Burlington. He was one of Proprietaries of West Jersey, and d. in Northampton twp., Burlington co., 1719, survived by widow, Frances, and several children and grandchildren.

JOHN BUTCHER, son of Anne, of Lillingstone Lovell, Oxfordshire, came to West Jersey (according to an account of him among the MSS. Memorials by John Smith, in the Friends Record Room, No. 140, North Sixteenth Street, Philadelphia), in the "Shield" from Hull, which arrived at Burlington, October, 1678, then he (or another John Butcher) signed, with his brother Thomas, a certificate for an Oxfordshire family on 3mo. 5, 1679. He was then or previously a minister of the Society of Friends and had preached in London. He signed the address to Friends in England, as did his brother William, 12mo. 7, 1680. On 1mo. 2, 1684, he contributed fifteen shillings toward building the Meeting House at Burlington. On 12mo. 9, 1686, he was appointed a representative from Burlington Meeting to Burlington Quarterly Meeting and thereafter about thirty times up to 12mo. 7, 1725, and possibly several years later. At the Burlington Monthly Meeting, held 4mo. 4, 1688, he and Benjamin Scott proposed going on a religious visit to England, desiring certificates for that purpose and a committee was appointed to prepare them. At the Monthly Meeting held 12mo. 7, 1697, he and William Hunt were appointed to collect subscriptions for the distressed Friends in New England. On 4mo. 6, 1698, he was made one of the trustees for the property of Springfield Meeting which adjoined his plantation.

John Butcher was one of the Proprietors of West Jersey and had a deed for one-eighth of a proprietary share, each share representing a one-hundredth part. This deed was lost when his house was destroyed by fire in 1690, and on 12mo. 5, 1690, Samuel Jennings, then of Philadelphia, made him another deed therefor. On October 28, 1680, two hundred acres were surveyed to him "on Mattocopenny, along Assiscunck creek, adjoining John Shinn and Samuel Jennings, and on May 30, 1682, another tract of five hundred acres on the south side of north branch of Assiscunck creek was patented to him, and three hundred and forty acres were surveyed to him September, 1686. In right of his purchase of one-eighth of a share he had a warrant, dated March 18, 1720-1, for eight hundred and sixty acres, all or the greater part of which was laid out in Springfield township, Burlington county; also six hundred and twenty-five acres surveyed April 30, 1712, "within the new Indian purchase of the ffals of Dillaway," in the present county of Hunterdon; but as he lived in Springfield township, it was doubtless on the land surveyed to him in 1680 and 1682, and not on the survey of 1721. By deed, dated November 16, 1721, he sold to his son-in-law Job Ridgway, two hundred and sixty acres; two hundred and ten acres out of the six hundred and twenty-five acres in Hunterdon county, and fifty acres out of the eight hundred and sixty acre tract. By deed of June 2, 1725, he conveyed to his son William, also of Springfield township, three hundred and forty acres and allowance in Springfield, probably the survey of September, 1686, and one hundred and forty acres yet to be taken up; this was practically a gift, the consideration being but five pounds. By deed of January 25, 1731, he sold his son-in-law and daughter, Daniel and Demaris Zolley, sixty acres of his home plantation.

In his will, dated 2mo. 7, 1729, proved 11mo. 5, 1737, John Butcher described himself as being old and weakly in body, and as living in Springfield township. He left to his daughter Demaris Zelle, three score pounds with a lot of land by Jonathan Wright's orchard, and all of his household goods upon his plantation then in her possession; to his daughter, Rebecca Ridgway, one shilling; to his granddaughters, Catharine Butcher, daughter of John, and Mary Ridgway, daughter of Job, between them a lot of an acre and a half of land, next Henry Clother's land; to his son, John Butcher, his plantation, not stating how many acres; does not dispose of his Hunterdon plantation by his will. His friends, Edward Barton and John Harvey, are named as executors.

John Butcher had been married in England but the name of his wife is unknown. She was the mother of his two sons. He married (second), 4mo. 7, 1691, at the house of James Atkinson, of Newton Meeting, Gloucester county, New Jersey, Mary Walker, of Gloucester county. She was the mother of the three daughters.

Issue of John Butcher by his first wife, name unknown:

William, undoubtedly eldest son; he obtained 480 acres of land from his father, during latter's lifetime, and lived in Springfield twp., Burlington co.; his will, dated March 12, 1727-8, was proved April 13, 1728; he was evidently unm.; his will devises to his "well beloved father," £20; to his brother, John Butcher, £10; to his brother-in-law, Daniel Zelle, £10; to his brother-in-law, Job Ridgway, his plantation in Springfield, and all right in unlocated land, and his personal estate, Ridgway to pay other legacies and to be executor of the will;

JOHN BUTCHER, JR., or second of the name; of whom presently.

Issue of John and Mary (Walker) Butcher:

Rebecca Butcher, declared intentions of marriage with Job Ridgway, at Burlington Monthly Meeting of Friends, the second time, on 10mo. 7, 1719; he was son of Richard Ridgway, by his second wife, Abigail Stockton; their dau., Mary Ridgway, m. her first cousin, John Butcher, 3rd., as shown hereafter. Job Ridgway was executor of the will of his brother-in-law, William Butcher, in 1728, and inherited from him the 340 acres, and 140 acres conveyed to William by his father, as above mentioned; he also bought of his father-in-law, John Butcher, Nov. 16, 1721, 250 acres; his wife, Rebecca, inherited from her father but one shilling, probably because her husband had already received her full share of her father's estate in real property;

Demaris Butcher, declared intentions of marriage with Daniel Zelle, the second time, at Burlington Monthly Meeting, 9mo. 8, 1725; they bought 60 acres of her father's plantation in Springfield, Jan. 25, 1731, and with their third son, Sylvanus, also bought 53 acres, in Springfield, of her brother, John Butcher 2nd., 11mo. 30, 1738;

Sarah Butcher, declared intentions of marriage with Joseph Ridgway, brother of Job, at Burlington Monthly Meeting, the second time, 11mo. 1, 1727; Sarah d. before her father, and Joseph Ridgway m. (second), in 1737, Hannah Allen. Job and Joseph Ridgway were sons of Richard and Abigail (Stockton) Ridgway, of Springfield twp., and grandsons of Richard Stockton 1st.

JOHN BUTCHER (2d), inherited his father's plantation in Springfield township, Burlington county, New Jersey, and lived there for some time, but by 1758 he had removed to Northampton township in the same county, where he was still living in 1763. By deed dated 11mo. 30, 1738, he conveyed to his brother-in-law and sister, Daniel and Demaris Zelle, and their son Sylvanus, fifty-three acres of land in Springfield, doubtless part of his father's plantation there. On 1mo. 20, 1748, he sold to John Atkinson, of Springfield, one hundred acres of land, to be taken up on warrant from the Council of Proprietors, for six hundred acres granted to John Butcher (2d), 4mo. 9, 1737.

John Butcher (2d) married (first) at Springfield Meeting, 8mo. 20, 1709, Mary daughter of Peter and Sarah (Curtis) Harvey, and granddaughter of Thomas Curtis. Sarah Curtis, who married Peter Harvey, and her sister, Elizabeth, came to Burlington county, New Jersey, in 1681; it is uncertain whether their father Thomas Curtis accompanied them, although he was there by 1685. The sister, Elizabeth, married, 3mo. 9, 1686, William Atkinson, of Birch Creek, and from them descend a well-known Burlington county family. Sarah Curtis had married before October 10, 1686, on which date she and her husband, Peter Harvey, conveyed forty acres of land, which she owned in the Second Tenth, to Thomas Curtis, presumably her father. Sarah and Elizabeth Curtis were daughters of Thomas Curtis who came to Burlington county prior to 1685, and had one hundred and fifty acres of land on the south branch of Birch creek, return of survey dated August, 1685. He was deceased by 1688, as, on July 2, 1688, William Stayner, of Springfield, sold to Samuel Ogborne, of the same place, among other lands, the forty acres above mentioned, which he (Stayner) had purchased of Thomas Curtis, "date uncertain, by reason of whose death not sufficiently confirmed." This Thomas Curtis has been identified with Thomas Curtis, of Reading, England, who with his wife Anne, "were both severe sufferers, and above mediocrity in position and intelligence, among the earliest and most prominent members of the Society of Friends at its first organization in England. Anne Curtis is said to have had considerable influence with the king, her father being a personal friend of the king in the time of the Civil War, having been hung without trial by the king's enemies at his own door."

The following account of Anne Curtis, in relation to her efforts to effect the release of George Fox from prison, is from Sewell's "History of the People Called Quakers," p. 286:

"One Anne Curtis coming to see G. Fox, and understanding how he stood committed, resolved also to go to the king about it; for her father, who had been sheriff of Bristol, was hanged near his own door for endeavoring to bring in the king; upon which consideration, she was in hopes to be admitted to the king's presence to speak with him. Coming to London, she and Margaret Fell went together to the king, who, when he understood whose daughter Ann was, received her kindly. She having acquainted the king with the case of G. Fox, desired 'that he would be pleased to send for him up and hear his cause himself.' This the king promised her he would do, etc." Margaret Fell, who accompanied her to the king was later the wife of George Fox. The above incident occurred in 1660.

Sarah (Curtis) Harvey was a sister to John Curtis, who came from England in the very early days of the Province of West Jersey, and became a Proprietor thereof by purchasing one-fifteenth of a proprietary right. Under this right he located, March, 1684, a tract of land in what is now Mansfield township, Burlington county, purporting to contain three hundred and forty-seven acres, but really containing much more. To this tract he gave the name of Ogston, which it has ever since retained. Before any meetinghouse was built in the neighborhood, Friends held their meeting here at John Curtis's house. By deed of gift, dated August 10, 1686, John Curtis, of Assiscunck creek, conveyed to his son, Thomas Curtis, his plantation of three hundred and forty-seven acres called Ogston, formerly Mount Pleasant, in the First Tenth. By will, dated March 29, 1695, proved April 21, 1695, John Curtis, of Mansfield, left the reversion of all his land yet to be taken up to son David. To daughter Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Foulke, two cows and to her two children each ten shillings. To son Jonathan Curtis, in England, twenty shillings; son Thomas, executor and residuary legatee. Of these children, Elizabeth married, in 1688, Thomas Foulke, Jr.; David married, 1691, Rachel Wright; and Thomas married, 1694, Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Ellis.

John Butcher married (second), 1750, Margaret Barton, who died 3mo. 4, 1758, aged fifty-six years. She was an Elder of Friends' Meeting.

John Butcher (2d) and Mary Harvey, his first wife, had one son, JOHN BUTCHER (3d), also called Jr. He lived in Springfield township, probably on his grandfather's plantation, which had descended to his father, but upon which the latter did not live. He married, under marriage license dated 12mo. 23, 1738, his half-first-cousin, Mary Ridgway, daughter of Job Ridgway, by his wife Rebecca Butcher, a half sister to his father; and was disowned by Burlington Monthly Meeting, 3mo. 7, 1839, for marriage to too near a relative. He died intestate and letters of administration were granted on his estate to Mary Butcher, September 10, 1748. Job Ridgway, of Springfield, in his will, dated 2mo. 10, 1761, mentions his daughter, Mary Butcher, as still a widow. The "History of the Girard National Bank" of Philadelphia states that this John Butcher, in 1760, started the business in Philadelphia afterwards carried on by four generations of his descendants, but this is an error, as there is reason to suppose he lived all his life in Springfield township, Burlington county, New Jersey, and in fact he was deceased long before the date mentioned. It was doubtless his son, Job Butcher, who established the business in Philadelphia. John and Mary (Ridgway) Butcher had one son, Job, and probably other children.

JOB BUTCHER, son of John and Mary (Ridgway) Butcher, was born 1742, in Burlington County, New Jersey, but removed to the city of Philadelphia when a young man, bringing a certificate from Burlington Monthly Meeting dated 7mo. 8, 1762, to Philadelphia Monthly Meeting. Included in the same certificate or separate ones of the same date were a Jonathan and John Butcher, presumably brothers of Job. It was no doubt Job Butcher who established the wholesale produce business in 1760 in Philadelphia, and which grew to such great proportions under three generations of his descendants, although attributed to his father, John Butcher, who as we have shown was not then living, and Job, being the first in the city, was almost certainly the founder of the family firm.

Job Butcher had a long and honorable mercantile career in Philadelphia. His last residence was on North Water street, near Arch. He dropped dead in the Friends Meeting House at Fourth and Arch streets, to which meeting he belonged, on Monday morning, 2mo. 15, 1819, and was buried in the Friends' graveyard adjoining. Poulson's American Daily Advertiser for Wednesday, February 17, 1819, had this notice: "Died Suddenly, on Monday morning, Job Butcher, a respectable merchant of this city in the 77th year of his age." The Register of Philadelphia Monthly Meeting also records his death and gives his age as seventy-seven years.

The will of Job Butcher, dated June 3, 1814, and proved February 22, 1819, mentioned his daughters Rebecca Patton, of Alexandria, Virginia, Mary Story and Ann Pryor, and his son Amos Wright Butcher, whom he made his sole executor and residuary legatee.

John Butcher, supposed to be the brother who accompanied Job from Burlington county, New Jersey, and his partner in business, survived Job until July 12, 1825; Poulson's Advertiser, of Thursday, July 14, 1825, had this notice: "Died, suddenly, on Thursday afternoon, 12th instant, Mr. John Butcher."

Job Butcher and Ann Wright declared intentions of marriage at Chesterfield Meeting, the second time, 4mo. 6, 1775, he producing a certificate of clearness from Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, for the Northern District. On 5mo. 4, 1775, report was made that the marriage had been orderly accomplished. The exact date that the marriage took place was 4mo. 20, 1775. Ann (Wright) Butcher's ancestry was as follows:

JOSHUA WRIGHT, of Roulden, married, 4mo. 10, 1669, Elizabeth, daughter of William Empson of Gowle Field House, all in England. About ten years later, Joshua Wright with his wife and three children came to America, arriving in the Delaware river, 10mo. 20, 1679, and settled near the Falls of Delaware, on the Jersey side. In 1682 and 1688 Joshua Wright was a member of the West Jersey Assembly, and in 1685 he was appointed by Chesterfield Monthly Meeting one of the trustees to receive the deed for the Meeting's burial-ground at the Falls. Joshua had a brother, Thomas Wright, who came over from England in the "Flie-Boat Martha", during the Fall of 1677; he was a signer of the Concessions, and in 1682, a member of the West Jersey Assembly. He died 1mo. 21, 1705-6, apparently unmarried, as considerable of his real estate was inherited by his brother Joshua's children. Joshua Wright died 8mo. 10, 1695, and his wife on 1mo. 12, 1705.

Joshua and Elizabeth (Empson) Wright had issue:

Elizabeth Wright, b., Eng., 2mo. 9, 1670; m. Peter Fretwell;
 Joshua Wright, b., Eng., 3mo., 1672; m., 1705, Rebecca, dau. of Mahlon Stacy;
 Robert Wright, b., Eng., 6mo. 1, 167—;
 THOMAS WRIGHT, b. in West Jersey, 7mo., 1681; of whom presently;
 John Wright, b. in West Jersey, 8mo., 1683.

THOMAS WRIGHT, son of Joshua and Elizabeth (Empson) Wright, inherited three hundred acres of land from his father. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Humphrey Parker, and they were the parents of:

AMOS WRIGHT, who married Anna Black and left surviving issue (perhaps had others who died before him):

Thomas Wright;
 Abner Wright;
 ANNE WRIGHT, m. Job Butcher.

Job and Anne (Wright) Butcher, of Philadelphia, had issue:

Anne Butcher, b. 1mo. 19, 1776; m. ——— Pryor;
 John Butcher, b. 5mo. 28, 1777; d. in 1778;

 AMOS WRIGHT BUTCHER, b. 1mo. 6, 1781; d. 12mo. 6, 1843; m., 10mo. 12, 1809, Susannah Tyson, before mentioned;
 Job Butcher, b. 1782; d. 1783;
 John Butcher, b. 11mo. 26, 1784; d. 1785;
 Rebecca Butcher, b. 1mo. 23, 1787; m. John Patton, of Alexandria, Va.

Job Butcher married (second) 11mo. 3, 1796, at Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, Mary, widow of Sykes Watson, and daughter of Stephen and Eleanor Carpenter, of Philadelphia, who died without issue, 4mo. 25, 1804, aged sixty-six years.

AMOS WRIGHT BUTCHER, born January 1, 1781, only surviving son of Job and

Anne (Wright) Butcher, lived all his life in Philadelphia. He inherited his father's business, which he augmented and passed on to his sons. Before 1827, and possibly later, he lived on Water street, no doubt continuing in his father's house, but afterwards moved to 74 North Front street, which was his residence at the time of his death. Amos W. Butcher was descended from three Proprietors of the Province of West Jersey, viz., Richard Stockton, 1st. (Lieutenant of a Troop of Horse at Flushing, Long Island, before removing to West Jersey); Joshua Wright (member of West Jersey Assembly, 1682-83 and 85); and Richard Ridgway. Amos W. Butcher was a member of the Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, of the Society of Friends, going with the Orthodox branch on the division in 1827. He died December 6, 1843, and was buried in his son's lot at Laurel Hill cemetery. In the United States Gazette for Thursday, Dec. 7, 1843, appears the following notice, "Died, on Wednesday morning, at one o'clock, Amos W. Butcher, in the 63d year of his age."

Amos W. Butcher married, as before stated, 10mo. 12, 1809, at Abington Friends Meeting, Susannah Tyson, daughter of Thomas and Sarah (Kirk) Tyson.

Issue of Amos W. and Susannah (Tyson) Butcher:

THOMAS TYSON BUTCHER, b. Oct. 27, 1810; d. Feb. 19, 1885; m. Elizabeth Hood Orum; of whom presently;

THOMAS TYSON BUTCHER, eldest son of Amos Wright and Susanna (Tyson) Butcher, born in Philadelphia, October 27, 1810, died February 19, 1885. The "History of Girard National Bank" (J. Granville Leach, LL. B., Philadelphia, 1902), of which Mr. Butcher was a Director, gives an account of his career, and is here quoted in full:

"Thomas Tyson Butcher (1850 to 1852), elder brother of Washington Butcher, died at Philadelphia, 19 February, 1885, aged seventy-four years. In 1834 he engaged in the wholesale grocery business, and later became a partner of his brother, Washington, in the wholesale provision business, under the firm name of T. T. and W. Butcher. He retired from active business, in 1853. He was a director of the Mercantile Mutual Insurance Company."

The Philadelphia Press, for Saturday, February 22, 1885, had the following:

"Thomas Tyson Butcher, who died suddenly on Thursday last, was born in Philadelphia in 1810, and came from an old Quaker family. He was at one time senior member of the house of Butcher Bros., that firm having been founded by him and his brother Washington, who died about twelve years ago. He represented the continuation of a long line of great merchants, as his father, Amos Wright Butcher, and his grandfather, Job Butcher, were in the olden days of Philadelphia, men whose fame and reputation for business ability were wide spread, and reached back into the last century. Mr. Butcher was at one time a director of the Girard Bank. In 1855 he was elected a member of Select Council from the Twenty-fourth Ward, and in both positions, he served the interests of his constituents with fidelity and honesty.

"Mr. Butcher retired from active business pursuits in 1853, since which time he led a retired life and devoted a large portion of his fortune to the purchase of real estate, of which he was an extensive owner. He was fond of books, was a great reader and had his mind stored with statistics of every kind, but particularly of those relating to the early history of Philadelphia. He leaves a widow, three sons, and two daughters, the elder of whom is the wife of Robert Glendenning."

Thomas Tyson Butcher married, July 31, 1839, Elizabeth Hood Orum, born October 13, 1816, died March 18, 1894, daughter of Davis and Rachel Wilson (Longstreth) Orum, of Philadelphia. The mother, Rachel Wilson Longstreth, born July 10, 1789, died in Philadelphia, May 16, 1865, was a daughter of Benjamin and Sarah (Fussell) Longstreth, of Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Benjamin Longstreth was the founder of Phoenixville, and erected the first iron works there. He was born in Warminster township, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, and was a son of Bartholomew Longstreth from Longstroth Dale, Deanery of Craven, Yorkshire, England, the founder of the Longstreth family of Bucks county, Philadelphia and vicinity. He came to Pennsylvania in 1698, and settled near Edge Hill, Philadelphia county, but in 1710 settled in Bucks county, where he died in 1749. His wife was Ann, daughter of John Dawson (and Dorothy his wife), a prominent settler of "Crooked Billet" (now Hatboro), Moreland township, Philadelphia county, and later of Philadelphia city. Thomas Tyson and Elizabeth Hood (Orum) Butcher lived at 736 Spruce Street, where both died.

Issue of Thomas Tyson and Elizabeth Hood (Orum) Butcher:

Davis Franklin Butcher, m. and had issue, one dau., E. L. Butcher;

AMOS WASHINGTON BUTCHER, b. May 28, 1842; d. Dec. 20, 1891; unm.; of whom presently;

Thomas Tyson Butcher, Jr., b. Jan. 25, 1844; living at 527 Fairmount ave., Phila.; unm.; ELLEN E. BUTCHER, b. Dec. 8, 1849; d. Jan. 20, 1903; m. Robert Glendenning; of whom presently;

Alfred Longstreth Butcher, b. Nov. 29, 18—; d., unm., Nov. 4, 1869;

Morris Butcher, b. 1847; now living at 217 York street, Camden, N. J.;

CATHARINE MAY BUTCHER, b. May 5, 1857; d. Nov. 23, 1891; m. William H. Wile; of whom presently;

Margaret Butcher, b. Sept. 12, 1858; d. Feb. 19, 1859.

AMOS WASHINGTON BUTCHER, the second son, born May 28, 1842, died December 20, 1891, was never married. The Philadelphia Press, for Tuesday, December 29, 1891, said of him:

"Amos W. Butcher, who died at his residence, 735 Spruce Street, on December 20, was a son of the late Thomas Tyson Butcher, and a great-great-grandson of John Butcher, an eminent Quaker preacher of London, England, who emigrated to this country in 1678.

"On his mother's side he was direct descendant of John Stroth, who commanded a troop under the Duke of York in the War of the Roses. At the close of the war, he was rewarded by Henry VII, for his valor. His great-great-grandfather Bartholomew Longstreth, was a grandson of John Stroth, and was born at Longstroth Dale, Deanery of Craven, Yorkshire, Eng., 1679, and emigrated to America in 1698.

"He was one of the petitioners, among whom were many of the leading men of Pennsylvania, who joined in a petition to the King of England praying that William Penn might not be deprived of his government in the Province. His great uncle Isaac Longstreth was a captain in the Revolutionary army and commanded a company at the battle of Crooked Billet. "He had been for many years with the firm of Robert Glendenning & Co., and was a man of the greatest integrity and honor, being much beloved by those who knew him."

ELLEN E. BUTCHER, the eldest daughter of Thomas Tyson and Elizabeth Hood (Orum) Butcher, married, March 9, 1864, Robert Glendinning, son of Robert and Elizabeth Glendinning. Of the father, Robert Glendinning, Sr., the Philadelphia Press, for March 5, 1878, said:

"Robert Glendinning, a well known Philadelphian, died suddenly of heart disease yesterday morning at his residence, No. 3405 Baring Street, in the seventy-second year of his age. Mr. Glendinning was born in Kelso, Scotland, whence he emigrated to this country, and engaged in mercantile pursuits. In a few years he acquired a competency sufficient to allow him to retire from active business life and enable him to live on his income. When the project of starting the Third National Bank was begun, he took an active part in the movement, becoming one of its founders, and was subsequently elected cashier, which position he filled with signal ability till about two years ago, when he resigned. He was an active member of the West Philadelphia Presbyterian Church, and was also one of its deacons. The deceased was the father of Robert Glendinning, Jr., of the well-known firm of Glendinning, Davis & Co., Brokers."

Of his wife, the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, for Friday, September 20, 1872, said:

"Mrs. Elizabeth Glendinning.—Many have penned eulogical lines, cited the graces and virtues of fond mothers now departed, and we would fain drop a tear of tender sympathy for those left to mourn their loss. But our all-absorbing theme at this time is of one whose noble womanly bearing is not often met with.

"Passing to her longed-for rest on the morning of the 16th instant, trusting in the merits of her great Redeemer, she leaves behind her the testimony of her being a devoted wife, a faithful mother, a true friend. But she was like a diamond, left to shed its rays of light only in a casket of jewels, laid aside from public gaze. So with her; the brilliancy of her nature, her noble bearing, her uncommon taste for superior literature, her energy, her earnestness of heart, were scarcely known, excepting to the little circle of her own family, among whom she was indeed the centre of all they could imagine of worth in a Christian mother.

"Prevented by illness from mingling much in society of late years, few really knew her superiority. Now, however, that she has passed away from our midst it is fitting to recognize the dignity of her character and the brightness of her mind. Would that we were able to imitate the virtues of her to whose memory we now pay the humble tribute of affection."

Robert and Elizabeth Glendinning had two sons, Robert, born in 1838, of whom presently; and William, ten years younger; the latter moved to Illinois, and died there, October 14, 1881. The Philadelphia Press, for Tuesday, October 18, 1881, had the following short account of him:

"Death of William Glendinning.—William Glendinning, formerly of this city, died at Evanston, Ill., on Friday last, at the age of thirty-two years. He was the son of the late Robert Glendinning, for many years the Cashier of the Third National Bank, and the brother of Robert Glendinning, the well-known banker of this city. Some years ago he removed to the West, and by his industry and ability succeeded in establishing a business which extended over that large section. The Evanston Index, in referring to his death says;—"Mr. William Glendinning was one who made friends wherever he went. Kind and genial in his daily intercourse, he attracted the regard of all. True and warm in his friendship, he bound to himself by the strongest ties those who knew him intimately. But in the home circle his life was so pure, so full of self sacrifice, that his loss will be felt more and more as years go on. A Christian gentleman, one who was ever true to the dictates of conscience and never ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, the influence of his life will be felt throughout the wide circle of his acquaintance."

ROBERT GLENDINNING, born in Philadelphia, August 10, 1838, died there March 5, 1893, son of Robert and Elizabeth Glendinning, in early life decided to follow in his father's footsteps and devote his career to financial affairs. To this end he entered the banking and brokerage office of Abraham Barker, one of the earliest and best known members of the Philadelphia Stock Exchange. In 1864 he went into business on his own account and four years later established a branch in New York, from which time until 1879 the business was transacted under the firm name of Glendinning, Davis & Co., the New York partner being Mr. John H. Davis, whose daughter afterwards married Lord Terence Blackwood. In 1879, this partnership was dissolved by mutual consent, and from that time forward the firm rapidly advanced to a position of great prominence, under the firm name of Robert Glendinning & Co. Mr. Glendinning was conspicuous in numerous important financial enterprises. He was especially active in promoting the passenger railway systems of the city, and much is due him for their development. He was the first Philadelphia banker to establish (in 1870) private telegraphic communication with New York, and also was the first of Philadelphia brokers to secure a seat in the New York Stock Exchange, while he was likewise the first to commence the issue of daily financial letters from this city, as well as the first to adopt the private blackboard system for recording the daily stock fluctuations. In 1870 Mr. Glendinning made a contract with the New York Stock and Indicator Company to place twenty-five of their machines in this city, and that was the nucleus of the present elaborate and extensive system. The Car, a periodical devoted to the interests of street railways, published in Philadelphia, had the following in April, 1893:

"Robert Glendinning was quite a student of the heterodoxical impulses that control the movements of finance, and being a close observer of events, he won early a reputation for alertness, sagacity and foresight. His manner was diametrically opposed to the volatile characters usually seen on the 'street' and a quiet and unassuming disposition hid from the desultory observer the strong individuality and keen perception through which he won for the firm bearing his name, the extended and envied reputation it bore. He admitted to his firm men whose sagacity and integrity were judicious complements to his own, and thus caparisoned, the firm conducted many brilliant financial enterprises to successful issues, prosecuting all accounts with a sound and watchful conservatism, which Glendinning himself considered most necessary for the protection of his clients.

"Mr. Glendinning was in possession of more valuable information possibly than any other of his confreres, but when asked to discover it by some wily news monger,—knew less than the man knowing nothing. The first identification of the firm with street railway securities was in 1885, in the financing of the Market and Columbia Avenue cable lines. For the intelligent explanation of, at that time, as abstruse and almost incomprehensible a problem as cable rope traction, Mr. Glendinning had constructed a miniature cable railway, which gave a tangible explanation of the 'ropes and pulleys and grips' and so on, which non-plussed the 'street' at that day.

"The firm were always large dealers in gas and street railway securities, and have been for many years trusted brokers for many wealthy corporations in this city as well as in New York and Chicago. The Philadelphia Traction syndicate, who have been the originators of the largest and most powerful city passenger railway companies in the world, have dealt through this firm, and the business conducted by them recalls to mind the financing of the Philadelphia Traction Company, the Baltimore Traction Company, the Pittsburgh Traction Company, the Metropolitan Traction Company, the West and North Side Street Railroads of Chicago, the volume of which dealings have been enormous."

Robert Glendinning was for many years a member of the Union League of Philadelphia. He died at his residence, 2002 Spruce street, where funeral services were held March 8, 1893, by Rev. Dr. J. N. Blachard, of St. James' Protestant Episcopal Church, and he was buried in Woodland Cemetery. The Philadelphia Times, of March 9, 1893, said:

"It is not often that such an array of men, representing such diversified interests, meet as were present yesterday at the funeral of Robert Glendinning. It illustrated the far-reaching character of his friendships and the confidence he inspired, which led his friends to stick to him through thick and thin. Yesterday closed the last sad scene in the adventurous and in some respects brilliant career of one of the most inimitable and agreeable men who ever belonged to the Philadelphia Stock Exchange."

After leaving college he became associate editor of Phila. North American, of which his father was owner. At the time of his engagement to Miss Glendinning, Town Topics, the New York society paper said: "Mr. McMichael is son of Clayton McMichael, the publisher of the Phila. North American, and is himself a clever young journalist, who makes a specialty of dramatic criticism and society gossip. He is, too, a capital amateur actor and stage manager, and it is largely owing to his efforts that the Mask and Wig Club of the Univ. of Pa. has achieved its phenomenal success." ROBERT GLENDINNING (formerly Robert Edward Glendinning), son of Robert and Ellen E. (Butcher) Glendinning, was born in Philadelphia, August 10, 1867. He entered the Towne Scientific School, University of Pennsylvania, with the class of '88, in 1884, and left during Freshman year; he was chairman of the class executive committee. He entered his father's firm of Robert Glendinning & Co. and after his father's death, conducted the business under the same name. He is a member of the Rittenhouse and Markham Clubs of Philadelphia, the Union League, the Philadelphia Barge, the Philadelphia Gun, the Philadelphia Cricket, and the Huntindon Valley clubs, and of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion; a director of the Western National Bank, and a member of the Philadelphia, New York and Chicago Stock Exchanges. He belonged to the First Troop Philadelphia City Cavalry, and was second Sergeant in that body when it was in the United States service during the Spanish-American War.

He married, 1896, Elizabeth Rodman Fisher, daughter of George W. Carpenter, of "Wakefield," Fisher's Lane, Germantown. Her mother Mary Rodman (Fisher) Carpenter, was born at "Wakefield," August 20, 1838, and was the daughter of Thomas Rodman Fisher, by his wife Letitia Harvey Ellicott; granddaughter of William Logan and Mary (Rodman) Fisher, and great-granddaughter of Thomas Fisher, by his wife Sarah Logan, daughter of Dr. William and Hannah (Emlen) Logan, of "Stenton." "Wakefield," the ancestral home of the Fisher family, was originally part of the Stenton estate and has therefore been the home of Mrs. Glendinning's ancestors for two centuries. "Wakefield" was established on the Stenton estate in 1795 by Thomas Fisher, and since that time has been the home of Mrs. Glendinning's direct ancestors. Fisher's Lane takes its name from the family so long resident on that thoroughfare.

Robert Glendinning and his wife lived for a time at his father's former home, 2002 Spruce street, Philadelphia, and later removed to Chestnut Hill, where their place is called "The Squirrels." Mrs. Glendinning is a member of the Colonial Dames.

CATHARINE MAY BUTCHER, daughter of Thomas Tyson Butcher, by his wife Elizabeth Hood Orum, born May 5, 1857, died November 23, 1891, married at St. James' Episcopal Church, Twenty-second and Walnut streets, Philadelphia, December 17, 1879, William H. Wile, born in Franconia township, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, September 27, 1842.

Frederick Wile, the great-grandfather of William H. Wile, was born at Carlsruhe, Germany, July 23, 1726. He was a soldier under Frederick the Great for a number of years. In 1754 he emigrated to Pennsylvania and settled in Franconia township, Philadelphia (now Montgomery) county, where his son and grandson later resided. Here five children were born to him, a daughter Mary Magdalen, born October 17, 1756, a son John Ludwig, born August 10, 1759, John Frederick, born October 31, 1761, John Peter, born September 13, 1763, and John Wilhelm, born December 20, 1766.

A brother Yost Weil (Wile), later came to America and settled in Virginia, but nothing has ever been heard of his family by his Pennsylvania relatives. A sister, Rosalie Weil, was a professional nurse, and went from Germany to Italy, where she married a rich Hebrew by the name of Jesua Levi, who took her with him to London, where he later died leaving her a large fortune. She died in 1803, without issue, and many years later her heirs were advertised for in Philadelphia and New York papers.

Wilhelm Wile, youngest son of Frederick, born December 20, 1766, married (first) a Miss Weirman, and had two daughters. He married (second) Barbara Henge, born August 31, 1774, died 1849, by whom he had three daughters and three sons, the youngest of whom was Samuel H. Wile, born in Franconia township, in the same house in which his father was born, July 24, 1812, and died there April 29, 1860. He married Catharine Hartzell, born April 9, 1811, died June 3, 1890, daughter of Philip and Elizabeth (Gerhart) Hartzell, and first cousin to Dr. E. V. Gerhart, Professor of Theology, in the Theological Seminary connected with Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pennsylvania. Samuel H. and Catharine (Hartzell) Wile had five sons, Tobias, William H., Samuel, Allen and George, and two daughters, Elizabeth and Barbara. The family were for generations members of Christ Reformed Church, at Indian Creek, near Telford, Pennsylvania, of which Frederick Wile was one of the early supporters.

William H. Wile was the second son of Samuel H. and Catharine (Hartzell) Wile, and was born on the old homestead in Franconia, September 27, 1842. His early education was acquired in the district schools of that township, and at the age of seventeen years he became a clerk in the general merchandise store at Harleyville, and remained there until 1862, when he embarked in the grocery business on his own account in Philadelphia. He later engaged in the insurance business, and finally became interested in the organization of the Washington and St. Mary's Railroad, one of the connecting links of the Pennsylvania Railroad system in Maryland, and turning his attention to the development of that enterprise, became secretary, and in 1890, vice-president of the company. He later purchased three thousand acres of land at St. Mary's, the terminus of the railroad, and was instrumental in the establishment of a number of important industries and institutions there. He has since been interested in a number of financial enterprises and resides in Philadelphia. He is a member of the Union League and other social and patriotic organizations.

Issue of William Henry and Catharine May (Butcher) Wile:

William Henry Wile, Jr., b. April 1, 1881, educated in public schools of Phila., graduate of Phila. High School, and of Univ. of Pa., class of 1906, receiving degree B. S.; is now in employ of U. S. Geological Survey.

WASHINGTON BUTCHER, son of Amos W. and Susannah (Tyson) Butcher, was born in Philadelphia, December 9, 1814, and died there January 8, 1873. The following condensed summary of his career is from the "History of the Girard Bank," of Philadelphia (of which he was a director for the years 1847-49: 53-58: 64-67; and 69-71), by J. Granville Leach, LL. B., 1902:

"Washington Butcher, son of Amos Wright Butcher, was born at Philadelphia, 9 December 1814; died there January 8, 1873. He was a prominent wholesale provision merchant and was one of the promoters of the organization of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and served as a director of the same from 1849 until his death, except during a short absence in Europe. He was also one of the founders of the American Steamship Company, in which he was a director and for some time president."

Soon after the death of Washington Butcher, his pastor, Rev. George Dana Boardman, D. D., LL. D., prepared a Memorial of him, which was published in Philadelphia, 1873, which included with other material, the funeral sermon preached by Dr. Boardman himself. We quote from the Memorial:

"At the age of twenty-five, he and his brother Thomas Tyson Butcher, formed a partnership, and, under the title of T. T. & W. Butcher, succeeded to their father's business, occupying the same building in Water Street, which their father and grandfather had occupied for many years, and with stainless honor. When we remember the frequent and violent mutations, incident to the business character of young countries like our own, this circumstance, that three successive generations carried on the same business in the same place becomes specially noteworthy. In his twenty-seventh year he became conscious of that great moral change which decides what our eternity shall be. On the twelfth day of February, 1841, he joyously submitted himself to that holy rite which Christ the Lord has appointed as the token of entrance into his Kingdom and allegiance to Himself, as the memento of His own Burial and Resurrection, and as the augury of a new and everlasting Life. At the same time he was received into the fellowship of the First Baptist Church of Philadelphia, of which he continued to be, till his translation into the Church Triumphant, a most devout, valuable, and Honored member. * * * On the evening of October 27, 1856, he was elected a Deacon of the First Baptist Church of Philadelphia, which office he filled, to the great acceptance of his brethren, till his translation to the higher ministry of the heavenly service. Among the many trusts confided to him as a member of the community, there was none he felt to be so truly honorable as his sacred ministry as one of his church's almoners; and faithfully did he discharge his trust. How many Sunday afternoons, so often claimed by those who have far fewer cares than he as exclusively the property of home, he spent in visiting Christ's poor and lonely ones, gladly and proudly disbursing to them from Christ's store-house of heavenly and earthly riches.

"And so the years swept by; years of mingled prosperity and adversity, but years in which, through God's good providence, the prosperity largely outweighed the adversity. These years were not marked by extraordinary events. God's best gift is sunshine, and it comes daily; and because it comes daily it instigates no special record. So it was with him whose life we are sketching. As time winged by he steadily gained reputation, esteem, friends, financial success. Presently the venerable place in Water Street became too strait; quarters more commodious were secured in Front Street, where an honored son of an honored father still conducts, on a vaster scale than ever, the business of a fourth generation. And now, in God's good order, came the day of trial. There is no such unfold of character, no such quickener and revealer of its potencies as adversity. * * * The tempest burst in connection with the bombardment of Fort Sumter. Mr. Butcher's business relations being largely in the South, the sudden declaration of war involved him in total and remediless embarrassment. The carefully built fabric of years was leveled in an instant. And now his demeanor was superb! He did not abandon himself to despondency or to torpor. In the providence of God, laid low, he modestly and unurmuringly adjusted himself to the simplicities of misfortune, for his virtue was not the virtue of obstinate rigidity, but of a cheerful flexibility,—a flexibility which, however pliant, was nevertheless infrangible. Meanwhile, his health reeling under the fierce shock, for a time gave way; but supported by an heroic wife and an unflinching trust in God, he continued steadfast and cheery. Amidst it all with property lost and health shattered, and the future black, he gave a cherished son to the country, as it was accounting that God was able to raise him from the dead whence also in a figure he received him back." (This son was Henry C.). "Such dauntless courage could not but evoke admiration. Nobility is contagious; princely friends were by, to offer words of cheer and, better still, deeds of confidence. Nor did any ever confide in Washington Butcher's word in vain! Promises sown in adversity yielded, when prosperity returned, harvests of cheerful fulfillment. Nor can better evidence of this be given than extracts from testimonials, coming from various quarters,—testimonials alike honorable to offerer and recipient. We subjoin the following as examples: The first is from the minutes of the Directors of the ——— Bank, bearing date of October 26, 1868:

"The Board of Directors has learned with great pleasure of the payment by Washington Butcher, Esq., of the balance of principal and interest of a debt due from him to the Bank, and from which obligation he was fully discharged by compromise many years ago. The Board with a full appreciation of the feeling prompting Mr. Butcher, beg to congratulate him on the consummation of an act so highly honorable to him as a man and as a merchant, and unite in the expression of a hope that he may long live to enjoy the reflection of so worthy a deed, and the respect of his fellow citizens. They order that this record be entered upon their minutes, and a copy signed by the officers of the Board, be forwarded to Mr. Butcher."

"A second congratulation is expressed thus:—

"Dear Sir:—We are gratified to inform you that we have been constituted a Committee, by the Directors of the ——— Bank, to offer on their behalf for your acceptance, the accompanying silver pitcher and pair of goblets, as a slight token of their admiration of your noble conduct as a man and your practical and delicate appreciation of true mercantile integrity. Overwhelmed in a flood of general commercial disaster, you were willingly and legally released from all pre-existing pecuniary obligations, by an honorable compromise; but so soon as your indomitable energy and persevering industry and economy, with the aid of Providence, restored your ability, disdaining recourse to conventional usage, you paid the bank the entire balance of your original indebtedness, thus demonstrating that you proudly regarded your moral and religious duty paramount to the full and absolute release of any legal obligation. With the fervent hope that your life may long be spared to enjoy this conscious rectitude and the high opinion which your character has so justly earned in the community, we remain, etc."

"In this connection the following letter, not quoted in the Memorial, may be here inserted:—

"Banking House of Drexel & Co.,

"Philadelphia, Nov. 9, 1869.

"Washington Butcher, Esq.

"Dear Sir:—We have to day received from you a check for $3342.96/100, the balance of a claim we held against you many years since, which we long ago settled with you, giving you a receipt in full by surrendering the evidences of debt and accepting your settlement. We cannot allow this matter to pass without expressing to you our great appreciation of your highly honorable conduct in this matter in paying us when we have no legal claim whatever, and in adopting a course so seldom done by others under similar circumstances.

"With feelings of personal regard, we remain,

"Very Truly Ys

"Drexel & Co."

"To return to the Memorial:—

"And we come to the sad yet beautiful close. Although to human vision his sun went down early, it did not go down in gloom, but with just enough of cloud to make a gorgeous sunset" * * * "The story of his last illness may be best told by his physician, W. W. Keen, M. D., who, at the request of the writer of this sketch, has kindly furnished the following note:—

"I was first called to see Mr. Butcher, professionally, on the 27th of December, 1872, thirteen days before his death, I had seen him occasionally for slight ailments, when although very sensitive in reference to any possible pulmonary troubles, his elastic step and cheerful manner were conspicuous. But even on this very first visit I observed a certain indefinable want of his usual happiness,—a depression which I was unable to account for by any symptoms then present. His voice, too became tremulous in a day or two, as his weakness rapidly increased, and he was confined, first to his room, and then to his bed. In view of his present nervous prostration and his previous attack of temporary paralysis, I had a serious conversation with him on early withdrawal from some of the overwhelming business cares of the past few years, and he indicated his intention of resigning some of his official positions and taking to himself more leisure in the country; adding however, the prophetic words,—'But I hardly think I shall see the country again.'

"His patience amid the discomforts necessarily incident to sickness was remarkable, * * * A few days before his death, seeing that the issue would undoubtedly be a fatal one, I told him of the fact, approaching it cautiously, yet stating it frankly. I found him already convinced of it, and as calm as I had ever seen him. * * * His consciousness he retained up to a short time before his death, * * *

"Dr. Keen's letter is much longer, but the above is all that need be repeated here.

"The Memorial continues:—

"On the first rumor of his serious illness, the community was deeply moved, the press of the city daily bulletined his condition, and its hopes and fears. As friend met friend in the street the question was nervously exchanged, 'What is the last report from Washington Butcher?' And when at length on the morning of January 8, 1873, the sad news came that he was gone, the grief was universal and profound.

"Letters of condolence poured in from every quarter—from New York, Chicago, Milwaukee, Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, New Orleans, etc. Everywhere in the business world the announcement of his death evoked deep sorrow. Resolutions of respect and condolence were passed by the Board of Trustees of the First Baptist Church of Philadelphia, the Board of Directors of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, the Board of Directors of the American Steamship Company, the Board of Directors of the West Jersey Railroad Company, the Board of Managers of the Commercial Exchange, the Board of Directors of the South American Mining Company, and the Board of Directors of the Girard National Bank. That of the trustees of the First Baptist Church is as follows:—

"At a special meeting of the Board of Trustees of the First Baptist Church, held on Friday evening, January 10, 1873, The following Resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That in the death of our late Brother Deacon Washington Butcher, this Board mourns the loss of one of its most intelligent and efficient members. Of unsullied purity and honesty of character, he was wise in council, prompt in action, generous even munificent in his liberalities, kindly, courteous, charitable, full of love to his brethren, he was a friend to the poor, and in sympathy with all things noble, generous and good. Devoted to Christ and the Church, with the hope in him and in us of future years of usefulness; to our weak vision, blinded still with grief and tears, his death seems untimely and our loss irreparable.

"With a deep sense of personal bereavement, bowing humbly in submission to the Heavenly Father's will, we stretch out our hands, lame indeed; (for he was hands and arms and strength and cheer to us all) but hands full of love and sorrow, and sympathy to his afflicted family. "Geo. W. Allen, Secty."

"This resolution of the Board of Trustees was subsequently adopted by the Church, the entire membership present rising to their feet in token of their reverent memory of the departed.

"This resolution and that of the Directors of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company are given in full in the Memorial, which continues:

"The funeral took place on Saturday, the eleventh of January. Prayers were first offered for the family in the privacy of their own home. At half past ten, A. M., the cortège moved to the sanctuary of the First Baptist Church, the following gentlemen acting as pall bearers: Messrs. Daniel B. Cummins, Thomas A. Scott, Stephen B. Kingston, Edmund Smith, Isaac H. O'Harra, John F. Forepaugh, Adam H. Warthman, and Philip L. Swyler.

"Although it was a bitter winter's day, the spacious edifice was thronged. Rarely has there been gathered at a funeral in Philadelphia a larger number of the solid business men of the community; never an audience more deeply moved."

Then follows the funeral sermon preached by Rev. George Dana Boardman, D. D., LL. D., pastor of the First Baptist Church, and the writer of the Memorial, which, as the quotations from the latter given above cover practically all the biographical facts touched on in the sermon, is not reproduced here.

The following obituary notices of Mr. Butcher appeared in the Philadelphia newspapers named:

The Philadelphia North American and United States Gazette for Thursday, January 9, 1873:

"Death of a Merchant.—As had been expected, according to the announcement made by us yesterday, Washington Butcher, Esq., president of the American Steamship Company, died yesterday morning at seven o'clock, at his residence, Filbert Street, above Broad, in the 59th year of his age. He was a provision merchant of the firm of Washington Butcher & Sons, Front Street near Race. He had been in the business for a long period, the firm being one of the largest provision houses in Philadelphia, having branch houses in the principal cities of the South and West. He was a director of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and also of the Girard Bank, and was a Deacon and Trustee of the First Baptist Church, Broad and Arch Streets. He was at all times one of the most generous and public spirited citizens of Philadelphia, earnestly active in favor of all our great enterprises, and liberal, both to charities and public institutions. He had been obliged to relinquish active business by failing health, but as his health improved he became again immersed in many great enterprises, and at length fell a victim to Bright's disease of the kidneys. Besides a large fortune, he leaves a name and reputation truly enviable. He will be a great loss to the city in many ways, and in none more so than to the Steamship Company to which he had given much attention."

The same newspaper had in another column:

"Washington Butcher, Esq., one of the most prominent private citizens, died yesterday morning at his late residence, 1409 Filbert Street. He was in the fifty-ninth year of his age. He was the senior partner in the old firm of Washington Butcher & Son, wholesale produce commission merchants, 146 North Front Street."

The announcement in the paper of the day before referred to in the beginning of the above obituary notice, was in an article on some affairs of the American Steamship Company, and was as follows:

"We regret to learn that Mr. Washington Butcher, president of the Company, is lying at the point of death, given up by his physicians. Mr. Butcher is a director of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, which position he has held for many years with general respect and esteem, as well as usefulness. He has been identified so long in his private business with the interests of Philadelphia that his presence in the Railroad Board was always regarded with peculiar satisfaction, as was also his presidency of the Steamship Company."

The same newspaper has the following account of his funeral in its issue of Monday, January 13, 1873:

"The funeral of Washington Butcher, Esq., took place from his late residence, No. 1409 Filbert Street, at ten o'clock Saturday morning. The officers and directors of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and a number of citizens attended. The body was taken to the Baptist Church, at Broad and Arch Streets, where an address was made by Rev. George Dana Boardman. The funeral then proceeded to Laurel Hill, and the body was laid in the family vault."

The Philadelphia Inquirer, for Thursday, January 9, 1873, had the following:

"Washington Butcher, Esq., died a few minutes after seven o'clock yesterday morning, at his residence No. 1409 Filbert Street, in the 59th year of his age. Mr. Butcher was one of the most prominent men in the community and his great business tact not only qualified him to amass an ample fortune, but advanced the interests of various concerns with which he was connected. He had been for many years a director of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and always took a lively interest in the affairs of that corporation. Until recently he was a director of the Girard Bank, and only two weeks prior to his death had been elected to the responsible position of president of the American Steamship Company, a position he would have filled with honor to himself and profit to the community had his life been spared.

"As a member of the Board of Trade, his counsels were eagerly sought and invariably carried with them great respect and influence. Both personally and as a business man, Mr. Butcher was of unimpeachable integrity in word and deed. The firm, of which he was the senior partner at the time of his death, was established more than thirty years ago and was widely known throughout the country. During the financial panic of 1857, Mr. Butcher became financially embarrassed, but by reason of his well known probity and exhaustless energy, he recovered the position he had lost, paid every cent of his indebtedness, both principal and interest, and leaves a very large estate.

"Mr. Butcher was one of the deacons and trustees of the First Baptist Church, at Broad and Arch Streets, and was prominent in all the active charities of Philadelphia.

"Mr. Butcher was a gentleman of great culture, refined tastes, and unlimited generosity. His manner was especially genial and attractive, and, together with his rare honesty and truthfulness, won him hosts of friends, who to day will profoundly feel their loss. He leaves a large family who have, in their bereavement the sincere sympathy of the entire community."

At the time of his death Washington Butcher held the following positions: Deacon and trustee of the First Baptist Church of Philadelphia; senior director of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company; president of the American Steamship Company of Philadelphia; director of the Cumberland Valley Railroad Company; director of the Philadelphia and Erie Railroad Company; director of the West Jersey Railroad Company; director of the Connecting Railroad Company; director of the Belvidere Delaware Railroad; director of the South American Mining Company; manager of the Commercial Exchange of Philadelphia. He had formerly been director of the Girard National Bank of Philadelphia, and a member of the Philadelphia Board of Trade. He was also one of the earliest members of the Union League of Philadelphia.

Washington Butcher married, May 27, 1841, Mary Elizabeth, born in Philadelphia, September 21, 1822, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Brown) Wattson, of that city. The ceremony took place at the residence of the bride's parents, 214 North Front Street, where a wedding breakfast was served. Rev. Dr. Boardman's Memorial, gives the following brief account of the wedding: "On the morning of May 27, 1841, Washington Butcher and Mary Elizabeth Wattson gave themselves to each other in holy marriage, their pastor, Rev. George B. Ide, D. D., officiating. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents, the venerated and saintly couple still surviving, and waiting filial welcome at the Celestial Gate."

Thomas Wattson, father of the bride, was born at Elkton, Maryland, July 25, 1788, died in Philadelphia, February 20, 1874, and was buried at Central Laurel Hill cemetery. The Wattson family were originally residents of the Welsh Tract, in the present state of Delaware. An ancestor of Mrs. Butcher, David Barr, was First Lieutenant in the Lower Regiment, Pennsylvania Militia, 1756; (i. e. Regiment from the Three Lower Counties), Washington Butcher, though he died at 1409 Filbert street, had lived previously a few doors away, at 1403 Filbert street, moving to 1409 between 1867 and 1869. His eldest daughter was married at 1403, and the two younger at 1409. Mrs. Washington Butcher was for many years actively engaged in philanthropic work in Philadelphia, and is still an honorary member of and vice-president of the National Indian Association. She now resides at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Rosalie Butcher, 134 South Twentieth street, Philadelphia.

MARY WASHINGTON BUTCHER, b. in Phila., June 9, 1851; m. Joseph G. Darlington; of whom below;

LAURA WATTSON BUTCHER, born in Philadelphia, June 14, 1842, married on October 27, 1864, at her father's residence, 1403 Filbert street (North Penn Square), Philadelphia, J. Edward Charles O'Sullivan Addicks, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. George Dana Boardman, D. D.

Mr. Addicks, generally known as J. Edward Addicks, was born in Philadelphia, November 21, 1841. He was a son of John Edward Charles O'Sullivan and Margaretta Mac Leod (Turner) Addicks, who were married on January 28, 1841, at No. 50 Pine street, by the Rev. Robert W. Cushman, D. D. The father, known as John E. Addicks, was born in Philadelphia, December 15, 1812, and died January 4, 1883, at his residence 1102 Girard street in that city. He was for many years Health Officer of the city; an active member of the Franklin Institute of the State of Pennsylvania; one of the earliest members of the Union League of Philadelphia; and chairman of the League's Committee for organizing troops to proceed to the south during the Civil War. He was the son of John Edward Addicks, of Bremen, Germany (who came to Philadelphia prior to 1808), and Barbara, born in Cork, Ireland, May 5, 1783, daughter of Major Thomas Herbert O'Sullivan, successively in the service of France, England and the Netherlands, by his wife Mary Mc Ready, of New York City.

Major Thomas Herbert O'Sullivan, born in 1759, was the son of General Sir John William O'Sullivan, and Louisa, daughter of Thomas Fitz-Gerald, by his wife Louisa O'Connor Kerry. Louisa Fitz-Gerald was a cousin to Lord Edward Fitz-Gerald, famous Irish patriot of 1798, fifth son of the twentieth Earl of Kildare, and first Duke of Leinster.

Major Thomas Herbert O'Sullivan, educated in France, was originally an officer in the Irish Brigade in the French service under Louis XVI. He first came into public notice on his presentation of Dr. Benjamin Franklin's letter of introduction to Captain John Paul Jones, on board the ship "Ariel," in the port of L'Orient, France; Dr. Franklin being then agent of the Colonies at the Court of France. The subsequent treatment of young O'Sullivan by Captain Jones is given in the narrative of Captain Nathaniel Fanning, who was an eye witness of what he related, as published in the "Life of John Paul Jones," and "Memoirs of Captain Nathaniel Fanning." Captain Jones placed O'Sullivan in irons in the hold of his vessel, from which situation he was, with great difficulty, rescued by his brother officers of the Irish Brigade. After his release O'Sullivan awaited his opportunity and, when Captain Jones came ashore, gave him a very severe caning. Captain Fanning further relates that Captain Jones's complaint of the satisfaction taken by young O'Sullivan, "made a great bustle and noise" in the town of L'Orient, and "a party of Light Horse was dispatched into the country with orders to scour the public roads and bring him back dead or alive. But young O'Sullivan was safe at Fort Louis, about six miles off, and among the officers of the garrison." On account of the hue and cry raised by Captain Jones upon this occasion, O'Sullivan was, however, obliged to flee the country, and he secured passage on a vessel to New York City, where he was received by Sir Henry Clinton, Commander-in-Chief of the British forces in America, and appointed an officer on his staff.

On February 25, 1782, O'Sullivan married, in New York City, Mary McReady, daughter of a Mr. McReady, of New York City, and his wife Barbara Miller, the ceremony being performed by Bishop Sebring, the Bishop of the Province of New York. By this marriage Major O'Sullivan had issue:

BARBARA O'SULLIVAN, b. May 5, 1783; m. John Edward Addicks; of whom presently;
John William Thomas Gerald O'Sullivan, m. Mary Rowley, of Bower-End and Fenton-Vivian, co. Salop, Eng.

Major O'Sullivan married (second) Adriene de la Pierre, of Morges, Canton du Vaud, Switzerland, lady-in-waiting at the Court of George III., whose portrait was painted by Gainsborough. By her he had no issue.

After the close of the Revolutionary War, Thomas Herbert O'Sullivan was given a command at the Tower of London, and when William, Prince of Orange, visited London in 1795, he was one of the officers detailed to wait upon that Prince. O'Sullivan was at the time merely a Lieutenant in the English service, and feeling therefore that the Hanoverian government frowned upon his noted Jacobite ancestry, he became involved in an angry correspondence with the Duke of York, Commander-in-Chief of the British Army, but with no favorable result. He confided his troubles to the Prince of Orange, and when that Prince returned to Holland to ascend the throne as William I., he invited O'Sullivan to accompany him as a Major in the Dutch Army. This offer O'Sullivan accepted and for a number of years enjoyed the brilliant society of the Dutch capitol. Contemporary notices refer to him as "one of the handsomest and most elegant men of his time," and his miniature in British uniform admirably sustains that reputation. His great charm of manner won him the intimate friendship of the famous and renowned Austrian Field Marshal, the Prince de Ligne, one of the courtliest wits of his time.

Major O'Sullivan inherited from Donal O'Sullivan the Spanish title of Count of Bearhaven, the official use of which necessitated a residence in Spain. This title Philip III. (reviving an O'Sullivan title in Ireland, that of Earl of Bearhaven), conferred upon Donal O'Sullivan for his heroic adherence to Roman Catholicism in the face of the destruction of his Clan and of his Castle of Dunboy, during Ireland's resistance, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

Major O'Sullivan died at The Hague in 1824. Further notices of him will be found in the "Encyclopædia of National Biography," O'Hart's "Irish Pedigrees," O'Callaghan's "Irish Brigades," and the Marquis de Ruvigny's "Jacobite Peerage," pp. 144, &c., where he is mentioned as "Sir Thomas Herbert O'Sullivan, 2d. Baronet."

General Sir John William O'Sullivan, father of Major O'Sullivan, was born in Ireland in 1700, and was educated for the Catholic priesthood in Rome, and later in Paris. Upon his arrival in France, he obtained the post of domestic tutor to the Comte de Maillebois, son of the Marquis de Maillebois, later Marechal of France, under Louis XV. The Marquis perceiving signs of military genius in his son's tutor, persuaded O'Sullivan to leave the church for the army, and appointed him his secretary and Aide-de-Campe during his campaign in Corsica, in 1739, and in Italy and on the Rhine in the War of the Austrian Succession. O'Sullivan rose to the rank of Colonel in the Irish Brigade in the French service, and attained such reputation in the French army, that a contemporary French General said of him, that O'Sullivan "understood the irregular art of war better than any man in Europe, nor was his knowledge of the regular much inferior to that of the best general then living."

It was owing to his reputation for knowledge of irregular warfare that he was appointed Quartermaster-General, of the forces of Prince Charles Edward, The Young Pretender, then about to sail from Belle Isle upon the expedition to "disengage" the crown of England from the head of George II., and restore it to the Stuarts. O'Sullivan's conspicuous part in that undertaking is told in the Jacobite histories, memoirs, and novels of that period, and the present. He is the "beloved Sullivan" of "Prince Charlie's Scottish Wanderings," "one of the most engaging and best bred officers of the French Army," of O'Hart's "Irish Pedigrees;" "a distinguished ornament of the Court of Louis XV," of Charles Lever's historical romance, "Gerald Fitz-Gerald, or The Chevalier;" he is the "Colonel Sullivan" of Sir Walter Scott's "Waverly" and "Tales of a Grandfather;" Voltaire's "Général Sullivan" in his Precis du Siècle de Louis XV," and carelessly enough, he is Robert Louis Stevenson's "Sir Thomas Sullivan" in his "Master of Ballantrae."

General Sir John William O'Sullivan's miniature, in the uniform of the Irish Brigade, portrays a face of singular mentality and charm.

"James III," "The Old Pretender," whose commendatory letters concerning General O'Sullivan are preserved in the Stuart MSS, conferred, in 1745 or 1751, the title of Baronet upon O'Sullivan, as "the Prince of Wales' Quartermaster-General."—See Record in Royal Library, Windsor Castle.

Behind General Sir John William O'Sullivan the line extends through the Provincial Kings of Munster, of whom thirty-eight were sole monarchs of Ireland, to King Milesius of Spain, who conquered Ireland at a period variously stated from 1000 to 730, B. C. See original Clan Pedigrees, Royal Irish Academy, Dublin, Ireland.

BARBARA O'SULLIVAN, daughter of Major Thomas Herbert Sullivan, by his first wife, Mary McReady, and granddaughter of General John William O'Sullivan, born May 5, 1783, was a woman of great mental activity and an authoress of considerable note. From the age of two years until she attained the age of sixteen she was educated in the convent La Congregation de Notre Dame, at Montreal, Canada. In her published writings, speaking of this early period, she says, "For my part, I was scarcely twelve years of age when I read Buffon, whose works came to the relief of my, till then, daily reading of the Latin Liturgy and Lives of Saints." She married in 1799, Joseph Lee, a merchant of New York City, later of Philadelphia, where he died. She married (second) in Philadelphia, June 15, 1813, John Edward Addicks, who had come from Bremen, Germany, to Philadelphia, prior to 1808.

The period of her literary activity came after her second marriage. Her knowledge of both the ancient and modern languages was extensive, and as early as 1826, she translated from German into French, with additions of her own, Dr. J. H. P. Seidensteucker's system of learning to speak the French language, under the title of "An Elementary Practical Book for Learning to Speak the French Language." This volume was published under the title of "Addicks' Elements" and copies of it can be found in the Library of the American Philosophical Society and other libraries of Philadelphia. In its day this book met with much commendation, and Barbara O'Sullivan Addicks received letters from many parts of the United States, among them commendatory letters from the President of Georgetown College, from Henri Guegan, Professor of the French language at Washington, from the pastor of the German Lutheran congregation, and Professor of the German language at Baltimore, from the Professor of Ancient and Modern Languages at Washington College, Virginia, from the Professor of Modern Languages at the University of Virginia, from Charles Ploot, Professor of the French Language in Philadelphia, and from many other eminent educators and scholars.

In January, 1831, her "Essay on Education, treated as Natural Science," or "Addicks Essay No. 1," (which by permission of Chief Justice John Marshall was dedicated to him), was read before the learned body of the Franklin Institute, Philadelphia, and copies of it are preserved in the archives of that Institute, in the libraries of the American Philosophical Society, of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, and elsewhere.

Mrs. Barbara O'Sullivan Addicks died in Philadelphia, January 9, 1853, and was buried in the family vault of her son, John E. Addicks, in Laurel Hill Cemetery. By her first husband, Joseph Lee, she had two children, Adelaide Lee, who married a Mr. Rogers, and Eliza Lee. By her second husband, John Edward Addicks, she had issue:

Thomas Herbert O'Sullivan Addicks, d., San Antonio, Tex., Aug. 30, 1853;

JOHN EDWARD O'SULLIVAN ADDICKS, generally known as John E. Addicks; of whom presently;

Caroline Addicks, m. Frederick Pierre Dimpfel, of France, and lived for many years in Europe; was present at coronation of Queen Victoria—the faded gloves, worn by her on that occasion, embroidered in silver with crown of England, are still in possession of her descendants. Two of her sons, Frederick and William O'Sullivan Dimpfel, resided on eastern shore of Md.

JOHN E. ADDICKS, second son of John Edward and Barbara (O'Sullivan) Addicks, was born in Philadelphia, December 15, 1812, and died there January 4, 1883. He married, January 28, 1841, Margaretta MacLeod Turner, a descendant of John Turner, an Ensign in the American army during the Revolutionary War, and of John MacLeod, a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature, 1811-13, a son of George MacLeod, and his wife Margaret Hamilton, of Lewis, Scotland. An account of the career and public services of John E. Addicks has already been given above. His son J. Edward Addicks, who married Laura Wattson Butcher, and as second wife, her sister Rosalie, when a young man became a member of Company D, Gray Reserves, which regiment later became the First Regiment Infantry, National Guard of Pennsylvania. On September 12, 1863, Company D, Gray Reserves was mustered into the service of the State of Pennsylvania, as Company D, Seventh Regiment, Pennsylvania Militia. It performed a tour of duty in the Civil War, September 15-25, 1862, and was mustered out September 26, J. Edward Addicks serving with the company in this tour of duty.

FLORENCE ADDICKS, only child of J. Edward and Laura Wattson (Butcher)

Addicks, born in Philadelphia, December 11, 1866, now resides with her step-mother Mrs. Rosalie Butcher, second wife of J. Edward Addicks, at 134 South Twentieth street, Philadelphia. Miss Addicks was for three years a student in the English Department of the University of Pennsylvania.

She is a member of the Acorn Club, the Civic Club, the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, the Cork Historical and Archæological Society of Ireland, the Philadelphia Chapter, Pennsylvania Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, and of the General Robert Patterson Chapter of the United States Daughters of 1812.

HENRY CLAY BUTCHER, eldest son and second child of Washington and Mary Elizabeth (Watson) Butcher, born in Philadelphia, August 7, 1844, was for a number of years, 1872-81, a director of the Girard National Bank, and the following sketch of him is quoted from the "History of the Girard National Bank" of Philadelphia, before referred to, the years of his service being those indicated in the parenthesis:

"Henry C. Butcher (1872-74; 77-78-80-81) was born at Philadelphia, 7 August, 1845. He is a son of Washington Butcher and was for many years a member of the well-known firm of Washington Butcher's Sons. He was the organizer and for some years the president of the Southern Cotton Oil Company; president of the Wesson Process Company; director of the American Steamship Company, and of the Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania; and is now a director of the Tradesman's National Bank, and of the W. J. McCahan Sugar Refining Company."

Henry C. Butcher was the son mentioned in "Memorial of Washington Butcher," quoted above, whom the father "gave to his country" in the midst of his personal troubles. He enlisted in Company D, Fifteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry, called the Anderson Cavalry, and was mustered in with the greater part of the regiment, August 22, 1862. Samuel R. Bates, in his "History of the Pennsylvania Volunteers," says of this regiment: "A Company known as the Anderson Troop, had been previously recruited by Captain Palmer, to serve as body guard to General Anderson. It was understood that the new regiment, which he was authorized to recruit, should be employed on similar duty. Accordingly, especial care was taken to obtain a select body, and in its ranks were young men from some of the wealthiest and most influential families in the Commonwealth." Among the young men of Philadelphia who enlisted, it was understood that the whole regiment was to be composed exclusively of gentlemen, and, while this standard was not reached, yet the rank and file was far above the average regiment in social position. Henry C. Butcher contracted a serious illness while in the service and was discharged on surgeon's certificate, February 5, 1863.

At the battle of Stone River, Tennessee, December 31, 1862, he performed an action that is noticed in the "History of the Fifteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry," (The Anderson Cavalry) (Philadelphia, 1906), page 94:

"During this time an act of daring was performed by two of our boys which will be remembered for a long time to come. The name of one was Sergeant Henry C. Butcher, of Company D; the other Private W. B. Holt, of Company L. They saw the enemy's flag and coveted it as a prize, but to attempt its capture was to expose themselves to our own as well as the enemy's fire. After deliberating a moment, the prize was too tempting and they rode up, shot the standard bearer, who had advanced some distance in front of his command, and brought the flag into our lines, the two men riding one wounded horse, the other having been killed. It was an heroic and audacious act. It was a beautiful silk flag belonging to the Third Alabama Battalion, and had been presented by the ladies of Selma, Alabama,—the only flag the force carried. It was subsequently exhibited in the windows of Cornelius & Baker, on Chestnut street, previous to its being presented to Governor Curtin, at Harrisburg.”

The flag was sent to Governor Curtin by Mr. Butcher's father, Washington Butcher, who was allowed this privilege.

After his return to Philadelphia, Mr. Butcher went into business with his father, and after the latter's death, Henry C. and his younger brother, Howard, continued the same business under the firm name of Washington Butcher's Sons. Henry C. Butcher held official position in a number of large corporations, which have been enumerated above, but has now for many years been retired from active business. About 1905 he built a fine dwelling-house on the Southwest corner of Twenty-second and Locust streets, where he now resides. He is a member of the Rittenhouse, Union League, Philadelphia Country, Philadelphia Gun, Philadelphia Barge, and Philadelphia Racquet clubs.

Henry C. Butcher married Ellen Hansell, daughter of Joseph F. and Ellen Forde (Hansell) Page, of Philadelphia, who was of Royal descent as follows:

James II., King of Scotland, by his first wife, Mary, daughter of Arnold d'Egmond, Duke of Guelders, had issue, besides James III.: Alexander, Duke of Albany; David, Earl of Moray; John, Earl of Mar; and Margaret;

James, second Lord Hamilton, who obtained a charter of the lands and Earldom of Arran, dated August 10, 1503, to himself and his heirs, male, in failure of which to revert to the crown. He took a prominent part in the affairs of Scotland, was made Lieutenant-General of the Kingdom, Warden of the Marches, and one of the Lords of the Regency in 1517; and on the forfeiture of the Earl of Angus, he obtained the Lordship of Bothwell. He married (first) Elizabeth, daughter of Alexander, Lord Hume, Chancellor of Scotland; (second) Beatrix, daughter of John, Lord Drummond; (third) Janet, daughter of Sir David Beaton of Creich, in Fifeshire, comptroller temp James VI., and widow of Sir David Livingston, of East Weems, by whom he had,

This nobleman, after the death of James V., 1542, was chosen Regent of Scotland, and the next year was declared heir apparent to the crown, and guardian of Queen Mary during her minority. In 1548 he was invested with the French Order of St. Michael, and was created, by King Henry II., of France, by letters patent dated February 5, 1548-9, Duc de Chatelherault, in Poicton. He married Lady Margaret Douglas, daughter of James, third Earl of Morton, by whom he had issue (besides James, his successor; John, created Marquis of Hamilton, April 17, 1599; David, died unmarried, 1611; Barbara, married (first) James, Lord Fleming, and (second) Alexander, Lord Gordon; Anne, married George, Earl of Huntley; and Jane, married Hugh, Earl of Eglington);

Lord Claud Hamilton, third son, afterwards Baron Paisley, born 1543, who, with his elder brother Lord John Hamilton, afterwards Marquis of Hamilton, was amongst the most zealous adherents of Mary, Queen of Scots. He commanded the vanguard for Queen Mary at the battle of Langside, 1568; was subsequently outlawed, and his estates forfeited by Regent Moray, and with his brother, Lord John, banished from Scotland. But King James VI., of Scotland, and I. of England, in consideration of their loyalty to his mother, restored the Hamiltons to their rank and fortune.

Lord Claud further obtained from King James a grant, dated July 29, 1587, of the whole barony of Paisley, with the title of Baron of Paisley. He married Lady Margaret Seton, daughter of George, fifth Lord Seton, and died in 1621. He had issue:

Sir Frederick, who signalized himself under Gustavus Adolphus, of Sweden, and was afterwards Governor of Ulster; ancestor of the Viscounts of Boyne;

Margaret, wife of William, first Marquis of Douglas.

JAMES HAMILTON, eldest son of Claud, Baron Paisley, was created, 1603, Baron of Abercorn, and advanced, July 10, 1605, to the dignities of Earl of Abercorn, Lord Paisley, Hamilton, Montcastell and Kilpatrick. He married Lady Marion Boyd, daughter of Sir Thomas, fifth Lord Boyd, and died in the lifetime of his father, leaving issue:

One of his grandsons eventually became fourth Earl of Abercorn, and one of his granddaughters was ancestress to Marquise of Sligo, and another the Viscountess Dillon;

MARY WASHINGTON BUTCHER, daughter of Washington and Mary Elizabeth (Wattson) Butcher, born in Philadelphia, June 9, 1851, was married at her father's residence, 1409 Filbert street, Philadelphia, on May 15, 1873, by the Rev. George Dana Boardman, D. D., to Joseph Gazzam Darlington, of Philadelphia, the head of the firm of Joseph G. Darlington & Co., and a representative of a family long prominent in the affairs of Pennsylvania, whose ancestors were among the first settlers of the Province.

Joseph G. Darlington, was a member of the Society of Cincinnati, in the State of Connecticut, and of the Pennsylvania Society Sons of the Revolution, both by descent from Captain Horace Seymour; of the Colonial Society of Pennsylvania; the St. Nicholas Society of New York; and of the New England Society. He was also a member of the Radnor Hunt, Merion Cricket, Germantown Cricket, Corinthian Yacht, Manufacturers' Art, and Penn clubs, of Philadelphia; and of a number of prominent clubs in New York and elsewhere.

Joseph G. Darlington was for many years, and until his death, a member of the Union League of Philadelphia, and for four years, 1899-1902, was president of that organization. As such he presided on many important occasions, when distinguished guests of the League were entertained. On February 4, 1899, a banquet was given by the Union League to the United States Peace Commissioners who arranged the treaty of peace between the United States and Spain, at the close of the Spanish-American War. On November 24, 1900, a banquet was given to celebrate Founder's Day of the organization of the League, when President McKinley and his Cabinet came from Washington on a special train, and were met and escorted through the city by the First Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry. This banquet "surpassed all previous functions in the history of the Union League. The Union League then had the honor of entertaining the most brilliant company of distinguished men who ever assembled at one time within its walls. The Banquet Hall was elaborately decorated with the National Colors and a magnificent display of flowers."

On March 10, 1902, Mr. Darlington presided at the luncheon given by the Union League to His Royal Highness Prince Henry of Prussia; and on November 22, 1902, another Founder's Day Banquet was given when the League was again honored by the presence of the President of the United States and his cabinet; Hon. Theodore Roosevelt, who had on the previous occasion come as Governor of New York and Vice-President elect, appearing as President of the United States. Again the distinguished guests were escorted to the Hall of the League by Mr. Darlington and the First City Troop. Among the other guests of honor were the Governor of Pennsylvania, the Governor-elect of Pennsylvania, representatives of the great universities and of the Philadelphia Board of Education, and many other distinguished gentlemen actively engaged in the affairs of the world.

Following the expiration of Joseph G. Darlington's fourth term as President of the Union League, a dinner was given him on January 8, 1903, at which a magnificent loving cup was presented to him by the Vice-Presidents and Directors of the four Boards over which he had presided as President. Later, by invitation of the United States, Mr. and Mrs. Darlington dined at the White House.

Prior to 1887, Mr. and Mrs. Darlington resided with their family at 2036 Spruce street, Philadelphia, but in that year removed to "Roselyu," in Haverford township, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, where he died March 18, 1908.

MORRIS FAMILY.

ROBERT MORRIS, the distinguished patriot and financier of the Revolution is said to have come of somewhat humble parentage. His grandfather, Andrew Morris, was a mariner, of Liverpool, England, voyaged from that port along the coasts of England and France, and his only son Robert, father of the American patriot, was early in life apprenticed to an iron worker.

ROBERT MORRIS, SR., was married in Liverpool, but his wife evidently died soon after the birth of his son, whose earliest recollection was of the care and attention of his grandmother; her kindness he always referred to with gratitude. When his son was an infant, Robert Morris abandoned the business of an iron worker, came to America as representative of the Liverpool firm of Fidler, Cunliffe and Sons, tobacco factors, and took charge of their establishment at Oxford, Talbot county, Maryland, then and for many years an important market and outfitting station for the eastern and western shores of Maryland. Seven or eight ships from or bound to foreign ports were frequently anchored there at one time, unloading English goods, and loading American products, principally tobacco. Mr. Morris, then a man of less than thirty years, having been born in Liverpool in 1711, held a very responsible position as purchasing agent and superintendent of the shipping of large quantities of tobacco to his firm in Liverpool. He was a man of many excellent parts and had received a fair education, as he was possessed of a keen literary taste and was the possessor of a library, of which at his death he devised to a number of his intimate friends, each, "any six books" which they might select. It is related by Henry Callister, who was his assistant and succeeded him as representative of the Cunliffe firm, that when suffering from the injury that caused his death, he read to Mr. Morris at his request from Plato's "Phaedo," and that it "soothed his mind and alleviated his physical sufferings." He seems to have been of a jovial disposition, of considerable intellectual ability, and had many warm friends among the influential business men and traders with whom he came in contact in the transaction of business. Among these was Robert Greenway, a Philadelphia merchant, to whom he later entrusted his son for business advancement in Philadelphia. About July 1, 1750, when the ship "Liverpool" arrived at Oxford, Mr. Morris with a party of friends went out to her in a small yawl, and on their return trip, their boat was struck by the wad fired by a careless gunner, in giving them a farewell salute, breaking Mr. Morris's arm, and through the want of proper surgical treatment, blood poisoning set in and he died July 12, 1750, before his son, then in Philadelphia, had heard of the accident. He was buried in accordance with his dying request at White Marsh burial-ground, St. Peter's Parish, Talbot county, four miles from Oxford, where his friends erected over him a tablet with the following inscription:

IN MEMORY OF
ROBERT MORRIS, A NATIVE OF LIVERPOOL, IN GREAT BRITAIN.
Late Merchant at Oxford,
in this Province.
Punctual Integrity influenced his dealings.
Principles of Honor governed his actions.

With an uncommon degree of Sincerity,
 He despised artifice and dissimulation.
 His Friendship, was firm, candid, and valuable.
 His Charity frequent, secret, and well adapted.
 His Zeal for the public good active and useful.
 His Hospitality was enhanced by his conversation,
 Seasoned with cheerful wit and sound judgment.
 A Salute from the cannon of a ship
 The wad fracturing his arm
 Was the signal by which he departed Greatly lamented as he was Esteemed,
 In the Fortieth year of his age, on the 12th. Day of July MDCCL.

He left a personal estate of about £7000, of which his son Robert was principal legatee, Robert Greenway being named as guardian. Numerous miscellaneous bequests to friends and acquaintances, the cost of his burial and the settlement of his estate, besides £100 bequeathed to each of his sisters, Ellen Eccleston, and Margaret Trout, consumed a large portion.

ROBERT MORRIS, the financier, was born in Liverpool, England, January 31, 1734. At his father's request he came to America in 1747, in one of the Cunliffe ships, and was placed by his father under the tuition of Rev. Mr. Gordon, with whose ability as a teacher he was not very favorably impressed, as, after some time spent under his tuition, being taken to task for his want of progress by his father, he replied that "I have learned all that the master is able to teach me." Seeing the futility of further instruction from this source, his father decided to send his son to Philadelphia to be trained for a business career, and with the advice and recommendation of his friend Robert Greenway, he took a brief course in business training under Philadelphia teachers and secured a position in the counting house of Charles Willing, one of Philadelphia's most prominent merchants and importers. There he early exhibited an adaptability for business that won the favorable attention of his employer, who rapidly advanced him to a position of trust and responsibility, and before coming of age, he was given an interest in the business. Mr. Willing dying in 1754, he, on coming of age, became a partner with the son and successor of his former employer, Thomas Willing, under firm name of Willing & Morris, and under their energetic management, their house became one of the most stable and prominent mercantile establishments of Philadelphia. They owned and manned their own ships and traded extensively with the West Indies and Europe. Mr. Morris frequently accompanied the vessels of the firm to West Indies and Europe and personally superintended the purchase of the return cargo. On one of these trips, during the French War, he was captured by a privateer and, after being kept a prisoner for some time, was placed ashore on French territory penniless, but succeeded in securing a passage home after considerable difficulty. Succeeding to a fine business established by the elder Willing, trained by him in broad, honest, energetic and intelligent business methods, and both possessing more than ordinary business ability, the firm of Willing & Morris thrived rapidly, and both members of the firm were accounted wealthy long before the Revolution. The same firm as Willing, Morris & Co., Willing, Morris & Inglis and Willing, Morris & Swanwick, maintained its commercial superiority, until near the end of the eighteenth century. Both partners were prominent in their protest against the Stamp Act, and were among the first signers of the Non-importation Resolutions agreed upon by the merchants of Philadelphia in 1765. When the ship "Charlotte" arrived in the river Delaware, loaded with the hated "Stamped paper," October 5, 1765, Robert Morris was spokesman of the committee named at a meeting of the indignant citizens of Philadelphia, to call upon John Hughes, who had been selected to sell the stamps, to ascertain whether he purposed accepting the royal commission and performing the duties of the appointment, and finally secured his written statement that he would make no effort to enforce the act until it was generally accepted by the other colonies, and his pledge not to distribute the stamps. In January, 1766, Morris was appointed by Governor John Penn, one of the first Board of Port Wardens of Philadelphia, he was returned as member of Assembly in 1775, in June of that year, named as one of the first Committee of Safety of the state, and on October 20, 1775, became vice-president of the succeeding committee, Benjamin Franklin being named as its president. On November 3, 1775, he was named by the Assembly as a delegate to Continental Congress, as was also his partner Thomas Willing. Morris was made chairman of the Secret Committee of Congress, and by them a member of the Naval Committee, in which position his large experience in charge of the shipping operations of his firm, made him a valuable member. In April, 1776, he was specially commissioned to negotiate bills of exchange, and take other measures to procure funds for the use of Congress, his ability as a financier being thus early brought into requisition in the service of his country. In June, 1776, when Richard Henry Lee brought forward his famous resolution favoring the declaration of independence, both Morris and Willing voted against it, the latter maintaining for many years after, that this movement as well as the adoption of state constitutions was premature; holding that the excitement and struggle for personal supremacy in the establishment of self-government, local and national, engendered divisions and personal animosities, and distracted the attention of the people from the real question at issue, viz.: the enforcement of the rights of the colonies as a whole. The experience of Pennsylvania, in the adoption of the constitution of 1776, the contention over which lost to the national cause some who should have been its most able defenders, would seem to bear out his prediction. Notwithstanding the unpopularity of his opposition to the Declaration, his loyalty to the cause was never questioned, and he was re-elected to Congress, though the only one returned who did so vote, and in August, 1776, when the engrossed copy of the Declaration was laid before Congress, he appended his signature thereto. In September, 1776, when Philadelphia was threatened by Cornwallis and Congress fled to Baltimore, he was one of a committee with George Clymer and George Walton, named by Congress to remain in Philadelphia, and take measures for its defense. Washington, then in Bucks county planning his attack upon the Hessians at Trenton, making an urgent request for funds with which to pay some of the soldiers whose terms were expiring, and stop wholesale desertions, Mr. Morris borrowed money on his own credit and made possible the brilliant victory of Washington, on Christmas night. He was exceedingly conservative in his acts and votes, believing that the people must be brought gradually to realize the responsibilities of self-government rather than be carried away by the enthusiasm of high-sounding declarations. John Adams in a letter to General Gates about this time, makes probably a very correct estimate of him, as follows:

"You ask me what you are to think of Robert Morris? I will tell you what I think of him. I think he has a masterly understanding, and an honest heart; and if he does not always vote for what you and I think proper, it is because he thinks that a large body of people remain who are not yet of his mind." On March 16, 1777, he was the third time elected a delegate to Congress, and was made chairman of the Committee of Commerce, which succeeded what was before known as the Secret Committee. On the announcement of John Hancock of his intention to retire from the presidency of Congress, the position was tendered Robert Morris, but he declined it, believing he could be of greater service as a member of the Committee of Commerce, where his knowledge of business and finance was of the greatest assistance to Congress. He was frequently an object of suspicion because of his plan of doing a large amount of the government business in his own name, being enabled thereby to procure supplies that could not be obtained on the credit of the always bankrupt colonies, or from neutral ports. On November 11, 1777, Robert Morris asked Congress for six months' leave of absence from duty, stating that it was "now three years since I have devoted nearly the whole of my time to the public service, and have almost entirely neglected my own affairs." Before granting his request he was asked to go with Elbridge Gerry and Jones to Washington's headquarters and urge a winter campaign against the British in Philadelphia. In December, 1777, he was elected the fourth time to Congress. As the principal fiscal agent of Congress, he was looked to, to furnish all needed supplies, even to the quills used by its members and officers at the sessions, and had pledged his whole private fortune for the use of the government. At the expiration of his term in 1778, he could not be again re-elected, as under the Pennsylvania Constitution of 1776, no one could hold office for more than two terms. He was elected to Pennsylvania Assembly, and served one term. During 1779 and 1780, he was purchasing agent for Congress, purchasing large amounts of supplies for the army on his individual credit. At one time, when Washington was clamoring for lead and cartridges, he turned over for the use of the army ninety tons of lead used as ballast in one of his own vessels, and he and Dr. Peters, then head of the Board of War, had a gang of men at work all night making cartridges, and in the morning were able to forward a large supply to the army. He was again elected to the Assembly in the Fall of 1780, and worked hard against the proposed issue of paper currency, having a hard fight in convincing the inexperienced lawmakers that money could not be created by simply printing paper currency, and refused to resign to accept the position of Superintendent of Finance, to which he had been appointed by Congress on February 20, 1781, until he had induced his own state to establish a more stable currency; and then made stipulations, embodied in the resolutions of Congress of March 20, April 21, and April 27, 1781, making him entirely supreme in the matter of financing the government. On May 14, 1781, he accepted the appointment in the following characteristic letter: "A serious conviction of that duty which every citizen owes to his country; especially in times of public calamity, will no longer permit me to hesitate about accepting of the office, although I must again repeat that I have the fullest sense of my own inability. I shall however strive to find such assistance as will enable me in some measure to answer the reasonable expectations of Congress, to whom I can promise for myself nothing more than honest industry. In accepting the office bestowed on me I sacrifice much of my own interest, my ease, my domestic engagements and internal tranquility. If I know my own heart, I make these sacrifices with a disinterested view to the service of my country. I am ready to go still further and the United States may command everything I have except my integrity, and the loss of that would effectually disable me from serving them more." The desperate condition of the country's finances was well known, and as to paper money emitted by Congress, $30 had the purchasing value of $1 specie in 1779, and soon after that became entirely worthless, and the credit of the government exhausted. Notwithstanding his own resources were by this time hopelessly involved in the cause of his country, Mr. Morris undertook the herculean task of rehabilitating the finances of the country with courage and faith. On May 17, he submitted his plans to Congress and immediately asked General Schuyler, of New York, to forward one thousand barrels of flour for the use of Washington's army, and wrote him, "for your reimbursement, you may either take me as a public or private man; I shall make it a point to secure the money." The story of his establishment of the Bank of North America, with his partner Thomas Willing as its president, and the building up of a fictitious credit for it by "kiting" Bills of Exchange through its foreign representative, and various other devices, until it won the confidence of the people and established a real credit for itself and its founder, need not be retold here. Gouverneur Morris, of New Jersey was made his assistant in the finance department of the government, and together they carried the country through the trying ordeal of the rehabilitation of its finances. In August, 1781, with Dr. Peters, he visited General Washington in his headquarters on the Hudson, and to him is probably due the change from the contemplated plan of an attack on the British in New York to a descent upon Cornwallis in the south, which turned the tide of war and brought it to a speedy and successful issue. This feat was only accomplished by his strenuous insistence that the different states through which the expedition must pass should furnish its quota of supplies, and by pledging his individual credit to Count Rochambeau, for a temporary loan of specie with which to pay Washington's disheartened troops. It has been truly said that the success of the cause of independence owed as much to his schemes of finance, as to Franklin's diplomacy, or to Washington's army. He resigned the position of Superintendent of Finance November 1, 1784, and enjoyed a brief rest from his arduous duties in the service of his country. He was a delegate to the convention that framed the Constitution of the United States in 1787, and was the first United States Senator from Pennsylvania, in 1788. It was mainly through his efforts that the National Legislature met in Philadelphia after its first session in New York in 1789, and until its removal to the District of Columbia in 1801. He retired from the Senate at the expiration of his term in 1795, and declined the offer of Washington to make him Secretary of the Treasury, recommending Alexander Hamilton in his stead.

Strongly impressed with the prospective value of the wild lands of the frontier, he organized the "North American Land Company," with John Nicholson and James Greenleaf, and purchased millions of acres of land in the Genesee country of New York and elsewhere. The dishonesty of Greenleaf brought about his financial ruin. Debilitated as his finances were, as the result of his services to his country, and to the lasting disgrace of the country he had so valiantly served, he was permitted to remain three years and six months, February 16, 1798, to August 20, 1801, in the debtor's department in Philadelphia. Only through the efforts of his friend Gouverneur Morris, was his heroic wife prevented from suffering the privations of abject poverty. The title to the three million acres of land in the Genesee country, sold to the Holland Society, proving defective, Gouverneur Morris secured from them an annuity of $1500 for Mrs. Morris for perfecting the title.

Robert Morris was a large man, fully six feet in stature, with a full, well-formed, vigorous frame. Several portraits of him have been preserved, one of the best painted by an English artist, Robert Ege Pine, is in the possession of the family of his son Henry Morris, but the best, by Gilbert Stuart, the master piece of that great artist, the original of which is in the possession of descendants of his son Thomas in New York, is a living likeness of the great man as he appeared in the zenith of his career of usefulness and power. He was a man of great intellectual ability, possessed of a mind acute, penetrating and logical; as a public speaker, he was fluent, forcible and impressive; as a conversationalist he was cheerful, affable and engaging. Aristocratic in his tendencies, he accorded to all their proper sphere in the plan of self-government. His overruling ambition to become a large landed proprietor and secure for his family a position where they could reap the benefits of his ardent and energetic efforts to found a republic that should be an Utopia among the nations of the earth, overreached his habitual conservatism and brought about his financial ruin.

Mr. Morris was married in Philadelphia, March 12, 1769, by Rev. Richard Peters, to Mary White, born Philadelphia, April 13, 1749, daughter of Colonel Thomas White by his second marriage with Esther Hewlings, and full sister to Bishop William White. An account of her ancestry is given elsewhere in this volume. Mr. and Mrs. Morris took up their residence in Philadelphia, where they remained until the winter of 1776-7, which Mrs. Morris spent with her half-sister Sophia, wife of Aquila Hall, in Maryland. Returning to Philadelphia for a brief period prior to its occupation by the British, they removed in September, 1777, to Baron Steigel's "Castle," then recently purchased by Mr. Morris, ten miles from Lancaster, where they resided until the summer of 1778, when they returned to Philadelphia and took up their residence in the mansion erected by Mr. Morris on Lemon Hill, overlooking the Schuylkill, which they called "Mennett," where and at their city residence on Market street, later the residence of Washington and Adams when Presidents of the United States, many notable people were entertained. In 1789, when there was a prospect of the National capital being located on the Delaware at the present site of Morrisville, Bucks county, Mr. Morris purchased several large tracts of land there and resided for a time at "Summerseat," a fine residence overlooking the Delaware, erected prior to the Revolution by Thomas Barclay, and later residence of George Clymer, another signer of the Declaration of Independence. Morrisville was named in honor of Robert Morris. During his confinement in the debtor's department at Philadelphia, his wife resided in a small house in the city and visited him daily. She was a woman of great nobleness of character, and a fitting helpmeet to her illustrious husband. After his release in 1801, they continued to reside in Philadelphia until his death, May 1, 1801. After his death Mrs. Morris removed to Chestnut street, above Tenth, where Lafayette called upon her September 29, 1824. She died January 16, 1827.

LUKENS FAMILY.

JAN LUCKEN, ancestor of the Luckens family of America, was born in Crefeld on the Upper Rhine, whence came most of the thirteen original families of Germantown, Philadelphia, and where this family had occupied an honorable position at Crefeld for many generations. He came in the "Concord," which cleared from London July 24, and arrived at Chester, on the Delaware, October 6, 1683, having on board Thones Kunders, William Streepers, Reynier Tyson, the Op den Graef brothers, altogether some thirty-two German Palatines comprising the thirteen families who founded Germantown on a tract of land purchased before leaving Germany, by the Frankford Company, and which was laid out to them on their arrival. Francis Daniel Pastorius, the "Sage of Germantown," having preceded them, assisted in perfecting the arrangements for their reception and was many years their teacher and councillor.

Jan Lucken received his allotment of land in German township and became at once a prominent figure in its government and affairs. He was chosen Constable of the town, 1691, Burgess 1694, Sheriff, 1695, and Bailiff, 1702 and 1704. Like nearly all the first families of Germantown, that of Jan Lucken were Mennonites prior to accepting the invitation of William Penn to settle in his New Province of Pennsylvania, and brought with them to America a copy of the first Bible printed by the Mennonites on the press of Peter Sebastian, 1598. A number of these German families had, however, been converts of George Fox, and for several years after their arrival in Germantown, even those who were Mennonites, associated themselves with the Friends' Meeting, having a separate Meeting for worship at Germantown under the jurisdiction of Cheltenham, later Abington Monthly Meeting. Through this association a number of the Mennonites became members of the Society of Friends and retained this membership therein after the establishment of a Mennonite congregation. Among these was Jan Lucken, and his descendants have mainly held membership in the Society to the present day.

Jan Lucken married, about the time of his embarking for America, Mary, said to have been a sister to Reynier Tyson, who accompanied him to Pennsylvania. She died 1742, and Jan Lucken died in Germantown January 24, 1744. He prospered in the new settlement and in 1709, acquired a plantation of 500 acres in Towamencin township, Philadelphia (now Montgomery) county. His will was made October 9, 1741.

The Friends at that time held that a man should not marry a nearer relation of his deceased wife than of himself, and, as they were opposed to the marriage of cousins, William Luckens was disowned for his second marriage. He was, however, reinstated in membership 1757. He died April, 1803.

ABRAHAM LUCKEN, or LUKENS, as his children spelled the name, was the tenth child and fifth son of Jan Lucken, the emigrant, and was born in or near Germantown, September 16, 1703. Reared in the faith of the Society of Friends and a birthright member of Abington Monthly Meeting, he proposed intentions of marriage before that meeting in March, 1727, with Mary, daughter of Thomas and Margaret Maurle, of Bristol township, Philadelphia county, and on April 27, 1727, the proposal was favorably acted upon by the Meeting. They at once took up their residence on the 500 acres of land purchased by his father in 1709, in Towamencin township, Philadelphia, now Montgomery county, 300 acres of which Abraham inherited at his father's death in 1741. A certificate was granted by Abington Monthly Meeting, April 30, 1728, transferring the membership of Abraham Lucken and wife to Gwynedd Monthly Meeting, with which meeting some of their descendents still hold membership.

Thomas Maurle, father of Mary (Maurle) Lucken, brought a certificate to Abington Meeting from Gwynedd, May 28, 1716, for himself, his wife, son, and daughters. He was named as an Overseer for Germantown Meeting, by Abington Monthly Meeting, 1722, and was appointed to visit families of Friends in Germantown, 1725. This family is sometimes confounded with the Maule or Maul family founded in the same locality by Sarah, widow of Thomas Maule, of Salem, Massachusetts, and her children, 1731. Mary (Maurle) Lucken died about 1770, and Abraham married (second), 1773, Elizabeth Walker, by whom he had two sons, Jonathan and Enos. He was a surveyor, and did much work in that line in his locality, and for this reason has often been confounded with his first cousin, John Lukens, Surveyor-General of Pennsylvania, who was a son of Peter and Gainor (Evans) Lukens, before mentioned. He next removed to Bridgeport, opposite Norristown, and was engaged in the lumber business there four years. He then purchased a farm in Whitmarsh township, and conducted it for about seven years. He married, 1834, Mary Thomas, born 1808, daughter of James A. Wood, founder of the first wood rolling mill in Conshohocken, by his wife, Tacy Thomas, and, 1858, joined his brother-in-law, Alan Wood, in founding the firm of Alan Wood & Company, later the Alan Wood Steel & Iron Company, and until 1877, was a partner in the operation of the Schuylkill Iron Works at Conshohocken. In that year he sold his interest in the works to his sons Charles and Jawood Lukens, and retired from active business. He was a member of Plymouth Meeting of the Society of Friends, where he and his family attended. JAWOOD LUKENS, fourth child of Lewis A. and Mary T. (Wood) Lukens, born at Annville Forge, Lebanon county, Pennsylvania, March 8, 1843, received his early education under private tutors, at the Academy of Rev. Samuel Aaron, at Norristown, and under Prof. John W. Loch of Norristown. At seventeen he entered the employ of his father's firm, the Alan Wood Company, of Conshohocken, where he remained two years, and then entered the Polytechnic College of Philadelphia, from which he graduated 1864, as a Civil Engineer. For the next two and a half years he followed his profession at various points, being employed in the survey of the route for the Pan-Handle Railroad in West Virginia and Ohio, and later in the oil fields of Pennsylvania. In 1866 he returned to Conshohocken, and again became connected with the Alan Wood Company, and in 1874 became a partner in the firm, with his brother Charles, his father assigning to them his interest in the business 1877.

Jawood Lukens retained his interest in the Alan Wood Company until 1881, when he withdrew and after spending a year in foreign travel, organized and built the Longmead Iron Works, at Conshohocken, which he conducted until 1894, when the Longmead Iron Company was incorporated with Mr. Lukens as president and treasurer, and the works much enlarged as to capacity. In 1883 he also established the Conshohocken Tube Works, for the manufacture of wrought iron pipe, and became president and treasurer of the company. These works were operated under the personal direction of Mr. Lukens until 1897, when they were consolidated with the Longmead Iron Company, of which he remained president until his death, March 10, 1908. The combined establishment became one of the principal and leading industrial institutions of the town, giving employment to upward of five hundred skilled mechanics. Jawood Lukens, in addition to his control of these large industrial enterprises, took a lively interest in numerous other institutions. He was a member of the American Institute of Mining Engineers; a member and director of the Union League, Manufacturers' and Art Clubs of Philadelphia; a director of the First National Bank of Conshohocken and the Quaker City National Bank of Philadelphia; and served some years as a member of the Town Council of Conshohocken.

Mr. Lukens married November 26, 1868, Susan Foulke, born August 9, 1845, daughter of Dr. Hiram Corson, the eminent physician of Plymouth, Montgomery county, by his wife, Ann Jones Foulke, a descendant of Edward Foulke who came to Gwynedd from Wales 1697. An account of her ancestry on both paternal and maternal lines is given in our sketch of the Foulke family in these volumes. Mrs. Lukens still survives. They had no children.

SAVERY FAMILY.

While the ancestry of William Savery, who came to Philadelphia in the first half of the eighteenth century, has not been definitely ascertained, recent researches seem to indicate that he was a son of John and Mary (Stanley) Savery, of Barbadoes, married April 20, 1718; and a descendant of the ancient family of Savery, in Devonshire, England, founded by John Savery of Halburton, 1501, which sent a representative to Parliament for forty consecutive years. This family had many illustrious representatives. Christopher Savery, son and heir of Sir Christopher Savery, High Sheriff of Devon, was a Colonel in the Parliamentary army during the civil war in England, and Thomas Savery, of Shilston, "Captain of Engineers," who first conceived the idea of the steam engine, were of this family.

A branch of this family early located in Wiltshire, several representatives of which emigrated to New England, 1630-1640. Anthony Savery, baptized at Harrington, county of Wilts, January 20, 1605-6, is thought to have been the ancestor of the Savery family of Barbadoes. A John Savery was also baptized there a year later, and was probably a brother. John Savery was a planter in Barbadoes, 1644, and was fined, 1674 and 1678, for neglecting or refusing to contribute to the support of the military organization, which would seem to indicate that he was a member of the Society of Friends; and an Anthony Savery died in Barbadoes, 1682, at an advanced age. There are other fragmentary records of this family in Barbadoes, not sufficient from which to rear an ancestral tree, but amply sufficient to indicate the descent of the Philadelphia branch of the family from the paternal stem planted in the island a century before.

William Savery, son of William, of the parish of St. Philip, was baptized November 5, 1665, and a generation later, comes John Savery, above mentioned, who married Mary Stanley, April 20, 1718, and the record of the baptism of their children, Thomas, Elizabeth, William and Joseph, 1733 and 1735, all apparently adults.

WILLIAM SAVERY son of John and Mary (Stanley) Savery, born about the year 1722, and baptized in Barbadoes May 24, 1735, is thought to be identical with William Savery of Philadelphia, a chair-maker, and seems to have occupied a more or less prominent position in the affairs of his adopted city during the active years of his life. He was appointed an Assessor of Taxes, April 20, 1754, his certificate being signed by Benjamin Franklin and other prominent Philadelphians, during his incumbency of the office. He was Collector of Taxes for the Guardians of the Poor, 1767, and had charge of the distribution of money appropriated for the support of the almshouses of Philadelphia, as shown by manuscript records still in possession of the family. He died May 27, 1787, aged sixty-five years.

He married, under the care of Friends, April 19, 1746, Mary, daughter of Reese Peters, of Philadelphia. She was born about 1723, and died July 27, 1804.

WILLIAM SAVERY, eldest son of William and Mary (Peters) Savery, born in Philadelphia July 14, 1750, was reared in the faith of the Society of Friends. In his youth he was apprenticed to a member of the Society in Chester county, to learn the trade of a tanner. He returned to the city, on arriving at his majority, 1771. In 1780 he entered the ministry of the Society of Friends, and according to a "testimony" of him adopted by the Monthly Meeting for the Northern District of Philadelphia, "by his faithful attention thereto, his labours were blessed, to the benefit of numbers, especially amongst the youth, to many of whom he was an eminent instrument of good."

"He was engaged to travel much on this Continent in the service of Truth, being several months in each year, from 1789 to 1793, inclusive, absent from home on the gospel errand; and by accounts received, his labours of love were to the satisfaction of those among whom his lot was cast. Having had his mind drawn into near sympathy with the Friends at Pymont, in Germany,—with the entire unity of his brethren at home,—he on the 18th of the Fifth Month, 1796, embarked for Liverpool, and thence soon proceeded to London, and thence to Pymont. After paying an acceptable visit, to the comfort and strengthening of Friends there, and in some other parts of Germany, he went to Nismes, in the South of France, visiting a small company of such as professed with us, in that neighborhood, much to his comfort and peace. Then—returning to England—he visited many of the principal towns and places in that nation, Ireland and Scotland, and had large public meetings with those not of our Society. Having thus discharged his religious duty in those parts, he returned to his family and friends in the Tenth Month, 1798.

"He laboured diligently in his temporal business for the support of his family, as well as for the relief of the poor and distressed, to whose wants his liberal mind was ever ready to administer according to his ability; yet this did not interrupt his steady attention to religious duties, being diligent in the attendance of meetings, and in various other services to which he was called and appointed for the benefit of society and the promotion of the cause of Truth and righteousness.

"In 1802 the neighborhood in which he lived (Philadelphia) was visited with a pestilential disease, which carried many off in a short time; not being easy to leave this scene of woe and misery, he voluntarily resigned himself to visit those in distress, both Friends and others, with advice and counsel, in the love of the gospel, to the great consolation and comfort of many. And a like affliction befalling that and other parts of the city and neighborhood, in the following year, he was engaged in the same manner, freely devoting himself, both night and day, to relieve the distresses of others, with which his own feeling mind was deeply affected.

"In the early part of his sickness, he was borne up above complaining or admitting that he was much out of health, until the disease, which proved a dropsy, had made such progress, that it was visible to his friends; yet he continued to attend to his outward concerns and religious duties; and in some of the meetings which he attended, was led to open a prospect that his time here would not be long; but in an animating view of a blessed immortality, signified it was no matter how short, provided this were attained.

"He was remarkable for punctuality and uprightness in his dealings; and not long before his decease, said to a friend who often visited him, 'It is necessary to look to our outward concerns, there are so many reproachful failures;' and, appearing desirous once more to get to meeting, that he might have an opportunity to warn such of the elderly part of the Society who had got into the earth, and of the youth who had got into the air. 'I thought,' said he, 'I was once strong for the work, but now I am a child brought back to my horn-book, and have nothing to trust to but the mercy of God through Christ my Saviour.' Thus reverently depending, he was preserved to the last in great resignation and composure of mind. He was mostly confined from the 26th of the Third Month (except frequently riding out for the benefit of air and exercise) till the 18th day of Sixth Month, 1804, in the evening of which he was considerably worse, continued ill through the night, and on the 19th, in the morning, about six o'clock, closed his useful life in the 54th year of his age. On the following day his corpse, attended by a great number of his friends and neighbours, was interred in Friends' burial-ground in this city."

William Savery, of whom the Friends' Meeting to which he belonged adopted the above "Testimony", had since his marriage, 1778, made his home in the upper part of Philadelphia, and the "Testimony gives such a record of his life that it seems unnecessary to add anything further."

THOMAS SAVERY, second son of William and Mary (Peters) Savery, and brother of the esteemed minister above mentioned, born in the city of Philadelphia October 13, 1751, was likewise reared in the faith of the Society of Friends, and held steadfastly to that sect throughout life. He was a carpenter and builder, and followed that vocation in the city of his birth during the active years of his life. He was an Elder of Arch Street Friends' Meeting, and was much interested in the abolition of slavery, and other humanitarian and philanthropic concerns. He was an active member of the Humane Society of Philadelphia, and of the Society for the Promotion of Sabbath Schools in Philadelphia, of which Bishop William White was many years president. He was also a member of the Committee of Safety, appointed by a meeting of the citizens of Philadelphia, September 14, 1793, to take charge of the hospital at Bush Hill, during the prevalence of the yellow fever epidemic in Philadelphia and vicinity, and was one of the most loyal and active of this committee, of which four members fell victims of the dread disease, remaining steadily at his post until the disease was stamped out. The survivors of this committee received the public thanks of the community for their loyal service to suffering humanity in a meeting held March 15, 1794, presided over by Gov. Thomas McKean. Again in 1802, when pestilence once more attacked the city, he gave loyal service to the poor and afflicted, side by side with his brother William, an account of whose services in this behalf is given in the "Testimony" above quoted.

Thomas Savery, though holding no civil office, took an active interest in all that pertained to the best interests of the city. He was a member of the old Volunteer Fire Department, being united with "Harmony Fire Engine Company," founded by Drs. Franklin and Rush and their associates.

Thomas Savery died in Philadelphia, 1817, in his sixty-seventh year. He married, November 24, 1791, Rebecca, born July 29, 1770, daughter of John Scattergood, of an old New Jersey family, by his wife Elizabeth Head. She survived her husband many years, dying August 25, 1855.

THOMAS SAVERY the younger, son of Thomas and Rebecca (Scattergood) Savery, born in Philadelphia September 19, 1802, was reared to his father's trade of carpenter and builder, but later engaged in the lumber business with his brother William, a business which they successfully carried on until 1845, when, his health failing, Thomas retired from the firm, and lived a retired life in Philadelphia, until 1854, when he removed to a farm in Chester county, inherited by his wife from her father Stephen Webb, where he remained until his death, six years later.

Thomas Savery, like his father, was an active and consistent member of the Society of Friends. While in Philadelphia he was for some years Clerk of Arch Street Meeting, and after his removal to Chester county, filled a like position for Kennett Monthly Meeting. He was an ardent advocate of higher education, and served as one of the Committee of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting, who had charge of the erection of the buildings for Westtown Boarding School.

He married (first) September 2, 1824, Rebecca W. Cresson, born September 18, 1803. She died four months later, January 4, 1825, and he married (second), November 13, 1834, Hannah H., born November 19, 1810, daughter of Stephen and Mary (Harvey) Webb, and a descendant of Richard Webb, who came from Gloucestershire, England, 1700, to Philadelphia, and in 1704, took up land in and settled in Birmingham township, Chester, now Delaware county; and his wife Elizabeth Webb, an eminent minister among Friends, who had paid two religious visits to America, prior to her immigration with her husband in 1700, and in 1710, made a similar religious visit to her native country. Richard Webb died in Birmingham, 1719, leaving eight children, the eldest of whom, William Webb, settled in Kennett, where he died 1753; was member of Colonial Assembly, 1723-37, and a Justice, 1741. He married January 22, 1709, Rebecca Harland, and had among others a son William Webb Jr., born November 13, 1710, who married, September 23, 1732, Elizabeth, born March 13, 1716-17, daughter of Daniel Hoopes, born in Skelton, parish of Cleveland, Yorkshire, England, died in Westtown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania; Member of Provincial Assembly, 1708-9, by his wife, Jane Worrilow; granddaughter of Joshua and Isabel Hoopes, who came from Skelton, Yorkshire, arriving in the river Delaware, in the ship "Providence" of Scarborough, November 10, 1683, and settled in Makefield township, Bucks county. They were prominent members of Falls Monthly Meeting of the Society of Friends, depositing there their certificate from the Monthly Meeting at Skelton, bearing date 3mo. (May) 4, 1683.

Joshua Hoopes was a member of Provincial Assembly from Bucks county, 1685-1711. He married (second) Elinor, widow of Reuben Pownall, who was killed by a falling tree a few months after his arrival in the Province.

Stephen Webb, father of Hannah Hoopes (Webb) Savery, was the second son of William and Elizabeth (Hoopes) Webb, and his wife was Mary Harvey, of a family that was prominent in the affairs of Bucks and Chester counties. Hannah H. (Webb) Savery survived her husband thirty years, residing on the old Webb homestead with her son Stephen until his marriage, 1873, when she removed with her youngest daughter, Elizabeth, to West Chester, where she died August 5, 1890.

TROTH FAMILY.

The Troth family is of English origin, representatives of it being found in different parts of England a century prior to the emigration of the founder of the American branch to Maryland in the early part of the second half of the seventeenth century.

WILLIAM TROTH was a "planter" in the Province of Maryland, when he purchased of Timothy Goodridge, of Talbot county, 100 acres, part of "Goodridge's Choice" "on ye south side of Choptank river in a creek called Cabin Creek, on ye North side of said Creek." This was in Dorchester county, laid out in 1669, and the deed was one of the first recorded in that county. In 1676 he purchased two other tracts of 200 and 400 acres, respectively, the latter laid out August 16, 1676, as "Troth's Fortune" lying "on the north side of Choptank river in the woods of Talbot County." On March 1, 1767, there was surveyed to him an additional 100 acres adjoining known as "Troth's Addition." He later purchased "Coles Bank" 300 acres; "Mooresfields" 300 acres, on the east bank of Great Choptank and south side of Ingram's Creek; "Shoreditch" on Winsley's Creek; "Acton" 300 acres; "Mount Hope," in three different purchases aggregating 550 acres; "Canterbury Manor," "Hackney Marsh," "Bennington," "Troth's Security," and several other tracts until he was the owner of over 3000 acres of land in Talbot and Dorchester counties, Maryland, and a tract of 200 acres "on the West side of Delaware Bay, on the southwest side of a Creek of said Bay called Baucom Brig Creek" purchased of the representatives of the Duke of York, in 1676.

William Troth was a member of the Society of Friends, and took little part in public affairs. The only public office he is known to have held was that of "Press Master" for Bolingbroke Hundred, Talbot county, to which he was appointed by Colonial Council in 1694. This office was created by legislative enactment to prevent the planters being imposed upon by irresponsible persons representing themselves as military officers and impressing goods ostensibly for the use of the Provincial Arms.

William Troth married, April 20, 1685, Isabel, widow of James Harrison, of "Dover," Talbot county, whose maiden name is thought to have been Hutchinson.

William Troth is named in some of the land grants to him, as a merchant, and in others as a planter. His will bears date November 1, 1709, and was probated November 6, 1710. It devises to his son George, "Coles Bank," and "Coles Bank Addition;" to his son Henry, "Acton Neck," "Acton Addition," "Troth's Fortune," and "Troth's Security," in all 1000 acres; to his daughter Katharine, wife of Peter Sharp, "Mooresfields" and "Mooresfields Addition" in Dorchester county; to his daughter Judith, wife of Samuel Dickinson, parts of "Troth's Addition," "Jamaica," "Mount Hope," and "Mount Pleasant," the latter in Prince George's county; leaves legacies to grandchildren, William, Fortune, Ann, and Elizabeth Lewis, and sons-in-law, Charles Lewis and Peter Sharp, also a legacy to the Quakers of Talbot county.

William Troth, his eldest son, was evidently deceased without issue as neither he nor his children were mentioned in the will.

James Harrison, whose widow Isabel became the second wife of William Troth, came to Maryland, from Staintondale, Yorkshire. A petition of Friends in Yorkshire, dated 1mo. 3, 1678, published in Besse's "Sufferings of Friends," is signed among others by John Fisher, Thomas Oldham, Thomas Hutchinson, Henry Dickinson, John Burges, John Oldham, George Hutchinson, James Harrison. On July 5, 1677, Thomas Hutchinson, of Beverly, Thomas Pearson, of Bonwich, Joseph Helmsley, of Kelk, yeoman, George Hutchinson, of Sheffield, distiller, and Mahlon Stacy, of Dorehouse, tanner, all of the county of York, England, conveyed to James Harrison, of Staintondale, Yorkshire, yeoman, one-fourth of a share in West Jersey, and on 10mo. 28, 1677, the same parties conveyed to him an additional one-twelfth share. The will of James Harrison, of Talbot county, Maryland, dated 7mo. (September) 4, 1680, probated December 3, 1680, devises to his son James a tract called "Dover" on which the testator then lived, containing 450 acres, his wife Isabel to enjoy the same till her said son James should come of age; to his sons William and Mark 1000 acres on the east side of Tuckahoe creek; to his said son James his interest in West Jersey Lands, purchased of Thomas Hutchinson, George Hutchinson, Mahlon Stacy, et al, and if he died in his minority the same to pass to his son William; mentions daughters Ann and Isabel. James, eldest son, died in his minority, and William Harrison, of Choptank, Maryland, son and heir-at-law of James Harrison of the same place, on October 18, 1697, executed a deed to George Hutchinson, of Philadelphia, distiller, for the one-fourth and one-twelfth shares in West Jersey, purchased by his father in 1677, these deeds being recorded at Trenton, New Jersey.

On 2mo. 6th, 1688, William and Isabel Troth propose to the meeting their intention of selling lands in England belonging to Isabella.

William Harrison, son of James and Isabel, married, April 20, 1690, Elizabeth, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Powell) Dickinson, and sister to Samuel Dickinson, who married Judith Troth.

Issue of William Troth:

William Troth, of whom we have no further record;

Elizabeth Troth, m., 1695, Charles Lewis; d. April 23, 1708, leaving issue: William, Fortune, Ann and Elizabeth Lewis;

Catharine Troth, m., May 4, 1704, Peter Sharp, and had issue: Henry, Samuel, Isaac and Elizabeth Sharp;

George Troth, m., Dec. 8, 1708, Rebecca, dau. of James and Sarah (Woolchurch) Berry;

HENRY TROTH, m. Elizabeth Johns; of whom presently;

Judith Troth, b. July 20, 1690; d. 1729; m., Jan. 14, 1710-11, Samuel Dickinson, son of William and Elizabeth (Powell) Dickinson, of "Crosia-dore," on Choptank, where Walter Dickinson, father of William, settled in 1659. Samuel and Judith (Troth) Dickinson had children: William, Walter, Samuel, Elizabeth, Henry, another Elizabeth, Rebecca and Rachel. Samuel Dickinson, m. (second) Mary Cadwallader, of Phila., and Hon. John Dickinson, member of Colonial Assembly, member of Continental Congress, Governor and Chief Justice, was his son by this marriage.

HENRY TROTH, second son of William Troth, born in Talbot county, Maryland, about 1688, died there October 30, 1728. He inherited under his father's will, "Troth's Fortune," "Troth's Security," "Acton's Neck," and "Acton's Addition," aggregating about 800 acres, and 200 acres of "Mount Hope," conveying the latter tract to his brother-in-law, Samuel Dickinson, in 1724. A portion of these land were retained by his descendants until 1835, when Henry and Samuel Troth, of Philadelphia, and their sister, Mary Austin, conveyed their Maryland inheritance, in the lands taken up by their great-great-grandfather, William Troth, one hundred and sixty-five years before that date.

Henry Troth married, August 14, 1711, Elizabeth, born May 26, 1694, died February 10, 1772, daughter of Richard Johns, of Talbot county, Maryland, by his wife, Elizabeth (Kinsey) Sparrow, widow of Thomas Sparrow, and daughter of Hugh and Margaret Kinsey.

Richard Johns was born in Bristol, England, in 1649, and came to Maryland in his young manhood, the first patent to him for land there, "Rattlesnake Hill," being issued in 1674. He resided on first coming to Maryland with Friends and became convinced in their faith and principles, and later became an eminent minister of the Society. A Monthly Meeting was held at his house near the Cliffs in Calvert county, upwards of thirty years. Like many of the sect he shunned public office; declining to serve in the Colonial Legislature after having been elected to that body. He died December 16, 1717. He married, in 1676, Elizabeth, widow of Thomas Sparrow, and daughter of Hugh Kinsey, who with his brother, Robert Kinsey, came to Virginia and in 1655, when 100 acres of land was surveyed to him in the county of Lancaster, north side of the Rappahannock, was living on an adjoining tract of 400 acres. He died in 1667, in Anne Arundel county, Maryland, his wife Margaret surviving him. Elizabeth, wife of Richard Johns, was his youngest daughter. She died February 1, 1715-16. Richard and Elizabeth (Kinsey) Johns had nine children, among whom were Kinsey Johns, who married Elizabeth Chew and was the father and grandfather of two Chief Justices of Delaware bearing the same name; and Captain Isaac Johns, who married Ann Galloway. Elizabeth, wife of Henry Troth, was the youngest of the nine children.

 Rebecca Troth, b. April 9, 1716; m., 1733, Henry Thomas;
 Margaret Troth, b. July 15, 1718; d. July 30, 1720;

 HENRY TROTH, b. Feb. 22, 1728-9; m. Sarah Paschall; of them presently.

HENRY TROTH, youngest son of Henry and Elizabeth (Johns) Troth, born in Talbot county, Maryland, 1728, was like his father and grandfather a planter. He married, July 5, 1751, Sarah, daughter of William Paschall, by his second wife, Hannah (Lloyd) Roberts, granddaughter of Thomas and Margaret (Jenkins) Paschall, and great-granddaughter of Thomas and Joanna Paschall, who came from Bristol, England, 1682, settled in Philadelphia county, on land surveyed in right of purchase of Thomas Paschall, of William Penn, by indenture of lease and release dated September 26 and 27, 1681, respectively. Thomas Paschall was a member of Colonial Assembly of Pennsylvania, 1685-89. Thomas Paschall Jr., son of Thomas and Joanna, was also a member of Colonial Assembly in 1717. He married, November 15, 1692, Margaret, born at Tenby, Pembrokeshire, Wales, May 23, 1674, daughter of William Jenkins by his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Lewis Griffith.

William Jenkins with wife Elizabeth and three children, Stephen, Margaret and Elizabeth, emigrated from Tenby, Pembrokeshire, about 1684, and settled at "Duffryn Mawr," near Haverford, Chester county, on a tract of land surveyed to him in right of his purchase of 1000 acres of William Penn, by lease and release dated respectively October 24 and 25, 1681. He sold his land in Haverford and, in 1698, purchased 400 acres of land in Abington township, Philadelphia, now Montgomery county, covering the present site of Jenkintown, named for his family. He was one of the original members of Abington Monthly Meeting, and with Joseph Phipps had charge of building the first Meeting House there. He died in Abington township, June 7, 1712, aged fifty-four years. He was commissioned a Justice of the Peace for Chester county in 1690 and recommissioned in 1692; was a member of Colonial Assembly, 1690-96; and a member of Provincial Council, 1691-2.

Thomas and Margaret (Jenkins) Paschall were the parents of eleven children, and their descendants of the name have taken a prominent part in the affairs of Philadelphia and Chester counties to the present time. William Paschall, father of Sarah (Paschall) Troth, was the third child, born March 8, 1697. He married (first) Grace Hoopes, who died July 3, 1721, and (second) Hannah (Lloyd) Roberts, widow of John Roberts, of Merion, and daughter of Robert Lloyd, of Merion, Welsh Tract, Philadelphia county, by his wife, Lowry Jones, born in Wales, 1680, eldest daughter of Rees John William, born in parish of Llangelynin, Merionethshire, Wales, who with his wife, Hannah Price, daughter of Richard ap Griffith ap Rhys, of Llanfawr, Merionethshire, came to Pennsylvania in 1684 and settled in the Welsh Tract, where he was one of the prominent members of Haverford Meeting of Friends, and one of largest landholders.

Robert Lloyd, born in Merionethshire, Wales, 1669, was son of David Lloyd by his wife, Mary Powell. His ancestry traced back twenty generations to Llewelyn Hurdochog, Lord of Ial and Yatradd Alyn, a descendant of Llywarch, Prince of the Strathclyde Britons, given in our sketch of "Robert Lloyd and His Descendants." Through his mother, Mary Powell, daughter of John ap Howell Goch, he was descended from Henry Percy, "Harry Hotspur," of the noble house of Percy of Northumberland, England, son of the first Earl of Northumberland, through his daughter Alice who married Sir Richard Dalton, their daughter becoming the wife of Sir William Griffith Vaughan, Knight, of Penryn and Llangai, Caernarvonshire, North Wales, whose grandson, Sir William Griffith, Chamberlain of North Wales, (son of Sir William Griffith, Knight of the Bath) was with Henry VIII, at Touraine, France, 1512. The latter was the father of Sibyl Griffith, who married Owen Hugh, High Sheriff of Anglesea, and their daughter Jane, who married Hugh Gwyn, King's Justice of Caernarvonshire, was the mother of Sybil Gwyn, who married John Ap Howell, otherwise John Powell, and was the mother of Mary (Powell) Lloyd, wife of David Lloyd, before mentioned. Robert Lloyd came to Pennsylvania in the "Lion" of Liverpool in 1683, aged fourteen years, and lived for a time with Robert Owen, of Merion. On September 5, 1698, he purchased 409 acres of land, adjoining Rowland Ellis's plantation of "Bryn Mawr," and lived thereon until his death. He was a consistent member of the Society of Friends and took a prominent part in local affairs. Richard Lloyd, son of Robert and Lowry (Jones) Lloyd, married Hannah Paschall, sister to Sarah (Paschall) Troth, and had sons, Hugh and Isaac, the former of whom was one of the original Committee of Observation for Chester county in 1774, a delegate to the Provincial Convention of 1775, a representative in the General Assembly from Delaware county, 1789-92, and Associate Justice of the Courts of the new county from 1792 to 1816. Hannah Lloyd, mother of Sarah Paschall, married as third husband, Peter Osborne, of Philadelphia, and their son, Capt. Peter Osborn, who married Elizabeth Stevens, at Wilmington, Delaware, August 7, 1763, was the father of Elizabeth Osborn, who married Peter Henri, and was the mother of Henrietta Henri, wife of Henry Troth, of Philadelphia, hereafter mentioned.

Sarah Paschall Troth, b. Feb. 13, 1768; m., Nov. 4, 1790, John Kemp.

SAMUEL TROTH, second and eldest surviving son of Henry and Sarah (Paschall) Troth, born at "Troth's Fortune," Talbot county, Maryland, September 3, 1755, married (first) Elizabeth Trew, October 12, 1780; she survived her marriage but a short time and he married (second) October 2, 1783, Ann (Berry) Dixon, widow of Robert Dixon, and daughter of James and Elizabeth (Powell) Berry. On his marriage he located at "Woodstock," a plantation on St. Michael's river, a few miles from Easton, the county seat of Talbot county, later residing at "Troth's Fortune." He died April 26, 1815, and his widow died August 11, 1832.

James Berry, great-great-grandfather of Ann (Berry) Troth, with wife Elizabeth came to Accomac county, Virginia, 1632, and in 1651 removed to the western shore of Maryland, receiving grants of land in Prince George and Calvert counties. He was a member of Provincial Assembly of Maryland, 1654, and a Justice of Provincial Court of Calvert county, 1655. He died in 1666, his will devising his lands in Calvert county to his eldest son, William Berry. He was fined in 1658 for aiding Richard Preston in 1654 in deposing Governor William Stone, and removing the seat of government of Maryland to Patuxent.

William Berry, eldest son of James and Elizabeth, married (first) Naomi, daughter of Richard Preston, of "Preston on Patuxent," and (second) Margaret (Marsh) Preston, widow of Richard Preston Jr., his brother-in-law. He settled with Richard Preston on the north side of Patuxent, and was associated with him in the movement to wrest the control of the Province from the Catholic adherents of Lord Baltimore, and establish a Puritan government on the Patuxent. William Berry was a member of Assembly, 1671-74, and was Commissioner of the Peace for Calvert county, 1669. He inherited the land taken up by his father in Accomac county, Virginia, which he conveyed after his father's death, while a resident of Patuxent. He owned a large tract of land at Battle Creek, Calvert county, Maryland. Naomi Preston, his first wife, died prior to January 8, 1669; he married (second) Margaret, widow of Richard Preston Jr., of Dorchester county Maryland.

Richard Preston, father of Naomi (Preston) Berry, came from England, about 1635, and settled in Nansemond county, Virginia, where he was granted a tract of land by Governor West, December 22, 1636. He later received two grants for land in Upper Norfolk. He was a Justice of the Courts of Nansemond county, 1646, and held high social and political standing there, but being a Puritan he assisted in organizing a colony of seventy-three persons of his own faith and removed with it to the north side of Patuxent river, Maryland, where several large tracts of land were surveyed to him in 1650-51. On a 1000 acre tract on the north bank of the Patuxent he erected his mansion house, still standing, and known as "Preston on Patuxent," the oldest building extant in the state of Maryland. This mansion was the seat of government of Maryland, 1654-58, under the Parliamentary authority, House of Burgesses, or Provincial Legislature, of which he was the Speaker, meeting there during that period. Richard Preston was Commander on the north side of Patuxent, and a member of Provincial Council, 1652. He was the leader of the party that removed the archives of state from St. Mary's, the stronghold of the Catholic party under Governor Stone, to "Preston" in 1654. When Lord Baltimore regained control of the government in 1658, Preston retained his seat in the Assembly, was Speaker of the Sessions of 1661-2, and continued a member until the session of 1667. He was also one of the six commissioners appointed to administer the government of the Province in 1652. His son, Richard Preston, Jr., father of Samuel Preston, Provincial Councillor of Pennsylvania, married Margaret Marsh, and settled in Dorchester county, Maryland, which he represented in the Provincial Assembly at the time of his death in 1668.

William and Naomi (Preston) Berry had three children, William, eldest, removed to John's creek, near the present site of Dover, Kent county, Delaware, locating on a plantation belonging to his father called "Berrys Range." His certificate from the Friends' Meeting at Thomas Taylor's, King's creek, Calvert county, Maryland, to John's creek on Delaware bay, bears date 4mo. (June) 6, 1684, but he had probably removed earlier as he was commissioned in that year a Justice for Kent county and re-commissioned the following year. He was also a member of Assembly from Kent county for the sessions of 1684-85-86-87-89. He died June 30, 1693. He married, at Middletown Monthly Meeting, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, September 9, 1686, Naomi, daughter of Shadrach Walley, a large landowner at Newtown, Bucks county, Naomi Walley brought a certificate from a Friends' Meeting at the house of Thomas Dunbarton, in Higher Weston, Cheshire, dated 6mo. 6, 1684, and another from Newport, Rhode Island, dated 3mo. 9, 1685. She married (second), August 7, 1706, George Gray, of Philadelphia, and died in that city, March 4, 1709-10. The only child of William and Naomi (Walley) Berry was John Berry, born September 2, 1688, who married, October 10, 1711, Anne, daughter of George Pratt, by his wife, Sarah Broadway. Rebecca Berry, daughter of William and Naomi (Preston) Berry, married James Ridley and settled in Salem county, New Jersey.

James Berry, second son of William and Naomi (Preston) Berry, and grandfather of Ann (Berry) Troth, born in Calvert county, Maryland, was desired by his father's will to live at Patuxent. He married (first) in 1686, Sarah, daughter of Henry Woolchurch, a wealthy planter of Talbot county, and had by her one child, Rebecca Berry, born November 3, 1688, who married, December 8, 1708, George Troth, son of William, the emigrant. His first wife dying soon after the birth of her child, James Berry married (second) 1691, Elizabeth, daughter of John Pitt, also a wealthy planter of Talbot county, by whom he had four children. He died in 1699, and his widow, Elizabeth (Pitt) Berry, married, at the Episcopal church in Talbot county, January 22, 1702-3, Capt. John Sherwood, who was commissioned a Colonel of Provincial troops in 1744, Capt. Sherwood, born 1678, died 1745, was the third son of Hugh Sherwood, who with wife Mary came to Talbot county prior to 1670, was Deputy Sheriff of the county, 1679, was commissioned Justice of the Courts of Talbot county, 1692, and regularly recommissioned to and including the year 1698. He was also a member of Assembly, 1692-94, being one of those who as such signed the address of thanks to their Majesties, William and Mary, for sending a Protestant Governor to Maryland, presented to the Lord President at the Cabinet Council, June 20, 1692. He was a vestryman of St. Michael's Protestant Episcopal Church, Talbot county, 1693. His will dated January 19, 1710, was probated March 22, 1710.

Capt. John Sherwood married (first) Lucy Mann, and as above stated married (second) January, 1702, Elizabeth (Pitt) Berry, by whom he had one daughter, Mary Sherwood, who married, January 6, 1733-4, Daniel Powell, born April 22, 1708, died February 16, 1757, and their daughter, Elizabeth Powell, born September 27, 1737, married, April 28, 1758, James Berry, grandson of James Berry and Elizabeth Pitt, he being her cousin of the half-blood, they having a common grandmother in Elizabeth Pitt.

James Berry, son of James and Elizabeth (Pitt) Berry, born in 1696, married, November 22, 1724, Sarah, daughter of Kenelem and Lydia (Croxtan) Skillington. He died October 3, 1745, and she November 14, 1778. They had five children: John Berry, born 1725, married Rebecca Dickinson; Thomas Berry, 1727; James Berry, of whom presently; Benjamin Berry, married Sarah Lightfoot; Elizabeth Berry, married Garret Sipple, of Delaware.

James Berry, third son of James and Sarah (Skillington) Berry, was born December 19, 1729. He married (first) in 1758, Elizabeth, daughter of Daniel Powell, by his wife, Mary Sherwood, before mentioned. She died May 21, 1764, and he married (second) March 29, 1768, Susanna Maxfield. She died March 29, 1774, and he married (third) in 1781, Mary Bonsall. His daughter, Ann Berry, by his first wife, born March 20, 1760, married (first), February 28, 1780, Robert Dixon, who died September 29, 1781, and (second) Samuel Troth, above named.

HENRY TROTTH, eldest surviving son of Samuel and Ann (Berry) Troth, was born at "Woodstock," near Easton, Maryland, September 4, 1794. In 1811 he came to Philadelphia and entered upon a five years apprenticeship to the drug business with Jeremiah Morris, a druggist on the north side of Market street, near Seventh.

On April 1, 1815, Henry Troth formed a partnership with his brother-in-law, Edward Needles, under the name of Henry Troth & Company, and they bought the stock and fixtures of Joseph Lehman, who for sixteen years had carried on a thriving drug trade at 222 Market street, south side, east of Seventh street.

Henry Troth early became interested in charitable and benevolent work in his adopted city. He was elected a member of the Pennsylvania Society for Promotion of Public Economy, 1819, and served on important committees of that organization. He was for thirteen years treasurer of the Pennsylvania Society for Promoting the Abolition of Slavery; from 1825 to his death a manager of the Schuylkill Navigation Company. At the organization of the House of Refuge in 1827, he became one of its directors and filled that position to his death in 1842; was one of the Guardians of the Poor; manager of the Children's Hospital, Provident Society, and the Colonization Society; a trustee and manager of the Philadelphia Museum; manager of Franklin Institute; one of the councillors of the Infant School. He was one of the organizers of the Wednesday Evening Party Association, similar in character to the Wistar Party organization, established by Dr. Caspar Wistar and his associates.

The initial step toward the establishment of the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy was taken in the drug establishment of Henry Troth & Company by the senior member of the firm. In 1821, when the University of Pennsylvania decided to issue diplomas to graduates in Pharmacy, the druggists resented the innovation as interfering with the time-honored custom of requiring a long apprenticeship to all who wished to engage in the drug business; and the several drug establishments of the city depended largely upon the services of these apprentices for the carrying on of their business. One of the Lehman firm came to the Troth establishment to talk the matter over, with a view of protesting against the action of the University. Henry Troth suggested that they organize a college of their own. A conference was called with the result that the College of Pharmacy was incorporated, and Henry Troth during the remaining twenty years of his life was the leading spirit in its administration, thirteen years of which he served as vice-president, during a great part of which period he was the acting president. He was one of the incorporators of the Apprentices Library in 1821, and devoted much time to its interests, serving as its president from 1837 to his death. He was elected to the Common Council of Philadelphia in 1824, and served in that body for nine years, four of which as its president. He was a trustee of Girard College at the time of the laying of the corner stone of that institution, and was a director of the United States Bank in 1837. When the new building at 224 Market street was erected in 1832, he removed with his family to Seventh street, below Market, next to the Franklin Institute, and in 1836 removed to No. 36 Girard street, south side, where his family resided until 1852. He died May 22, 1842.

Henry Troth married, November 29, 1816, Henrietta, daughter of Peter Henri. She was one of six daughters of Capt. Peter Osborne, by his wife, Elizabeth Stevens.

CONYNGHAM FAMILY.

The ancient family of Conyngham, representatives of which have emigrated to America at different periods, had its origin in Malcolm, son of Friskine, a loyal retainer of Malcomb Canmore, King of Scotland, who when his liege lord was sorely pressed by the soldiers of Macbeth, the murderer of Duncan, father of Malcomb Canmore, hid the latter under a haystack, and thus saved him from capture or death. For this service, when Malcomb had recovered the throne of his father, he created his humble and valiant preserver, Thane of Conyngham, from which his descendants later took their surname. The elder male line bearing as their arms "A shake fork between three murettes" in commemoration of the service of their ancestor with the hayfork.

From Malcomb, the first, Thane of Conyngham, descended Robert, the Bruce, and several other Kings of Scotland, and his family was intermarried with the royal line of England as well, and had many distinguished and noble representatives in the peerage of Scotland. Mary (Conyngham) Roberdeau, mother of Gen. Daniel Roberdeau, of the Revolution, who came to Philadelphia, with her orphan children prior to 1740, and died there in 1771, was a daughter of Robert Conyngham, a representative of the male line, born in Scotland, March 24, 1669, and the ancestress of a number of distinguished Pennsylvanians.

REDMOND CONYNGHAM, of Letterkenny, Ireland, who came to Philadelphia, about 1740, and founded the commercial house that long bore his name, also traced his descent from this ancient Scottish family. His earliest ancestor of whom we have a definite record, in the direct line, was,

WILLIAM CONYNGHAM, fourth Earl of Glencairn, whose fourth son, was the RT. REV. WILLIAM CONYNGHAM, D. D., born 1512-13, Bishop of Argyle, 1539-58. He was educated for the Church and matriculated at the University of St. Andrew's in 1532. He was made Provost of Trinity College, Edinburgh, 1538, and raised to the See of Argyle, by James V, of Scotland, February 1, 1539, and was succeeded by James Hamilton in 1558.

REV. ALEXANDER CONYNGHAM, grandson of the Bishop of Argyle, born 1580, was also educated for the Church and was the first Protestant minister of Inver and Kellynard, county Donegal, Ireland, being ordained as Prebend of these two parishes in 1611.

Rev. Alexander Conyngham settled at Mt. Charles, county Donegal, obtaining letters patent from Charles I, for three hundred and twenty acres of land in Dromlogheren and Corcana, Barony of Raphoe, later called the Manor of Rosse Conyngham; and was naturalized as a subject of the English Crown, 1616. He vacated the prebendry of Kellynard in 1622, and that of Inver in 1630, succeeding to the Deanery of Raphoe, by patent of April 27, 1630, and was installed June 22, following. He died September 3, 1660. His wife was Marian, daughter of John Murray, of Boylagh and Barragh, the original property of the O'Boyles, Chiefs of the clan Chindfaolaah, of Tírr Aínmíreach, and of Tírr Boghaine, which cover the present baronies of Boylagh and Barragh, of which John Murray is mentioned as owning in Pynnar's survey of 1619.

Rev. Alexander Conyngham, Dean of Raphoe, is credited by Burke, with having had twenty-seven sons and daughters, of whom four sons grew to manhood, viz :

ALEXANDER, d. in the lifetime of his father, leaving a son, Alexander Conyngham, of Aighan; of whom presently;

Sir Albert Conyngham, of Mt. Charles, who was knighted, and was the grandfather of Marquis Conyngham, of Mt. Charles;

William Conyngham, of Ballydavitt, Esquire, county Donegal, whose will, dated Oct. 18, 1700, entails in his nephew, Alexander Conyngham, of Aighan, all his lands in Donegal; and leaves a legacy to his niece, Katharine Connolly, dau. of his brother, Sir Albert Conyngham; his will is sealed with the arms of the family, as above described;

George Conyngham, of Killenesseragh, county Longford, d. without male issue; his will, dated May 5, and proved Nov. 25, 1684, devised his lands to his brother, William Conyngham, of Ballydavitt, and to his nephew, Alexander Conyngham, of Aighan, and the latter's brother, Andrew; names his brother, Sir Albert Conyngham.

ALEXANDER CONYNGHAM, of Aighan, Gentleman, by will dated December 27, 1701, entails on his eldest son, Richard Conyngham, of Dublin, merchant, all the lands inherited from his grandfather and uncles, as also the lands of Ballyboe, granted to him by Richard Murray, of Broughton, by lease forever in 1699, and on Richard's male heir. In default of issue to his second son Andrew, and his male heirs, and in default of such male heirs of Andrew, to Richard's right heirs.

ALEXANDER CONYNGHAM, of Rosguil, county Donegal, inherited the above lands, but whether a son of Richard or Andrew does not clearly appear. The lands at least descended to his son, Capt. David Conyngham, of Ballyherin and Letterkenny, who owned and occupied them in 1721.

Alexander Conyngham, of Rosguil, county Donegal, Ireland, had ten children, of whom six at least grew to mature age, viz :

Rev. William Conyngham, b. 1690; d. 1781; rector of Letterkenny;

CAPTAIN DAVID CONYNGHAM, of Ballyherin and Letterkenny; m. Katharine, dau. of Redmond O'Hanlon; of whom presently;

Adam Conyngham, of Cranford, d. 1729; father of Capt. John Conyngham, of His Majesty's 63rd Reg. of Foot, who served under Braddock, against Fort Duquesne, 1755; was wounded at the defeat of Braddock, and spent some time with his cousin, Redmond Conyngham, in Phila.; was later Lieut. Col. of His Majesty's 29th Reg. of Foot;

Gustavus Conyngham, of Rosguil, father of Capt. Gustavus Conyngham, who commanded the privateer, "Charming Peggy," belonging to firm of Conyngham & Nesbitt, and commissioned by "Letters of Marque," Dec. 5, 1758; later commanded other vessels of the fleet, belonging to the same firm; was commissioned a Capt. in the U. S. N., 1777, and served to close of war; m. Ann Hockley, at Christ Church, Oct. 23, 1773; d., Phila., Nov., 1819;

Alexander Conyngham, of county Donegal, d. s. p.; devised his estate to his nephews; Andrew Conyngham.

CAPT. DAVID CONYNGHAM succeeded to the estates at Ballyherin and Letterkenny, acquired by Alexander Conyngham, of Aighan, from his uncles, and purchased from his uncle, Richard Murray, and by will dated November 18, 1757, proven June 15, 1759, devised them to his son, Redmond Conyngham, of Philadelphia, from whom they descended to his son, David Hayfield Conyngham. The children of Capt. David Conyngham by his wife, Katharine O'Hanlon, were:

REDMOND CONYNGHAM, of Phila. and Letterkenny, Ireland; of whom presently;

Isabella Conyngham, m. David Stewart, whose sons, David and Walter Stewart, were later apprentices of firm of Conyngham & Nesbitt, Phila., the latter becoming a distinguished Col. in the Pa. Line; brevetted Brig. Gen., 1783, and Major Gen. of Pa.

Militia, 1794; and the former, David Stewart, becoming a prominent merchant and importer of Baltimore, Md., in partnership with his cousin, Capt. David Plunkett, under the firm name of Stewart & Plunkett;

Mary Conyngham, m. Rev. Thomas Plunkett, and had William Conyngham Plunkett, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, and later Baron Plunkett; and Capt. David Plunkett, b. Dublin, Ireland, about 1730, came to Phila. as an apprentice to his uncle, Redmond Conyngham, 1766; located in Baltimore, 1771, and in 1779, with his cousin, David Stewart, above mentioned, founded firm of Stewart & Plunkett; he was Second Lieut. in Col. Smallwood's reg., Capt. Peter Adams' company, named for commission by the Convention of Maryland, and served in battle of Long Island, Aug. 27, 1776, with distinguished bravery; was commissioned Capt., Jan. 10, 1777, of a company in the Fourth Continental Dragoons, but resigned March 1, 1779; he was commissioned Second Lieut., U. S. N., July 20, 1781, and served until the close of war, when he resumed his commercial business at Baltimore; d. 1793, at sea, on way from the West Indies, where he had been transacting commercial business, to make a visit to his relatives in Ireland; unm.;

Alexander Conyngham, accompanied his brother, Redmond, to Phila., and d. there, Oct. 14, 1748;

Hannah Conyngham, m. Rev. Oliver McCausland, Rector of Finlängen, county Derry, Ireland, a descendant of Baron McAusland, who came to Ireland in 1660;

Katharine Conyngham, m. Col. David Ross, and her only son, David Ross, was made tenant male heir of Redmond Conyngham, pending the attainder of David Hayfield Conyngham, for participation in the American war, against the Crown of England.

REDMOND CONYNGHAM was born at Letterkenny, Ireland, 1719, and came to Philadelphia in 1740, establishing himself there as shipping merchant. He was a young man of good judgment and an indomitable business energy, which with a thorough knowledge of business methods and an unusual knowledge of human nature, made him successful in his business ventures from the start. In 1748 he associated himself with Theophilus Gardner under the firm name of Conyngham & Gardner, which continued until 1751, when Gardner retired from the firm, and was succeeded by John Maxwell Nesbitt, who had come to Philadelphia from Belfast, February, 1747, under the care of his uncle, Alexander Lang, who apprenticed him to Redmond Conyngham, with the intention, at the close of his apprenticeship, of taking him into the shipping business with himself. Mr. Nesbitt was born at Loughbrickland, county Down, Ireland, 1730, and was a son of Jonathan Nesbitt, whose wife was a sister to Alexander Lang, who came to Philadelphia in 1747 and engaged in the shipping business there until his death in 1749. Jonathan and Alexander Nesbitt, brothers of John Maxwell, were also later apprentices of the Conyngham firm.

John Maxwell Nesbitt became a prominent figure in the affairs of his adopted city and province. He remained in entire charge of the business of the firm at Philadelphia, on the removal of Redmond Conyngham to Ireland in 1766, and was recognized as one of the prominent business men of that commercial metropolis of the American Colonies. At the beginning of the Revolutionary struggle he ardently espoused the cause of the Colonies and was named as one of the Committee of Correspondence, May 20, 1774; was a deputy to the Colonial Conference of July 15, 1774; treasurer of and paymaster of the State Navy Board, September 14, 1775; treasurer of the Council of Safety, July 27, 1776; member of the Board of War, March 14, 1777, and later warden of the Port of Philadelphia. He subscribed £5000 to the Pennsylvania Bank, 1780, and was elected Inspector, and he was also one of the organizers of the Bank of North America in 1781, and one of its original directors, serving until January 9, 1792. He was one of the original members of the Society of Sons of St. Patrick, 1771; its vice-president, 1771-73; president, 1773-82.

Redmond Conyngham, after a successful business career in Philadelphia of a quarter of a century, decided to return to Letterkenny to take charge of the landed estate devised to him by his father, and to look after his widowed mother. He started into business in a small way and developed it rapidly in accordance with his means and the growth of the trade and resources of his adopted country. His American products were carried to England and Ireland in his own vessels, nearly all of which were built at Philadelphia, and their return cargo consisted of such goods as were needed by the growing population of Pennsylvania. His first vessel, "Hamilton Galley," was registered at Philadelphia, where it was built, December 3, 1746. Its capacity was one hundred tons and she was owned jointly by Mr. Conyngham and William Hamilton, of Londonderry, Ireland, to whom her cargo was consigned. His next was "Prince William," of ninety tons, registered April 13, 1748, and owned by him jointly with Mr. Gamble and Mr. Hamilton, of Londonderry, the consignees. The "Culloden," one hundred tons, followed November 21, 1751, owned by the firm of Conyngham & Gardner, and the consignees, Alexander and Francis Knox, of Londonderry. The "Isabella," sixty tons, and the "Alexander," seventy tons, were registered the following year, and the "Hayfield," one hundred tons, the first owned and launched by the new firm of Conyngham & Nesbitt, appeared in 1756, are followed by the "Hannah," fifty-five tons, in 1759. The brigantine "Polly," a prize captured by the privateer, "Polly's Revenge," was registered in 1760, and in 1761 another "Hayfield," of eighty tons, was registered, and the "Mary" in 1765.

The firm of Conyngham & Nesbitt also owned the privateers, "Charming Peggy," "Speedwell," "Revenge," "Nesbitt" and "Renette." The "Charming Peggy," fitted out in 1767, was commanded by Capt. Gustavus Conyngham, nephew of Redmond, and had been granted letters of Marque, December 5, 1758.

Mr. Conyngham was one of the foremost of the Philadelphia merchants to advocate improvements to encourage commerce. He was one of the merchants who appealed to the Provincial authorities for the erection of piers on the Delaware front to protect the vessels from ice in the winter season and facilitate the loading and unloading of merchant vessels, 1761. The appeal resulted in the Governor sending a special message to Provincial Council urging prompt action, February 25, 1761, and an act was passed on March 14, following, and enlarged February 17, 1762. Progressive in his ideas on improvement, Mr. Conyngham in a measure set the pace for his more conservative neighbors in the beautification of his own property.

His home was at No. 96 Front street, between Walnut and Spruce, and his shipping house was next door, No. 94, both premises being occupied by the family and firm until 1802. Watson in his "Annals" refers to the "large and beautiful sloping gardens declining from the Front Street houses of Conyngham and others, into Dock Creek, so as to be seen by passengers on the west side of Dock Creek. As early as 1746, Mr. Conyngham's garden was especially beautiful, having stone steps leading down from the sloping lawn into Dock Creek, to which was always moored a pleasure boat, ready for excursions and fishing parties."

Mr. Conyngham, like all his family, was a strong churchman, a number of his relatives being clergymen of the Established Church. On coming to Philadelphia he attached himself to Christ Church, and was a vestryman there from 1754 until his removal to Ireland, 1766, and was warden, 1754-59.

He was one of the subscribers to the fund to erect a steeple and procure bells in 1751, and one of the petitioners for the erection of St. Peter's in 1754, when Christ Church was proving inadequate to accommodate all the worshippers, and was one of the vestrymen who participated in the opening of the new church when completed in 1761. He was one of the petitioners, in 1759, to the Bishop of London for the confirmation of Parson Jacob Duché as Assistant Rector. He was a subscriber to the Dancing Assembly in 1748, a contributor to the Pennsylvania Hospital in 1756. He took a lively interest in the social affairs of the city in the days of her prosperity, and was a member of Fishing Company of Fort St. David, and a subscriber to the Mount Regale Fishing Club, 1763.

Both Mr. Conyngham and his partner, Mr. Nesbitt, were among the first signers of the Non-Importation Agreement in 1765, and had he remained in Pennsylvania, Mr. Conyngham would doubtless, like his partner, remained an ardent partisan of the rights of the Colonies. However, having large landed interests under the jurisdiction of the English Crown, in Ireland, it was considered wise to drop his name from the Philadelphia firm, in which he retained an interest during the Revolution, especially in view of the ardent partisanship of his partner, and the firm name was changed to J. M. Nesbitt & Co.

On May 26, 1766, Redmond Conyngham and his family embarked from Philadelphia on board one of the vessels of the firm, "Hayfield," Capt. William Mackey, for Ireland, Francis Hopkinson, of Philadelphia, being a fellow passenger. His eldest son, just concluding his studies at the Philadelphia Academy, and designed to become a partner, also accompanied his parents to the old home at Letterkenny, Ireland, with a view of finishing his business education. Redmond Conyngham never returned to Philadelphia, spending the remainder of his days at his native place of Letterkenny, where he died January 17, 1784, in his sixty-sixth year. He was possessed of a large landed estate in Ireland and Scotland. The estates of Ballyboe, and others inherited from his ancestor, Alexander Conyngham, of Aighan, were devised to his son, David Hayfield Conyngham, of Philadelphia, his grandson, David Ross, before mentioned, being named as tenant male heir during the attainder of David, for participation in the American Rebellion.

Redmond Conyngham had married in Philadelphia, January 13, 1749, Martha, born in Philadelphia, February 13, 1731, daughter of Robert Ellis, Esquire, of Philadelphia and Durham, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, one of the first proprietors of the Durham Iron Works, and a Justice of Bucks county, 1745-49. He resided for the most part of his life, however, in Philadelphia, where he was prominent in business, church and social circles. He was a member of Common Council of Philadelphia, 1772, and Grand Juryman in 1734; a vestryman of Christ Church, 1712-35, and was one of those that sought the appointment of Rev. Richard Peters as rector to succeed Rev. Archibald Cumings in 1741. Mrs. Martha (Ellis) Conyngham died in county Derry, April 15, 1768.

Redmond and Martha (Ellis) Conyngham were the parents of five sons and five daughters; two of the former were:

- DAVID HAYFIELD CONYNGHAM, b., Phila., March 21, 1750; d. there, March 3, 1834; m. Mary West; of whom presently;
Alexander Conyngham, b. 1753; d. Nov. 2, 1763, while a student at the Philadelphia Academy.

DAVID HAYFIELD CONYNGHAM, eldest son of Redmond and Martha (Ellis) Conyngham, born in Philadelphia, March 21, 1750, entered the Latin School of the Philadelphia Academy in 1757, and was a student there until 1766, when he accompanied his parents to Letterkenny, Ireland, and spent the next two years at Trinity College, Dublin. In April, 1768, he sailed from Newry for Philadelphia, accompanied by his cousin, David Stewart, and on their arrival both became apprentices in the shipping house of Conyngham & Nesbitt, then under the management of the junior partner, John Maxwell Nesbitt. Another cousin, David Plunkett, later a Captain, had preceded them and was already an apprentice in the same house. At the expiration of his apprenticeship, and the attaining of his majority, David H. Conyngham again sailed for Europe and travelled extensively in Great Britain, France, Portugal and other parts of the Continent of Europe. Returning to Philadelphia in 1774, he joined Capt. Cadwalader's first Company of Philadelphia Militia, called "The Greens," also known as "The Silk Stocking Company," for the reason that it was largely composed of the aristocratic youths of Philadelphia.

In 1775 he was admitted as a member of his father's firm, and in the same year went to Europe in the interest of the firm, and also in the interest of the Colonial cause, with a view of obtaining arms and munitions of war for the use of the Colonies in the war that then seemed imminent. He sailed September 15, 1775, in the "Charming Polly," with Jonathan Nesbitt, as supercargo, and his cousin, Capt. Gustavus Conyngham, as master. They carried a cargo of flax seed belonging to the firm of Conyngham & Nesbitt, and were to proceed to France and obtain a return cargo of powder and other necessaries for the conduct of the war. Leaving the lading to the care of the supercargo, Mr. Conyngham proceeded to Paris on a diplomatic mission, and remained there until 1777. Through the intercession of Dr. Franklin, he secured for Capt. Gustavus Conyngham a second commission as Captain, this time in the United States Navy. Jonathan Nesbitt, the supercargo, also remained in France, locating at L'Orient, where he established a commercial house that became an important source of supply for the American Colonies.

From Paris David H. Conyngham proceeded to Bordeaux, where he purchased goods to be shipped to Philadelphia, by way of Martinique. Returning to Philadelphia early in 1777, he was elected in March of that year as a member of The First City Troop, and served with it in the various campaigns as the special guard of Gen. Washington, and the special service to which the Commander-in-Chief assigned the troop. He was at Somerset, New Jersey, 1780, and January, 1781, during the revolt of the Pennsylvania Line, went with the troop to Trenton, and after a tour of duty in various parts of New Jersey was ordered by Lord Sterling with a small detachment of the troop to conduct two spies, Sergeant Mason and James Ogden, to Summer-Seat, the home of Thomas Barclay, at Morrisville, Bucks county, later the home of Robert Morris, where Mason and Ogden were courtmartialled and hanged. He continued a member of the City Troop after the close of the war; was its Third Sergeant, and in 1796 promoted to Second Sergeant; June 19, 1798, became an honorary member. During the Whiskey Insurrection of 1794, he acted as Aide-de-Camp to Gen. Walter Stewart and Gen. Edward Hand.

David Hayfield Conyngham

David Hayfield Conyngham was identified with a number of the prominent institutions of his native city. He was elected a trustee of the University of Pennsylvania in 1790, and served until his resignation in 1803; was one of the contributors to the Pennsylvania Hospital, as early as 1766; was elected a member of the Friendly Society of the Sons of St. Patrick, 1775; was a prominent member of the Hibernian Society, and of the Hibernian Fire Company. He resided in 1783 at "Woodford" on the Ridge road, four miles from his place of business, No. 94 Front street, the site being now included in Fairmount Park. Some years later he erected a double stone house on Germantown road, opposite the Bringham House, and lived there during the summer months until his death. His town house was No. 109 South Front street, where he spent the winter months until 1826, thereafter making his permanent home at "Clermonte," where he died March 3, 1834, and was buried at Christ Church. In October, 1796, in one of Mr. Conyngham's ships, Capt. Ewing, commanding, the exiled Duke of Orleans, later Louis Philippe, King of France, 1830-48, came to Philadelphia. The Duke was travelling incognito, his identity being known to the Captain only; and he was also travelling under a Danish passport, on his way to a temporary asylum in South America. The Duke appealed to Capt. Ewing to find him temporary lodging other than a hotel, and finding Mr. Conyngham, he was taken to his house and there entertained until he could find passage to his destination. Other members of the Duke's family were later the guests of Mr. Conyngham, and a strong bond of sympathy and friendship was established between them.

David H. Conyngham married, at White Marsh, December 4, 1779, Mary, daughter of William West, a prominent merchant of Philadelphia, by his wife, Mary Hodge. William West was born at Sligo, Ireland, died at his country seat at White Marsh, near Philadelphia, now Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, October 28, 1782. For many years a prominent business man of Philadelphia. He was a gentleman of unblemished reputation, and much prominence in his day; was one of the original members of the Friendly Society of Sons of St. Patrick, 1771, and succeeded John Maxwell Nesbitt as its vice-president in June, 1773, and was its president from June 17, 1774, to June 17, 1776. His son, Francis West, born in Philadelphia, September 14, 1761, died June 27, 1843, was a member of the First City Troop, 1786, with his younger brother, John West. Under the firm name of Francis & John West, they also were prominent merchants. It was as assignee of this firm, in 1807, that David H. Conyngham made a trip to Kentucky, an account of which he gives in his "Reminiscences." Starting from Germantown, May 27, 1807, the trip was made to Pittsburg, in his own chaise, going first to Lancaster, thence to Carlisle, crossing the Blue Mountains at Strasburg, Franklin county, and then by way of Bedford and Greensburg to the now western metropolis of Pennsylvania, from where he floated down the Ohio river to Maysville, later Limestone, and from there made his way overland to Paris and Lexington, Kentucky. The narrative of this trip through the then sparsely settled country of our middle west, in the crude conveyances of the day, is intensely interesting in this day of Pullman cars and palatial steamboats; apart from the historical interest in the description of the country passed through, and his meeting with the pioneers of the "dark and bloody ground."

William Hodge, grandfather of Mary (Hodge) West, wife of William West, and mother of Mrs. Conyngham, was also a native of Ireland, died there January 4, 1723. His wife Margaret died October 15, 1730. They were the parents of three sons, William, Andrew and Hugh, all of whom came to Philadelphia, 1751. William Hodge, Jr., by his wife, Eleanor Wormley, was the father of Mary (Hodge) West. Mary (West) Conyngham died in Philadelphia, August 27, 1820.

Issue of David Hayfield and Mary (West) Conyngham:

JOHN NESBITT, of whom presently.

HON. JOHN NESBITT CONYNGHAM, for thirty years President Judge of Courts of Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, was born in the city of Philadelphia, December 17, 1798, and received his preliminary education in that city. He entered the University of Pennsylvania, and graduated in class of 1817. He began the study of law in office of Hon. Joseph Reed Ingersoll, Philadelphia, being the second student of that noted lawyer.

On his admission to the bar of Philadelphia county, Mr. Conyngham, being of an ardent and sanguine temperament, was not content to await the slow process of rising to eminence among the brilliant lights of the bar of his native city, at that date, and therefore decided to begin his professional career in a newer and less crowded field. He went to Wilkes-Barre, and was admitted to the bar of Luzerne county, April 3, 1820.

Wilkes-Barre was at that period but a village of a few hundred inhabitants, and the centre of a rich community being rapidly developed. A fellow passenger on his three days' journey in the stage coach over the mountains was the granddaughter of Col. Zebulon Butler, the hero of the Wyoming Valley, and she a few years later became his wife.

A careful and indefatigable student, industrious and persistent, and possessed of eminent ability, he rose rapidly in his profession and by the fourth year of his practice was the absolute head of his profession in the county. An orator of remarkable ability, of fine personal appearance, he was always a power before a jury, impressing them with his own earnestness and the honesty of his convictions. A great reader of the law, and possessed of a retentive memory, he had every decision that had a bearing on the case at hand, always at his fingers ends. True in every sense to his client, he was always just and courteous to his legal opponents, candid and open to the court, truthful and honest at all times.

Deeply interested in all that pertained to the best interests and advancement of the community in which he had decided to make his permanent home, he at once took an active part in public improvements, the development of the vast resources of that community; in education, social advancement; the suppression of vice and promotion of temperance; the founding of societies, libraries, and other institutions for intellectual advancement. "As a citizen he performed with honesty every duty laid upon him: taking with alacrity his part in every needed work or sacrifice, and doing all that he could to keep healthy and sound that public opinion which is the strength of life to the nation." He always took a decided stand on the side of truth and right as he saw them, never compromising a principal, in the advocacy of his views and plans, and soon won the respect and esteem of all who had the interest of the community at heart, and had the confidence of even his opponents. He became one of the leaders of public thought and action, and for the reason that he carefully weighed and scrutinized every measure before he gave it his support, and was then persistent in its advocacy, he became a power for good in his community and sphere of action. He served for a time as a Representative of his district in the lower house of the law-making body of his state, and his career there bore the same impress of a high-toned and incorruptible leader of thought and action.

Soon after settling in Wilkes-Barre, he united himself with St. Stephen's Protestant Episcopal Church, of which he was for fifty years a vestryman. In October, 1826, he was a delegate from that church to the Diocesan Convention held at St. Peter's Church in Philadelphia, and acted as a member of the special convention called by Bishop White to consider the expediency of electing an assistant bishop in the Diocese of Pennsylvania. From that date he took an important part in the affairs of the Episcopal Church in America; being elected in 1850 deputy to the General Convention at Cincinnati, Ohio, where he was one of the most prominent and efficient members, and thereafter rose to a prominent position in the councils of the church and served on many of the most important committees.

His career as a successful and prominent practitioner at the bar terminated in 1838, with his brilliant defence of his client in the famous Gillilan murder trial, at the close of which he broke down and was confined to his house for a year. In 1839 he was called to the bench in the Bradford and Susquehannah district, where he presided until April Term, 1841, when by an exchange with Judge Jessup, he was transferred to the Luzerne County Bench, over which he presided as President Judge until his resignation in 1870, with the exception of the year 1859. On his retirement, all Luzerne county testified to his rare ability and eminent fairness and justice, and sixteen judges of the state gave in writing their deliberate judgment of his high character and talents as a jurist. During his active career he filled many important trusts. He was Burgess of Wilkes-Barre, May, 1827, to May, 1828, and May, 1834, to May, 1837; President of the Borough Council, 1849-50; a member of the first Board of Directors of the Wyoming Bank, organized in 1829; many years President of the Wilkes-Barre Tract Society; of the Luzerne County Bible Society; of the American Church Missionary Society; Vice-president of the American Sunday School Union, and of the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, Philadelphia, as well as being identified with various other institutions of Luzerne county. At the outbreak of the Civil War, unable to go to the front himself, he joined in the call for public meetings to secure recruits for the army in the field, addressed immense audiences, headed subscription lists, stimulated the lagging to the support of the government and gave all his four sons to the service of his country, two of whom bled in its battles, and all of whom would have died if necessary in the defence of the Union.

His eldest son, Col. John B. Conyngham, had joined the regular army after the close of the war, and was stationed at Fort Clark, Texas, where he was taken seriously ill, in the winter of 1870-1. On February 20, 1871, Judge Conyngham having been notified that his afflicted son was expecting one of his brothers to come south and receive the invalid and assist in bringing him home, started to accompany his other son, William L. Conyngham, on this mournful errand. Going by way of Philadelphia and Pittsburg to Louisville, Kentucky, on their way to New Orleans, in changing cars at Louisville, Judge Conyngham was thrown under the cars and had both legs crushed, February 23, 1871, and died at a hotel there two hours later. When the news of his death reached Wilkes-Barre, all the town was thrown into mourning; court being in session when the telegram announcing his death was received, immediately adjourned, and a committee of the bar was appointed to meet the remains at some point on its way home. Mr. McClintock in addressing the court on the subject of adjournment said in part, "I need not say that the event stirs us all and that the minds of suitors, jurors, witnesses, members of the Bar and of the Court, are not in such frame of mind as would make further despatch of business for the remainder of the week, either desirable or possible. In respect therefore, to the memory of that just and good man whom all of us loved and venerated, and who presided over this court for thirty years with such distinguished honor, I move, your Honor, that this Court be now adjourned," Judge Harding, with voice choked with emotion he could ill control, remarked that such action would be eminently proper, and directed the crier to adjourn court until Monday morning.

William L. Conyngham started home with the remains of his beloved parent, February 25, and was met near Louisville by his brother, Thomas D. Conyngham, and his brother-in-law, Charles Parrish. The mournful cortège was met at Pittsburg by a committee of the Luzerne county bar, and at Harrisburg by a committee of the Masonic fraternity, and arrived at Wilkes-Barre, March 1, where deputations of the borough officials, the county officials, and numerous other institutions met them at the depot, and accompanied them to his late residence. He was followed to his last resting place in the beautiful Hollenbach Cemetery by an immense throng of mourning friends from all parts of the country. The resolutions adopted by the various organizations with which he had been connected, the minutes adopted by the Supreme Court at its session in Philadelphia, and the many letters of condolence indited by prominent men in all parts of the country, abundantly testified to the position he held in the hearts of all with whom he came in contact.

Judge Conyngham married, December 17, 1823, Ruth Ann, daughter of Gen. Lord Butler, of the Revolution, first Sheriff of Luzerne county, and later Prothonotary, Clerk of the Quarter Sessions and Orphans' Court, Recorder and County Commissioner, member of Supreme Executive Council, 1789-91, member of Legislature, 1801-15-18, and the incumbent of practically every official position of honor in Wilkes-Barre and the county of Luzerne at different periods, as well as identified with most of its early industrial enterprises. His wife was Mary, daughter of Abel Pierce, and granddaughter of Ezekiel Pierce, one of the original settlers of the Wyoming Valley. Of the grandfather of Mrs. Conyngham, Col. Zebulon Butler, the hero of the French and Indian Wars, as well as of the Revolution, we need not speak here, as his record is that of the locality in which he lived and to which he rendered such heroic service.

John Nesbitt and Ruth Ann (Butler) Conyngham were the parents of seven children, of whom six lived to maturity, four sons, John Butler, William Lord, Thomas D. and Charles Conyngham, all of whom served in the Civil War, and two daughters, Mary, wife of Charles Parrish, of Wilkes-Barre, and Anna M., wife of Rt. Rev. William Bacon Stevens, Bishop of Pennsylvania.

COL. JOHN B. CONYNGHAM, eldest son, born at Wilkes-Barre, 1827, was graduated from Yale with high honors in 1846; studied law with A. T. McClintock, Esq., at Wilkes-Barre, and was admitted to the Luzerne county bar, August 6, 1849. After practicing at Wilkes-Barre for three years he located at St. Louis, Missouri, where he practiced until 1856, and then returned to Wilkes-Barre. At the first call for troops in 1861, he volunteered in the three-months service in the Eighth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was appointed Second Lieutenant, April 25, 1861, and served until the expiration of his term of service, July 29, 1861.

He immediately re-enlisted in the Fifty-second Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, of which he was commissioned Major, November 5, 1861. He served in the Army of the Potomac in the Peninsular campaign of 1862, and led the attack at Fair Oaks, being later brevetted Lieutenant Colonel for gallant and meritorious service in that action. In the winter of 1862-3, he was sent with his regiment to Port Royal, South Carolina, and was present at the naval attack on Fort Sumter, April, 1863, and was placed in command of the defences on Morris Island. While conducting the assault on Fort Johnson, he was captured and held as prisoner of war several months; was one of the prisoners selected by the Confederates as hostages to be shot, should the city of Charleston be bombarded. He was exchanged and promoted to Lieutenant Colonel, January 9, 1864, and to Colonel, June 3, 1865, and was mustered out with his regiment, July 12, 1865, having joined Gen. Sherman on his march from Charleston, May, 1865. He joined the Regular Army of the United States as Captain in the Thirty-eighth Infantry, March 7, 1867; was transferred to the Twenty-fourth Infantry, November 11, 1869; was brevetted Major in the regular service, March 7, 1867, for gallant and meritorious service at the siege of Yorktown, Virginia, and Lieutenant Colonel for like services at the battle of Fair Oaks. His service in the regular army was chiefly on the Indian frontier, first in Kansas and later in Texas, where he was taken sick as previously related in the winter of 1870-1. His father having met a tragic death on his way to bring home his son, the latter remained south until after the burial of his father, when he was brought to Wilkes-Barre by his brother Charies and Gen. Paul Oliver, who had gone south for him. He died in Wilkes-Barre, May 27, 1871.

CHARLES PARRISH, who married Mary Conyngham, daughter of John Nesbitt and Ruth Ann (Butler) Conyngham, was born at Dundaff, Susquehannah county, Pennsylvania, August 27, 1826, and was a son of Archippus Parrish, Jr., and his wife, Phebe Miller, the former a native of Parrish Hill, Wyndham county, Connecticut, and the latter a daughter of Eleazer and Hannah (Mills) Miller, of Moorestown, New Jersey. His pioneer ancestor, Dr. Thomas Parrish, came from England and settled in Cambridge, Massachusetts, 1635. His parents removed to Susquehannah county, Pennsylvania, 1810.

Charles Parrish was educated at Wilkes-Barre Academy. At the age of fifteen years he became a clerk in the mercantile establishment of Ziba Bennett & Company at Wilkes-Barre, and subsequently became a partner in that firm, remaining until 1856, when he withdrew and engaged in coal operations with his brother-in-law, William Lord Conyngham, and speculated extensively in coal lands. He organized the Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Company, of which he was for twenty years president. He was also president of the Wilkes-Barre Coal & Iron Company, and for twenty years president of the First National Bank of Wilkes-Barre. He was also for many years president of the Parrish & Annora Coal Company; a director of the Northwest Branch Railroad Company; for thirty years a director of the Lehigh Coal & Navigation Company, and for seven years president of the borough council of Wilkes-Barre.

During his whole active career, Mr. Parrish took a keen and active interest in the affairs and progress of the town and community in which he lived. He was identified with many of the business, social, religious and philanthropic enterprises and institutions of Wilkes-Barre, and a popular and public-spirited citizen.

*John Bacon Stevens
Bishop of Pennsylvania*

He was the organizer of the Miner's Relief Association, by which a portion of the earnings of each miner, with a percentage of the earnings of the mines, was placed in a general fund for the relief of the sick and disabled miners and their families.

During the early part of the Civil War, Charles Parrish was active in organizing troops for the defense of the Union, and gave liberally to that cause. He was a member of the Pennsylvania Society Sons of the Revolution, and a life member of the Wyoming Valley Historical and Geological Society. He died in Wilkes-Barre, November 27, 1896. His wife, Mary (Conyngham) Parrish, survives him, and since his decease has resided principally in Washington, D. C., and in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He was also survived by three daughters, one of whom is since deceased.

RT. REV. WILLIAM BACON STEVENS, D. D., LL. D., who married Anna M. Conyngham, daughter of Hon. John Nesbitt Conyngham, of Wilkes-Barre, by his wife, Ruth Ann Butler, was born in Bath, Kennebec river, Maine, July 13, 1815, being the youngest of the seven children of Capt. William Stevens, of the Thirty-fourth United States Infantry, Col. J. B. Larned, commissioned April 3, 1813, and his wife, Rebecca Bacon.

It is said that when a mere infant, his life being despaired of from a severe sickness, his pious mother holding him up on the tips of her fingers, dedicated him to God's service. The family removed to Boston, Massachusetts, when he was still in his infancy, where his father died in 1822, from a disease of the lungs, superinduced by exposure while an officer in the Army. The future Bishop was reared from his father's death in the home of his grandparents, and was educated at the schools of Boston. He was bred as a Congregationalist, but attending St. Paul's Church, Boston, 1828, when the services were conducted by Dr. Alonzo Potter, Bishop of Pennsylvania, he was strongly impressed with the services of the Episcopal church. He became a student at Phillips Academy, Andover, Massachusetts, and on his graduation, travelled through the western states on horseback for the benefit of his health for some months before taking up the serious business of life. He was entertained by the Rev. Lyman Beecher, at the Theological Seminary on West Walnut Hills, Cincinnati, Ohio, and travelled through Indiana, Michigan and other states. His health being still poor, his physicians counselled a residence in the south. He went first to Savannah, Georgia, and from there made a trip to the Sandwich Islands, where he spent five months, interesting himself in the missionary schools, churches, etc., and their work, and gathering information on the subject of foreign missions that was later of the utmost importance in his clerical work. He next made a trip to China, and the Phillipine Islands, was at Manilla in 1836, and sailed from there for New York, from whence he visited his widowed mother in Boston. While in Boston he made a number of forcible addresses in the churches and Sabbath schools, on his observations on mission and church work in the foreign fields.

Bishop Stevens had a strong leaning towards the church, but was induced to prepare himself for the medical profession, and matriculated as a student in the College of South Carolina, at Charleston; supplementing his studies at that institution by a course at Dartmouth College, he received his medical diploma from the latter institution in 1838. He located at Savannah, Georgia, and having married Alethea, daughter of Dr. Edward Coppée, of that city, he entered into partnership with his father-in-law in the practice of his chosen profession. He was one of the organizers of the Georgia Medical Society, and filled a number of official medical positions. Becoming a member of Christ Church, Savannah, he was elected a vestryman and took a lively interest in church work. He also exercised his literary inclinations as editor of "Historical Collections." His mind still reverting to the church, he abandoned the medical profession and took up his theological studies under Bishop Elliot, of Georgia, in connection with editorial work for the Georgian, the leading daily paper of Savannah. He was ordained deacon in Christ Church, Savannah, and appointed missionary at Athens, Georgia, where he organized Emanuel Church, and was ordained as a priest and the first rector of the church. He was also appointed Professor of Belles-Lettres, Oratory and Moral Philosophy at the University of Georgia, and edited the University Magazine. He visited Boston and assisted in the services on board the "Heber," about to sail for China, with the future Bishop Boone and Rev. Syle, going out as missionaries to that country.

He was called to the rectorship of St. Andrew's Church, Philadelphia, at first declined but finally accepted and the degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon him by the University of Pennsylvania, in 1848, just prior to his taking up the work in his new field of labor.

Dr. Stevens' rectorship of St. Andrew's was highly commended by his parishioners, who showed their appreciation of his worth by granting him extended vacations, on one of which he visited the Holy Land, and greatly increased his knowledge of the Scriptures and divine history. When the Philadelphia School of Divinity was opened, he became Professor of Liturgies and Homilectics. He was elected a member of the American Philosophical Society in 1854, and took a great interest in the University of Pennsylvania, of which he served as a Trustee for many years. He was elected Assistant Bishop of Pennsylvania, at the convention held October 23, 1861, at Philadelphia, to succeed Bishop Bowman. He received the degree of LL. D. at the Union College, Schenectady, New York, 1862, and became Bishop of Pennsylvania in 1865. His first wife having died, leaving him three children, he married (second) Anna M. Conyngham, and in 1872, while on a visit to Great Britain and Ireland, preached in All Saints Church, on the invitation of the Bishop of Derry, and also preached at the Cathedral of Armagh. He was the only American Bishop present at the services of thanksgiving for the recovery of the Prince of Wales, 1872. In 1878 he preached the closing sermon of the Pan-Anglican Conference at St. Paul's Cathedral, London. He had charge of the American churches on the Continent from 1871 for many years, and dedicated the church at Vevey, Switzerland, 1882. On this occasion Oxford University had prepared to confer a degree upon him, but their notification did not reach him until he had left England, and it being necessary for him to be present he was forced to forego the honor.

Many of the sermons of Bishop Stevens have been printed; a volume at the library of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania contains a number of the most important of his sermons and addresses, including an important one on the "History of the Church in Georgia." He became a confirmed invalid in 1885, and died June 11, 1887. By his first wife, Alethea Coppée, he had a son and two daughters, and by his second, Anna M. Conyngham, who survives him, a son and a daughter. He was universally loved for his many acts of kindly love and charity. He was known as the "Bishop of the Poor." Two monuments to his memory are the Protestant Episcopal City Mission and "The Sheltering Arms" established by him.

WILLCOX FAMILY.

THOMAS WILLCOX, who settled in Concord township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, now Delaware county, prior to 1725, is supposed to belong to a family, whose names, spelled both Willcox and Willcocks, appear on the records of a church at Poltimore, county Devon, England, in the early part of the same century.

In 1726 Thomas Willcox, in connection with Thomas Brown, built a mill dam on the west branch of Chester creek, Concord township, and erected what was for a century thereafter known as Ivy Mills, the third paper manufacturing establishment in Pennsylvania. Neither Willcox nor Brown seem to have owned the land on which the dam was erected, but leased it for a time of one Joseph Nicklin. An ancient agreement of co-partnership between Thomas Willcox and Thomas Brown, bearing date August 4, 1729, and still in possession of the Willcox family, sets forth that the partners were about to engage in the manufacture and sale of paper, and in consideration of Willcox teaching Brown the art of paper-making, the former was to receive three-fifths and the latter two-fifths of the profits of the enterprise. This confirms the family tradition that Thomas Willcox had been familiar with the art of paper-making and had been engaged in that business before coming to America. At the date of the agreement Thomas Willcox held the fee title to the land on which the mill was erected and on the same day conveyed to Brown a one-half interest in the same comprising two small tracts containing in the aggregate a little over two acres.

The partnership, however, continued but two years, and on May 6, 1732, Brown leased to Willcox his one-half interest in the plant, and on January 23, 1739, re-conveyed it entire to his old partner.

The Willcox paper mill at Ivy Mills was the first mill to manufacture special paper for the printing of paper currency, and for a century and a half enjoyed the distinction of being the sole manufacturing plant for paper used in printing government bills of exchange and paper currency. Since this business was carried on by the Willcox family in successive generations the detailed account thereof will be given in our account of these respective generations. Thomas Willcox began to furnish paper for Provincial currency as early as 1735, and at about the same date began to supply Benjamin Franklin with paper for his printing office in Philadelphia.

Thomas Willcox acquired 100 acres of land adjoining Ivy Mills, and prior to 1744 erected the old family mansion occupied by the family until 1837, when it was torn down and the present house erected on its site. He appears to have carried on farming in connection with paper making, and was the owner of eight slaves at his death in 1779. He married, June 3, 1727, Elizabeth Cole, a native of Ireland, and of the Roman Catholic faith, though the marriage was performed by Rev. Samuel Hessellius, pastor of Holy Trinity (Old Swedes') Church, at Wilmington, Delaware. On his marriage he embraced the Roman Catholic faith, and his house at Ivy Mills soon became a station or mission of the Catholic Church, where baptisms were performed and mass celebrated by Jesuit priests from Bohemia Manor, Cecil county, Maryland, until the establishment of St.

Joseph's Church in Philadelphia in 1758, after which the mission was supplied from that church. Tradition relates, and meagre records seem to establish, the fact that mass was celebrated in the Willcox house at Ivy Mills for one hundred years before the erection of St. Thomas's Church there in 1853. Both Thomas Willcox and his wife Elizabeth are buried in a family burying-ground near Ivy Mills where succeeding generations of the family lie buried.

Issue of Thomas and Elizabeth (Cole) Willcox:

John Willcox, b. June 21, 1728, in Concord twp., Chester co., Pa., died at Deep River, N. C., 1793; moved to Cross creek, now Fayetteville, N. C., about 1750, and in 1768 erected a saw and grist mill at Deep River, 40 miles distant from Cross creek, and in 1776 erected there a blast furnace and forge, which, during the Revolution, furnished cannon and balls for use of the patriot army, the family still preserving some of the worthless Continental money received by John Willcox in payment therefor. He represented the county of Chatham in the Colonial legislature in 1771; was an active member of "Regulators" prior to the Revolution, and his name appears frequently in published records in connection with that brave band of patriots. He was a pioneer coal mining operator, having discovered a coal bed near his iron furnace in Chatham co., soon after the erection of the furnace; he m. Rebecca Butler, of Phila., whose mother m. as second husband, James Byrne, of that city. Mrs. Willcox d. in N. C., Aug., 1808. They had several children, among whom were two sons who settled in Ga., where Wilcox co. was named in their honor:

Ann Willcox, b. May 9, 1730; d. June, 1765; m., June, 1747, James White, of Concord, Chester, now Delaware co., Pa., who on Aug. 25, 1747, purchased a house at the south end of Front street, Phila., near the draw-bridge, where he lived until his death, Feb. 8, 1770, aged 66 years. He was one of the original and active members of St. Joseph's R. C. Church, Phila.; was one of the trustees for the land upon which St. Mary's Church was built in 1762, and a contributor to the building fund; was a merchant and signed the Non-importation Resolutions in 1765. MARK WILLCOX, youngest son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Cole) Willcox, was born at Ivy Mills, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, August 19, 1744. In 1765 he succeeded his father in the management of the paper mill, which he inherited at his father's death in 1779, and continued to conduct until his death in 1827. During the war of the Revolution he was actively engaged in the manufacture of paper for Continental currency; for the Loan Office Certificates, and Pennsylvania currency; and also of other paper for the use of Congress, and for this reason was exempted from military duty, both by Act of Congress, and by the Council of Safety of Pennsylvania. He was appointed at the Provincial Conference held in Philadelphia, June 19 to 22, 1776, as a judge of the election for deputies to the Provincial convention to adopt a constitution for the state of Pennsylvania, and during the occupancy of Philadelphia by the British Army, he was one of a company organized in his neighborhood to prevent the British from securing supplies for the army in that section. His activity in this work led to his arrest by the British soldiers, and he was carried a prisoner to Philadelphia. His non-combatant Quaker neighbors, however, sent a deputation to Gen. Howe and secured his release.

Mark Willcox was a member of Assembly in 1788, and served on important committees of that body, among them a committee to which was referred all claims of individuals against the State, and the committee relative to the establishment of a State Assay office. He was still a member of Assembly, September 26, 1789, when the bill for the erection of Delaware county was enacted; he was appointed by Gov. Thomas Mifflin, August 17, 1791, one of the Associate Justices for Delaware county, an office he filled until about 1824. In 1799 he was Lieutenant-Colonel of One Hundred and Tenth Regiment, Pennsylvania Militia.

There is abundant evidence in cotemporary correspondence of the period from the close of the Revolutionary War to 1800 showing that the paper manufactured by Mark Willcox at Ivy Mills was of superior quality and much in demand for use in the best publications of the day. In addition to the conduct of the paper mill he, in 1784, entered into partnership with his brother-in-law, Thomas Flahavan, and carried on a large shipping and trading business under the firm name of Flahavan & Willcox. One of the letter-books of the firm, still preserved, shows that the business consisted chiefly in the purchase of produce and goods which were shipped in sloops from Wilmington, Delaware, and Newbern and Washington, North Carolina, to Dublin, London, Rotterdam, and Amsterdam. They had warehouses at Fayetteville, North Carolina, where their agent, Thomas Newman, collected tobacco, corn, rice, lard, etc., deer skins, tar, pitch and turpentine, for shipment abroad, and disposed of the imported goods brought in by the sloops, as a return cargo. The business had been originally established by John and Thomas Flahavan, brothers of Mark Willcox's wife, the former of whom was lost at sea on the return voyage of a business trip to Holland, early in 1783, Mr. Willcox becoming a member of the firm as his successor. A letter from the firm of Flahavan & Willcox to one of their foreign correspondents under date of April 14, 1784, refers to the difficulty experienced by foreign shippers by reason of the insufficient trade relations of the infant republic with foreign nations before the adoption of the national constitution. It says, "Congress has come to no resolution respecting our commerce, nor can they without the concurrence of the States. All Congress can do is to recommend; the States individually may pass laws to enforce the same, if they see fit; however nothing of this kind is yet passed." The firm of Flahavan & Willcox was dissolved in 1793.

Mark Willcox was originally a slave-holder, but manumitted most of his slaves during the period between 1798 and 1807. He was reared a Roman Catholic and was a staunch supporter of that church throughout his life, being one of the incorporators of a church in Philadelphia in 1788, and a liberal contributor to its improvement and support. He was also a trustee of Christ Church, West Chester, 1793 to 1800, and active in the establishment of Georgetown College, District of Columbia, 1787. He died February 7, 1827, and was buried in the Willcox burial-ground at Ivy Mills.

Mark Willcox married (first), April 18, 1779, at St. Joseph's Church, Philadelphia, Mary Flahavan, who died of consumption in November, 1784. She was a daughter of Roger Flahavan, born in Ireland, in 1728, who came to Philadelphia, then a widower, accompanied by his three sons: Roger, Jr., Thomas and John, and four daughters: Eleanor, married Michael Gorman, and died in Philadelphia in 1778; Ann, married James Gallagher in 1774, and lived in Philadelphia; Mary, before mentioned as the wife of Mark Willcox; and Margaret. Roger Flahavan was an active member of St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church, filling many positions of trust until his death. He married (second), April 2, 1768, Catharine Swan, born 1724, died July 1, 1779. He died December 21, 1792. Dunlap's American Daily Advertiser for December 22, 1792, contains the following obituary notice:

"Died yesterday morning, aged 64, Mr. Roger Flahavan, Senr. justly and generally regretted by all who knew him. This respectable citizen devoted the whole of his time to acts of the most unaffected piety towards his Creator; and of benevolence and beneficence towards all who were in the sphere of his acquaintance. His friends and relatives who are bereft of so valuable a connection believe that his exemplary life and innocent manners afford every rational hope that he has exchanged a world of fleeting joy for a never fading crown of Glory."

Of the sons of Roger Flahavan, Roger, Jr., died in Philadelphia, June 24, 1799; he married (first) Margaret ———, and (second) 1794, Sarah, daughter of Daniel Conry. The other two sons, John and Thomas, composing the firm of John Flahavan & Company, both died unmarried, the former being lost at sea as above mentioned, and the latter dying in Philadelphia several years later. John Flahavan was a Captain of New Jersey troops during the Revolutionary War, and was in the thick of the fight at the historic battle of Trenton. He was commissioned Second Lieutenant of Captain Platt's company, First Battalion, First Establishment, New Jersey Continental Line, December 16, 1775; recommissioned with same rank, November 29, 1776; prisoner of war, April 22, 1777; Captain, First Regiment, September 26, 1780; resigned 1781. Gen. Strycker in his "Battles of Trenton and Princeton," makes the following references to Capt. Flahavan in his account of the battle of Trenton:

"Washington's order, Christmas Morning, 1776, for the march for Trenton, was 'Captain Washington and Captain Flahavan, with a party of forty men each to march before the division and post themselves on the road about three miles from Trenton, and make prisoners of all going in or coming out of Town.'

"Marching in advance of General Sullivan's column," continues Strycker, "Captain Flahavan, a gallant and ambitious officer of the First Battalion, New Jersey Continental Line, with a detachment of forty recruits for the new establishment, first came upon the picket station and drove it in, Colonel Glover's brigade following up in pursuit of the retreating guard."

Bridget Flahavan, daughter of Roger Flahavan, Sr., by his second wife, Catharine Swan, born 1771, died October 5, 1829; married, February 24, 1791, Matthew Carey, the prominent Philadelphia book publisher. He was born in Ireland in 1759, came to Philadelphia in 1784, and soon became one of the most prominent book publishers in the country. He retired from business in 1824, and died September 16, 1839. He and his wife were buried in a vault at St. Mary's Church.

Mark Willcox married (second), September 21, 1786, Anna Mary, (b. April 25, 1761, died February 6, 1821), daughter of Joseph Theophilus and Anna Catharine Cauffman, of Philadelphia, both natives of Germany.

Joseph Cauffman, as he is usually designated, though Ashmead refers to him as "Dr. Teophilus Cauffman from Strasburg," was born in Strasburg, Germany, in 1720, and came to Philadelphia in 1749. He was possessed of considerable worldly goods, and being desirous of owning lands, and having some doubt of the validity of title by reason of his Roman Catholic faith, he secured the passage of an act of Pennsylvania Assembly, giving him and one John Cottringer all the rights of citizenship. This bill, May 26, 1769, was laid before the Provincial Council by the governor, and that body advised the governor to refuse his assent, for the reason that, in their opinion, any act for the naturalizing of a Roman Catholic "would be repugnant to an Act of Parliament;" whereupon the governor refused his assent. Joseph Cauffman, however, acquired title to numerous large tracts of lands in the counties of Philadelphia, Chester, Bucks, Montgomery, Westmoreland and Indiana, Pennsylvania, in the name of Rev. Robert Harding, the latter filing a declaration showing that these lands were held for Mr. Cauffman. In this manner he purchased, June 20, 1767, a property on the south side of Cherry street between Third and Fourth, and on about the same date, a plantation of 228 acres in Providence township, near Norristown, to which he retired in 1792, and where he died February 12, 1807, at the age of eighty-seven.

By his first wife, Anna Catharine, whom he married about 1754, Joseph Cauffman had four children. His eldest son Joseph, born in Philadelphia, 1755, was educated at a school at Bruges, and University of Vienna, where he took degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1776. After a years experience in the hospitals of London and Edinburgh, he returned to Philadelphia and was appointed a surgeon in the infant navy established by resolutions of Continental Congress. In the latter part of 1777 he was assigned to the "Randolph," Captain Nicholas Biddle, and perished with the rest of the crew when that vessel was blown up in an engagement with the British frigate, "Yarmouth," off the island of Barbadoes, March 7, 1778.

John Cauffman, second son of Joseph and Anna Catharine Cauffman, born April 30, 1764, died 1820; married, April 2, 1793, Margaret Wade, and their eldest daughter, Sarah, became the wife of John Carrell, Jr., two of whose sisters were connected with the Willcox family and are mentioned hereafter, viz., Louisa (Carrell) Jenkins, and Eliza Mary (Carrell) Lucas, whose granddaughter became the wife of a later Mark Willcox.

Joseph Cauffman, Sr., married (second) November 27, 1768, Barbara (Arnold) Butler (born 1741, died August 8, 1787), widow of Capt. Edward Butler, and by her had one son, Lawrence Cauffman (born August 8, 1769, died July 4, 1850), who married, April 23, 1796, Sarah Falconer, daughter of Robert Shewell, of Painswick Hall, Bucks county, Pennsylvania.

John Willcox was one of the most enterprising and public-spirited men of his day, and his early death was much regretted by all who knew him. Shortly before his decease he was appointed at a meeting of a number of manufacturers and other citizens of Delaware county, one of a committee of three to ascertain the number of manufactories, improved and unimproved mill-seats, etc., in the county, and at a meeting at the courthouse, convened to hear the report of this committee, August 5, 1826, George G. Leiper, one of John Willcox's colleagues on the committee, announced the death of Willcox, and paid a glowing and eloquent tribute to his worth, and offered the following resolution which was unanimously adopted:

He was a charter member and first president of the Merchants' and Miners' Transportation Company, established in 1854. He was a member of the Roman Catholic church, and for many years his house in Baltimore was the temporary home of most of the prelates of that church when attending councils and other functions in that city. He married at the cathedral in Baltimore, January 28, 1830, Louisa (born May 14, 1805, died June 7, 1882), daughter of John and Judith (Moore) Carrell, of Philadelphia; a further account of her ancestry is given later. In accordance with the dying request of Mrs. Jenkins, her children erected in memory of their parents, Corpus Christi Church in Baltimore, the corner stone of which was laid in 1885, and the church consecrated January 1, 1891, by Cardinal Gibbons, in the presence of Archbishop Ryan, of Philadelphia, who preached the sermon, and many other dignitaries of the church.

JAMES MARK WILLCOX, youngest son of Mark and Anna Mary (Cauffman) Willcox, was born at Ivy Mills, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, April 12, 1791, was baptized at St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, Philadelphia. In 1826, after the death of his half-brother, John Willcox, he assumed the management of the paper mill at Ivy Mills, and his father dying a year later, he inherited and continued to conduct it throughout the active years of his life. In 1829, when the ancient paper mill had been in operation one hundred years, he tore it down and erected a new mill on the same site. Under his management the manufacture of paper for bank-notes for government use was highly developed; nearly the whole of the western continent drew its supply of bank-note paper from this mill. Following the example of his father, he devoted especial attention to the manufacture of this grade of paper, and profiting by his experience as well as by their own, his sons were able to supply the bank-note and bond paper required to relieve the financial necessities of the national treasury during the late Civil War.

In 1837 James M. Willcox built another paper mill at Glen Mills, about two miles from Ivy Mills, and when the West Chester & Philadelphia railroad was built in 1845, and a station established at Glen Mills, he built still another mill there. In these new mills at Glen Mills modern paper-making machinery was installed, while at the old Ivy Mills the old hand process was continued. James M. Willcox purchased and donated the ground on which St. Thomas Catholic Church was erected near Ivy Mills in 1852, and contributed largely to the erection of the church. He, however, secured the permission of the Bishop of Philadelphia to continue the celebration of mass at the private chapel at Ivy Mills. Mr. Willcox was also one of the active promoters of the building of St. Michael's Church at Chester, the corner stone of which was laid September 29, 1842, and which was dedicated June 29, 1843. He was one of the promoters of the West Chester & Philadelphia railroad, the first proposition for its building being made by him at a meeting of a number of his neighbors at his house, and he was the first subscriber to its stock. Suffering from long continued ill health, he, on March 3, 1854, completed a long contemplated arrangement, vesting his business in his three sons, Mark, James and Joseph, and died unexpectedly before the following morning. He was a man of unusual intelligence, strength of character, and fervent religious convictions that governed all his intercourse with other men. He was buried in the old family burying-ground at Ivy Mills.

James Mark Willcox married (first) October 4, 1813, Eliza, born 1792, daughter of Capt. James Orne, of Portsmouth, New Hampshire. On October 21, 1816, Mr. and Mrs. Willcox sailed for Savannah, Georgia, with the hope of recruiting Mrs. Willcox's shattered health in a warmer climate, but she died in Savannah, January 28, 1817. Her remains were brought home and interred at Ivy Mills.

James M. Willcox married (second) November 1, 1819, Mary, born September 9, 1796, died March 21, 1866, daughter of Captain James and Elizabeth (Odiorne) Brackett, of Quincy, Massachusetts, sister of Elizabeth Brackett, who had married Mr. Willcox's elder brother, John Willcox.

Capt. Richard Brackett, paternal ancestor of Mrs. Willcox, is said to have been a native of Scotland. He was born in the year 1611, and came to Massachusetts in 1629, in one of the seventeen vessels of the Massachusetts Bay Company. He settled first in Boston, where on August 27, 1630, he signed a covenant with Gov. John Winthrop and others to establish the first Church of Boston. He was admitted a freeman, May 25, 1636. In 1638 he sold his house on Washington street, midway between the present West and Boylston streets, and December 5, 1641, he and his wife Alice were dismissed from the Boston Church to the church at Braintree, now Quincy, Massachusetts, of which he was ordained a deacon, July 1, 1642. He was town clerk for many years and the third captain of the town militia, being retired at his own request in 1684 at the age of seventy-three years. He was deputy to the General Court of Massachusetts for the years 1655-65-67-71-72-74-80. On October 15, 1670, he was appointed "to joyne persons in marriage in the towne of Braintry" and to administer oaths in civil cases. He was admitted a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston in 1639. He figures in Hawthorne's "Scarlet Letter" as captain of the soldiers and custodian of the jail in which Hester Prynne was confined. He died in Braintree, March 5, 1691.

James Brackett, son of Capt. Richard and Alice Brackett, born 1645, died 1718, married Sarah ———, who died in 1727. Their son, Nathan Brackett, born 1677, died 1743, married, May 22, 1707, Hannah Veasie. Their son, James Brackett, born 1709, died 1781, married Abigail Belcher, who died in 1810. Their son, James Brackett, born 1736, died August 16, 1825, married, March 24, 1761, Mary Spear, born 1738, died 1786, and they were the parents of Capt. James Brackett, father of Elizabeth and Mary Brackett, who married respectively, John and James M. Willcox. Capt. James Brackett was born July 29, 1769, died April 18, 1855. He married, October 7, 1795, Elizabeth Odiorne, born at Exeter, New Hampshire, January 7, 1775, died in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, April 5, 1847. She was a descendant of John Odiorne (born 1627, died 1707), who came from England with the Church of England party that founded Portsmouth, New Hampshire. The old Odiorne mansion at Portsmouth is still standing and is one of the most interesting antiquities of the place.

On March 15, 1660, when a division of the public lands of the colony of Portsmouth was made amongst the settlers of 1657, John Odiorne received the grant of forty-two acres, and the section of land at the mouth of the Piscataqua has since been known as Odiorne Point.

John Odiorne married Mary Johnson, and they had a son, John, born about 1675, who married Catharine ———, and had a son, Ebenezer Odiorne, born about 1704, died 1745-6, who married Catharine Sherburne, born 1706, died 1766. Their son, Thomas Odiorne, born December 1, 1733, died April 29, 1810, married, January 31, 1762, Joanna Gilman, and they were the parents of Elizabeth Odiorne who married Capt. James Brackett, above mentioned.

Catharine Sherburne, wife of Ebenezer Odiorne, was of a family of high standing in Lancashire, England, as early as the thirteenth century. The following is condensed from a pedigree compiled by Sir Richard Sherburne, in 1717, lately in possession of Henry Held Blundell, Esq., of Sulworth Castle, Dorset, a copy of which was filed in the Heralds' College, London, in 1770, by Samuel, son of Hon. Henry Sherburne.

Captain John Sherburne, born 1678, died 1747; Councillor 1735-47; married Hannah Jackson, and they were the parents of Catharine Sherburne, wife of Ebenezer Odiorne, above mentioned.

Joanna Gilman, mother of Elizabeth (Odiorne) Brackett, born September 30, 1739, died April 5, 1829, was daughter of Major John Gilman (born October 5, 1712), of Exeter, New Hampshire, by his wife, Jane Deane, whose ancestry is given below. Capt. John Gilman, toward the close of the campaign against Crown Point in 1756, joined the New Hampshire Regiment with a company of seventy-three men, recruited from Exeter and vicinity, and when another Crown Point expedition was organized in 1757, he was Major of the New Hampshire Regiment. He was at Fort Edward in that year and was sent to Fort William Henry for reinforcements. Arriving just after its capitulation he was captured by Montcalm's Indian allies, but was fortunate enough to escape captivity, at the cost of great hardships, Maj. Gilman was a son of Col. John Gilman (born January 10, 1678-9, died about 1740), and his first wife, Elizabeth Coffin (born 1680, died July 4, 1720), daughter of Peter Coffin, of Exeter, a Lieutenant in King Philip's War; Councillor, 1692; and Chief Justice of Supreme Court of New Hampshire, 1697. Col. Gilman was one of the grantees of Gilmanton, and was mentioned in the charter as chairman of first Board of Selectmen. He was moderator of first meeting of the proprietors, March 14, 1728, and was a large landholder. He was a son of John Gilman (born January 10, 1824), baptized at Hingham, England, May 25, 1626, died at Exeter, New Hampshire, July 24, 1708, who married, June 30, 1657, Elizabeth, daughter of James and Catharine (Shapleigh) Trewargye. This John Gilman was Lieutenant of New Hampshire Militia, 1669; Justice of Common Pleas, 1682; Deputy to General Court, 1692-93-97; Speaker in 1693, and member of Council of New Hampshire, 1680-83. He was a son of Edward Gilman, who with his wife, Mary Clarke, came from Hingham, Norfolk, to Hingham, Massachusetts, in 1638, and who was a son of Robert Gilman, of Caston, Norfolk, son of Edward Gilman, of Caston, who married, June 22, 1550, Rose Rysse.

Jane Deane, who married John Gilman, December 28, 1738, great-grandmother of Mary (Brackett) Willcox, was born June 20, 1721, died 1786. She was a daughter of Dr. Thomas Deane (born in Boston, November 28, 1684, died, Exeter, New Hampshire, 1768), who married, October 2, 1718, Deborah, (born November 3, 1699, died September 6, 1735), daughter of Rev. John Clarke (born January 24, 1670, died July 25, 1705), and his wife, Elizabeth, (born April 3, 1673, died December 6, 1729), daughter of Rev. Benjamin Woodbridge (1645-1709-10), and his wife, Mary Ward. Rev. Benjamin Woodbridge was a son of Dr. John Woodbridge (1613-95), by his wife, Mercy Dudley (1621-91), daughter of Gov. Thomas Dudley, of Massachusetts Bay Colony, born Northampton, England, 1576, died Roxbury, Massachusetts, July 31, 1653, who was a son of Captain Roger Dudley, killed at the battle of Ivry, 1590. Gov. Dudley was an officer in the service of Holland before joining the Puritans; came to Massachusetts with Commission as Deputy Governor, 1630, made Governor, 1634; again Governor, 1640-45-50. Resided in Cambridge, Ipswich and Boston, finally settling in Roxbury, where his landed estate was long possessed by his descendants. He married, May 25, 1603, Dorothy Yorke (born 1582, died December 27, 1643). He was appointed Major-General in 1644. Their son, Joseph Dudley, was also Governor of Massachusetts.

Jane Deane was also descended from Rev. Robert Parker (1564-1614), a Puritan divine, who in 1607 was obliged to leave England to avoid persecution. Also from Rev. John Woodbridge (born 1492), a follower of Wycliffe, and his four descendants in regular succession, who followed the same profession. Also from Rev. John Ward (1606-93).

He was appointed by Gov. Hoyt, 1877, one of the commissioners in charge of the Second Geological Survey of Pennsylvania, and served until the completion of the work in 1895.

He was commissioned, Sept., 1862, Captain of Co. F, 16th Reg. Inf., Pa. Militia., and Sept. 17, 1862, the day the regiment was organized, was promoted and commissioned its Colonel, and went at once with it to the front near Hagerstown, Md. However, the battle of Antietam, fought on the same day, checked the Confederate advance, and his regiment being an emergency one, was ordered home and disbanded, Sept. 25, 1862.

Colonel Willcox has written several magazine sketches relating to the Willcox family, Ivy Mills, the Catholic Mission at Concord, "Historical Sketches of some of the Pioneer Catholics of Philadelphia and Vicinity," and a number of other historical papers, which have been published in the "Records of the American Historical Society." He m. Elizabeth (Morgan) Sharpless, dau. of Rev. R. U. Morgan, and widow of Abraham Sharpless, and had issue, one son:

Percy Willcox, Esq., of the Phila. Bar;

Mary Elizabeth, b. Aug. 15, 1831, d. June 6, 1846, while a student at the Convent of the Blessed Virgin Mary, Baltimore, Md.;

Ida Eliza, b. 1840; m. David W. Odiorne.

MARK WILLCOX, eldest son of James Mark Willcox, and his first wife, Eliza Orne, was born at Ivy Mills, August 24, 1814. He was associated with his father in the operation of the paper mills, and by the arrangement made by the latter in 1854, the day before his death, became associated with his half-brothers, James M. and Joseph Willcox, in the proprietorship of both the Ivy Mills and Glen Mills plants, under the firm name of J. M. Willcox & Sons. This arrangement continued until November, 1859, when the Ivy Mills property was transferred to the two younger brothers, Edward J. and Henry B. Willcox; the three elder brothers continuing to operate the morn modern mills at Glen Mills, Joseph, however, retiring in 1867.

At the outbreak of the Civil War in 1861, the Willcox brothers were called upon to furnish bank-note paper for the United States government, required by the immense issue of paper currency issued to carry on the war. They had kept in advance of the times, having installed new machinery, some of it of their own invention, and bringing the manufacture of the bank-note and bond paper also on their new Foundrinier machine at Glen Mills, were able to produce more in a day than the old practice at Ivy Mills, hand-process, could produce in a month. The supply was maintained and always kept up to the requirements of the government, and in the meantime they were experimenting on a peculiar "localized-fibre" paper designed especially for bank notes, which they eventually patented. In 1864, however, the United States Treasury Department, prompted by a desire to prevent the counterfeiting of its issues, undertook the manufacture of currency for its own use, imparting to it some peculiarity of character by which counterfeiting could be detected. A costly mill was installed in the department building at Washington, and experiments at great cost were conducted there for four years. The attempts, however, were all failures, and the mill was torn out and the Willcox brothers were called upon to furnish their localized-fibre paper, which they manufactured at Glen Mills, for the notes and bonds for the government, and it accomplished the object desired and attained not only a national but a world wide reputation. The mills were for ten years under the close guard of government officers, who occupied the premises constantly with a numerous force to see that no sheet or bit of this special paper was abstracted for unlawful purposes: every sheet was tracked through the various processes and stages of manufacture until it was completed and delivered to the government.

In 1880 Mark Willcox purchased the interest of his brother, James M. Willcox, in the Glen Mills property, the branch business in Philadelphia, and the Sarum Farm, adjoining Glen Mills, of which they had been joint owners. He had some years previously purchased of his younger brothers, Edward and Henry, the old Ivy Mills estate where paper making had been abandoned, and at his death in 1883, he held nearly all the properties of the family in Delaware county, that had acquired historical value.

Mark Willcox married, June 15, 1852, Ellen (born February 7, 1828; died September 15, 1888), daughter of Fielding Lucas, Jr., (born 1781, died 1854), publisher of Catholic books, Baltimore, Maryland, and his wife, Eliza Mary Carrell.

Peter Lucas, grandfather of Fielding, Jr., emigrated from Liverpool in the early part of the eighteenth century and settled at Fredericksburg, Virginia. He afterwards removed to Kentucky in company with Daniel Boone. He married Sarah Walker, and had at least two sons, Fielding and Zacharias, the latter married a Miss Brown, and was the father of Fielding Lucas, Jr., above mentioned, who was brought up by his uncle, Fielding Lucas, Sr., in Baltimore. At the age of fourteen years he was sent to Philadelphia to engage in business. He returned to Baltimore in 1806, and became a member of the firm of Conrad, Lucas & Company, of which the present firm of Lucas Bros. is the successor.

Fielding Lucas, Jr., was genial by nature and of an artistic temperament; his house was a rendezvous, not only for the artists and literati of the city, but for all distinguished persons visiting Baltimore, and he had considerable skill as a musician. He was interested in a number of public enterprises; was for many years president of city councils; one of the managers of the Washington Monument; and a director of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, his name being inscribed on the monument at the Relay House, commemorating the building of that road to Washington. He was buried March 14, 1854.

He married, February 15, 1810, Elizabeth Mary, daughter of John Carrell, of Philadelphia, and granddaughter of Timothy Carrell, a wine merchant of Philadelphia, who died there in 1786. His son, John Carrell, born October 7, 1758, was a prominent merchant of Philadelphia.

John Carrell died suddenly May 5, 1830, in Wilmington, Delaware, while on a visit to his son, Rev. George A. Carrell, and was buried at St. Mary's Churchyard, Philadelphia. He married, September 7, 1786, Mary Judith, daughter of Capt. John Moore, of Lancaster, Pennsylvania. Several of the children of this marriage were connected with the Willcox family, and we here insert the list in full.

Conditions had, however, radically changed, and in 1878 John Sherman, Secretary of the Treasury, had, through political manipulation, given the government bank-note contract elsewhere, so James M. Willcox withdrew, leaving what remained of the business to his brother who continued the business some time longer.

These two young men at that time constituted one of the oldest business houses in any line in the United States; one that had continued from father to son in practically the same locality for over one hundred and fifty years. Willcox, at Glen Mills, and eventually alone, being the last of the Willcox family to carry on the old family enterprise. But by 1892 the conditions at Glen Mills had become so unfavorable that he was at last obliged to abandon the business that had been carried on by his family for one hundred and sixty-three years.

At the village of Whitechurch in Hampshire, England, there lived in Tudor times a gentry of substantial means named Brooke. In 1552 Richard Brooke married Elizabeth Twyne. Upon his death in 1593 he left to his wife his "free lands and tenements in Whitechurch and Freefolk" and "his lease of the parsonage of Whitechurch," and to his six children "his lease held by the Blessed Trinity in Winchester," his lease of Knoll, his woods in Chalgrove and Freefolk, and the Manor of West Fosbury. Brasses of Richard Brooke and his wife, Elizabeth, together with two smaller ones commemorative of six children, three sons and three daughters, he had by her, the whole surmounted by the Brooke and Twyne Arms, are affixed on the wall of the church at Whitechurch. Under the brasses there is the following inscription:

He matriculated at New College, Oxford, November 24, 1581, received the degree of B. A., May 4, 1584, and was a barrister at law in the Inner Temple in 1595. He sat for Whitechurch in the Parliament that sat at Westminster from 1603 to 1611, and died in 1612. He married Susan Forster. Her father, Thomas Forster, was born about 1569 and belonged to the Forsters of Northumberland. He was first spoken of as a barrister in 1587, in both Coke's and Croke's reports, became a reader of the Society of the Inner Temple in 1596, and was called on November 24, 1607, to the bench as a Judge of the Common Pleas, and sat in that court until his death, May 18, 1612. Thomas Sutton named him one of the first governors of the Charter House Hospital.

A monument erected to the memory of Thomas and Susan Forster Brooke at Whitechurch is thus described by Symonds in his Diary of the Marches of the Army of Charles I.:

"Whit-church Church."

"Against the north wall chancel, a faire monument the statre of a man in a barr-gowne, and a woman:

In October, 1644, King Charles I., spent two days at Whitchurch, at the house of Thomas Brooke, and the visit is thus described by Symonds in his diary. "Satterday, as soon as light the army marched after the enemy. The King lay at Whitchurch, at Mr. Brooke's his house that night."

Thomas and Susan (Forster) Brooke had ten children. Thomas, the eldest, matriculated at Oriel College, Oxford, October 27, 1615, at the age of sixteen years. He was a barrister in the Inner Temple in 1623, as of Whitchurch. The other children were: Richard; Robert, of whom presently; John, who matriculated at Wadham College, Oxford, May 11, 1621, aged sixteen; William; Humphrey, a citizen of London; Charles; Susan, married William Havers, of Thelveton Hall, County Norfolk; Elizabeth; Frances; and Benjamin, who died young.

Robert Brooke, third son of Thomas and Susan (Forster) Brooke, was born in London, June 2, 1602. He matriculated at Wadham College, Oxford, April 28, 1618; received the degree of B. A., July 6, 1620, and that of M. A., April 24, 1624. He married, February 25, 1627, Mary, daughter of Thomas Baker, of Battel, Sussex, who bore him four children: Baker, Mary, Thomas and Barbara. His first wife having died, he married, in 1635, Mary, daughter of Roger Mainwaring, Bishop of St. David's, who bore him eight sons and three daughters.

On September 20, 1649, Lord Baltimore commissioned Robert Brooke, commander of Charles county, then created on the Patuxent river in his province of Maryland, with full power to levy and command troops, grant commissions, hold court, etc. And in 1650 Robert transported over to Maryland, in his own ship, himself, his wife and children, and many servants, forty persons in all. He had been previously named by Lord Baltimore a member of his Privy Council for Maryland, and when the commissioners of the Council of State for the Commonwealth of England, who were sent over to reduce the Old Dominion to the authority of Parliament, by proclamation of March 29, 1652, deposed William Stone from the governorship of Maryland, Robert Brooke was named as acting governor. When Gov. Stone was reinstated June 28, 1652, Robert Brooke retained his place in the Council. He died July 20, 1663.

Thomas Brooke, second son of Robert, by his first wife, Mary Baker, born at Battel, England, June 23, 1633, came to Maryland with his father in 1650, and became a prominent figure there. He was commissioned Captain in the Maryland forces, June 3, 1657; promoted to Major, February 11, 1660; was made Commissioner for Calvert county, June 14, 1661; elected to the House of Burgesses, September 15, 1663; Sheriff, April 20, 1666; he took part in the expedition against the Indians in 1667, and was still a Burgess for Calvert county in 1673. He died in 1676. He married Eleanor, daughter of Sec. Thomas Hatton, of Maryland. His eldest son, Col. Thomas Brooke, of Brookefield, Prince George's county, was also prominent in public affairs; was Justice of Calvert County Court, 1680; was made Justice of Provincial Court, May 1, 1694; Commissary General, June 5, 1700; was member of Council of Maryland, 1692-1707, and 1715-24, its president in 1720, and acting governor of the province. He died in 1730. He was twice married and had fourteen children.

Roger Brooke, second son of Robert Brooke, by his second wife, Mary Mainwaring, born at Brecknock College, England, September 20, 1637, came with his father to Maryland in 1650, and was for some years Surveyor-General of that Province, and filled other official positions. He died April 8, 1700. He married (first) Dorothy, daughter of Capt. James Neale, and his wife, Ann Gill; and (second) in 1672, Mary Woolsey.

Roger Brooke, Jr., son of Sur.-Gen. Roger Brooke, by his first wife, Dorothy Neale, married Elizabeth Blundell, and their son, Roger Brooke, 3d., who had a plantation on Battel Creek, Calvert county, Maryland, married Mary Neal, and their daughter, Monica Brooke, married Michael Taney, 3d., descendant of a family long settled in Calvert county, Maryland. His plantation was located on Patuxent river, about twenty miles from its mouth. He and his family were Roman Catholics, while at least the earlier generations of the Brooke family, his wife's ancestors, were members of the established church.

Michael and Monica (Brooke) Taney had four sons and three daughters; among the former being Roger Brooke Taney, the celebrated Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, 1777-1864.

Augustus Taney, another son of Michael and Monica (Brooke) Taney, married, February 1, 1821, Catharine, (born September 16, 1795), daughter of Thomas Hurley, Sr., a wall paper manufacturer of Philadelphia, who died in that city, January 25, 1817, by his second wife, Mary Rogers.

Thomas Hurley, Sr., had married (first), about 1779, Catharine Fogart (born 1759, died March 22, 1791), and had by her three sons, the eldest of whom was the Very Rev. Michael Hurley, D. D., O. S. A. (born 1780, died September 14, 1837), sometime pastor of St. Augustine's Church, Philadelphia, and vicar-general of the Province of Our Lady of Good Counsel, now St. Thomas of Villanova.

Thomas Hurley, Jr., second son of Thomas and Catharine (Fogart) Hurley (born 1785), married, September 7, 1809, Ann Louisa Carrell (born July 4, 1780, died December 24, 1823), daughter of John and Mary Judith Moore, before mentioned, and had nine children, the third of whom, Mary Carrell Hurley (born August 23, 1814, died June 3, 1893), married, April 23, 1833, Ambrose White, and their daughter, Mary White, married her half first cousin, Joseph Taney, son of Augustus and Catharine (Hurley) Taney, above mentioned, and they had issue, Katharine Hurley Taney, married, October 25, 1888, James M. Willcox, before mentioned; and Ann Louisa Taney, married, November 19, 1890, Thomas Carrell Willcox, brother of James M., who had married her elder sister, both being sons of Mark and Ellen (Lucas) Willcox.

JAMES M. WILLCOX, last surviving member of the firm of Willcox Brothers, manufacturers of the famous bank-note and bond paper at Glen Mills, was fourth son of James Mark Willcox, Sr., and his second son by the second wife, Mary Brackett. He was born in the ancestral home at Ivy Mills, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, in the same house in which his father and grandfather were born, November 20, 1824. His early education was acquired at Anthony Bolmer's Academy at West Chester, Pennsylvania, from whence he passed to Georgetown College, Washington, D. C. After his graduation at the latter institution he began the study of medicine, but before completing his course, changed his intentions and spent three years in Italy in the study of ancient and modern languages, higher mathematics and philosophy in the Roman Propaganda and Sapienza, becoming an accomplished linguist and acquiring the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, in 1847, not from the faculty, but as a special favor, directly from Pope Pius IX., the original diploma signed by the famous scholar and prelate being a prized possession of his family.

After spending several months in European travel, Mr. Willcox returned home in the fall of 1847, and soon after became associated with his father and brothers in the operation of the paper mills. At the death of his father in 1854, he and his two brothers, Mark and Joseph, continued the proprietors of both the Ivy Mills and Glen Mills paper mills until 1859, and after the transfer of the Ivy Mills to his younger brothers, and the death of his brother Joseph continued the proprietorship of the modern mills at Glen Mills with his brother Mark until 1880. He it was who invented and perfected the process of manufacturing the "localized-fibre" paper so long used by the United States Government for its notes and bonds, and manufactured by the Willcox Brothers at Glen Mills as described in our account of his elder brother Mark. The success of this paper in the United States brought it to the favorable consideration of foreign governments, and it became the currency paper of the German empire. It subsequently received the highest award, the "Diplôme d'Honneur," at the Paris Exposition.

Mr. Willcox also invented the "Chameleon" paper, long used by the United States Treasury Department for stamps and checks, which by reason of its chemical properties prevented the counterfeiting and reissuing of internal revenue stamps. Mr. Willcox's extraordinary scientific knowledge and skill brought the manufacturing plant up to the highest point of efficiency and usefulness.

During his active association with the paper-making business he did not abandon his literary and scientific studies. He contributed to local reviews a number of papers on metaphysical philosophy, and published an octavo volume entitled, "Elementary Philosophy."

James M. Willcox was among the first to advocate the holding of an international exposition in 1876, and did all in his power to advance its usefulness and scope. He was a member of its first Board of Finance, created by Act of Congress, and acted as one of the judges of exhibition. At the first meeting of the committee of which he was a member he was chosen president of Group XIII., and after six months active duty he wrote, by request, a critical compendium of the work of his committee for publication. His services were recognized by a letter of thanks and a special medal from the commission.

Mr. Willcox retired from the firm of Willcox Brothers in 1880. He was a director in a number of large corporations up to the time of his death which occurred October 25, 1895. After his retirement in 1880 he spent the winters in southern Florida, where he had made extensive purchases of land in Orange county on the Indian river. He gave much time to literary work in his later years.

James M. Willcox married (first) November, 1852, Mary, daughter of Jerome Keating, and his wife, Eulalia, also a Keating, a daughter of John Keating, a distinguished officer of the French army, who, for capturing the Island of St. Eustache from the English, was decorated by Louis XVI., and made Chevalier of St. Louis. This John Keating was a son of Valentine Keating, who went from Ireland to France in 1766, and was granted a patent of Nobility by King Louis XV., in recognition of his family's rank in Ireland; his family tracing back to Henry Keating, who lived within the English Pale in the fourteenth century. Mary (Keating) Willcox died August 5, 1862, and James M. Willcox married (second) April 12, 1864, Katharine Helen, born at Sarum Farm, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, January 7, 1837, daughter of Abraham W. Sharpless (born March 25, 1809; d. December 20, 1861), by his first wife (married April 6, 1836), Anne Carter Underdonk (born December 9, 1814, died July 7, 1845), daughter of Rt. Rev. Henry J. Underdonk, Episcopal Bishop of Philadelphia. Abraham W. Sharpless was son of Abraham Sharpless, of Concord township, Chester, now Delaware county, and his wife, Catharine F., daughter of Caspar and Mary (Franklin) Wistar, of Pecopson, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and of the well-known Wistar family of Germantown.

JUSTICE FAMILY.

The Justice family of Philadelphia is descended from John Justice, an Englishman, and his wife Mary Swan, a native of Ireland.

From the journal of their grandson, George Middleton Justice, of Philadelphia, commenced 1825, when the writer was thirty-three years of age, we extract the following statement in reference to John and Mary Justice:

"My grandfather, John Justice, was an Englishman. His wife, Mary, maiden name Swan, was a native of Ireland. I remember her well. She was a member of the Church of England and remained in that faith until her death, which happened about the year 1798 or 1799; they settled at Mount Holly, N. J."

It seems probable that prior to taking up their residence at Mount Holly, they lived in Philadelphia and attended Christ Church, as the birth of their first child, James, January 4, 1746-7, and his baptism, February 15, 1746-7, the marriages of four of their children, and the burial of Mary Justice, June 28, 1801, are on the church records. The finding of the following deed discloses the names of all their children with one exception, as well as their occupations, and corroborates the results of the writer's prior research.

"Tripartite deed dated Dec. 3rd, 1794, recorded at Mount Holly in Deed Book, No. 1, page 596 et seq.

"Mary Justice of Philadelphia, widow and relict of John Justice late of Mount Holly, Taylor, deceased, of the first part; James Justice of Philadelphia, Taylor; William Justice of the same city Cordwainer; George Justice of the same city, Bricklayer; John Justice of the same city, Mariner; Thomas Justice of the same city, Mariner; Joseph Justice of the same city, Painter, and Joseph Cooper of Mount Holly, Taylor, and Mary, his wife. The said James, William, George, John, Thomas and Joseph Justice and Mary Cooper, being the only surviving children and issue of the said John Justice, of the second part; and Gamaliel Clothier of Mount Holly, bricklayer of the third part:

"Whereas, Henry Paxson and John Woolman, executors of the last will and testament of Thomas Shinn, deceased, by indenture dated the 20th day of July, 1750, conveyed unto the said John Justice, a dwelling-house and lot of land on the east side of High Street in Mount Holly, and whereas the said John Justice died, having first made and published his last will and testament dated the 28th day of 12th month, 1762, wherein he devised said house and lot unto his wife, Mary Justice, etc."

From this deed we learn that John Justice was living in 1762, but probably deceased shortly thereafter, and that the children named were the surviving children. By implication there may have been one or more deceased prior to 1794 without issue. The date of John and Mary Justice's arrival at Mount Holly may be fixed approximately in 1750.

This family must not be confounded with the Swedish family of Justis, originating from the given name of Gustav, the Swedish form of the English name of Joseph, although a number of this family eventually spelled the name Justice.

An effort has been made by Philip M. Justice, a descendant of John Justice, now residing in London, England, to trace the ancestry of John Justice in England, but though his researches show that there was an ancient family of the name in Shropshire (county of Salop) no connection with the American family has yet been established. The will of Roger Justice of Newport, county of Salop, dated 1641, mentions sons, William and Luke, and according to a pedigree found in "Visitations of Staffordshire," and traced down seven generations, Luke Justice, second son of Roger and his wife Alice Adams (sister of William Adams, of St. Lawrence lane, citizen and haberdasher of London and founder of the school at Newport, county Salop, was baptized February 14, 1621-2, and was buried December 14, 1674. He married Mary, daughter of John Cotton of Edgmont and had issue, William Justice, of the Manor of Knighton, county Stafford; Roger Justice, of Knighton Grange, parish of Addfaston; John, Luke and Thomas Justice and four daughters. Of these, Roger, of Knighton Grange, who died August 16, 1703, married, May, 1681, Jane Knight, daughter of William Knight, and had issue, Knight, Luke, William, Elizabeth, John Caleb and Thomas. The descendants of several of these are traced, but no further mention of John Caleb appears in the pedigree. A number of this family whose names appear on the pedigree were commanders, etc., in the Royal navy, and several were ministers of the Gospel. From the fact that the name Caleb does appear in the family of John Justice, of Mount Holly, his eldest son James having a son by that name, the similarity of names and vocations in the two families has strongly impressed the writer of this sketch with the possibility of the John Caleb Justice on the Salop pedigree, being identical with John Justice, first American ancestor of the Philadelphia family of Justice.

There is a tradition in the Philadelphia family that John Justice was a sea-captain, engaged in carrying passengers and goods from England to America, and that on one of his voyages he met a beautiful Irish girl by the name of Mary Swan; he married her and gave up his sea-faring life and settled at Mount Holly, New Jersey. The fact that two of his sons were mariners lends support to this tradition. In the baronetage of Scotland is mentioned Sir James Justice of Justice Hall; no investigation has as yet been made of his pedigree or descendants.

There is a Justice family of which a brief genealogy has been compiled by F. M. Justice of Logansport, Indiana, which future research shows to be connected with the Philadelphia family. The earliest progenitor of this family was Matthew Justice, who, according to tradition, was born in Ireland about 1665, but on account of religious persecution, left Ireland and sought refuge in Holland, from whence he emigrated to America between 1700 and 1725. He had seven sons, four of whom were named respectively, James, born 1742, died 1843, age 101 years, who settled in Indiana; Jesse, who settled in Maryland; Matthew, Jr., who settled near Chillicothe, Ohio; and Benjamin, who settled in South Carolina. The family in Indiana has taken a prominent part in public affairs, Dr. James Maddison Justice, father of F. L. Justice, the compiler, having been one of President Lincoln's electors. The writer of this sketch believes that John Justice, ancestor of Jefferson Justice, controller of the Pennsylvania Railroad, was a son of this Matthew Justice, and that it was this John who had the seven sons who were soldiers in the Revolutionary War. In a letter to Henry Justice, 1895, Jefferson Justice writes, "Jacob Justice, my grandfather was one of the six sons of John Justice, and was born in what is now Franklin County, Pennsylvania, in 1757. He lived in that county until 1797 when he removed to Washington Co., Pa., and two years later to Lawrence Co. where he resided until his death in 1820, age 72 years. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary War. Four of my father's brothers were named respectively, James, Matthew, John and George. Of the six sons of John Justice, I can give the names of but two, my grandfather Jacob and David, who settled in Ohio, near Middletown. He, David had two sons, John and James, and there may have been more."

An examination of the rolls of Revolutionary soldiers shows that Benjamin, George, John, Robert, Jacob, James and Jesse Justice were soldiers in the Revolutionary War, from that part of Cumberland county later incorporated as Franklin county.

We are, however, certain that John Justice was ancestor of the Philadelphia family. Besides the deed mentioned, the marriage certificate of George Justice, father of the journalist before referred to, plainly states that he was a son of John and Mary Justice of Mount Holly. It is possible that John Justice was accompanied to America by a brother. The Pennsylvania Gazette, July 9, 1767, publishes a despatch from Trenton, stating that, "Mr. William Justice of that place, was struck dead by a Flash of Lightning, the 30th ult. in the Evening."

The journal of George Middleton Justice records the death of his father, George Justice; his uncle, Joseph Justice; Aunt Hannah Justice, and of "Aunt Mary Cooper, my Father's only sister," which probably meant his only sister living at that time, as his other sister, Rebekah Justice (whose marriage on October 27, 1774, to William Meston, is recorded at Christ Church), was buried May 21, 1783. James, William and Thomas Justice were married at the same church, and the name of Rebekah Meston appears as a witness to the marriage of George Justice in the column devoted to relatives of the contracting parties. There is no reference to other relatives by the name of Justice in the journal, although the deaths of many other relatives and friends are mentioned. The journal was not commenced until 1825, hence we infer that his father's other brothers and sisters, not mentioned therein, were deceased prior to this date. The children of John and Mary Justice were brought up in the faith of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and before removing to Philadelphia, probably attended St. Mary's Episcopal Church, at Burlington, where the first marriage of James Justice was recorded, as well as the death of his first wife. A son and grandson of Mary (Justice) Cooper were named for Rev. Colin Campbell, the popular rector of St. Mary's, 1738-76.

George and Joseph Justice, sons of John and Mary, both became members of the Society of Friends, and their descendants have generally held to that faith. We know, however, that Mary (Justice) Cooper continued in the faith of her mother and was a member of Christ Church, Philadelphia, after her marriage and removal to that city, and many of her descendants are interred at Christ Church grounds.

In compiling this family record, the writer made an examination of every will and administration in the name of Justice on record at Philadelphia. All church and meeting records in Philadelphia and many in Burlington county, New Jersey, were also examined, and deeds in Philadelphia as well as wills, deeds, etc., in the office of the Secretary of State at Trenton, and at the county seats of Burlington, Cumberland and Salem counties, were searched. The directories of Philadelphia, 1785-1825, were likewise searched. The names of the Justices found therein, other than those included in the list of the children of John and Mary (Swan) Justice, whose location and business will be noted in our further account of them, are:

- 1797, John Justice, Hatter, 159 Vine St.;
 1800, John Justice, House & Sign Painter, 79 Race St.;
 1802, Margaret Justice, Shopkeeper, 326 N. 2d. St.;
 1802, Catharine Justice, Widow, 314 N. 2d. St.

From an examination of their wills, they appear to be of Swedish origin.

As to the ancestry of Mary Swan, wife of John Justice, little is known, except that her nationality was Irish. According to a traditional account of her family, given by the descendants of her brothers who settled in Paxtang and Derry townships, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, about 1740, the emigrant ancestor was Richard Swan, and he was accompanied to America from Ireland by his wife, six sons and several daughters. The names of the sons only are given, beginning with James, born 1711, and ending with Richard, born 1725, who "settled in Philadelphia," while the others settled in Lancaster county. An examination of the records shows that this account, as far as it refers to the age and place on the list of Richard Swan, is incorrect, as he was married at Christ Church, Philadelphia, July 17, 1736, to Anne Mullen, and on the baptismal record of that church is found the baptism of a number of his children at subsequent dates and record of his burial, 1768. No trace of the father of the family has been found on the records. In view of the error as to age of Richard, it is possibly that he was confounded by the Lancaster branch of the family with Richard the son. The Lancaster account of the family further states that they are descended from an English family by the name of Swan, which was one of one hundred families to whom were granted, by Charles II., forfeited estates in Ireland.

As a partial verification of this tradition, we find on O'Hart's list of "Grantees of Estates Forfeited in Ireland Under Williamite Confiscations, in 1688" the name of Edward Swan. His name also appears on the "List of Purchasers of Forfeited Estates," 1702-3.

An examination of the "Records of Ireland" covering the period from 1649 to 1665, however, leads us to the belief that the family was originally Irish. In O'Hart's "Irish Pedigrees," the name is given as one of the anglicized forms of the name Mac Leala, being derived from the Irish word "eala," a swan.

On the list of 1649, to whom was adjudged Irish estates under Charles I. and Charles II., for arrearage, appear the names of Thomas Swan and Edward Swan; and in the list of persons named in grants under the acts of "Settlement and Explanation" made 1661-5, appears the name of John Swan. Lieut.-Col. Swan is mentioned as one of the English officers in Londonderry. There is little doubt that the six brothers and at least two sisters, Swan, whether accompanied by their parents or not, were among the vast army of Ulster immigrants, who came to Pennsylvania between 1725 and 1740. In Boulter's Letters, vol. i., p. 228, it is stated that in 1728, seven vessels left Belfast, Ireland, for America, with 1000 passengers, and that 4200 left there within a few years. Most of these were Ulster Scots, who had recently crossed the channel from Scotland, but an examination of the names of the founders of the numerous Scotch-Irish settlements in Bucks, Chester, Lancaster and Cumberland counties, will lead to the conclusion that a number of them are of Irish and English origin, rather than Scotch.

There is little doubt that Mary Swan who became the wife of John Justice, about 1745, and Sarah Swan, who married Henry Evans at Christ Church, March 12, 1733, were sisters to Richard Swan, above mentioned, and his brothers of the Scotch-Irish settlement of Paxtang and Derry, in Lancaster county.

On the records of St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church, of Philadelphia, we find the following marriages of Justices whom we are unable to identify as descendants of John and Mary (Swan) Justice:

- John Justice to Elizabeth Worrell, March 18, 1813;
- Eliza Justice to Benjamin Gill, Sept. 12, 1808;
- Sarah Justice to Cornelius Barnes, July 1, 1790;
- Lucy Justice to Elijah Bowen, Nov. 5, 1809.

Issue of John and Mary (Swan) Justice:

(second) at Christ Church, Phila., June 2, 1774, Hannah Wayne, who survived him, and d. June 13, 1826, at the age of 73 years, mentioned in George M. Justice's journal, as "Aunt Hannah."

James Justice was a tailor, being named as such, with residence as Phila., in the deed of the heirs of John Justice, 1794, above quoted, and his name as a tailor appears on Phila. directories, 1785-1811, at Walnut street, between Second and Third streets, and at 8 Chancery lane. He probably moved to Phila. at about the date of his second marriage; the name of Hannah Justice, widow of James, appears on Phila. Directory of 1813, at 2 Elmslie's court, residing with her son George W. Justice, whose name appears with the same address, as "Accountant."

James Justice is not known to have had issue by his first wife, Martha Morton; by his second wife, Hannah Wayne, he had issue:

J., 1761; d., Phila., Aug. 1, 1798; was, like his brother John, a "Mariner," signing the heirs' deed of 1794 as such; resided in that part of Phila., known as "Northern Liberties," where he and his brother-in-law, William Meston, appear as taxpayers during the Revolutionary period; m. at Christ Church, Phila., June 8, 1780, Mary Folker; no record of issue;

JOSEPH JUSTICE, b. at Mount Holly, N. J., 1763; d. June 28, 1825; m. Esther Warner; of whom later;

MARY JUSTICE, b. at Mount Holly, N. J., 1766; d., Phila., Sept. 27, 1831; m., Oct. 10, 1780, Joseph Cooper; an account of their descendants will be given later.

GEORGE JUSTICE, second son of John and Mary (Swan) Justice, was born at Mount Holly, Burlington county, New Jersey, 1751, according to the statement in the journal of his son, before mentioned. At an early age he was apprenticed to the trade of a bricklayer there. His master was anything but considerate of the welfare of his apprentices; hiring them out in the winter to any service which would bring him a return. After completing his apprenticeship he removed to Philadelphia and followed his trade of a bricklayer and builder there until 1795. His name appears on the Philadelphia directory, 1785, as a "bricklayer" at Fourth street between Arch and Race streets. In 1795 he entered into partnership with his brother-in-law, Joseph Cooper, in the mercantile business; their store being at No. 48 North Front street. About 1800 this firm was dissolved, Mr. Cooper retiring, and George Justice formed a partnership (prior to 1802) with one Tyson, and in that year was located at 21 North Front street. In 1804, his partner was one Hillman, at 30 North Front street, this partnership turned out to be an unfortunate one for Mr. Justice, and in 1806 we find him once more working at his trade. His son, George M. Justice, states in his journal, "Father was at this time very much worried over his finances and applied to Samuel and Nathan Sellers for assistance, and although strangers, they made him the loan requested, which later he was able to pay, and he enjoyed the friendship and good will of these gentlemen all his life, and asked that his children should remember gratefully their kindness to him." In 1808 George Justice was elected City Commissioner. The next year he resigned that office, having been offered the position of surveyor to the North American Insurance Company. This was the turning point in his affairs and the latter part of his life was free from anxiety and care.

His son, George Middleton Justice, testifies in his journal to the high esteem in which his father was held by his fellow citizens. An anecdote illustrative of his sense of justice and desire to act fairly towards his fellow-man, is related in the journal as follows:

"It is with great pleasure I record the following act of generosity of my beloved father; he had never mentioned the circumstance to me. A man whose name is John — stopped at my store a few days since and in conversation with my brother Jacob said, 'I consider your father the best friend I ever had. Shortly after I completed my apprenticeship, I took as a partner a friend who was brought up in the same trade. At the time your father was building his house on Branch Street, we applied to him for the contract for the carpenter work. We set a price on the work of £60. which was the amount paid by Alexander Whitesides for a similar job on the house adjoining. We completed the work, but shortly afterwards were both taken sick. Our funds were soon exhausted and without friends to whom we could apply for relief, we came to actual want. In our distress we sent for your father and asked him to lend us £10. Your father went home and returned with twenty French Crowns which he told us to use to relieve our wants. My partner died from the illness, but I recovered and went to work and saved until I had accumulated sufficient to cancel my indebtedness. I then sought your father and tendered him the amount he had loaned us, with interest, but he refused to accept it, saying 'I have examined the work done on my house and found it well done, and have come to the conclusion that, instead of it being worth £60, it is worth £100, and I owe thee the difference.' He paid me the amount less my indebtedness, and I made use of the money by purchasing a small house, which shortly afterwards I sold at a profit, and this proved to be the foundation of my fortune.' He told Jacob he had amassed property worth $15,000."

George Justice had the good will and friendship of Stephen Girard, the great Philadelphia merchant, and had business relations with him many years. He died in Philadelphia, May 26, 1825, aged seventy-four years.

George Justice married at Friends' Meeting, Chesterfield, New Jersey, Phebe, daughter of George and Hannah (Fowler) Middleton. The following is a copy of their marriage certificate:

"George Justice, son of John Justice and wife Mary of Mount Holly, Burlington County, New Jersey, and Phebe Middleton, daughter of George Middleton, deceased, and Hannah Middleton, his widow, of Nottingham, County and Province, aforesaid, were married 11mo. 13th, 1777, in a publick Meeting of Friends in Chesterfield.

Thomas Middleton, the great-grandfather of Phebe (Middleton) Justice, a native of England, came to New Jersey prior to 1702, and settled in Springfield township, Burlington county, where he died 1704, leaving children, Thomas, John, Nathan, Naomi, and Elizabeth. From the fact that the name Hugh appears among his grandchildren it is supposed that he may have been a brother of Hugh Middleton, who came to Salem county, 1690, from Maryland, and married Mary Kenton, a widow. A Martha Middleton, "widow," of Burlington county, made her will July 12, 1712, which was proven July 20, 1712, mentioning therein, sons Thomas and William and daughters, Martha, Elizabeth and Jane. She may have been a sister-in-law of Thomas. It has been stated in "American Ancestry," vol. v., that John Middleton (who married Esther Gilberthorpe) was the son of John, Lord Middleton, of Worcester, England, but the will of the Countess Dowager Martha, widow of Lord Middleton, of the Precinct of the College of Worcester, dated January 4, 1705, and probated March, 1705-6, thoroughly disproves this theory.

John Middleton, son of Thomas, born 1686, was living in Evesham township, August 7, 1702, when he purchased land there. He died March 25, 1741, aged fifty-five years.

John Middleton married, March 14, 1709-10, Esther Gilberthorpe, born February 3, 1684-5, died April 27, 1759, daughter of Thomas Gilberthorpe, one of the Proprietors of West Jersey, a landowner there prior to 1685, who died 1711, and his wife Esther, cousin of Francis Davenport, who died 1712.

John and Esther (Gilberthorpe) Middleton had eight children, Thomas, John, Nathan, Bridget, Naomi, Jonathan, George and Abel, the last two twins.

George Middleton, one of the twin sons, born July 12, 1722, was father of Phebe Middleton, who married George Justice, 1777. He married, December 29, 1743, Hannah, daughter of John Fowler, then deceased, and his wife Elizabeth, who had married (second) February 26, 1740-1, Joseph Reckless.

This Elizabeth Fowler-Reckless was a daughter of Joseph Steward, a native of Scotland, who settled first in Makefield, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, and was a member of Falls Monthly Meeting of Friends, from which he took a certificate, 1694, to Chesterfield Monthly Meeting, Burlington county, New Jersey, and married at the latter meeting February 7, 1694-5, Alice Wright, born circa 1674. Joshua and Thomas Wright, brothers, were among the earliest English settlers about Burlington, New Jersey. The latter came in the "Flie-Boat Martha," 1677, and took up large tracts of land about Burlington, having purchased "1/4 of the first 10 shares" in West Jersey lands. It has been stated that he had no children, but we know he had at least one daughter, Ann, who married Henry Scott. He died March, 1705-6.

From a record written by his son Joshua, we learn that "Joshua Wright of Roulton, married Elizabeth, daughter of William Empson of Gowle Field House, ye 10th Day of ye 4Mo. 1669." Three children, Elizabeth, Joshua and Robert, were born in England, and "Joshua and his family took ship at hull ye 24 Day of ye 6 mo & came to ye fall of dalware river, about ye 20 Day of ye 10 Mo. 1679." Three more children, Thomas, John, and Samuel, were born to them in New Jersey, and "Joshua, my father, died ye 10th of ye 8mo. 1695, and Elizabeth Wright, my mother, died 21 day of 1 mo 1705-6," writes Joshua Wright, Jr., who had married Rebeckah, daughter of Mahlon Stacy, founder of Trenton. Joshua Wright was a member of the West Jersey Assembly, 1682, and a trustee of Chesterfield Friends Meeting.

The will of Joshua Wright, of Nottingham, "neare ye ffalls of ye Delawayr," written March 25, 1690, but signed and acknowledged by him three days before his death, to wit, October 7, 1695, mentions his wife Elizabeth and the six children named in the account of the family written many years after by his son Joshua; the daughter Elizabeth, being the wife of Peter Fretwell. It also mentions Mary, widow of his brother Samuel, and her son Samuel. Alice Wright, who married Joseph Steward, 1694, has generally been accredited a daughter of Joshua and Elizabeth (Empson) Wright, but since neither his will nor his son's account of the family make any mention of her, this could not have been so. She was, however, of the same family and probably a daughter of Thomas, and accompanied him to America. Both were witnesses to her marriage. Joseph Steward died 1715; his will, dated July 3, was proved October 20 of that year, and the inventory of his estate was made July 28, 1715. The will mentions children, John, Joseph, Josiah, Elizabeth and Ellen, and was witnessed by Richard Harrison and Joshua Wright. The widow Alice married Richard Harrison, 1720.

Richard Harrison, Sr., came in the "Flie-Boat Martha" in the fall of 1677, with Thomas Wright, and in 1690 purchased 200 acres of land on Crosswicks Creek. He married, May 4, 1687, at Chesterfield Friends' Meeting, Ruth Buckman, who had come to Philadelphia in October, 1682, with her mother, the widow Buckman, in the "Welcome," with William Penn. Whether it was Richard Harrison Sr., or his son Richard Harrison Jr., who married the widow Alice (Wright) Steward, we are not able to determine. It was probably the former, as Richard, Jr., must have been many years her junior.

From George Middleton Justice's journal, we quote the following, "My mother's name previous to her marriage was Phebe Middleton. She was a daughter of George Middleton and Hannah (maiden name Fowler), who resided near to Crosswicks in New Jersey, near which place the Middleton family appear to have settled upon their arrival in this country. One of their progenitors by the name of Harrison came over in company with William Penn. She died near Crosswicks at the age of 90 years. She came to Philadelphia when but three log houses were erected there." This allusion fits Ruth Buckman, who became the wife of Richard Harrison, but Mr. Justice is evidently wrong in making her a "progenitor" of the Fowlers or Middletons. Alice (Wright) Steward-Harrison, arrived still earlier, and having become the wife of Richard Harrison, may have been confused with Ruth (Buckman) Harrison, in the mind of the descendant of the former.

JACOB JUSTICE, eldest son of George and Phebe (Middleton) Justice, and of the third generation from John Justice and Mary Swan, was born in Philadelphia, October 12, 1778, and died there August 2, 1845. Justice, and Alfred B. Justice, son of George M., also became a member of the firm, 1840, which was for a half century one of the leading business houses in Philadelphia.

Jacob Justice married, April 14, 1801, Margaret Randolph, born in Philadelphia October 2, 1780, died there January 8, 1851, daughter of Capt. Edward Randolph, of the firm of Coates and Randolph, a distinguished officer in the Revolutionary War, and later prominent business man of Philadelphia, by his wife Anna Julianna Steel, of Germantown. Capt. Randolph was a descendant of the prominent Fitz Randolph family of New Jersey, founded in America by Edward Fitz Randolph, of Nottinghamshire, England, who came to Scituate, Massachusetts, about 1634, and to Piscataway, New Jersey, about 1676. An account of his ancestry is given in our sketch of the Wood family of Philadelphia, two granddaughters of Capt. Randolph having married into that family.

Of the grandchildren of Elizabeth (Justice) Woolley, the two children of her eldest daughter, Abigail, by her first husband, David Thomas, were Robert Swan Thomas, above mentioned, as the partner of his uncle, Alexander Cox Smith, born July 6, 1815, died January 18, 1879, without issue, and Elizabeth Justice Thomas, born December 23, 1816, died January 30, 1896.

The latter married, November 23, 1837, Samuel Allen, born December 18, 1813, died March 2, 1889, who was Sheriff of Philadelphia. He and his brother-in-law, Robert Swan Thomas were congenial spirits, very intimate, and both fond of a joke. The Sheriff's office, during the incumbency of that office by Samuel Allen, was located in the left wing of Independence Hall, in the rear, a long entry way leading back to it. The office door had a window sash in its upper part. The sheriff had ordered some new handcuffs and was examining them when Mr. Thomas came into his office on his usual morning call. He looked at the handcuffs and expressed the opinion that a man might easily work his hands out of them. The sheriff suggested that he try them on and make a practical test of the truth of his theory. When Mr. Thomas was securely manacled, the sheriff said "Good Morning, Bob," and left the office, locking the door after him. He proceeded to inform every one that he had a madman locked in his office, and asked that they walk back and take a look at him through the glass door, and see whether they could recognize him. All the morning a string of visitors gazed through the glass at the madman, and a "mad man" he surely was. He was not released until the sheriff returned about dinner time. It was generally admitted that the sheriff was only paying off old scores, the balance not being always in his favor.

Samuel and Elizabeth J. (Thomas) Allen had issue:

George Woolley Allen, b. Oct. 17, 1838; d. Feb. 25, 1900; was educated in public schools of Phila., graduating from Phila. high school. A natural taste for literary work led him to adopt newspaper work. His first experience was with the Morning Post, a Phila. daily of which the late John D. Stockton was editor. In 1869 he joined the staff of the Evening Telegraph, and was continuously engaged on its editorial staff until his death, Feb. 25, 1900. He was master of a particularly graceful style and became known as one of the best literary and musical critics in the profession. His knowledge of books was profound and upon their merits his criticism was unerring. While not a practical musician, as a commentator on musical composition and performances he had few equals. He possessed a charming personality and generous disposition, and his memory is held in affectionate remembrance by his friends and associates.

At outbreak of Civil War, he entered the regular army of U. S., as assistant surgeon, and was stationed at Washington, D. C. He remained in the army until the close of the war and retired with the rank of Major, by brevet, 1865. In the same year he was called to the chair of Comparative Anatomy and Zoology, at the University, and was made Professor of Physiology in Medical Dept. of University, 1878, a position he resigned because of the pressure of his growing practice, 1883, and was made Professor Emeritus. Dr. Allen was author of numerous monographs on many phases of medical and kindred sciences, among them "A Monograph on the North American Bat," "Outlines on Comparative Anatomy," "Studies in the Facial Region," "On the Life Form in Art," "System of Human Anatomy," and "Clinical Study of the Skull." As a specialist on diseases of the nose and throat he had no superior. He was one of the judges in anthropology at the Columbian Exposition, 1893; a member of the Academy of Natural Sciences, and its corresponding secretary, 1865; president of American Association of Anatomy, 1891-1903; and a delegate to International Medical Congress at Berlin, 1890. His official connection with Univ. of Pa. extended over a period of thirty years service, exceeded by but five others.

Dr. Allen was one of that coterie of eminent physicians and surgeons, who, with Dr. Benjamin Rush, Dr. Philip Syng Physick, and in later years Dr. D. Hayes Agnew, Dr. William W. Keen, and others, have helped make Univ. of Pa. and the city of Phila. pre-eminent as a medical centre.

ANNA ALLEN, b. Oct. 14, 1843; m., Nov. 28, 1866, Wilmer Atkinson, founder of Farm Journal of whom presently.

WILMER ATKINSON, who married Anna Allen, was a son of Thomas and Hannah (Quinby) Atkinson, born in Warwick township, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, June 13, 1840, and traces his descent through eight generations from prominent families of Bucks county that were among the earliest settlers there.

John Atkinson (ancestor of Wilmer Atkinson) and his brother Christopher, both original purchasers of land in Pennsylvania from William Penn, were residents of the town of Scotforth, near the city of Lancaster, England, and were among the early converts to the principles and faith of the Society of Friends. Christopher, the elder of the brothers, was married at Lancaster Monthly Meeting of Friends, 6mo. (August) 1, 1679, to Margaret, daughter of Christopher Fell, of Newton, Lancaster; and John was married at the same Meeting, 2mo. (April) 8, 1686, to Susanna, daughter of Richard Hynde, of Scotforth, and the records of this meeting give us the date of birth of four children of John and Susanna, and seven of Christopher and Margaret.

Christopher and John Atkinson, having purchased 1500 acres of land of William Penn, by lease and release dated March 16 and 17, 1698-9, embarked for Pennsylvania in the ill-fated "Brittanica" in which so many emigrants bound for Penn's Colony died before they reached the promised land, where they sought religious liberty. Both Christopher and John Atkinson died on the voyage, as well as Susanna, wife of John, and probably several children of Christopher and Margaret, as only two daughters survived the voyage. Three surviving children of John and Susanna, William, Mary, and John, who sailed with their parents, survived the voyage and reared families in Bucks county. The two families had secured from Lancaster Monthly Meeting a certificate dated 2mo. (April), 1699, which was deposited at Middletown Monthly Meeting, Bucks county, where the orphan children took up their residence.

John Atkinson, youngest son of John and Susanna (Hynde) Atkinson (another son of the same name having died in infancy), was born in Lancashire, 9mo. (November) 25, 1695. He married at the house of Stephen Twining at Newtown, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, 8mo. (October) 13, 1717, Mary, born April 9, 1696, daughter of William Smith, who came to Pennsylvania in the "Friends Adventure," arriving in the Delaware River September 28, 1682, and was one of the pioneer settlers in Wrightstown township, Bucks county, by his wife, Mary, who accompanied her parents, Thomas and Agnes Croasdale, to Pennsylvania in the "Welcome," with William Penn, 1682. John and Mary (Smith) Atkinson settled in Upper Makefield township, where he died in the winter of 1751-2, his wife having died some years previously. They had five sons and two daughters.

Thomas Atkinson, third son of John and Mary (Smith) Atkinson, born May 5, 1722, married, October 8, 1744, Mary Wildman, born October 8, 1720, died July 13, 1766, a granddaughter of Martin and Ann Wildman, who came from Yorkshire and settled in Middletown township, Bucks county. Thomas Atkinson purchased 200 acres of land in Wrightstown, ever since occupied by his descendants, where he settled on his marriage, and where he resided until his death, 1760.

Thomas Atkinson, only son of Thomas and Mary (Wildman) Atkinson, born in Wrightstown, Bucks county, October 19, 1751, succeeded to the homestead there and died thereon August 19, 1815. He married, March 10, 1779, Sarah Smith, born November 9, 1755, died October 19, 1830, daughter of Timothy and Sarah (Kinsey) Smith, of Buckingham, and they had seven children.

Jonathan Atkinson, eldest son of Thomas and Sarah (Smith) Atkinson, born on the old Wrightstown homestead, March 9, 1782, inherited it at the death of his father and died there November 7, 1852. He married, October 14, 1807, Esther Smith, born June 26, 1786, died January 28, 1832. She was also a descendant of passengers on the "Welcome," being a great-great-great-granddaughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Walmsley, who came over on the "Welcome," 1682, bringing a certificate from Settle Monthly Meeting in Yorkshire. Their son Thomas Walmsley married, 1689, Mary Paxson, and their daughter Mary Walmsley married, 1720, John Worthington, of Byberry. She died April 18, 1754, and he January 14, 1777. William Worthington, sixth of the eleven children of John and Mary (Walmsley) Worthington, born September 20, 1732, married Esther Homer, and removed to Buckingham, Bucks county. Their daughter, Mary Worthington, born May 10, 1765, died February 26, 1849, married, May 11, 1785, Benjamin Smith, of Buckingham, born October 9, 1762, died January 8, 1841; and their daughter Esther Smith married Jonathan Atkinson.

THOMAS ATKINSON, son of Jonathan and Esther (Smith) Atkinson, born in Wrightstown, January 23, 1813, died November 7, 1852. He married, February 11, 1836, Hannah Quinby, of Amwell, New Jersey, born December 16, 1809, died June 7, 1903, and they were parents of Wilmer Atkinson, above mentioned.

Wilmer Atkinson received an academic education and taught school for two years. In 1862, he, in partnership with his brother-in-law, Howard M. Jenkins, bought out the Weekly Republican, of Norristown, Pennsylvania, which they published for two years. In 1864 Wilmer Atkinson served in the Civil War as Second Lieutenant, One Hundred and Ninety-seventh Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers. In 1866, in conjunction with his old partner, Howard M. Jenkins, he started the Wilmington Daily Commercial, at Wilmington, Delaware, the first daily paper ever published in the State of Delaware. They continued to conduct this paper for ten years. In 1877 Wilmer Atkinson removed to Philadelphia, where he founded the Farm Journal, since one of the leading agricultural journals of the state, which he still continues to conduct in partnership with his nephew, Charles Francis Jenkins, son of his old partner, the late Howard M. Jenkins.

GEORGE JUSTICE MITCHELL, eldest son, born September 3, 1808, at Hatboro, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, where his father was for many years a prominent practicing physician, in early life learned the milling business at Newportville, Bucks county, but on his marriage, 1830, to Tacy Iredell, became a farmer, which occupation he followed until 1840, when he removed to Philadelphia and engaged in the lumber business with his brother, John Moore Mitchell, under firm name of Mitchell & Brother. After twelve years' successful business in this line, G. Justice Mitchell's health became impaired and he retired from the business and returned to the homestead, at Hatboro, where he resided until his death, October 2, 1891. His sterling integrity and excellent judgment led to his appointment as executor, administrator, trustee and guardian in numerous estates, and called him to fill many prominent positions in the public service, most of which he declined, preferring a life of quiet usefulness at home. It was largely through his influence that the North East Pennsylvania Railroad was built, and he was elected the first president of the company. He was active in the establishment of Hatboro National Bank, and served on its board of directors and as its vice-president many years. He was secretary and treasurer of the Union Library Company of Hatboro about forty years, finally resigning only a short time prior to his death. He was a man of deep and earnest thought, strong in his convictions of right and wrong, with a mind specially adapted to see the equities in disputed cases and with a firmness to maintain his judgment. Of a kind and genial nature, he had a pleasant word for all who approached him, and a helping hand to those who were in difficulty or distress. He and his wife, Tacy (Iredell), had issue:

A son of George Justice Robbins is the only surviving descendant of Mary Justice Bartling.

GEORGE MIDDLETON JUSTICE, youngest son of George and Phebe (Middleton) Justice, born in Philadelphia, September 11, 1792, was not only a prominent merchant of Philadelphia, but filled a prominent place in the affairs of that city, during a long and earnest life of usefulness. Such school education as he received was acquired at an excellent school at Haddonfield, New Jersey. His father's finances at this time necessitated the strictest economy and consequently he did not have the advantages of a college education. This deprivation was always a matter of regret to him. He mentions in his journal (so frequently referred to in the early part of this narrative), his intention of taking up the study of mathematics to better enable him to pursue the study of astronomy, which all his life was a source of great pleasure to him. Recognizing the value of what he himself had missed, he became active in forwarding the movement for a higher public education. Dr. Franklin S. Edmonds, author of "The History of the Central High School," of Philadelphia, pays high tribute to Mr. Justice's work in its establishment, substantially as follows: "When the movement for the High School had taken definite shape, Thomas Dunlap, Geo. M. Justice, Morton McMichael, and Thomas G. Hollingsworth were appointed a committee to visit the Boston Schools with a view to the introduction of the newest ideas in education and the adoption of the best methods for the High School.

"The diary of Geo. M. Justice, a benevolent and altruistic merchant of Philadelphia, which is preserved by his descendants, gives a faithful account of their visit and the knowledge obtained." The part taken by him in the establishment of the Astronomical Observatory, is thus related: "While many took part in urging upon the City the advisability of establishing a public observatory the pre-eminent leadership must be given to Geo. M. Justice, a Quaker merchant of wide reading and benevolent character, who may truly be called the founder of the public observatory. The diary of this excellent man shows him to have been keenly interested in scientific observations. For many years he made a careful record of meteorological facts; with primitive instruments he observed the eclipses and the display of the Aurora Borealis. In these wonders of the natural world he recognized the hand of the Creator and he seemed to have reached the conclusion that no study could be more helpful to his fellows than one which would lift them up to the contemplation of the Almighty." He was a frequent contributor to the press. The first notice of Halley's Comet in Philadelphia came from him. His diary mentions this as follows: "This Evening, October 9th, 1835, I discovered without the aid of the telescope, the long expected vision, Halley's Comet. The appearance of this comet confirms the accuracy of astronomical calculations, and affords subject for admiration, in that we are permitted to know so much of the wonders of creation as to be able to thus trace its progress to and from the sun." Mr. Justice served on the board of school controllers, 1836-41, and was a member of the first high school committee. When it was decided to order the instruments for the observatory abroad, on the advice of members of the American Philosophical Society, Mr. Justice wrote to the firm of Utschneider & Frankhofer, of Munich, whose reputation was world-wide amongst astronomers, and the order was given them, 1837. Many delays occurred in the completion of the work, owing to the dissolution, through death, of that firm. Their successors, Mertz & Mähler, undertook to fill the order, but it was not until 1840 that Mr. Justice was able to record, "I have this day opened the cases and have mounted the telescope in my store."

Mr. Justice published in the United States Gazette, a description of the instruments. The correspondence between Mr. Justice and the optician Mertz is exceedingly interesting. The former courteously insists on a more prompt fulfillment of the contract, while the latter explains that scientific work must not be hurried. One of the letters contains a quaint touch of Quakerism, "You will notice that I do not use the title Herr or any other complimentary title in addressing you. I wish you to know that this is not from any disrespect or lack of civility, but on account of my religious feelings, I being one of the Society called Friends, or Quakers, who do not use titles in addressing any one. I hope therefore you may not think me discourteous."

Dr. A. D. Bache of the American Philosophical Society, a great-grandson of Dr. Benjamin Franklin, while travelling in Europe, learned for the first time of the establishment of the Central High School. He says, "While in Munich I visited the great work-shop for the manufacture of astronomical instruments of Mertz & Mähler. Mr. Mertz inquired if I knew 'the Justice of the Philadelphia High School who had ordered a large telescope.' This Justice whom the worthy artist supposed to be some high functionary of the High School was George M. Justice, one of the Committee of the High School, and a leader in the truly commendable enterprise." Says Edmonds, "To have aided in important scientific investigations—to have broadened the outlook of thousands of useful men—to have sent forth Alumni who have led in the establishment of the largest observatory in the world—surely in this record there is to be found an ample justification for the early dreams of George M. Justice and his colleagues."

George M. Justice was elected a member of the American Philosophical Society, April 19, 1839, having received a unanimous vote, a compliment bestowed upon but two others in fifteen years. Besides finding time to follow his scientific studies, he took an active part in the work of the Society of Friends, of which he was an Elder. He was deeply grieved over the separation of the Society, but felt called upon to unite with the Hicksite branch. His journal is a very complete history of the causes leading up to the separation.

Mr. Justice entered into business at an early age in partnership with his brother

Jacob, in the hardware business, the firm of J. & G. M. Justice being formed 1816. Jacob later retired and his son George R. Justice took his place, and the business continued under firm name of G. M. & G. R. Justice many years. In 1840 Alfred B. Justice, son of George M., was admitted to the firm. The business in the latter part of the existence of the firm was extensive and profitable, and George M. Justice was enabled to retire with ample means to meet his modest requirements. This firm was the first in Philadelphia to send out traveling salesmen, or commercial travelers, and was one of the few which passed safely through the panic of 1837, though it was not without serious loss. The firm acted as banker for their customers many years.

The late Alfred B. Justice, above mentioned junior member of the firm, described to the writer his first trip down the Ohio River, when soliciting orders for his firm, calling on the trade in Kentucky, and the hearty welcome and hospitality shown him by the firm's customers. It was customary in those days for merchants to visit Philadelphia and New York twice a year, usually purchasing sufficient to last them until their next visit, six months later. They were granted a credit of six months, but it was not an unusual thing for them to take twelve months' time. Mr. Justice was personally acquainted with most of his customers and many lasting friendships resulted from the close relationship thus established.

George M. Justice recognized slavery as an evil which he earnestly desired to see suppressed, and in this he had the hearty co-operation of his children. For years he would not knowingly use products of slave-labor, purchasing his groceries, etc., from the anti-slavery grocery store located near Fifth and Cherry streets.

His son, George Justice, who on his marriage, 1845, located on his father's "Riverside" farm at Yardley, Bucks county (purchased in that year), was an active conductor on the "Underground Railroad," and many a slave owed his freedom to the assistance he received from George Justice. One of these escaped slaves was long employed by Thornton Pike, son-in-law of George M. Justice, as a coachman, and he was a most faithful employee until his death. Like all consistent Friends, George M. Justice was opposed to war. When quite a young man he was employed in his brother Jacob's store, and among the articles imported by the firm were rifle locks, which they sold quite extensively. During the second war with Great Britain they were approached by a stranger who desired to buy their entire stock of rifle locks, but on learning that they were wanted to make up rifles to be used in the war, George M. Justice replied, "Thee cannot purchase from us for that purpose."

Although very strict in his adherence to Friends' views where any question of principle was involved, he was not always in sympathy with their proceedings. He states in his journal that he was not in accord with the expulsion of members for marrying outside the Society, and hoped to see their views modified on this question. So with music; while in deference to "the testimony against music" as expressed in the Discipline, he would not have a piano in his house, yet he did not object to vocal music, and enjoyed hearing his children sing. He was opposed to capital punishment; while admitting the right of society to protect itself against crime, he believed that all punishment should have for its object, the reformation of the evil-doer, rather than revenge for the crime committed. Environment, he claimed, was largely responsible for crime; society in a measure is responsible for the environment, and it cannot be shown by statistics or observation that severe penalties enforced, have stopped or proven a deterrent of crime.

George M. Justice married, May 6, 1816, Esther Syng Bunting, born November 25, 1795, died July 26, 1883, and in her had a true helpmate, in entire sympathy with her husband in his religious life, active in charitable work, and living a life of usefulness as she saw the light. She outlived her husband twenty-one years, reaching the advanced age of eighty-nine years. He died April 14, 1862.

Esther Syng (Bunting) Justice was a daughter of Philip Syng Bunting, born 1763, died September 16, 1822, by his wife Elizabeth Tomkins, born October 28, 1768, died July 28, 1841; granddaughter of Samuel Bunting, born 1724, died August 21, 1767, by his wife Esther Syng, born July 28, 1736, died 1813, daughter of Philip Syng, Colonial Treasurer of Philadelphia (see Syng sketch in these volumes), by his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Swen Warner, of Gloucester county, by his wife Esther Warner, of the Blockley family.

Samuel Bunting was a son of John Bunting, born in New Jersey, November 25, 1685, by his wife Alice (Lord) Nicholson; grandson of Samuel Bunting who came from Tupton, Derbyshire, and married, September 18, 1684, Mary, daughter of Thomas Foulke, Commissioner of West Jersey, referred to later on.

Anthony Bunting, of Tupton, Derbyshire, England, who died January 4, 1700, at the age of one hundred years, and his wife Eleanor, who died September 11, 1700, were ancestors of the Bunting family of America. Three of their sons, John, born 1655, Samuel, above mentioned, and Job, having come to New Jersey, between the years 1678 and 1680, and Samuel Bunting, son of another son, William, coming to Pennsylvania some years later.

On the paternal side Esther Syng (Bunting) Justice was also a descendant of Joshua Lord, an early settler on Racoon Creek, Gloucester county, New Jersey, where he purchased land as early as 1688, and died in 1714, by his wife Sarah, daughter of John Wood, of Woodbury, New Jersey. Their daughter Alice, born November, 1696, married (first) George Nicholson, of Chesterfield, Burlington county, died 1721. She married (second) March 7, 1722-3, John Bunting, and was mother of Samuel Bunting, of Philadelphia, born 1724, died 1767, who married, December 29, 1762, Esther Syng.

Robert Tomkins, grandfather of Elizabeth Tomkins, who became wife of Philip Syng Bunting, and mother of Mrs. Justice, was many years prominent in Warrington township, Bucks county, where he located about 1730; filling for a number of years the office of Justice of the Peace, and owning several plantations in that and Warwick township. He died 1757, leaving five children. His first wife, Lydia, died prior to 1750, in which year he married Ann (Dawson) Longstreth, widow of Bartholomew Longstreth. Jacob Tomkins, fourth son of Robert and Lydia Tomkins, born January 6, 1737-8, married at Horsham Monthly Meeting, November 16, 1759, Elizabeth, born November 9, 1737, daughter of Daniel and Susanna Thomas. Jacob Tomkins was for some years a merchant in Moreland township, probably at Hatboro. He died June 17, 1810, having survived his wife Elizabeth, who died April 11, 1781. Their daughter Elizabeth Tomkins, born October 28, 1768, died July 28, 1841; married, December 9, 1788, Philip Syng Bunting.

PHILIP SYNG JUSTICE, second son of George Middleton Justice, by his wife Esther Syng Bunting, born in Philadelphia, June 29, 1819, received a good education in the schools of Philadelphia, and acquired his business training with the hardware firm of G. M. & G. R. Justice, of which his father was senior partner. In 1838 he organized the mercantile firm of Steinmitz & Justice, to which his elder brother, Alfred Bunting Justice, was later admitted, and the firm name changed to Justice, Steinmetz & Justice, and continued for many years thereafter.

About 1856, Philip Syng Justice withdrew from this firm and organized the firm of Philip S. Justice & Co., of which his cousin, J. Howard Mitchell, is now (1908) the only surviving partner. In 1859 the firm of Philip S. Justice & Co. concentrated their energies on the railway supply business, abandoning the general wholesale hardware business. They received many large orders from the Canadian and Northwestern Railroads for wrought-iron wheels and axles which they imported from England. They were the first to import steel rails into this country, the first consignment received being for the filling of an order from I. Edgar Thomson, President of Pennsylvania Railroad. These rails were of crucible steel, and broke to pieces the first winter. Mr. Thomson, however, followed his original order with another, for rails to be made less brittle; this lot was delivered and proved a great success, and the introduction of steel rails into this country in large quantities quickly followed. The old Beaver Meadow (now Lehigh Valley) Railroad, also gave an order for one hundred tons of steel rails at $125 per ton in gold, and gold being then at a premium of one hundred per cent., the cost of the rails was $250 per ton in our national currency.

Philip S. Justice was the pioneer in the manufacture of steel rails in this country, an industry now grown to enormous proportions. In 1866 he organized the Butcher Steel Works, on the line of the Reading Railroad, near Nicetown, Philadelphia (now Midvale Steel Works), and there made the first steel tires manufactured in America. From a small plant costing about $200,000 has grown the present extensive establishment with its millions of capital. For many years Philip Syng Justice resided in London, England, where he had charge of the interests of his firm, and died there May 5, 1901, the management of the works in Philadelphia devolving upon his partner and cousin, J. Howard Mitchell, son of G. Justice Mitchell, mentioned in the sketch of that branch of the Justice family in the preceding pages.

Philip Syng Justice married, 1842, Helen M. Cobb, and they had seven children, four of whom died in childhood. Those who survived were:

Mary Bunting Justice, b. 1843; d. Dec. 17, 1867; unm.;

Howard R. Justice, b. Phila., Nov. 19, 1845; now residing in London, Eng.; m. (first) Victoria C. McNally, who. d. May 21, 1897, without issue; m. (second), Oct. 13, 1898, Amelia M. Seeley; no children;

Philip Middleton Justice, b. in Phila., Dec. 3, 1855; now residing in London, Eng.; he is a chartered patent agent of 55 Chancery lane, and is referred to in early part of this narrative as having made investigations as to the English ancestry of Justice family; m. Alice Henrietta Scruby, b. April 30, 1861; no children.

ALFRED BUNTING JUSTICE, eldest son of George Middleton Justice, by his wife Esther Syng Bunting, born in Philadelphia, March 25, 1817, received a good education in the schools of Philadelphia, and acquired his business training with the firm of G. M. & G. R. Justice, of which his father was senior partner, and on coming of age, 1840, became a partner in the business. He later became a member of the firm of Justice, Steinmetz & Justice, and finally organized the firm of A. B. Justice & Co. in partnership with his son-in-law F. W. Grugan. He died in Philadelphia, January 24, 1886.

Alfred Bunting Justice married (first), April 7, 1842, Mary Cunningham Fletcher, died June 6, 1849. He married (second), February 3, 1853, Susan Humphreys, born February 15, 1828, died July 17, 1894, daughter of Hugh and Hannah (Hunt) McIlvain, granddaughter of John and Lydia (Bernard) McIlvain; great-great-granddaughter of James McIlvaine, of Ridley, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who came from county Antrim, Ireland, about 1740, with his wife Jane, daughter of Hugh Heaney, who accompanied his son-in-law to Pennsylvania and settled in East Fallowfield, Chester county. James McIlvaine was a son of Richard McIlvaine, of Ayr, Scotland, and a descendant of Alan McIlvaine, who in 1520 secured from Mary, Queen of Scots, a grant of land in Upper and Nether Grimmet, and became first Laird of Grimmet. This Laird had two sons slain at the battle of Fanshawe, and two of his grandsons served under the Earl of Caselis, 1601. The family became Scotch Covenanters, and by reason of severe persecutions, Richard McIlvaine removed with his family to county Antrim, Ireland, where his son James was born, 1703. (See McIlvain family). Through her mother Hannah Hunt, born November 14, 1786, Mrs. Justice is fifth in descent from James Hunt, of Kent, England, who settled at Kingsessing, Philadelphia, 1684, both through his first wife who died in England, and his second wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Bonsal, of Darby, whom he married 1686; her paternal grandfather John Hunt (1753-1826), being a son of John Hunt (1716-91), by his wife Elizabeth (1719-94), daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Smith) Sellers; grandson of James Hunt (2) (1691-1743), by his wife Rebecca Fawcett (1696-1770), daughter of Walter Fawcett, of Haverah Park, West Riding of Yorkshire, England, who came to Pennsylvania 1684, and settled on Ridley Creek, Chester county, by his second wife, Rebecca Fearn, from Derbyshire, England, Sheriff, Justice of Courts of Chester County, and member of Provincial Assembly; and great-grandson of James Hunt and Elizabeth Bonsal. While Rachel Gibbons, wife of John Hunt (2) (1760-1845), was a daughter of Joseph Gibbons, the distinguished scholar, by his wife Hannah, sister to Humphrey Marshall, the distinguished botanist; and granddaughter of Abraham Marshall, from Gratton, Derbyshire, who settled at the Forks of the Brandywine 1707, by his wife Mary, born 1682, daughter of James Hunt, the emigrant, by his first wife, ——— Chambers. Through Ann (Pearce) Gibbons, mother of Joseph Gibbons, above mentioned, Mrs. Justice is also a descendant of George Pearce, of Thornbury, before referred to in these pages in connection with the Gilpin family. Lydia Bernard, wife of John McIlvain was a daughter of Richard Bernard, Jr. (1684-1767), by his wife Ann, daughter of Abiah Taylor (son of Abiah), from Dedcott, Berkshire, who with his wife Deborah Gearing, settled in Chester county, 1702, where their daughter Ann (Taylor) Bernard, was married, 1715. Richard Bernard is said to have come from Sheffield, England. He was a landowner near Chester, 1683, and died 1698. He was of the same line as Sir Francis Bernard, Royal Governor of New Jersey, 1758-69, who traced his pedigree back to Godfrey Barnard, A. D. 1240. Another ancestor of Mrs. Justice was George Wood, of Darby, an eminent Friend who emigrated from Derbyshire about 1682. His daughter Mary had married in England, Richard Bonsall, and their daughter Elizabeth Bonsall became second wife of James Hunt, 1686. Most of the pioneer ancestors of Mrs. Justice, above mentioned, were members of the Society; Walter Fawcett was a recommended minister, and Chester Monthly Meeting of Friends was held for some years at his house. He was appointed, 1685, one of the "Peace Makers" for Chester county.

HERBERT McILVAIN JUSTICE, third son of Alfred Bunting Justice, by his second wife Susan Humphreys McIlvain, born in Philadelphia, June 30, 1859, was a musical composer of merit. He was educated at the Friends' Central School, Philadelphia, and Swarthmore College. At an early age he developed a talent for music and could perform on the piano difficult pieces of music that he had heard but once. He later composed a number of beautiful vocal compositions, among which were some that were pronounced gems by competent judges. This success led to more pretentious efforts and in 1901 he completed the score of an opera entitled "The Red Domino," and a contract was drawn to produce it at the Lyric Theatre, New York, but the untimely death of Samuel Shubert prevented the consummation. The overture of this opera was played later by John Philip Sousa, at Willow Grove Park and elsewhere, and selections from it were also played by the Royal Italian Band.

Herbert M. Justice died November 19, 1906, in the very prime of manhood, when his musical genius was just receiving recognition and appreciation. He married, November 15, 1892, Minnie Estelle, born March 18, 1868, daughter of the late George M. Vickers, and great niece of Stephen Foster, whose songs, "Uncle Ned," "Old Kentucky Home," "The Old Folks at Home," etc., are so familiar to the public; they had no issue.

ALFRED RUDOLPH JUSTICE, second and eldest surviving son of Alfred Bunting Justice, by his second wife, Susan Humphreys McIlvain, born in Philadelphia, February 9, 1857, was founder of the now incorporated firm of A. R. Justice Company, importers of and wholesale dealers in silverware, cut glass, cutlery, etc., at 607 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, with which he is still actively associated. He is also interested in a number of other business and industrial enterprises. It is to Mr. Justice that we are indebted for the genealogical data, and the greater part of the narrative history of his family, contained in this sketch.

Alfred R. Justice married, April 11, 1892, Jessie Lewis, born April 11, 1867, daughter of James and Ann Longshore Lewis, of English and Welsh Quaker ancestry. Her paternal ancestor, Henry Lewis, son of Evan Lewis, of Narberth, Pembrokeshire, Wales, came to Pennsylvania 1682 and settled at Haverford, Radnor township. He was probably related to Ralph Lewis, another ancestor of Mrs. Justice, who accompanied his relative, John Bevan, to Pennsylvania, from Glamorganshire, Wales; as William Lewis, brother of Ralph, who also came over, 1686, writing to his brother Ralph, from Glamorganshire, 1684, mentions having received a letter from Henry, who it seems had looked after the purchase of land for William, and the latter requests his brother Ralph to remunerate him therefor. Henry Lewis married in Wales, March 12, 1670, Margaret Phelpin, alias Proutherin, and their four children accompanied them to Pennsylvania. Henry Lewis (2), born in Wales, December 26, 1671, married, December 20, 1692, Mary, daughter of Robert Taylor, from Little Leigh, Cheshire, England, who came to Pennsylvania 1682, and was followed in the ship "Endeavour," September 29, 1683, by his wife Mary Hayes, and children, and settled in Springfield, Chester county. Henry Lewis (2) was a member of Assembly from Chester county, 1700-2, 1708-9, 1715-18. His third son John Lewis, born May 23, 1697, died 1780, married, January 6, 1725, Katharine, born October 28, 1702, died 1783. daughter of Abel Roberts, by his wife Mary Prince, and granddaughter of Robert Ellis, a Welsh Quaker, whose certificate of removal to Pennsylvania from the Quarterly Meeting of Tyddyn y Gareg, county of Merioneth, mentions his wife Elin and seven children, and was signed by Rowland Ellis and others.

Evan Lewis, sixth child of John and Katharine, born June 13, 1740, died in Radnor, March 1, 1808; married (second), December 26, 1774, Jane, born March 12, 1742, died June 5, 1814, daughter of John Meredith, born in Radnorshire, Wales, November 2, 1699, came to Pennsylvania with his father Simon Meredith (1663-1745) (and whose ancestry is traced back seven generations to David Vaughan, of Wales), by his wife Grace, born in Goshen, Chester county, May 12, 1707, daughter of Robert William (1647-1734), "King of Goshen," first settler in Goshen township, near present site of West Chester, who married at the house of Hugh Roberts, June 19, 1691, Gwen Cadwalader. Cadwalader Morgan's name heads the list of signers of her marriage certificate.

Evan Lewis, second child of Evan and Jane (Meredith) Lewis, born in Radnor township, Chester county, August 19, 1782, died at 96 North Fifth street, Philadelphia, March 25, 1834, was a man of fine intellectual ability, who from early manhood took a lively interest in the anti-slavery movement. He taught school a number of years, and was at one time engaged in tanning business at Wilmington, Delaware. During the later years of his life he was editor of a Friends' paper published in Philadelphia, and also of The Genius of Universal Emancipation, the great anti-slavery organ established by Benjamin Lundy. Evan Lewis married, March 9, 1815, Sidney Ann Gilpin, born at Wilmington, Delaware, February 28, 1795, died at 315 Marshall street, Philadelphia, March 23, 1882. She was a daughter of James Gilpin, of Wilmington (1767-1798), granddaughter of Vincent Gilpin (1732-1810), the prominent miller and shipper on the Brandywine near Wilmington, by his wife Abigail Woodward. (See Gilpin Family). The mother of Sidney (Gilpin) Lewis, was Sarah Littler, born at Wilmington, April 20, 1769, died at Germantown, Philadelphia, December 21, 1822, daughter of John Littler, born in Nottingham, Chester county, February 26, 1739-40, died at Wilmington, Delaware, by his wife Sarah Stapler, born in Bensalem township, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, January 7, 1727-8, daughter of John Stapler, by his wife Esther Canby, who married (second), 1735, John White, daughter of Thomas Canby, of Bucks county, and granddaughter of Benjamin Canby, of Thorn, Yorkshire; John Stapler was a son of Stephen Stapler, of Philadelphia, who came to Philadelphia with William Penn on his second visit to his Province, 1699, from Surrey, England, and was a considerable landowner in Philadelphia, and a prominent member of the Society of Friends.

John Littler was a son of Joshua Littler, of Nottingham, later of Wilmington, Delaware, by his wife Martha, daughter of Thomas Oldham, one of the earliest settlers at Nottingham, as was also Samuel Littler, father of Joshua, and his wife Rachel Minshall.

James Lewis, eldest son of Evan and Sidney Ann, and father of Jessie (Lewis) Justice, was born at Wilmington, Delaware, November 13, 1816, and died near Leesburg, Virginia, July 17, 1875. He entered the service of the Beaver Meadow Railroad Company as engineer, and was promoted to the position of master of transportation, residing at Weatherby, Pennsylvania, until 1863, when he became superintendent of the Huntingdon & Broad Top Railroad, and, 1865, of the Clearfield branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad. He removed to Hazelton, Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, 1867, and, 1870, to Loudon county, Virginia, where he died. He married at Beaver Meadow, Pennsylvania, February 29, 1844, Ann Longshore, born in Salem township, Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, September 2, 1826, died October 27, 1898; daughter of Isaiah Longshore (1790-1825), of an old Bucks county family, by his wife Ann Wilson, born August 31, 1784, died 1875, daughter of Lieut. William Wilson, a veteran of the Revolutionary War, and many years one of the Commissioners of Connecticut Claims, in the Wyoming Valley. He was a son of William Wilson, native of Ireland, who married, April 3, 1739, Hannah Hart, and resided near Germantown, Bristol township, Philadelphia county, where their son Lieut. Wilson was born, May 11, 1746 (Abington Church records gives date as 1741), as shown by his affidavit accompanying his application for a pension, while a resident of Luzerne county, July 19, 1834. He was First Lieutenant of Capt. Caleb Armitage's Company, Philadelphia Militia, 1775, and as such was drafted into the "Flying Camp," 1776, in the battalion commanded by Col. John Moore, and marched to Amboy, where they were stationed October 8, 1776. After the expiration of his three months' service and the disbandment of the "Flying Camp," he returned to Philadelphia county, and served a few months in the Pennsylvania line "to supply a deficiency." He then rented a mill near Germantown, from which he was driven with his family by the British soldiers and all his property appropriated or destroyed by them. He again entered the service, 1780, as Quartermaster of First Battalion, Philadelphia County Militia, Col. George Smith. In 1800 he was appointed one of the three Commissioners of Connecticut Claims, by the Legislature of Pennsylvania, to adjust the rival claims of the Connecticut settlers in Luzerne county, with those holding title under Pennsylvania patents. Soon after this date he removed to Luzerne county, and resided many years prior to his death in Salem township, where he died 1835.

Lieut. William Wilson married, August 21, 1777, Sarah, baptized at Abington Presbyterian Church, August 3, 1755, daughter of Isaac Boileau, of Moreland township, Philadelphia, now Montgomery county, near Hatboro, by his wife Rachel, daughter of Nathaniel Brittain, a native of Staten Island, as was also Isaac Boileau; the grandfather of Isaac Boileau, being a French Huguenot, who came to America about 1665, while the father of Nathaniel Brittain, also named Nathaniel, was an early English settler on Staten Island, and married, 1660, Ann Stillwell. Nathaniel Brittain Boileau, brother of Sarah (Boileau) Wilson, was born near Hatboro, 1763, and was one of the most prominent men of Montgomery county, serving many terms in the State Legislature, of which he was speaker in 1798; was also Secretary of State under Simon Snyder, and prominent in military affairs during the War of 1812-14, as well as filling numerous other high official positions. Both Alfred R. Justice and his wife Jessie Lewis are descendants of George Pearce, of Thornbury, the distinguished Friend and Colonial Assemblyman, the former as heretofore shown, through Ann Pearce, who married Abraham Marshall, and the latter through her sister, Betty Pearce, who married Vincent Caldwell, and was mother of Mary (Caldwell) Gilpin, great grandmother of Sidney Ann Gilpin, who married Evan Lewis, and was grandmother of Mrs. Justice.

He was a prominent member of the Society of Friends, and took an active interest in the anti-slavery movement, prior to the war, his house being a station on the "Underground Railroad." He was also an active Prohibitionist.

MARY JUSTICE, daughter of John and Mary (Swan) Justice, born at Mount Holly, Burlington county, New Jersey, 1766, married at Christ Church, Philadelphia, October 10, 1780, Joseph Cooper, of whom little is known prior to his marriage. He is supposed to have belonged to the New Jersey family of Cooper, connected with the early history of St. Mary's Protestant Episcopal Church, at Burlington, of which Rev. Colin Campbell was rector from 1738 to his death, 1766. Joseph and Mary (Justice) Cooper were evidently much attached to Rev. Mr. Campbell, as their third son was named for him, as was a grandson and great-grandson.

Rev. Colin Campbell, born at Earnhill, Scotland, November 15, 1707, was tenth child of Colin and Mary (Duff) Campbell, and grandson of William Campbell, of Delmis, Scotland, hereditary High Sheriff of Nairn, the holding of which office implies noble descent. The ancestors of Rev. Mr. Campbell resided at least two centuries in the old castle of the Campbells at Delmis. While the young divinity student was attending school at Aberdeen and Inverness, he resided with his aunt Lady Drummire. He came to New Jersey as a missionary, sent out by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts. On the records of St. Mary's Church, in the handwriting of the rector, is the following entry:

"This day, May 30th, 1746, came to hear me preach at the House of Henry Cooper, in Northampton Township, the Widow Boll, born in New England, a poor woman maintained by said township, aged, as she told me before my whole congregation, one hundred and two years; her eyesight and hearing wonderful well, walked upright, and had the entire use of all her other faculties. "Witness, Colin Campbell, Miss'y at Burlington."

Samuel W. Cooper, Esq., an attorney at law of Philadelphia, son of Dr. Colin Campbell Cooper, hereafter mentioned, and great-grandson of Joseph and Mary (Justice) Cooper, states that there is a tradition in the family that the father or grandfather of Joseph Cooper was indentured to an uncle, who was an attorney of Londonderry, Ireland, and ran away to America, locating in Northampton township, Burlington county, New Jersey, at about the time that John and Mary (Swan) Justice located there. There were quite a number of settlers about Burlington who came from the north of Ireland, and it is possible that Mary (Swan) Justice may have been acquainted with and accompanied the family into which her daughter married, from Ireland to New Jersey. This is of course mere conjecture, no special effort having been made by the writer of this sketch to trace the ancestry of Joseph Cooper.

A fine portrait of Mary (Justice) Cooper is in the possession of Samuel W. Cooper, above mentioned. It is the only known portrait in existence of any of the children of John and Mary (Swan) Justice.

Joseph Cooper was a tailor at Mount Holly, New Jersey, in 1794, when he joined with his wife and her brothers in the conveyance of her father's property there, but soon after that date came to Philadelphia, and engaged in the mercantile business, being for several years a business partner with his brother-in-law George Justice, on North Front street. He later continued the business alone, in which he was succeeded by his sons Joseph and Colin Cooper. He died March 14, 1809, aged fifty-two years, leaving a goodly estate. He and his family were members of St. Mary's Protestant Episcopal Church at Burlington, during their residence in New Jersey, and after coming to Philadelphia affiliated with Christ Church. The dates of birth and death of the children and grandchildren of Joseph and Mary (Justice) Cooper, are obtained from the records of these two churches. Mary died in Philadelphia, September 27, 1831.

JOSEPH COOPER, second son of Joseph and Mary (Justice) Cooper, born at Mount Holly, New Jersey, 1787, came to Philadelphia with his parents, 1795, and at the death of his father, 1809, succeeded him in the mercantile business, and in partnership with his younger brother, Colin Cooper, became a prominent merchant of the city. He died, however, in the prime of life, June 10, 1829. He married, January 12, 1809, Ann Veree, born in New Jersey, January 14, 1789, daughter of William and Rebecca (Harris) Burr, of a prominent New Jersey family. Keziah Burr, sister of William, above mentioned, married Richard Howell, Governor of New Jersey, 1792-1801; and her son, William Burr Howell, who removed to Mississippi in 1812, was father of Varina Howell, who became wife of Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederate States of America during the Civil War.

COLIN CAMPBELL COOPER, third son and fourth child of Dr. Colin Campbell and Emily (Williams) Cooper, born in Philadelphia, March 8, 1856, is a distinguished artist of New York City. After graduating at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, Philadelphia, 1885, he made an extended trip to Europe to familiarize himself with European art. After a tour of Belgium, Holland and Brittany, he returned to Philadelphia. The next year he again visited the old world, studied at the Julian Academy, Paris, and spent the winter in Spain. With an artist's intuition he perceived the picturesque and rare beauty of the old world architecture, and determined to portray on canvas some of the unique structures he had seen in his travels. "He spent some months in Normandy painting the twisting streets, the beautiful inner courtyards, the odd buildings of the old towns and the famous chateaux along the Chir and the Loire." While achieving recognition of the artistic value of his efforts, he was led to believe that a still greater field for the realization of his ambition lay before him in his native country. To present a commonplace structure of stone or bricks so that the public would realize that in it he had incorporated the grandeur, the beauty, and solemnity which his own genius had interpreted, surely this is a great accomplishment, and no one who has seen his paintings on exhibition and witnessed the appreciative groups there assembled can doubt his complete success. Among his many fine paintings may be mentioned "The Ferries, New York," "Broad Street Canyon, New York," "Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, In the Rain," "The Cathedral of Notre Dame," "The Beauvais Cathedral," "St. Paul's Church, New York," "The Chain Gate, Wells Cathedral," etc.

Mr. Cooper is particularly pleasing in his color effects, and his work is characterized by careful attention to detail. Although best known as a painter of modern buildings he has shown himself no less capable as a portrait painter. Among the many medals he has been awarded may be mentioned the Bronze Medal at the Atlanta Exposition of 1895; the Gold Medal at the American Art Society, Philadelphia, 1902; the William T. Evans prize at the American Watercolor Society, New York, 1903; the Sesman prize at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, Philadelphia, 1904, and many others. Mr. Cooper was a member of the jury of awards at the St. Louis Exposition, 1904, and is a member of many of the leading Art Clubs of the country.

Colin Campbell Cooper married, June 9, 1897, Emma Lampert, also a celebrated artist, daughter of Henry and Jeanette (Smith) Lampert, of Nunda, New York. She graduated at Wells College, Aurora, New York, and studied art at the Cooper Union and Art Students League, New York, and took lessons in water colors with Miss Agnes D. Abbatt. She later went abroad several times, studying art in Paris, and sketching in Holland, Italy, and other places. She had charge of the Art Department of Foster School, Clifton Springs, Ontario county, New York, for two years, and of the painting classes at Mechanics' Institute, Rochester, New York, 1893-7. She is a member of the Woman's International Art Club, London; of the Water Color Club, New York; Woman's Art Association of Canada; Philadelphia Water Color Club; Plastic Club, Philadelphia; National Arts Club, Woman's Art Club, New York, and is a founder of the Eastern Association of Wells College. She was awarded a medal by the World's Columbian Exposition, 1893; a bronze medal at the Atlanta Exposition of 1895; and two bronze medals at the St. Louis Exposition, 1904. She exhibited at the Paris Exposition in 1900. Mr. and Mrs. Colin Campbell Cooper reside at 58 West Fifty-seventh street, New York City, but they have lived much abroad since 1898. They have no children.

SAMUEL WILLIAMS COOPER, another son of Dr. Colin Campbell Cooper, of Philadelphia, by his wife Emily Williams, was born in that city, March 5, 1860. His elementary education was received at home under private tutors, and he entered the Law Department of University of Pennsylvania, from which he graduated June, 1881, and was admitted to Philadelphia Bar, of which he is still a practicing attorney, with offices at 1200 Betz Building. He is a member of the Lawyer's, Art, Clover, and Penn Clubs, of the first of which he is a director. He is a contributor to magazines and reviews and author of "Confessions of a Society Man," 1887; "Three Days," 1889; "Think and Thank," 1890; and a number of other literary productions.

He married, December 28, 1893, Homie Weldon, of Jacksonville, Florida, and they have one daughter, Margaret H. Cooper, born January 13, 1895. Mr. Cooper has been referred to in the preceding pages as having in his possession the portrait, by Eichotz, of his great-grandmother, Mary Justice.

JOSEPH JUSTICE, youngest son of John and Mary (Swan) Justice, born 1763, at Mount Holly, Burlington county, New Jersey, was probably last of the family that eventually removed to Philadelphia, to remove to that city, and the supposition is that he remained with his mother on the property owned by his father and devised by him to his wife for life as heretofore recited. He married, 1790, Esther, born 1771, eldest child of Jaconias Warner, of Northampton township, Burlington county, New Jersey, by his wife, Sybilla, daughter of Jabez Eldridge, of the same township, by his first wife Esther Reeves, of a family long prominent in Burlington and adjoining counties of New Jersey, granddaughter of Obadiah Eldridge, of Springfield township, and great-granddaughter of Jonathan Eldridge, an early settler of Burlington county. Jaconias Warner and Sybilla Eldridge were married by New Jersey license dated March 1, 1770. He belonged to a family that had been some time settled in Burlington county, near the present village of Lumberton, where an ancient graveyard, now entirely obliterated, was known as the "Warner Burying Ground," and where, according to the testimony of old residents in that locality, a number of the name were buried. Sybilla (Eldridge) Warner was devised, by the will of her father Jabez Eldridge, dated May 31, 1780, and proved June 16, 1787, "the house and lot where she now dwells, to her, her heirs and assigns forever." Little or nothing is known of either Jaconias or Sybilla Warner after this date.

She was probably a widow at the date of her father's will. Besides Esther (Warner) Justice it would appear that they had children, John, Samuel and Elizabeth Warner. A Sybilla Warner, supposedly mother of Esther and John and Elizabeth Warner, were witnesses to the marriage of Phebe Justice, eldest child of Joseph and Esther (Warner) Justice to Francis Harmer, at the North District Meeting House, Philadelphia, May 14, 1811. In the possession of descendants of Joseph and Esther (Warner) Justice, is a silver scissors-holder, with the name of Sybilla Warner engraved thereon, which traditions says belonged to Esther's mother. Among the later generations of the descendants of Esther (Warner) Justice are some who claim that Esther belonged to the Warner family of Blockley, but a careful investigation of these claims shows no tangible foundation for them. She may have been descended from one of the sons of William Warner, of New Jersey, of the Blockley family, the descendants of only two of whose sons, Swen and William, having been traced.

Neither Joseph Justice nor his wife Esther were members of the Society of Friends at the time of their marriage, but both made application for membership at Chesterfield Monthly Meeting, Burlington county, New Jersey, January 4, 1791, and were admitted to membership September 6, 1791. Before this date and after their application, to wit, June 7, 1791, their eldest child Phebe was born on November 8, this child was also admitted to membership, and at the same meeting they requested a certificate to Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, Northern District, which was granted the following month and is as follows:

To the Monthly Meeting of Friends at Philadelphia, for the Northern District:

Dear Friends,

Application being made to us by Joseph Justice for a Certificate of Removal for himself & Esther his Wife with their infant child Phebe to your Meeting, now these may Certify in their behalf that they have a Right in Membership Amongst us, frequently attending our Religious Meetings and as far as Appears hath Settled his Outward affairs to Satisfaction. Therefore we Recommend them to your Christian Care and Attention and Remain Your Friends Brethren and Sisters.

Signed in and on behalf of our Mo. Meeting of Friends held at Chesterfield in New Jersey the 6 Day of the 12mo. 1791.

Joseph Justice was a plasterer by trade, and his name appears on the Philadelphia directory for 1794, as such, residing on Kunckle street, near Callowhill. He later owned considerable property on Crown street, between Vine and Wood streets, and in 1808, was residing at 67 Crown street. He and his wife were active members of the North District Monthly Meeting, and he became a minister among Friends. December 7, 1812, there was conveyed to him by Abraham Stockton and wife of the city and county of Burlington, a farm of 116½ acres in Chester township, Burlington county, and May 7, 1814, Joshua Lippincott conveyed to Joseph Justice "of Philadelphia," 16 acres adjoining. He removed to his farm at about the latter date, at least was living in Chester township October 20, 1815, when he conveyed a portion of the tract bought of Stockton. He died there June 28, 1825, intestate, and seized of the above tracts of real estate, another tract of six acres in Chester township, and a lot on the North side of Vine street, Philadelphia, between Fifth and Juliana streets, which real estate was partitioned among his children on petition of his widow Esther to the Orphans' Court at Mount Holly, 1826. Esther died January 1, 1841.

Warner Justice, son of Joseph and Esther, related the fact that an uncle of his by the name of Warner, "who at one time furnished bread to Washington's Army, escaped capture by British soldiers by having been concealed by his wife in one of a number of empty casks in his cellar. After smashing a number of them without finding him, the British (to the great terror of his wife) were about to set fire to the place when they were driven off by the approach of an American Troop. This uncle evidently had been an Army contractor. He possessed a trunk full of Continental money, received in payment for valuable materials furnished to the Commissary Department. Warner Justice, as a lad, was especially interested in the contents of this cow-hair trunk, which he often inspected with deep interest, as he had been informed that on account of his name he was to inherit it. At that time it had no value, but it was believed that at some future time a grateful and appreciative nation would redeem the currency issued by the Continental Congress." The uncle referred to must have been a great-uncle, as Esther Warner, born 1771, could hardly have had a brother of sufficient age to have been the army contractor of the Revolution.

WARNER JUSTICE, second son of Joseph and Esther (Warner) Justice, born in Philadelphia, October 17, 1808, died in that city, November 6, 1862. His parents were members of the Society of Friends, of which his father was a recommended minister, and he was reared in that faith.

From early manhood Warner Justice was deeply interested in the question of anti-slavery. He, with other Philadelphia young men, among whom were the poet John G. Whittier (then residing in Philadelphia), and Daniel Neall, formed the Pennsylvania Anti-Slavery Society, of which he was an active and earnest member. He was also Treasurer of the Pennsylvania Hall Association, which erected the hall on Sixth street above Arch, for the use of Abolitionists, who were barred from holding meetings in other public halls, owing to the strong pro-slavery sentiment in Philadelphia at that time. Pennsylvania Hall was burned, May, 1838, by a pro-slavery mob.

Warner Justice married, September 10, 1834, Huldah Thorn, born at Bordentown, New Jersey, May 11, 1811, died in Philadelphia, April 8, 1888. She was a daughter of Isaac Thorn, Jr. (born April 5, 1786, died July 16, 1844), by his wife Mary (born April 13, 1785, died 1869), daughter of James Woolley (1743-1813), by his second wife Huldah (1754-1825), who was a daughter of Abraham Skirm (1727-1785), by his wife Elizabeth, born 1731, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Harrison) Fowler, and sister to Hannah Fowler, who married George Middleton. Abraham Skirm, above mentioned, was a son of Richard Skirm, of Trenton, New Jersey (1682-1746), by his wife, Elizabeth (1700-1785), who was sister to Sarah Foulke, born February 28, 1703, the great-great-grandmother of Huldah Thorn, on the paternal side, being wife of Joseph Thorn, mother of John Thorn (1730-1807), grandmother of Isaac Thorn (1759-1837), and great-grandmother of Isaac Thorn, Jr., above mentioned. Joseph Thorn, who married Sarah Foulke, New Jersey, 1723, was son of John and Catharine Thorn, and grandson of Joseph Thorn (son of William Thorn, of Dorsetshire, England, who emigrated, 1630, to Lynn, Massachusetts, where he was a freeman in 1638), by Mary, his wife, born in New England, 1669, daughter of John Bowne, born 1627, by Mary, his wife, cousin of Gov. John Winthrop, of Massachusetts. Mary Schooley, wife of Isaac Thorn, Sr., and Diademia Ivins, wife of John Thorn and mother of Isaac, were both, also, of New England ancestry. Mary Schooley (1762-1814), daughter of Joseph Schooley, of Nottingham, Burlington county, New Jersey, by his wife Sarah, daughter of Preserve Brown, Jr., by his wife Mary French, granddaughter of Preserve Brown, Sr., and great-granddaughter of Abraham Brown, one of a colony of New Englanders who were among the first settlers at Shrewsbury, from whence the family moved later to Burlington county, New Jersey. Diademia Ivins, wife of John Thorn, was a daughter of Isaac Ivins, by his wife Lydia, daughter of Abraham Brown, Jr., by his wife Sarah Clayton, and great-granddaughter of Abraham Brown, the Shrewsbury settler.

Preserve Brown, Jr., of Mansfield township, Burlington county, was a prominent member of the Society of Friends, and helped to build the Meeting House at Bordentown, where he lies buried, being one of the few Friends over whom a tombstone was erected at that early period. He built and operated a mill on Doctor's Creek; removed to Philadelphia, 1745, and engaged in business there for a few years, but, his wife dying, returned to Bordentown, where he died May 23, 1760. His son, William, who married Rebecca, sister to Gov. Jones, of Delaware, and cousin to Gen. John Cadwalader, was a large shipping merchant in Philadelphia, but lost his ships by capture during the Revolution. His scrupulous honesty earned for him the sobriquet of the "Honest Quaker." After the loss of his ships, he engaged in the manufacture of ship-biscuits, etc., and so well-known was his brand, that at his death it was sold for £500. During the British occupation of the city, William Brown received a severe sword wound on the head for refusing to doff his hat to a British officer, from which he never entirely recovered. Preserve Brown Jr.'s son Abiah married Margaret Monroe, cousin of President James Monroe, and his daughter Hannah married William de la Montaigne, her bridesmaids being Mrs. Dundas, and Dolly Payne, afterwards wife of President James Madison.

Sarah and Elizabeth Foulke, paternal and maternal great-grandmothers of Huldah (Thorn) Justice, respectively, were daughters of Thomas Foulke, Jr., by his wife Elizabeth, daughter of John Curtis, of Ogston, as he named his plantation, taken up 1684, in Mansfield township, Burlington county, one of the earliest English settlers in that locality, and a Proprietor of West Jersey. Thomas Foulke, father of Thomas Foulke, Jr., and ancestor of Esther Syng Bunting, wife of George Middleton Justice, of Philadelphia, as well as of Huldah Thorn, wife of Warner Justice, was first of the name to come to America. He was born 1624, and 1677 was living at "Holmeigate, in ye Parish of Northwingfield, County of Derby, England," when he purchased of Mahlon Stacy, of Hansworth, York, one-fifth part of a share in West Jersey. In the same year he was sent out by William Penn and the other purchasers from Byllinge, of the lands of West Jersey, as one of the nine commissioners of the Proprietors, to sell lands, etc. He sailed with the other commissioners in the "Kent," and after a tedious voyage landed at New Castle, August 16, 1677, from whence they proceeded to Burlington, to treat with the Indians for the land. He located at Crosswicks, in what became Chesterfield township, where he died 1714, aged ninety years. His wife Mary died April 16, 1718, aged eighty-nine years. His daughter Mary married Samuel Bunting, ancestor of Esther Syng (Bunting) Justice; her sister Sarah married John Bunting, brother to Samuel; another daughter, Hannah, married Anthony Woodward, and the son Thomas Foulke, Jr., married Elizabeth Curtis, as above stated, in 1688. Thomas Foulke was an early convert to the principles and faith of Friends, and a friend of William Penn, founder of Pennsylvania. It was in a letter from Penn to Thomas Foulke that the founder states his Welsh origin, and explains the adoption of the name for his new Province. He had selected the name of New Wales, but King Charles was not satisfied with the name, whereupon Penn suggested "Sylvania," meaning woodlands, by reason of the virgin forest that was supposed to cover the country. The King taking the pen wrote into the grant the name Pennsylvania, and when Penn protested that the title savored too much of personal vanity, the King said, "My good fellow, do not deceive yourself, this is in honor of your noble father, the Admiral," with which explanation the founder was compelled to be content.

Issue of Warner and Huldah (Thorn) Justice:

- ANNA ROBERTS JUSTICE, b. Aug. 25, 1835; d. Feb. 14, 1872; m. Feb. 24, 1864, Edward T., son of Robert and Hannah (Hill) Steel, of Germantown, Phila.; of whom later;

The three sons of Warner Justice, William Wirt, Theodore, and Henry Justice, were associated together in the wool business in Philadelphia, for over a third of a century, and were merchants of wide repute and highly esteemed.

WILLIAM WIRT JUSTICE, eldest son, as a young man was most active in the cause of anti-slavery. After the emancipation he devoted much of his attention to the care of the orphans of colored soldiers, and to the cause of public education generally. He was an active promoter of the Centennial Exposition 1876, and later in the movement for civic betterment and municipal reform. He devoted a large part of his time to the methods leading to the improvement of municipal conditions that a Republican form of government in large cities might not be a farce and a failure. He married Eliza Townsend, born July 6, 1840, eldest daughter of Daniel Neall, Jr., by his wife Cecilia (born December 25, 1806, died February 2, 1897), daughter of James and Cecilia (Wright) Anderson, of Talbot county, Maryland; and granddaughter of the celebrated philanthropist, Daniel Neall, whom Jean Pierre Brissot, the Girondist statesman, pronounced, "an angel of mercy, the best man I ever knew," and of whom John Greenleaf Whittier wrote a beautiful poetic eulogy.

Through Sarah Mifflin, the wife of this Daniel Neall, Eliza Townsend Neall, the wife of William Wirt Justice, and Anna Vaughan Neall, wife of Theodore Justice were great-grandchildren of Warner Mifflin, the great reformer and philanthropist, an account of whom is given later in this narrative.

William Wirt Justice and his wife, Eliza Townsend Neall, had issue:

 Philip Leighton Lee, b. Jan. 30, 1899;
 By her second husband, Joshua Coffin Chase, she had issue:
 Cecilia Justice Chase, b. Aug. 6, 1905.

THEODORE JUSTICE, second son of Warner Justice and Huldah Thorn, born in Philadelphia, April 9, 1841, has taken a prominent part in the affairs of his native city, as well as those of the nation, and left his impress upon the community in which he lived. As an active member of the Committee of One Hundred, which during its existence accomplished so much in the way of municipal reform, he did his full part in accomplishing that result. His most conspicuous labors, however, were in affairs that were broadly national. He is senior member of the firm of Justice, Bateman & Co., Wool Commission Merchants, of Philadelphia, and in addition to his experience as a merchant, has had experience as a wool grower and a manufacturer, as a grower when a lad on the farm, and as a manufacturer, as president of the Yeadon Woolen Mills Co. The development of the American wool-growing industry has ever been uppermost in the mind of Theodore Justice, and his firm issued a wool circular, which for many years largely shaped public sentiment with regard to protective duties upon American wool. Through the efforts of Hon. Columbus Delano, former President of the National Association of Wool-Growers, Mr. Justice was induced to become a director of the American Protective Tariff League, which has done so much throughout the country, in favor of developing home industries.

His labors in assisting in the construction of the McKinley and of the Dingley Tariff Acts, under which the industrial prosperity of the country reached such marvelous development, were publicly acknowledged by appreciative congressmen on the floor of Congress.

At the time the Committee of Ways and Means of the National House of Representatives were formulating what afterward became the disastrous Wilson Tariff Act, Theodore Justice appeared before it to deliver an argument against the removal of the McKinley duties. That schedule being largely of his devising, he was thoroughly master of his subject when he appeared before the committee as representative of the wool industry of America. The editor of the Manufacturer, who was present, in an editorial article in his issue of September 16, 1893, says, "Theodore Justice, of Philadelphia, made an argument of uncommon force against Free Wool, and during a discussion which lasted for two hours and a half, simply overwhelmed every friend of free wool who ventured to assail him. Never before was such a presentation of the case for the American Wool industry made by anybody."

In 1897 Mr. Justice again appeared before the same committee when Mr. Dingley was its chairman, in the interest of the American wool grower, and this time was listened to most attentively by a more sympathetic audience, as the interests of the wool-grower was then in the hands of its friends. The American Economist, of New York, said of Mr. Justice's speech on this occasion, "it is doubtful if a more able statement was ever made before a legislative body in this country, touching the scientific scope of protection as affecting the great wool industry and the operations of the opposite policy." The Philadelphia Press, the day following the tariff hearings, said among other things, "No one has yet appeared before the Committee who has been listened to more closely, nor has any one yet been able to make a statement so well endorsed by wool growers and wool dealers. He was armed to the teeth with statistics and showed beyond dispute, by official records and testimony of experts, what had been the actual loss to the American farmer and wool grower." Some of the Democratic members endeavored to cross-question him, and they were glad to drop him as he was too thoroughly posted to be shaken upon any of his arguments. Hon. C. H. Grosvenor, an influential member of the Ways and Means Committee at the time, said of Mr. Justice, among other things, that the committee "have been aided at every step of the way by the invaluable suggestions of Mr. Theodore Justice, etc." and that "he has more interest in the success of the American wool grower and more knowledge of the whole subject, than any other man in the United States."

Mr. Justice has also been active before other Congressional committees in efforts to stimulate the building up of an American mercantile marine, urging its importance mainly as an auxiliary to our navy in time of war. He also took an active part in the movements to develop our interior water-ways, considering them of more importance to the development of the country than the Panama Canal. Mr. Justice has a ready pen and was able to describe in an interesting manner things which he has seen. He published a delightful paper on fox-hunting in England, as seen during a visit to England, when he rode with the famous Cottesmore hounds. He also wrote an account of a trip across the plains on horseback from the Rio Grande to the River Missouri, at a time before there were any railroads there, and when the Indians and the buffalo, roamed at will over this section of the country. Newspaper reviews of these articles pronounced them among the best contributions toward the literature of sport.

Mr. Justice also prepared an exhaustive reply to the address of William R. Corwine, Secretary of the New York Committee of the American Reciprocal Tariff League, opposing the immediate revision of the tariff, which was read before the Trades League of Philadelphia, March 8, 1906. It is a very able defence of the present tariff laws, and a severe arraignment of the insincere motives of the advocates of tariff revision in the interest of foreign steamship lines.

Theodore Justice married, May 11, 1871, Anna Vaughan Neall, born in Philadelphia, July 28, 1842, daughter of Daniel and Cecilia (Anderson) Neall, and sister to his elder brother William Wirt Justice's wife, an account of whose paternal ancestry is given above.

Sarah (Mifflin) Neall, wife of Daniel Neall, the elder, was born December 9, 1784, and died February 5, 1837. She was married to Daniel Neall, the eminent philanthropist, March 21, 1810.

Warner Mifflin (father of Sarah (Mifflin) Neall), reformer, philanthropist and prominent member of the Society of Friends, was born in Accomac county, Virginia, August 21, 1745, and died at "Chestnut Grove," near Camden, Delaware, October 16, 1798. He was a son of Daniel Mifflin, born in Accomac county, Virginia, 1722, died 1796, by his first wife, Mary, born May 7, 1727, daughter of Joseph and Ann (Coale) Warner, and granddaughter of George Warner; grandson of Edward Mifflin, born at "Fountain Green," now part of Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, 1685, moved to Accomac county, Virginia, where he died, 1743, by his wife, Mary, daughter of Daniel and Ann (Beach) Eyre, of Northampton county, Virginia, and granddaughter of Thomas Eyre, a Quaker, who was in Northampton county, Virginia, as early as 1643, and died there 1657.

John Mifflin, father of Edward, was born in Warminster, Wiltshire, England, about 1661, and came to Pennsylvania with his father John Mifflin, Sr., who settled among the Swedes on the Delaware between 1676 and 1679, and in 1680 settled at "Fountain Green," a tract of 150 acres which was granted to him under the authority of the Duke of York, by the Provisional Court sitting at Kingsess, October 13, 1680. John Mifflin, Jr., received at the same time a grant of like amount, and the 300 acre tract was located on the east bank of the Schuylkill, and is now included in Fairmount Park. This grant was confirmed by patent from William Penn to John Mifflin, Sr., and John Mifflin, Jr., dated 5mo. 18, 1684, by virtue of a warrant from Penn dated 4mo. 24, 1683, reciting the previous grant by the court at Kingsess. It was the home of one branch of the family for several generations, John Mifflin, Sr., and Eleanor his wife transferring their interest to their son John Mifflin, Jr., 1698. "Fountain Green" remained in the Mifflin family until 1806, having been for several years prior to this date the country residence of Col. Jonathan Mifflin. John Mifflin, Sr., died there July 4, 1716.

John Mifflin, Jr., married at the house of Henry Lewis, near Schuylkill, February 6, 1683-4, Elizabeth Hardy, from Derby, England, who had come to Pennsylvania, 1682. They had nine children. Thomas Mifflin (1744-1800), General in the Revolutionary War, and Governor of Pennsylvania, 1790-9, was like Warner Mifflin, a great-grandson of John Mifflin, Jr.

Warner Mifflin, born on his father's plantation in Accomac county, Virginia, of Quaker parentage, but in the midst of slavery, his father being possessed of quite a number of slaves, and his associates being those who tenaciously held the prevailing sentiments in favor of slavery, nevertheless imbibed early in life, decided sentiments against the institution, and before he reached manhood determined never to be a slave-holder. He married in Philadelphia, May 14, 1767, Elizabeth, daughter of Kensey Johns, and became possessed of a number of slaves through her. Taking up his residence in Kent county, Delaware, a number of slaves from his home plantation in Virginia, the property of his father and of his mother's family, followed him there. In 1774 he manumitted the slaves actually owned by himself and wife, and the following year also freed all that were under his control, induced his father to also free his slaves, and did much to put them upon a self-sustaining basis. Though he had married "out of Unity" with Friends, he made a satisfactory acknowledgement of this breach of discipline to Duck Creek Meeting, August 27, 1768, as did also his wife, and they became earnest members of that meeting. He became an Elder of Murtherkill Preparative Meeting 1775. Such was his earnestness and zeal for the betterment of the human race, and the influence of his blameless life and character that he induced a number of other Friends to manumit their slaves, and the several monthly meetings of the Society to adopt testimonies against the holding of slaves. He served on committee appointed to visit members who were slave-holders, and the minutes of the meeting show that great progress was made in securing the manumission of slaves in that neighborhood by 1777. He traveled extensively in the service of the Society of Friends, visiting Friends in Philadelphia, Chester and Bucks county, Pennsylvania; in Maryland, Virginia, the Carolinas, New Jersey, New York, and New England, and everywhere received with much unity in his views among members of the Society, solidified the sentiment against slavery among Friends.

Warner Mifflin became a Justice of Kent county, Delaware, 1770, and continued a Provincial Magistrate until the organization of the State, having become a Justice of the General Quarter Sessions of the Peace and the Court of Common Pleas for Kent county, 1774.

When the war of the Revolution came on he religiously refrained from taking any part therein, and endured a great deal of harsh criticism and even insult and violence for so doing, as well as for his refusal to accept the bills of credit issued for carrying on the war. In his "Defence against Aspersions cast on him on account of his Endeavours to promote Righteousness, Mercy and Peace, among Mankind," published in Philadelphia, 1796, he says "I felt restricted from receiving them (the Bills of Credit) lest I might thereby in some sort, defile my hands with one of the engines of war."

He was one of the members of the Society of Friends who appeared before the Assembly of Pennsylvania in behalf of the Philadelphia Friends who were banished to Virginia early in 1777, and when on the day of the battle of Germantown the Yearly Meeting in session in Philadelphia, issued a testimony respecting their peace principles, he was one of those delegated to interview Generals Howe and Washington, with a view of securing an armistice and at least temporary cessation of hostilities, and a consideration of means of ending the war without further bloodshed. In "The Letters of an American Farmer," by Hector St. John de Crevecoer, published in Paris, 1787, and translated from the French by Hilda, daughter of Theodore Justice, a perhaps too vivid account of the adventures of Warner Mifflin on this mission, and his interview with "Friend William Howe" is given. His mission was, however, fraught with danger and difficulties, and all authorities agree that he was seized by the British soldiers in his journey through the lines and spent some time in the guard house, from which he was released and treated with the utmost courtesy by Gen. Howe. After the close of the war he continued his labors in behalf of the enslaved, memorializing the President and Congress, and using every effort to secure the abolition of slavery, until his death by yellow fever, at "Chestnut Grove," his Delaware home, near Camden, Kent county, October 16, 1798. He was also religiously engaged in testimony against the use of ardent spirits, and was one of the first to discontinue their use in the harvest field. His many acts of kindness and mercy to the afflicted wherever found, earned for him the title of "an angel of mercy."

Warner Mifflin's first wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Kensey and Susannah (Galloway) Johns, of West River, Maryland, and granddaughter of Kensey and Elizabeth (Chew) Johns, died June 3, 1786, and October 9, 1788, he married (second) Ann, daughter of George and Ann (Reckless) Emlen, of Philadelphia, an account of whose ancestry is given elsewhere in these volumes.

Warner Mifflin lies buried in the old Murtherkill Burying-Ground, Kent county, Delaware, and a stone has recently been erected over him bearing this inscription:

"MOTHERKILL BURYING GROUND,
WITHIN THIS ENCLOSURE ARE INTERRED THE REMAINS OF
WARNER MIFFLIN

FRIEND, PHILANTHROPIST, PATRIOT.
 BORN AUGUST 21st. 1745
 DIED OCTOBER 16th. 1798."

Of the nine children of Warner and Elizabeth (Johns) Mifflin, four died in childhood. Elizabeth, third child, born 1771, married Clayton Cowgill; Ann, fifth, born 1774, married Warner Raisin; Warner, only son by this marriage, born 1777, died 1840, was twice married and left issue; Susanna, seventh child, born 1779, never married; and Sarah, the youngest, born December 9, 1784, died February 3, 1837; married, March 21, 1810, Daniel Neall, the philanthropist, above mentioned, and was the grandmother of the wives of William Wirt and Theodore Justice. By his second wife, Ann Emlen, Warner Mifflin had two sons, Samuel Emlen Mifflin and Lemuel Mifflin.

Frank Lesley Neall, only son of Daniel Neall, Jr., and Cecilia Anderson born in Philadelphia, December 12, 1844, married Hannah Woodnut, daughter of Dr. John D. and Margaret Acton Griscom; (second) Wilhelmina Walbaum, of London, England.

Issue of Theodore and Anna Vaughan (Neall) Justice:

HULDA JUSTICE, b. March 5, 1874; of whom presently;
 William Warner Justice, b. Nov. 8, 1878.

HENRY JUSTICE, third son of Warner and Huldah (Thorn) Justice, born in Philadelphia, August 21, 1844, attended closely to the business of the firm in which he was associated with his elder brothers, while actively encouraging and supporting them in their efforts for the general public good. He took an active interest in organized charity movements, in the care of hospitals, and in the support of a Home for Destitute Colored Children. He married, February 18, 1874, Josephine D., daughter of Simon and Sarah (Darlington) Bernard, and they had the following children:

Lucretia B. Justice, b. Dec. 27, 1874; m. Thomas Stotesbury Williams, April 6, 1904, and had issue:

Henry Justice Williams, b. May 12, 1905;
 Ellis Tilton Williams, b. Jan. 14, 1908.

ANNA JUSTICE, b. April 30, 1878; d. July 22, 1907; of whom presently.

ANNA ROBERTS JUSTICE, eldest daughter of Warner and Huldah (Thorn) Justice, born August 25, 1835, died February 14, 1872; married, February 24, 1864, Edward T. Steel, born January 6, 1835, died August 14, 1892. He was a prominent merchant and manufacturer of Philadelphia, and was conspicuous as a public spirited citizen, always foremost in the activities of public questions. For a long time he was President of the Board of Education, and, it is believed, sacrificed his life in overwork while striving to provide primary school accommodations for the 20,000 or more children who were in the streets because of inadequate school accommodations. Mr. Steel's concern was that the primary education was the most important for the children of the poorer classes, for the reason that many of them never received any instruction beyond that obtained in the primary schools, and that for all classes of people the primary education, in his opinion, had a most important influence in forming the character of the future citizen.

Edward T. and Anna R. (Justice) Steel had issue:

Anna Lewis Steel, b. Nov. 23, 1867; m., Jan. 21, 1902, Clifford Prevost Grayson, and they had issue:

Helen Steel Grayson, b. Oct. 31, 1902;

Spence Monroe Grayson, b. March 14, 1905.

Helen Steel, b. Nov. 23, 1870; m., June 7, 1905, Francis Richard Jones;

MARY THORN JUSTICE, second daughter of Warner Justice, born August 21, 1844, married June 12, 1867, Henry M. Steel, also of the Edward T. Steel Co., and brother of her elder sister's husband. He was a public spirited citizen, prominent as a merchant and manufacturer, and an active supporter and associate of his brother Edward T. Steel, in all efforts toward promoting the public good. Henry M. and Mary T. Steel have issue:

Warner Justice Steel, b. Jan. 19, 1869; m., April 26, 1899, Anne Foster McCrea;

Mariana Steel, b. March 31, 1872;

Edith Steel, b. March 22, 1879;

Marjorie Steel, b. Aug. 21, 1882; m., Oct. 12, 1907, Newell Charles Bradley.

ELIZABETH BACON JUSTICE, youngest daughter of Warner and Huldah, born May 31, 1848, married, 1891, Rev. Joseph May, who for twenty-five years was pastor of the First Unitarian Church of Philadelphia.

Thus it will be seen that all the children of Warner Justice were more or less prominent forces in the efforts for the development of better conditions in their native city. The grandchildren have nobly taken up the same work.

HILDA JUSTICE, daughter of Theodore Justice, and compiler of "The Life and Ancestry of Warner Mifflin," Philadelphia, 1905, and her cousin Anna Justice, have taken an active part in benevolent and educational work in Philadelphia.

ANNA JUSTICE, daughter of Henry and Josephine D. (Bernard) Justice, born April 30, 1878, graduated from Vassar College, 1901, and in the autumn of 1902 became interested in the work of the Philadelphia Society for Organizing Charity, became secretary of the local conference for the Eastern District of Philadelphia, and immediately showed her great qualification for work in that department of benevolence, a deep interest and clear understanding in the study of social conditions, and above all a deep and wide human sympathy. In May, 1904, she was elected a director of the Society, and, 1906, chairman of the Committee on Appeals. She left the Eastern District and became a member of the reorganized Southwestern District of the city, and while actively engaged in its work, assisted in gathering the facts for an article published in the Society's Annual Report of 1904, called "Cities Within a City," a study of social conditions in sections of Philadelphia. In 1905-6, she was chairman of the Committee on Dietary Studies, which sought by gathering the budgets of a number of families of different nationalities to secure a practical guide for the improvement of dietary standards of poor families.

Miss Justice possessed in a rare degree the qualities needful for the work she had chosen. Her fine intellectual and executive ability made her an invaluable worker for the betterment of her race. But it was by her humane character, inherited from worthy ancestors, that her impressions were chiefly made. Her greatest interest in the Humane Society with which she connected herself and perhaps her most important contribution to its success, was her personal intercourse with her fellow men as a friendly visitor, not only with those that came directly to her through the Society, but with those in poorer neighborhoods whom she met in the course of her work and learned to value as friends.

Her sudden death, July 22, 1907, came as a heartfelt shock to those with whom she had been so closely associated. The Board of Directors of the Society for Organizing Charity, at its meeting held September 16, 1907, adopted a minute concerning her death, from which we quote the following: "To those who were permitted to serve with her upon this board, her hearty devotion to the work of the Society was a constant inspiration, and her confidence in the ultimate solution of the most difficult problems was a never failing incentive to those actively engaged in relieving distress. * * * The memory of her charm and strength will long remain not only with us but in many a home of poverty and misfortune."

John S. Newbold, president of the Society, writing of his sorrow at her death, says, "I was shocked beyond expression, and cannot yet realize that so energetic and vigorous a life has passed away. She had so patiently and faithfully laid the foundations of a life of ever widening usefulness, that it seems incredible that she has been called so soon to put it aside. Her loss as a worker among her more unfortunate neighbors is irreparable. Her enthusiasm, devotion, and belief in the good in human nature can scarcely again be found united in one person so willing freely to give of herself for the sake of others. Her memory will live in the hearts of her associates as an inspiration that can never fade." Miss Lucy E. Salmon, Professor of History at Vassar College, says of her, "I loved her as I have loved few. Her absolute sincerity and simplicity, her keen enthusiasm for all human interest, won all who knew her. Alas! we are all poorer with so much gone from life, and yet how rich the memories of love and service. She was always an inspiration to me, whether in our walks, or in the Class room or in the visits in our home, and there is no one who can give so much of courage and help as always came to me from Anna Justice."

The Pennsylvania Society of Colonial Dames, of which Miss Justice was a member, also adopted resolutions expressive of their sympathy and bereavement.

SYNG FAMILY.

Arms—Quarterly: First and fourth, azure, three millstones proper, two and one, each charged with a millrind sable (Millington); Second and third, argent, an eagle displayed with two heads sable, armed gules (Millington). Crest—Out of a ducal coronet or, an eagle's claw proper. Motto—Cœlestia Canimus (We sing of Heavenly things).

The family of Syng (spelled variously, Syng, Syng, Sing and Singe) is descended from the ancient family of Millington, one of whom, Hugh de Mulneton, was seized of lands at Millington, in Bucklow hundred, Cheshire, in the twelfth century, temp. Henry II.

According to a tradition preserved in the Philadelphia and likewise in the English branch of the family, a certain Captain Millington, being in attendance at the Royal chapel on an occasion when the clerk failed to raise the chant, stepped forth and raised it himself, in the presence of the King, who thereupon declared that the Captain's name should be "Singe," so well had he acquitted himself. With the loyalty of a faithful subject, Captain Millington thereafter called himself "Singe," and from him descends the English family of that name. Several branches settled in Ireland during the early part of the seventeenth century, and the family became one of the most famous in that kingdom, by reason of the ecclesiastical proclivities of its members and their eminence in the Anglican Church.

Information collated from the Visitation of Shropshire, 1623, and other authorities, however, indicates that the Syng family is descended from one Millington, of Cheshire, whose fourth son, born towards the close of the fifteenth century, was a chanting priest, or what was then known as a minor, or possibly a secular or lay canon, in the Collegiate Church of St. Mary Magdalen, Bridgenorth, Shropshire. It was the office of the minor canons to assist in performing the choral service, and of the secular or lay canons to keep the canonical hours. They were not subject to the profession of vows, and were therefore privileged to marry, which the regular canons, who lived in monasteries, were not.

Canon Millington was distinguished for the excellence of his voice, and was generally known by the name of Singe. He married after the Reformation, and had a son Thomas, who married a daughter to ——— Adames, of Cleeton. He eventually adopted the name of Singe permanently, as did his son, and his three grandsons, Hugo, George and William. Hugo married Anne, daughter of Hugh Cheese, of Astley Abbots, county Salop. The Visitation of Shropshire, 1623, states that he died apparently without issue, but other accounts say that he had issue, from which it may be assumed as probable that he had one or more daughters but no sons. William died without issue. George married twice. By his first wife, Dorothea, daughter of Hugo Millington, he had a son William George, who died without issue, and five daughters, viz.: Anna, wife of William Warham (or Richard Wareham of London), Barbara, wife of Robert Scarburgh Esq., Margery, wife of William (or Edmond) Morris, Elizabeth, wife first of Jacob (or James) Starr, of Atsfordton, and (second), of Thomas Turner and Johanna, wife of ——— Symonds, of Radnorshire, Wales, of the family of Symonds of Muckhall. By his second wife, Anna, daughter of Roger (or Hugo) Catestrey of Catestrey, in county Salop, he had a son Richard, an alderman and bailiff of Bridgenorth, who married Alicia, daughter of Roger Rowley, of Rowley, in Shropshire, and died in 1631, and three daughters, viz.: Margaret, wife of Richard Stringer, Frances, wife of Richard Lee, Esq., brother of Major Robert Lee, of London, and Johanna, wife of ——— Starre, of county Radnor, Wales, Esq.

Richard and Alicia (Rowley) Singe had issue:

GEORGE SYNGE; of whom presently;

JOSEPH SYNGE; of whom hereafter;

Benjamin Syngé; stated to have left no descendants;

Thomas Syngé, of whom nothing is known except that he probably left descendants;

Richard Syngé, said to have been a cavalier in 1645; d. 1671; he m., and his grandson, John "Sing," who altered the spelling of his name, had a grandson, William Sing, b. 1762, who emigrated to America some time before 1800, and lived for many years in New York State; among the descendants of Richard Syngé is Joshua Syngé, of Liverpool, Eng., Esq.;

John Syngé, of Bridgenorth, co. Salop; tenant to his brother George, in 1651; said to have left descendants;

Samuel Syngé, probably identical with Samuel "Syng," who had an Inquisition at Cahirkenles (now Cahirconlish), co. Limerick, March 2, 1688-89, and Samuel "Sing," who had an Inquisition at Brey (Bray), co. Wicklow, June 1, 1689; in which case the year of his death was 1688 (old style);

Joshua Syngé, a Roundhead in 1642; said to have left descendants;

EDWARD SYNGE, of whom hereafter;

Anna Syngé, the date of whose birth is not known.

GEORGE SYNGE, born 1594, son of Richard and Alicia (Rowley) Singe, matriculated at Balliol College, Oxford, February 16, 1609-10, B. A., 1614, M. A., 1616, subsequently became D. D. of that University, and in 1621, or previously, removed to Ireland, where he was made Rector of Donoghmore, and Vicar-General of Armagh. He also became Rector of Killary, Meath, and of Loughgilly and Mansfieldtown, Armagh, Dean of Dromore, Rector of Dromballyrainey and Seapatrick, Bishop of Cloyne, member of the King's Privy Council in Ireland temp. Charles I., and Auditor-General to the Lord-Lieutenant. In 1632 he published a spirited and scholarly rejoinder to the Irish Jesuit William Malone's reply to Bishop Ussher. He was nominated Archbishop of Tuam, but owing to the turbulent condition of the country did not remain to be consecrated, returning to England in 1647. Five of his younger children, his first wife and her mother, who had attempted to return there in 1641, were drowned while on their way. He died at Bridgenorth, and was buried at St. Mary Magdalen's in that town, August 31, 1652. He married 1st., Anne, daughter of Francis Edgeworth, Esq., of Dublin, Clerk of the Hanaper, and by her had six children, it appears, among whom were:

Francis Syngé, b. at Louth, Feb. 4, 1623-4; entered Trinity College, Dublin, 1638, subsequently L.L. D.; appointed Vicar-General of Cloyne for life; Archdeacon of Ross, and Vicar of Clondrohid, Cloyne. He was devisee of "the lands of Ballydromore, in co. Down," half of certain property in co. Armagh, the lands of Newton Grange and Haggard, in co. Louth, and farms in East Meath; he died in 1678, according to family papers; m. Edith ———, and by her had issue:

George Syngé, living 1651, when his grandfather, Bishop George Syngé, in his will, entailed on him "the lands of Ballydromore, in co. Down," and half of certain property in co. Armagh. He was probably identical with George Synge, who was admitted a free student in the Episcopal College, and became Vicar of Kilmichael and Inchigeelah, Cork, by letters patent from King Charles II., Sept. 26, 1663. He was also Vicar of Mathea, Cloyne, Prebendary and Vicar of Lisclery, Cork, and Prebendary of Inniscarra, Cloyne. He took the chapter oath, 1672, and died in the following year.

Charles Synge, b. at "com' Cornubræ," entered Trinity College, Dublin, as a pensioner, May 17, 1671. He was Vicar of Grenagh and Prebendary of Killenemer, Cloyne; and took the chapter oath Aug. 9, 1676.

Margaret Synge, m. Michael Boyle, D. D. (eldest son of Michael Boyle, Bishop of Cork, and afterwards Archbishop of Tuam), who afterwards became Bishop of Cork, Cloyne and Ross, Archbishop of Dublin, Archbishop of Armagh, and Primate of all Ireland. She lost her life by shipwreck in 1641, together with her infant daughter and other members of her family. They had issue:

Martha Boyle, drowned in 1641.

Bishop George Synge married second, (circa) 1645, Elizabeth Stevens, who was living in 1653, and by her had issue:

Richard Synge, b. 1646, Dublin; devisee of the mansion house in Bridgenorth and lands in Salop "in occupation of John Synge." He entered Trinity College, Dublin, as a pensioner, June 9, 1662, and subsequently became Prebendary of Kilbrogan, Cork, Rector and Vicar of Aghinagh, Kilcoleman and Aghabulloge, Cloyne, Vicar of Moviddy, Kilbonane, Aghlish and Kilcullie, Cork, Chancellor of Ross, and Archdeacon of Cork. He m. Elizabeth, dau. of Richard Clark, Esq., and relict of William O'Connor, Esq., and by her had issue:

Richard Synge, devisee after his mother's death of the mansion house in Bridgenorth and lands in Salop, also of a house in Bandon, then (1686) leased to his uncle, George Synge. He was probably identical with Richard Synge, who, although a literate, was ordained a Deacon, at Cork, Sept. 23, 1694, and ordained a Priest, at the same place, March 20, 1697-8.

Letitia Synge, m., June 29, 1690, Nicholas Brady, B. A., M. A., D. D., who was b. at Bandon, co. Cork, Oct. 28, 1659. Dr. Brady was one of the most distinguished prelates in Ireland, the author of a well-known version of the Psalms, which he published in conjunction with Mr. Tate, the Poet-Laureate; and Chaplain to the Princess of Wales, to King William and Queen Mary, and to Queen Anne; also to the Duke of Ormond's troop of Horse Guards. Among his descendants was the late Lord Chancellor of Ireland, Maziere Brady.

A daughter, married William Denny, A. M., who succeeded her father as Vicar of Whitechurch, or Templegall, April 4, 1688-9. He was also Vicar Choral of Cork.

George Synge, of Bandon, A. M., b. at Cork, 1649; entered Trinity College, Dublin, as a pensioner, Feb. 27, 1665, Prebendary and Vicar of Kilbrogan, Cork, Vicar of Aghabulloge and Kilcoleman or Magourney, Cloyne, Rector and Vicar of Aghinagh, Rector of Templetrine, and Rector of Agiapallin, in Meath, died 1692. He m. (first) Mary, dau. of Thomas Hewytt, Esq., of Clancoola, in 1681, and after her death, Nov. 23, 1684, he married (second) Margaret Freke, of Templebryan, in the parish of Kilbrogan, in 1687. He had issue, at least two children by his first wife, and possibly other children by his second wife, who survived him. His widow m. (second) Thomas Salmon, of Cork, Esq. The children of George and Mary (Hewytt) Synge included:

George Synge, A. B., b. circa 1683, Rector and Vicar of Myross, Ross, Vicar of Glanbarrahan or Castlehaven, Ross, Rector of Taxas, Cork, and Vicar of Kilmaccabee and Kilfaughnabeg, Ross. He m. (first), in Nov., 1706, Margaret, dau. of Rev. Thomas Meade, his predecessor as Rector of Taxas; and (second), in Oct., 1720, Eliza Roberts, of Bridgetown, sister to Rev. Randol Roberts, Vicar Choral of Cork. He died circa 1732-33.

Elizabeth Synge, b. circa 1682; m., in 1697, Thomas Daunt, Lord of the Manor of Olepen, co. Gloucester, England, by whom she had twin children, Thomas and Achilles, born in 1702.

Alice Synge, married Anthony Woodley.

A daughter, possibly, married ——— Lapp. She may have been wife of Richard Lapp, A. M., b. at Bandon, 1658, entered Trinity College, Dublin, as a pensioner, May 13, 1674, subsequently Vicar of Kinsale, Cork, Prebendary of Templebryan, and Vicar of Templequinlan, Ross, Rector and Vicar of Rathclarin, Cork, and Treasurer and Archdeacon of Cork.

JOSEPH SYNGE, of county Salop, born 1599, son of Richard and Alicia (Rowley) Singe, matriculated at Balliol College, Oxford, 1615, B. A., 1617, M. A., from St. John's College, Cambridge, 1620, incorporated 1620, Vicar of Dundalk, and Rector of Mansfieldstown, both in county Louth, Ireland. He died in 1641. He married, before October 14, 1626, the date of her father's death, Anne, only child and heiress of Sir Thomas Ashe, Knight, of St. John's Abbey, in the adjoining county of Meath, and of Dromshill, county Cavan, who was knighted by Sir George Carew, Lord Deputy, at Dublin Castle, on St. James's Day, July 25, 1603, being the Coronation Day of King James I., and who was M. P. for Trim, 1613-1615. Anne (Ashe) Syngé died in 1646.

As Dundalk was taken by a party of Cromwell's horse and dragoons in 1649, immediately after the terror-inspiring massacre at Tredagh (now Drogheda), it is probable that the younger members of this branch of the Syngé family left there to avoid the perils of the Civil War. As a result of the sackings and burnings which took place during the Cromwellian and Williamite wars all trace of them is lost, but it seems likely that they finally settled elsewhere and drifted into trade.

Rev. Joseph and Anne (Ashe) Syngé had issue at least one child:

George Syngé, of Dundalk, Esq., b. circa 1625, living in 1641, the year of his father's death. It is believed that he or another son of Rev. Joseph Syngé was grandfather of Philip Syngé, of Philadelphia, of whom hereafter. (See Philip Syngé; also Catherine Syngé, dau. of Daniel Syngé, son of Philip Syngé, Jr.).

EDWARD SYNGE, son of Richard and Alicia (Rowley) Singe, baptized at St. Mary's, Bridgenorth, Shropshire, August 16, 1614, removed to Ireland, first educated at Drogheda School, D. D. of Trinity College, Dublin, Rector of Killary, Meath, Rector of Aghadowie, Derry, minor canon of St. Patrick's, Dublin, Vicar of Luske, Dublin, Dean of Elphin, Bishop of Limerick, Ardfert and Aghadoc, Rector of Tradery, Killaloe, Bishop of Cork, Cloyne and Ross, died December 22, 1678. He married Barbara, eldest daughter of William Leatham, Esq., of New Place, county Londonderry, by Barbara, daughter of Sir John Vaughan, Knight.

Bishop Edward and Barbara (Leatham) Syngé had issue:

Samuel Syngé, b. at Innishannon, 1656; became a fellow commoner of Trinity College, Dublin, Jan. 26, 1671-2, subsequently A. M. and LL. D. He was Prebendary of Lisclery, Cork, of Inniscarra, Cloyne, of Dromdaleague, Cork, Precentor of St. Patrick, Dublin, Dean of Kildare, and Prebendary of Geashil, Kildare; also Rector of Inchigeelah and Kilmichael, Cork. He m. Margaret, sixth dau. of Michael Boyle, D. D., Lord Chancellor and Lord Primate of Ireland (whose first wife was Margaret Syngé), by his second wife, Mary, second dau. of Dermot, Lord Inchiquin, by his wife, Ellin, dau. of Sir Edward Fitzgerald, of Cloyne. Rev. Samuel Syngé d. Nov. 30, 1708, and was bur. in St. Patrick's, Dublin. He and his wife, Margaret, had issue:

Michael Syngé, Lieutenant Colonel, of Cowley, co. Middlesex, England. In his will, proved at Dublin, 1721, he mentioned "Captain John Hart, Lieutenant Governor of Maryland," with whom he had been stationed at Gibraltar when they were both serving in the Royal army. He died unmarried.

Mary Syngé, married, 1708, Richard Townsend, of Castle Townsend, co. Cork, Ireland, Esq., who was adm. of estate of his brother-in-law Lieut. Col. Michael Syngé, in 1721. They had issue—Samuel, Margareta.

Edward Syngé, A. M., edu. at Christ Church, Oxford. He appears to have held the Rectory of St. John of Jerusalem, Cork, as early as 1666, when a child, but name is given as "Sing." (Liber Munerum Hiberniae). He was subsequently Rector and Vicar of Laracor, Meath, Vicar and Prebendary of Christ Church, and of Holy Trinity, Cork, Rector of Rathclarin, Cork, Rector and Vicar of Aghabulloge, Kilmoleman and Aghinagh, Cloyne, Rector of Templetrine, Cork, Prebendary of Lackeen, and of Kilmacelenine, Cloyne, Chancellor of St. Patrick's, Vicar General of Dublin, Bishop of Raphoe, and Archbishop of Tuam. He d. July 23, 1741. He m. Anne Proud, of co. Cork, and by her had issue:

B. and A. M., and March 8, 1727, became D. D. He was admitted a freeman of Dublin by grace especial, in 1722. He was Prebendary of Stagonil, and of St. Audeon's, and minister at St. Werburgh's, Dublin, Rector of Cappagh, Provost of Tuam, Chancellor of St. Patrick's, Bishop of Clonfert and Kilmacduah, Bishop of Cloyne, Bishop of Ferns and Leighlin, and Bishop of Elphin. By her he had issue, two sons, Edward and George, who d. unm., and dau., Alicia, who m., May 30, 1758, Right Hon. Joshua Cooper, of Markree Castle, Merunry, co. Sligo. She d. 1807, leaving issue.

Nicholas Synge, D. D., Bishop of Killaloe and Kilfenora, d. Oct., 1771, and buried in Cathedral of St. Patrick, Dublin; m. Elizabeth, aunt of William Power Keating Trench, Viscount Dunlo, and dau. of Richard Trench, of Garbally, co. Galway, Esq., father of first Earl of Clancarty. By her he had issue, five daughters and a son, Edward Synge, of Syngefield, in the King's co., who was born in Sept., 1725, entered holy orders, took degree of A. M., and m., in Feb., 1753, Sophia, dau. of Samuel Hutchinson, D. D., Bishop of Killala and Achonry, and sister of Sir Francis Hutchinson, Baronet, of Castlesallah, co. Wicklow. The fourth son of Rev. Edward Synge, Robert Synge, of Kiltrough, co. Meath, Ireland, was created Baronet Aug. 12, 1801, and from him descends Sir Francis Robert Millington Synge, sixth Baronet, of Syngefield, Birr, Ireland, the present head of the family in that kingdom.

Bishop Nicholas Synge's daughters were:

John Cliffe, of Mulrankin, co. Wexford, Ireland, Esq., and had several children, of whom the eldest, John, was grandfather of Anthony Cliffe, of Bellevue, co. Wexford, Esq.

Margaret Synge.

Helena Synge, m. by license granted in 1683, Symon Purdon, of Tinnerana, co. Clare, Esq.

Mary Synge, m. by license granted in 1682, Bryan Townsend, of Castle Townsend, co. Cork, Esq.

Joane (or Barbara) Synge, m. Capt. John Folliott. Their dau., Anna Maria Folliott, of St. Finbarry's, m., in 1700, John Moore, Jr., A. M., son of John Moore, Archdeacon of Cloyne, of the ancient family of More, or O'Moore, of Leix, in Queen's co., Ireland.

From the foregoing pedigree of the Synge family as it became established in England and Ireland, it will be seen that Canon Millington, the founder of the family, was probably born circa 1490, and therefore was still a youth in 1509, when Henry VIII. ascended the throne. Burke, however, in his version of the origin of the Synge patronymic, says: "Tradition records that a member of the then much respected house, Millington, was member of the choir in the chapel-royal, temp. Elizabeth, and that the Queen desired the name might be changed, from the exceeding sweetness of his voice," but the period which Burke assigns is obviously too late.

The inference that Singe, or Synge, as a surname, arose in the reign of Henry VIII., refers solely to those Singes or Synges who were otherwise named Millington. That there were persons called Synge living in the immediately preceding reign of Henry VII. is a fair presumption, for one Isabella Synge, of St. Michael's, Queenhithe, London, was of marriageable age January 30, 1522-23, in the 13th year of Henry VIII., as on that date she was licensed to marry John Donyll. Hence her birth most likely occurred in the reign of Henry VII., (August 22, 1485, to April 21, 1509,) while the birth of her father, who was doubtless also called Synge, probably occurred in the reign of Edward IV., (1461-1483). Whether or not this Isabella Synge was otherwise Millington is yet unknown. (See Foster's "London Marriage Licenses," Index of Matches, Females, p. 1547). But that "Sing" was possibly applied as a surname long before Isabella's time is evident from an entry of a "Richard Sing," who was living apparently in the year 1278. (See "Hist. et Cart. Monasterii S. Petri, Gloucesteriæ," vol. i. p. 169.) Richard, however, may have been a singer, like the progenitor of the later Singes, and the word "Sing" may have been placed after his Christian name, to indicate his occupation, as an abbreviation of "singer."

And yet, nevertheless, there may have been no Synges or Sings until the time of Henry VIII.,—the earlier Isabella's, and Richard's, surnames of Synge and Sing, respectively, possibly being a mistake for Lyng, or Ling. An instance of such an error is to be found in an early seventeenth century manuscript in the British Museum, now quoted as "Ad. Ms. 5224, f. 31. b." This is a pedigree of a family therein named "Synge," of county Norfolk, descended from one Richard "Synge," of Cornwall, the arms of which show that this so-called "Synge" family was really the family of "Lyng," of Cornwall. (See Blomefield's "History of Norfolk," 1805-9, which quotes several instances of Lyng or Lyng, the name of Synge or its variants not being mentioned.)

PHILIP SYNG, of Philadelphia, gentleman and goldsmith, was born, probably in Ireland, in the year 1676. He was a descendant of one of the nine sons of Richard and Alicia (Rowley) Singe, of Bridgenorth, Shropshire, England, most of whom appear to have vibrated between England and Ireland, having children born in each country, thus spreading the family records over two kingdoms. He emigrated to America, sailing from Bristol, England, and arrived in Philadelphia, July 14, 1714, with his first wife, Abigail Murdock, and their three sons, Philip, Daniel and John.

It is believed that Philip Syng was a grandson of George Synge of Dundalk, Ireland, or of another son of Rev. Joseph Synge, Vicar of Dundalk, and Rector of Mansfieldstown. What gives rise to this supposition is the fact that while the name "Philip" is not found among the Synges prior to Rev. Joseph Synge's marriage with Anne Ashe, who was of county Meath, it is a Syng name after that event. Now, Philip was an Ashe name, as one Philip "Ash" was an Ensign in Colonel Sir Howard Oxburgh's Infantry, in King James the Second's Irish Army, in 1689. The Colonel was of the King's county, and his regiment was probably raised there and in the adjoining counties, of which Meath was one. Moreover, Philip Syng, son of Philip Syng, was careful to call one of his sons Joseph, and two of his daughters Ann, perhaps because the first Joseph and Anne were his ancestors; and his account-books show that there was a "Laurance Ash" to whom he lent money apparently without demanding a return, hence the "loan" seems like a kinsman's gift.

George Syng, of Dundalk, if he entered trade, as has been supposed, may have found it more convenient to omit the final "e" in his surname. As he was born circa 1625, it is most likely that he married before 1650, if he left descendants, and in that event his children were of marriageable age about 1670. It is possible that a certain George "Syng," who was doubtless married about this time, whose wife's Christian name was Sarah, was his son, and the father of Philip Syng, of Philadelphia, born 1676. This George and Sarah "Syng" had a daughter Elizabeth, who was christened May 18, 1673, at Christ Church, New Gate Street, London; and they may also have been the parents of another George "Syng" who appears to have been admitted to the guild of the Dublin goldsmiths in 1705, and who is marked as having died in 1707. The name "Syng" has not been found in any other known extant registers of the English or Irish goldsmiths, but the records of the London Goldsmiths' Company contain some mention of a Hannah "Sing" under date of August, 1690, and of a Joseph "Sing" who was free of the Company in 1734. As will be seen hereafter, all these names—to wit, George, Sarah, Elizabeth, Hannah and Joseph—are found among the grandchildren of Philip Syng of Philadelphia.

It may be significant that Philip Syng emigrated to America later in the same year (1714) in the spring of which His Excellency John Hart, Esq., Governor of the Province of Maryland, came, and that he ultimately settled, like him, in Annapolis, his residence in Philadelphia having been only temporary. As will be recalled, this is the same John Hart who was a Captain in the Royal Army and mentioned in the will of Lieutenant-Colonel Michael Syng, with whom he had been stationed at Gibraltar.

The only known reference to Philip Syng's place of residence in Philadelphia occurs in an advertisement in The American Weekly Mercury, of May 12, 1720, from which it appears that Richard Warder, tobacco pipe maker, was then "living under the same Roof with Philip Syng Gold Smith, near the Market Place." In the same newspaper (No. 205, from Nov. 14 to Nov. 21, 1723,) there is a representation of a "V" with "WA" immediately beneath it, and "a Pistole Reward" is offered by Samuel Kirk of Brandy-Wine Ferry, in New Castle County, for "a Silver Pint (or Niperkin) Marked as in the Margent, the W and A being joyned) made by Philip Syng, of Philadelphia."

In April, or early in May, 1722, Philip Syng had surveyed by his order and to his use two hundred acres of land upon the west bank of the Susquehanna river, at a place known as "the Mine." This tract was within the bounds of Pennsylvania, but it was claimed by "Philip Syng & Company" under a Maryland title. A complaint having been made by Robert Baker and James McClean before Francis Worley, Esq., a Justice of the Peace for Chester county, Syng was committed into the custody of the Sheriff of Philadelphia by the warrant of Sir William Keith, Baronet, the Governor, who had met Syng at Pattison's on April 4 and threatened to have him punished if he presumed to make any survey of the land in question, which had been lately surveyed by Governor Keith. Syng was brought before the Provincial Council, for examination, May 28, 1722. From the minutes of the Council it appears that "Richard Hill, Esqr., one of the Judges of the Supreme Court, being present, it was moved that he should withdraw & Commit the said Philip Syng into the Sheriff's Custody, in order to be prosecuted according to Law, which he did accordingly;" but as Syng had taken up the land under the impression that it rightfully belonged to Maryland, and his error of procedure was therefore not an intentional offense against the Pennsylvania authorities, he was finally freed from blame, and the matter was dropped. (See "Calvert Papers," in possession of Maryland Historical Society).

Philip Syng subsequently removed to Annapolis, Maryland, where he died May 18, 1739, aged sixty-three years. He married (first) probably in the north of Ireland, circa 1702, Abigail Murdock, who died at Philadelphia, November 5, 1714; (second) in September, 1724, Hannah, daughter of Joseph Whilden, the elder, of Cape May, New Jersey, and widow of Thomas Leamyng, of the same place; and (third) at St. Anne's Church, Annapolis, Maryland, February 26, 1733-4, Susana, widow of ——— Price; she died February 23, 1738-9. Philip Syng had children by his first wife only. He died intestate, one-half of his estate going to his eldest son Philip Syng, Jr., one-quarter to his second son Daniel Syng, and the remaining quarter to his grandson Philip Syng, only child of his youngest son, John Syng, deceased.

Issue of Philip and Abigail (Murdock) Syng:

PHILIP SYNG, JR., of Philadelphia, b. Sept. 29, 1703; of whom hereafter.

Daniel Syng, of Lancaster, Pa., Esq., goldsmith, one of the original vestrymen of St. James's Church, in that town. Mr. Syng was b. 1713 or 1714. He m. at Christ Church, Phila., Aug. 10, 1733, Mary, dau. of George Gray, of Gray's Ferry, Esq., and sister of George Gray, of Witby Hall, near Phila., Esq., who became a member of Penn. Assembly in 1772, and speaker of that body in 1783, was author of the "Treason Resolutions," 1775, delegate to Provincial Conference of July 15, 1774, member of Provincial Convention of Jan. 23, 1775, of the Committee of Safety from June 30, 1775, to July 26, 1776, of the Council of Safety, July 24, 1776, to March 13, 1777, and of Penn. Board of War during its existence in 1777—of which he was chairman for a time—a delegate to the Convention to ratify the Federal Constitution in 1787, and a member of the Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention of 1789-90. Daniel Syng resided for a time in Philadelphia; he d. at Lancaster, in Feb., 1745-6, aged 32 years. His will, dated January 30, 1745, was proved at Phila., March 19, following. His widow married (second), at Christ Church, Phila., July 9, 1747, Thomas James, of Phila.

Daniel and Mary (Gray) Syng had issue:

Mary Syng, b. 24th, christened 29th Sept., 1734, at Christ Church, Phila., m. at Gloria Dei (Old Swedes') Church, Phila., Jan. 30, 1755, John Withy (sometimes Withey), doubtless the same John Withy who was master of sloop "Dolphin," to which a Mediterranean pass was issued by the Province of Penn., Jan. 5, 1754. On Aug. 28, 1764, he petitioned the Justices of the Court of General Quarter Sessions for the county of Chester, to be recommended to the Governor of the province to be granted a license to keep a public house of entertainment at the Blue Anchor Tavern, in Chester, previously kept by John Hanly for many years, which petition was allowed, and license granted. Letters of administration on his estate were granted to his widow, Mrs. Mary Withy, and George Gray, Oct. 22, 1765. The inventory amounted to £728.16.0. John Hill Martin, Esq., says, in his "History of Chester" (p. 260): "Before and during the Revolution, Mrs. Mary Withey kept the 'Columbia Hotel.' It is said to have been, in her life-time, the best kept tavern in America. She was the widow of an English officer, James Withey (sic), and had a pension from the British government of $60 a year. She became wealthy, and died January 7, 1810, in her 76th year." Washington, in his diary, speaks of having dined at Mrs. Withy's on Sunday, May 13, 1787.

Elizabeth Syng, buried 6th mo. (Aug.) 24, 1739, in Friends' ground (Race Street Monthly Meeting), Phila.

Susanna Syng, m. (first) at St. Paul's Church, Phila., by Rev. William McClenachan, April 23, 1760, John McKilvie; (second), at same church, April 16, 1764, Thomas Frie (or Fry). Letters of administration on estates of Joseph James and Susanna Fry (late Syng), deceased, were granted at Phila., June 24, 1801, to James Withy, of Delaware co.

George Syng, b. 1742 or 1743; m. at Christ Church, Phila., July 26, 1766, Hannah Hance, who was living in 1791, but deceased before June 10, 1801. He was a private in the Chester Company of the Associators and Militia of the county of Chester in 1781-82, and his name appears in the tax lists of Chester from 1766 to 1785. Mr. Syng d. at Providence, Delaware co., Pa., May 19, 1815, in the 73d year of his age. (Another George Syng m. at St. Michael's and Zion Church (German Lutheran), Phila., March 24, 1768, by license granted same day, Elizabeth Bayne; he was probably a member of a German family named "Sing," as the names of many "Sings" are to be found in records of St. Michael's and Zion Church, and of First Reformed Church, Philadelphia, about the same time; his name is usually given as "Georg Sing" in the records of St. Michael's and Zion Church, from which it appears that he and his wife, Elizabeth, had daughters Lidia, baptized January 4, 1769, age 4 weeks, and Anna Maria, born 12th June, and baptized 29th July, 1770, buried Sept. 3, 1771). George and Hannah (Hance) Syng had issue:

Elizabeth Syng, probably the Elizabeth Syng who m. at Gloria Dei (Old Swedes') Church, Phila., Aug. 20, 1791, Peter Stimbel, ceremony performed by the Rector, Rev. Nicholas Collin, D. D. "Evidence present: Mordechay Thomson, Sarah Bickerton. All from Trenton in New Jersey."

Susanna Syng.

Mary Syng.

A child, posthumous to Daniel Syng, not named but provided for in his will; probably Catherine Syng, who m. at St. James's Church, Lancaster, Pa., Aug. 21, 1775, Dr. Henry Stuber. Their names are in list of subscribers to Lancaster Assembly Ball for year 1780. Members of a family named Stuber were mayors and other officers of Dundalk, Ireland, in the seventeenth century, when George Syng, son of Rev. Joseph and Anne (Asbe) Syng, lived there.

John Syng, m. at Christ Church, Phila., Sept. 16, 1736, Deborah Harper, who was christened, at Christ Church, Phila., Feb. 20, 1715, aged 6 weeks, dau. of John and Deborah (Paver) Harper. He d. intestate at Annapolis, Md., Nov. 21, 1738. John and Deborah (Harper) Syng had issue, an only child:

Philip Syng, christened at Christ Church, Phila., July 7, 1737, aged one month. He inherited one-fourth part of estate of his grandfather, Philip Syng, and Oct. 22, 1746, on his petition through his next friend, William Reynolds, the Orphans' Court of Philadelphia county appointed Thomas Williams his guardian. He was a private in Phila. City Militia, and his name appears in list of soldiers who received "depreciation pay." Letters of administration on his estate granted at Phila., Jan. 20, 1792, to Charles Syng. It is probable that Philip Syng married and was father of:

Charles Syng, m. Margaret ——. He was commissioned, June 25, 1777, Captain of 1st Company of 2nd Reg. of Foot, of Phila., Col. Sharpe Delaney, in service of U. S. In 1791 he was an officer of the customs, at 225 Mulberry street, and in 1793, a weighmaster, at 120 High street. On Sept. 7, 1772, he had a survey of 300 acres of land in Northumberland co., Pa. He also owned considerable real estate in Lancaster co., Pa., and in Phila. Some of this property he received by deed from Thomas Moore and Sarah, his wife, only dau. and heiress at law of Samuel Emlen, by Rachel, his wife, who was a daughter of William Hudson, the elder; this he and his wife, Margaret, conveyed to Thomas Clark, April 24, 1788. In the yellow fever pestilence of 1793 both Charles Syng and his wife died, and were buried in German Lutheran ground. Letters of administration on his estate were granted at Phila., Nov. 21, 1793, to Henry Graff and Charles Bitterson.

Peter Syng (sometimes Lyng) was possibly another son. He was "Ships' Husband" to the Penna. flotilla in the Revolution. On June 25, 1773, he had a survey of 200 acres of land in Bedford co., Pa.

It is a curious coincidence that among the residents of Lancaster, Pennsylvania, at the present time, is Daniel "Sing." He is a son of Adam Sing, who came to America from Germany in 1829.

PHILIP SYNG, JR., of Philadelphia, gentleman and goldsmith, was born in Ireland, September 29, 1703, and came to Philadelphia from Bristol, England, when eleven years of age, with his parents, Philip and Abigail (Murdock) Syng, and his brothers, Daniel and John Syng.

Mr. Syng embarked for London in the ship "John," Captain Thomas Glentworth, November 28, 1725. As he was then twenty-two years of age, it is not unlikely that his visit to the old country was undertaken in order to dispose of property there which he may have inherited upon attaining his majority. He returned to Philadelphia, June 20, 1726, in the "Yorkshire Grey," Captain James Blythe. Benjamin Franklin also came back to Philadelphia about the same time, having been in London during the preceding eighteen months, vainly seeking to obtain financial assistance wherewith to establish himself in the trade of a printer, and it is possible that his acquaintanceship with Philip Syng, Jr.—with whom he was afterwards upon terms of the most intimate friendship,—began at that time. In after years Mr. Syng was one of the gentlemen who, upon the invitation of Franklin, was present at the famous "saw-dust pudding" party, an amusing account of which is given in Watson's "Annals of Philadelphia and Pennsylvania in the Olden Time" (vol. i., p. 532).

Philip Syng, Jr., was a member of Franklin's "Junto," and when Franklin founded The Library Company of Philadelphia, which was promoted by the "Junto," Mr. Syng was named a director in its original deed or instrument, dated July 1, 1731, and was elected to that office by the fifty contributors at their first meeting. He was a member of the first Masonic Lodge in America, St. John's Lodge, of Philadelphia, constituted in 1727 (of which Franklin was also a member), paying his entrance fee of £5 on October 7, 1734, and serving as Junior Warden in 1737, with Henry Pratt. At a Grand Lodge held for the Province of Pennsylvania at the Indian King tavern, Philadelphia, June 25, 1741, Philip Syng, Jr., was chosen Grand Master for the Masonic year ensuing; and in 1749 he was appointed Junior Grand Warden by Franklin, who was then Provincial Grand Master of Pennsylvania. On November 13 of the same year Mr. Syng became one of the original Trustees (of whom Franklin was President), of The Public Academy in the city of Philadelphia, which afterwards grew into The University of Pennsylvania, serving until 1773. The electrical machine which Franklin used in his early experiments while mastering the theory and practice of electrical science, and which gave rise to his investigation of the subject, was a contrivance of Mr. Syng, who made experiments with it which he communicated to Franklin in 1747. Mr. Syng was also associated with Franklin as one of the founders of The American Philosophical Society, of which Governor John Penn was the Patron, and he was elected its first Treasurer, February 9, 1768.

When the noted fishing club called "The Colony in Schuylkill" was founded, May 1, 1732, Philip Syng, Jr.'s name was the eleventh on the roll of the original members. Mr. Syng was also an original member of the Union Fire Company, founded by Franklin and four of his friends in 1732, and he was associated with Franklin as one of the twelve original directors of The Philadelphia Contributionship for the Insurance of Houses from Loss by Fire, or the "Hand-in-Hand," as it was familiarly called, organized April 13, 1752. The "Association Battery" of 1748 was promoted by Mr. Syng. He was a vestryman of Christ Church, from 1747 to 1749; a warden of the city in 1753; Treasurer of the city from 1759 to 1769; Provincial Commissioner of Appeals for Philadelphia county, in 1765, under Governor John Penn, in which year he signed the Non-Importation Resolutions; and a contributor to The Pennsylvania Hospital, of which the most active promoter was Franklin. In 1753 he made the beautiful silver ink-stand purchased for the use of the Provincial Assembly of Pennsylvania for £25.16.0, used at the signing of the Declaration of Independence, and of the Constitution of the United States, which is now on exhibition in Independence Hall.

Philip Syng, Jr., married, at Christ Church, February 5, 1729-30, Elizabeth Warner, born January 29, 1714-15, christened at Christ Church, April 13, 1732, when eighteen years of age. She was a daughter of Swen and Esther (Warner) Warner, and a granddaughter of William Warner of Red Hook, or Lower Red Bank, Gloucester county, New Jersey, and his wife Christian (or Christina), who was probably a daughter of Svänn Skuuta (Lieutenant Sven Schute), who received from Queen Christina of Sweden, August 20, 1653, the first grant of lands now forming part of the city of Philadelphia. Mrs. Syng was also a granddaughter of John and Anne (Campden) Warner, of Blockley Township, Pennsylvania, and a great-granddaughter of William Warner, who settled on the west bank of the Schuylkill river within the present limits of Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, in the locality now known as "Eaglesfield," several years before William Penn came to Pennsylvania.

Mr. Syng died May 8, 1789, aged 85 years and 7 months, and was buried in Christ Church ground (Arch Street), Philadelphia; his wife, whom he had survived, was also buried there, October 3, 1786. Mr. Syng died intestate, seized of divers lands and tenements in the city and county of Philadelphia, consisting of a four-story brick house and a lot on the west side of Front street, between High and Chestnut streets; a three-story brick house and a lot fronting on Plumb and Front streets, between Spruce and Pine streets; a three-story brick house occupied by his wife's nephew, Joseph Warner, and lot, on the south side of Chestnut street, between Front and Second streets; a two-story brick house occupied by his son-in-law, Edmund Physick, and lot, on the north side of Mulberry street, between Front and Second streets; and two acres of land on the north side of Hickory Lane. He also had a country place, referred to as, perhaps, the place of his death; this was called "Prince of Wales Farm," and was situated near the present Ardmore station of the Pennsylvania railroad. Another country place, marked on Scull and Heap's Map of Philadelphia and Parts Adjacent, 1750, was a plantation of one hundred acres in extent, which John Harper, of Cole Brook Dale Township, and his wife Sarah, conveyed by deed dated June 6, 1749, to Philip Syng, for a consideration of £200, which tract Philip Syng and his wife Elizabeth conveyed by deed dated December 17, 1762, to Jacob Niss, of Oxford township, for a consideration of £450.

Philip Syng, Jr., had eighteen children, all born singly, the first when his wife was sixteen years of age, the last when she was in her forty-sixth year, but of these there were still living at the time of his death none of his sons and only five of his daughters: Abigail, wife of Edmund Physick; Esther, widow of Tobias Rudolph; Hannah, unmarried; Mary, wife of Colonel Donaldson Yeates; and Christiana, unmarried. Mr. Syng was also survived by two grandchildren, James Murray and Abigail Murray, the only surviving children of his deceased daughter Elizabeth, who married John Murray. In a petition of his daughters, Esther Rudolph and Hannah Syng, to the Orphans' Court of Philadelphia county, April 21, 1794, it is recited that Christiana Syng died since the death of her father, having left a will giving all her real estate to her sister Hannah Syng, and that Abigail, who married Edmund Physick, was then also deceased, leaving four children, who claimed, in right of their mother, a child's share in the estate of their grandfather; these were Henry White Physick, Elizabeth, wife of Leonard Dorsey, Abigail Physick, unmarried, and Philip Syng Physick.

ABIGAIL SYNG, eldest child of Philip and Elizabeth (Warner) Syng, was born in Philadelphia, November 28, 1730; christened at Christ Church, April 16, 1732; married, by license dated February 2, 1758, Edmund Physick, Esq., Receiver-General and Keeper of the Great Seal of the Province of Pennsylvania, and Agent for the Honorable the Proprietary Family. Mr. Physick was of English birth, being descended from the Physwicks (otherwise Fishwicks) of the eastern parts of the Kingdom, whose origin appears to have been Fishwick, in county Lancaster. He was a trusted friend of the Proprietary Family, tried and proved by the troublous times of the Revolution. Besides holding the above-mentioned offices, he was a vestryman of Christ Church and a member of the American Philosophical Society. As a Special Commissioner from the Penns he negotiated with their colonists, and, so important was his testimony, the Royal Award to the Penns, for their losses in the Revolution, was not made until after he appeared before the Commissioners in London, which he did by mutual request. He died at Philadelphia, June 7, 1804, aged 78 years, and was buried in Friends' ground (Arch Street), by his special wish, by the side of his wife, who had become a member of the Society of Friends, and had been buried there April 10, 1792. By her he left the following children:

Henry White Physick, of Octorara, Cecil co., Md., Esq., member of State Assembly from said co. at session of Nov., 1810, and another; declined further nomination. Mr. Physick was b. at Philadelphia, Nov. 26, 1758; m. at St. Mary-le-bone Church, Westminster, London, Eng., Dec. 11, 1785, Adriana Haynes, b. in Island of St. Eustatius, West Indies, Nov. 11, 1768, dau. of George Haynes, by his first wife, whose maiden name was Johanna Catherine Ravené. Mr. Physick ultimately removed to Wilmington, Delaware, where he d. Nov. 22, 1821 (will there registered). His widow and her family returned to Md. She d. at her place, called Mt. Ararat, above the Susquehanna river, near Port Deposit, Cecil co., Jan. 28, 1854, in her 86th year. Mrs. Physick's father, George Haynes, was a gentleman well known during the eighteenth century in England, the West Indies and America, while in Ireland, Holland and France he was not a stranger. He was born in London, went to the West Indies in 1765, m. Miss Ravené between that year and 1768, and lived in the Island of St. Eustatius and in America until 1784, when he returned to England, resided there for a time, visited Ireland and the Continent, and finally settled permanently in Wales. With Robert Morris and others Mr. Haynes made the subscription that started The Bank of North America, in Philadelphia; and Delaware was indebted to him for donating and setting up the first mile-stones erected along the roads of that State. His country seat for a number of years was Moncton Park (or Eden Park), during late years the residence of James Harrison Wilson, Major General, U. S. V. Mr. Haynes founded the Cambrian Pottery, at Swansea, Glamorganshire, Wales, circa 1788, which afterwards came into possession of the Dillwyns. Henry White and Adriana (Haynes) Physick had issue, as follows:

JOSHUA BUNTING, of Philadelphia, sixth child and third son of Philip Syng and Elizabeth (Tomkins) Bunting, was born December 15, 1797. He married, June 6, 1831, Henrietta Barron Wade, born 1802, who died in Philadelphia, July 15, 1883, daughter of Benjamin Wade, son of Major Nehemiah Wade, of Elizabethtown, New Jersey. Benjamin Wade married, May 24, 1801, Mary Crowell, born in New York, in 1781, died in Philadelphia, November 13, 1847, daughter of Captain Thomas Crowell, born in Woodbridge, New Jersey, February 14, 1750, died in Philadelphia, December 6, 1841. Captain Crowell commanded a vessel of war during the early part of the Revolution. In 1778 he married Esther Barron, born 1761, died 1871. They resided in New York until 1784, when they removed to Elizabethtown, New Jersey, where they remained until 1813, when they removed to Philadelphia. Captain Crowell was a son of Thomas Crowell, born in Woodbridge, New Jersey, March 22, 1726, who married, in 1745, Christianna Presgrove (born circa 1730, died June 4, 1790), removed to London, England, during the Revolution, and was buried there, at St. James's Church, Westminster, December 21, 1799. He was a son of Edward Crowell, Esq., born October 17, 1680, died October 20, 1756, by his first wife Sarah (maiden name Veal), whom he married October 5, 1707. Edward Crowell, Esq., was town clerk of Woodbridge, New Jersey, for twenty-five years, signed the charter of that town in 1756, and was one of the original trustees of the Presbyterian Church there. He was a son of one of two brothers named Crowell or Cromwell who were among the early settlers of Woodbridge. According to the late John Fanning Watson, the Annalist of Philadelphia (who married Phoebe Barron Crowell), the family lineally descended from Oliver Cromwell, but recent investigations show that this descent may have been collateral rather than lineal; if the latter, the descent was probably through a grandson of Henry Cromwell, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. There is a tradition to the effect that the two brothers named Crowell or Cromwell who settled in Woodbridge were informed, while on their way to America, by the Captain of the vessel on which they took passage, of the unpopularity of the name Cromwell among the colonists, and that they resolved to part with the "m," so as to make a new family name. The act of change was done on board the vessel, with appropriate ceremonies. The family pedigree on vellum, recording these facts, was in the possession of some of the descendants in North Carolina, in an ornamental chest with other valuables, in 1781, when it was seized and carried off by a party of Tarleton's Legion. The record was again made up by the recollection of the family, and is still preserved among them. Some of the descendants settled in Cape May, New Jersey, at an early period, others in Halifax, North Carolina.

Mrs. Esther (Barron) Crowell, wife of Captain Thomas Crowell above, was a daughter of Ellis Barron, born 1730, who married, in 1760, Sarah Stone, born 1733, daughter of Samuel and Rebecca Stone, of Woodbridge. Ellis Barron was a son of Samuel Barron, by his first wife, whose name was Frazier before her marriage to him; she died in 1752. He was a son of Elizeus Barron, born 1670, by his second wife Deborah, daughter of Ephraim and Dorcas (Smith) Andrews of Woodbridge. Elizeus Barron was a son of John Barron, born in Waterford, Ireland, circa 1638, son of Ellis Barron, born in Ireland, probably in Waterford, circa 1600, who married in Ireland, circa 1625, Grace ———, and emigrated to America circa 1640, settling in Watertown, Massachusetts, circa 1641. The last named Ellis Barron was a member of the family of Palatine Barrons of Burnchurch, county Waterford, Ireland, whose patronymic was originally Fitzgerald. Joshua Bunting died in Philadelphia, March 31, 1850.

MARY SYNG, fifteenth child and eighth daughter of Philip and Elizabeth (Warner) Syng, was born in Philadelphia, May 15, 1752, and christened May 24, 1755. She married Colonel Donaldson Yeates, of Kent county, Maryland, who was born near New-Castle-on-Delaware, February 12, 1729-30. Colonel Yeates obtained a warrant of survey for land in New Castle county, Delaware, in 1759, and in 1766 was engaged in business near Christiana Bridge, removing to Maryland and settling in Kent county the following year. He inherited from his brother, David Yeates, land in New Castle county, Delaware (which had been purchased by the latter from his kinsman, John Inglis), known as "Green's Manor," which he parted with in 1783, at which time he resided in Cecil county, Maryland. He was commissioned a colonel of militia of Maryland, was a delegate to the Constitutional Convention of that State which ratified the Constitution of the United States, April 28, 1788, and a Presidential Elector in 1793. Colonel Yeates died in Kent county, November 16, 1796. Mrs. Yeates survived him, dying there on Christmas Day, 1809. They were both buried in Shrewsbury Churchyard, in the family lot of their relatives, the Wethereds.

Colonel Donaldson Yeates was a son of George Yeates, born April 5, 1695 (letters of administration on whose estate were granted July 23, 1747), by his wife Mary, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Rodenburg) Donaldson. George Yeates was a son of Jasper Yeates, who was born in Yorkshire, England, and died in Chester, Pennsylvania (will proved February 6, 1718-19), by his second wife, Catherine, born in Sweden, January 26, 1671, daughter of James Sandelands, born circa 1636, of Upland (afterwards Chester), Pennsylvania, who died there April 12, 1692, who married Annika Kyn (or Anna Keen), who was buried October 5, 1704, daughter of Jöran Kyn, the founder of Upland. Jöran Kyn was born in Sweden, circa 1620, and came to America in 1642, in the ship "Fama," in company with John Printz, Governor of New Sweden.

Issue of Colonel Donaldson and Mary (Syng) Yeates:

George Yeates, b. May 11, 1780; resided in Baltimore, Md., for a time; died in Aux Cayes, West Indies, Feb. 2, 1819; unm. Mr. Yeates's remains were taken to Shrewsbury, Kent. co., Md., and bur. there in the P. E. Churchyard, by the side of his brothers, June 21, 1819; Legislature, sessions of 1706-07; a distinguished and zealous member of the Episcopal Church, and a vestryman of Shrewsbury Parish, giving to that parish, in 1709-10, two acres of land, the ground upon which the church edifice stands. DRINKER FAMILY.

PHILIP DRINKER, of Exeter, England, born 1596, American progenitor of the Drinker family, with his wife Elizabeth (aged thirty-two), and sons, Edward (aged thirteen), and John (aged eight), came to Massachusetts in July, 1635, in the ship, "Abigail," Robert Hackwell, master. He settled in Charlestown, Massachusetts, and kept the first ferry over the Mystick river, 1640, and died there, June 23, 1647.

EDWARD DRINKER, eldest son of Philip and Elizabeth Drinker, born 1622, died 1700, was, like his father, a potter by trade. He was constable of Charlestown, 1652, but later removed to Boston and was one of the founders of the First Baptist Church of that city in 1665. He served as a lieutenant in Captain Turner's company, during King Philip's war; became a preacher of the Baptist church and was persecuted for his faith by the intolerant Puritans. He was twice married, but seems to have had no children; his will, made in 1696, left his estate to his wife Mary, and his brother John, with remainder over to his niece Mary, wife of Benjamin Emmons. His first wife, Hannah, died May 14, 1693, and he married (second) Mary Emmons; the "niece" mentioned in his will being her brother's daughter.

JOHN DRINKER, younger son of Philip and Elizabeth Drinker, born in Exeter, England, 1627, crossed the ocean with his parents in the ship, "Abigail," at age of eight years, and was reared in Charlestown, Massachusetts. Little is known of his life further than that he was living at the date of his brother's will in 1696, and was a legatee thereunder, and that his wife's name was Elizabeth. Neither have we the date of his death or that of his wife.

Issue of John and Elizabeth Drinker:

JOHN DRINKER, b. March 31, 1653; m. Ruth Balch; of whom presently;

Elizabeth Drinker, b. Aug. 28, 1654;

Mary Drinker, b. Oct. 16, 1655;

Sarah Drinker, b. Feb. 4, 1657;

Philip Drinker, b. May 28, 1659;

A child, b. Sept. 24, 1662; d. unnamed.

JOHN DRINKER, eldest child of John and Elizabeth Drinker, born March 31, 1653, was for some years a ship carpenter in Beverly, Massachusetts, and later removed to Philadelphia. He left Beverly, Massachusetts, some time subsequent to 1670, and came to the shores of the Delaware, then inhabited by Indians and a few Swedes. At a spot that is now designated as Second and Walnut streets, he erected a cabin that was the primitive house of Philadelphia. He married Ruth, born at Beverly, Massachusetts, about 1665 (baptized April 10, 1670), daughter of Benjamin Balch, by his wife, Sarah, daughter of Thomas Gardiner, first Governor of Cape Ann Colony, who died at Salem, Massachusetts, December 29, 1674. Benjamin Balch, born in the latter part of the year 1628, or early in 1629, was the first child born in the Massachusetts Bay Colony. John Balch, grandfather of Ruth, wife of John Drinker, came from Somersetshire, England, with Capt. Robert Georges, 1623, and died on his plantation at Salem, in May or June, 1648. He and his wife Margery were enrolled among the original members of Salem Congregational Church, the first church fully formed and organized in America.

Issue of John and Ruth (Balch) Drinker:

JOSEPH DRINKER, b. circa 1678; m., July 9, 1708, Mary Janney; d. Aug. 17, 1742; of whom presently;

Edward Drinker, b. Dec. 24, 1680;

John Drinker, lost at sea, a young man, unm.

JOSEPH DRINKER, eldest son of John and Ruth (Balch) Drinker, was reared in the city of Philadelphia, and became a member of the Society of Friends. He was a master house carpenter, and resided for some years at the southwest corner of Walnut and Second streets, and later in a two-story brick dwelling, east side of Second street, about midway between Elfreth's alley and Arch street, where he died August 17, 1742, leaving a comfortable estate, which included the house at Walnut and Second streets, where his grandson, Daniel Drinker, later resided for many years.

Joseph Drinker married, September 9, 1708, Mary, born at Quarry Bank, near Stockport, Cheshire, England, January 1, 1680-1, daughter of Henry Janney. In 1698 her parents, Henry and Barbara (Baguley) Janney, having died, the three daughters, and only surviving children, Elizabeth, Mary and Tabitha, came to Pennsylvania to be under the care of their uncle, Thomas Janney, of Bucks county, Pennsylvania, a noted Quaker preacher. Elizabeth, eldest, born November 7, 1677, married, 1710, Pentecost Teague, of Philadelphia, a prominent Friend and member of the Colonial Assembly, and of the Common Council of Philadelphia at its organization in 1701. Tabitha, born September 29, 1687, married, 1709, William Fisher, and was the mother of William Fisher, Mayor of Philadelphia in 1773. Mary (Janney) Drinker survived her husband, Joseph Drinker, over twenty years, dying March 17, 1764, in eighty-fourth year.

Issue of Joseph and Mary (Janney) Drinker:

HENRY DRINKER, b. 1709; d. July 1, 1746; m., Nov. 26, 1731, Mary Gottier; of whom presently;

Tabitha Drinker, m. (first), 1742, ——— Andrews; (second) ——— Miers.

HENRY DRINKER, eldest son of Joseph and Mary (Janney) Drinker, born in Philadelphia, 1709, was a scrivener by profession and lived in Philadelphia. He married, November 26, 1731, before a magistrate of Burlington county, New Jersey, and without the consent of his parents or of the Society of Friends, of which he was a birthright member, Mary Gottier. He died July 1, 1746, but four years after his father.

Issue of Henry and Mary (Gottier) Drinker:

John Drinker, b. 1733; d. July 27, 1800; m., Feb. 27, 1756, Rachel Reynear;

HENRY DRINKER, b. Feb. 21, 1734-5; d. June 26, 1809; m. (first), May 4, 1757, Ann Swett; (second), Jan. 13, 1761, Elizabeth Sandwith; of whom presently;

Elizabeth Mary Drinker, m. (first), 1760, John De Liesseline; (second) ——— Dupre.

HENRY DRINKER, second son of Henry and Mary (Gottier) Drinker, born in Philadelphia, February 21, 1734 (o. s.), was apprenticed in 1744 at the age of ten years to George James, a prominent Philadelphia merchant; later he formed a partnership with Abel James, son of his master, in the shipping and importing business, under the firm name of James & Drinker, considered one of the principal firms of importers of Philadelphia in the days of her commercial supremacy, prior to the Revolution. On September 3, 1759, Henry Drinker embarked for Great Britain, in one of the vessels of his firm, on a business trip, and returned June 21, 1760, during which time he kept a journal, giving an interesting account of the incidents of his voyage, places visited and persons he met, which is still in possession of his descendants. After the dissolution of the firm of James & Drinker, Henry Drinker engaged extensively in the iron business and held large interests in iron works at Atsiunc, now Atsion, New Jersey, and elsewhere.

On October 27, 1763, he was elected a member of Board of Overseers of Public School of Philadelphia, to succeed Anthony Morris, and in 1765 was one of the Commissioners to pave and clean the streets of Philadelphia. He was a prominent member of the Society of Friends, and was among the non-combatants, arrested and exiled to Virginia in 1777, on suspicion of entertaining opinions inimical to the cause of liberty, upon their refusing to take the test oath and sign a parole binding them not to depart from their houses, etc. He spent eight months in enforced exile from his native city, until the British having evacuated the city, he, with his fellow exiles, was discharged and allowed to return to his home, never having been brought to trial or confronted by his accuser.

Henry Drinker took a deep interest in scientific research, and was a member of the American Philosophical Society. He was elected to the Common Council of Philadelphia, April 15, 1789, the only public office he is known to have filled.

In 1790 with Joseph Smith and others, he participated in the organization of the Union Company, who purchased 24,000 acres of land in Cumberland county, New Jersey, including the present site of Millville, where they constructed a dam and erected mills on an extensive scale, but in 1795 sold out to other individuals, who later laid out the present town of Millville. Henry Drinker also made improvements at Stockport, Wayne county, Pennsylvania, and at other places in Pennsylvania. He invested largely in unimproved lands in Pennsylvania, and spent large sums in opening roads and turnpikes through the same, and at his death, 1809, was possessed of a widely distributed landed estate, mainly unimproved, and almost entirely unproductive for many years later.

Henry Drinker married (first), May 4, 1757, at New Castle, Delaware, Ann, daughter of Benjamin Swett. She died May 23, 1758, at the age of twenty-two years, and he married (second), at Philadelphia, January 13, 1761, Elizabeth, born February 27, 1735 (N. S.), daughter of William and Sarah (Jervis) Sandwith. She died November 24, 1807, and he on June 26, 1809. Elizabeth Drinker kept a journal covering fifty years of her life, portions of which have been published, edited by Henry Drinker Biddle, her grandson. This journal gives most interesting details of early families and of social and family life in Philadelphia, before, during, and after the Revolution.

HENRY SANDWITH DRINKER, son of Henry and Elizabeth (Sandwith) Drinker, born in Philadelphia, October 30, 1770, was educated to mercantile pursuits, but on his marriage, December 11, 1794, to Hannah Smith, took up his residence on a farm at Pennsbury Manor, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, to which he gave the name of "North Bank," erecting a house, still standing (1907), near the steamboat landing, and known for years as "Drinker's Folly." Hannah Smith was daughter of James and Esther Hewlings Smith. Esther Hewlings Smith was granddaughter of James Logan, of Philadelphia, Chief Justice and Provincial Councillor of Pennsylvania, who sailed from Cowes in the "Canterbury" in 1699 with William Penn. The ship was attacked by pirates. It is said that Logan fought, while Penn went below. He was Mayor of Philadelphia, 1723, died 1754. He married Sarah, sister of Charles Read. Their daughter, Hannah Logan, born 1719, married, 1748, John Smith, of Philadelphia, later of Burlington, merchant and chief projector and treasurer of the insurance company known as the Philadelphia Contributionship. Hannah (Logan) Smith was a preacher among Friends. Their son, James Smith, born 1750, married Esther Hewlings, of Burlington, and they had issue, Hannah, born 1773.

In 1807 he made a voyage to Calcutta as supercargo (having sold his farm), and then settled in Philadelphia, where he resided until his decease, July 3, 1824. His wife, born November 26, 1773, died January 23, 1830.

 SANDWITH DRINKER (twin to Charles), of whom presently.

SANDWITH DRINKER, one of the youngest sons of Henry S. and Hannah (Smith) Drinker, was born in the city of Philadelphia, November 19, 1808, being with his twin brother Charles the only ones of the family born in the city, after the removal of the family from Bucks county. He married, March 17, 1840, Susannah Budd Shober. Sandwith Drinker had a taste for the sea, and early in life entered the merchant service. After rising to the command of a vessel, and making several voyages, he settled at Hong Kong, and was in business there from 1847 to 1858, part of the time in partnership with William Rawle, of Philadelphia, under the firm name of Rawle, Drinker & Company. He died at Macao, January 18, 1858. His death was tragic. During the war carried on by England against China, he gave a breakfast party to a number of English and French naval officers on the day on which the Chinese chief baker in Hong Kong had mixed arsenic in bread intended for the English troops. Some of this bread was served at the breakfast party, and Sandwith Drinker, after lingering about a year, died from eating a small piece of it. His guests escaped death, though several suffered from the effects of the poison. His wife returned to America with four children, and died in Baltimore, Maryland, 1858. Her ancestry is as follows:

ANDREW SCHOBBER, was a son of John and Catharine Schober, of Neuhoftmansdorf, Jannowitz, Moravia; he was born near Olmutz, Moravia, November 17, 1710, and married, May 27, 1743, Hedwige Regina Schubert, and in that year joined the company of Moravians under Zinzendorf, fitted out at Marienborn and Herrnhag to settle Nazareth, Pennsylvania, and sailing in the ship, "Little Strength," Nicholas Garrison, commander, arrived at New York, November 26, 1743. He died at Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, July 12, 1792. Four sons survived him: John Andrew, Gottlieb, Joseph and Samuel.

Samuel Shober, son of Andrew Schober, studied medicine at the College of Philadelphia, and settled in the practice of his profession in Philadelphia, where he died. He married, October 10, 1784, at Christ Church, Philadelphia, Susannah Budd, daughter of Col. Blathwaite and Mary (Morris) Jones. They had issue: Blathwaite J., Hedwige Regina, Samuel Lieberkuhn and Joanna Sophia.

Blathwaite J. Shober, born 1785, a member of the bar of Philadelphia, was the father of Susannah Budd (Shober) Drinker. He married Catharine Snyder, and had beside Mrs. Drinker, a son, Anthony J. M. Shober, who died without issue.

PAGE FAMILY.

The Page family, three generations of which have been residents of Philadelphia, was founded in America, by Col. John Page, of Bruton Parish, York county, Virginia, merchant, who with his wife Alice Luckin, came from Middlesex county, England, and settled in Virginia, about 1650. He was a son of Francis Page, of the Parish of Bedfont, county of Middlesex, England, who died October 13, 1678, at the age of eighty-four years, and lies buried in the chancel of St. Mary's Church, Bedfont. The inscription on his tombstone, since removed to the ancient graveyard adjoining St. Mary's, states that the stone was erected by "his son John Page of Yorke County, Virginia." It is engraved with the coat-of-arms of the family as is that of Col. John Page, at Williamsburg, Virginia, viz: "A fesse dancette between three martlets, a middle chief crescent," and a crest—a demi-horse falcene (rearing).

A brother, Mathew Page, also came to Virginia, and left children, Mathew, Luke and Mary. Another brother, Robert Page, remained in England, residing at Hatton, Hounsley Heath, and a son of this Robert, later came to Virginia, and married (first) his cousin, Elizabeth, only child of Captain Francis Page, eldest son of Col. John Page; and (second) Mary (Mann), widow of Hon. Mathew Page, of Rosewell, second son of Col. John. Another brother, is said to have been Gibbs Page, of Middlesex, England.

Col. John Page married at about the time of his removal to Virginia, Alice Luckin, also a native of county Middlesex, a descendant of a baronet of that name, and of a distinguished family of that locality, whose arms correspond with those engraved upon her tomb at Williamsburg, Virginia. Col. John Page purchased large tracts of land on the north side of York river, on August 23, 1653, and became a prominent man in the colony of Virginia, serving as a member of "Her Majesty's Council" at the time of his decease. The inscription on his tomb is as follows:

"Here lieth in hope of a joyfull reseurrection, the body of COLONEL JOHN PAGE, of Bruton Parish, Esquire; One of Her Majesties Council in the Dominion of Virginia: who departed this life, the 25th. of January in the year of our Lord, 1691-2, Aged 65 years.

An obelisk was erected over his grave in 1878. His wife, Alice, died June 22, 1698, aged seventy-three years. He was a Justice prior to 1655; Burgess, 1655-6; Major, 1676-7; Colonel and County Lieutenant, 1680-5, and member of Colonial Council, 1681-92.

HON. MATHEW PAGE, second son of Colonel John and Alice (Luckin) Page, was born in York county, Virginia, in 1658. He also became a member of Council of Virginia, and a Colonel. He married, in 1689, Mary, only child and heiress of John and Mary Mann, of Timberneck, Gloucester county, Virginia, and removed to that locality, later removing to Abington Parish, in the same county, the site of Rosewell Manor, established by his son, Hon. Mann Page, in 1725, on extensive tracts of land acquired there by Mathew Page. He was one of the founders of William and Mary College, and was named in the charter as one of the original Board of Trustees. He settled at Rosewell in 1700, and died there, January 19, 1703, in the forty-fifth year of his age. His tombstone describes him as "Ye Honourable Colonel Mathew Page, Esquire, one of his Majesty's Most Honourable Council; of the Parish of Abington, County of Gloucester, Colony of Virginia." His wife, Mary Mann, born at Timberneck, Gloucester county, married (second) her deceased husband's first cousin, John, son of Robert Page, of England, but did not long survive her second marriage, dying at Rosewell, March 27, 1707, at the age of thirty-five years, leaving a son, John Page, by the second marriage.

HON. MANN PAGE, second child of Hon. Mathew Page, by his wife, Mary Mann, and the only one of their four children who survived childhood, was born near Timberneck, Gloucester county, Virginia, in 1691, he inherited the vast estates of his mother and father in Gloucester county, with his half-brother, John Page, and both were members of His Majesty's Council of the colony of Virginia. Mann Page was sent to England to be educated and was a graduate of Eton. On his return to Virginia, he took a prominent part in colonial affairs, serving in the Colonial Council, 1714-27, under George I., and from 1727, until his death on January 24, 1730, under George II. He built the present Rosewell mansion in 1725, on an elaborate plan, it being barely completed at his death five years later. It is located on the right bank of Carter's creek, near its junction with York River, and was the seat of a branch of the family for many generations, and a noted gathering place of prominent people of the Colony and State, being the birthplace and residence of Governor John Page (1743-1808), a grandson of Hon. Mann Page, who was a fellow student at William and Mary College of Thomas Jefferson, and intimately associated with him as a member of the House of Burgesses, the Colonial Council, and later in the affairs of the state of Virginia, of which he was the first Lieutenant Governor. He was also the leader of his section in support of the Colonies during the Revolution, serving as Lieutenant Colonel of Militia, member of the Committee of Safety and of the first Supreme Executive Council. He was a member of Congress, 1789-97, and Governor of the State in 1802. Returning, however, to his worthy and distinguished grandsire, Hon. Mann Page, he married (first), in 1712, Judith, daughter of Hon. Ralph Wormeley, Secretary of the Colony of Virginia, then at the age of seventeen years. She died December 12, 1716, in her twenty-second year. Col. Page married (second) two years later, Judith, daughter of Hon. Robert Carter, of Lancaster county, Virginia, President of the Colony of Virginia, known as "King Carter," by his first wife, Judith Armistead, born in 1694.

Thomas Nelson, second son and fifth child of "Scotch Tom," born at Yorktown in 1716, died there in 1782, was many years Secretary of King's Council, and was known as "Secretary Nelson." S. DAVIS PAGE, son of Dr. William Byrd Page, by his wife, Celestine Anna Davis, was born in Philadelphia, September 22, 1840, after a preliminary education at private schools in that city, he entered Yale College, and was graduated from that institution in 1859, as a Bachelor of Arts.

Making choice of the legal profession he read law in the office of Hon. Peter McCall, and attended a course of lectures in the Harvard Law School, and in the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania; and was admitted to the Philadelphia Bar, December 5, 1864. He soon attained rank in the practice of his profession, and has been actively engaged in practice since that time. In 1884 he formed the law firm of Page & Allison, to which Hon. Boies Penrose, now United States Senator, was later admitted, and the firm name changed to Page, Allison & Penrose. The latter firm was dissolved by the death of Mr. Allison, 1901, and the withdrawal of Mr. Penrose on February 1, 1905, and was succeeded by the present firm of Page & Page, consisting only of the founder of the firm and his eldest son, Howard Wurts Page.

In the practice of his profession Mr. Page stands deservedly high, and few attorneys of the city or elsewhere have enjoyed to such a full extent the confidence and trust of the community at large. His name is written close to the top of the long list of Philadelphia's notable lawyers. He has always taken an active interest, and a prominent part in the affairs of his native city, as well as in State and National politics and policies, and has filled a number of positions of trust and honor. Had it not been for the exactions of his private practice, there is little doubt that his career as a public servant would have been much more extensive. He has preferred, however, to devote his life to his profession and to permit only such interruptions of his practice as the care of his financial interests demanded, and when his declination to serve his city and state would not be accepted by his fellow citizens. His intimate association with vital events, his broad sympathies and equitable judgment, his legal skill and unquestionable ability as an orator, have contributed to win him a well merited renown, and demanded of him a share in the public service.

In 1883 he was called from a seat in the City Council, where he had served since 1877, to accept the position of City Controller which position he filled for nearly a year, showing eminent ability in the management of the city's affairs. He was the nominee of the Democratic party for City Treasurer in 1879, and 1882, and for City Controller in 1883. In 1886 he was appointed Assistant

United States Treasurer for Philadelphia, and filled that position for four years under both Presidents Cleveland and Harrison, to the entire satisfaction of the Treasury Department and the business community. At the close of his term he was elected president of the Quaker City National Bank. In 1891 he was one of the Commission appointed by the Governor to investigate the accounts of John Bardsley, the derelict Treasurer of the City of Philadelphia, with the Keystone National Bank, upon its failure. Under appointment of the Governor of Pennsylvania, he delivered an address on the Resources, Financial History, and Banking System of Pennsylvania, before the Banker's Convention at the Columbian Exposition at Chicago, in June, 1893. He has been a director of the Quaker City National Bank for seventeen years and was its president for two years from January, 1890. He has also been a director of the Merchants' Trust Company since its incorporation in 1889. He is a member of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania; the Historical Society of Virginia; the Sons of the Revolution; Society of Colonial Wars in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; the Colonial Society; the Rittenhouse, the University, the City, the Lawyers' and the Harvard Clubs, of Philadelphia; the Yale Alumni Association, the Law Association of Philadelphia; the Pennsylvania State Bar Association, and the American Bar Association.

S. Davis Page married, September 25, 1861, Isabella Graham Wurts, born in Philadelphia, March 16, 1840, and died in Paris, France, March 23, 1867; daughter of William Wurts, of Philadelphia, by his wife Elizabeth Tate, and of a family of old and famous lineage clearly traced through many centuries.

RIDGWAY FAMILY.

The Ridgway family of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, founded in America by Richard Ridgway, in 1679, was descended from the nobility of England, and Richard was of the same family as Sir Thomas Ridgway, first Earl of Londonderry, Ireland, born in Devonshire, England, in 1593, who with his two brothers, George and John, was among the first English to plant a Protestant colony in Ireland in 1610. Sir Thomas slew Sir Cahir O'Dougherty and thus ended the Irish Rebellion. He was given large grants of land that had belonged to Sir Cormac O'Neill, brother of the Earl of Tyrone and others. Sir Ridgway Pitt and the Earls of Chatham were of the same blood.

As shown by an entry made in the ancient "Book of Arrivals," now in the possession of the Bucks County Historical Society, in the handwriting of Phineas Pemberton in 1684, "Richard Ridgway & Elizabeth his wife, of Wellford, in the county of Bucks, arrived in ye Delaware River in ye ship Jacob & Mary, of London, in the 7th Month 1679." This same record gives the date of the birth of two of their children, viz: "Thomas, born ye 25th of ye 5 Mo. 1677," and "Richard born ye 27th of ye 2month 1680."

RICHARD RIDGWAY, was one of the first English settlers on the west side of the River Delaware in what became Bucks county three years after his arrival there. His first residence was on the river front, near the head of Biles's Island as it was later known, from William Biles, who settled there at the same time with Richard Ridgway and two or three other English families three years prior to William Penn's arrival in the Province.

This tract of land Richard Ridgway sold to Daniel Gardner and John Luff by agreement of sale dated January 2, 1681, and removed to a tract two miles further up the river, on the present lower line of the borough of Morrisville, a locality then known as "Crookehorne." The deed to Gardner recites as follows: "Whereas, Richard Ridgway, amongst others, first settlers on the West side of the Delaware River, neare ye ffals, obtained Permission and Leave from Sir Edmond Andros, the King's Captain & Lieutenant Gouvernor-in-Chief of the Colony of New York and Appendants, with other of the King's Lands on the West side of the Dellaware aforesaid, to take up and settle a certain tract of land there situated," &c. * * * This tract appears in the name of Richard Ridgway on the map prepared by Holmes for William Penn. Afterwards, "by Order of the sd. Gouvernor to Philip Pecoock, the King's Surveyor, the said Tract was surveyed and confirmed to the sd. Richard Ridgway, his heirs and Assigns forever." The Crookehorne tract was patented to Richard Ridgway, July 1, 1684, the date of survey probably preceding the Patent by some years. He resided thereon until 1691, conveying the remaining portion of it to Samuel Beakes, June 8, 1691, on which date he was still a resident of Bucks county. He had, however, purchased, July 7, 1690, 600 acres of land of Daniel Coxe, to be laid out in the Province of West Jersey, and in August, 1690, a tract of 600 acres was surveyed in right of said purchase by Thomas Revel, Surveyor for the Proprietaries, near Stony Brook, Middlesex county, and a resurvey thereof a little more than a year later states that Richard Ridgway then resided thereon. In March, 1695-6, when he conveyed the 600 acres at Stony Brook, Richard Ridgway was residing in Maidenhead township, Burlington county, now Mercer. On May 27, 1697, he purchased a tract of 90 acres in Springfield township, Burlington county, of Jane Osborne and, February 7, 1697-8, John Hollingshead conveyed to him 600 acres in the same township. The latter tract included the site of Old Springfield Meeting House and Graveyard, the land for which was donated by Richard Ridgway to the Society of Friends of which he was a devout member. He died on this plantation, September 21, 1723, and is buried in the old graveyard at Springfield Meeting House. His will is of record in the Prerogative Office, at Trenton, New Jersey.

Richard Ridgway married (first) in England, Elizabeth Chamberlain, whose mother, Elizabeth, with her second husband, Francis Hickman, came to Pennsylvania, supposedly from Wiltshire, prior to 1685 in which year Hickman died. Elizabeth Hickman was accompanied or preceded to America by four children by her first husband, viz: Robert Chamberlain, who settled in Concord township, Chester county, in 1686, and is the ancestor of many prominent people of that county; Elizabeth, the wife of Richard Ridgway; Sarah Chamberlain, who married April 19, 1681, Richard Arnold, of Burlington county; and Jean Chamberlain, who married Charles Jones. By her second husband, Francis Hickman, Elizabeth had four children, Joseph and Benjamin Hickman, the latter the ancestor of those of the name in Chester county, Pennsylvania, and two daughters, Mary, who married Joseph Edwards, and Hannah who married Robert Way.

Elizabeth (Chamberlain) Ridgway died in Bucks county prior to 1690, and Richard married (second) Abigail Stockton, daughter of Richard Stockton, a native of Durham, England, who had settled, first, at Flushing, Long Island, but purchasing 2000 acres in West Jersey, settled in Burlington county in 1692. He was the founder of one of the most prominent and influential families of the Province and State. He died in 1707, leaving children, Richard, John, Job, Abigail (above mentioned), Sarah, Mary, Hannah and Elizabeth. His son Richard, of "Morven," near Princeton, died in 1709, leaving six sons, one of whom, Judge John Stockton, of "Morven," was the father of Richard Stockton, member of Continental Congress from New Jersey, signer of the Declaration of Independence, and first Chief Justice of the state of New Jersey. Richard Ridgway was a Justice of Burlington county, 1701-20. By his first wife, Elizabeth Chamberlain, he had issue:

THOMAS RIDGWAY, eldest son of Richard and Elizabeth Ridgway, born in England, July 25, 1677, removed with his father to New Jersey, and married at Springfield Meeting House, in 1699, Ann Pharo, their second declaration of intention of marriage being made at Burlington Monthly Meeting, 9mo. (Nov.) 19, 1699. Ann Pharo was born February 21, 1677-8, and arrived in the Delaware river in the "Shield" with her father James Pharo, in October of the year of her birth. On January 18, 1699-1700, Richard Ridgway conveyed to his son Thomas, 190 acres in Springfield township, Burlington county, the whole of his first purchase of 90 acres of the widow Ogborne in 1697, and 100 acres of the tract purchased of John Hollingshead. Thomas purchased other lands in Burlington county, and continued to reside there for about ten years after his marriage, and then removed to Little Egg Harbor, where he accumulated a large estate.

Thomas Ridgway was for many years an Elder of the Friends Meeting at Little Egg Harbor, and was much esteemed in the community. He died in 1724 at the age of forty-seven years. His first wife Ann Pharo, who was the mother of five children, died some years before him, and he married (second) Elizabeth, daughter of Edward and Sara Andrews, who survived him, by whom he had eight children. Her will dated 1mo. 1, 1725, proved June 2, 1725, mentions her children, Edward, Richard, Job, Joseph, Jacob and Elizabeth, daughters-in-law (step-daughters), Ann Ridgway, Katrin Gardiner; sons-in-law, Thomas and John Ridgway.

JOHN RIDGWAY, second son of Thomas and Ann (Pharo) Ridgway, born in Burlington county, New Jersey, 1705, removed with his parents to Little Egg Harbor, when a small child, and lived all his life there. He was executor of his father's will in 1724, and under it was bequeathed lands at Little Egg Harbor, some slaves, and a "new Sloop." As shown by a testimonial adopted by the Little Egg Harbor Meeting of Friends of which he was from "early life" until his death an Elder, "he followed the sea for a time, yet by attending to the Divine principal of Grace, he was preserved from that extravagance in his conduct and conservation too prevalent in men in that business."

This "Testimony" of Little Egg Harbor Meeting further states that, "He was a steady and constant attender of Meeting when at home and in health." * * * He was in early life appointed to the station of elder in the church which he conducted with reputation; being of a benevolent spirit, his heart and his house were open to entertain his friends and others, cheerfully, and liberally; assisting the poor in many respects; and in an extensive commerce and conversation with men of various ranks he demeaned himself with a becoming gravity which rendered him truly worthy of esteem. He was carefully concerned that his children and other youth might partake of the benefits of a sober education; and in his declining years was much afflicted with bodily indisposition which he was enabled to bear with patience and resignation; often expressing a desire to be contented in Divine Will. He quietly departed this life on the 21st of the Fifth Month, 1774, and was buried at Egg Harbor."

John Ridgway was a successful business man, and owned at the time of his decease three farms and a considerable personal estate. He was twice married, (first) in 1728, to Phoebe Titus of Long Island, by whom he had no issue; and (second) in 1753, to Phoebe, daughter of James Bellangee, Sr., who survived him and died in 1783. The certificate of the last marriage is still in possession of their descendants in Philadelphia. It is a tradition in the family that Phoebe (Titus) Ridgway, shortly before her death, told her husband that Phoebe Bellangee, than an infant, named for her, should in due time become his second wife, a fact realized years later when Phoebe Bellangee had reached the age of sixteen.

Issue of John and Phoebe (Bellangee) Ridgway:

JOHN, b. Aug. 14, 1755; d. April 12, 1845; m. Elizabeth Wright; of whom presently;
 Phoebe, b. April 16, 1757; m. at Christ Church, Phila., March 26, 1776, Allen Ridgway, merchant of Phila., son of Joseph and Hannah (Allen) Ridgway, before mentioned;

- Thomas, b. Sept. 12, 1759; shipwrecked and drowned off Delaware Capes; m. Jeanette Low, who m. (second) John Rose, and removed to Genesee co., N. Y.;
- Ann, b. Aug. 12, 1763; m. James Smith, merchant of Phila., for thirty years business partner of his wife's brother, Jacob Ridgway, under firm name of Smith & Ridgway; d. in Phila., May 27, 1826;
- JACOB, b. April 18, 1768; d. May 30, 1843; the Phila. millionaire merchant; m. Rebecca Rawle; of whom presently.

JACOB RIDGWAY, youngest son of John and Phœbe (Bellangee) Ridgway, born at Little Egg Harbor, New Jersey, April 18, 1768, was but six years of age at the death of his father. His mother carried on the farm until her death in 1783, and Jacob remained with her, assisting at an early age in the farm work. Soon after his mother's decease, he came to Philadelphia, where two of his married sisters resided, and entered the employ of Samuel and Thomas Shaw, general merchants at 72 Water street, and shortly after arriving at the age of twenty-one years became partner of the junior member of the firm, Thomas Shaw. This association lasted but a few years, and in 1794 Jacob Ridgway entered into partnership with his brother-in-law, James Smith, under the firm name of Smith & Ridgway, and engaged in the wholesale grocery and commission business, on Water street. In 1797 they sold to Joseph Pryor, and removing to 158-60 North Front street, engaged in business on a large scale as importers and shipping merchants, later removing to 154 North Front street. When the trouble with England, prior to the second war for independence, in 1812, began to embarrass their business interests, it was thought desirable that Mr. Ridgway should remove with his family to England and give personal supervision to their interests there while Mr. Smith continued the business in Philadelphia. He travelled extensively in Europe and was later appointed United States Consul at the Port of Antwerp, Holland, a position that gave him excellent opportunities to promote the successful business interests of his firm; many extensive and valuable consignments of American goods were made to him at Antwerp and vast sums realized. One of the vessels of the firm and its valuable cargo was seized by the French, and Mr. Ridgway hurried to Paris and secured papers of release from the French government and was able to return to Antwerp in time to prevent the captors from breaking up and dividing the cargo.

Mr. Ridgway made money rapidly, and having the utmost faith in the commercial growth and importance of Philadelphia, invested his surplus in real estate there, and its ultimate advance in value, together with his profits from the shipping business made him a millionaire. He returned to Philadelphia in 1814, and retired from active participation in business, giving his attention to his large real estate holdings. His early residence in Philadelphia was at 68 North Front street, but after his return from Europe he resided at 181 Chestnut street, opposite Independence Hall, where he died in May, 1843, leaving an estate estimated to be worth $3,500,000. Jacob Ridgway left to survive him three children, John J. Ridgway, who married Elizabeth Willing, and lived many years and died in Paris, where his son Henry married a Miss Monroe, and his daughter married Count Gani, and two daughters, Phœbe Ann, who married Dr. James Rush, and was a great leader in fashionable society in Philadelphia and Saratoga Springs, and Susan, who married Thomas Rotch, of Rhode Island, and after his death Dr. J. Rhea Barton, and lived in the old mansion, stood at the corner of Chestnut and Juniper streets. They had no children. Dr. James and Phœbe Ann (Ridgway)

John Ridgway

Thos. Ridgway

Rush, also had no children. At her death Mrs. Rush devised her large estate to her husband and he in turn devised it for the establishment of the Ridgway Library at Broad and Chestnut streets, Philadelphia, as a monument to her family, where are collected certain articles of her father, and where he and Mrs. Rush are buried.

JOHN RIDGWAY, eldest son of John and Phœbe (Bellangee) Ridgway, born at Little Egg Harbor, New Jersey, August 14, 1755, was known as "Gentleman John Ridgway" to distinguish him from his cousin of the same name. He resided for many years on a farm devised to him by his father, the scene of the surprise of Gen. Count Pulaski's picket guard by the British during the Revolution, thirty of the patriots being buried in his orchard. The British ransacked his house, carried off all portable provisions, and destroyed his growing crops. After the close of the Revolutionary War, John Ridgway purchased a farm of 400 acres on Crosswicks creek, near Walnford, Monmouth county, New Jersey, where he lived until his death in 1845, at the age of ninety years. He married in 1776, Elizabeth Wright, daughter of David Wright of New Hanover township, Burlington county, who died June 16, 1791. Elizabeth (Wright) Ridgway died March 16, 1843, at the age of eighty-seven years.

THOMAS RIDGWAY, youngest son of John and Elizabeth (Wright) Ridgway, born at Walnford, Monmouth county, New Jersey, May 5, 1797, came to Philadelphia at the age of thirteen years and was placed by his father in a commission house on the wharf below Chestnut street, where he remained six years.

In 1816 he engaged in the flour and commission business with his elder brother Jacob, under the firm name of J. & T. Ridgway. Jacob Ridgway retired in 1821, and Thomas took as a partner his cousin, Benjamin Ridgway, son of his uncle Jacob, who predeceased his father, with whom he was associated for two years. Benjamin retiring in 1823, Thomas Ridgway formed a partnership with John Livezey, under the firm name of Ridgway & Livezey, which continued until 1836, when Livezey was succeeded by Henry Budd, and the firm of Ridgway & Budd continued until 1850, Roland Fitzpatrick, many years a clerk in their establishment, becoming a member of the firm in 1846.

In 1854 Thomas Ridgway retired from the mercantile business to accept the position of president of Girard Trust Company, originally known as the Girard Life Insurance, Annuity and Trust Company, chartered in 1836, with one exception the oldest Life Insurance Company in the state. Mr. Ridgway succeeded Benjamin W. Richards, deceased, and continued to fill the position of president until his death in May, 1887.

Thomas Ridgway married at Springfield Friends Meeting, Burlington county, New Jersey, November 14, 1821, Sarah, daughter of John and Ann Pancoast, of near Plattsburg, now Sykesville, Burlington county, New Jersey, and granddaughter of Joseph Pancoast, born 1741, died 1808, by his wife Sarah Ridgway, born 1748, died 1817, daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Allen) Ridgway, and granddaughter of Richard and Abigail (Stockton) Ridgway. Sarah (Pancoast) Ridgway died in 1888. Thomas Ridgway and Sarah Pancoast were descended in the same degree from the first Ridgway in America, but from his two different wives. The former from his English and the latter from his New Jersey wife. Sarah's brother, Dr. Joseph Pancoast came to Philadelphia two years after her marriage and became a celebrated surgeon of this city. He was one of the founders of Jefferson Medical College.

Issue of Thomas and Sarah (Pancoast) Ridgway:

JOHN J. RIDGWAY, youngest child of Thomas and Sarah (Pancoast) Ridgway, born in Philadelphia, October 22, 1843, has always resided in that city. He graduated at the University of Pennsylvania, and choosing the legal profession, received the degree of LL. B. at that institution in 1865, having been entered as a student-at-law in the office of Morton P. Henry and Richard C. McMurtree, and was admitted to the Philadelphia Bar in the same year. He has since practiced his profession in the several courts of the Commonwealth, having in the meantime taken an active interest in the affairs of his native city. He represented the Eighth Ward in City Council for some years; was Sheriff of Philadelphia county for the years 1884-7; United States Surveyor of the port of Philadelphia during President Harrison's administration, and has filled many other positions of trust and honor. It was largely through his efforts that the Zoological Garden was established in Philadelphia, having agitated the question before the public by articles written for the newspapers, magazines, etc., and procured subscriptions from prominent citizens to purchase animals and improve the grounds, as well as with Mr. Phillips, the president of the Park Commission, selecting the site, preparing the lease, &c.

John J. Ridgway married, November 14, 1869, Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph Reese Fry, of Philadelphia, a man of great musical taste and culture, who died in 1867. CLARKSON FAMILY.

The Clarkson family, founded in America in the latter part of the seventeenth century by Mathew Clarkson, Crown Secretary of the Colony of New York, and in Philadelphia by his grandsons, Mathew and Gerardus Clarkson, was an ancient and noble family, seated at Bradford, Yorkshire, England, as early as 1544, in the reign of Henry VIII. They bore as their Coat-of-Arms, the same insignia as another family of the name found in Nottingham at about the same date, and described as follows: "Argent on a bend engrailed sable, three Annulets or," and a Crest, described as follows: "A griffin's head coupé between two wings ppr." These arms and crest are still found engraved on plate and books belonging to the Clarkson families of New York and Philadelphia. The arms of the Nottingham family, as before stated, are exactly similar to those of the Bradford Clarksons, but the Nottingham family bore a different crest, described as follows: "An arm in armour, fessewise, holding a sword from which floats a pennon."

ROBERT CLARKSON, the earliest lineal ancestor of the American family of whom we have any definite record, was born at Bradford, Yorkshire, in the latter part of the sixteenth century, and lived there all his life, his residence being on one of the oldest thoroughfares of that ancient town, called Fayre Gappe, and he was possessed of large estates. He and his family "possessed a high moral worth and social influence," according to an ancient chronicle. In 1615 he was Warden of the Parish Church of St. Peter's at Bradford, and some years later served as one of the trustees for the sale of the "Manor of Bradford." His death occurred on March 10, 1631-2, and he was buried "among his people" in the old Parish Church at Bradford. Little however is known of his life there.

Robert Clarkson, of Bradford, had at least three sons, viz.:

WILLIAM CLARKSON, the eldest son and heir, born March 13, 1713-14; was educated for the ministry, and, in 1645, became Vicar of Adel, or "Idle," near Leeds, a church erected within the first century after the Conquest, and dedicated to John the Baptist. He held, evidently by inheritance since no provision is made for him in his father's will, the "Lordship of Idle," including the "Mansion House," called "the Smythies," at Windhill, and the "Chappel" at Idle, besides the building wherein the Lords of the Manor of Idle, from time to time, held their Courts. He died at Idle, April, 1660, and was buried in the graveyard adjoining the church.

William Clarkson was twice married, his first wife being Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Sharp, and sister to John Sharp, who married his sister, Mary Clarkson. Granville Sharp, the philanthropist (1734-1813), son of Thomas Sharp, Archdeacon of Northumberland, and grandson of John Sharp, Archbishop of York (1691-1714), was of this family, and he and Thomas Clarkson (1760-1834), both prominently identified with the abolition of the slave trade in 1807, were correspondents of Mathew Clarkson, of Phila. The second wife was Frances Maud, of Bierly, doubtless of the same family as Joshua Maud, whose daughter, Margery, came to America with her mother, then the wife of Dr. Thomas Wynne, and became the wife of Thomas Fisher, of Lewes, Delaware, and the ancestress of the Fisher family of Philadelphia.

ROBERT CLARKSON, second son of Robert Clarkson, of Bradford, was baptized at St. Peter's Church, Bradford, February 15, 1617-18, and, on arriving at man's estate, removed to London, where he acquired a large estate, and was for a time Alderman of the city. He died at his residence in Little Chelsea, Parish of Kensington, Middlesex, in 1695-6. His wife was Hannah Taylor; whose mother was a daughter of Rev. William Wilson, D. D., of Merton College, Oxford, who had married Isabel Woodhall, niece of Edmund Grindal, Archbishop of Canterbury. A daughter, Hannah, married Edward Hopton, and a son, Richard, married Elizabeth Geers, great-granddaughter of the Earl of Westmoreland.

REV. DAVID CLARKSON, youngest son of Robert of Bradford, baptized at St. Peter's Church in Bradford, March 3, 1621-2, was the ancestor of the American family of the name. He attended the Grammar school in his native town and then went up to Cambridge University and was admitted to Trinity College, October 22, 1641, but, as appears from the appeal in his behalf by his brother-in-law John Sharp, whose letter to the Earl of Manchester is given below, his studies and attendance there were interrupted by the civil war, in which he seems to have taken the side of the Parliament, and he returned to Bradford, where it would seem from the same authority, he was "10 months a prisoner" of the King's forces. Through the intercession of his brother-in-law, the great Parliamentarian and champion of Presbyterianism, he was returned to the University and obtained his degree in 1644, was appointed to a Fellowship in Clare-Hall, and presided over the same community of which the eminent Ralph Cudworth had previously been master. The letter to the Earl of Manchester on behalf of David Clarkson, from his brother-in-law, John Sharp, of Horton, who at that time exercised considerable influence in the Parliamentary party, is as follows:

"My lord,

"Horton, 3d. October, 1644.

"The gentleman shown by these presents to yr. Lordship, hath deserved, for his sufferings to be pittied, for his constancy to be rewarded: now since his condition requires the one no less than it deserves the other, I thought it convenient to manifest that I pity him by desiring yr. honorable assistance to reward him. He was a student in Cambridge till the beginning of this Kingdom's troubles, when he was forced by strict urging of some ceremonies to leave it. Coming into the country he resided at Bradford till that town was taken and him in it. Since then by his affection to the Parliament, he hath continued 10 months a prisoner, by which he lost both his degree in his University, and the benefit of his estate in the country, so that now he is rendered unable, not only to provide for the expenses ordinary in taking of a degree, but also to mayntayneing himself in the University as heretofore he had done.

"I desire therefore your Lordship in consideration of the promises, you would confer on him such preferment in the College as may both enable and encourage him to continue his progress in his studys yet no other than what, after examination, he shall be thought worthy of; And I shall be further engaged, &c.

"JOHN SHARP."

David Clarkson, therefore, finished his studies at Trinity, and having received his degree and successfully passed the examination, received on May 5, 1645, his fellowship at Clare-Hall, where the degree of B. D. was conferred upon him and where he held his fellowship until 1651, when he left the University and at about that time became minister at Crayford, in the county of Kent, where his eldest child, Lettice, was baptized May 25, 1652. During his residence in the University, among others placed under his care and tuition was John Tillotson, afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury. On February 13, 1653, David Clarkson received the appointment to the benefice of Mortlake, near Battersea, in county Surrey, and he held this curacy until ejected by the Act of Uniformity in 1662, he having refused to conform to the terms of that act in reference to the use of the Common Prayer Book of the established church after the Restoration.

For several years succeeding he continued to minister to Independent churches, wrote a great number of papers of a controversial character and his name has always been mentioned among the chief literary champions of non-conformity. In 1682 he became an assistant to Dr. John Owens, pastor of the Independent Church, London, and, on Owen's death the following year, succeeded him as its pastor and continued as such until his rather sudden death at his residence in the Parish of St. Dunstan, Stepney, June 14, 1686. He was buried at Bunhill Fields Cemetery and his funeral sermon was preached by Dr. William Bates.

His colleagues and contemporaries, Baxter, Ridgely, Howe and Mead, all bear testimony to the talents of Rev. David Clarkson; Baxter says of him that he was "a divine of extraordinary worth for solid judgment, healing, moderate principles, acquaintance with the fathers, great historical abilities, and Godly, upright life." Birch, in his life of Tillotson, refers to the singular respect that the Archbishop entertained for his old preceptor, David Clarkson. De Foe says that the reasonings of Clarkson, "tho often attacked have never been refuted." His writings were very numerous and many of his discourses and sermons were collected and published in 1696 in one of those ancient and ponderous folios, "at one time to be seen in old dissenting Chapels, secured to the desk by a chain."

Rev. David Clarkson married (first), in 1651, a daughter of Sir Henry Holcroft, Knight, of East Ham, county Essex, and of Long Acre, county Middlesex, and of a family settled for centuries in Lancashire, that had been represented in Royal Parliament from the time of Edward III, Sir Henry belonging to that branch of the family that had settled at Hurst, Lancashire. The only known issue of this marriage was Lettice, before referred to as baptized at Crayford, March 25, 1652, who died there the March following. She was named for her maternal grandmother, the wife of Sir Henry Holcroft. Dr. Clarkson married (second), about 1662-3, Elizabeth, the widow of Wolgrave Lodwick, and daughter of Mathew Kenrick of London, and of the family that were seated for generations at Woore-Manor, Shropshire, and who were a Welsh family of great antiquity claiming descent from David Kenrick, who was standard bearer to Edward, the Black Prince, in the battles of Crecy and Poitiers, and who, before leaving his native village of Ashley, Staffordshire, is said to have thrust his spear into a hillock and vowed that "if the Almighty spared his life he would build on that spot a temple to the Most High God." True to his vow, on his return "he devoted the spoils of war and gave of his own substance to the erection of the sacred fane," now the Parish Church of Ashley, in which can be seen a brass plate bearing this inscription:

"IN Perpetuam Rei Memoriam
Manubias Deo
DAVID HENRICUS Pietus eyus Memoriae
Hoc Virtutis Praeniolium dicavit."

Rev. David Clarkson had by his first wife, ——— Holcroft, one daughter:

Lettice Clarkson, bapt. at Crayford, Kent, May 25, 1652; d. March, 1653; said to have been the only child of this marriage.

Issue of Rev. David and Elizabeth (Kenrick-Lodwick) Clarkson:

MATTHEW CLARKSON, "eldest son," of whom presently;

Katharine Clarkson, bapt. at Mortlake, Feb. 3, 1672; d., Hitchin, Hertfordshire, Jan. 11, 1757, aged 84 years;

David Clarkson (possibly the second child of the second marriage, though we have no date of his birth); m., "about 1690," Lady Sands, dau. of Sir William Sands, and d. prior to 1714.

MATTHEW CLARKSON, eldest son of Rev. David Clarkson, by his second wife, Elizabeth (Lodwick) Kenrick, was born about the year 1663. Of his youth we know nothing, but in 1685 or 1686 he made a trip to New England, probably in the latter year, after his father's decease. He was evidently impressed with the prospect of advancement in the new country, as on his return to England he petitioned William and Mary, the then reigning sovereigns, for the appointment to the position of Secretary of the Colony of New York, which being referred to the Right Honorable the Lords of Trade and Plantations, and receiving their recommendation, was granted, and he was duly commissioned. He sailed from the Isle of Wight on the "Beaver," December 1, 1690, and arrived at New York, Thursday, January 29, 1690-1, and was duly installed into the duties of his high office, which he continued to fill until his death from yellow fever on July 29, 1702.

Matthew Clarkson married, January 19, 1692-3, Catharina, daughter of Hon. Gerritse Van Schaick, of Albany, New York, one of the prominent Dutch families of the Province, whose descendants have held a like prominent place in the State. She fell a victim to the epidemic that carried off her husband. Matthew Clarkson was elected a vestryman of Trinity Church in 1698, and the pew right, then held by him in that ancient church, is still held by his descendants in New York. He has left numerous descendants both in New York and Philadelphia, as well as in other parts of the United States.

MATTHEW CLARKSON, JR., son of Matthew and Catharina (Van Schaick) Clarkson, baptized at New York, April 9, 1699, died there in 1739. He married Cornelia De Peyster, baptized at New York, December 15, 1695, died in Philadelphia, May 23, 1753. After her husband's death she removed to New Brunswick, New Jersey, and married the Rev. Gilbert Tennent, son of Rev. William Tennent, the founder of the "Log College" on the Neshaminy in Bucks county, and one of the most eminent of the early Presbyterian divines of Pennsylvania. At the time of his marriage to the widow Clarkson, Rev. Gilbert Tennent was pastor of the Presbyterian Church at New Brunswick, but in 1743 removed to Philadelphia and became pastor of the First Presbyterian Church there, at the northwest corner of Third and Arch streets, resided at "Bedminster Country Seat," at the Northeast corner of Fourth street and Brewer's Alley, now Wood street, where the two sons of his wife, Matthew and Gerardus Clarkson, were reared and educated under his immediate supervision. Rev. Gilbert Tennent was one of the first trustees of the College of New Jersey, now Princeton University, and with Samuel Davies, who became its president in 1759, was selected by the Presbyterian Synod to go to Great Britain to solicit subscriptions for the College, in 1752, and was absent on that mission until November 1754. He was one of the most conspicuous figures in the establishment of the Presbyterian Synod in America, and one of its most eloquent and forcible preachers. He was possessed of "an ever burning zeal in defence of what he deemed to be right, and exercised, whatever he went, a deep and extensive influence." The influence of his character and training made a lasting impression on the lives and characters of his stepsons.

The De Peyster family are of French origin, and Johannes de Peyster, the grandfather of Cornelia de Peyster, who married Matthew Clarkson, Jr., was a descendant of a Huguenot branch of the family, that in the early part of the seventeenth century fled from religious persecution in their native country and found refuge in Holland. He was born at Haarlem, and married in that town, December 17, 1651, Cornelia Lubbertse. Prior to his marriage he had made a trip to the Dutch colony at New Amsterdam, now New York, and in 1653 was again in that town, where he later established himself in trade. He was possessed by inheritance of considerable wealth and became at once a man of influence in the new Colony, holding many offices of trust and honor under the Dutch, and later under English rule; filling the offices of Schepen, Burgomaster, Alderman, Deputy Mayor, and on October 15, 1677 was appointed Mayor of the city, but declined to undertake the duties of that office because of his imperfect knowledge and use of the English language. He died prior to 1686, leaving seven sons, and two daughters. The descendants of two of his sons became connected with the Clarkson family, and all of them were more or less identified with the affairs of the Province and City.

Abraham de Peyster, one of the elder sons of Johannes and Cornelia (Lubbertse) de Peyster, born at New Amsterdam, July 8, 1657, married there, April 5, 1684, Catharine de Peyster, and was Alderman, Mayor, Judge of the Supreme Court, for a time Treasurer of the Provinces of New York and New Jersey, many years a member of King's Council and for a short period acting Governor of the Province of New York. His son Abraham de Peyster, born August 28, 1696, married July 1, 1722, Margaret Van Courtlandt, of the well known and prominent family of New York and New Jersey, daughter of Jacob and Eva (Phillipse) Van Courtlandt and granddaughter of Honorable Olaf Steven, and Annetje (Lockermans) Van Courtlandt. Abraham de Peyster, Jr., was Treasurer of the Province of New York from June 2, 1721 to his death on September 17, 1767. His daughter, Elizabeth, became the wife of Mathew Clarkson of the New York branch of the family, a nephew of Mathew Clarkson, Jr., above mentioned.

Johannes de Peyster (2), another son of Johannes and Cornelia (Lubbertse) de Peyster, born at New Amsterdam, September 21, 1666, was also a prominent factor in the public affairs of the city and province of New York; he was Assessor of Dock ward, and later Alderman from the same precinct, subsequently became Mayor of the city, and was for many years a prominent member of the Provincial Assembly, serving on a number of important committees in that body. He married October 10, 1688, Anna, eldest daughter of Garret Bancker, by his wife Elizabeth Dirvan, and they were the parents of seven sons and five daughters, one of the latter, Cornelia, baptized at New York, December 15, 1696, became the wife of Matthew Clarkson, Jr., and subsequently of Rev. Gilbert Tennent, as before stated, and died in Philadelphia, May 23, 1753.

Issue of Matthew and Cornelia (de Peyster) Clarkson:

Catherine, b. in N. Y., in 1720, d. at home of her son in N. Y., 1788; m., in Oct., 1739, Samuel Hazard; had son,

Ebenezer Hazard, Quartermaster-General of the United Colonies of America, 1782-89; had a son, Samuel Hazard, the annalist.

MATTHEW, of whom presently;

GERARDUS, of whom hereafter;

Ann, m. Rev. Samuel Finley, president of the College of New Jersey, after his death she resided with her brother, Matthew Clarkson, Mayor of Phila.; d., Phila., 1808.

MATTHEW CLARKSON, elder son of Matthew and Cornelia (de Peyster) Clarkson, born in New York April 15, 1733, came to Philadelphia with his mother and stepfather in 1743, and was reared and educated in that city under the supervision of his step-father, Rev. Gilbert Tennent. On arriving at mature age he engaged in the mercantile business, which he followed to some extent for most of his lifetime. He was for some years connected with the prominent mercantile house of Baynton, Wharton & Morgan, and as their representative and confidential agent, made a trip to Fort Pitt and points farther west in 1766 and 67, leaving Philadelphia on August 6, 1766, and making the trip on horseback to Fort Pitt, now Pittsburgh, in twelve days. The house had established stations at Fort Pitt and other points on the frontier where furs were collected and forwarded by wagon trains to Philadelphia, and goods for the use of the frontier settlers were transferred to the posts by the same conveyances. Matthew Clarkson spent about a year on the frontier, travelling at times with an escort of friendly Indians to the different posts, visiting Kaskaskia and points on the Ohio in the transaction of business for his firm, and his journal of his travels is of much historical interest. Returning to Philadelphia he was engaged, in 1768, in surveying and levelling the territory lying between the Delaware and Chesapeake Bays, in the interests of the Delaware and Chesapeake Canal. He became a member of the American Philosophical Society, December 21, 1768, and was elected its treasurer in 1793. It was under the auspices of this Society that the first effort to open the canal was made at the instance of Thomas Gilpin.

Matthew Clarkson was a "Notary and Tabbellion Public" with office on Arch Street, 1770-74. On August 20, 1771, he was commissioned a Justice of Philadelphia, and on April 27, 1772, was specially commissioned as a Judge of the Courts of Common Pleas and other courts of the city and county. In 1773, he was clerk of the Philadelphia Contributionship, the oldest fire insurance association in Philadelphia, and the same year a director of the Philadelphia Library Company. April 10, 1776, he was appointed Marshal of the Admiralty Court for the Province of Pennsylvania. He was one of the original stockholders of the Bank of Pennsylvania in 1780, contributing the sum of £2500, his brother, Dr. Gerardus Clarkson, contributing £2000, and in 1794 was a director of the Bank of the United States. He was elected a delegate to the old Congress, February 19, 1785, and his credentials were presented, April 21, 1785, by his colleague David Jackson, but he does not seem to have taken his seat, probably declining the honor, as on April 26, 1785, James Wilson was returned in his place. He was commissioner of Bankruptcy in 1794, and held a number of other positions of trust and honor. He continued to engage in mercantile ventures in connection with a prominent mercantile house, with which his cousins the New York branch of the Clarkson family were associated. He was chosen Alderman of Philadelphia, in 1790, and on April 16, 1792, was elected from the Board of Alderman as Mayor of the City, and three times re-elected, serving as chief magistrate of the city during the trying time of the yellow fever scourge of 1793-4, and did everything in his power to relieve the distress caused thereby. The Gazette, of June 6, 1795, contains "An address to the Citizens of Philadelphia Respecting the Better Government of Youth," issued by "Mathew Clarkson, Esquire, Mayor." He died at his residence, Arch Street near Fourth, then number 109, on October 5, 1800. The newspapers of the day published eulogistic obituary notices of him of which the following is one:

"Died on Sunday morning in the 68th year of his age, Mathew Clarkson, Esq., formerly a respectable merchant and of late years an enlightened and faithful servant of the public in several important stations. His fortitude and humanity in the memorable and gloomy year 1793, as Chief Magistrate of the City, endeared him to thousands and will be long remembered with gratitude and respect by citizens of Philadelphia." He was buried at Christ Church, where his wife had preceded him, dying November 27, 1794.

Matthew Clarkson married at Philadelphia, June 13, 1753, Mary Boude, daughter of Thomas and Sarah Boude, and granddaughter of Grimstone and Mary Boude. She was descended from the ancient family of de Grymestone, which traces back to Normandy, in 1066, when William, the Conqueror, conferred Grimstone Manor on one of his Norman followers. In 1589 Edward Grimstone married a granddaughter of John Harbottle of Crissfield, Sussex, and their son Sir Harbottle Grimstone, a popular member of the House of Commons in the reign of Charles I., and its Speaker after the Restoration, had a daughter who married Adlord Boude, whose son John was the father of Grimstone Boude, who came to America as agent for the Proprietaries of West Jersey, and later settled in Philadelphia. He was a merchant and in a deposition made May 10, 1699, is named as "aged 38 years or thereabouts." His son Thomas Boude, father of Mrs. Clarkson, died at the house of Matthew Clarkson in Philadelphia in 1782. Dr. Boude of Lancaster was a brother of Mrs. Clarkson, and a sister, Henrietta, was the wife of Michael Hillegas, first Secretary of the Treasury of the United Colonies. Mary (Boude) Clarkson was born February 14, 1734-5, and died November 27, 1794.

Issue of Matthew and Mary (Boude) Clarkson:

Anna, the eldest dau., b. in 1758, became the wife of George Bringhurst, Jan. 27, 1780;
Sarah, another dau., b. in 1766; m. Robert Ralston, in 1785;

Of their sons, Levinus Clarkson, d. in Kent co., Md., in 1812, and Gerardus, on St. Christopher's Island, in 1793. Five grandsons were ministers of the Gospel.

GERARDUS CLARKSON, youngest of the six children of Matthew and Cornelia (De Peyster) Clarkson, born in New York in 1737, was but two years of age at the death of his father and had barely reached the age of six years, when he was brought to Philadelphia by his mother and stepfather, and his mother died in that city when he was in his fourteenth year. He received an excellent classical education under the care of his stepfather, Rev. Gilbert Tennent, and took up the study of medicine with Dr. Thomas Bond of Philadelphia. On the completion of his medical course in Philadelphia in 1759, he made an extended tour of Europe, visiting the hospitals in Paris, Edinburgh and other cities, greatly improving his knowledge of medical science. Returning to Philadelphia in 1760, he took up the practice of medicine and surgery there, and became one of the eminent practitioners of his day. He was one of the organizers of the Philadelphia Medical Society in 1766 or 1767, the first association of its kind in the city. He became a trustee of the University of Pennsylvania, July 21, 1780, and was one of its most active officials, being rarely absent from a meeting of the board, and introducing and advocating many of its improved features. He was also one of the founders of the Philadelphia College of Physicians, and was made treasurer at its organization in 1787 and held that office until March 26, 1789.

Dr. Clarkson had the advantage from his childhood of refined and cultivated surroundings, and was during his whole life closely associated with men of intellect, character and education, and his correspondence with men of high standing in letters and science bears ample evidence of his own standing as a man of intellect and education. He took a deep interest in religious matters, was amiable, generous and endowed with great kindness of heart. He became a member of the American Philosophical Society on October 14, 1768, and took a lively interest in its proceedings. Rev. Mannasseh Cutler says in his Journal: "Dr. Clarkson is one of those accomplished, benevolent characters which inspires the most exalted ideas of human nature." Soon after his return from Europe, he united himself with Christ Church and became one of its vestry in 1776, warden in 1783, was one of the committee, appointed October 27, 1784, to establish the Protestant Episcopal Academy, and a delegate to the convention of 1789 that effected a union of the Protestant Episcopal Churches of America.

Dr. Gerardus Clarkson married at Christ Church, May 13, 1761, Mary, daughter of Samuel Flower, by his wife Rebecca, daughter of William Branson, a wealthy merchant of Philadelphia, whose two daughters were respectively the wives of Richard Hockley, and Lynford Lardner, both prominently identified with Provincial affairs.

Enoch Flower, the grandfather of Samuel Flower, was the first public schoolmaster in the Province of Pennsylvania. At a meeting of Governor William Penn and his council, held at Philadelphia, "ye 26th of ye 10th month, 1683" "The Govr and Prvll Councill having taken into their Serious consideration the great necessity there is of a School Master for ye Instruction & Sober Education of Youth in the towne of Philadelphia, Sent for Enock Flower, an inhabitant of the said towne, who for twenty Year past hath been exercised in that care and Imployment in England, to whom haveing communicated their Minds, he Embraced it, upon the following Termes; to Learne to read English, 4s by the Quarter, to Learne to read and write 6s. by ye Quarter, to Learne to read, Write and Cast accots 8s by ye Quarter for Boarding a Scholler, that is to say, dyet, Washing, Lodging, & Scooling Tenn Pounds for one whole year."

Henry Flower, son of Enoch, born 1660, married Elizabeth Paschall, 1689, and they were the parents of Samuel Flower, born 1711, father of Mrs. Clarkson. He was a man of wealth and high standing in the community, owning a fine estate called "Society Hill," which descended to his two daughters, Mary Clarkson and Hannah, wife of Thomas Asheton.

Dr. Clarkson died September 19, 1790, and was buried in the graveyard at St. Peter's Church. At his death his widow went to live with her married son Joseph Clarkson, at that time assistant minister of the Swedish church, and continued to reside with him until his removal to Wilmington, Delaware, on October 5, 1792, when she took up her residence with her son, Samuel Clarkson, where she died on January 19, 1795, at the age of fifty-one years, and was buried beside her husband at St. Peter's.

Dr. Benjamin Rush, with whom Dr. Clarkson was closely associated, writes of him as "one of the best of men," and one to whom he was greatly indebted, and says, "He was twenty years ahead of me in his attention to the one thing needful."

Issue of Dr. Gerardus and Mary (Flower) Clarkson:

WILLIAM CLARKSON, second child of Dr. Gerardus Clarkson and Mary Flower, born in Philadelphia, November 7, 1763, graduated at the College of Philadelphia, the predecessor of the University of Pennsylvania, and, in 1785, obtained his medical degree at the same institution. He took up the practice of medicine in Philadelphia, but his attention being turned strongly to religious matters, in 1791 he began to prepare himself for the gospel ministry of the Presbyterian Church, and in 1793 placed himself under the direction of the Philadelphia Presbytery.

He was licensed to preach by the Presbytery on April 16, 1794, and in August of the same year was called to the pastorate of the First Presbyterian Church of Greenwich, New Jersey, and that of the church at Bridgton, New Jersey, his two charges being eight miles apart. He accepted and was ordained on November 14, 1794. The salary being inadequate for the support of his family, he resumed the practice of his medical profession in connection with his pastorate, but finding the two incompatible, abandoned the latter after three months trial. On October 5, 1801, he was called to the Presbyterian Church at Schenectady, New York, and filled that charge until April 5, 1804, when he resigned and went south and became a supply at the Independent Presbyterian Church, Savannah, Georgia, and, the pastor having died, he continued to preach there for three years. In 1806 he was called to minister to a congregation on St. John's Island and died there September 9, 1812. Dr. William Clarkson married at Mastic, Long Island, Catharine, daughter of General William Floyd, a delegate to the Continental Congress and signer of the Declaration of Independence, by his wife Hannah Jones. James Madison, afterwards President of the United States, was his rival for the hand of Miss Floyd, who was quite a belle in Philadelphia society, while her father was in attendance at Congress in the last years of the Revolution.

Dr. William and Catharine (Floyd) Clarkson had issue:

Harriet Ashston Clarkson, m., Feb. 7, 1807, William Bedlow Crosby, of N. Y.;
 Hannah Floyd Clarkson, d. at Princeton, N. J.;
 William Nicoll Clarkson, of S. C.;
 Samuel Floyd Clarkson.

JOSEPH CLARKSON, third son of Dr. Gerardus and Mary (Flower) Clarkson, born in Philadelphia, February 17, 1765, prepared for college at a classical school kept by Dr. Robert Smith, a Presbyterian clergyman, in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and entering the University of Pennsylvania, graduated with the degree of A. M. in 1782 at the age of seventeen years; he then entered the College of New Jersey at Princeton, and graduated from that institution in 1785. He studied for the ministry under the guidance of Rev. Robert Blackwell, Assistant Rector of St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal Church of Philadelphia, and was ordained a Deacon at Christ Church, by Bishop White, May 28, 1787. He at once became an assistant to Rev. Nicolas Collin, rector of the Swedish churches at Wicacoe, Upper Merion and Kingessing, and continued to officiate as such until 1791, when, having been ordained a Priest, he was appointed Rector of Trinity (Old Swedes') Church at Wilmington, Delaware, being the first English rector, the church then first becoming a regular Protestant Episcopal Church. Rev. Joseph Clarkson, while officiating as assistant minister of the Swedish churches near Philadelphia, had been Clerk of the House of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal churches at Philadelphia, in 1789. He remained in charge of Old Swedes Church until July 8, 1799, when he was appointed Rector of St. James' Protestant Episcopal Church at Lancaster, Pa., and officiated there until his death on January 25, 1830, much beloved and esteemed by his congregation and the community in general.

Rev. Joseph Clarkson married, July 20, 1788, Grace, one of the six daughters of Rev. Samuel Cooke, who was born in London, England, in 1723, graduated at Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, England, and was ordained a Deacon of the established Church by the Bishop of Ely, June 5, 1748, and a Priest by the Bishop of Norwich. After officiating as rector of a church at Beccles, Suffolk, for two years, he was licensed by the Bishop of London as a missionary of the Episcopal Church to West Jersey, under the auspices of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign parts, on May 6, 1751, and coming to America, located at Shrewsbury, Monmouth county, New Jersey, where he was active in the organization of Episcopal churches. In 1775, he gave his adherence to the Crown, and embarked on board a British man-of-war off Long Branch for England, where he officiated as chaplain in the British Army until 1785, when he was appointed a missionary to the Province of New Brunswick, and establishing a church at Frederickton, officiated there until his death on May 23, 1795, and was known as the "Father of the Episcopal Church in New Brunswick." He married at Shrewsbury, New Jersey, soon after his arrival there, Graham, daughter of Michael and Sarah (Morris) Kearney. She died at Shrewsbury September 23, 1771. The children of Rev. Samuel and Graham (Kearney) Cooke remained in New Jersey when their father returned to England.

Grace (Cooke) Clarkson, wife of Rev. Joseph Clarkson, died in Lancaster county, August 25, 1824, in her fifty-eighth year.

McKEAN FAMILY.

The ancestry of Thomas McKean, Governor and Chief Justice of Pennsylvania, member and president of Continental Congress, Colonel of Pennsylvania Militia in the Revolution, etc., has been traced to William McKean of Argyle-shire, Scotland, whose son, John McKean, migrated to Londonderry, Ireland, during the troublous times in the latter part of the seventeenth century, with his three sons, John, James and William.

James McKean of Ballymoney, county Antrim, Ireland, son of John McKean, one of the defenders of Londonderry in 1688-9, was born in Argyleshire, Scotland, in 1666. He emigrated to New England in 1718, and was the founder of the prominent New England family, and the ancestor of Judge Levi McKean, of Poughkeepsie, New York. He died at Londonderry, New Hampshire, November 9, 1756, in his ninetieth year. John McKean, another son of John of Londonderry, died at Ballymoney, Ireland, and had sons, Robert, who settled in Cecil county, Maryland, about the middle of the eighteenth century, and John, who settled in Nova Scotia.

WILLIAM McKEAN, youngest son of John of Londonderry, Ireland, emigrated to America about 1725, and settled in New London, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he died soon after his arrival. His widow, Susannah McKean, continued to reside on a plantation of three hundred acres, lying principally in the present Franklin township, until her death early in the year 1731. Her will, dated December 28, 1730, was proven in February following, and mentions her son John Creighton by a former marriage, daughters, Barbara Murray and Margaret, wife of John Henderson, and sons, William and Thomas McKean, the latter of whom for some years resided in Tredyffrin.

WILLIAM McKEAN, son of William and Susannah, born in Ireland in 1705, continued to reside in New London township, Chester county, until after the death of his first wife in 1742. In 1745 he married Ann Logan, widow of James Logan, of Londonderry township, and removed to the Logan plantation there, where he lived until his death, November 18, 1769, at the age of sixty-four years. His second wife died in 1751.

William McKean married (first) about 1731, Letitia Finney, who died in New London, Chester county in 1742. She was a daughter of Robert Finney, born in Ireland in 1668, who with his wife Dorothea, and several children, was settled in New London township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, as early as 1720. He purchased in 1722 a tract of 900 acres known as "Thunder Hill," where he died in March, 1755, at the age of eighty-seven years and his wife, Dorothea, in 1752 at the age of eighty-two. Tradition relates that he was a trooper in the battle of the Boyne in 1690. He was a ruling elder of Elk River Presbyterian Church, now known as Rocks Church, New Castle county, organized in 1720, and was the founder of the New London Presbyterian Church organized in 1728, and then known as the congregation of the "Upper Branches of the Elk." Robert and Dorothea Finney had seven children: John Finney of New Castle county, a physician, Justice of the Peace and of the Orphans's Court of that County, and Lieutenant Colonel of Militia, who married (first) Elizabeth French, a descendant of Joran Kyn, and (second) Sarah Richardson; Dr. Robert Finney, of Thunder Hill; Lazarus Finney; Letitia, the wife of William McKean; William and Thomas Finney; and Ann, wife of John McClenachan.

Issue of William and Letitia (Finney) McKean:

Robert McKean, b. July 13, 1732; studied medicine, but later entered the ministry, and was missionary at New Brunswick, N. J.; was author of address to Gov. Harding on his arrival in 1761; in Feb., 1763, removed to Perth Amboy and became rector of St. Peter's Church, where monument was later erected to his memory, by his brother, Thomas; m. dau. of Edward Antill, the councillor;

THOMAS McKEAN, b. March 19, 1734; of whom presently;

Dorothea McKean, m. John Thompson, of Del., and was mother of Thomas McKean Thompson, Sec. of State, under his uncle, Gov. Thomas McKean; and Elizabeth Thompson, m. Col. William McKennan, and settled in Washington co., Pa.; her eldest son being Judge William McKennan, of U. S. Circuit Court.

THOMAS McKEAN, the distinguished lawyer, soldier, statesman and jurist, was the second son of William and Letitia (Finney) McKean, and was born in New London, Chester county, Pennsylvania, March 19, 1734-5. At the age of nine years, he and his brother, Robert, aged eleven, were placed under the tuition of the Rev. Francis Allison, the distinguished teacher and divine, in New Castle county, and completed a thorough course of study, at the close of which he entered the office of his relative, David Finney, at New Castle, as a law student, and also became clerk to the Prothonotary. He was admitted to the Bar of the counties of New Castle, Kent and Sussex on the Delaware in 1754, before reaching his majority, and in May, 1755, to the Bar of his native county of Chester, Pennsylvania. He was soon after admitted to the bar of Philadelphia county, and on April 17, 1758, was admitted to practice in the Supreme Court. He was appointed in 1756, by the Attorney General of Pennsylvania, his deputy for Sussex county and filled that position for two years when he resigned and went to England to complete his legal studies at the Middle Temple, where he was admitted May 9, 1758. He early identified himself with the military affairs of the Province of Pennsylvania, on December 28, 1757, enrolling himself as a member of Captain Richard Williams' Company of Foot, under Col. William Armstrong. He was also Clerk of the Assembly of the Three Lower Counties in 1757.

On his return from England, Thomas McKean entered with characteristic vigor and industry on the practice of his profession as stated by himself in his letter of resignation as a delegate to Continental Congress in 1780, and as demonstrated through his whole active life, "Whatever I undertake, I do with all my might." In 1762 he was appointed, together with Hon. Caesar Rodney, to revise and codify the laws of the Three Lower Counties, passed since 1752; and in October of that year was elected to the Assembly from New Castle, and was regularly re-elected thereafter for seventeen consecutive years, the last seven of which he filled the office of Speaker of the House, though he had resided for the last six years of his service in Philadelphia. In 1764 he was appointed one of the three Trustees of the Loan Office of New Castle county and was recommissioned in 1768, and 1772, serving three full terms of four years each. On July 10, 1765, he was appointed by Governor John Penn, Notary and Tabellion Public for the Three Lower Counties, and in the same year was commissioned a Justice of the Peace and of the Courts of Common Pleas, Orphans' Court and Quarter Sessions of the Peace. Sitting as Justice of the several courts at November Term, 1765 and February Term 1766, he issued an order that the several clerks and officers of the various courts should use none but unstamped paper, thus emphasizing the determination to oppose to the utmost the enforcement or recognition of the obnoxious Stamp Act. This is believed to have been the first order of the kind to have been issued in the American Colonies. Thomas McKean was one of the foremost in the opposition to the Stamp Act, and was a representative to the general congress of representatives of all the colonies to protest against its provisions and prepare a memorial to the King and Parliament on the subject, that met in New York on October 7, 1765, and was in session until October 24. This Congress prepared and adopted a Declaration of Rights, and appointed three committees to prepare the Addresses. Thomas McKean was one of the most prominent and active figures in this convention and advocated on the floor of the convention a vigorous and determined opposition to the enforcement of the Act. So vigorously did he and others express themselves that, when the convention was about to adjourn, the President and three of the delegates became alarmed at the treasonable inclination of their proceedings and refused to sign the proceedings. The President being called upon by McKean to state the reasons for his refusal weakly asserted that it was a matter of "conscience." Mr. McKean, convinced that it was much more a matter of cowardice, so severely arraigned and ridiculed the president that a challenge to a duel was given and accepted, but the president demonstrated the truth of Mr. McKean's assertion of cowardice by leaving the city before dawn the next morning. Among the other representatives to the Stamp Act Congress was Col. Joseph Borden, of Bordentown, New Jersey, the father-in-law of Thomas McKean, and Caesar Rodney, the nearly life-long colleague and friend of McKean, who was also a representative of the counties on the Delaware.

Thomas McKean was licensed to practice in the Chancery and all other Courts of the Province of Pennsylvania, and the territories thereto annexed in 1766, and on October 28, 1769, was commissioned a Justice of the Province of Pennsylvania, being re-commissioned April 10, 1773, and October 24, 1774. In 1769, he was delegated by the Assembly of the counties of New Castle, Kent and Sussex on Delaware, to go to New York and secure copies of the records of the land titles of those counties, covering the period for which they were under the jurisdiction of the Duke of York, and these records, duly certified, are still on file at the respective County Recorders' offices of Delaware. In 1771 he was appointed, by his Majesty's Commissioners of Customs, Collector of the Port of New Castle. On the organization of the session of the Assembly of the Three Lower Counties for 1772, in October of that year, Thomas McKean was unanimously elected Speaker of the House, although only six of the representatives were of his political faith, and was regularly re-elected to that position until 1780.

His first wife died at New Castle March 12, 1773, and soon after that date he removed to Philadelphia, though he retained his house at New Castle and continued to represent that county in the Assembly for six years thereafter. He was named by the Convention of the Lower Counties on August 1, 1774, with Caesar Rodney and George Read, a delegate to the Provincial Congress at Philadelphia, and continued to represent New Castle county in the Continental Congress until 1782. He was also one of the first Committee of Correspondence with Caesar Rodney, George Read, Thomas Robinson and John McKinley. At a meeting of the citizens of the Three Lower Counties, held at New Castle June 29, 1774, he was one of a committee of thirteen appointed to collect subscriptions for the suffering people of Boston on the closing of that port by the British authorities. The historian, Bancroft, says in writing of the Continental Congress, "Thomas McKean was the leading Delegate from Delaware and on the fifth of September took his seat in that august assemblage of which he became an invaluable ornament, and from that day his country claimed him as her own." He was the only member of Congress who served continuously from the opening of the first Congress in September, 1774, until the preliminary treaty of peace was signed in 1783. Soon after taking his seat he was appointed one of the committee to state the rights of the Colonies, the various instances where these rights had been violated, and to report the means most proper to be taken for their restoration. He was a member of the Secret Committee to procure ammunition and arms from abroad; and was one of the most active in arranging the monetary affairs of the new government. He was one of those appointed June 12, 1776, to prepare the Articles of Confederation, under which the United Colonies were governed until the adoption of the United States Constitution in 1787. Thomas McKean's first association with the military force now rapidly forming for the defense of the rights of the Colonies was as a member of Captain John Little's Company of Associators, in the Second Battalion of Philadelphia city, May 1, 1775, but on the formation of the Fourth Battalion of Philadelphia Associators he was commissioned its Colonel and went with his command to Perth Amboy, after the adoption of the Declaration of Independence, and remained with it until it was disbanded and superceded by the Flying Camp in August, 1776. It was, however, on the floor of Congress and in the Committee of Observation and Inspection, of which he was Chairman, that Colonel McKean rendered the most loyal service, being extremely active in the selection and equipment of the troops to compose the Flying Camp of 10,000 men that were to be sent to the support of General Washington. He was strongly in favor of the resolution of May 15, 1776, declaring that all authority under the Crown of England be set aside, and declaring that the step must be taken "or liberty, and life be lost." As chairman of the City Committee of Observation, he called the convention of June 18, 1776, and was made its chairman, when it was "Resolved that the present Government of the Province was not competent to the exigencies of our affairs" and a general constitutional convention was provided for and a committee consisting of Col. Thomas McKean, Dr. Benjamin Rush, and Col. James Smith was appointed to prepare a declaration that the deputies were willing to concur in a vote of Congress "declaring the United Colonies free and independent States," which declaration was agreed to by the convention on June 24, 1776, and was signed by Thomas McKean as President, and was by him delivered personally to Congress on the following day. He warmly advocated the Declaration of Independence on the floor of Congress, and when by the defection of his colleague from Delaware, George Read, it was impossible to cast the vote of that state in favor of the Declaration, he despatched an express at his own expense for his other colleague, Caesar Rodney, which resulted in the memorable night ride of Col. Rodney to Philadelphia, where he arrived in time to cast the deciding vote for the state of Delaware making the Declaration the unanimous voice of the thirteen states.

Having accomplished the declaration, Col. McKean at once left Philadelphia, to lead his command to Perth Amboy, and was absent from Philadelphia until August 25, 1776. The Congress having resolved on the same day of the Declaration that the Delegates in Congress from Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York, and the Council of Safety and Committee of Observation and Inspection for Philadelphia, with the Field Officers of the Pennsylvania Battalions be a committee to take measures for the safety of New Jersey, this committee met the next day and Col. McKean was called to the chair, and it was ordered that all the available military force march without delay to Trenton, and thence to such points as were threatened with invasion, except three battalions that were despatched to New Brunswick. Col. McKean, as a consequence, marched at the head of his battalion to Perth Amboy, to support Washington, accompanied by the Pennsylvania Associators under Gen. Daniel Roberdeau. Col. McKean's battalion was under fire in the defence of the Jersey coast.

Col. McKean returned to his seat in Congress in August, 1776, but two days later was called by an express to attend the constitutional convention of the State of Delaware, held August 27, to which he had been elected a delegate during his absence with the army. He reached New Castle in the evening and was waited on by a deputation of delegates and requested to prepare the draft of a constitution. Retiring to his room at a public inn he sat up all night and wrote the constitution that was adopted by the convention the following day without material amendment. His knowledge of the wants of the people among whom he had long lived, his profound knowledge of the law, and his ability as a ready writer and thinker, enabled him to perform this important task unaided by a book or like instrument as a guide. On his return to his seat in Congress in August, 1776, Col. McKean signed the engrossed copy of the Declaration of Independence, ordered by Congress at the time of its adoption on July 4, as he had already signed the original draft before his departure with the army. He continued active in the cause of the independence of the Colonies, frequently addressing meetings of citizens, urging and formulating plans for the defence of the city and province as well as general measures for the prosecution of the war for independence.

On July 28, 1777, Col. McKean was commissioned by the Supreme Executive Council of Pennsylvania, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the state. He was still Speaker of the House of Assembly of the State of Delaware, and on September 13, 1777, became President of the State of Delaware, succeeding John McKinley, who had been captured by the British officers with a great part of the state papers on September 12. He held this office only until a suitable successor could be provided, and the confusion resulting from the seizure of the state papers overcome, resigning September 26, 1777. He came to the office of Chief Justice at the most trying period of the nation's existence, that existence itself being unsettled and insecure, the constitution crude and undefined, all laws unsettled, the civil authority being necessarily subordinate to the military during the war, and the causes being tried being peculiar to war and conquest, involving delicate questions, too often growing out of a desire of some to profit by charging neighbors and old time rivals with defection to the cause of independence for the sake of reaping a profit from the confiscation of their property. Trials for high treason, attainder, and confiscation were very frequent, and Chief Justice McKean, well grounded in the law, was considered one of the greatest legal minds of our early history. A man of inflexible honesty, during his twenty-two years occupancy of the position of Chief Justice he never wavered in what he deemed it his duty to perform; no threat could intimidate or influence divert him from the independent discharge of his duty. His many biographers unite in their endorsement of his ability and uprightness as a Judge. One of his successors as Chief Justice has said of him:

"He was a great man. His merit in the profession of law and as a Judge has never been sufficiently appreciated. It is only since I have been upon the bench that I have been able to conceive a just idea of the greatness of his merit. His legal learning was profound and accurate; the lucidity of his explication and perspicuity of his language, which is the first excellence in the communication of ideas was perfect; but I never saw equalled his dignity of manner in delivering a charge to a jury or on a law argument at the Bar. But what is still more, his comprehension of mind in taking notes so as to embrace the substance and yet omit the material, has appeared inimitable. All subsequent decisions of the Supreme Court have sanctioned his judicial fame, and European Judges yielded him spontaneous praise."

He took the oath of office as Chief Justice on September 1, 1777, and was re-appointed July 29, 1784, and July 20, 1791, and served until his resignation to take the office of Governor of Pennsylvania in October 1799. He was also commissioned with seven others on November 20, 1780, as a Judge of the High Court of Errors and Appeals, established by Act of February 26, 1780, and on its re-organization by Act of April 13, 1791, was recommissioned with nine others on that date and served until its abolition by Act of February 24, 1806. He continued to hold his seat in Congress as a representative of the State of Delaware and was active in the patriot cause, subscribing £2000 to the Bank of North America in 1780, then being established to supply funds to carry on the war. He resigned his seat in Congress on December 25, 1780, alleging that his health and fortune were both becoming impaired by his unremitting attention to public affairs, using in his letter of resignation the expression before quoted, "what I undertake to perform, I do with all my might." His resignation, however, was not accepted and he continued his duties as a delegate from Delaware, and on July 10, 1781, was elected President of Congress, receiving on July 21, the congratulations of General Washington on his elevation to that honorable position. On September 2, 1781, he viewed Washington's army passing through Philadelphia on its way to attack Cornwallis at Yorktown, and was roused from his bed at midnight of October 22 by Colonel Tilghman, Washington's messenger to Congress, with the news of Cornwallis's surrender. He resigned as President of Congress on October 23, 1781, and his resignation was accepted, but on the succeeding day he was re-elected unanimously and requested to serve until the first Monday of November, to which he acceded, and on his retirement on November 7, 1791, received a vote of thanks.

Judge McKean resided for a number of years on High (now Market) street, near Second. On December 20, 1780, the Supreme Executive Council directed that he be allowed to occupy Parson Duche's house on the east side of Third street, which had been confiscated on the defection and flight of the first Chaplain of the Continental Congress. This mansion described in "Historic Mansions and Buildings in Philadelphia" was purchased by Justice McKean, on August 10, 1781, and continued to be his residence until his death in 1817.

Chief Justice McKean was not a delegate to the United States Constitutional Convention of 1787, but took a lively interest in its proceedings, and when the State Convention of Pennsylvania met to ratify the Constitution, he was a delegate to that body, and to him equally with James Wilson (the other distinguished Pennsylvania Signer and Supreme Court Justice, whose remains have through the efforts of Pennsylvania's sons been recently returned to the scene of his patriotic labors, and after a notable reception at the old Independence Hall, interred in the churchyard at Christ Church), we are indebted largely for its ratification by the state of Pennsylvania. His speech in the Pennsylvania convention on December 11, 1787, after his ardent efforts to answer and eliminate the objections to its main features, was so prophetic of the wise provisions and enduring worth of the constitution that we are impelled to insert here a brief extract thereof. He said in part:

"The objections to the Constitution having been answered, and all done away with, it remains pure and unhurt, and this alone is a favorable argument of its goodness. * * * The Law, Sirs, has been my study from my infancy, and my only profession. I have gone through the circle of offices, in the legislative, executive and judicial departments of Government; and from all my study, observation and experience. I must declare that from a full examination and due consideration of this system, it appears to me the best the World has yet known."

In the celebration of the adoption of the Constitution by the states, held at Philadelphia, July 4, 1788, Judge McKean, Judge William A. Atlee, and Judge Rush represented the "Constitution" and delivered eloquent addresses congratulating the people of Pennsylvania on its adoption.

Chief Justice McKean was a delegate to the State Constitutional Convention of Pennsylvania of November 24, 1789, and acted as its Chairman. In 1796, he was one of the Commissioners appointed to settle the claims between the states of Georgia and South Carolina, and in the same year was a Presidential Elector.

In October, 1799, Chief Justice McKean was elected Governor of Pennsylvania by the party of Jefferson, and resigning the office of Chief Justice took the oath of Chief Magistrate of the State, December 17, 1799. He was re-elected at the expiration of his term three years later and again in 1805. His gubernatorial career was marked by great ability and produced beneficial results to the Commonwealth. He was however bitterly assailed by his political opponents for his wholesale removal from subordinate offices of the Federalist appointees and filling their positions with his own supporters, friends and relatives. He practically inaugurated the system that "to the victors belong the spoils," and the opposition to certain arbitrary actions of his culminated in impeachment proceedings being instituted against him during his third term, which, however, after repeated postponements, came to naught.

Judge McKean was solicited to become the candidate for Vice-President of the United States in 1802, with Thomas Jefferson, but declined. At the close of his third term as Governor he was succeeded by Simon Synder and retired to private life at his residence in Philadelphia. When the news of the capture and burning of Washington, the national Capital, by the British during the second war for independence, was received in Philadelphia, a meeting was called at the State House on August 26, 1814, of which Governor McKean was made chairman, and a "Committee of Defense" was organized.

Chief Justice McKean had received the honorary degree of A. M. from the University of Pennsylvania in 1763, and the College of New Jersey, now Princeton University, conferred on him the degree of LL. D. September 26, 1781; the same degree was conferred on him by Dartmouth College, New Hampshire, in 1782, and by the University of Pennsylvania in 1785. He became a Trustee of the University of Pennsylvania under its old charter in 1779, and under the Union Charter in 1791. He was elected a member of the American Philosophical Society prior to 1770, and was one of its twelve councillors in 1786; he was elected a member of the Philadelphia Society for the Promotion of Agriculture, May 2, 1785, and received his diploma as a member of the Society of Cincinnati, October 31, 1785, and subsequently became Vice-President of the Pennsylvania Society. In 1790 he organized the Hibernian Society, for the relief of emigrants from Ireland, and was its first President. McKean county, Pennsylvania, organized in 1804, while he was governor, was named in his honor.

At length loaded with honors, the illustrious patriot, statesman and jurist, died at his Philadelphia residence June 24, 1817, in his eighty-sixth year, and was interred in the churchyard of the First Presbyterian Church on Market street; his remains being subsequently removed to the family vault of his grandson, Henry Pratt McKean, Esq., in Laurel Hill Cemetery.

Governor McKean in his long career had acquired a considerable worldly estate, consisting largely of extensive tracts of land in the Western portion of the state, much of which was not developed at the time of his death. By his will, executed in 1814, he devised his "Mansion House" in Philadelphia to his eldest son, Joseph Borden McKean, together with his "steel seal ring with my coat of Arms cut thereon," his family Bible, etc.; to the four sons and four daughters of his deceased daughter, Elizabeth Petitt, he devised eleven tracts of land, 2200 acres, in Beaver county; to his daughter, Letitia Buchanan, 1680 acres on the Ohio river in Beaver county, and a plantation of 407 acres in Centre county; to the four children of his daughter, Anne Buchanan, 1116 acres northwest of the Ohio river and 414 acres in Luzerne county; to his daughter Sarah Maria Theresa, Marchioness de Casa Yrujo, eight tracts on Sewickley Creek in Allegheny county, 1266 acres; to son, Thomas, his plantation called "Chatham," 392 acres in London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, his silver-hilted sword, and his stock, knee and shoebuckles; to his daughter, Sophia Dorothea, four tracts of land in Centre county, 1684 acres, and two lots on Spruce street, Philadelphia, between Sixth and Seventh; to his grandson, Samuel M. McKean, a plantation of 300 acres in McKean county. His sons, Joseph B. and Thomas McKean and his son-in-law, Andrew Petitt, were made executors.

Judge McKean married (first) July 21, 1763, Mary, eldest daughter of Colonel Joseph Borden, of Bordentown, New Jersey, by his wife Elizabeth Rogers. She was born at Bordentown, July 21, 1744, and died at New Castle, March 12, 1773. She and her sister, Ann, the wife of Francis Hopkinson, of Philadelphia, were said to have been the two most beautiful women in New Jersey. Their ancestor, Richard Borden, born 1601, and his wife Joane, born 1604, settled at Portsmouth, Rhode Island, where he died May 25, 1671, and his widow, July 5, 1688. He had purchased land in New Jersey in 1667.

Benjamin Borden, son of Richard and Joane, born at Portsmouth, Rhode Island, in 1649, married at Hartford, Connecticut, September 22, 1671, Abigail, daughter of Henry Glover, of Hartford, and removed to Shrewsbury, New Jersey, where he died in 1718, and his wife, Abigail, on January 8, 1720.

Joseph Borden, born in New Jersey, May 17, 1687, son of Benjamin and Abigail (Glover) Borden, married about 1717, Anne Conover, of Monmouth county, New Jersey, of the ancient Huguenot family of Covenhoven, as the name was originally spelled, and removed to Farnsworth's Landing, now Bordentown, purchasing 105 acres of Samuel Farnsworth on March 3, 1724, and by subsequent purchases became the owner of the whole site of what soon became known as Bordentown, laid out by him. He was a man of substance and prominence in colonial affairs. His wife died March 11, 1744-5, in her fifty-eighth year, and he on September 22, 1765, leaving one son and six daughters.

Col. Joseph Borden, only son of Joseph and Anne (Conover) Borden, born August 1, 1719, was a distinguished patriot of the Revolution. He was a colleague of Col. He was a member of the Philomathean Society, but left without completing his course to take a position in the counting-house of his grandfather, Henry Pratt, then one of the best known and most successful merchants of Philadelphia. Here he remained for several years, acquiring valuable experience in business matters that was of great assistance to him in his later commercial career, and developing his natural business ability. He began his own career in the mercantile business in the South American and Mexican trade, later extending it to a large trade with the East and West Indies and China. He met with well merited success and took an important part in the development of the business interests of his native city and in the increase of railroad facilities, that have added so greatly to the commercial importance of the city. By the death of his maternal grandfather, Henry Pratt, in 1838, he inherited an ample fortune, and associating himself with his brother-in-law, Adolph E. Borie, he continued to carry on a large business, but gradually withdrew from the foreign trade and devoted his energies more especially to local enterprises. The firm was terminated by the death of Mr. Borie in 1880.

ATLEE FAMILY.

The surname, Atlee, had its origin in the custom, prior to the use of surnames, of affixing to the given name the name of the residence of the person referred to. "Richard-at-the-Lee" figured conspicuously in the ballad, Robin Hood, and the name occasionally appears elsewhere in English literature as early as the Twelfth Century.

The ancestors of William Atlee, who came to America in 1733, were possessed of the Fordhook estate, in the parish of Acton, a short distance from London, England, for many generations, but it passed out of the family at the death of William Atlee in 1699, without issue; he by will, dated in 1695, devising it to his wife, Elizabeth, after the death of his mother, Susan Atlee, the widow of John Atlee. The widow married (second) a Mr. Walker and the estate thus passed out of the family. It was later the residence of Lord Hugh Seymour. Fordhook House, still standing, is a mansion of much antiquity, and though partly modernized, the original drawing-room remains as wainscoted in oak in 1500, entirely unaltered. It was once the residence of Henry Fielding, the novelist; and Lady Byron the unhappy wife of Lord Byron, resided there for a number of years. It is said that her daughter, Ada Augusta, was married there, July 8, 1835, to Lord King, Earl of Lovelace.

The will of William Atlee, before referred to, mentions his cousin, Samuel Atlee of Brentford, the father of William Atlee, the emigrant.

WILLIAM ATLEE, second son of Samuel Atlee of Brentford, left England in March, 1733, as private secretary to Lord Howe, who was on his way to fill his appointment as Governor of Barbadoes. The stay of William Atlee was, however, brief; he married there, at Bridgetown in the parish of St. Micaels, June 1, 1734, Jane Alcock, a daughter of an English clergyman, and a cousin to William Pitt, Earl of Chatham. Tradition relates that she was a maid-of-honor to the Queen of England, who wished to arrange her marriage with one of her own household, but the maid, being enamored of William Atlee, ran away and either accompanied or followed him to Barbadoes. A few days after their marriage the couple took ship for Philadelphia where they arrived three weeks later. For about a year they occupied a part of the house of Caleb Ranstead on Market street, their first child, William Augustus, being born there, July 1, 1735. Soon after that date, however, they removed to Trenton, New Jersey, where he engaged in the mercantile trade with Thomas Hooton, with whom he was associated in business until December, 1739; thereafter for a short time he had, as an assistant and partner, Colonel John Dagworthy, then a youth under twenty-one years of age; in 1741 he had as partner Joseph Yeates.

In the American Weekly Mercury, of February 1, 1737-8, William Atlee and Thomas Hooton announce that they will start a "Stage-Waggon" to carry passengers and merchandise from Trenton to New Brunswick. This quaint advertisement was as follows:

"To Accomodate the PUBLIC.

"There will be a STAGE WAGGON set out from Trenton to New Brunswick, Twice a Week, and back again, during next Summer; It will be fitted up with Benches, and Cover'd over, so that Passengers may sit Easy and Dry: and Care will be taken to Deliver Goods and Messages safe.

"Note, The Waggon will set out for the First time from WM ATLEE'S AND THO. HOOTON'S in Trenton, On MONDAY, the 27th of March next, and continue going every Monday and Thursday from Trenton, and return from Brunswick every Tuesday and Friday.

"Every Passenger to Pay Two Shillings and Six Pence, and Goods and Parcels at the Cheapest Rates."

In March, 1740-1, announcement is made in the Mercury, and also in the Pennsylvania Gazette, that "William Atlee and Thomas Hooton, of Trenton, having left off Trading in partnership ever since December 1739" give notice to their debtors to settle their accounts, etc., which notice has the following attached to it: "N. B. The said William Atlee (until he can clear all Affairs relating to Partnership with Thomas Hooton) proposes with John Dagworthy, Jun. to continue Store in Trenton, to sell cheap, and buy and sell only for ready Money."

On April 10, 1740, William Atlee and Joseph Yeates, announce that they will again run a "Stage-Waggon" from Trenton to New Brunswick, at the same rates as in the Summer of 1738.

On December 1, 1739, William Atlee was recommended to the Governor for Commission as a Justice of the Court of Common Pleas of Hunterdon County, and on April 18, 1740, when Governor Lewis Morris was organizing an expedition against the Spanish West Indies, during the Spanish War, William Atlee was appointed by him to receive the names of such men as were willing to enlist from Hunterdon county for the proposed expedition.

William Atlee died at the house of Caleb Ranstead in Philadelphia, and was buried in St. Peter's Churchyard, April 27, 1744.

On June 7, 1744, Jane Atlee, widow of William Atlee, of Trenton, New Jersey, advertises for sale in the Pennsylvania Gazette, "A house and Lot, and Stable belonging thereto, and a Waggon with five Horses and Appurtenances well fitted for a Stage-Waggon, a Servant Man's time for three years, being used to drive said waggon. Also Nine and a half acres of Land one-half mile out of Trenton, part thereof with Fence and Pasture the rest uncleared; with a Spring running through the lot, making it suitable for a tan-yard."

About 1749, the widow Atlee removed with her four children to Lancaster, Pennsylvania, where she died January 18, 1777.

Issue of William and Jane (Alcock) Atlee:

WILLIAM AUGUSTUS ATLEE, b. July 1, 1735; d. Sept. 9, 1793; m. Esther Sayre; of whom presently;

COL. SAMUEL JOHN ATLEE, b. 1739; d. Nov. 25, 1786; m. Sarah Richards; of whom presently;

Amelia Atlee, b. at Trenton, N. J.; m. at Lancaster, Pa., Philip Cole, of Md.; had several sons and one dau. Margaret, who m. William Hughes.

COL. SAMUEL JOHN ATLEE, the distinguished patriot soldier of the Revolution, was the second son of William and Jane (Alcock) Atlee, and was born at Trenton, New Jersey, in 1739. He went with his widowed mother to Lancaster, Pennsylvania, at about the age of ten years. He began the study of law at an early age, but on April 27, 1756, when but seventeen years of age, was commissioned Ensign of Thomas Lloyd's Company, in the "Augusta Regiment," Col. Clapham, and on December 7, 1757, was made Lieutenant of Captain Patrick Work's Company, and served in the Forbes campaign against Fort Du Quesne in 1758; was commissioned a Captain March, 1759, and served throughout the French and Indian War. He married, April 19, 1762, Sarah Richardson, daughter of a well to do and respectable farmer, residing about eighteen miles from Lancaster, and settled on an adjoining farm. At the outbreak of the Revolution he warmly espoused the cause of the Colonies and was appointed, March 21, 1776, Colonel of the Musketry Battalion of the State of Pennsylvania, to act with Col. Miles' Rifle Regiment. They rendezvoused at Marcus Hook, and, July 2, 1776, were ordered up to Philadelphia, and on July 5 took up their march for Trenton, whence they marched for Amboy, where Col. Atlee with his Battalion arrived on July 21, and on August 11 was ordered to New York. His battalion did heroic service in the battle of Long Island, August 27, 1776, but late in the day he, with forty of his men, were captured by the British, and he suffered twenty-six months imprisonment, part of the time in the loathsome Prison Ships in New York harbor. He was exchanged October 1, 1778, was elected in Congress and served in that body until October 28, 1782. He was, however, much chagrined that he had not been given a command in the army instead of a seat in Congress, as shown by his letter to Hon. John Bayard, of November 16, 1779, published in the Pennsylvania Archives, as well as a part of his Journal covering the battle of Long Island. In October, 1783, he was elected to the Supreme Executive Council of Pennsylvania from Lancaster county. He was also a member of Assembly in 1782, 1785, and 1786, and, while attending the sessions in Philadelphia, he was seized with a paroxysm of coughing and ruptured a blood vessel, expiring on November 25, 1786. On February 29, 1784, he was appointed by the Supreme Executive Council to treat with the Indians on the frontier and held a conference with them at Fort McIntosh, now Beaver, and consummated a successful treaty. Again, January 21, 1785, he attended a conference with the Wyandottes, Delawares, Chippewas, and others, at Ottawa, where he contracted a severe cold from which he never fully recovered. He was buried at Christ Church. He was recommended by the Council of Safety for promotion to the rank of Brigadier General of State Troops, but died before receiving his commission.

WILLIAM AUGUSTUS ATLEE, eldest son of William and Jane (Alcock) Atlee, born in Philadelphia, July 1, 1735, was charged at the early age of fourteen years with the care of a widowed mother and three children younger than himself. He removed with them to Lancaster, Pennsylvania, became a Clerk in the Recorder's Office there, and soon after took up the study of law in the office of Judge Shippen. He was admitted to the Lancaster bar, August 3, 1763, and became an eminent and successful counsellor at law. On August 16, 1777, he was appointed Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania and was reappointed August 9, 1784. At the expiration of his second term, August 17, 1791, he was appointed President Judge of the First District Court of Pennsylvania, his circuit embracing the counties of Chester, Lancaster, York and Dauphin. During the whole fourteen years of his service on the Supreme Bench he was the colleague of Chief Justice Thomas McKean, who was elevated to the Chief Justiceship at the same time that Judge Atlee was made Associate Justice. During the Revolution Judge Atlee took a prominent part in the arming and equipping of soldiers, and in other measures for the prosecution of the war for self-government. He was chairman of the Committee of Safety for Lancaster county, and superintendent of the Arsenal Barracks, and Commissary of British Prisoners at Lancaster.

While holding court at York, Judge Atlee was taken suddenly ill, and after suffering several days with a violent attack of bilious fever, died at his country seat near Lancaster, September 9, 1793, and was buried in the churchyard at St. James' Protestant Episcopal Church in Lancaster, of which church he had been a vestryman for a number of years.

An able and upright judge and an ardent patriot, in private life Judge Atlee was beloved and respected by all who knew him.

Judge Atlee was married in Philadelphia, August 31, 1763, by the Rev. William Sturgeon, according to the rites of the Episcopal Church, to Esther Sayre, born in New York City, daughter of John Sayre, who came to Philadelphia from New York about 1750, by his first wife, Esther, daughter of Nicholas and Elizabeth Stillwell.

Thomas Sayre, the emigrant ancestor of Mrs. Atlee, was a son of Francis and Elizabeth (Atkins) Sayre, of Bedfordshire, and was born at Leighton-Buzzard, Bedfordshire, England, in 1597. He was a resident of Lynn, Massachusetts in 1638, and was one of the founders of the settlement at Southampton, Long Island, where the house erected by him in 1648 is still standing, its title and possession never having passed out of the Sayre family. Joseph Sayre, third son of Thomas, born in Bedfordshire, England, removed from Southampton to Elizabethtown, New Jersey, in 1665, and died there in 1695. His son, Daniel Sayre, who died at Elizabethtown in 1723, was the father of John Sayre, first above mentioned, who removed to New York City when a young man, and was in business at 56 Broad street in 1735, when admitted as a Freeman of the City of New York. About 1750, he removed to Philadelphia. He was twice married, his first wife, Esther Stillwell, died prior to his removal to Philadelphia, and he married (second) at Christ Church, April 8, 1751, Rachel (Chevelier) Bowes. He was a vestryman of Christ Church, 1754-1761.

On returning from the army he relinquished the study of the legal profession, and took up the study of medicine under General Edward Hand and Professor Barton, and, entering the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, received his medical degree at that institution in 1804. After practicing for about three years at Columbia, Lancaster county, he located in Philadelphia, practiced medicine there until 1829, and became eminent as a physician and as an author of medical and other works, publishing several works, both in Latin and English. He had married, February 1, 1798, Margaret Snyder, born May 5, 1780, niece of Simon Synder, who succeeded Thomas McKean as Governor of Pennsylvania in 1808. Both Dr. Atlee and his wife, sometime after their removal to Philadelphia, became members of the Society of Friends, and subsequently associated themselves with the Swedenborgian denomination, and in 1829 Dr. Atlee was called to Cincinnati, Ohio, as the minister of the New Jerusalem Church in that city. He later removed to Michigan, where he was nominated for Congress on the Binney ticket, but failed of election. For many years he took a prominent part in the Anti-Slavery movement. He and his family subsequently returned to Philadelphia, where he died March 8, 1852. His widow died at Washington, D. C., June 23, 1866.
